A todo esto, nunca había mostrado a su abuelo el lienzo donde venía pintada su historia. Enseñósele un día Antonio, y dijo que faltaba allí de pintar los pasos por donde Auristela había venido a la Isla Bárbara, cuando se vieron ella y Periandro en los trocados trajes: ella en el de varón, y él en el de hembra (metamorfosis bien extraño), a lo que Auristela dijo que en pocas razones lo diría. Que fue que, cuando la robaron los piratas de las riberas de Dinamarca a ella, Cloelia y a las dos pescadoras, vinieron a una isla despoblada a repartir la presa entre ellos, y «no pudiéndose hacer el repartimiento con igualdad, uno de los más principales se contentó con que por su parte le diesen mi persona, y aun añadió dádivas para igualar la demasía. Entré en su poder sola, sin tener quien en mi desventura me acompañase; que de las miserias suele ser alivio la compañía; éste me vistió en hábitos de varón, temeroso que en los de mujer no me solicitase el viento; muchos días anduve con él peregrinando por diversas partes, y sirviéndole en todo aquello que a mi honestidad no ofendía; finalmente, un día llegamos a la Isla Bárbara, donde de improviso fuimos presos de los bárbaros, y él quedó muerto en la refriega de mi prisión, y yo fui traída a la cueva de los prisioneros, donde hallé a mi amada Cloelia, que por otros no menos desventurados pasos allí había sido traída, la cual me contó la condición de los bárbaros, la vana superstición que guardaban, y el asunto ridículo y falso de su profecía. Díjome asimismo, que tenía barruntos de que mi hermano Periandro había estado en aquella sima, a quien no había podido hablar por la priesa que los bárbaros se daban a sacarle para ponerle en el sacrificio»; y que había querido acompañarle para certificarse de la verdad, pues se hallaba en hábitos de hombre; y que, así, rompiendo por las persuasiones de Cloelia, que se lo estorbaban, salió con su intento, y se entregó de toda su voluntad para ser sacrificada de los bárbaros, persuadiéndose ser bien de una vez acabar la vida, que no de tantas gustar la muerte, con traerla a peligro de perderla por momentos; y que no tenía más que decir, pues sabían lo que desde aquel punto le había sucedido.

Bien quisiera el anciano Villaseñor que todo esto se añadiera al lienzo, pero todos fueron de parecer que no solamente no se añadiese, sino que aun lo pintado se borrarse, porque tan grandes y tan no vistas cosas no eran para andar en lienzos débiles, sino en láminas de bronce escritas, y en las memorias de las gentes grabadas.

Con todo eso, quiso Villaseñor quedarse con el lienzo, siquiera por ver los bien sacados retratos de sus nietos y la sin igual hermosura y gallardía de Auristela y Periandro.

Algunos días se pasaron poniendo en orden su partida para Roma, deseosos de ver cumplidos los votos de su promesa. Quedóse Antonio el padre y no quiso quedarse Antonio el hijo, ni menos la nueva condesa; que, como queda dicho, la afición que a Auristela tenía la llevara no solamente a Roma, sino al otro mundo, si para allá se pudiera hacer viaje en compañía. Llegóse el día de la partida, donde hubo tiernas lágrimas y apretados abrazos y dolientes suspiros, especialmente de Ricla, que en ver partir a sus hijos se le partía el alma. Echóles su bendición su abuelo a todos, que la bendición de los ancianos parece que tiene prerrogativa de mejorar los sucesos. Llevaron consigo a uno de los criados de casa, para que los sirviese en el camino, y, puestos en él, dejaron soledades en su casa y padres, y en compañía, entre alegre y triste, siguieron su viaje.

Capítulo décimo del tercero libro

LAS PEREGRINACIONES largas siempre traen consigo diversos acontecimientos, y, como la diversidad se compone de cosas diferentes, es forzoso que los casos lo sean. Bien nos lo muestra esta historia, cuyos acontecimientos nos cortan su hilo, poniéndonos en duda dónde será bien anudarle; porque no todas las cosas que suceden son buenas para contadas, y podrían pasar sin serlo y sin quedar menoscabada la historia: acciones hay que, por grandes, deben de callarse, y otras que, por bajas, no deben decirse; puesto que es excelencia de la historia que cualquiera cosa que en ella se escriba puede pasar, al sabor de la verdad que trae consigo; lo que no tiene la fábula, a quien conviene guisar sus acciones con tanta puntualidad y gusto, y con tanta verisimilitud que, a despecho y pesar de la mentira, que hace disonancia en el entendimiento, forme una verdadera armonía.

Aprovechándome, pues, desta verdad, digo que el hermoso escuadrón de los peregrinos, prosiguiendo su viaje, llegó a un lugar, no muy pequeño ni muy grande, de cuyo nombre no me acuerdo, y en mitad de la plaza dél, por quien forzosamente habían de pasar, vieron mucha gente junta, todos atentos mirando y escuchando a dos mancebos que, en traje de recién rescatados de cautivos, estaban declarando las figuras de un pintado lienzo que tenían tendido en el suelo; parecía que se habían descargado de dos pesadas cadenas que tenían junto a sí, insignias y relatoras de su pesada desventura; y uno dellos, que debía de ser de hasta venticuatro años, con voz clara y en todo extremo esperta lengua, crujiendo de cuando en cuando un corbacho, o, por mejor decir, azote, que en la mano tenía, le sacudía de manera que penetraba los oídos y ponía los estallidos en el cielo: bien así como hace el cochero que, castigando o amenazando sus caballos, hace resonar su látigo por los aires.

Entre los que la larga plática escuchaban, estaban los dos alcaldes del pueblo, ambos ancianos, pero no tanto el uno como el otro.

Por donde comenzó su arenga el libre cautivo, fue diciendo:

-«Ésta, señores, que aquí veis pintada, es la ciudad de Argel, gomía y tarasca de todas las riberas del mar Mediterráneo, puesto universal de cosarios, y amparo y refugio de ladrones, que, deste pequenuelo puerto que aquí va pintado, salen con sus bajeles a inquietar el mundo, pues se atreven a pasar el plus ultra de las columnas de Hércules, y a acometer y robar las apartadas islas, que, por estar rodeadas del inmenso mar Océano, pensaban estar seguras, a lo menos de los bajeles turquescos. Este bajel que aquí veis reducido a pequeño, porque lo pide así la pintura, es una galeota de ventidós bancos, cuyo dueño y capitán es el turco que en la crujía va en pie, con un brazo en la mano, que cortó a aquel cristiano que allí veis, para que le sirva de rebenque y azote a los demás cristianos que van amarrados a sus bancos, temeroso no le alcancen estas cuatro galeras que aquí veis, que le van entrando y dando caza. Aquel cautivo primero del primer banco, cuyo rostro le disfigura la sangre que se le ha pegado de los golpes del brazo muerto, soy yo, que servía de espalder en esta galeota, y el otro que está junto a mí, es este mi compañero, no tan sangriento porque fue menos apaleado. Escuchad, señores, y estad atentos: quizá la aprehensión deste lastimero cuento os llevará a los oídos las amenazadoras y vituperosas voces que ha dado este perro de Dragut (que así se llamaba el arráez de la galeota: cosario tan famoso como cruel, y tan cruel como Falaris o Busiris, tiranos de Sicilia); a lo menos, a mí me suena ahora el rospeni, el manahora y el denimaniyoc, que con coraje endiablado va diciendo; que todas estas son palabras y razones turquescas, encaminadas a la deshonra y vituperio de los cautivos cristianos: llámanlos de judíos, hombres de poco valor, de fee negra y de pensamientos viles, y, para mayor horror y espanto, con los brazos muertos azotan los cuerpos vivos.»

Parece ser que uno de los dos alcaldes había estado cautivo en Argel mucho tiempo, el cual con baja voz dijo a su compañero:

-Este cautivo, hasta ahora parece que va diciendo verdad, y que en lo general no es cautivo falso; pero yo le examinaré en lo particular, y veremos cómo da la cuerda; porque quiero que sepáis que yo iba dentro desta galeota, y no me acuerdo de haberle conocido por espalder della, sino fue a un Alonso Moclín, natural de Vélez Málaga.

Y, volviéndose al cautivo, le dijo:

-Decidme, amigo, ¿cúyas eran las galeras que os daban caza, y si conseguistes por ellas la libertad deseada?

-Las galeras -respondió el cautivo-eran de don Sancho de Leiva; la libertad no la conseguimos, porque no nos alcanzaron; tuvimosla después, porque nos alzamos con una galeota, que desde Sargel iba a Argel cargada de trigo; venimos a Orán con ella, y desde allí a Málaga, de donde mi compañero y yo nos pusimos en camino de Italia, con intención de servir a su Majestad, que Dios guarde, en el ejercicio de la guerra.

-Decidme, amigos -replicó el alcalde-, ¿cautivastes juntos? ¿Llevaron os a Argel del primer boleto, o a otra parte de Berbería?

-No cautivamos juntos -respondió el otro cautivo-, porque yo cautive junto a Alicante, en un navío de lanas que pasaba a Génova; mi compañero, en los Percheles de Málaga, adonde era pescador. Conocímonos en Tetuán, dentro de una mazmorra; hemos sido amigos y corrido una misma fortuna mucho tiempo; y, para diez o doce cuartos que apenas nos han ofrecido de limosna sobre el lienzo, mucho nos aprieta el señor alcalde.

-No mucho, señor galán -replicó el alcalde-, que aún no están dadas todas las vueltas de la mancuerna. Escúcheme y dígame: ¿cuántas puertas tiene Argel, y cuántas fuentes y cuántos pozos de agua dulce?

-La pregunta es boba -respondió el primer cautivo-: tantas puertas tiene como tiene casas, y tantas fuentes que yo no las sé, y tantos pozos que no los he visto, y los trabajos que yo en él he pasado me han quitado la memoria de mí mismo; y si el señor alcalde quiere ir contra la caridad cristiana, recogeremos los cuartos y alzaremos la tienda, y adiós, ahó, que tan buen pan hacen aquí como en Francia.

Entonces el alcalde llamó a un hombre de los que estaban en el corro, que al parecer servía de pregonero en el lugar, y tal vez de verdugo, cuando se ofrecía, y díjole:

-Gil Berrueco, id a la plaza, y traedme aquí luego los primeros dos asnos que topáredes, que por vida del Rey nuestro señor, que han de pasear las calles en ellos estos dos señores cautivos, que con tanta libertad quieren usurpar la limosna de los verdaderos pobres, contándonos mentiras y embelecocos, estando sanos como una manzana y con más fuerzas para tomar una azada en la mano que no un corbacho para dar estallidos en seco. Yo he estado en Argel cinco años esclavo, y sé que no me dais señas dél en ninguna cosa de cuantas habéis dicho.

-¡Cuerpo del mundo! -respondió el cautivo-. ¿Es posible que ha de querer el señor alcalde que seamos ricos de memoria, siendo tan pobres de dineros, y que por una niñería que no importa tres ardites, quiera quitar la honra a dos tan insignes estudiantes como nosotros, y juntamente quitar a su Majestad dos valientes soldados, que íbamos a esas Italías y a esos Flandes a romper, a destrozar, a herir y a matar los enemigos de la santa fe católica que topáramos? Porque, si va a decir verdad, que en fin es hija de Dios, quiero que sepa el señor alcalde que nosotros no somos cautivos, sino estudiantes de Salamanca, y, en la mitad y en lo mejor de nuestros estudios, nos vino gana de ver mundo y de saber a qué sabía la vida de la guerra, como sabíamos el gusto de la vida de la paz. Para facilitar y poner en obra este deseo, acertaron a pasar por allí unos cautivos, que también lo debían de ser falsos, como nosotros ahora; les compramos este lienzo, y nos informamos de algunas cosas de las de Argel, que nos pareció ser bastantes y necesarias para acreditar nuestro embeleco; vendimos nuestros libros y nuestras alhajas a menos precio, y, cargados con esta mercadería, hemos llegado hasta aquí. Pensamos pasar adelante, si es que el señor alcalde no manda otra cosa.

-Lo que pienso hacer es -replicó el alcalde-, daros cada cien azotes, y en lugar de la pica que vais a arrastrar en Flandes, poneros un remo en las manos que le cimbréis en el agua en las galeras, con quien quizá haréis más servicio a su Majestad que con la pica.

-¿Querráse -replicó el mozo hablador-mostrar agora el señor alcalde ser un legislador de Atenas, y que la riguridad de su oficio llegue a los oídos de los señores del Consejo, donde, acreditándole con ellos, le tengan por severo y justiciero, y le cometan negocios de importancia, donde muestre su severidad y su justicia? Pues sepa el señor alcalde que summum ius summa iniuria.

-Mirad cómo habláis, hermano -replicó el segundo alcalde-, que aquí no hay justicia con lujuria: que todos los alcaldes deste lugar han sido, son y serán limpios y castos como el pelo de la masa; y hablad menos, que os será sano.

Volvió en esto el pregonero, y dijo:

-Señor alcalde, yo no he topado en la plaza asnos ningunos, sino a los dos regidores Berrueco y Crespo, que andan en ella paseándose.

-Por asnos os envíe yo, majadero, que no por regidores; pero volved y traeldos acá por sí o por no, que quiero que se hallen presentes al pronunciar desta sentencia, que ha de ser sin embargo, y no ha de quedar por falta de asnos: que, gracias sean dadas al cielo, hartos hay en este lugar.

-No le tendrá vuesa merced, señor alcalde, en el cielo -replicó el mozo-, si pasa adelante con esa reguridad. Por quien Dios es, que vuesa merced considere que no hemos robado tanto que podemos dar a censo, ni fundar ningún mayorazgo; apenas granjeamos el mísero sustento con nuestra industria, que no deja de ser trabajosa, como lo es la de los oficiales y jornaleros. Mis padres no nos enseñaron oficio alguno, y así, nos es forzoso que remitamos a la industria lo que habíamos de remitir a las manos, si tuviéramos oficio. Castíguense los que cohechan, los escaladores de casas, los salteadores de caminos, los testigos falsos por dineros, los mal entretenidos en la república, los ociosos y baldíos en ella, que no sirven de otra cosa que de acrecentar el número de los perdidos, y dejen a los míseros que van su camino derecho a servir a su Majestad con la fuerza de sus brazos y con la agudeza de sus ingenios; porque no hay mejores soldados que los que se trasplantan de la tierra de los estudios en los campos de la guerra: ninguno salió de estudiante para soldado, que no lo fuese por extremo, porque, cuando se avienen y se juntan las fuerzas con el ingenio y el ingenio con las fuerzas, hacen un compuesto milagroso, con quien Marte se alegra, la paz se sustenta y la república se engrandece.

Admirado estaba Periandro y todos los más de los circunstantes, así de las razones del mozo como de la velocidad con que hablaba, el cual, prosiguiendo, dijo:

-Espúlguenos el señor alcalde, mírenos y remírenos, y haga escrutinio de las costuras de nuestros vestidos, y si en todo nuestro poder hallare seis reales, no sólo nos mande dar ciento, sino seis cuentos de azotes. Veamos, pues, si la adquisición de tan pequeña cantidad de intereses merece ser castigada con afrentas y martirizada con galeras; y así, otra vez digo que el señor alcalde se remire en esto, no se arroje y precipite apasionadamente a hacer lo que, después de hecho, quizá le causará pesadumbre. Los jueces discretos castigan, pero no toman venganza de los delitos; los prudentes y los piadosos, mezclan la equidad con la justicia, y entre el rigor y la clemencia dan luz de su buen entendimiento.

-Por Dios -dijo el segundo alcalde-, que este mancebo ha hablado bien, aunque ha hablado mucho, y que no solamente no tengo de consentir que los azoten, sino que los tengo de llevar a mi casa y ayudarles para su camino, con condición que le lleven derecho, sin andar surcando la tierra de una en otras partes; porque, si así lo hiciesen, más parecerían viciosos que necesitados.

Ya el primer alcalde, manso y piadoso, blando y compasivo, dijo:

-No quiero que vayan a vuestra casa, sino a la mía, donde les quiero dar una lición de las cosas de Argel, tal, que de aquí adelante ninguno les coja en mal latín, en cuanto a su fingida historia.

Los cautivos se lo agradecieron, los circunstantes alabaron su honrada determinación, y los peregrinos recibieron contento del buen despacho del negocio.

Volvióse el primer alcalde a Periandro, y dijo:

-¿Vosotros, señores peregrinos, traéis algún lienzo que enseñarnos? ¿Traéis otra historia que hacernos creer por verdadera, aunque la haya compuesto la misma mentira?

No respondió nada Periandro, porque vio que Antonio sacaba del seno las patentes, licencias y despachos que llevaban para seguir su viaje; el cual los puso en manos del alcalde, diciéndole:

-Por estos papeles podrá ver vuesa merced quién somos y adónde vamos, los cuales no era menester presentallos, porque ni pedimos limosna, ni tenemos necesidad de pedilla; y así, como a caminantes libres, nos podían dejar pasar libremente.

Tomó el alcalde los papeles, y, porque no sabía leer, se los dio a su compañero, que tampoco lo sabía, y así pararon en manos del escribano, que, pasando los ojos por ellos brevemente, se los volvió a Antonio, diciendo:

-Aquí, señores alcaldes, tanto valor hay en la bondad destos peregrinos como hay grandeza en su hermosura. Si aquí quisieren hacer noche, mi casa les servirá de mesón, y mi voluntad de alcázar donde se recojan.

Volvióle las gracias Periandro; quedáronse allí aquella noche por ser algo tarde, donde fueron agasajados en casa del escribano con amor, con abundancia y con limpieza.

Capítulo once del tercer libro

LLEGÓSE el día, y con él los agradecimientos del hospedaje; y, puestos en camino, al salir del lugar, toparon con los cautivos falsos, que dijeron que iban industriados del alcalde, de modo que de allí adelante no los podían coger en mentira acerca de las cosas de Argel.

-Que tal vez -dijo el uno; digo el que hablaba más que el otro-, tal vez -dijo-se hurta con autoridad y aprobación de la justicia; quiero decir que alguna vez los malos ministros della se hacen a una con los delincuentes, para que todos coman.

Llegaron todos juntos donde un camino se dividía en dos: los cautivos tomaron el de Cartagena, y los peregrinos el de Valencia. Los cuales otro día, al salir de la aurora, que por los balcones del oriente se asomaba, barriendo el cielo de las estrellas y aderezando el camino por donde el sol había de hacer su acostumbrada carrera, Bartolomé, que así creo se llamaba el guiador del bagaje, viendo salir el sol tan alegre y regocijado, bordando las nubes de los cielos con diversas colores, de manera que no se podía ofrecer otra cosa más alegre y más hermosa a la vista, y con rústica discreción, dijo:

-Verdad debió de decir el predicador que predicaba los días pasados en nuestro pueblo, cuando dijo que los cielos y la tierra anunciaban y declaraban las grandezas del Señor. Pardiez, que, si yo no conociera a Dios por lo que me han enseñado mis padres y los sacerdotes y ancianos de mi lugar, le viniera a rastrear y conocer, viendo la inmensa grandeza destos cielos, que me dicen que son muchos, o, a lo menos, que llegan a once, y por la grandeza deste sol que nos alumbra, que, con no parecer mayor que una rodela, es muchas veces mayor que toda la tierra; y más que, con ser tan grande, afirman que es tan ligero que camina en venticuatro horas más de trecientas mil leguas. La verdad que sea: yo no creo nada desto, pero dícenlo tantos hombres de bien que, aunque hago fuerza al entendimiento, lo creo. Pero de lo que más me admiro es que debajo de nosotros hay otras gentes, a quien llaman antípodas, sobre cuyas cabezas, los que andamos acá arriba, traemos puestos los pies, cosa que me parece imposible: que, para tan gran carga como la nuestra, fuera menester que tuvieran ellos las cabezas de bronce.

-Buscar querría razones acomodadas, ¡oh Bartolomé!, para darte a entender el error en que estás y la verdadera postura del mundo, para lo cual era menester tomar muy de atrás sus principios; pero, acomodándome con tu ingenio, habré de coartar el mío y decirte sola una cosa, y es que quiero que entiendas por verdad infalible que la tierra es centro del cielo; llamo centro un punto indivisible a quien todas las líneas de su circunferencia van a parar; tampoco me parece que has de entender esto; y así, dejando estos términos, quiero que te contentes con saber que toda la tierra tiene por alto el cielo, y en cualquier parte della donde los hombres estén, han de estar cubiertos con el cielo; así que, como a nosotros el cielo que ves nos cubre, asimismo cubre a los antípodas, que dicen, sin estorbo alguno, y como naturalmente lo ordenó la naturaleza, mayordoma del verdadero Dios, criador del cielo y de la tierra.

No se descontentó el mozo de oír las razones de Periandro, que también dieron gusto a Auristela, a la condesa y a su hermano.

Con estas y otras cosas iba enseñando y entreteniendo el camino Periandro, cuando a sus espaldas llegó un carro acompañado de seis arcabuceros a pie, y uno que venía a caballo con una escopeta pendiente del arzón delantero, llegándose a Periandro, dijo:

-Si, por ventura, señores peregrinos, lleváis en este repuesto alguna conserva de regalo, que yo creo que sí debéis de llevar, porque vuestra gallarda presencia, más de caballeros ricos que de pobres peregrinos os señala; si la lleváis, dádmela, para socorrer con ella a un desmayado muchacho que va en aquel carro, condenado a galeras por dos años, con otros doce soldados, que, por haberse hallado en la muerte de un conde los días pasados, van condenados al remo, y sus capitanes, por más culpados, creo que están sentenciados a degollar en la corte.

No pudo tener a esta razón las lágrimas la hermosa Costanza, porque en ella se le representó la muerte de su breve esposo; pero, pudiendo más su cristiandad que el deseo de su venganza, acudió al bagaje y sacó una caja de conserva, y, acudiendo al carro, preguntó:

-¿Quién es aquí el desmayado?

A lo que respondió uno de los soldados:

-Allí va echado en aquel rincón, untado el rostro con el sebo del timón del carro, porque no quiere que parezca hermosa la muerte, cuando él se muera, que será bien presto, según está pertinaz en no querer comer bocado.

A estas razones alzó el rostro el untado mozo, y, alzándose de la frente un roto sombrero que toda se la cubría, se mostró feo y sucio a los ojos de Constanza; y, alargando la mano para tomar la caja, la tomó diciendo:

-¡Dios os lo pague, señora!

Volvió a encajar el sombrero, y volvió a su melancolía y a arrinconarse en el rincón donde esperaba la muerte. Otras algunas razones pasaron los peregrinos con las guardas del carro, que se acabaron con apartarse por diferentes caminos.

De allí a algunos días, llegó nuestro hermoso escuadrón a un lugar de moriscos, que estaba puesto como una legua de la marina, en el reino de Valencia. Hallaron en él, no mesón en que albergarse, sino todas las casas del lugar con agradable hospicio los convidaban. Viendo lo cual Antonio, dijo:

-Yo no sé quién dice mal desta gente, que todos me parecen unos santos.

-Con palmas -dijo Periandro-recibieron al Señor en Jerusalén los mismos que de allí a pocos días le pusieron en una cruz. Agora bien, a Dios y a la ventura, como decirse suele, acetemos el convite que nos hace este buen viejo, que con su casa nos convida.

Y era así verdad, que un anciano morisco, casi por fuerza, asiéndolos por las esclavinas, los metió en casa, y dio muestras de agasajarlos, no morisca, sino cristianamente.

Salió a servirlos una hija suya, vestida en traje morisco, y en él tan hermosa que las más gallardas cristianas tuvieran a ventura el parecerla: que en las gracias que naturaleza reparte, tan bien suele favorecer a las bárbaras de Citia como a las ciudadanas de Toledo. Ésta, pues, hermosa y mora, en lengua aljamiada, asiendo a Costanza y a Auristela de las manos, se encerró con ellas en una sala baja, y, estando solas, sin soltarles las manos, recatadamente miró a todas partes, temerosa de ser escuchada; y, después que hubo asegurado el miedo que mostraba, las dijo:

-¡Ay, señoras, y cómo habéis venido como mansas y simples ovejas al matadero! ¿Veis este viejo, que con vergüenza digo que es mi padre, veisle tan agasajador vuestro? Pues sabed que no pretende otra cosa sino ser vuestro verdugo. Esta noche se han de llevar en peso, si así se puede decir, diez y seis bajeles de cosarios berberiscos a toda la gente de este lugar con todas sus haciendas, sin dejar en él cosa que les mueva a volver a buscarla. Piensan estos desventurados que en Berbería está el gusto de sus cuerpos y la salvación de sus almas, sin advertir que, de muchos pueblos que allá se han pasado casi enteros, ninguno hay que dé otras nuevas sino de arrepentimiento, el cual les viene juntamente con las quejas de su daño. Los moros de Berbería pregonan glorias de aquella tierra, al sabor de las cuales corren los moriscos de ésta, y dan en los lazos de su desventura. Si queréis estorbar la vuestra y conservar la libertad en que vuestros padres os engendraron, salid luego de esta casa, y acogedlos a la iglesia, que en ella hallaréis quien os ampare, que es el cura; que sólo él y el escribano son en este lugar cristianos viejos. Hallaréis también allí al jadraque Jarife, que es un tío mío, moro sólo en el nombre, y en las obras cristiano. Contaldes lo que pasa, y decid que os lo dijo Rafala, que con esto seréis creídos y amparados; y no lo echéis en burla, si no queréis que las veras os desengañen a vuestra costa; que no hay mayor engaño que venir el desengaño tarde.

El susto, las acciones, con que Rafala esto decía, se asentó en las almas de Auristela y de Constanza, de manera que fue creída y no le respondieron otra cosa que fuese más que agradecimientos.

Llamaron luego a Periandro y a Antonio, y, contándoles lo que pasaba, sin tomar ocasión aparente, se salieron de la casa con todo lo que tenían. Bartolomé, que quisiera más descansar que mudar de posada, pesóle de la mudanza; pero en efeto obedeció a sus señores. Llegaron a la iglesia, donde fueron bien recibidos del cura y del jadraque, a quien contaron lo que Rafala les había dicho.

El cura dijo:

-Muchos días ha, señores, que nos dan sobresalto con la venida de esos bajeles de Berbería, y, aunque es costumbre suya hacer estas entradas, la tardanza de ésta me tenía ya algo descuidado. Entrad, hijos, que buena torre tenemos y buenas y ferradas puertas la iglesia: que, si no es muy de propósito, no pueden ser derribadas ni abrasadas.

-¡Ay -dijo a esta sazón el jadraque-, si han de ver mis ojos, antes que se cierren, libre esta tierra destas espinas y malezas que la oprimen! ¡Ay, cuándo llegará el tiempo que tiene profetizado un abuelo mío, famoso en el astrología, donde se verá España de todas partes entera y maciza en la religión cristiana, que ella sola es el rincón del mundo donde está recogida y venerada la verdadera verdad de Cristo! Morisco soy, señores, y ojalá que negarlo pudiera, pero no por esto dejo de ser cristiano; que las divinas gracias las da Dios a quien Él es servido, el cual tiene por costumbre, como vosotros mejor sabéis, de hacer salir su sol sobre los buenos y los malos, y llover sobre los justos y los injustos. Digo, pues, que este mi abuelo dejó dicho que, cerca de estos tiempos, reinaría en España un rey de la casa de Austria, en cuyo ánimo cabría la dificultosa resolución de desterrar los moriscos de ella, bien así como el que arroja de su seno la serpiente que le está royendo las entrañas, o bien así como quien aparta la neguilla del trigo, o escarda o arranca la mala yerba de los sembrados. Ven ya, ¡oh venturoso mozo y rey prudente!, y pon en ejecución el gallardo decreto de este destierro, sin que se te oponga el temor que ha de quedar esta tierra desierta y sin gente, y el de que no será bien la que en efeto está en ella bautizada; que, aunque éstos sean temores de consideración, el efeto de tan grande obra los hará vanos, mostrando la esperiencia dentro de poco tiempo, que, con los nuevos cristianos viejos que esta tierra se poblare, se volverá a fertilizar y a poner en mucho mejor punto que agora tiene. Tendrán sus señores, si no tantos y tan humildes vasallos, serán los que tuvieren católicos, con cuyo amparo estarán estos caminos seguros, y la paz podrá llevar en las manos las riquezas, sin que los salteadores se las lleven.

Esto dicho, cerraron bien las puertas, fortaleciéronlas con los bancos de los asientos, subiéronse a la torre, alzaron una escalera levadiza, llevóse el cura consigo el Santísimo Sacramento en su relicario, proveyéronse de piedras, armaron dos escopetas, dejó el bagaje mondo y desnudo a la puerta de la iglesia Bartolomé el mozo, y encerróse con sus amos; y todos con ojo alerta, y manos listas y con ánimos determinados, estuvieron esperando el asalto, de quien avisados estaban por la hija del morisco.

Pasó la media noche, que la midió por las estrellas el cura; tendía los ojos por todo el mar que desde allí se parecía, y no había nube que con la luz de la luna se pareciese, que no pensase sino que fuesen los bajeles turquescos, y, aguijando a las campanas, comenzó a repicallas tan apriesa y tan recio que todos aquellos valles y todas aquellas riberas retumbaban, a cuyo son los atajadores de aquellas marinas se juntaron y las corrieron todas; pero no aprovechó su diligencia para que los bajeles no llegasen a la ribera y echasen la gente en tierra.

La del lugar, que los esperaba cargados con sus más ricas y mejores alhajas, adonde fueron recibidos de los turcos con grande grande grita y algazara, al son de muchas dulzainas y de otros instrumentos, que, puesto que eran bélicos, eran regocijados; pegaron fuego al lugar, y asimismo a las puertas de la iglesia, no para esperar a entrarla, sino por hacer el mal que pudiesen; dejaron a Bartolomé a pie, porque le dejarretaron el bagaje; derribaron una cruz de piedra que estaba a la salida del pueblo, llamando a grandes voces el nombre de Mahoma; se entregaron a los turcos, ladrones pacíficos y deshonestos públicos.

Desde la lengua del agua, como dicen, comenzaron a sentir la pobreza que les amenazaba su mudanza, y la deshonor en que ponían a sus mujeres y a sus hijos. Muchas veces, y quizá algunas no en vano, dispararon Antonio y Periandro las escopetas; muchas piedras arrojó Bartolomé, y todas a la parte donde había dejado el bagaje, y muchas flechas el jadraque; pero muchas más lágrimas echaron Auristela y Constanza, pidiendo a Dios, que presente tenían, que de tan manifiesto peligro los librase, y ansimismo que no ofendiese el fuego a su templo, el cual no ardió, no por milagro, sino porque las puertas eran de hierro y porque fue poco el fuego que se les aplicó.

Poco faltaba para llegar el día, cuando los bajeles, cargados con la presa, se hicieron al mar, alzando regocijados lilíes y tocando infinitos atabales y dulzainas, y en esto vieron venir dos personas corriendo hacia la iglesia, la una de la parte de la marina, y la otra de la de la tierra, que, llegando cerca, conoció el jadraque que la una era su sobrina Rafala, que, con una cruz de caña en las manos, venía diciendo a voces:

-¡Cristiana, cristiana y libre, y libre por la gracia y misericordia de Dios!

La otra conocieron ser el escribano, que acaso aquella noche estaba fuera del lugar, y al son del arma de las campanas venía a ver el suceso, que lloró, no por la pérdida de sus hijos y de su mujer, que allí no los tenía, sino por la de su casa, que halló robada y abrasada.

Dejaron entrar el día, y que los bajeles se alargasen y que los atajadores tuviesen lugar de asegurar la costa, y entonces bajaron de la torre y abrieron la iglesia, donde entró Rafala, bañado con alegres lágrimas el rostro, y, acrecentando con su sobresalto su hermosura, hizo oración a las imágenes, y luego se abrazó con su tío, besando primero las manos al cura. El escribano ni adoró, ni besó las manos a nadie, porque le tenía ocupada el alma el sentimiento de la pérdida de su hacienda.

Pasó el sobresalto, volvieron los espíritus de los retraídos a su lugar, y el jadraque, cobrando aliento nuevo, volviendo a pensar en la profecía de su abuelo, casi como lleno de celestial espíritu, dijo:

-¡Ea, mancebo generoso! ¡Ea, rey invencible! ¡Atropella, rompe, desbarata todo género de inconvenientes y déjanos a España tersa, limpia y desembarazada desta mi mala casta, que tanto la asombra y menoscaba! ¡Ea, consejero tan prudente como ilustre, nuevo Atlante del peso de esta Monarquía, ayuda y facilita con tus consejos a esta necesaria transmigración; llénense estos mares de tus galeras cargadas del inútil peso de la generación agarena; vayan arrojadas a las contrarias riberas las zarzas, las malezas y las otras yerbas que estorban el crecimiento de la fertilidad y abundancia cristiana! Que si los pocos hebreos que pasaron a Egipto multiplicaron tanto, que en su salida se contaron más de seiscientas mil familias, ¿qué se podrá temer de éstos, que son más y viven más holgadamente? No los esquilman las religiones, no los entresacan las Indias, no los quintan las guerras; todos se casan, todos o los más engendran, de do se sigue y se infiere que su multiplicación y aumento ha de ser innumerable. ¡Ea, pues, vuelvo a decir; vayan, vayan, señor, y deja la taza de tu reino resplandeciente como el sol y hermosa como el cielo!

Dos días estuvieron en aquel lugar los peregrinos, volviendo a enterarse en lo que les faltaba, y Bartolomé se acomodó de bagaje. Los peregrinos agradecieron al cura su buen acogimiento, y alabaron los buenos pensamientos del jadraque, y, abrazando a Rafala, se despidieron de todos y siguieron su camino.

Capítulo doce del tercero libro

EN EL CUAL se fueron entreteniendo en contar el pasado peligro, el buen ánimo del jadraque, la valentía del cura, el celo de Rafala, de la cual se les olvidó de saber cómo se había escapado de poder de los turcos que asaltaron la tierra, aunque bien consideraron que con el alboroto, ella se habría escondido en parte que tuviese lugar después de volver a cumplir su deseo, que era de vivir y morir cristiana.

Cerca de Valencia llegaron, en la cual no quisieron entrar por escusar las ocasiones del detenerse; pero no faltó quien les dijo la grandeza de su sitio, la excelencia de sus moradores, la amenidad de sus contornos, y, finalmente, todo aquello que la hace hermosa y rica sobre todas las ciudades, no sólo de España, sino de toda Europa; y principalmente les alabaron la hermosura de las mujeres y su estremada limpieza y graciosa lengua, con quien sola la portuguesa puede competir en ser dulce y agradable.

Determinaron de alargar sus jornadas, aunque fuese a costa de su cansancio, por llegar a Barcelona, adonde tenían noticia habían de tocar unas galeras, en quien pensaban embarcarse, sin tocar en Francia, hasta Génova. Y, al salir de Villarreal, hermosa y amenísima villa, de través, dentre una espesura de árboles, les salió al encuentro una zagala o pastora valenciana, vestida a lo del campo, limpia como el sol, y hermosa como él y como la luna, la cual, en su graciosa lengua, sin hablarles alguna palabra primero, y sin hacerles ceremonia de comedimiento alguno, dijo:

-¿Señores, pedirlos he o darlos he?

A lo que respondió Periandro:

-Hermosa zagala, si son celos, ni los pidas ni los des, porque si los pides, menoscabas tu estimación, y si los das, tu crédito; y si es que el que te ama tiene entendimiento, conociendo tu valor, te estimará y querrá bien, y si no le tiene, ¿para qué quieres que te quiera?

-Bien has dicho -respondió la villana.

Y, diciendo adiós, volvió las espaldas y se entró en la espesura de los árboles, dejándolos admirados con su pregunta, con su presteza y con su hermosura.

Otras algunas cosas les sucedieron en el camino de Barcelona, no de tanta importancia que merezcan escritura, si no fue el ver desde lejos las santísimas montañas de Monserrate, que adoraron con devoción cristiana, sin querer subir a ellas, por no detenerse.

Llegaron a Barcelona a tiempo cuando llegaban a su playa cuatro galeras españolas, que, disparando y haciendo salva a la ciudad con gruesa artillería, arrojaron cuatro esquifes al agua, el uno de ellos adornado con ricas alcatifas de Levante y cojines de carmesí, en el cual venía, como después pareció, una hermosa mujer de poca edad, ricamente vestida, con otra señora anciana y dos doncellas hermosas y honestamente aderezadas.

Salió infinita gente de la ciudad, como es costumbre, así a ver las galeras como a la gente que de ellas desembarcaba, y la curiosidad de nuestros peregrinos llegó tan cerca de los esquifes, que casi pudieran dar la mano a la dama que de ellos desembarcaba, la cual, poniendo los ojos en todos, especialmente en Constanza, después de haber desembarcado, dijo:

-Llegaos acá, hermosa peregrina, que os quiero llevar conmigo a la ciudad, donde pienso pagaros una deuda que os debo, de quien vos creo que tenéis poca noticia; vengan asimismo vuestras camaradas, porque no ha de haber cosa que obligue a dejar tan buena compañía.

-La vuestra, a lo que se ve -respondió Constanza-, es de tanta importancia que carecería de entendimiento quien no la acetase. Vamos donde quisiéredes, que mis camaradas me seguirán, que no están acostumbrados a dejarme.

Asió la señora de la mano a Constanza, y, acompañada de muchos caballeros que salieron de la ciudad a recibirla, y de otra gente principal de las galeras, se encaminaron a la ciudad, en cuyo espacio de camino Constanza no quitaba los ojos de ella, sin poder reducir a la memoria haberla visto en tiempo alguno.

Aposentáronla en una casa principal, a ella y a las que con ella desembarcaron, y no fue posible que dejase ir a los peregrinos a otra parte; con los cuales, así como tuvo comodidad para ello, pasó esta plática:

-«Sacaros quiero, señores, de la admiración en que, sin duda, os debe tener el ver que con particular cuidado procuro serviros; y así, os digo que a mí me llaman Ambrosia Agustina, cuyo nacimiento fue en una ciudad de Aragón, y cuyo hermano es don Bernardo Agustín, cuatralbo de estas galeras que están en la playa. Contarino de Arbolánchez, caballero del hábito de Alcántara, en ausencia de mi hermano, y a hurto del recato de mis parientes, se enamoró de mí; y yo, llevada de mi estrella, o por mejor decir, de mi fácil condición, viendo que no perdía nada en ello, con título de esposa, le hice señor de mi persona y de mis pensamientos; y el mismo día que le di la mano, recibió él, de la de su Majestad, una carta, en que le mandaba viniese luego al punto a conducir un tercio que bajaba de Lombardía a Génova, de infantería española, a la isla de Malta, sobre la cual se pensaba bajaba el turco. Obedeció Contarino con tanta puntualidad lo que se le mandaba que no quiso coger los frutos del matrimonio con sobresalto, y, sin tener cuenta con mis lágrimas, el recibir la carta y el partirse todo fue uno. Parecióme que el cielo se había caído sobre mí, y que entre él y la tierra me habían apretado el corazón y cogido el alma.

»Pocos días pasaron cuando, añadiendo yo imaginaciones a imaginaciones y deseos a deseos, vine a poner en efeto uno, cuyo cumplimiento, así como me quitó la honra por entonces, pudiera también quitarme la vida. Ausentéme de mi casa, sin sabiduría de ninguno de ella, y, en hábitos de hombre, que fueron los que tomé de un pajecillo, asenté por criado de un atambor de una compañía que estaba en un lugar, pienso que ocho leguas del mío. En pocos días toqué la caja tan bien como mi amo; aprendí a ser chocarrero, como lo son los que usan tal oficio; juntóse otra compañía con la nuestra, y ambas a dos se encaminaron a Cartagena a embarcarse en estas cuatro galeras de mi hermano, en las cuales fue mi disinio pasar a Italia a buscar a mi esposo, de cuya noble condición esperé que no afearía mi atrevimiento, ni culparía mi deseo, el cual me tenía tan ciega que no reparé en el peligro a que me ponía de ser conocida, si me embarcaba en las galeras de mi hermano. Mas, como los pechos enamorados no hay inconvenientes que no atropellen, ni dificultades por quien no rompan, ni temores que se le opongan, toda escabrosidad hice llana, venciendo miedos y esperando aun en la misma desesperación; pero, como los sucesos de las cosas hacen mudar los primeros intentos en ellas, el mío, más mal pensado que fundado, me puso en el término que agora oiréis.

»Los soldados de las compañías de aquellos capitanes que os he dicho trabaron una cruel pendencia con la gente de un pueblo de la Mancha, sobre los alojamientos, de la cual salió herido de muerte un caballero que decían ser conde de no sé qué estado. Vino un pesquisidor de la corte, prendió los capitanes, descarreáronse los soldados, y, con todo eso, prendió a algunos, y entre ellos a mí, desdichada, que ninguna culpa tenía; condenólos a galeras por dos años al remo; y a mí también, como por añadidura, me tocó la misma suerte. En vano me lamenté de mi desventura, viendo cuán en vano se habían fabricado mis disinios. Quisiera darme la muerte, pero el temor de ir a otra peor vida me embotó el cuchillo en la mano y me quitó la soga del cuello; lo que hice fue enlodarme el rostro, afeándole cuanto pude, y encerréme en un carro donde nos metieron, con intención de llorar tanto y de comer tan poco, que las lágrimas y la hambre hiciesen lo que la soga y el hierro no habían hecho. Llegamos a Cartagena, donde aún no habían llegado las galeras; pusiéronnos en la casa del rey bien guardados, y allí estuvimos, no esperando, sino temiendo nuestra desgracia. No sé, señores, si os acordaréis de un carro que topasteis junto a una venta, en el cual esta hermosa peregrina -señalando a Constanza-socorrió con una caja de conserva a un desmayado delincuente.»

-Sí acuerdo -respondió Constanza.

-Pues sabed que yo era -dijo la señora Ambrosia-el que socorristeis. Por entre las esteras del carro os miré a todos, y me admiré de todos, porque vuestra gallarda disposición no puede dejar de admirar, si se mira.

«En efeto, las galeras llegaron con la presa de un bergantín de moros que las dos habían tomado en el camino; el mismo día aherrojaron en ellas a los soldados, desnudándolos del traje que traían y vistiéndoles el de remeros: transformación triste y dolorosa, pero llevadera; que la pena que no acaba la vida, la costumbre de padecerla la hace fácil. Llegaron a mí para desnudarme; hizo el cómitre que me lavasen el rostro, porque yo no tenía aliento para levantar los brazos; miróme el barbero que limpia la chusma y dijo: "Pocas navajas gastaré yo con esta barba; no sé yo para qué nos envían acá a este muchacho de alfeñique, como si fuesen nuestras galeras de melcocha y sus remeros de alcorza. Y ¿qué culpas cometiste tú, rapaz, que mereciesen esta pena? Sin duda alguna, creo que el raudal y corriente de otros ajenos delitos te han conducido a este término". Y, encaminando su plática al cómitre, le dijo: "En verdad, patrón, que me parece que sería bien dejar a que sirviese este muchacho en la popa a nuestro general con una manilla al pie, porque no vale para el remo dos ardites".

»Estas pláticas y la consideración de mi suceso, que parece que entonces se estremó en apretarme el alma, me apretó el corazón de manera que me desmayé y quedé como muerta. Dicen que volví en mí a cabo de cuatro horas, en el cual tiempo se me hicieron muchos remedios para que volviese; y lo que más sintiera yo, si tuviera sentido, fue que debieron de enterarse que yo no era varón, sino hembra. Volví de mi parasismo, y lo primero con quien topó la vista fue con los rostros de mi hermano y de mi esposo, que entre sus brazos me tenían. No sé yo cómo en aquel punto la sombra de la muerte no cubrió mis ojos; no sé yo cómo la lengua no se me pegó al paladar; sólo sé que no supe lo que me dije, aunque sentí que mi hermano dijo: "¿Qué traje es éste, hermana mía?" Y mi esposo dijo: "¿Qué mudanza es ésta, mitad de mi alma, que si tu bondad no estuviera tan de parte de tu honra, yo hiciera luego que trocaras este traje con el de la mortaja?" "¿Vuestra esposa es ésta? -dijo mi hermano a mi esposo-. Tan nuevo me parece este suceso, como me parece el de verla a ella en este traje; verdad es que, si esto es verdad, bastante recompensa sería a la pena que me causa el ver así a mi hermana".

puntos se iba, a más andar, mejorando, hizo que me diesen crédito y me tuviesen lástima. Contáronme cómo a mi esposo le habían cautivado moros con una de dos chalupas, donde se había embarcado para ir a Génova, y que el cobrar la libertad había sido el día antes al anochecer, sin que le diese lugar el tiempo de haberse visto con mi hermano, sino al punto que me halló desmayada: suceso cuya novedad le podía quitar el crédito, pero todo es así como lo he dicho. En estas galeras pasaba esta señora que viene conmigo y con estas sus dos nietas a Italia, donde su hijo, en Sicilia, tiene el patrimonio real a su cargo. Vistiéronme estos que traigo, que son sus vestidos, y mi marido y mi hermano, alegres y contentos, nos han sacado hoy a tierra para espaciarnos, y para que los muchos amigos que tienen en esta ciudad se alegren con ellos. Si vosotros, señores, vais a Roma, yo haré que mi hermano os ponga en el más cercano puerto de ella. La caja de conserva os la pagaré con llevaros en la mía hasta adonde mejor os esté; y, cuando yo no pasara a Italia, en fee de mi ruego os llevará mi hermano.» Ésta es, amigos míos, mi historia: si se os hiciere dura de creer, no me maravillaría, puesto que la verdad bien puede enfermar, pero no morir del todo. Y, pues que comúnmente se dice que el creer es cortesía, en la vuestra, que debe de ser mucha, deposito mi crédito.

Aquí dio fin la hermosa Agustina a su razonamiento, y aquí comenzó la admiración de los oyentes a subirse de punto; aquí comenzaron a desmenuzarse las circunstancias del caso, y también los abrazos de Constanza y Auristela que a la bella Ambrosia dieron, la cual, por ser así voluntad de su marido, hubo de volverse a su tierra, porque, por hermosa que sea, es embarazosa la compañía de la mujer en la guerra.

Aquella noche se alteró el mar de modo que fue forzoso alargarse las galeras de la playa, que en aquella parte es de continuo mal segura. Los cortesés catalanes, gente enojada, terrible y pacífica, suave; gente que con facilidad da la vida por la honra, y por defenderlas entrambas se adelantan a sí mismos, que es como adelantarse a todas las naciones del mundo, visitaron y regalaron todo lo posible a la señora Ambrosia Agustina, a quien dieron las gracias, después que volvieron, su hermano y su esposo.

Auristela, escarmentada con tantas esperiencias como había hecho de las borrascas del mar, no quiso embarcarse en las galeras, sino irse por Francia, pues estaba pacífica.

Ambrosia se volvió a Aragón. Las galeras siguieron su viaje, y los peregrinos el suyo, entrándose por Perpiñán en Francia.

Capítulo trece del tercero libro

POR LA PARTE de Perpiñán quiso tocar la primera de Francia nuestra escuadra, a quien dio que hablar el suceso de Ambrosia muchos días, en la cual fueron disculpa sus pocos años de sus muchos yerros, y juntamente halló en el amor que a su esposo tenía perdón de su atrevimiento. En fin, ella se volvió, como queda dicho, a su patria. Las galeras siguieron su viaje, y el suyo nuestros peregrinos, los cuales, llegando a Perpiñán, pararon en un mesón, a cuya gran puerta estaba puesta una mesa y alrededor de ella mucha gente, mirando jugar a dos hombres a los dados, sin que otro alguno jugase.

Parecióles a los peregrinos ser novedad que mirasen tantos y jugasen tan pocos. Preguntó Periandro la causa, y fuele respondido que, de los que jugaban, el perdidoso perdía la libertad, y se hacía prenda del rey para bogar el remo seis meses; y el que ganaba, ganaba veinte ducados que los ministros del rey habían dado al perdidoso para que probase en el juego su ventura.

Uno de los dos que jugaba la probó, y no le supo bien, porque la perdió, y al momento le pusieron en una cadena; y al que la ganó, le quitaron otra que para seguridad de que no huiría, si perdía, le tenían puesta: ¡miserable juego y miserable suerte, donde no son iguales la pérdida y la ganancia!

Estando en esto, vieron llegar al mesón gran golpe de gente, entre la cual venía un hombre, en cuerpo, de gentil parecer, rodeado de cinco o seis criaturas, de edad de cuatro a siete años; venía junto a él una mujer amargamente llorando, con un lienzo de dineros en la mano, la cual, con lastimada voz, venía diciendo:

-Tomad, señores, vuestros dineros, y volvedme a mi marido, pues no el vicio, sino la necesidad, le hizo tomar este dinero. Él no se ha jugado, sino vendido, porque quiere a costa de su trabajo sustentarme a mí y a sus hijos: ¡amargo sustento y amarga comida para mí y para ellos!

-Callad, señora -dijo el hombre-, y gastad ese dinero, que yo le desquitaré con la fuerza de mis brazos, que todavía se amañarán antes a domeñar un remo que un azadón; no quise ponerme en aventura de perderlos, jugándolos, por no perder, juntamente con mi libertad, vuestro sustento.

Casi no dejaba oír el llanto de los muchachos esta dolorida plática que entre marido y mujer pasaba. Los ministros que le traían les dijeron que enjugasen las lágrimas, que si lloraran cuantas cabían en el mar, no serían bastantes a darle la libertad que había perdido.

Prevalecían en su llanto los muchachos, diciendo a su padre:

-Señor, no nos deje, porque nos moriremos todos si se va.

El nuevo y extraño caso enterneció las entrañas de nuestros peregrinos, especialmente las de la tesorera Constanza, y todos se movieron a rogar a los ministros de aquel cargo fuesen contentos de tomar su dinero, haciendo cuenta que aquel hombre no había sido en el mundo, y que les conmoviese a no dejar viuda a una mujer, ni huérfanos a tantos niños. En fin, tanto supieron decir, y tanto quisieron rogar, que el dinero volvió a poder de sus dueños, y la mujer cobró su marido y los niños a su padre.

La hermosa Constanza, rica después de condesa, más cristiana que bárbara, con parecer de su hermano Antonio, dio a los pobres perdidos, con que se cobraron, cincuenta escudos de oro; y así, se volvieron tan contentos como libres, agradeciendo al cielo y a los peregrinos la tan no vista como no esperada limosna.

Otro día pisaron la tierra de Francia, y, pasando por Lengüadoc, entraron en la Provenza, donde en otro mesón hallaron tres damas francesas de tan estremada hermosura que, a no ser Auristela en el mundo, pudieran aspirar a la palma de la belleza. Parecían señoras de grande estado, según el aparato con que se servían; las cuales, viendo los peregrinos, así les admiró la gallardía de Periandro y de Antonio como la sin igual belleza de Auristela y de Costanza. Llegáronlas a sí, y habláronlas con alegre rostro y cortés comedimiento; preguntáronlas quién eran, en lengua castellana, porque conocieron ser españolas las peregrinas, y en Francia ni varón ni mujer deja de aprender la lengua castellana.

En tanto que las señoras esperaban la respuesta de Auristela, a quien se encaminaban sus preguntas, se desvió Periandro a hablar con un criado, que le pareció ser de las ilustres francesas; preguntóle quién eran y adónde iban, y él le respondió, diciendo:

-El duque de Nemurs, que es uno de los que llaman «de la sangre» en este reino, es un caballero bizarro y muy discreto, pero muy amigo de su gusto. Es recién heredado, y ha prosupuesto de no casarse por ajena voluntad, sino por la suya, aunque se le ofrezca aumento de estado y de hacienda, y aunque vaya contra el mandamiento de su rey; porque dice que los reyes bien pueden dar la mujer a quien quisieren de sus vasallos, pero no el gusto de recebilla. Con esta fantasía, locura o discreción, o como mejor debe llamarse, ha enviado a algunos criados suyos a diversas partes de Francia a buscar alguna mujer que, después de ser principal, sea hermosa, para casarse con ella, sin que reparen en hacienda, porque él se contenta con que la dote sea su calidad y su hermosura. Supo la de estas tres señoras, y envióme a mí, que le sirvo, para que las viese y las hiciese retratar de un famoso pintor que envió conmigo. Todas tres son libres, y todas de poca edad, como habéis visto; la mayor, que se llama Deleasir, es discreta en extremo, pero pobre; la mediana, que Belarminia se llama, es bizarra y de gran donaire, y rica medianamente; la más pequeña, cuyo nombre es Feliz Flora, hace gran ventaja a las dos en ser rica. Ellas también han sabido el deseo del duque, y querrían, según a mí se me ha traslucido, ser cada una la venturosa de alcanzarle por esposo; y, con ocasión de ir a Roma a ganar el jubileo de este año, que es como el centésimo que se usaba, han salido de su tierra y quieren pasar por París y verse con el duque, fiadas en el quizá que trae consigo la buena esperanza. Pero después, señores peregrinos, que aquí entrastes, he determinado de llevar un presente a mi amo que borre del pensamiento todas y cualesquier esperanzas que estas señoras en el suyo hubieren fabricado; porque le pienso llevar el retrato de esta vuestra peregrina, única y general señora de la humana belleza; y si ella fuese tan principal como es hermosa, los criados de mi amo no tendrían más que hacer, ni el duque más que desear. Decidme, por vida vuestra, señor, si es casada esta peregrina, cómo se llama y qué padres la engendraron.

A lo que, temblando, respondió Periandro:

-Su nombre es Auristela, su viaje a Roma, sus padres nunca ella los ha dicho; y de que sea libre os aseguro, porque lo sé sin duda alguna; pero hay otra cosa en ello: que es tan libre y tan señora de su voluntad, que no la rendirá a ningún príncipe de la tierra, porque dice que la tiene rendida al que lo es del cielo. Y, para enteraros en que sepáis ser verdad todo lo que os he dicho, sabed que yo soy su hermano y el que sabe lo escondido de sus pensamientos; así que no os servirá de nada el retratalla, sino de alborotar el ánimo de vuestro señor, si acaso quisiese atropellar por el inconveniente de la bajeza de mis padres.

-Con todo eso -respondió el otro-, tengo de llevar su retrato, siquiera por curiosidad y porque se dilate por Francia este nuevo milagro de hermosura.

Con esto se despidieron, y Periandro quiso partirse luego de aquel lugar, por no dársele al pintor para retratar a Auristela. Bartolomé volvió luego a aderezar el bagaje y a no estar bien con Periandro, por la priesa que daba a la partida.

El criado del duque, viendo que Periandro quería partirse luego, se llegó a él y le dijo:

-Bien quisiera, señor, rogaros que os detuviéades un poco en este lugar, siquiera hasta la noche, porque mi pintor con comodidad y de espacio pudiera sacar el retrato del rostro de vuestra hermana; pero bien os podéis ir a la paz de Dios, porque el pintor me ha dicho que, de sola una vez que la ha visto, la tiene tan aprehendida en la imaginación que la pintará a sus solas tan bien como si siempre la estuviera mirando.

Maldijo Periandro entre sí la rara habilidad del pintor; pero no dejó por esto de partirse, despidiéndose luego de las tres gallardas francesas, que abrazaron a Auristela y a Constanza estrechamente y les ofrecieron de llevarlas hasta Roma en su compañía, si dello gustaban.

Auristela se lo agradeció con las más corteses palabras que supo, diciéndoles que su voluntad obedecía a la de su hermano Periandro, y que así, no podían detenerse ella ni Constanza, pues Antonio, hermano de Constanza, y el suyo se iban.

Y, con esto, se partieron, y de allí a seis días llegaron a un lugar de la Provenza, donde les sucedió lo que se dirá en el siguiente capítulo.

Capítulo catorce del tercero libro

LA HISTORIA, la poesía y la pintura simbolizan entre sí, y se parecen tanto que, cuando escribes historia, pintas, y cuando pintas, compones. No siempre va en un mismo peso la historia, ni la pintura pinta cosas grandes y magníficas, ni la poesía conversa siempre por los cielos. Bajezas admite la historia; la pintura, hierbas y retamas en sus cuadros; y la poesía tal vez se realza cantando cosas humildes.

Esta verdad nos la muestra bien Bartolomé, bagajero del escuadrón peregrino: el tal, tal vez habla y es escuchado en nuestra historia. Éste, revolviendo en su imaginación el cuento del que vendió su libertad por sustentar a sus hijos, una vez dijo, hablando con Periandro:

-Grande debe de ser, señor, la fuerza que obliga a los padres a sustentar a sus hijos; si no, dígalo aquel hombre que no quiso jugarse por no perderse, sino empeñarse por sustentar a su pobre familia. La libertad, según yo he oído decir, no debe de ser vendida por ningún dinero, y éste la vendió por tan poco, que lo llevaba la mujer en la mano. Acuérdomé también de haber oído decir a mis mayores que, llevando a ahorcar a un hombre anciano, y ayudándole los sacerdotes a bien morir, les dijo:

-Vuestas mercedes se sosieguen, y déjenme morir de espacio, que, aunque es terrible este paso en que me veo, muchas veces me he visto en otros más terribles.

Preguntáronle cuáles eran.

Respondióles que el amanecer Dios, y el rodealle seis hijos pequeños pidiéndole pan y no teniéndolo para dárselo; «la cual necesidad me puso la gonzúa en la mano y fieltros en los pies, con que facilité mis hurtos, no viciosos, sino necesitados». Estas razones llegaron a los oídos del señor que le había sentenciado al suplicio, que fueron parte para volver la justicia en misericordia y la culpa en gracia.

A lo que respondió Periandro:

-El hacer el padre por su hijo es hacer por sí mismo, porque mi hijo es otro yo, en el cual se dilata y se continúa el ser del padre; y, así como es cosa natural y forzosa el hacer cada uno por sí mismo, así lo es el hacer por sus hijos. Lo que no es tan natural ni tan forzoso hacer los hijos por los padres, porque el amor que el padre tiene a su hijo deciendo, y el decender es caminar sin trabajo; y el amor del hijo con el padre aciende y sube, que es caminar cuesta arriba, de donde ha nacido aquel refrán: «un padre para cien hijos, antes que cien hijos para un padre».

Con estas pláticas y otras entretenían el camino por Francia, la cual es tan poblada, tan llana y apacible, que a cada paso se hallan casas de placer, adonde los señores de ellas están casi todo el año, sin que se les dé algo por estar en las villas ni en las ciudades.

A una de éstas llegaron nuestros viandantes, que estaba un poco desviada del camino real. Era la hora de mediodía, herían los rayos del sol derechamente a la tierra, entraba el calor, y la sombra de una gran torre de la casa les convidó que allí esperasen a pasar la siesta, que con calor riguroso amenazaba.

El solícito Bartolomé desembarazó el bagaje, y, tendiendo un tapete en el suelo, se sentaron todos a la redonda, y de los manjares, de quien tenía cuidado de hacer Bartolomé su repuesto, satisficieron la hambre, que ya comenzaba a fatigarles. Pero, apenas habían alzado las manos para llevarlo a la boca, cuando, alzando Bartolomé los ojos, dijo a grandes voces:

-Apartaos, señores, que no sé quién baja volando del cielo, y no será bien que os coja debajo.

Alzaron todos la vista, y vieron bajar por el aire una figura, que, antes que distinguiesen lo que era, ya estaba en el suelo junto casi a los pies de Periandro. La cual figura era de una mujer hermosísima, que, habiendo sido arrojada desde lo alto de la torre, sirviéndole de campana y de alas sus mismos vestidos, la puso de pies y en el suelo sin daño alguno: cosa posible sin ser milagro. Dejola el suceso atónita y espantada, como lo quedaron los que volar la habían visto. Oyeron en la torre gritos, que los daba otra mujer que, abrazada con un hombre, que parecía que pugnaban por derribarse el uno al otro.

-¡Socorro, socorro! -decía la mujer-. ¡Socorro, señores, que este loco quiere despeñarme de aquí abajo!

La mujer voladora, vuelta algún tanto en sí, dijo:

-Si hay alguno que se atreva a subir por aquella puerta -señalándoles una que al pie de la torre estaba-, libraré de peligro mortal a mis hijos y a otras gentes flacas que allí arriba están.

Periandro, impelido de la generosidad de su ánimo, se entró por la puerta, y a poco rato le vieron en la cumbre de la torre abrazado con el hombre, que mostraba ser loco, del cual, quitándole un cuchillo de las manos, procuraba defenderse; pero la suerte, que quería concluir con la tragedia de su vida, ordenó que entrambos a dos viniesen al suelo, cayendo al pie de la torre: el loco, pasado el pecho con el cuchillo que Periandro en la mano traía, y Periandro, vertiendo por los ojos, narices y boca cantidad de sangre; que, como no tuvo vestidos anchos que le sustentasen, hizo el golpe su efeto y dejóle casi sin vida.

Auristela, que así le vio, creyendo indubitavelmente que estaba muerto, se arrojó sobre él, y, sin respeto alguno, puesta la boca con la suya, esperaba a recoger en sí alguna reliquia, si del alma le hubiese quedado; pero, aunque le hubiera quedado, no pudiera recibirla, porque los traspillados dientes le negaron la entrada. Constanza, dando lugar a la pasión, no le pudo dar a mover el paso para ir a socorrerla, y quedóse en el mismo sitio donde la halló el golpe, pegada los pies al suelo, como si fueran de raíces, o como si ella fuera estatua de duro mármol formada. Antonio, su hermano, acudió a apartar los semivivos y a dividir los que ya pensaba ser cadáveres. Sólo Bartolomé fue el que mostró con los ojos el grave dolor que en el alma sentía, llorando amargamente.

Estando todos en la amarga aflicción que he dicho, sin que hasta entonces ninguna lengua hubiese publicado su sentimiento, vieron que hacia ellos venía un gran tropel de gente, la cual, desde el camino real, había visto el vuelo de los caídos, y venían a ver el suceso. Y era el tropel que venía las hermosas damas francesas, Deleasir, Belarminia y Feliz Flora. Luego como llegaron, conocieron a Auristela y a Periandro, como a aquellos que por su singular belleza quedaban impresos en la imaginación del que una vez los miraba. Apenas la compasión les había hecho apearse para socorrer, si fuese posible, la desventura que miraban, cuando fueron asaltados de seis o ocho hombres armados, que por las espaldas les acometieron.

Este asalto puso en las manos de Antonio su arco y sus flechas, que siempre las tenía a punto, o ya para ofender o ya para defenderse. Uno de los armados, con descortés movimiento, asió a Feliz Flora del brazo y la puso en el arzón delantero de su silla, y dijo, volviéndose a los demás compañeros:

-Esto es hecho. Ésta me basta. Demos la vuelta.

Antonio, que nunca se pagó de descortesías, pospuesto todo temor, puso una flecha en el arco, tendió cuanto pudo el brazo izquierdo, y con la derecha estiró la cuerda hasta que llegó al diestro oído, de modo que las dos puntas y extremos del arco casi se juntaron; y, tomando por blanco el robador de Feliz Flora, disparó tan derechamente la flecha que, sin tocar a Feliz Flora, sino en una parte del velo con que se cubría la cabeza, pasó al salteador el pecho de parte a parte. Acudió a su venganza uno de sus compañeros, y, sin dar lugar a que otra vez Antonio el arco armase, le dio una herida en la cabeza, tal, que dio con él en el suelo más muerto que vivo. Visto lo cual de Constanza, dejó de ser estatua y corrió a socorrer a su hermano: que el parentesco calienta la sangre que suele helarse en la mayor amistad, y lo uno y lo otro son indicios y señales de demasiado amor.

Ya en esto habían salido de la casa gente armada, y los criados de las tres damas, apercebidos de piedras (digo los que no tenían armas), se pusieron en defensa de su señora. Los salteadores, que vieron muerto a su capitán, y que según los defensores acudían podían ganar poco en aquella empresa, especialmente considerando ser locura aventurar las vidas por quien ya no podía premiarlas, volvieron las espaldas y dejaron el campo solo.

Hasta aquí, de esta batalla pocos golpes de espada hemos oído, pocos instrumentos bélicos han sonado; el sentimiento que por los muertos suelen hacer los vivos no ha salido a romper los aires; las lenguas, en amargo silencio tienen depositadas sus quejas; sólo algunos ayes entre roncros gemidos andan envueltos, especialmente en los pechos de las lastimadas Auristela y Constanza, cada cual abrazada con su hermano, sin poder aprovecharse de las quejas con que se alivian los lastimados corazones. Pero, en fin, el cielo, que tenía determinado de no dejarlas morir tan apriesa y tan sin quejarse, les despegó las lenguas, que al paladar pegadas tenían, y la de Auristela prorrumpió en razones semejantes:

-No sé yo, desdichada, cómo busco aliento en un muerto, o cómo, ya que le tuviese, puedo sentirle, si estoy tan sin él que ni sé si hablo ni si respiro. ¡Ay, hermano, y qué caída ha sido ésta, que así ha derribado mis esperanzas, como que la grandeza de vuestro linaje no se hubiera opuesto a vuestra desventura! Mas, ¿cómo podía ella ser grande, si vos no lo fuéades? En los montes más levantados caen los rayos, y, adonde hallan más resistencia, hacen más daño. Monte érades vos, pero monte humilde, que con las sombras de vuestra industria y de vuestra discreción os encubríades a los ojos de las gentes. Ventura íbades a buscar en la mía, pero la muerte ha atajado el paso, encaminando el mío a la sepultura. ¡Cuán cierta la tendrá la reina, vuestra madre, cuando a sus oídos llegue vuestra no pensada muerte! ¡Ay de mí, otra vez sola y en tierra ajena, bien así como verde yedra a quien ha faltado su verdadero arrimo!

Estas palabras de reina, de montes y grandezas, tenían atentos los oídos de los circunstantes que les escuchaban, y aumentóles la admiración las que también decía Constanza, que en sus faldas tenía a su malherido hermano, apretándole la herida y tomándole la sangre la compasiva Feliz Flora, que, con un lienzo suyo, blandamente se la exprimía, obligada de haberla el herido librado de su deshonra.

-¡Ay, digo -decía-, amparo mío!, ¿de qué ha servido haberme levantado la fortuna a título de señora, si me había de derribar al de desdichada? Volved, hermano, en vos, si queréis que yo vuelva en mí, o si no, haced, ¡oh piadosos cielos!, que una misma suerte nos cierre los ojos, y una misma sepultura nos cubra los cuerpos: que el bien que sin pensar me había venido, no podía traer otro descuento que la presteza de acabarse.

Con esto se quedó desmayada, y Auristela ni más ni menos, de modo que tan muertas parecían ellas y aun más que los heridos.

La dama que cayó de la torre, causa principal de la caída de Periandro, mandó a sus criados, que ya habían venido muchos de la casa, que le llevasen al lecho del conde Domicio, su señor; mandó también llevar a Domicio, su marido, para dar orden en sepultalle. Bartolomé tomó en brazos a su señor Antonio; a Constanza se las dio Feliz Flora; y a Auristela, Belarminia y Deleasir. Y, en escuadrón doloroso y con amargos pasos, se encaminaron a la casi real casa.

Capítulo quince del tercero libro

POCO APROVECHABAN las discretas razones que las tres damas francesas daban a las dos lastimadas Constanza y Auristela, porque en las recientes desventuras no hallan lugar consolatorias persuasiones: el dolor y el desastre que de repente sucede, no de improviso admite consolación alguna, por discreta que sea; la postema duele, mientras no se ablanda, y el ablandarse requiere tiempo, hasta que llegue el de abrirse. Y así, mientras se llora, mientras se gime, mientras se tiene delante quien mueva al sentimiento a quejas y a suspiros, no es discreción demasiada acudir al remedio con agudas medicinas. Llore, pues, algún tanto más Auristela, gima algún espacio más Constanza, y cierren entrambas los oídos a toda consolación, en tanto que la hermosa Claricia nos cuenta la causa de la locura de Domicio, su esposo, que fue, según ella dijo a las damas francesas, que, antes que Domicio con ella se desposase, andaba enamorado de una parienta suya, la cual tuvo casi indubitables esperanzas de casarse con él.

-«Salióle en blanco la suerte, para que ella -dijo Claricia-la tuviese siempre negra. Porque, disimulando Lorena -que así se llamaba la parienta de Domicio-el enojo que había recibido del casamiento de mi esposo, dio en regalarle con muchos y diversos presentes, puesto que más bizarros y de buen parecer que costosos, entre los cuales le envió una vez, bien así como envió la falsa Deyanira la camisa a Hércules, digo que le envió unas camisas, ricas por el lienzo, y por la labor vistosas. Apenas se puso una, cuando perdió los sentidos, y estuvo dos días como muerto, puesto que luego se la quitaron, imaginando que una esclava de Lorena, que estaba en opinión de maga, la habría hechizado. Volvió a la vida mi esposo, pero con sentidos tan turbados y tan trocados que ninguna acción hacía que no fuese de loco; y no de loco manso, sino de cruel, furioso y desatinado: tanto, que era necesario tenerle en cadenas.»

Y que aquel día, estando ella en aquella torre, se había soltado el loco de las prisiones, y, viniendo a la torre, la había echado por las ventanas abajo, a quien el cielo socorrió con la anchura de sus vestidos, o, por mejor decir, con la acostumbrada misericordia de Dios, que mira por los inocentes. Dijo cómo aquel peregrino había subido a la torre a librar a una doncella a quien el loco quería derribar al suelo, tras la cual también despeñara a otros dos pequeños hijos que en la torre estaban. Pero el suceso fue tan contrario que el conde y el peregrino se estrellaron en la dura tierra: el conde, herido de una mortal herida, y el peregrino, con un cuchillo en la mano, que al parecer se le había quitado a Domicio, cuya herida era tal, que no fuera menester servir de añadidura para quitarle la vida, pues bastaba la caída.

En esto, Periandro estaba sin sentido en el lecho, adonde acudieron maestros a curarle y a concertarle los deslocados huesos. Diéronle bebidas apropiadas al caso, halláronle pulsos y algún tanto de conocimiento de las personas que alrededor de sí tenía; especialmente de Auristela, a quien con voz desmayada, que apenas podía entenderse, dijo:

-Hermana, yo muero en la fe católica cristiana y en la de quererte bien.

Y no habló ni pudo hablar más palabra por entonces.

Tomaron la sangre a Antonio, y, tentándole los cirujanos la herida, pidieron albricias a su hermana de que era más grande que mortal, y de que presto tendría salud con ayuda del cielo. Dióselas Feliz Flora, adelantándose a Constanza, que se las iba a dar, y aun se las dio, y los cirujanos las tomaron de entrambas, por no ser nada escrupulosos.

Un mes o poco más estuvieron los enfermos curándose, sin querer dejarlos las señoras francesas: tanta fue la amistad que trabaron y el gusto que sintieron de la discreta conversación de Auristela y de Constanza, y de los dos sus hermanos. Especialmente Feliz Flora, que no acertaba a quitarse de la cabecera de Antonio, amándole con un tan comedido amor que no se extendía a más que a ser benevolencia, y a ser como agradecimiento del bien que dél había recibido, cuando su saeta la libró de las manos de Rubertino; que, según Feliz Flora contaba, era un caballero, señor de un castillo que cerca de otro suyo ella tenía, el cual Rubertino, llevado, no de perfecto, sino de vicioso amor, había dado en seguirla y perseguirla, y en rogarla le diese la mano de esposa; pero que ella por mil experiencias, y por la fama, que pocas veces miente, había conocido ser Rubertino de áspera y cruel condición, y de mudable y antojadiza voluntad, y no había querido condescender con su demanda. Y que imaginaba que, acosado de sus desdenes, habría salido al camino a roballa y a hacer de ella por fuerza lo que la voluntad no había podido. Pero que la flecha de Antonio había cortado todos sus crueles y mal fabricados disinius, y esto le movía a mostrarse agradecida.

Todo esto que Feliz Flora dijo pasó así, sin faltar punto; y, cuando se llegó el de la sanidad de los enfermos, y sus fuerzas comenzaron a dar muestras della, volvieron a renovarse sus deseos, a lo menos los de volver a su camino, y así lo pusieron por obra, acomodándose de todas las cosas necesarias, sin que, como está dicho, quisiesen las señoras francesas dejar a los peregrinos, a quien ya trataban con admiración y con respeto, porque las razones del llanto de Auristela les habían hecho concebir en sus ánimos que debían de ser grandes señores: que tal vez la majestad suele cubrirse de buriel y la grandeza vestirse de humildad.

En efeto, con perplejos pensamientos los miraban: el pobre acompañamiento suyo les hacía tener en estima de condición mediana; el brío de sus personas y la belleza de sus rostros levantaba su calidad al cielo; y así, entre el sí y el no, andaba dudosa.

Ordenaron las damas francesas que fuesen todos a caballo, porque la caída de Periandro no consentía que se fiase de sus pies. Feliz Flora, agradecida al golpe de Antonio el bárbaro, no sabía quitarle de su lado, y, tratando del atrevimiento de Rubertino, a quien dejaban muerto y enterrado, y de la estraña historia del conde Domicio, a quien las joyas de su prima, juntamente con quitarle el juicio, le habían quitado la vida, y del vuelo milagroso de su mujer, más para ser admirado que creído, llegaron a un río que se vadeaba con algún trabajo.

Periandro fue de parecer que se buscase la puente, pero todos los demás no vinieron en él; y, bien así como cuando al represado rebaño de mansas ovejas, puestas en lugar estrecho, hace camino la una, a quien las demás al momento siguen, Belarminia se arrojó al agua, a quien todos siguieron, sin quitarse del lado de Auristela Periandro, ni del de Feliz Flora Antonio, llevando también junto a sí a su hermana Constanza.

Ordenó, pues, la suerte que no fuese buena la de Feliz Flora, porque la corriente del agua le desvaneció la cabeza de modo que, sin poder tenerse, dio consigo en mitad de la corriente, tras quien se abalanzó con no creída presteza el cortés Antonio, y sobre sus hombros, como a otra nueva Europa, la puso en la seca arena de la contraria ribera. Ella, viendo el presto beneficio, le dijo:

-Muy cortés eres, español.

A quien Antonio respondió:

-Si mis cortesías no nacieran de tus peligros, estimáralas en algo; pero, como nacen de ellos, antes me descontentan que alegran.

Pasó, en fin, el, como he dicho otras veces, hermoso escuadrón, y llegaron al anochecer a una casería, que junto con serlo era mesón, en el cual se alojaron a toda su voluntad.

Y lo que en él les sucedió nuevo estilo y nuevo capítulo pide.

Capítulo diez y seis del tercero libro

COSAS y casos suceden en el mundo, que si la imaginación, antes de suceder, pudiera hacer que así sucedieran, no acertara a trazarlos; y así, muchos, por la rareza con que acontecen, pasan plaza de apócrifos, y no son tenidos por tan verdaderos como lo son; y así, es menester que les ayuden juramentos, o a lo menos el buen crédito de quien los cuenta, aunque yo digo que mejor sería no contarlos, según lo aconsejan aquellos antiguos versos castellanos que dicen:

Las cosas de admiración no las digas ni las cuentes, que no saben todas gentes cómo son.

La primera persona con quien encontró Constanza fue con una moza de gentil parecer, de hasta veinte y dos años, vestida a la española, limpia y aseadamente, la cual, llegándose a Constanza, le dijo en lengua castellana:

-¡Bendito sea Dios, que veo gente, si no de mi tierra, a lo menos de mi nación: España! ¡Bendito sea Dios, digo otra vez, que oiré decir vuesa merced, y no señoría, hasta los mozos de cocina!

-Desa manera -respondió Constanza-, ¿vos, señora, española debéis de ser?

-¡Y cómo si lo soy! -respondió ella-; y aun de la mejor tierra de Castilla.

-¿De cuál? -replicó Constanza.

-De Talavera de la Reina -respondió ella.

Apenas hubo dicho esto, cuando a Constanza le vinieron barruntos que debía de ser la esposa de Ortel Banedre, el polaco, que por adúltera quedaba presa en Madrid, cuyo marido, persuadido de Periandro, la había dejado presa y ídose a su tierra, y en un instante fabricó en su imaginación un montón de cosas, que, puestas en efeto, le sucedieron casi como las había pensado.

Tomóla por la mano, y fuese donde estaba Auristela, y, apartándola aparte con Periandro, les dijo:

-Señores, vosotros estáis dudosos de que si la ciencia que yo tengo de adivinar es falsa o verdadera, la cual ciencia no se acredita con decir las cosas que están por venir, porque sólo Dios las sabe, y si algún humano las acierta, es acaso, o por algunas premisas a quien la experiencia de otras semejantes tiene acreditadas. Si yo os dijese cosas pasadas que no hubiesen llegado ni pudiesen llegar a mi noticia, ¿qué diríades? ¿Queréislo ver? Esta buena hija que tenemos delante es de Talavera de la Reina, que se casó con un extranjero polaco, que se llamaba, si mal no me acuerdo, Ortel Banedre, a quien ella ofendió con alguna desenvoltura con un mozo de mesón que vivía frontero de su casa, la cual, llevada de sus ligeros pensamientos y en los brazos de sus pocos años, se salió de casa de sus padres con el referido mozo, y fue presa en Madrid con el adúltero, donde debe de haber pasado muchos trabajos, así en la prisión como en el haber llegado hasta aquí; que quiero que ella nos los cuente, porque, aunque yo los adivine, ella nos los contará con más puntualidad y con más gracia.

-¡Ay, cielos santos! -dijo la moza-. ¿Y quién es esta señora que me ha leído mis pensamientos? ¿Quién es esta adivina que así sabe la desvergonzada historia de mi vida? Yo, señora, soy esa adúltera, soy esa presa y soy la condenada a destierro de diez años, porque no tuve parte que me siguiese, y soy la que aquí estoy en poder de un soldado español que va a Italia, comiendo el pan con dolor, y pasando la vida, que por momentos me hace desear la muerte. Mi amigo, el primero, murió en la cárcel. Éste, que no sé en qué número ponga, me socorrió en ella, de donde me sacó, y, como he dicho, me lleva por esos mundos con gusto suyo y con pesar mío: que no soy tan tonta que no conozca el peligro en que traigo el alma en este vagamundo estado. Por quien Dios es, señores, pues sois españoles, pues sois cristianos, y, pues sois principales, según lo da a entender vuestra presencia, que me saquéis del poder deste español, que será como sacarme de las garras de los leones.

Admirados quedaron Periandro y Auristela de la discreción sagaz de Constanza; y, concediendo con ella, la reforzaron y acreditaron, y aun se movieron a favorecer con todas sus fuerzas a la perdida moza, la cual dijo que el español soldado no iba siempre con ella, sino una jornada adelante o atrás, por deslumbrar a la justicia.

-Todo eso está muy bien -dijo Periandro-, y aquí daremos traza en vuestro remedio; que la que ha sabido adivinar vuestra vida pasada, también sabrá acomodaros en la venidera. Sed vos buena, que sin el cimiento de la bondad no se puede cargar ninguna cosa que lo parezca; no os desviéis por agora de nosotros, que vuestra edad y vuestro rostro son los mayores contrarios que podéis tener en las tierras estrañas.

Lloró la moza, enterneciéndose Constanza, y Auristela mostró los mismos sentimientos, con que obligó a Periandro a que el remedio de la moza buscase.

En esto estaban, cuando llegó Bartolomé y dijo:

-Señores, acudid a ver la más estraña visión que habréis visto en vuestra vida.

Dijo esto tan asustado y tan como espantado que, pensando ir a ver alguna maravilla estraña, le siguieron, y, en un apartamento algo desviado de aquel donde estaban alojados los peregrinos y damas, vieron, por entre unas esteras, un aposento todo cubierto de luto, cuya lóbrega escuridad no les dejó ver particularmente lo que en él había. Y, estándole así mirando, llegó un hombre anciano, todo asimismo cubierto de luto, el cual les dijo:

-Señores, de aquí a dos horas, que habrá entrado una de la noche, si gustáis de ver a la señora Ruperta sin que ella os vea, yo haré que la veáis, cuya vista os dará ocasión de que os admiréis, así de su condición como de su hermosura.

-Señor -respondió Periandro-, este nuestro criado que aquí está nos convidó a que viniésemos a ver una maravilla, y hasta ahora no hemos visto otra que la de este aposento cubierto de luto, que no es maravilla ninguna.

-Si volvéis a la hora que digo -respondió el enlutado-, tendréis de qué maravillaros, porque habréis de saber que en este aposento se aloja la señora Ruperta, mujer que fue, apenas hace un año, del conde Lamberto de Escocia, cuyo matrimonio a él le costó la vida y a ella verse en términos de perderla cada paso, a causa que Claudino Rubicón, caballero de los principales de Escocia, a quien las riquezas y el linaje hicieron soberbio, y la condición algo enamorado, quiso bien a mi señora, siendo doncella, de la cual, si no fue aborrecido, a lo menos fue desdeñado, como lo mostró el casarse con el conde mi señor. Esta presta resolución de mi señora la bautizó Rubicón, en deshonra y menosprecio suyo, como si la hermosa Ruperta no hubiera tenido padres que se lo mandaran y obligaciones precisas que le obligaran a ello, junto con ser más acertado ajustarse las edades entre los que se casan: que, si puede ser, siempre los años del esposo con el número de diez han de llevar ventaja a los de la mujer, o con algunos más, porque la vejez los alcance en un mismo tiempo. Era Rubicón varón viudo y que tenía hijo de casi veinte y un años, gentilhomme en extremo, y de mejores condiciones que el padre; tanto que, si él se hubiera opuesto a la cátedra de mi señora, hoy viviera mi señor el conde y mi señora estuviera más alegre. «Sucedió, pues, que, yendo mi señora Ruperta a holgarse con su esposo a una villa suya, acaso y sin pensar, en un despoblado, encontramos a Rubicón con muchos criados suyos que le acompañaban. Vio a mi señora, y su vista despertó el agravio que a su parecer se le había hecho; y fue de suerte que en lugar del amor nació la ira, y de la ira el deseo de hacer pesar a mi señora; y, como las venganzas de los que bien se han querido sobrepujan a las ofensas hechas, Rubicón, despechado, impaciente y atrevido, desenvainando la espada, corrió al conde mi señor, que estaba inocente deste caso, sin que tuviese lugar de prevenirse del daño que no temía; y, envainándosela en el pecho, dijo: "Tú me pagarás lo que no me debes; y si esta es crueldad, mayor la usó tu esposa para conmigo, pues no una vez sola, sino cien mil, me quitan la vida sus desdenes".

»Esto dicho, parece que templó sus continuas lágrimas, y dio algún vado a sus dolientes suspiros. Hase puesto en camino de Roma para pedir en Italia a sus príncipes favor y ayuda contra el matador de su esposo, que aun todavía la amenaza, quizá temeroso; que suele ofender un mosquito más de lo que puede favorecer un águila.» Esto, señores, veréis, como he dicho, de aquí a dos horas; y si no os dejare admirados, o yo no habré sabido contarlos, o vosotros tendréis el corazón de mármol.

Aquí dio fin a su plática el enlutado escudero, y los peregrinos, sin ver a Ruperta, desde luego se comenzaron a admirar del caso.

Capítulo diez y siete del tercer libro

LA IRA, según se dice, es una revolución de la sangre que está cerca del corazón, la cual se altera en el pecho con la vista del objeto que agravia, y tal vez con la memoria; tiene por último fin y paradero suyo la venganza, que, como la tome el agraviado, sin razón o con ella, sosiega.

Esto nos lo dará a entender la hermosa Ruperta, agraviada y airada, y con tanto deseo de vengarse de su contrario que, aunque sabía que era ya muerto, dilataba su cólera por todos sus decendientes, sin querer dejar, si pudiera, vivo ninguno dellos; que la cólera de la mujer no tiene límite.

Llegóse la hora de que la fueron a ver los peregrinos, sin que ella los viese, y viéronla hermosa en todo extremo, con blanquísimas tocas, que desde la cabeza casi le llegaban a los pies, sentada delante de una mesa, sobre la cual tenía la cabeza de su esposo en la caja de plata, la espada con que le habían quitado la vida y una camisa que ella se imaginaba que aún no estaba enjuta de la sangre de su esposo. Todas estas insignias dolorosas despertaron su ira, la cual no tenía necesidad que nadie la despertase, porque nunca dormía; levantóse en pie, y, puesta la mano derecha sobre la cabeza del marido, comenzó a hacer y a revalidar el voto y juramento que dijo el enlutado escudero. Llovían lágrimas de sus ojos, bastantes a bañar las reliquias de su pasión; arrancaba suspiros del pecho, que condensaban el aire cerca y lejos; añadía al ordinario juramento razones que le agravaban, y tal vez parecía que arrojaba por los ojos, no lágrimas, sino fuego, y por la boca, no suspiros, sino humo: tan sujeta la tenía su pasión y el deseo de vengarse. ¿Veisla llorar, veisla suspirar, veisla no estar en sí, veisla blandir la espada matadora, veisla besar la camisa ensangrentada, y que rompe las palabras con sollozos?; pues esperad no más de hasta la mañana, y veréis cosas que os den sujeto para hablar en ellas mil siglos, si tantos tuviédes de vida.

En mitad de la fuga de su dolor estaba Ruperta, y casi en los umbrales de su gusto, porque mientras se amenaza descansa el amenazador, cuando se llegó a ella uno de sus criados, como si se llegara una sombra negra, según venía cargado de luto, y en mal pronunciadas palabras le dijo:

-Señora, Croriano el galán, el hijo de tu enemigo, se acaba de apeaar agora con algunos criados. Mira si quieres encubrirte, o si quieres que te conozca, o lo que sería bien que hagas, pues tienes lugar para pensarlo.

-Que no me conozca -respondió Ruperta-; y avisad a todos mis criados que por descuido no me nombren, ni por cuidado me descubran.

Y, esto diciendo, recogió sus prendas, y mandó cerrar el aposento y que ninguno entrase a hablalla.

Volviéronse los peregrinos al suyo, quedó ella sola y pensativa, y no sé cómo se supo que había hablado a solas estas o otras semejantes razones:

-Advierte, ¡oh Ruperta!, que los piadosos cielos te han traído a las manos, como simple víctima al sacrificio, al alma de tu enemigo; que los hijos, y más los únicos, pedazos del alma son de los padres. ¡Ea, Ruperta! Olvídate de que eres mujer, y si no quieres olvidarte desto, mira que eres mujer, y agraviada. La sangre de tu marido te está dando voces, y en aquella cabeza sin lengua te está diciendo: «¡Venganza, dulce esposa mía, que me mataron sin culpa!» Sí, que no espantó la braveza de Holofernes a la humildad de Judit; verdad es que la causa suya fue muy diferente de la mía: ella castigó a un enemigo de Dios, y yo quiero castigar a un enemigo que no sé si lo es mío; a ella le puso el hierro en las manos el amor de su patria, y a mí me le pone el de mi esposo. Pero, ¿para qué hago yo tan disparatadas comparaciones? ¿Qué tengo que hacer más, sino cerrar los ojos y envainar el acero en el pecho deste mozo, que tanto será mi venganza mayor cuanto fuere menor su culpa? Alcance yo renombre de vengadora, y venga lo que viniere. Los deseos que se quieren cumplir no reparan en inconvenientes, aunque sean mortales: cumpla yo el mío, y tenga la salida por mi misma muerte.

Esto dicho, dio traza y orden en cómo aquella noche se encerrase en la estancia de Croriano, donde le dio fácil entrada un criado suyo, traidor por dádivas, aunque él no pensó sino que hacía un gran servicio a su amo, llevándole al lecho una tan hermosa mujer como Ruperta; la cual, puesta en parte donde no pudo ser vista ni sentida, ofreciendo su suerte al disponer del cielo, sepultada en maravilloso silencio, estuvo esperando la hora de su contento, que le tenía puesto en la de la muerte de Croriano. Llevó, para ser instrumento del cruel sacrificio, un agudo cuchillo, que, por ser arma mañera y no embarazosa, le pareció ser más a propósito; llevó asimismo una lanterna bien cerrada, en la cual ardía una vela de cera; recogió los espíritus de manera que apenas osaba enviar la respiración al aire. ¿Qué no hace una mujer enojada?; ¿qué montes de dificultades no atropella en sus disignios?; ¿qué inormes crueldades no le parecen blandas y pacíficas? No más, porque lo que en este caso se podía decir es tanto que será mejor dejarlo en su punto, pues no se han de hallar palabras con que encarecerlo.

Llegóse, en fin, la hora; acostóse Croriano; durmióse, con el cansancio del camino, y entregóse, sin pensamiento de su muerte, al de su reposo. Con atentos oídos estaba escuchando Ruperta si daba alguna señal Croriano de que durmiese, y aseguráronla que dormía, así el tiempo que había pasado desde que se acostó hasta entonces, como algunos dilatados alientos que no los dan sino los dormidos; viendo lo cual, sin santiguarse ni invocar ninguna deidad que la ayudase, abrió la lanterna, con que quedó claro el aposento, y miró dónde pondría los pies, para que, sin tropezar, la llevasen al lecho.

La bella matadora, dulce enojada, verdugo agradable: ejecuta tu ira, satisface tu enojo, borra y quita del mundo tu agravio, que delante tienes en quien puedes hacerlo; pero mira, ¡oh hermosa Ruperta!, si quieres, que no mires a ese hermoso Cupido que vas a descubrir, que se deshará en un punto toda la máquina de tus pensamientos.

Llegó, en fin, y, temblándole la mano, descubrió el rostro de Croriano, que profundamente dormía, y halló en él la propiedad del escudo de Medusa, que la convirtió en mármol: halló tanta hermosura que fue bastante a hacerle caer el cuchillo de la mano, y a que diese lugar la consideración del inorme caso que cometer quería; vio que la belleza de Croriano, como hace el sol a la niebla, ahuyentaba las sombras de la muerte que darle quería, y en un instante no le escogió para víctima del cruel sacrificio, sino para holocausto santo de su gusto.

-¡Ay -dijo entre sí-, generoso mancebo, y cuán mejor eres tú para ser mi esposo que para ser objeto de mi venganza! ¿Qué culpa tienes tú de la que cometió tu padre, y qué pena se ha de dar a quien no tiene culpa? Gózate, gózate, joven ilustre, y quédese en mi pecho mi venganza y mi crueldad encerrada, que, cuando se sepa, mejor nombre me dará el ser piadosa que vengativa.

Esto diciendo, ya turbada y arrepentida, se le cayó la lanterna de las manos sobre el pecho de Croriano, que despertó con el ardor de la vela. Hallóse a oscuras; quiso Ruperta salirse de la estancia, y no acertó, por donde dio voces Croriano, tomó su espada y saltó del lecho, y, andando por el aposento, topó con Ruperta, que toda temblando le dijo:

-No me mates, ¡oh Croriano!, puesto que soy una mujer que no ha una hora que quise y pude matarte, y ahora me veo en términos de rogarte que no me quites la vida.

En esto, entraron sus criados al rumor, con luces, y vio Croriano y conoció a la bellísima viuda, como quien vee a la resplandeciente luna de nubes blancas rodeada.

-¿Qué es esto, señora Ruperta? -le dijo-. ¿Son los pasos de la venganza los que hasta aquí os han traído, o queréis que os pague yo los desafueros que mi padre os hizo? Que este cuchillo que aquí veo, ¿qué otra señal es, sino de que habéis venido a ser verdugo de mi vida? Mi padre es ya muerto, y los muertos no pueden dar satisfacción de los agravios que dejan hechos. Los vivos sí que pueden recompensarlos; y así, yo, que represento ahora la persona de mi padre, quiero recompensaros la ofensa que él os hizo lo mejor que pudiese y supiere. Pero dejadme primero honestamente tocaros, que quiero ver si sois fantasma que aquí ha venido o a matarme, o a engañarme, o a mejorar mi suerte.

-Empeórese la mía -respondió Ruperta- (si es que halla modo el cielo como empeorarla), si entré este día pasado en este mesón con alguna memoria tuya. Veniste tú a él; no te vi cuando entraste; oí tu nombre, el cual despertó mi cólera y me movió a la venganza; concerté con un criado tuyo que me encerrase esta noche en este aposento; hícele que callase, sellándole la boca con algunas dádivas; entré en él, apercebíme deste cuchillo y acrecenté el deseo de quitarte la vida; sentí que dormías, salí de donde estaba, y a la luz de una lanterna que conmigo traía te descubrí y vi tu rostro, que me movió a respeto y a reverencia, de manera que los filos del cuchillo se embotaron, el deseo de mi venganza se deshizo, cayóseme la vela de las manos, despertóte su fuego, diste voces, quedé yo confusa, de donde ha sucedido lo que has visto. Yo no quiero más venganzas ni más memorias de agravios: vive en paz, que yo quiero ser la primera que haga mercedes por ofensas, si ya lo son el perdonarte la culpa que no tienes.

-Señora -respondió Croriano-, mi padre quiso casarse contigo, tú no quisiste; él, despechado, mató a tu esposo: murióse llevando al otro mundo esta ofensa; yo he quedado, como parte tan suya, para hacer bien por su alma; si quieres que te entregue la mía, recíbeme por tu esposo, si ya, como he dicho, no eres fantasma que me engañas; que las grandes venturas que vienen de improviso siempre traen consigo alguna sospecha.

-Dame esos brazos -respondió Ruperta-, y verás, señor, cómo este mi cuerpo no es fantástico, y que el alma que en él te entrego es sencilla, pura y verdadera.

Testigos fueron destos abrazos, y de las manos que por esposos se dieron, los criados de Croriano, que habían entrado con las luces. Triunfó aquella noche la blanda paz desta dura guerra, volvióse el campo de la batalla en tálamo de desposorio; nació la paz de la ira; de la muerte, la vida, y del disgusto, el contento. Amaneció el día, y halló a los recién desposados cada uno en los brazos del otro.

Levantáronse los peregrinos con deseo de saber qué habría hecho la lastimada Ruperta con la venida del hijo de su enemigo, de cuya historia estaban ya bien informados. Salió el rumor del nuevo desposorio, y, haciendo de los cortesanos, entraron a dar los parabienes a los novios, y al entrar en el aposento vieron salir del de Ruperta el anciano escudero que su historia les había contado, cargado con la caja donde iba la calavera de su primero esposo, y con la camisa y espada que tantas veces había renovado las lágrimas de Ruperta; y dijo que lo llevaba adonde no renovasen otra vez, en las glorias presentes, pasadas desventuras. Murmuró de la facilidad de Ruperta, y en general, de todas las mujeres, y el menor vituperio que dellas dijo fue llamarlas antojadizas.

Levantáronse los novios antes que entrasen los peregrinos, regocijáronse los criados, así de Ruperta como de Croriano, y volvióse aquel mesón en alcázar real, digno de tan altos desposorios.

En fin, Periandro y Auristela, Constanza y Antonio, su hermano, hablaron a los desposados y se dieron parte de sus vidas; a lo menos, la que convenía que se diese.

Capítulo diez y ocho del tercer libro

EN ESTO estaban, cuando entró por la puerta del mesón un hombre, cuya larga y blanca barba más de ochenta años le daba de edad; venía vestido ni como peregrino, ni como religioso, puesto que lo uno y lo otro parecía; traía la cabeza descubierta, rasa y calva en el medio, y por los lados, luengas y blanquísimas canas le pendían; sustentaba el agobiado cuerpo sobre un retorcido cayado que de báculo le servía. En efeto, todo él y todas las partes representaban un venerable anciano digno de todo respeto, al cual apenas hubo visto la dueña del mesón, cuando, hincándose ante él de rodillas, le dijo:

-Contaré yo este día, padre Soldino, entre los venturosos de mi vida, pues he merecido verte en mi casa: que nunca vienes a ella sino para bien mío.

Y, volviéndose a los circunstantes, prosiguió diciendo:

-Este montón de nieve y esta estatua de mármol blanco que se mueve, que aquí veis, señores, es la del famoso Soldino, cuya fama no sólo en Francia, sino en todas partes de la tierra se estiende.

-No me alabéis, buena señora -respondió el anciano-, que tal vez la buena fama se engendra de la mala mentira. No la entrada, sino la salida, hace a los hombres venturosos. La virtud que tiene por remate el vicio, no es virtud, sino vicio. Pero, con todo esto, quiero acreditarme con vos en la opinión que de mí tenéis. Mirad hoy por vuestra casa, porque destas bodas y destos regocijos que en ella se preparan se ha de engendrar un fuego que casi toda la consuma.

A lo que dijo Croriano, hablando con Ruperta, su esposa:

-Éste, sin duda, debe de ser mágico o adivino, pues predice lo por venir.

Entreoyó esta razón el anciano, y respondió:

-No soy mago ni adivino, sino judiciario, cuya ciencia, si bien se sabe, casi enseña a adivinar. Creedme, señores, por esta vez siquiera, y dejad esta estancia, y vamos a la mía, que en una cercana selva que hay aquí os dará, si no tan capaz, más seguro alojamiento.

Apenas hubo dicho esto, cuando entró Bartolomé, criado de Antonio, y dijo a voces:

-Señores, las cocinas se abrasan, porque, en la infinita leña que junto a ellas estaba, se ha encendido tal fuego que muestra no poder apagarle todas las aguas del mar.

Tras esta voz acudieron las de otros criados, y comenzaron a acreditarlas los estallidos del fuego.

La verdad tan manifiesta acreditó las palabras de Soldino; y, asiendo en brazos Periandro a Auristela, sin querer ir primero a averiguar si el fuego se podía atajar o no, dijo a Soldino:

-Señor, guíanos a tu estancia, que el peligro desta ya está manifiesto.

Lo mismo hizo Antonio con su hermana Constanza y con Feliz Flora, la dama francesa, a quien siguieron Deleasir y Belarminia; y la moza arrepentida de Talavera se asió del cinto de Bartolomé y él del cabestro de su bagaje, y todos juntos, con los desposados y con la huéspedea, que conocía bien las adivinanzas de Soldino, le siguieron, aunque con tardo paso los guiaba.

La demás gente del mesón, que no habían estado presentes a las razones de Soldino, quedaron ocupados en matar el fuego; pero presto su furor les dio a entender que trabajaban en vano, ardiendo la casa todo aquel día; que, a cogerles el fuego de noche, fuera milagro escapar alguno que contara su furia.

Llegaron, en fin, a la selva, donde hallaron una ermita no muy grande, dentro de la cual vieron una puerta que parecía serlo de una cueva oscura.

Antes de entrar en la ermita, dijo Soldino a todos los que le habían seguido:

-Estos árboles con su apacible sombra os servirán de dorados techos, y la yerba deste amenísimo prado, si no de muy blandas, a lo menos de muy blancas camas. Yo llevaré conmigo a mi cueva a estos señores, porque les conviene, y no porque los mejore en la estancia.

Y luego llamó a Periandro, a Auristela, a Constanza, a las tres damas francesas, a Ruperta, a Antonio y a Croriano; y, dejando otra mucha gente fuera, se encerró con éstos en la cueva, cerrando tras sí la puerta de la ermita y la de la cueva.

Viéndose, pues, Bartolomé y la de Talavera no ser de los escogidos ni llamados de Soldino, o ya de despecho, o ya llevados de su ligera condición, se concertaron los dos, viendo ser tan para en uno, de dejar Bartolomé a sus amos, y la moza a sus arrepentimientos; y así, aliviaron el bagaje de dos hábitos de peregrinos, y la moza a caballo y el galán a pie, dieron cantonada, ella a sus compasivas señoras, y él a sus honrados dueños, llevando en la intención de ir también a Roma, como iban todos.

Otra vez se ha dicho que no todas las acciones no verisímiles ni probables se han de contar en las historias, porque si no se les da crédito, pierden su valor; pero al historiador no le conviene más de decir la verdad, parézcalo o no lo parezca. Con esta máxima, pues, el que escribió esta historia dice que Soldino, con todo aquel escuadrón de damas y caballeros, bajó por las gradas de la oscura cueva, y a menos de ochenta gradas se descubrió el cielo luciente y claro, y se vieron unos amenos y tendidos prados que entretenían la vista y alegraban las almas. Y, haciendo Soldino rueda de los que con él habían bajado, les dijo:

-Señores, esto no es encantamento, y esta cueva por donde aquí hemos venido, no sirve sino de atajo para llegar desde allá arriba a este valle que veis, que una legua de aquí tiene más fácil, más llana y más apacible entrada. Yo levanté aquella ermita, y con mis brazos y con mi continuo trabajo cavé la cueva, y hice mío este valle, cuyas aguas y cuyos frutos con prodigalidad me sustentan. Aquí, huyendo de la guerra, hallé la paz; la hambre que en ese mundo de allá arriba, si así se puede decir, tenía, halló aquí a la hartura; aquí, en lugar de los príncipes y monarcas que mandan el mundo, a quien yo servía, he hallado a estos árboles mudos, que, aunque altos y pomposos, son humildes; aquí no suena en mis oídos el desdén de los emperadores, el enfado de sus ministros; aquí no veo dama que me desdeñe, ni criado que mal me sirva; aquí soy yo señor de mí mismo; aquí tengo mi alma en mi palma, y aquí por vía recta encamino mis pensamientos y mis deseos al cielo; aquí he dado fin al estudio de las matemáticas, he contemplado el curso de las estrellas y el movimiento del sol y de la luna; aquí he hallado causas para alegrarme y causas para entristecerme que aún están por venir, que serán tan ciertas, según yo pienso, que corren parejas con la misma verdad. Ahora, ahora, como presente, veo quitar la cabeza a un valiente pirata un valeroso mancebo de la casa de Austria nacido. ¡Oh, si le viédeses, como yo le veo, arrastrando estandartes por el agua, bañando con menosprecio sus medias lunas, pelando sus lenguas colas de caballos, abrasando bajeles, despedazando cuerpos y quitando vidas! Pero, ¡ay de mí!, que me hace entristecer otro coronado joven, tendido en la seca arena, de mil moras lanzas atravesado, el uno nieto y el otro hijo del rayo espantoso de la guerra, jamás como se debe alabado Carlos V, a quien yo serví muchos años y sirviera hasta que la vida se me acabara, si no lo estorbara el querer mudar la milicia mortal en la divina. Aquí estoy, donde sin libros, con sola la experiencia que he adquirido con el tiempo de mi soledad, te digo, ¡oh Croriano! -y en saber yo tu nombre sin haberte visto jamás me acredite contigo-, que gozarás de tu Ruperta largos años; y a ti, Periandro, te aseguro buen suceso de tu peregrinación; tu hermana Auristela no lo será presto, y no porque ha de perder la vida con brevedad; a ti, ¡oh Constanza!, subirás de condesa a duquesa, y tu hermano Antonio, al grado que su valor merece. Estas señoras francesas, aunque no consigan los deseos que ahora tienen, conseguirán otros que las honren y contenten. El haber pronosticado el fuego, el saber vuestros nombres sin haberos visto jamás, las muertes que he dicho que he visto antes que vengan, os podrán mover si queréis a creerme; y más cuando halléis ser verdad que vuestro mozo Bartolomé, con el bagaje y con la moza castellana, se ha ido y os ha dejado a pie: no le sigáis, porque no le alcanzaréis; la moza es más del suelo que del cielo, y quiere seguir su inclinación a despecho y pesar de vuestros consejos. Español soy, que me obliga a ser cortés y a ser verdadero; con la cortesía os ofrezco cuanto estos prados me ofrecen, y con la verdad a la experiencia de todo cuanto os he dicho. Si os maravillare de ver a un español en esta ajena tierra, advertid que hay sitios y lugares en el mundo saludables más que otros, y éste en que estamos lo es para mí más que ninguno. Las alquerías, caserías y lugares que hay por estos contornos, las habitan gentes católicas y santas. Cuando conviene, recibo los sacramentos, y busco lo que no pueden ofrecer los campos para pasar la humana vida. Ésta es la que tengo, de la cual pienso salir a la siempre duradera. Y por agora no más, sino vámonos arriba: daremos sustento a los cuerpos, como aquí abajo le hemos dado a las almas.

Capítulo diez y nueve del tercero libro

ADEREZÓSE la pobre más que limpia comida, aunque fue muy limpia cosa, no muy nueva para los cuatro peregrinos, que se acordaron entonces de la Isla Bárbara y de la de las Ermitas, donde quedó Rutilio, y adonde ellos comieron de los ya sazonados, y ya no, frutos de los árboles; también se les vino a la memoria la profecía falsa de los isleños y las muchas de Mauricio, con las moriscas del jadraque, y, últimamente, las del español Soldino. Parecíales que andaban rodeados de adivinanzas y metidos hasta el alma en la judiciaria astrología, que, a no ser acreditada con la experiencia, con dificultad le dieran crédito.

Acabóse la breve comida, salió Soldino con todos los que con él estaban al camino, para despedirse dellos, y en él echaron menos a la moza castellana y a Bartolomé el del bagaje, cuya falta no dio poca pesadumbre a los cuatro, porque les faltaba el dinero y la repostería. Mostró congojarse Antonio, y quiso adelantarse a buscarle, porque bien se imaginó que la moza le llevaba, o él llevaba a la moza, o por mejor decir, el uno se llevaba al otro; pero Soldino le dijo que no tuviese pena, ni se moviese a buscarlos, porque otro día volvería su criado arrepentido del hurto, y entregaría cuanto había llevado. Creyeron, y así no curó Antonio de buscarle, y más, que Feliz Flora ofreció a Antonio de prestarle cuanto hubiese menester para su gusto y el de sus compañeros desde allí a Roma, a cuya liberal oferta se mostró Antonio agradecido lo posible, y aun se ofreció de darle prenda que cupiese en el puño, y en el valor pasase de cincuenta mil ducados; y esto fue pensando de darle una de las dos perlas de Auristela, que, con la cruz de diamantes guardadas, siempre consigo las traía. No se atrevió Feliz Flora a creer la cantidad del valor de la prenda; pero atrevióse a volver a hacer el ofrecimiento hecho.

Estando en esto, vieron venir por el camino y pasar por delante dellos hasta ocho personas a caballo, entre las cuales iba una mujer sentada en un rico sillón y sobre una mula, vestida de camino, toda de verde, hasta el sombrero, que con ricas y varias plumas azotaba el aire, con un antifaz, asimismo verde, cubierto el rostro. Pasaron por delante dellos, y con bajar las cabezas, sin hablar palabra alguna, los saludaron y pasaron de largo; los del camino tampoco hablaron palabra, y al mismo modo les saludaron. Quedábase atrás uno de los de la compañía, y, llegándose a ellos, pidió por cortesía un poco de agua; diéronsela y preguntáronle qué gente era la que iba allí delante, y qué dama la de lo verde.

A lo que el caminante respondió:

-El que allí delante va es el señor Alejandro Castrucho, gentilhombre capuano, y uno de los ricos varones, no sólo de Capua, sino de todo el reino de Nápoles; la dama es su sobrina, la señora Isabela Castrucho, que nació en España, donde deja enterrado a su padre, por cuya muerte su tío la lleva a casar a Capua, y, a lo que yo creo, no muy contenta.

-Eso será -respondió el escudero enlutado de Ruperta-no porque va a casarse, sino porque el camino es largo; que yo para mí tengo, que no hay mujer que no desee enterarse con la mitad que le falta, que es la del marido.

-No sé esas filosofías -respondió el caminante-; sólo sé que va triste, y la causa ella se la sabe. Y a Dios quedad, que es mucha la ventaja que mis dueños me llevan.

Y, picando apriesa, se les fue de la vista; y ellos, despidiéndose de Soldino, le abrazaron y le dejaron.

Olvidábase de decir cómo Soldino había aconsejado a las damas francesas que siguiesen el camino derecho de Roma, sin torcerle para entrar en París, porque así les convenía. Este consejo fue para ellas como si se le dijera un oráculo; y así, con parecer de los peregrinos, determinaron de salir de Francia por el Delfinado, y, atravesando el Piamonte y el estado de Milán, ver a Florencia y luego a Roma.

Tanteado, pues, este camino, con propósito de alargar algún tanto más las jornadas que hasta allí, caminaron; y otro día, al romper del alba, vieron venir hacia ellos al tenido por ladrón, Bartolomé el bagajero, detrás de su bagaje, y él vestido como peregrino.

Todos gritaron, cuando le conocieron, y los más le preguntaron qué huida había sido la suya, qué traje aquel y qué vuelta aquella.

A lo que él, hincado de rodillas delante de Constanza, casi llorando, respondió a todos:

-Mi huida no sé cómo fue; mi traje ya veis que es de peregrino; mi vuelta es a restituir lo que quizá, y aun sin quizá, en vuestras imaginaciones me tenía confirmado por ladrón; aquí, señora Constanza, viene el bagaje, con todo aquello que en él estaba, excepto dos vestidos de peregrinos, que el uno es éste que yo traigo, y el otro queda haciendo romera a la ramera de Talavera, que doy yo al diablo al amor y al bellaco que me lo enseñó; y es lo peor que le conozco, y determino ser soldado debajo de su bandera, porque no siento fuerzas que se opongan a las que hace el gusto con los que poco saben. Écheme vuesa merced su bendición, y déjeme volver, que me espera Luisa, y advierta que vuelvo sin blanca, fiado en el donaire de mi moza más que en la ligereza de mis manos, que nunca fueron ladronas, ni lo serán, si Dios me guarda el juicio, si viviese mil siglos.

Muchas razones le dijo Periandro para estorbarle su mal propósito; muchas le dijo Auristela y muchas más Constanza y Antonio; pero todo fue, como dicen, dar voces al viento y predicar en desierto. Limpióse Bartolomé sus lágrimas, dejó su bagaje, volvió las espaldas y partió en un vuelo, dejando a todos admirados de su amor y de su simpleza.

Antonio, viéndole partir tan de carrera, puso una flecha en su arco, que jamás la disparó en vano, con intención de atravesarle de parte a parte y sacarle del pecho el amor y la locura; mas Feliz Flora, que pocas veces se le apartaba del lado, le trabó del arco, diciéndole:

-Déjale, Antonio, que harta mala ventura lleva en ir a poder y a sujetarse al yugo de una mujer loca.

-Bien dices, señora -respondió Antonio-; y, pues tú le das la vida, ¿quién ha de ser poderoso a quitársela?

Finalmente, muchos días caminaron sin sucederles cosa digna de ser contada.

Entraron en Milán, admiróles la grandeza de la ciudad, su infinita riqueza, sus oros, que allí no solamente hay oro, sino oros; sus bélicas herrerías, que no parece sino que allí ha pasado las suyas Vulcano; la abundancia infinita de sus frutos, la grandeza de sus templos, y, finalmente, la agudeza del ingenio de sus moradores.

Oyeron decir a un huésped suyo que lo más que había que ver en aquella ciudad era la Academia de los Entronados, que estaba adornada de eminentísimos académicos, cuyos sutiles entendimientos daban que hacer a la fama a todas horas y por todas las partes del mundo. Dijo también que aquel día era de academia, y que se había de disputar en ella si podía haber amor sin celos.

-Sí puede -dijo Periandro-; y, para probar esta verdad, no es menester gastar mucho tiempo.

-Yo -replicó Auristela- no sé qué es amor, aunque sé lo que es querer bien.

A lo que dijo Belarminia:

-No entiendo ese modo de hablar, ni la diferencia que hay entre amor y querer bien.

-Ésta -replicó Auristela-: querer bien puede ser sin causa vehemente que os mueva la voluntad, como se puede querer a una criada que os sirve o a una estatua o pintura que bien os parece o que mucho os agrada; y éstas no dan celos, ni los pueden dar; pero aquello que dicen que se llama amor, que es una vehemente pasión del ánimo, como dicen, ya que no dé celos, puede dar temores que lleguen a quitar la vida, del cual temor a mí me parece que no puede estar libre el amor en ninguna manera.

-Mucho has dicho, señora -respondió Periandro-, porque no hay ningún amante que esté en posesión de la cosa amada, que no tema el perderla; no hay ventura tan firme que tal vez no dé vaivenes; no hay clavo tan fuerte que pueda detener la rueda de la fortuna; y si el deseo que nos lleva a acabar presto nuestro camino no lo estorbara, quizá mostrara yo hoy en la academia que puede haber amor sin celos, pero no sin temores.

Cesó esta plática. Estuvieron cuatro días en Milán, en los cuales comenzaron a ver sus grandezas, porque acabarlas de ver no dieran tiempo cuatro años. Partiéronse de allí, y llegaron a Luca, ciudad pequeña, pero hermosa y libre, que debajo de las alas del imperio y de España se descuella, y mira esenta a las ciudades de los príncipes que la desean; allí, mejor que en otra parte ninguna, son bien vistos y recibidos los españoles, y es la causa que en ella no mandan ellos, sino ruegan, y como en ella no hacen estancia de más de un día, no dan lugar a mostrar su condición, tenida por arrogante.

Aquí aconteció a nuestros pasajeros una de las más estrañas aventuras que se han contado en todo el discurso deste libro.

Capítulo veinte del tercero libro

LAS POSADAS de Luca son capaces para alojar una compañía de soldados, en una de las cuales se alojó nuestro escuadrón, siendo guiado de las guardas de las puertas de la ciudad, que se los entregaron al huésped por cuenta, porque a la mañana, o cuando se partiesen, la había de dar dellos. Al entrar vio la señora Ruperta que salía un médico -que tal le pareció en el traje-diciendo a la huéspeda de la casa -que también le pareció no podía ser otra:

-Yo, señora, no me acabo de desengañar si esta doncella está loca o endemoniada, y, por no errar, digo que está endemoniada y loca; y, con todo eso, tengo esperanza de su salud, si es que su tío no se da prisa a partirse.

-¡Ay, Jesús! -dijo Ruperta-. ¿Y en casa de endemoniados y locos nos apeamos? En verdad, en verdad, que si se toma mi parecer, no hemos de poner los pies dentro.

A lo que dijo la huéspeda:

-Sin escrúpulo puede vuesa señoría -que éste es el merced de Italia-apearse, porque de cien leguas se podía venir a ver lo que está en esta posada.

Apeáronse todos, y Auristela y Constanza, que habían oído las razones de la huéspeda, le preguntaron qué había en aquella posada que tanto encarecía el verla.

-Vénganse conmigo -respondió la huéspeda-, y verán lo que verán, y dirán lo que yo digo.

Guió, y siguiéronla, donde vieron echada en un lecho dorado a una hermosísima muchacha, de edad, al parecer, de diez y seis o diez y siete años; tenía los brazos aspadados y atados con unas vendas a los balaustres de la cabecera del lecho, como que le querían estorbar el moverlos a ninguna parte; dos mujeres, que debían de servirla de enfermeras, andaban buscándole las piernas para atárselas también, a lo que la enferma dijo:

-Basta que se me aten los brazos, que todo lo demás las ataduras de mi honestidad lo tiene ligado.

Y, volviéndose a las peregrinas, con levantada voz dijo:

-¡Figuras del cielo!, ¡ángeles de carne!, sin duda creo que venís a darme salud, porque de tan hermosa presencia y de tan cristiana visita no se puede esperar otra cosa. Por lo que debéis a ser quien sois, que sois mucho, que mandéis que me desaten, que con cuatro o cinco bocados que me dé en el brazo, quedará harta y no me haré más mal, porque no estoy tan loca como parezco, ni el que me atormenta es tan cruel que dejará que me muerda.

-¡Pobre de ti, sobrina -dijo un anciano que había entrado en el aposento-, y cuál te tiene ése que dices que no ha de dejar que te muerdas! Encomiéndate a Dios, Isabela, y procura comer, no de tus hermosas carnes, sino de lo que te diere este tu tío, que bien te quiere. Lo que cría el aire, lo que mantiene el agua, lo que sustenta la tierra, te traeré: que tu mucha hacienda y mi voluntad mucha te lo ofrece todo.

La doliente moza respondió:

-Déjenme sola con estos ángeles; quizá mi enemigo el demonio huirá de mí por no estar con ellos.

Y, señalando con la cabeza que se quedasen con ella Auristela, Constanza, Ruperta y Feliz Flora, dijo que los demás se saliesen, como se hizo con voluntad, y aun con ruegos de su anciano y lastimado tío, del cual supieron ser aquella la gentil dama de lo verde que, al salir de la cueva del sabio español, habían visto pasar por el camino, que el criado que se quedó atrás les dijo que se llamaba Isabela Castrucha, y que se iba a casar al reino de Nápoles.

Apenas se vio sola la enferma, cuando, mirando a todas partes, dijo que mirasen si había otra persona en el aposento que aumentase el número de los que ella dijo que se quedasen. Mirólo Ruperta, y escudriñólo todo, y aseguró no haber otra persona que ellos. Con esta seguridad, sentóse Isabela como pudo en el lecho, y, dando muestras de que quería hablar de propósito, rompió la voz con un tan grande suspiro, que pareció que con él se le arrancaba el alma; el fin del cual fue tenderse otra vez en el lecho, y quedar desmayada, con señales tan de muerte que obligó a los circunstantes a dar voces pidiendo un poco de agua para bañar el rostro de Isabela, que a más andar se iba al otro mundo.

Entró el mísero tío, llevando una cruz en la una mano, y en la otra un hisopo bañado en agua bendita; entraron asimismo con él dos sacerdotes, que, creyendo ser el demonio quien la fatigaba, pocas veces se apartaban della; entró asimismo la huéspeda con el agua; rociáronle el rostro, y volvió en sí diciendo:

-Escusadas son por agora estas prevenciones; yo saldré presto; pero no ha de ser cuando vosotros quisiéredes, sino cuando a mí me parezca, que será cuando viniere a esta ciudad Andrea Marulo, hijo de Juan Bautista Marulo, caballero desta ciudad, el cual Andrea agora está estudiando en Salamanca, bien descuidado destos sucesos.

Todas estas razones acabaron de confirmar en los oyentes la opinión que tenían de estar Isabela endemoniada, porque no podían pensar cómo pudiese saber ella Juan Bautista Marulo quién fuese, y su hijo Andrea; y no faltó quien fuese luego a decir al ya nombrado Juan Bautista Marulo lo que la bella endemoniada dél y de su hijo había dicho.

Tornó a pedir que la dejaran sola con los que antes había escogido; dijéronle los sacerdotes los Evangelios, y hicieron su gusto, llevándole todos de la señal que había dado quedaría, cuando el demonio la dejase, libre; que indubitablemente la juzgaron por endemoniada.

Feliz Flora hizo de nuevo la pesquisa de la estancia, y, cerrando la puerta della, dijo a la enferma:

-Solos estamos; mira, señora, lo que quieres.

-Lo que quiero es -respondió Isabela-que me quiten estas ligaduras; que, aunque son blandas, me fatigan, porque me impiden.

Hiciéronlo así con mucha diligencia, y, sentándose Isabela en el lecho, asió de la una mano a Auristela y de la otra a Ruperta, y hizo que Constanza y Feliz Flora se sentasen junto a ella en el mismo lecho; y así, apiñadas en un hermoso montón, con voz baja y lágrimas en los ojos, dijo:

-«Yo, señoras, soy la infelice Isabela Castrucha, cuyos padres me dieron nobleza, la fortuna, hacienda, y los cielos, algún tanto de hermosura. Nacieron mis padres en Capua, pero engendraronme en España, donde nací, y me crié en casa deste mi tío que aquí está, que en la corte del emperador la tenía. ¡Válame Dios, y para qué tomo yo tan de atrás la corriente de mis desventuras! Estando, pues, yo en casa deste mi tío, ya huérfana de mis padres, que a él me dejaron encomendada y por tutor mío, llegó a la corte un mozo, a quien yo vi en una iglesia, y le miré tan de propósito... (y no os parezca esto, señoras, desenvoltura, que no parecerá, si consideráredes que soy mujer); digo que le miré en la iglesia de tal modo que en casa no podía estar sin mirarle, porque quedó su presencia tan impresa en mi alma que no la podía apartar de mi memoria. Finalmente, no me faltaron medios para entender quién él era, y la calidad de su persona, y qué hacía en la corte o dónde iba, y lo que saqué en limpio fue que se llamaba Andrea Marulo, hijo de Juan Bautista Marulo, caballero desta ciudad, más noble que rico, y que iba a estudiar a Salamanca. En seis días que allí estuvo, tuve orden de escribirle quién yo era y la mucha hacienda que tenía, y que de mi hermosura se podía certificar, viéndome en la iglesia; escribíle, asimismo, que entendía que este mi tío me quería casar con un primo mío, porque la hacienda se quedase en casa, hombre no de mi gusto, ni de mi condición, como es verdad; díjele asimismo que la ocasión en mí le ofrecía sus cabellos, que los tomase, y que no diese lugar en no hacello al arrepentimiento, y que no tomase de mi facilidad ocasión para no estimarme.

suyo, que con él desta ciudad había partido a seguir el estudio. Respondíle que sí haría, porque en mí no era el amor importuno, ni indiscreto, que presto nace y presto se muere. Dejóme entonces por honrado, pues no quiso faltar a su amigo, y con lágrimas, como enamorado, que yo se las vi verter, pasando por mi calle, el día que se partió sin dejarme y yo me fui con él sin partirme.

»Otro día... (¿Quién podrá creer esto? ¡Qué de rodeos tienen las desgracias para alcanzar más presto a los desdichados!) Digo, que otro día concertó mi tío que volviésemos a Italia, y, sin poderme excusar ni valerme el fingirme enferma, porque el pulso y la color me hacían sana, mi tío no quiso creer que de enferma, sino de mal contenta del casamiento, buscaba trazas para no partirme. En este tiempo le tuve para escribir a Andrea de lo que me había sucedido, y que era forzoso el partirme; pero que yo procuraría pasar por esta ciudad, donde pensaba fingirme endemoniada, y dar lugar con esta traza a que él le tuviese de dejar a Salamanca y venir a Luca, adonde, a pesar de mi tío, y aun de todo el mundo, sería mi esposo; así que, en su diligencia estaba mi ventura y aun la suya, si quería mostrarse agradecido. Si las cartas llegaron a sus manos, que sí debieron de llegar, porque los portes las hacen ciertas, antes de tres días ha de estar aquí. Yo, por mi parte, he hecho lo que he podido; una legión de demonios tengo en el cuerpo, que lo mismo es tener una onza de amor en el alma, cuando la esperanza desde lejos la anda haciendo cocos.»

Ésta es, señoras mías, mi historia; ésta, mi locura; ésta, mi enfermedad; mis amorosos pensamientos son los demonios que me atormentan; paso hambre, porque espero hartura, pero, con todo eso, la desconfianza me persigue, porque, como dicen en Castilla: «a los desdichados se les suelen helar las migas entre la boca y la mano». Haced, señoras, de modo que acreditéis mi mentira y fortalezcáis mis discursos, haciendo con mi tío que, puesto que yo no sane, no me ponga en camino por algunos días: quizá permitirá el cielo que llegue el de mi contento con la venida de Andrea.

No habrá para qué preguntar si se admiraron o no los oyentes de la historia de Isabela, pues la historia misma se trae consigo la admiración, para ponerla en las almas de los que la escuchan.

Ruperta, Auristela, Constanza y Feliz Flora le ofrecieron de fortalecer sus disignios, y de no partirse de aquel lugar hasta ver el fin dellos, pues, a buena razón, no podía tardar mucho.

Capítulo ventiuno del tercero libro

PRIESA se daba la hermosa Isabela Castrucha a revalidar su demonio, y priesa se daban las cuatro, ya sus amigas, a fortalecer su enfermedad, afirmando con todas las razones que podían de que verdaderamente era el demonio el que hablaba en su cuerpo: porque se vea quién es el amor, pues hace parecer endemoniados a los amantes.

Estando en esto, que sería casi al anochecer, volvió el médico a hacer la segunda visita, y acaso trujo con él a Juan Bautista Marulo, padre de Andrea el enamorado, y, al entrar del aposento de la enferma, dijo:

-Vea vuesa merced, señor Juan Bautista Marulo, la lástima desta doncella, y si merece que en su cuerpo de ángel se ande espaciando el demonio; pero una esperanza nos consuela, y es que nos ha dicho que presto saldrá de aquí, y dará por señal de su salida la venida del señor Andrea, vuestro hijo, que por instantes aguarda.

-Así me lo han dicho -respondió el señor Juan Bautista-, y holgaríame yo que cosas mías fuesen paraninfos de tan buenas nuevas.

-Gracias a Dios y a mi diligencia -dijo Isabela-, que si no fuera por mí, él se estuviera agora quedo en Salamanca, haciendo lo que Dios se sabe. Créame el señor Juan Bautista, que está presente, que tiene un hijo más hermoso que santo, y menos estudiante que galán; que mal hayan las galas y las atildaduras de los mancebos, que tanto daño hacen en la república, y mal hayan juntamente las espuelas que no son de rodaja, y los acicates que no son puntiagudos, y las mulas de alquiler que no se aventajan a las postas.

Con éstas fue ensartando otras razones equívocas; conviene a saber, de dos sentidos, que de una manera las entendían sus secretarias y de otra los demás circunstantes. Ellas las interpretaban verdaderamente, y los demás, como desconcertados disparates.

-¿Dónde vistes vos, señora -dijo Marulo-, a mi hijo Andrea? ¿Fue en Madrid o en Salamanca?

-No fue sino en Illescas -dijo Isabela-, cogiendo guindas la mañana de San Juan, al tiempo que alboreaba; mas, si va a decir verdad, que es milagro que yo la diga, siempre le veo y siempre le tengo en el alma.

-Aun bien -replicó Marulo-, que esté mi hijo cogiendo guindas y no espulgándose, que es más propio de los estudiantes.

-Los estudiantes que son caballeros -respondió Isabela-, de pura fantasía pocas veces se espulgan, pero muchas se rascan; que estos animalejos, que se usan en el mundo tan de ordinario, son tan atrevidos que así se entran por las calzas de los príncipes como por las frazadas de los hospitales.

-Todo lo sabes, malino -dijo el médico-; bien parece que eres viejo.

Y esto, encaminando su razón al demonio que pensaba que tenía Isabela en el cuerpo.

Estando en esto, que no parece sino que el mismo Satanás lo ordenaba, entró el tío de Isabela con muestras de grandísima alegría, diciendo:

-¡Albricias, sobrina mía; albricias, hija de mi alma; que ya ha llegado el señor Andrea Marulo, hijo del señor Juan Bautista, que está presente! ¡Ea, dulce esperanza mía, cúmplenos la que nos has dado de que has de quedar libre en viéndole! ¡Ea, demonio maldito, vade retro, exi foras, sin que llesves pensamiento de volver a esta estancia, por más barrida y escombrada que la veas!

-Venga, venga -replicó Isabela-ese putativo Ganimedes, ese contrahecho Adonis, y déme la mano de esposo, libre, sano y sin cautela; que yo le he estado aquí aguardando más firme que roca puesta a las ondas del mar, que la tocan, mas no la mueven.

Entró, de camino, Andrea Marulo, a quien ya en casa de su padre le habían dicho la enfermedad de la extranjera Isabela, y de cómo le esperaba para darle por señal de la salida del demonio. El mozo, que era discreto y estaba prevenido, por las cartas que Isabela le envió a Salamanca, de lo que había de hacer si la alcanzaba en Luca, sin quitarse las espuelas, acudió a la posada de Isabela, y entró por su estancia como atontado y loco, diciendo:

-¡Afuera, afuera, afuera; aparta, aparta, aparta; que entra el valeroso Andrea, cuadrillero mayor de todo el infierno, si es que no basta de una escuadra!

Con este alboroto y voces casi quedaron admirados los mismos que sabían la verdad del caso, tanto que dijo el médico, y aun su mismo padre:

-Tan demonio es éste como el que tiene Isabela.

Y su tío dijo:

-Esperábamos a este mancebo para nuestro bien, y creo que ha venido para nuestro mal.

-Sosiégate, hijo, sosiégate -dijo su padre-; que parece que estás loco.

-¿No lo ha de estar -dijo Isabela-, si me vee a mí? ¿No soy yo, por ventura, el centro donde reposan sus pensamientos? ¿No soy yo el blanco donde asestan sus deseos?

-Sí, por cierto -dijo Andrea-; sí, que vos sois señora de mi voluntad, descanso de mi trabajo y vida de mi muerte. Dadme la mano de ser mi esposa, señora mía, y sacadme de la esclavitud en que me veo a la libertad de verme debajo de vuestro yugo; dadme la mano, digo otra vez, bien mío, y alzadme de la humildad de ser Andrea Marulo a la alteza de ser esposo de Isabela Castrucho. Vayan de aquí fuera los demonios que quisieren estorbar tan sabroso nudo, y no procuren los hombres apartar lo que Dios junta.

-Tú dices bien, señor Andrea -replicó Isabela-; y, sin que aquí intervengan trazas, máquinas ni embelecocos, dame esa mano de esposo y recíbeme por tuya.

Tendió la mano Andrea, y, en aquel instante, alzó la voz Auristela y dijo:

-Bien se la puede dar, que para en uno son.

Pasmado y atónito, tendió también la mano su tío de Isabela y trabó de la de Andrea, y dijo:

-¿Qué es esto, señores? ¿Úsase en este pueblo que se case un diablo con otro?

-Que no -dijo el médico-; que esto debe de ser burlando, para que el diablo se vaya, porque no es posible que este caso que va sucediendo pueda ser prevenido por entendimiento humano.

-Con todo eso -dijo el tío de Isabela-, quiero saber de la boca de entrambos qué lugar le daremos a este casamiento: el de la verdad o el de la burla.

-El de la verdad -respondió Isabela-, porque ni Andrea Marulo está loco ni yo endemoniada. Yo le quiero y escojo por mi esposo, si es que él me quiere y me escoge por su esposa.

-No loco ni endemoniado, sino con mi juicio entero, tal cual Dios ha sido servido de darme.

Y, diciendo esto, tomó la mano de Isabela, y ella le dio la suya, y con dos síes quedaron indubitavelmente casados.

-¿Qué es esto? -dijo Castrucho-; ¿otra vez? ¡Aquí de Dios! ¿Cómo, y es posible que así se deshonren las canas deste viejo?

-No las puede deshonrar -dijo el padre de Andrea-ninguna cosa mía. Yo soy noble, y si no demasiadamente rico, no tan pobre que haya menester a nadie. No entro ni salgo en este negocio; sin mi sabiduría se han casado los muchachos: que en los pechos enamorados, la discreción se adelanta a los años, y si las más veces los mozos en sus acciones disparan, muchas aciertan; y, cuando aciertan, aunque sea acaso, exceden con muchas ventajas a las más consideradas. Pero mírese, con todo eso, si lo que aquí ha pasado puede pasar adelante, porque si se puede deshacer, las riquezas de Isabela no han de ser parte para que yo procure la mejora de mi hijo.

Dos sacerdotes que se hallaron presentes dijeron que era válido el matrimonio, supuesto que, si con parecer de locos le habían comenzado, con parecer de verdaderamente cuerdos le habían confirmado.

-Y de nuevo le confirmamos -dijo Andrea.

Y lo mismo dijo Isabela.

Oyendo lo cual su tío, se le cayeron las alas del corazón y la cabeza sobre el pecho; y, dando un profundo suspiro, vuelto los ojos en blanco, dio muestras de haberle sobrevenido un mortal parasismo.

Lleváronle sus criados al lecho, levantóse del suyo Isabela, llevóla Andrea a casa de su padre, como a su esposa, y de allí a dos días entraron por la puerta de una iglesia un niño, hermano de Andrea Marulo, a bautizar; Isabela y Andrea a casarse, y a enterrar el cuerpo de su tío, porque se vean cuán estraños son los sucesos desta vida: unos a un mismo punto se bautizan, otros se casan y otros se entierran. Con todo eso, se puso luto Isabela, porque ésta que llaman muerte mezcla los tálamos con las sepulturas y las galas con los lutos.

Cuatro días más estuvieron en Luca nuestros peregrinos y la escuadra de nuestros pasajeros, que fueron regalados de los desposados y del noble Juan Bautista Marulo.

Y aquí dio fin nuestro autor al tercero libro desta historia.

Capítulo primero del cuarto libro

DISPUTÓSE entre nuestra peregrina escuadra, no una, sino muchas veces, si el casamiento de Isabela Castrucha, con tantas máquinas fabricado, podía ser valedero, a lo que Periandro muchas veces dijo que sí; cuanto más, que no les tocaba a ellos la averiguación de aquel caso. Pero lo que a él le había descontentado, era la junta del bautismo, casamiento y la sepultura, y la ignorancia del médico, que no atinó con la traza de Isabela ni con el peligro de su tío. Unas veces trataban en esto, y otras en referir los peligros que por ellos habían pasado.

Andaban Croriano y Ruperta, su esposa, atentísimos inquirendo quién fuesen Periandro y Auristela, Antonio y Constanza, lo que no hacían por saber quién fuesen las tres damas francesas, que, desde el punto que las vieron, fueron dellos conocidas. Con esto, a más que medianas jornadas, llegaron a Acupendente, lugar cercano a Roma, a la entrada de la cual villa, adelantándose un poco Periandro y Auristela de los demás, sin temor que nadie los escuchase ni oyese, Periandro habló a Auristela desta manera:

-Bien sabes, ¡oh señora!, que las causas que nos movieron a salir de nuestra patria y a dejar nuestro regalo fueron tan justas como necesarias. Ya los aires de Roma nos dan en el rostro; ya las esperanzas que nos sustentan nos bullen en las almas; ya ya hago cuenta que me veo en la dulce posesión esperada. Mira, señora, que será bien que des una vuelta a tus pensamientos, y, escudriñando tu voluntad, mires si estás en la entereza primera, o si lo estarás después de haber cumplido tu voto, de lo que yo no dudo, porque tu real sangre no se engendró entre promesas mentirosas, ni entre dobladas trazas. De mí te sé decir, ¡oh hermosa Sigismunda!, que este Periandro que aquí ves es el Persiles que en la casa del rey mi padre viste. Aquel, digo, que te dio palabra de ser tu esposo en los alcázares de su padre, y te la cumplirá en los desiertos de Libia, si allí la contraria fortuna nos llevase.

Íbale mirando Auristela atentísimamente, maravillada de que Periandro dudase de su fe, y así le dijo:

-Sola una voluntad, ¡oh Persiles!, he tenido en toda mi vida, y ésa habrá dos años que te la entregué, no forzada, sino de mi libre albedrío; la cual tan entera y firme está agora como el primer día que te hice señor della; la cual, si es posible que se aumente, se ha aumentado y crecido entre los muchos trabajos que hemos pasado. De que tú estés firme en la tuya me mostraré tan agradecida que, en cumpliendo mi voto, haré que se vuelvan en posesión tus esperanzas. Pero dime, ¿qué haremos después que una misma coyunda nos ate y un mismo yugo oprima nuestros cuellos? Lejos nos hallamos de nuestras tierras, no conocidos de nadie en las ajenas, sin arrimo que sustente la yedra de nuestras incomodidades. No digo esto porque me falte el ánimo de sufrir todas las del mundo, como esté contigo, sino dígolo porque cualquiera necesidad tuya me ha de quitar la vida. Hasta aquí, o poco menos de hasta aquí, padecía mi alma en sí sola; pero de aquí adelante padeceré en ella y en la tuya, aunque he dicho mal en partir estas dos almas, pues no son más que una.

-Mira, señora -respondió Periandro-, como no es posible que ninguno fabrique su fortuna, puesto que dicen que cada uno es el artífice della desde el principio hasta el cabo, así yo no puedo responderte agora lo que haremos después que la buena suerte nos ajunte. Rómpase agora el inconveniente de nuestra división, que, después de juntos, campos hay en la tierra que nos sustenten y chozas que nos recojan, y hatos que nos encubran; que a gozarse dos almas que son una, como tú has dicho, no hay contentos con que igualarse, ni dorados techos que mejor nos alberguen. No nos faltará medio para que mi madre, la reina, sepa dónde estamos, ni a ella le faltará industria para socorrernos; y, en tanto, esa cruz de diamantes que tienes y esas dos perlas inestimables comenzarán a darnos ayudas, sino que temo que al deshacernos dellas se ha de deshacer nuestra máquina; porque, ¿cómo se ha de creer que prendas de tanto valor se encubran debajo de una esclavina?

Y, por venir dándoles alcance la demás compañía, cesó su plática, que fue la primera que habían hablado en cosas de su gusto, porque la mucha honestidad de Auristela jamás dio ocasión a Periandro a que en secreto la hablase; y, con este artificio y seguridad notable, pasaron la plaza de hermanos entre todos cuantos hasta allí los habían conocido. Solamente en el desalmado y ya muerto Clodio pasó la malicia tan adelante que llegó a sospechar la verdad.

Aquella noche llegaron una jornada antes de Roma, y en un mesón, adonde siempre les solía acontecer maravillas, les aconteció ésta, si es que así puede llamarse.

Estando todos sentados a una mesa, la cual la solicitud del huésped y la diligencia de sus criados tenían abundantemente proveída, de un aposento del mesón salió un gallardo peregrino con unas escribanías sobre el brazo izquierdo, y un cartapacio en la mano; y, habiendo hecho a todos la debida cortesía, en lengua castellana dijo:

-Este traje de peregrino que visto, el cual trae consigo la obligación de que pida limosna el que lo trae, me obliga a que os la pida, y tan aventajada y tan nueva que, sin darme joya alguna, ni prendas que lo valgan, me habéis de hacer rico. Yo, señores, soy un hombre curioso: sobre la mitad de mi alma predomina Marte, y sobre la otra mitad Mercurio y Apolo. Algunos años me he dado al ejercicio de la guerra, y algunos otros, y los más maduros, en el de las letras. En los de la guerra he alcanzado algún buen nombre, y por los de las letras he sido algún tanto estimado. Algunos libros he impreso, de los ignorantes non condenados por malos, ni de los discretos han dejado de ser tenidos por buenos. Y como la necesidad, según se dice, es maestra de avivar los ingenios, este mío, que tiene un no sé qué de fantástico e inventivo, ha dado en una imaginación algo peregrina y nueva, y es que a costa ajena quiero sacar un libro a la luz, cuyo trabajo sea, como he dicho, ajeno, y el provecho mío. El libro se ha de llamar Flor de aforismos peregrinos; conviene a saber, sentencias sacadas de la misma verdad, en esta forma: cuando en el camino o en otra parte topo alguna persona cuya experiencia muestre ser de ingenio y de prendas, le pido me escriba en este cartapacio algún dicho agudo, si es que le sabe, o alguna sentencia que lo parezca, y de esta manera tengo ajuntados más de trecientos aforismos, todos dignos de saberse y de imprimirse, y no en nombre mío, sino de su mismo autor, que lo firmó de su nombre, después de haberlo dicho. Ésta es la limosna que pido, y la que estimaré sobre todo el oro del mundo.

-Dadnos, señor español -respondió Periandro-, alguna muestra de lo que pedís, por quien nos guíemos, que en lo demás, seréis servido como nuestros ingenios lo alcanzaren.

-Esta mañana -respondió el español- llegaron aquí y pasaron de largo un peregrino y una peregrina españoles, a los cuales, por ser españoles, declaré mi deseo, y ella me dijo que pusiese de mi mano -porque no sabía escribir- esta razón: Más quiero ser mala con esperanza de ser buena, que buena con propósito de ser mala; y díjome que firmase: LA PEREGRINA DE TALAVERA. Tampoco sabía escribir el peregrino, y me dijo que escribiese: No hay carga más pesada que la mujer liviana; y firmé por él: BARTOLOMÉ EL MANCHEGO. Deste modo son los aforismos que pido; y los que espero desta gallarda compañía serán tales, que realcen a los demás, y les sirvan de adorno y de esmalte.

-El caso está entendido -respondió Croriano-; y por mí -tomando la pluma al peregrino y el cartapacio- quiero comenzar a salir desta obligación y escribo: Más hermoso parece el soldado muerto en la batalla que sano en la huida.

Y firmó: CRORIANO. Luego tomó la pluma Periandro y escribió: Dichoso es el soldado que, cuando está peleando, sabe que le está mirando su príncipe; y firmó. Sucedióle el bárbaro Antonio, y escribió: La honra que se alcanza por la guerra, como se graba en láminas de bronce y con puntas de acero, es más firme que las demás honras; y firmóse: ANTONIO EL BÁRBARO.

Y, como allí no había más hombres, rogó el peregrino que también aquellas damas escribiesen, y fue la primera que escribió Ruperta, y dijo: La hermosura que se acompaña con la honestidad es hermosura, y la que no, no es más de un buen parecer; y firmó. Segundóla Auristela, y, tomando la pluma, dijo: La mejor dote que puede llevar la mujer principal es la honestidad, porque la hermosura y la riqueza el tiempo la gasta o la fortuna la deshace; y firmó. A quien siguió Constanza, escribiendo: No por el suyo, sino por el parecer ajeno ha de escoger la mujer el marido; y firmó. Feliz Flora escribió también, y dijo: A mucho obligan las leyes de la obediencia forzosa, pero a mucho más las fuerzas del gusto; y firmó. Y, siguiendo Belarminia, dijo: La mujer ha de ser como el armiño, dejándose antes prender que enlodarse; y firmó. La última que escribió fue la hermosa Deleasir, y dijo: Sobre todas las acciones de esta vida tiene imperio la buena o la mala suerte, pero más sobre los casamientos.

Esto fue lo que escribieron nuestras damas y nuestros peregrinos, de lo que el español quedó agradecido y contento; y, preguntándole Periandro si sabía algún aforismo de memoria, de los que tenía allí escritos, le dijese; a lo que respondió que sólo uno diría, que le había dado gran gusto por la firma del que lo había escrito, que decía: No desees, y serás el más rico hombre del mundo; y la firma decía: DIEGO DE RATOS, CORCOVADO, ZAPATERO DE VIEJO EN TORDESILLAS, LUGAR EN CASTILLA LA VIEJA, JUNTO A VALLADOLID.

-¡Por Dios -dijo Antonio-, que la firma está larga y tendida, y que el aforismo es el más breve y compendioso que puede imaginarse!; porque está claro que lo que se desea es lo que falta, y el que no desea no tiene falta de nada, y así, será el más rico del mundo.

Algunos otros aforismos dijo el español, que hicieron sabrosa la conversación y la cena.

Sentóse el peregrino con ellos, y en el discurso de la cena dijo:

-No daré el privilegio de este mi libro a ningún librero de Madrid, si me da por él dos mil ducados; que allí no hay ninguno que no quiera los privilegios de balde, o, a lo menos, por tan poco precio que no le luzga al autor del libro. Verdad es que tal vez suelen comprar un privilegio y imprimir un libro con quien piensan enriquecer, y pierden en él el trabajo y la hacienda, pero el de estos aforismos, escrito se lleva en la frente la bondad y la ganancia.

Capítulo segundo del cuarto libro

BIEN PODÍA intitular el libro del peregrino español Historia peregrina sacada de diversos autores, y dijera verdad, según habían sido y iban siendo los que la componían; y no les dio poco que reír la firma de Diego de Ratos, el zapatero de viejo, y aun también les dio que pensar el dicho de Bartolomé el Manchego, que dijo que no había carga más pesada que la mujer liviana, señal que le debía de pesar ya la que llevaba en la moza de Talavera.

En esto fueron hablando otro día que dejaron al español, moderno y nuevo autor de nuevos y esquisitos libros, y aquel mismo día vieron a Roma, alegrándoles las almas, de cuya alegría redundaba salud en los cuerpos. Alborozáronse los corazones de Periandro y de Auristela, viéndose tan cerca del fin de su deseo; los de Croriano y Ruperta y los de las tres damas francesas ansimismo, por el buen suceso que prometía el fin próspero de su viaje, entrando a la parte de este gusto los de Constanza y Antonio.

Heríales el sol por cenit, a cuya causa, puesto que está más apartado de la tierra que en ninguna otra sazón del día, hiere con más calor y vehemencia; y, habiéndoles convidado una cercana selva que a su mano derecha se descubría, determinaron de pasar en ella el rigor de la siesta que les amenazaba, y aun quizá la noche, pues les quedaba lugar demasiado para entrar el día siguiente en Roma.

Hiciéronlo así, y, mientras más entraban por la selva adelante, la amenidad del sitio, las fuentes que de entre las hierbas salían, los arroyos que por ella cruzaban, les iban confirmando en su mismo propósito. Tanto habían entrado en ella, cuanto, volviendo los ojos, vieron que estaban ya encubiertos a los que por el real camino pasaban; y, haciéndoles la variedad de los sitios variar en la imaginación cuál escogerían, según eran todos buenos y apacibles, alzó acaso los ojos Auristela, y vio pendiente de la rama de un verde sauce un retrato, del grandor de una cuartilla de papel, pintado en una tabla no más, del rostro de una hermosísima mujer; y, reparando un poco en él, conoció claramente ser su rostro el del retrato, y, admirada y suspensa, se le enseñó a Periandro.

A este mismo instante dijo Croriano que todas aquellas hierbas manaban sangre, y mostró los pies en caliente sangre teñidos.

El retrato, que luego descolgó Periandro, y la sangre que mostraba Croriano, los tuvo confusos a todos y en deseo de buscar así el dueño del retrato como el de la sangre. No podía pensar Auristela quién, dónde o cuándo pudiese haber sido sacado su rostro, ni se acordaba Periandro que el criado del duque de Nemurs le había dicho que el pintor que sacaba los de las tres francesas damas, sacaría también el de Auristela, con no más de haberla visto; que si de esto él se acordara, con facilidad diera en la cuenta de lo que no alcanzaba.

El rastro que siguieron de la sangre llevó a Croriano y a Antonio, que le seguían, hasta ponerlos entre unos espesos árboles que allí cerca estaban, donde vieron al pie de uno un gallardo peregrino sentado en el suelo, puestas las manos casi sobre el corazón y todo lleno de sangre: vista que les turbó en gran manera, y más cuando, llegándose a él Croriano, le alzó el rostro, que sobre los pechos tenía derribado y lleno de sangre, y, limpiándosele con un lienzo, conoció, sin duda alguna, ser el herido el duque de Nemurs; que no bastó el diferente traje en que le hallaba para dejar de conocerle: tanta era la amistad que con él tenía.

El duque herido, o a lo menos el que parecía ser el duque, sin abrir los ojos, que con la sangre los tenía cerrados, con mal pronunciadas palabras dijo:

-Bien hubieras hecho, ¡oh quienquiera que seas, enemigo mortal de mi descanso!, si hubieras alzado un poco más la mano, y dádome en mitad del corazón, que allí sí que hallaras el retrato más vivo y más verdadero que el que me hiciste quitar del pecho y colgar en el árbol, porque no me sirviese de reliquias y de escudo en nuestra batalla.

Hallóse Constanza en este hallazgo, y, como naturalmente era de condición tierna y compasiva, acudió a mirarle la herida y a tomarle la sangre, antes que a tener cuenta con las lastimosas palabras que decía. Casi otro tanto le sucedió a Periandro y a Auristela, porque la misma sangre les hizo pasar adelante a buscar el origen de donde procedía, y hallaron entre unos verdes y crecidos juncos tendido otro peregrino, cubierto casi todo de sangre, excepto el rostro, que descubierto y limpio tenía; y así, sin tener necesidad de limpiársele, ni de hacer diligencias para conocerle, conocieron ser el príncipe Arnaldo, que más desmayado que muerto estaba.

La primera señal que dio de vida fue probarse a levantar, diciendo:

-No le llevarás, traidor, porque el retrato es mío, por ser el de mi alma; tú le has robado, y, sin haberte yo ofendido en cosa, me quieres quitar la vida.

Temblando estaba Auristela con la no pensada vista de Arnaldo; y, aunque las obligaciones que le tenía la impelían a que a él se llegase, no osaba, por la presencia de Periandro, el cual, tan obligado como cortés, asió de las manos del príncipe, y, con voz no muy alta, por no descubrir lo que quizá el príncipe querría que se callase, le dijo:

-Volved en vos, señor Arnaldo, y veréis que estáis en poder de vuestros mayores amigos, y que no os tiene tan desamparado el cielo que no os podáis prometer mejora de vuestra suerte. Abrid los ojos, digo, y veréis a vuestro amigo Periandro y a vuestra obligada Auristela, tan deseosos de servirlos como siempre.

Contadnos vuestra desgracia y todos vuestros sucesos, y prometeos de nosotros todo cuanto nuestra industria y fuerzas alcanzaren. Decidnos si estáis herido, y quién os hirió y en qué parte, para que luego se procure vuestro remedio.

Abrió en esto los ojos Arnaldo, y, conociendo a los dos que delante tenía, como pudo, que fue con mucho trabajo, se arrojó a los pies de Auristela, puesto que abrazado también a los de Periandro (que hasta en aquel punto guardó el decoro a la honestidad de Auristela), en la cual puestos los ojos, dijo:

-No es posible que no seas tú, señora, la verdadera Auristela, y no imagen suya, porque no tendría ningún espíritu licencia ni ánimo para ocultarse debajo de apariencia tan hermosa. Auristela eres, sin duda, y yo, también sin ella, soy aquel Arnaldo que siempre ha deseado servirte; en tu busca vengo, porque si no es parando en ti, que eres mi centro, no tendrá sosiego el alma mía.

En el tiempo que esto pasaba, ya habían dicho a Croriano y a los demás el hallazgo del otro peregrino, y que daba también señales de estar mal herido. Oyendo lo cual Constanza, habiendo tomado ya la sangre al duque, acudió a ver lo que había menester el segundo herido, y, cuando conoció ser Arnaldo, quedó atónita y confusa, y, supliendo su discreción su sobresalto, sin entrar en otras razones, le dijo le descubriese sus heridas, a lo que Arnaldo respondió con señalarle con la mano derecha el brazo izquierdo, señal de que allí tenía la herida. Desnudóle luego Constanza, y hallósele por la parte superior atravesado de parte a parte; tomóle luego la sangre, que aún corría, y dijo a Periandro cómo el otro herido que allí estaba era el duque de Nemurs; y que convenía llevarlos al pueblo más cercano, donde fuesen curados, porque el mayor peligro que tenían era la falta de la sangre.

Al oír Arnaldo el nombre del duque, se estremeció todo, y dio lugar a que los fríos celos se entrasen hasta el alma por las calientes venas, casi vacías de sangre; y así, dijo, sin mirar lo que decía:

-Alguna diferencia hay de un duque a un rey; pero en el estado del uno ni del otro, ni aun en el de todos los monarcas del mundo, cabe el merecer a Auristela.

Y añadió y dijo:

-No me lleven adonde llevaren al duque, que la presencia de los agraviadores no ayuda nada a las enfermedades de los agraviados.

Dos criados traía consigo Arnaldo, y otros dos el duque, los cuales, por orden de sus señores, los habían dejado allí solos, y ellos se habían adelantado a un lugar allí cercano, para tenerles aderezado alojamiento cada uno de por sí, porque aún no se conocían.

-Miren también -dijo Arnaldo-si en un árbol de estos que están aquí a la redonda, está pendiente un retrato de Auristela, sobre quien ha sido la batalla que entre mí y el duque hemos pasado. Quítese, déseme, porque me cuesta mucha sangre y de derecho es mío.

Casi esto mismo estaba diciendo el duque a Ruperta y a Croriano y a los demás que con él estaban; pero a todos satisfizo Periandro, diciendo que él le tenía en su poder como en depósito, y que le volvería en mejor coyuntura a cuyo fuese.

-¿Es posible -dijo Arnaldo-que se puede poner en duda la verdad de que el retrato sea mío? ¿No sabe ya el cielo que desde el punto que vi el original le trasladé en mi alma? Pero téngale mi hermano Periandro, que en su poder no tendrán entrada los celos, las iras y las soberbias de sus pretendientes; y llévenme de aquí, que me desmayo.

Luego acomodaron en que pudiesen ir los dos heridos, cuya vertida sangre, más que la profundidad de las heridas, les iba poco a poco quitando la vida; y así, los llevaron al lugar donde sus criados les tenían el mejor alojamiento que pudieron, y hasta entonces no había conocido el duque ser el príncipe Arnaldo su contrario.

Capítulo tercero del cuarto libro

INVIDIOSAS y corridas estaban las tres damas francesas de ver que en la opinión del duque estaba estimado el retrato de Auristela mucho más que ninguno de los suyos, que el criado que envió a retratarlas, como se ha dicho, les dijo que consigo los traía, entre otras joyas de mucha estima, pero que en el de Auristela idolatraba: razones y desengaño que las lastimó las almas; que nunca las hermosas reciben gusto, sino mortal pesadumbre, de que otras hermosuras iguallen a las suyas, ni aun que se les compare; porque la verdad, que comúnmente se dice, de que toda comparación es odiosa, en la de la belleza viene a ser odiosísima, sin que amistades, parentescos, calidades y grandezas se opongan al rigor desta maldita envidia, que así puede llamarse la que encendía las comparadas hermosuras.

Dijo ansimismo que, viniendo el duque, su señor, desde París, buscando a la peregrina Auristela, enamorado de su retrato, aquella mañana se había sentado al pie de un árbol con el retrato en las manos; así hablaba con el muerto como con el original vivo, y que, estando así, había llegado el otro peregrino tan paso por las espaldas, que pudo bien oír lo que el duque con el retrato hablaba, «sin que yo y otro compañero mío lo pudiésemos estorbar, porque estábamos algo desviados. En fin, corrimos a advertir al duque que le escuchaban; volvió el duque la cabeza y vio al peregrino, el cual, sin hablar palabra, lo primero que hizo fue arremeter al retrato y quitársele de las manos al duque, que, como le cogió de sobresalto, no tuvo lugar de defenderle como él quisiera; y lo que le dijo fue, a lo menos lo que yo pude entender: "Salteador de celestiales prendas, no profanes con tus sacrílegas manos la que en ellas tienes. Deja esa tabla donde está pintada la hermosura del cielo, así porque no la mereces como por ser ella mía". "Eso no -respondió el otro peregrino-, y si desta verdad no puedo darte testigos, remitiré su falta a los filos de mi estoque, que en este bordón traigo oculto. Yo sí que soy el verdadero poseedor desta incomparable belleza, pues en tierras bien remotas de la que ahora estamos la compré con mis tesoros y la adoré con mi alma, y he servido a su original con mi solicitud y con mis trabajos".

también son sus criados. Con todo esto, hurté algún tanto la obediencia a su mandamiento, y la curiosidad me hizo volver los ojos, y vi que el otro peregrino colgaba el retrato de un árbol, no porque puntualmente lo viese, sino porque lo conjeturé, viendo que luego, desenvainando del bordón que tenía un estoque, o a lo menos una arma que lo parecía, acometió a mi señor, el cual le salió a recibir con otro estoque, que yo sé que en el bordón traía.

Esto dijo el criado, y esto escucharon las damas, y esto sintieron de manera como si fueran amantes verdaderas del duque; y, al mismo instante, se deshizo en la imaginación de cada una la quimera y máquina, si alguna había hecho o levantado, de casarse con el duque; que ninguna cosa quita o borra el amor más presto de la memoria que el desdén en los principios de su nacimiento; que el desdén en los principios del amor tiene la misma fuerza que tiene la hambre en la vida humana: a la hambre y al sueño se rinde la valentía, y al desdén los más gustosos deseos. Verdad es que esto suele ser en los principios, que, después que el amor ha tomado larga y entera posesión del alma, los desdenes y desengaños le sirven de espuelas, para que con más ligereza corra a poner en efeto sus pensamientos.

Curáronse los heridos, y dentro de ocho días estuvieron para ponerse en camino y llegar a Roma, de donde habían venido cirujanos a verlos.

En este tiempo, supo el duque cómo su contrario era príncipe heredero del reino de Dinamarca, y supo ansimismo la intención que tenía de escogerla por esposa. Esta verdad calificó en él sus pensamientos, que eran los mismos que los de Arnaldo. Parecióle que la que era estimada para reina, lo podía ser para duquesa; pero entre estos pensamientos, entre estos discursos y imaginaciones, se mezclaban los celos, de manera que le amargaban el gusto y le turbaban el sosiego. En fin, se llegó el día de su partida, y el duque y Arnaldo, cada uno por su parte, entró en Roma, sin darse a conocer a nadie; y los demás peregrinos de nuestra compañía, llegando a la vista della, desde un alto montecillo la descubrieron, y, hincados de rodillas, como a cosa sacra, la adoraron, cuando de entre ellos salió una voz de un peregrino, que no conocieron, que, con lágrimas en los ojos, comenzó a decir desta manera:

-¡Oh grande, oh poderosa, oh sacrosanta, alma ciudad de Roma! A ti me inclino, devoto, humilde y nuevo peregrino,

a quien admira ver belleza tanta.

Tu vista, que a tu fama se adelanta, 5 al ingenio suspende, aunque divino, de aquél que a verte y adorarte vino con tierno afecto y con desnuda planta.

La tierra de tu suelo, que contemplo con la sangre de mártires mezclada, 10 es la reliquia universal del suelo.

No hay parte en ti que no sirva de ejemplo de santidad, así como trazada de la ciudad de Dios al gran modelo.

Cuando acabó de decir este soneto, el peregrino se volvió a los circunstantes, diciendo:

-Habrá pocos años que llegó a esta santa ciudad un poeta español, enemigo mortal de sí mismo y deshonor de su nación, el cual hizo y compuso un soneto en vituperio desta insigne ciudad y de sus ilustres habitantes. Pero la culpa de su lengua pagara su garganta, si le cogieran. Yo, no como poeta, sino como cristiano, casi como en descuento de su cargo, he compuesto el que habéis oído.

Rogóle Periandro que le repitiese, hízolo así, alabáronsele mucho, bajaron del recuesto, pasaron por los prados de Madama, entraron en Roma por la puerta del Pópulo, besando primero una y muchas veces los umbrales y márgenes de la entrada de la ciudad santa, antes de la cual llegaron dos judíos a uno de los criados de Croriano, y le preguntaron si toda aquella escuadra de gente tenía estancia conocida y preparada donde alojarse; si no, que ellos se la darían tal, que pudiesen en ella alojarse príncipes.

-Porque habéis de saber, señor -dijeron-, que nosotros somos judíos: yo me llamo Zabulón, y mi compañero Abiud; tenemos por oficio adornar casas de todo lo necesario, según y como es la calidad del que quiere habitarlas, y allí llega su adorno donde llega el precio que se quiere pagar por ellas.

A lo que el criado respondió:

-Otro compañero mío desde ayer está en Roma con intención que tenga preparado el alojamiento, conforme a la calidad de mi amo y de todos aquellos que aquí vienen.

-Que me maten -dijo Abiud-, si no es éste el francés que ayer se contentó con la casa de nuestro compañero Manasés, que la tiene aderezada como casa real.

-Vamos, pues, adelante -dijo el criado de Croriano-, que mi compañero debe de estar por aquí esperando a ser nuestra guía, y, cuando la casa que tuviere no fuere tal, nos encomendaremos a la que nos diere el señor Zabulón.

Con esto pasaron adelante, y a la entrada de la ciudad vieron los judíos a Manasés, su compañero, y con él al criado de Croriano, por donde vinieron en conocimiento que la posada que los judíos habían pintado era la rica de Manasés; y así, alegres y contentos, guiaron a nuestros peregrinos, que estaba junto al arco de Portugal.

Apenas entraron las francesas damas en la ciudad, cuando se llevaron tras sí los ojos de casi todo el pueblo, que, por ser día de estación, estaba llena aquella calle de Nuestra Señora del Pópulo de infinita gente; pero la admiración que comenzó a entrar poco a poco en los que a las damas francesas miraban, se acabó de entrar mucho a mucho en los corazones de los que vieron a la sin par Auristela y a la gallarda Constanza, que a su lado iba, bien así como van por iguales paralelos dos lucientes estrellas por el cielo.

Tales iban que dijo un romano que, a lo que se cree, debía de ser poeta:

-Yo apostaré que la diosa Venus, como en los tiempos pasados, vuelve a esta ciudad a ver las reliquias de su querido Eneas. Por Dios, que hace mal el señor gobernador de no mandar que se cubra el rostro desta movable imagen. ¿Quiere, por ventura, que los discretos se admiren, que los tiernos se deshagan y que los necios idolatren?

Con estas alabanzas, tan hipérboles como no necesarias, pasa adelante el gallardo escuadrón; llegó al alojamiento de Manasés, bastante para alojar a un poderoso príncipe y a un mediano ejército.

Capítulo cuarto del cuarto libro

ESTENDIÓSE aquel mismo día la llegada de las damas francesas por toda la ciudad, con el gallardo escuadrón de los peregrinos; especialmente se divulgó la desigual hermosura de Auristela, encareciéndola, si no como ella era, a lo menos cuanto podían las lenguas de los más discretos ingenios. Al momento se coronó la casa de los nuestros de mucha gente, que los llevaba la curiosidad y el deseo de ver tanta belleza junta, según se había publicado. Llegó esto a tanto extremo, que desde la calle pedían a voces se asomasen a las ventanas las damas y las peregrinas, que, reposando, no querían dejar verse; especialmente clamaban por Auristela, pero no fue posible que se dejase ver ninguna dellas.

Entre la demás gente que llegó a la puerta, llegaron Arnaldo y el duque, con sus hábitos de peregrinos, y, apenas se hubo visto el uno al otro, cuando a entrambos les temblaron las piernas y les palpitaron los pechos. Conociólos Periandro desde la ventana, díjoselo a Croriano, y los dos juntos bajaron a la calle, para estorbar en cuanto pudiesen la desgracia que podían temer de dos tan celosos amantes.

Periandro se pasó con Arnaldo, y Croriano con el duque, y lo que Arnaldo dijo a Periandro fue:

-Uno de los cargos mayores que Auristela me tiene es el sufrimiento que tengo, consintiendo que este caballero francés, que dicen ser el duque de Nemurs, esté como en posesión del retrato de Auristela, que, puesto que está en tu poder, parece que es con voluntad suya, pues yo no le tengo en el mío. Mira, amigo Periandro, esta enfermedad que los amantes llaman celos, que la llaman mejor desesperación rabiosa, entran a la parte con ella la invidia y el menosprecio, y, cuando una vez se apodera del alma enamorada, no hay consideración que la sosiegue, ni remedio que la valga; y, aunque son pequeñas las causas que la engendran, los efectos que hace son tan grandes que por lo menos quitan el seso, y por lo más menos la vida; que mejor es al amante celoso el morir desesperado, que vivir con celos; y el que fuere amante verdadero no ha de tener atrevimiento para pedir celos a la cosa amada; y, puesto que llegue a tanta perfección que no los pida, no puede dejarlos de pedir a sí mismo; digo, a su misma ventura, de la cual es imposible vivir seguro, porque las cosas de mucho precio y valor tienen en continuo temor al que las posee, o al que las ama, de perderlas, y esta es una pasión que no se aparta del alma enamorada, como accidente inseparable. Aconséjote, ¡oh amigo Periandro!, si es que puede dar consejo quien no le tiene para sí, que consideres que soy rey y que quiero bien, y que por mil experiencias estás satisfecho y enterado de que cumpliré con las obras cuanto con palabras he prometido, de recibir a la sin para Auristela, tu hermana, sin otra dote que la grande que ella tiene en su virtud y hermosura, y que no quiero averiguar la nobleza de su linaje, pues está claro que no había de negar naturaleza los bienes de la fortuna a quien tantos dio de sí misma. Nunca en humildes sujetos, o pocas veces, hace su asiento virtudes grandes, y la belleza del cuerpo muchas veces es indicio de la belleza del alma; y, para reducirme a un término, sólo te digo lo que otras veces te he dicho: que adoro Auristela, ora sea de linaje del cielo, ora de los ínfimos de la tierra; y, pues ya está en Roma, adonde ella ha librado mis esperanzas, sé tú, ¡oh hermano mío!, parte para que me las cumpla, que desde aquí parto mi corona y mi reino contigo, y no permitas que yo muera escarnido deste duque ni menospreciado de la que adoro.

A todas estas razones, ofrecimientos y promesas respondió Periandro diciendo:

-Si mi hermana tuviera culpa en las causas que este duque ha dado a tu enojo, si no la castigara, a lo menos la riñera: que para ella fuera un gran castigo; pero, como sé que no la tiene, no tengo qué responderte. En esto de haber librado tus esperanzas en su venida a esta ciudad, como no sé a dó llegan las que te ha dado, no sé qué responderte. De los ofrecimientos que me haces y me has hecho, estoy tan agradecido como me obliga el ser tú el que los haces, y yo a quien se hacen; porque, con humildad sea dicho, ¡oh valeroso Arnaldo!, quizá esta pobre muceta de peregrino sirve de nube, que, por pequeña que sea, suele quitar los rayos al sol. Y por ahora sosiégate, que ayer llegamos a Roma, y no es posible que en tan breve espacio se hayan fabricado discursos, dado trazas y levantado quimeras que reduzgan nuestras acciones a los felices fines que deseamos. Huye, en cuanto te fuere posible, de encontrarte con el duque, porque un amante desdeñado y flaco de esperanzas suele tomar ocasión del despecho para fabricarlas, aunque sea en daño de lo que bien quiere.

Arnaldo le prometió que así lo haría, y le ofreció prendas y dineros para sustentar la autoridad y el gasto, así el suyo como el de las damas francesas.

Diferente fue la plática que tuvo Croriano con el duque, pues toda se resolvió en que había de cobrar el retrato de Auristela, o había de confesar Arnaldo no tener parte en él; pidió también a Croriano fuese intercesor con Auristela le recibiese por esposo, pues su estado no era inferior al de Arnaldo, ni en la sangre le hacía ventaja ninguna de las más ilustres de Europa; en fin, él se mostró algo arrogante y algo celoso, como quien tan enamorado estaba. Croriano se lo ofreció ansimismo, y quedó darle la respuesta que dijese Auristela, al proponerle la ventura que se le ofrecía de recibirle por esposo.

Capítulo quinto del cuarto libro

DESTA manera los dos contrarios celosos y amantes, cuyas esperanzas tenían fundadas en el aire, se despidieron, el uno de Periandro y el otro de Croriano, quedando, ante todas cosas, de reprimir sus ímpetus y disimular sus agravios, a lo menos hasta tanto que Auristela se declarase, de la cual cada uno esperaba que había de ser en su favor, pues al ofrecimiento de un reino y al de un estado tan rico como el del duque, bien se podía pensar que había de titubear cualquier firmeza, y mudarse el propósito de escoger otra vida, por ser muy natural el amarse las grandezas y apetecerse la mejoría de los estados; especialmente suele ser este deseo más vivo en las mujeres.

De todo esto estaba bien descuidada Auristela, pues todos sus pensamientos, por entonces, no se extendían a más que de enterarse en las verdades que a la salvación de su alma convenían; que, por haber nacido en partes tan remotas y en tierras adonde la verdadera fe católica no está en el punto tan perfecto como se requiere, tenía necesidad de acrisolarla en su verdadera oficina.

Al apartarse Periandro de Arnaldo, llegó a él un hombre español y le dijo:

-Según traigo las señas, si es que vuesa merced es español, para vuesa merced viene esta carta.

Púsole una en las manos cerrada, cuyo sobreescrito decía: AL ILUSTRE SEÑOR ANTONIO DE VILLASEÑOR, POR OTRO NOMBRE LLAMADO EL BÁRBARO.

Preguntóle Periandro que quién le había dado aquella carta. Respondióle el portador que un español que estaba preso en la cárcel, que llaman Torre de Nona, y por lo menos condenado a ahorcar por homicida, él y otra su amiga, mujer hermosa llamada la Talaverana.

Conoció Periandro los nombres y casi adivinó sus culpas, y respondió:

-Esta carta no es para mí, sino para este peregrino que hacia acá viene.

Y fue porque en aquel instante llegó Antonio, a quien Periandro dio la carta, y, apartándose los dos a una parte, la abrió y vio que así decía:

Quien en mal anda, en mal para; de dos pies, aunque el uno esté sano, si el otro está cojo, tal vez cojea; que las malas compañías no pueden enseñar buenas costumbres. La que yo trabé con la Talaverana, que no debiera, me tiene a mí y a ella sentenciados de remate para la horca. El hombre que la sacó de España la halló aquí, en Roma, en mi compañía; recibió pesadumbre dello, asentóle la mano en mi presencia, y yo, que no soy amigo de burlas, ni de recibir agravios, sino de quitarlos, volví por la moza, y a puros palos maté a su agraviador. Estando en la fuga de esta pendencia, llegó otro peregrino, que por el mismo estilo comenzó a tomarme la medida de las espaldas; dice la moza que conoció que el que me apaleaba era un su marido, de nación polaco, con quien se había casado en Talavera; y, temiéndose que, en acabando conmigo, había de comenzar por ella, porque le tenía agraviado, no hizo más de echar mano a un cuchillo, de dos que traía consigo siempre en la vaina, y, llegándose a él bonitamente, se le clavó por los riñones, haciéndole tales heridas que no tuvieran necesidad de maestro. En efeto, el amigo a palos y el marido a puñaladas, en un instante concluyeron la carrera mortal de su vida.

Prendiéronnos al mismo punto y trajéronnos a esta cárcel, donde quedamos muy contra nuestra voluntad; tomáronnos la confesión; confesamos nuestro delito, porque no le podíamos negar, y con esto ahorramos el tormento, que aquí llaman tortura. Sustancióse el proceso, dándose más prisa a ello de la que quisiéramos; ya está concluso, y nosotros sentenciados a destierro sino que es desta vida para la otra. Digo, señor, que estamos sentenciados a ahorcar, de lo que está tan pesarosa la Talaverana que no lo puede llevar en paciencia, la cual besa a vuesa merced las manos y a mi señora Constanza y del señor Periandro, y a mi señora Auristela, y dice que ella se holgara de estar libre para ir a besárselas a vuestas mercedes a sus casas. Dice también que si la sin par Auristela pone haldas en cinta y quiere tomar a su cargo nuestra libertad, que le será fácil; porque ¿qué pedirá su grande hermosura que no lo alcance, aunque la pida a la dureza misma? Y añade más, y es que si vuestas mercedes no pudieren alcanzar el perdón, a lo menos procuren alcanzar el lugar de la muerte, y que, como ha de ser en Roma, sea en España; porque está informada la moza, que aquí no llevan los ahorcados con la autoridad conveniente, porque van a pie y apenas los ve nadie; y así, apenas hay quien les rece una Avemaría, especialmente si son españoles los que ahorcan; y ella querría, si fuese posible, morir en su tierra y entre los suyos, donde no faltaría algún pariente que de compasión le cerrase los ojos. Yo también digo lo mismo, porque soy amigo de acomodarme a la razón, porque estoy tan mohíno en esta cárcel que, a trueco de escusar la pesadumbre que me dan las chinches en ella, tomaría por buen partido que me sacasen a ahorcar mañana.

Y advierto a vuesa merced, señor mío, que los jueces desta tierra no desdicen nada de los de España: todos son corteses y amigos de dar y recibir cosas justas, y que, cuando no hay parte que solicite la justicia, no dejan de llegarse a la misericordia, la cual, si reina en todos los valerosos pechos de vuestas mercedes, que sí debe de reinar, sujeto hay en nosotros en que se muestre, pues estamos en tierra ajena, presos en la cárcel, comidos de chinches y de otros animales inmundos, que son muchos por pequeños y enfadan como si fuesen grandes; y, sobre todo, nos tienen ya en cueros y en la quinta esencia de la necesidad solicitadores, procuradores y escribanos, de quien Dios Nuestro Señor nos libre por su infinita bondad. Amén.

Aguardando la respuesta quedamos, con tanto deseo de recibirla buena como le tienen los cigoñinos en la torre, esperando el sustento de sus madres.

Y firmaba: EL DESDICHADO BARTOLOMÉ MANCHEGO.

En extremo dio la carta gusto a los dos que la habían leído, y en extremo les fatigó su aflicción; y luego, diciéndole al que la había llevado dijese al preso que se consolase y tuviese esperanza de su remedio, porque Auristela y todos ellos, con todo aquello que dádivas y promesas pudiesen, le procurarían; y al punto fabricaron las diligencias que habían de hacerse.

La primera fue que Croriano hablase al embajador de Francia, que era su pariente y amigo, para que no se ejecutase la pena tan presto, y diese lugar el tiempo a que le tuviesen los ruegos y las solicitudes; determinó también Antonio de escribir otra carta, en respuesta de la suya, a Bartolomé, con que de nuevo se renovase el gusto que les había dado la suya; pero, comunicando este pensamiento con Auristela y con su hermana Constanza, fueron las dos de parecer que no se la escribiese, porque a los afligidos no se ha de añadir aflicción, y podría ser que tomasen las burlas por veras y se afligiesen con ellas.

Lo que hicieron, dejar todo el cargo de aquella negociación sobre los hombros y diligencia de Croriano, y en las de Ruperta, su esposa, que se lo rogó ahincadamente, y en seis días ya estaban en la calle Bartolomé y la Talaverana: que, adonde interviene el favor y las dádivas, se allanan los riscos y se deshacen las dificultades.

En este tiempo, le tuvo Auristela de informarse de todo aquello que a ella le parecía que le faltaba por saber de la fe católica; a lo menos, de aquello que en su patria escuramente se platicaba. Halló con quien comunicar su deseo por medio de los penitenciaros, con quien hizo su confesión entera, verdadera y llana, y quedó enseñada y satisfecha de todo lo que quiso, porque los tales penitenciaros, en la mejor forma que pudieron, le declararon todos los principales y más convenientes misterios de nuestra fe.

Comenzaron desde la invidia y soberbia de Lucifer, y de su caída con la tercera parte de las estrellas, que cayeron con él en los abismos; caída que dejó vacas y vacías las sillas del cielo, que las perdieron los ángeles malos por su necia culpa. Declaráronle el medio que Dios tuvo para llenar estos asientos, criando al hombre, cuya alma es capaz de la gloria que los ángeles malos perdieron. Discurrieron por la verdad de la creación del hombre y del mundo, y por el misterio sagrado y amoroso de la Encarnación, y, con razones sobre la razón misma, bosquejaron el profundísimo misterio de la Santísima Trinidad. Contaron cómo convino que la segunda persona de las tres, que es la del Hijo, se hiciese hombre, para que, como hombre, Dios pagase por el hombre, y Dios pudiese pagar como Dios, cuya unión hipostática sólo podía ser bastante para dejar a Dios satisfecho de la culpa infinita cometida, que Dios infinitamente se había de satisfacer, y el hombre, finito por sí, no podía, y Dios, en sí solo, era incapaz de padecer; pero, juntos los dos, llegó el caudal a ser infinito, y así lo fue la paga.

Mostráronle la muerte de Cristo, los trabajos de su vida desde que se mostró en el pesebre hasta que se puso en la cruz. Exageráronle la fuerza y eficacia de los sacramentos, y señalaron con el dedo la segunda tabla de nuestro naufragio, que es la penitencia, sin la cual no hay abrir la senda del cielo, que suele cerrar el pecado. Mostráronle asimismo a Jesucristo, Dios vivo, sentado a la diestra del Padre, estando tan vivo y entero como en el cielo, sacramentado en la tierra, cuya santísima presencia no la puede dividir ni apartar ausencia alguna, porque uno de los mayores atributos de Dios, que todos son iguales, es el estar en todo lugar, por potencia, por esencia y por presencia. Aseguráronle infaliblemente la venida deste Señor a juzgar el mundo sobre las nubes del cielo, y asimismo la estabilidad y firmeza de su Iglesia, contra quien pueden poco las puertas, o por mejor decir, las fuerzas del infierno. Trataron del poder del Sumo Pontífice, visorrey de Dios en la tierra y llavero del cielo. Finalmente, no les quedó por decir cosa que vieron que convenía para darse a entender, y para que Auristela y Periandro los entendiesen.

Estas liciones así alegraron sus almas, que las sacó de sí mismas, y se las llevó a que paseasen los cielos, porque sólo en ellos pusieron sus pensamientos.

Capítulo sexto del cuarto libro

CON OTROS ojos se miraron de allí adelante Auristela y Periandro, a lo menos con otros ojos miraba Periandro a Auristela, pareciéndole que ya ella había cumplido el voto que la trajo a Roma, y que podía, libre y desembarazadamente, recibirle por esposo.

Pero si medio gentil, amaba Auristela la honestidad, después de catequizada, la adoraba, no porque viese iba contra ella en casarse, sino por no dar indicios de pensamientos blandos, sin que precediesen antes o fuerzas, o ruegos. También estaba mirando si por alguna parte le descubría el cielo alguna luz que le mostrase lo que había de hacer después de casada, porque pensar volver a su tierra lo tenía por temeridad y por disparate, a causa que el hermano de Periandro, que la tenía destinada para ser su esposa, quizá viendo burladas sus esperanzas, tomaría en ella y en su hermano Periandro venganza de su agravio. Estos pensamientos y temores la traían algo flaca y algo pensativa.

Las damas francesas visitaron los templos y anduvieron las estaciones con pompa y majestad, porque Croriano, como se ha dicho, era pariente del embajador de Francia, y no les faltó cosa que para mostrar ilustre decoro fuese necesaria, llevando siempre consigo Auristela y a Constanza, y ninguna vez salían de casa que no las seguía casi la mitad del pueblo de Roma. Y sucedió que, pasando un día por una calle que se llama Bancos, vieron en una pared della un retrato entero, de pies a cabeza, de una mujer que tenía una corona en la cabeza, aunque partida por medio la corona, y a los pies un mundo, sobre el cual estaba puesta, y, apenas la hubieron visto, cuando conocieron ser el rostro de Auristela, tan al vivo dibujado que no les puso en duda de conocerla.

Preguntó Auristela, admirada, cuyo era aquel retrato, y si se vendía acaso. Respondióle el dueño (que, según después se supo, era un famoso pintor) que él vendía aquel retrato, pero no sabía de quién fuese; sólo sabía que otro pintor, su amigo, se le había hecho copiar en Francia, el cual le había dicho ser de una doncella extranjera que en hábitos de peregrina pasaba a Roma.

-¿Qué significa -respondió Auristela-haberla pintado con corona en la cabeza, y los pies sobre aquella esfera, y más, estando la corona partida?

-Eso, señora -dijo el dueño-, son fantasías de pintores, o caprichos, como los llaman; quizá quieren decir que esta doncella merece llevar la corona de hermosura, que ella va hollando en aquel mundo; pero yo quiero decir que dice que vos, señora, sois su original, y que merecéis corona entera, y no mundo pintado, sino real y verdadero.

-¿Qué pedís por el retrato? -preguntó Constanza.

A lo que respondió el dueño:

-Dos peregrinos están aquí, que el uno dellos me ha ofrecido mil escudos de oro, y el otro dice que no le dejará por ningún dinero. Yo no he concluido la venta, por parecerme que se están burlando, porque la esorbitancia del ofrecimiento me hace estar en duda.

-Pues no lo estéis -replicó Constanza-, que esos dos peregrinos, si son los que yo imagino, bien pueden doblar el precio y pagaros a toda vuestra satisfacción.

Las damas francesas, Ruperta, Croriano y Periandro quedaron atónitos de ver la verdadera imagen del rostro de Auristela en el del retrato. Cayó la gente que el retrato miraba en que parecía al de Auristela, y poco a poco comenzó a salir una voz, que todos y cada uno de por sí afirmaba:

-Este retrato que se vende es el mismo de esta peregrina que va en este coche; ¿para qué queremos ver al traslado, sino al original?

Y así, comenzaron a rodear el coche, que los caballos no podían ir adelante ni volver atrás, por lo cual dijo Periandro:

-Auristela, hermana, cúbrase el rostro con algún velo, porque tanta luz ciega, y no nos deja ver por dónde caminamos.

Hízolo así Auristela, y pasaron adelante; pero no por esto dejó de seguirlos mucha gente, que esperaban a que se quitase el velo, para verla como deseaban. Apenas se hubo quitado de allí el coche, cuando se llegó al dueño del retrato Arnaldo en sus hábitos de peregrino y dijo:

-Yo soy el que os ofrecí los mil escudos por este retrato. Si le queréis dar, traedle, y venidos conmigo, que yo os los daré luego de oro en oro.

A lo que otro peregrino, que era el duque de Nemurs, dijo:

-No reparéis, hermano, en precio, sino veníos conmigo y proponed en vuestra imaginación el que quisiéredes, que yo os le daré luego de contado.

-Señores -respondió el pintor-, concertaos los dos en cuál le ha de llevar, que yo no me desconcertaré en el precio, puesto que pienso que antes me habéis de pagar con el deseo que con la obra.

A estas pláticas estaba atenta mucha gente, esperando en qué había de parar aquella compra: porque ver ofrecer millaradas de ducados, a dos, al parecer, pobres peregrinos, parecíales cosa de burla.

En esto, dijo el dueño:

-El que le quisiere, déme señal, y guíe, que yo ya le descuelgo para llevárselo.

Oyendo lo cual, Arnaldo puso la mano en el seno, y sacó una cadena de oro, con una joya de diamantes que de ella pendía, y dijo:

-Tomad esta cadena, que, con esta joya, vale más de dos mil escudos, y traedme el retrato.

-Esta vale diez mil -dijo el duque, dándole una de diamantes al dueño del retrato-, y traédmele a mi casa.

-¡Santo Dios! -dijo uno de los circunstantes-, ¿qué retrato puede ser éste, qué hombres éstos y qué joyas éstas? Cosa de encantamento parece aquesta; por eso os aviso, hermano pintor, que deis un toque a la cadena y hagáis experiencia de la fineza de las piedras, antes que deis vuestra hacienda: que podría ser que la cadena y las joyas fuesen falsas, porque el encarecimiento que de su valor han hecho, bien se puede sospechar.

Enojáronse los príncipes; pero, por no echar más en la calle sus pensamientos, consintieron en que el dueño del retrato se enterase en la verdad del valor de las joyas.

Andaba revuelta toda la gente de Bancos: unos admirando el retrato, otros preguntando quién fuesen los peregrinos, otros mirando las joyas, y todos atentos, esperando en quién había de quedar con el retrato, porque les parecía que estaban de parecer los dos peregrinos de no dejarle por ningún precio; diérale el dueño por mucho menos de lo que le ofrecían, si se le dejaran vender libremente. Pasó en esto por Bancos el gobernador de Roma, oyó el murmurio de la gente, preguntó la causa, vio el retrato, y vio las joyas; y, pareciéndole ser prendas de más que de ordinarios peregrinos, esperando descubrir algún secreto, las hizo depositar y llevar el retrato a su casa, y prender a los peregrinos. Quedóse el pintor confuso, viendo menoscabadas sus esperanzas, y su hacienda en poder de la justicia, donde jamás entró alguna, que si saliese, fuese con aquel lustre con que había entrado. Acudió el pintor a buscar a Periandro, y a contarle todo el suceso de la venta y del temor que tenía no se quedase el gobernador con el retrato, el cual, de un pintor que le había retratado en Portugal de su original, le había él comprado en Francia, cosa que le pareció a Periandro posible, por haber sacado otros muchos en el tiempo que Auristela estuvo en Lisboa. Con todo eso, le ofreció por él cien escudos, con que quedase a su riesgo el cobrar. Contentóse el pintor, y, aunque fue tan grande la baja de ciento a mil, le tuvo por bien vendido y mejor pagado.

Aquella tarde, juntándose con otros españoles peregrinos, fue a andar las siete iglesias, entre los cuales peregrinos acertó a encontrarse con el poeta que dijo el soneto al descubrirse Roma; conociéronse, y abrazáronse, y preguntáronse de sus vidas y sucesos. El poeta peregrino le dijo que el día antes le había sucedido una cosa digna de contarse por admirable; y fue que, habiendo tenido noticia de que un monseñor clérigo de la cámara, curioso y rico, tenía un museo el más extraordinario que había en el mundo, porque no tenía figuras de personas que efectivamente hubiesen sido ni entonces lo fuesen, sino unas tablas preparadas para pintarse en ellas los personajes ilustres que estaban por venir, especialmente los que habían de ser en los venideros siglos poetas famosos, entre las cuales tablas había visto dos, que en el principio de ellas estaba escrito en la una TORCUATO TASSO, y más abajo un poco decía Jerusalén libertada; en la otra estaba escrito ZÁRATE, y más abajo Cruz y Constantino.

Preguntéle al que me las enseñaba qué significaban aquellos nombres. Respondióme que se esperaba que presto se había de descubrir en la tierra la luz de un poeta que se había de llamar Torcuato Tasso, el cual había de cantar Jerusalén recuperada, con el más heroico y agradable plectro que hasta entonces ningún poeta hubiese cantado, y que casi luego le había de suceder un español, llamado Francisco López Duarte, cuya voz había de llenar las cuatro partes de la tierra, y cuya armonía había de suspender los corazones de las gentes, contando la invención de la Cruz de Cristo, con las guerras del emperador Constantino: poema verdaderamente heroico y religioso, y digno del nombre de poema.

A lo que replicó Periandro:

-Duro se me hace de creer que de tan atrás se tome el cargo de aderezar las tablas donde se hayan de pintar los que están por venir, que en efeto en esta ciudad, cabeza del mundo, están otras maravillas de mayor admiración. Y ¿habrá otras tablas aderezadas para más poetas venideros? -preguntó Periandro.

-Sí -respondió el peregrino-, pero no quise detenerme a leer los títulos, contentándome con los dos primeros; pero así a bulto miré tantos, que me doy a entender que la edad, cuando éstos vengan, que, según me dijo el que me guiaba, no puede tardar, ha de ser grandísima la cosecha de todo género de poetas. Encamínelo Dios como él fuere más servido.

-Por lo menos -respondió Periandro-, el año que es abundante de poesía suele serlo de hambre; porque dámele poeta, y dártele he pobre, si ya la naturaleza no se adelanta a hacer milagros; y síguese la consecuencia: hay muchos poetas, luego hay muchos pobres; hay muchos pobres, luego caro es el año.

En esto iban hablando el peregrino y Periandro, cuando llegó a ellos Zabulón el judío, y dijo a Periandro que aquella tarde le quería llevar a ver a Hipólita la Ferraresa, que era una de las más hermosas mujeres de Roma, y aun de toda Italia. Respondióle Periandro que iría de muy buena gana, lo cual no le respondiera si, como le informó de la hermosura, le informara de la calidad de su persona; porque la alteza de la honestidad de Periandro no se abalanzaba ni abatía a cosas bajas, por hermosas que fuesen: que en esto la naturaleza había hecho iguales y formado en una misma turquesa a él y a Auristela, de la cual se recató para ir a ver a Hipólita, a quien el judío le llevó más por engaño que por voluntad; que tal vez la curiosidad hace tropezar y caer de ojos al más honesto recato.

Capítulo séptimo del cuarto libro

CON LA BUENA crianza, con los ricos ornamentos de la persona y con los aderezos y pompa de la casa se cubren muchas faltas; porque no es posible que la buena crianza ofenda, ni el rico ornato enfade, ni el aderezo de la casa no contente.

Todo esto tenía Hipólita, dama cortesana, que en riquezas podía competir con la antigua Flora, y en cortesía, con la misma buena crianza. No era posible que fuese estimada en poco de quien la conocía, porque con la hermosura encantaba, con la riqueza se hacía estimar y con la cortesía, si así se puede decir, se hacía adorar. Cuando el amor se viste de estas tres calidades, rompe los corazones de bronce, abre las bolsas de hierro y rinde las voluntades de mármol; y más si a estas tres cosas se les añade el engaño y la lisonja, atributos convenientes para las que quieren mostrar a la luz del mundo sus donaires. ¿Hay, por ventura, entendimiento tan agudo en el mundo que, estando mirando una de estas hermosas que pinto, dejando a una parte las de su belleza, se ponga a discurrir las de su humilde trato? La hermosura en parte ciega y en parte alumbraba: tras la que ciega corre el gusto, tras la que alumbraba el pensar en la enmienda.

Ninguna de estas cosas consideró Periandro al entrar en casa de Hipólita. Pero, como tal vez sobre descuidados cimientos suele levantar amor sus máquinas, ésta sin pensamiento alguno se fabricó, no sobre la voluntad de Periandro, sino en la de Hipólita; que, con estas damas que suelen llamar del vicio, no es menester trabajar mucho para dar con ellas donde se arrepientan sin arrepentirse.

Ya había visto Hipólita a Periandro en la calle, y ya le había hecho movimientos en el alma su bizarría, su gentileza, y, sobre todo, el pensar que era español, de cuya condición se prometía dádivas imposibles y concertados gustos; y estos pensamientos los había comunicado con Zabulón, y rogándole se lo trajese a casa, la cual tenía tan aderezada, tan limpia y tan compuesta, que más parecía que esperaba ser tálamo de bodas que acogimiento de peregrinos.

Tenía la señora Hipólita -que con este nombre la llamaban en Roma, como si lo fuera- un amigo llamado Pirro Calabrés, hombre acuchillador, impaciente, facinoroso, cuya hacienda libraba en los filos de su espada, en la agilidad de sus manos y en los engaños de Hipólita, que muchas veces con ellos alcanzaba lo que quería, sin rendirse a nadie; pero en lo que más Pirro aumentaba su vida, era en la diligencia de sus pies, que lo estimaba en más que las manos y de lo que él más se preciaba era de traer siempre asombrada a Hipólita en cualquiera condición que se le mostrase, ora fuese amorosa, ora fuese áspera; que nunca les falta a estas palomas duendas milanos que las persigan, ni pájaros que las despedacen: ¡miserable trato de esta mundana y simple gente!

Digo, pues, que este caballero, que no tenía de serlo más que el nombre, se halló en casa de Hipólita, al tiempo que entraron en ella el judío y Periandro. Apartóle aparte Hipólita y díjole:

-Vete con Dios, amigo, y llévate esta cadena de oro de camino, que este peregrino me envió con Zabulón esta mañana.

-Mira lo que haces, Hipólita -respondió Pirro-, que, a lo que se me trasluce, este peregrino es español, y soltar él de su mano, sin haber tocado la tuya, esta cadena, que debe de valer cien escudos, gran cosa me parece, y mil temores me sobresaltan.

-Llévate tú, ¡oh Pirro!, la cadena, y déjame a mí el cargo de sustentarla y de no volverla, a pesar de todas sus españolerías.

Tomó la cadena, que le dio Hipólita, Pirro, que para el efeto la había hecho comprar aquella mañana, y, sellándole la boca con ella, más que de paso le hizo salir de casa.

Luego Hipólita, libre y desembarazada de su corma, suelta de sus grillos, se llegó a Periandro, y, sin desenfado y con donaire, lo primero que hizo fue echarle los brazos al cuello, diciéndole:

-En verdad que tengo de ver si son tan valientes los españoles como tienen la fama.

Cuando Periandro vio aquella desenvoltura, creyó que toda la casa se le había caído a cuestras; y, poniéndole la mano delante el pecho a Hipólita, la detuvo y la apartó de sí, y le dijo:

-Estos hábitos que visto, señora Hipólita, no permiten ser profanados, o a lo menos yo no lo permitiré en ninguna manera; y los peregrinos, aunque sean españoles, no están obligados a ser valientes cuando no les importa; pero mirad vos, señora, en qué queréis que muestre mi valor, sin que a los dos perjudique, y seréis obedecida sin replicaros en nada.

-Paréceme -respondió Hipólita-, señor peregrino, que ansí lo sois en el alma como en el cuerpo; pero, pues, según decís que haréis lo que os dijere, como a ninguno de los dos perjudique, entraos conmigo en esta cuadra, que os quiero enseñar una lonja y un camarín mío.

A lo que respondió Periandro:

-Aunque soy español, soy algún tanto medroso, y más os temo a vos sola que a un ejército de enemigos. Haced que nos haga otro la guía y llevadme do quisiéredes.

Llamó Hipólita a dos doncellas suyas y a Zabulón el judío, que a todo se halló presente, y mandólas que guiasen a la lonja.

Abrieron la sala, y a lo que después Periandro dijo, estaba la más bien aderezada que pudiese tener algún príncipe rico y curioso en el mundo. Parrasio, Polignoto, Apeles, Ceuxis y Timantes tenían allí lo perfecto de sus pinceles, comprado con los tesoros de Hipólita, acompañados de los del devoto Rafael de Urbino y de los del divino Micael Angelo: riquezas donde las de un gran príncipe deben y pueden mostrarse. Los edificios reales, los alcázares soberbios, los templos magníficos y las pinturas valientes son propias y verdaderas señales de la magnanimidad y riqueza de los príncipes, prendas, en efeto, contra quien el tiempo apresura sus alas y apresta su carrera, como a émulas suyas, que a su despecho están mostrando la magnificencia de los pasados siglos.

¡Oh Hipólita, sólo buena por esto! Si entre tantos retratos que tienes, tuvieras uno de tu buen trato, y dejaras en el suyo a Periandro, que, asombrado, atónito y confuso andaba mirando en qué había de parar la abundancia que en la lonja veía en una limpísima mesa, que de cabo a cabo la tomaba la música que de diversos géneros de pájaros en riquísimas jaulas estaban, haciendo una confusa, pero agradable armonía.

En fin, a él le pareció que todo cuanto había oído decir de los Huertos Hespérides, de los de la maga Falerina, de los Pensiles famosos, ni de todos los otros que por fama fuesen conocidos en el mundo, no llegaban al adorno de aquella sala y de aquella lonja. Pero, como él andaba con el corazón sobresaltado, que bien haya su honestidad, que se le aprensaba entre dos tablas, no se le mostraban las cosas como ellas eran; antes, cansado de ver cosas de tanto deleite, y enfadado de ver que todas ellas se encaminaban contra su gusto, dando de mano a la cortesía, probó a salirse de la lonja, y se saliera si Hipólita no se lo estorbara, de manera que le fue forzoso mostrar con las manos ásperas palabras algo descorteses. Trabó de la esclavina de Periandro, y, abriéndole el jubón, le descubrió la cruz de diamantes que de tantos peligros hasta allí había escapado, y así deslumbró la vista a Hipólita como el entendimiento, la cual, viendo que se le iba, a despecho de su blanda fuerza, dio en un pensamiento, que si le supiera revalidar y apoyar algún tanto mejor, no le fuera bien dello a Periandro; el cual, dejando la esclavina en poder de la nueva egipcia, sin sombrero, sin bordón, sin ceñidor ni esclavina, se puso en la calle: que el vencimiento de tales batallas consiste más en el huir que en el esperar. Púsose ella asimismo a la ventana, y a grandes voces comenzó a apellidar la gente de la calle, diciendo:

-¡Ténganme a ese ladrón, que, entrando en mi casa como humano, me ha robado una prenda divina que vale una ciudad!

Acertaron a estar en la calle dos de la guarda del Pontífice, que dicen pueden prender en fragante, y, como la voz era de ladrón, facilitaron su dudosa potestad y prendieron a Periandro; echáronle mano al pecho, y, quitándole la cruz, le santiguaron con poca decencia: paga que da la justicia a los nuevos delincuentes, aunque no se les averigüe el delito.

Viéndose, pues, Periandro puesto en cruz, sin su cruz, dijo a los tudescos, en su misma lengua, que él no era ladrón, sino persona principal, y que aquella cruz era suya, y que viesen que su riqueza no la podía hacer de Hipólita, y que les rogaba le llevasen ante el gobernador, que él esperaba con brevedad averiguar la verdad de aquel caso. Ofrecióles dineros, y con esto y con habelles hablado en su lengua, con que se reconcilian los ánimos que no se conocen, los tudescos no hicieron caso de Hipólita; y así, llevaron a Periandro delante del gobernador, viendo lo cual Hipólita, se quitó de la ventana, y, casi arañándose el rostro, dijo a sus criadas:

-¡Ay, hermanas, y qué necia he andado! A quien pensaba regalar, he lastimado; a quien pensaba servir, he ofendido; preso va por ladrón el que lo ha sido de mi alma; ¡mirad qué caricias, mirad qué halagos son hacer prender al libre y disfamar al honrado!

Y luego les contó cómo llevaban preso al peregrino dos de la guarda del Papa. Mandó asimismo que la aderezasen luego el coche, que quería ir en su seguimiento y disculpalle, porque no podía sufrir su corazón verse herir en las mismas niñas de sus ojos, y que antes quería parecer testimoñera que cruel; que de la crueldad no tendría disculpa, y del testimonio sí, echando la culpa al amor, que por mil disparates descubre y manifiesta sus deseos, y hace mal a quien bien quiere.

Cuando ella llegó en casa del gobernador, le halló con la cruz en las manos, examinando a Periandro sobre el caso; el cual, como vio a Hipólita, dijo al gobernador:

-Esta señora que aquí viene ha dicho que esa cruz que vuesa merced tiene yo se la he robado, y yo diré que es verdad, cuando ella dijere de qué es la cruz, qué valor tiene y cuántos diamantes la componen; porque si no es que se lo dicen los ángeles o alguno otro espíritu que lo sepa, ella no lo puede saber, porque no la ha visto sino en mi pecho, y una vez sola.

-¿Qué dice la señora Hipólita a esto? -dijo el gobernador.

Y esto cubriendo la cruz, porque no tomase las señas della.

La cual respondió:

-Con decir que estoy enamorada, ciega y loca, quedará este peregrino disculpado y yo esperando la pena que el señor gobernador quisiere darme por mi amoroso delito.

Y le contó punto por punto lo que con Periandro le había pasado, de lo que se admiró el gobernador, antes del atrevimiento que del amor de Hipólita: que de semejantes sujetos son propios los lascivos disparates. Afeóle el caso, pidió a Periandro la perdonase, dióle por libre, y volvióle la cruz, sin que en aquella causa se escribiese letra alguna, que no fue ventura poca.

Quisiera saber el gobernador quién eran los peregrinos que habían dado las joyas en prendas del retrato de Auristela, y asimismo quién era él y quién Auristela.

A lo que respondió Periandro:

-El retrato es de Auristela, mi hermana; los peregrinos pueden tener joyas mucho más ricas; esta cruz es mía; y, cuando me dé el tiempo lugar, y la necesidad me fuerce, diré quién soy; que el decirlo agora no está en mi voluntad, sino en la de mi hermana. El retrato que vuesa merced tiene ya se lo tengo comprado al pintor por precio conveniente, sin que en la compra hayan intervenido pujas, que se fundan más en rancor y en fantasía que en razón.

El gobernador dijo que él se quería quedar con él por el tanto, por añadir con él a Roma cosa que aventajase a las de los más excelentes pintores que la hacían famosa.

-Yo se le doy a vuesa merced -respondió Periandro-, por parecerme que, en darle tal dueño, le doy la honra posible.

Agradecióselo el gobernador, y aquel día dio por libres a Arnaldo y a el duque, y les volvió sus joyas, y él se quedó con el retrato, porque estaba puesto en razón que se había de quedar con algo.

Capítulo octavo del cuarto libro

MÁS CONFUSA que arrepentida volvió Hipólita a su casa; pensativa además y además enamorada: que, aunque es verdad que en los principios de los amores los desdenes suelen ser parte para acabarlos, los que usó con ella Periandro le avivaron más los deseos. Parecíale a ella que no había de ser tan de bronce un peregrino que no se ablandase con los regalos que pensaba hacerle; pero, hablando consigo, se dijo a sí misma:

-Si este peregrino fuera pobre, no trujera consigo cruz tan rica, cuyos muchos y ricos diamantes sirven de claro sobrescrito de su riqueza: de modo que la fuerza desta roca no se ha de tomar por hambre; otros ardides y mañas son menester para rendirla. ¿No sería posible que este mozo tuviese en otra parte ocupada el alma? ¿No sería posible que esta Auristela no fuese su hermana? ¿No sería posible que las finezas de los desdenes que usa conmigo los quisiese asentar y poner en cargo a Auristela? ¡Válame Dios, que me parece que en este punto he hallado el de mi remedio! ¡Alto! ¡Muera Auristela! Descúbrase este encantamento; a lo menos, veamos el sentimiento que este montaraz corazón hace; pongamos siquiera en plática este disignio; enferme Auristela; quitemos su sol delante de los ojos de Periandro; veamos si, faltando la hermosura, causa primera de adonde el amor nace, falta también el mismo amor: que podría ser que, dando yo lo que a éste le quitare, quitándole a Auristela, viniese a reducirse a tener más blandos pensamientos; por lo menos, probarlo tengo, ateniéndome a lo que se dice: que no daña el tentar las cosas que descubren algún rastro de provecho.

Con estos pensamientos algo consolada, llegó a su casa, donde halló a Zabulón, con quien comunicó todo su disignio, confiada en que tenía una mujer de la mayor fama de hechicera que había en Roma, pidiéndole, habiendo antes precedido dádivas y promesas, hiciese con ella, no que mudase la voluntad de Periandro, pues sabía que esto era imposible, sino que enfermase la salud de Auristela; y, con limitado término, si fuese menester, le quitase la vida. Esto dijo Zabulón ser cosa fácil al poder y sabiduría de su mujer. Recibió no sé cuánto por primera paga, y prometió que desde otro día comenzaría la quiebra de la salud de Auristela.

No solamente Hipólita satisfizo a Zabulón, sino amenazóle asimismo; y a un judío dádivas o amenazas le hacen prometer y aun hacer imposibles.

Periandro contó a Croriano, Ruperta, a Auristela y a las tres damas francesas, a Antonio y a Constanza su prisión, los amores de Hipólita y la dádiva que había hecho del retrato de Auristela al gobernador.

No le contentó nada a Auristela los amores de la cortesana, porque ya había oído decir que era una de las más hermosas mujeres de Roma, de las más libres, de las más ricas y más discretas, y las musarañas de los celos, aunque no sea más de una, y sea más pequeña que un mosquito, el miedo la representa en el pensamiento de un amante mayor que el monte Olimpo; y cuando la honestidad ata la lengua de modo que no puede quejarse, da tormento al alma con las ligaduras del silencio, de modo que a cada paso anda buscando salidas para dejar la vida del cuerpo. Según otra vez se ha dicho, ningún otro remedio tienen los celos que oír disculpas; y, cuando éstas no se admiten, no hay que hacer caso de la vida, la cual perdiera Auristela mil veces, antes que formar una queja de la fee de Periandro.

Aquella noche fue la primera vez que Bartolomé y la Talaverana fueron a visitar a sus señores, no libres, aunque ya lo estaban de la cárcel, sino atados con más duros grillos, que eran los del matrimonio, pues se habían casado; que la muerte del polaco puso en libertad a Luisa, y a él le trujo su destino a venir peregrino a Roma. Antes de llegar a su patria halló en Roma a quien no traía intención de buscar, acordándose de los consejos que en España le había dado Periandro, pero no pudo estorbar su destino, aunque no le fabricó por su voluntad.

Aquella noche, asimismo, visitó Arnaldo a todas aquellas señoras, y dio cuenta de algunas cosas que en el volver a buscarles, después que apaciguó la guerra de su patria, le habían sucedido. Contó cómo llegó a la isla de las Ermitas, donde no había hallado a Rutilio, sino a otro ermitaño en su lugar, que le dijo que Rutilio estaba en Roma; dijo, asimismo, que había tocado en la isla de los pescadores, y hallado en ella libres, sanas y contentas a las desposadas y a los demás que con Periandro, según ellos dijeron, se habían embarcado; contó cómo supo de oídas que Policarpa era muerta, y Sinforosa no había querido casarse; dijo cómo se tornaba a poblar la Isla Bárbara, confirmándose sus moradores en la creencia de su falsa profecía; advirtió cómo Mauricio y Ladislao, su yerno, con su hija Transila, habían dejado su patria y pasádose a vivir más pacíficamente a Inglaterra; dijo también cómo había estado con Leopoldio, rey de los dáneos, después de acabada la guerra, el cual se había casado por dar sucesión a su reino, y que había perdonado a los dos traidores que llevaba presos cuando Periandro y sus pescadores le encontraron, de quien mostró estar muy agradecido, por el buen término y cortesía que con él tuvieron; y, entre los nombres que le era forzoso nombrar en su discurso, tal vez tocaba con el de los padres de Periandro, y tal con los de Auristela, con que les sobresaltaba los corazones y les traía a la memoria así grandezas como desgracias.

Dijo que en Portugal, especialmente en Lisboa, eran en suma estimación tenidos sus retratos; contó asimismo la fama que dejaban en Francia, en todo aquel camino, la hermosura de Constanza y de aquellas señoras damas francesas; dijo cómo Croriano había granjeado opinión de generoso y de discreto en haber escogido a la sin par Ruperta por esposa; dijo, asimismo, cómo en Luca se hablaba mucho en la sagacidad de Isabela Castrucho, y en los breves amores de Andrea Marulo, a quien con el demonio fingido trujo el cielo a vivir vida de ángeles; contó cómo se tenía por milagro la caída de Periandro, y cómo dejaba en el camino a un mancebo peregrino, poeta, que no quiso adelantarse con él, por venirse despacio, componiendo una comedia de los sucesos de Periandro y Auristela, que los sabía de memoria por un lienzo que había visto en Portugal, donde se habían pintado, y que traía intención firmísima de casarse con Auristela, si ella quisiese.

Agradecióle Auristela su buen propósito, y aun desde allí le ofreció darle para un vestido, si acaso llegase roto: que un deseo de un buen poeta toda buena paga merece.

Dijo también que había estado en casa de la señora Constanza y Antonio, y que sus padres y abuelos estaban buenos y sólo fatigados de la pena que tenían de no saber de la salud de sus hijos, deseando volviese la señora Constanza a ser esposa del conde, su cuñado, que quería seguir la discreta elección de su hermano, o ya por no dar los veinte mil ducados, o ya por el merecimiento de Constanza, que era lo más cierto, de que no poco se alegraron todos, especialmente Periandro y Auristela, que como a sus hermanos los querían.

Desta plática de Arnaldo, se engendraron en los pechos de los oyentes nuevas sospechas de que Periandro y Auristela debían de ser grandes personajes, porque, de tratar de casamientos de condes y de millaradas de ducados, no podían nacer sino sospechas illustres y grandes.

Contó también cómo había encontrado en Francia a Renato, el caballero francés vencido en la batalla contra derecho, y libre y vitorioso por la conciencia de su enemigo. En efeto, pocas cosas quedaron de las muchas que en el galán progreso desta historia se han contado, en quien él se hubiese hallado, pues que allí no las volviese a traer a la memoria, trayendo también la que tenía de quedarse con el retrato de Auristela, que tenía Periandro contra la voluntad del duque y contra la suya, puesto que dijo que, por no dar enojo a Periandro, disimularía su agravio.

-Ya le hubiera yo deshecho -respondió Periandro-, volviendo, señor Arnaldo, el retrato, si entendiera fuera vuestro. La ventura y su diligencia se le dieron al duque; vos se le quitastes por fuerza; y así, no tenéis de qué quejaros. Los amantes están obligados a no juzgar sus causas por la medida de sus deseos, que tal vez no los han de satisfacer, por acomodarse con la razón, que otra cosa les manda; pero yo haré de manera que, no quedando vos, señor Arnaldo, contento, el duque quede satisfecho, y será con que mi hermana Auristela se quede con el retrato, pues es más suyo que de otro alguno.

Satisfízole a Arnaldo el parecer de Periandro, y ni más ni menos a Auristela. Con esto cesó la plática; y otro día por la mañana comenzaron a obrar en Auristela los hechizos, los venenos, los encantos y las malicias de la Iulia, mujer de Zabulón.

Capítulo nono del cuarto libro

NO SE ATREVIÓ la enfermedad a acometer rostro a rostro a la belleza de Auristela, temerosa no espantase tanto la hermosura la fealdad suya; y así, la acometió por las espaldas, dándole en ellas unos calosfríos, al amanecer, que no la dejaron levantar aquel día; luego luego, se le quitó la gana de comer, y comenzó la viveza de sus ojos a amortiguarse, y el desmayo, que con el tiempo suele llegar a los enfermos, sembró en un punto por todos los sentidos de Auristela, haciendo el mismo efeto en los de Periandro, que luego se alborotaron y temieron todos los males posibles, especialmente lo que temen los poco venturosos.

No había dos horas que estaba enferma, y ya se le parecían cárdenas las encarnadas rosas de sus mejillas, verde el carmín de sus labios, y topacios las perlas de sus dientes; hasta los cabellos le pareció que habían mudado color, estrecháronse las manos, y casi mudado el asiento y encaje natural de su rostro. Y no por esto le parecía menos hermosa, porque no la miraba en el lecho que yacía, sino en el alma, donde la tenía retratada. Llegaban a sus oídos, a lo menos llegaron de allí a dos días, sus palabras, entre débiles acentos formadas, y pronunciadas con turbada lengua. Asustáronse las señoras francesas, y el cuidado de atender a la salud de Auristela fue de tal modo que tuvieron necesidad de tenerle de sí mismas.

Llamáronse médicos, escogiéronse los mejores, a lo menos los de mejor fama; que la buena opinión califica la acertada medicina, y así suele haber médicos venturosos como soldados bien afortunados; la buena suerte y la buena dicha, que todo es uno, también puede llegar a la puerta del miserable en un saco de sayal como en un escaparate de plata. Pero ni en plata ni en lana no llegaba ninguna a las puertas de Auristela, de lo que discretamente se desesperaban los dos hermanos Antonio y Constanza.

Esto era al revés en el duque, que, como el amor que tenía en el pecho se había engendrado de la hermosura de Auristela, así como la tal hermosura iba faltando en ella, iba en él faltando el amor, el cual muchas raíces ha de haber echado en el alma, para tener fuerzas de llegar hasta el margen de la sepultura con la cosa amada. Feísima es la muerte, y quien más a ella se llega es la dolencia; y amar las cosas feas parece cosa sobrenatural y digna de tenerse por milagro.

Auristela, en fin, iba enflaqueciendo por momentos, y quitando las esperanzas de su salud a cuantos la conocían. Sólo Periandro era el solo, sólo el firme, sólo el enamorado, sólo aquel que con intrépido pecho se oponía a la contraria fortuna y a la misma muerte, que en la de Auristela le amenazaba.

Quince días esperó el duque de Nemurs, a ver si Auristela mejoraba, y en todos ellos no hubo ninguno que a los médicos no consultase de la salud de Auristela, y ninguno se la aseguró, porque no sabían la causa precisa de su dolencia; viendo lo cual el duque y que las damas francesas no hacían dél caso alguno, viendo también que el ángel de luz de Auristela se había vuelto el de tinieblas, fingiendo algunas causas que, si no del todo, en parte le disculpaban, un día, llegándose a Auristela en el lecho donde enferma estaba, delante de Periandro, le dijo:

-Pues la ventura me ha sido tan contraria, hermosa señora, que no me ha dejado conseguir el deseo que tenía de recebirte por mi legítima esposa, antes que la desesperación me traiga a términos de perder el alma, como me ha traído en los de perder la vida, quiero por otro camino probar mi ventura, porque sé cierto que no tengo de tener ninguna buena, aunque la procure; y así, sucediéndome el mal que no procuro, vendré a perderme y a morir desdichado, y no desesperado. Mi madre me llama; tiéneme prevenida esposa; obedecerla quiero, y entretener el tiempo del camino tanto que halle la muerte lugar de acometerme, pues ha de hallar en mi alma las memorias de tu hermosura y de tu enfermedad, y quiera Dios que no diga las de tu muerte.

Dieron sus ojos muestra de algunas lágrimas. No pudo responderle Auristela, o no quiso, por no errar en la respuesta delante de Periandro. Lo más que hizo fue poner la mano debajo de su almohada, y sacar su retrato y volvérselo al duque, el cual le besó las manos por tan gran merced; pero, alargando la suya Periandro, se le tomó, y le dijo:

-Si dello no disgustas, ¡oh gran señor!, por lo que bien quieres, te suplico me le prestes, porque yo pueda cumplir una palabra que tengo dada, que, sin ser en perjuicio tuyo, será grandemente en el mío si no lo cumplo.

Volviósele el duque, con grandes ofrecimientos de poner por él la hacienda, la vida y la honra, y más, si más pudiese, y desde allí se dividió de los dos hermanos, con pensamiento de no verlos más en Roma. Discreto amante, y el primero quizá que haya sabido aprovecharse de las guedejas que la ocasión le ofrecía.

Todas estas cosas pudieran despertar a Arnaldo, para que considerara cuán menoscabadas estaban sus esperanzas, y cuán a pique de acabar con toda la máquina de sus peregrinaciones, pues, como se ha dicho, la muerte casi había pisado las ropas a Auristela, y estuvo muy determinado de acompañar al duque, si no en su camino, a lo menos en su propósito, volviéndose a Dinamarca; mas el amor, y su generoso pecho, no dieron lugar a que dejase a Periandro sin consuelo y a su hermana Auristela en los postreros límites de la vida, a quien visitó, y de nuevo hizo ofrecimientos, con determinación de aguardar a que el tiempo mejorase los sucesos, a pesar de todas las sospechas que le sobrevenían.

Capítulo diez del cuarto libro

CONTENTÍSIMA estaba Hipólita de ver que las artes de la cruel Julia tan en daño de la salud de Auristela se mostraban, porque en ocho días la pusieron tan otra de lo que ser solía, que ya no la conocían sino por el órgano de la voz; cosa que tenía suspensos a los médicos y admirados a cuantos la conocían. Las señoras francesas atendían a su salud con tanto cuidado como si fueran sus queridas hermanas, especialmente Feliz Flora, que con particular afición la quería.

Llegó a tanto el mal de Auristela que, no conteniéndose en los términos de su jurisdicción, pasó a la de sus vecinos, y, como ninguno lo era tanto como Periandro, el primero con quien encontró fue con él, no porque el veneno y maleficios de la perversa judía obrasen en él derechamente, y con particular asistencia, como en Auristela, para quien estaban hechos, sino porque la pena que él sentía de la enfermedad de Auristela era tanta, que causaba en él el mismo efeto que en Auristela, y así se iba enflaqueciendo, que comenzaron todos a dudar de la vida suya como de la de Auristela.

Viendo lo cual Hipólita, y que ella misma se mataba con los filos de su espada, adivinando con el dedo de dónde procedía el mal de Periandro, procuró darle remedio, dándosele a Auristela, la cual, ya flaca, ya descolorida, parecía que estaba llamando su vida a las aldabas de las puertas de la muerte; y, creyendo sin duda, que por momentos la abrirían, quiso abrir y preparar la salida a su alma por la carrera de los sacramentos, bien como ya instruida en la verdad católica; y así, haciendo las diligencias necesarias, con la mayor devoción que pudo, dio muestras de sus buenos pensamientos, acreditó la integridad de sus costumbres, dio señales de haber aprendido bien lo que en Roma la habían enseñado, y, resignándose en las manos de Dios, sosegó su espíritu y puso en olvido reinos, regalos y grandezas.

Hipólita, pues, habiendo visto, como está ya dicho, que muriéndose Auristela moría también Periandro, acudió a la judía a pedirle que templase el rigor de los hechizos que consumían a Auristela, o los quitase del todo: que no quería ella ser inventora de quitar con un golpe solo tres vidas, pues muriendo Auristela, moría Periandro, y, muriendo Periandro, ella también quedaría sin vida. Hízolo así la judía, como si estuviera en su mano la salud o la enfermedad ajena, o como si no dependieran todos los males que llaman de pena de la voluntad de Dios, como no dependen los males de culpa; pero Dios, obligándole, si así se puede decir, por nuestros mismos pecados, para castigo dellos, permite que pueda quitar la salud ajena esta que llaman hechicería, con que lo hacen las hechiceras; sin duda ha él permitido, usando mezclas y venenos, que con tiempo limitado quitan la vida a la persona que quieren, sin que tenga remedio de escusar este peligro, porque le ignora, y no se sabe de dónde procede la causa de tan mortal efeto; así que, para guarecer destos males, la gran misericordia de Dios ha de ser la maestra, la que ha de aplicar la medicina.

Comenzó, pues, Auristela a dejar de empeorar, que fue señal de su mejoría; comenzó el sol de su belleza a dar señales y vislumbres de que volvía a amanecer en el cielo de su rostro; volvieron a despuntar las rosas en sus mejillas y la alegría en sus ojos; ajuntáronse las sombras de su melancolía; volvió a enterarse el órgano suave de su voz; afinóse el carmín de sus labios; compitió con el marfil la blancura de sus dientes, que volvieron a ser perlas, como antes lo eran; en fin, en poco espacio de tiempo volvió a ser toda hermosa, toda bellísima, toda agradable y toda contenta, y estos mismos efetos redundaron en Periandro, y en las damas francesas y en los demás: Croriano y Ruperta, Antonio y su hermana Constanza, cuya alegría o tristeza caminaba al paso de la de Auristela, la cual, dando gracias al cielo por la merced y regalos que le iba haciendo, así en la enfermedad como en la salud, un día llamó a Periandro, y, estando solos por cuidado y de industria, desta manera le dijo:

-Hermano mío, pues ha querido el cielo que con este nombre tan dulce y tan honesto ha dos años que te he nombrado, sin dar licencia al gusto o al descuido para que de otra suerte te llamase, que tan honesta y tan agradable no fuese, querría que esta felicidad pasase adelante, y que solos los términos de la vida la pusiesen término: que tanto es una ventura buena cuanto es duradera, y tanto es duradera cuanto es honesta. Nuestras almas, como tú bien sabes, y como aquí me han enseñado, siempre están en continuo movimiento y no pueden parar sino en Dios, como en su centro. En esta vida los deseos son infinitos, y unos se encadenan de otros, y se eslabonan, y van formando una cadena que tal vez llega al cielo, y tal se sume en el infierno. Si te pareciere, hermano, que este lenguaje no es mío, y que va fuera de la enseñanza que me han podido enseñar mis pocos años y mi remota crianza, advierte que en la tabla rasa de mi alma ha pintado la experiencia y escrito mayores cosas; principalmente ha puesto que en sólo conocer y ver a Dios está la suma gloria, y todos los medios que para este fin se encaminan son los buenos, son los santos, son los agradables, como son los de la caridad, de la honestidad y el de la virginidad. Yo, a lo menos, así lo entiendo, y, juntamente con entenderlo así, entiendo que el amor que me tienes es tan grande que querrás lo que yo quisiere. Heredera soy de un reino, y ya tú sabes la causa por que mi querida madre me envió en casa de los reyes tus padres, por asegurarme de la grande guerra de que se temía; desta venida se causó el de venirme yo contigo, tan sujeta a tu voluntad, que no he salido della un punto; tú has sido mi padre, tú mi hermano, tú mi sombra, tú mi amparo y, finalmente, tú mi ángel de guarda, y tú mi enseñador y mi maestro, pues me has traído a esta ciudad, donde he llegado a ser cristiana como debo. Querría agora, si fuese posible, irme al cielo, sin rodeos, sin sobresaltos y sin cuidados, y esto no podrá ser si tú no me dejas la parte que yo misma te he dado, que es la palabra y la voluntad de ser tu esposa. Déjame, señor, la palabra, que yo procuraré dejar la voluntad, aunque sea por fuerza: que, para alcanzar tan gran bien como es el cielo, todo cuanto hay en la tierra se ha de dejar, hasta los padres y los esposos. Yo no te quiero dejar por otro; por quien te dejo es por Dios, que te dará a sí mismo, cuya recompensa infinitamente excede a que me dejes por él. Una hermana tengo pequeña, pero tan hermosa como yo, si es que se puede llamar hermosa la mortal belleza; con ella te podrás casar, y alcanzar el reino que a mí me toca, y con esto, haciendo felices mis deseos, no quedarán defraudados del todo los tuyos. ¿Qué inclinas la cabeza, hermano? ¿A qué pones los ojos en el suelo? ¿Desagradante estas razones? ¿Parécete descaminados mis deseos? Dímelo, respóndeme; por lo menos, sepa yo tu voluntad; quizá templaré la mía, y buscaré alguna salida a tu gusto, que en algo con el mío se conforme.

Con grandísimo silencio estuvo escuchando Periandro a Auristela, y en un breve instante formó en su imaginación millares de discursos, que todos venieron a parar en el peor que para él pudiera ser, porque imaginó que Auristela le aborrecía, porque aquel mudar de vida no era sino porque a él se le acabara la suya, pues bien debía saber que, en dejando ella de ser su esposa, él no tenía para qué vivir en el mundo; y fue y vino con esta imaginación con tanto ahínco que, sin responder palabra a Auristela, se levantó de donde estaba sentado, y, con ocasión de salir a recibir a Feliz Flora y a la señora Constanza, que entraban en el aposento, se salió dél y dejó a Auristela, no sé si diga arrepentida, pero sé que quedó pensativa y confusa.

Capítulo once del cuarto libro

LAS AGUAS en estrecho vaso encerradas, mientras más priesa se dan a salir, más despacio se derraman, porque las primeras, impelidas de las segundas, se detienen, y unas o otras se niegan el paso, hasta que hace camino la corriente y se desagua.

Lo mismo acontece en las razones que concibe el entendimiento de un lastimado amante, que, acudiendo tal vez todas juntas a la lengua, las unas a las otras impiden, y no sabe el discurso con cuáles se dé primero a entender su imaginación; y así, muchas veces, callando, dice más de lo que querría.

Mostróse esto en la poca cortesía que hizo Periandro a los que entraron a ver a Auristela, el cual lleno de discursos, preñado de conceptos, colmado de imaginaciones, desdeñado y desengañado, se salió del aposento de Auristela, sin saber, ni querer, ni poder responder palabra alguna a las muchas que ella le había dicho. Llegaron a ella Antonio y su hermana, y halláronla como persona que acaba de despertar de un pesado sueño, y que entre sí estaba diciendo con palabras distintas y claras:

-Mal hecho; pero, ¿qué importa? ¿No es mejor que mi hermano sepa mi intención? ¿No es mejor que yo deje con tiempo los caminos torcidos y las dudosas sendas, y tienda el paso por los atajos llanos, que con distinción clara nos están mostrando el felice paradero de nuestra jornada? Yo confieso que la compañía de Periandro no me ha de estorbar de ir al cielo; pero también siento que iré más presto sin ella; sí, que más me debo yo a mí que no a otro, y al interese del cielo y de gloria se ha de posponer los del parentesco, cuanto más, que yo no tengo ninguno con Periandro.

-Advierte -dijo a esta sazón Constanza-, hermana Auristela, que vas descubriendo cosas que podrían ser parte que, desterrando nuestras sospechas, a ti te dejasen confusa. Si no es tu hermano Periandro, mucha es la conversación que con él tienes; y si lo es, no hay para qué te escandalices de su compañía.

Acabó a esta sazón de volver en sí Auristela, y, oyendo lo que Constanza le decía, quiso enmendar su descuido; pero no acertó, pues para soldar una mentira, por muchas se atropellan, y siempre queda la verdad en duda, aunque más viva la sospecha.

-No sé, hermana -dijo Auristela-, lo que me he dicho, ni sé si Periandro es mi hermano o si no; lo que te sabré decir es que es mi alma, por lo menos: por él vivo, por él respiro, por él me muevo y por él me sustento, conteniéndome, con todo esto, en los términos de la razón, sin dar lugar a ningún vario pensamiento, ni a no guardar todo honesto decoro, bien así como le debe guardar una mujer principal a un tan principal hermano.

-No te entiendo, señora Auristela -la dijo a esta sazón Antonio-, pues de tus razones tanto alcanzo ser tu hermano Periandro, como si no lo fuese. Dinos ya quién es y quién eres, si es que puedes decillo; que agora sea tu hermano o no lo sea, por lo menos no podéis negar ser principales, y en nosotros, digo en mí y en mi hermana Constanza, no está tan en niñez la experiencia que nos admire ningún caso que nos contares; que, puesto que ayer salimos de la Isla Bárbara, los trabajos que has visto que hemos pasado han sido nuestros maestros en muchas cosas, y, por pequeña muestra que se nos dé, sacamos el hilo de los más arduos negocios, especialmente en los que son de amores, que parece que los tales consigo mismo traen la declaración. ¿Qué mucho que Periandro no sea tu hermano, y qué mucho que tú seas su legítima esposa? ¿Y qué mucho, otra vez, que con honesto y casto decoro os hayáis mostrado hasta aquí limpios al cielo y honestísimos a los ojos de los que os han visto? No todos los amores son precipitados ni atrevidos, ni todos los amantes han puesto la mira de su gusto en gozar a sus amadas, sino con las potencias de su alma; y, siendo esto así, señora mía, otra vez te suplico nos digas quién eres y quién es Periandro, el cual, según le vi salir de aquí, él lleva un volcán en los ojos y una mordaza en la lengua.

-¡Ay, desdichada -replicó Auristela-, y cuán mejor me hubiera sido que me hubiera entregado al silencio eterno, pues, callando, escusara la mordaza que dices que lleva en su lengua! Indiscretas somos las mujeres, mal sufridas y peor calladas; mientras callé, en sosiego estuvo mi alma; hablé, y perdí; y, para acabarle de perder, y para que juntamente se acabe la tragedia de mi vida, quiero que sepáis vosotros, pues el cielo os hizo verdaderos hermanos, que no lo es mío Periandro, ni menos es mi esposo ni mi amante; a lo menos, de aquéllos que, corriendo por la carrera de su gusto, procuran parar sobre la honra de sus amadas. Hijo de rey es; hija y heredera de un reino soy; por la sangre somos iguales; por el estado, alguna ventaja le hago; por la voluntad, ninguna; y, con todo esto, nuestras intenciones se responden, y nuestros deseos, con honestísimo efeto, se están mirando; sola la ventura es la que turba y confunde nuestras intenciones, y la que por fuerza hace que esperemos en ella. Y, porque el nudo que lleva a la garganta Periandro me aprieta la mía, no os quiero decir más por agora, señores, sino suplicaros me ayudéis a buscallo, que, pues él tuvo licencia para irse sin la mía, no querrá volver sin ser buscado.

-Levanta, pues -dijo Constanza-, y vamos a buscallo, que los lazos con que amor liga a los amantes, no los deja alejar de lo que bien quieren. Ven, que presto le hallaremos, presto le verás y más presto llegarás a tu contento. Si quieres tener un poco los escrúpulos que te rodean, dales de mano y dala de esposa a Periandro; que, igualándole contigo, pondrás silencio a cualquiera murmuración.

Levantóse Auristela, y, en compañía de Feliz Flora, Constanza y Antonio, salieron a buscar a Periandro; y, como ya en la opinión de los tres era reina, con otros ojos la miraban, y con otro respeto la servían.

Periandro, en tanto que era buscado, procuraba alejarse de quien le buscaba; salió de Roma a pie, y solo, si ya no se tiene por compañía la soledad amarga, los suspiros tristes y los continuos sollozos: que éstos y las varias imaginaciones no le dejaban un punto.

-¡Ay! -iba diciendo entre sí-, hermosísima Sigismunda, reina por naturaleza, bellísima por privilegio y por merced de la misma naturaleza, discreta sobremodo, y sobremanera agradable, y ¡cuán poco te costaba, oh señora, el tenerme por hermano, pues mis tratos y pensamientos jamás desmintieran la verdad de serlo, aunque la misma malicia lo quisiera averiguar, aunque en sus trazas se desvelara! Si quieres que te lleven al cielo sola y señora, sin que tus acciones dependan de otro que de Dios y de ti misma, sea en buen hora; pero quisiera que advirtieras que no sin escrúpulo de pecado puedes ponerte en el camino que deseas. Sin ser mi homicida, dejaras, ¡oh señora!, a cargo del silencio y del engaño tus pensamientos, y no me los declararas a tiempo que habías de arrancar con las raíces de mi amor mi alma, la cual, por ser tan tuya, te dejo a toda tu voluntad, y de la mía me destierro; quédate en paz, bien mío, y conoce que el mayor que te puedo hacer es dejarte.

Llegóse la noche en esto, y, apartándose un poco del camino, que era el de Nápoles, oyó el sonido de un arroyo que por entre unos árboles corría, a la margen del cual, arrojándose de golpe en el suelo, puso en silencio la lengua, pero no dio treguas a sus suspiros.

Capítulo doce del cuarto libro

Donde se dice quién eran Periandro y Auristela

PARECE que el bien y el mal distan tan poco el uno del otro, que son como dos líneas concurrentes, que, aunque parten de apartados y diferentes principios, acaban en un punto.

Sollozando estaba Periandro, en compañía del manso arroyuelo y de la clara luz de la noche; hacíanle los árboles compañía, y un aire blando y fresco le enjugaba las lágrimas; llevábale la imaginación Auristela, y la esperanza de tener remedio de sus males el viento, cuando llegó a sus oídos una voz extranjera que, escuchándola con atención, vio que era en lenguaje de su patria, sin poder distinguir si murmuraba o si cantaba; y la curiosidad le llevó cerca, y, cuando lo estuvo, oyó que eran dos personas las que no cantaban ni murmuraban, sino que en plática corriente estaban razonando; pero lo que más le admiró fue que hablasen en lengua de Noruega, estando tan apartados della; acomodóse detrás de un árbol de tal forma que él y el árbol hacían una misma sombra, recogió el aliento, y la primera razón que llegó a sus oídos fue:

-No tienes, señor, para qué persuadirme de que en dos mitades se parte el día entero de Noruega, porque yo he estado en ella algún tiempo, donde me llevaron mis desgracias, y sé que la mitad del año se lleva la noche y la otra mitad el día. El que sea esto así, yo lo sé; el porqué sea así, ignoro.

A lo que respondió:

-Si llegamos a Roma, con una esfera te haré tocar con la mano la causa dese maravilloso efeto, tan natural en aquel clima como lo es en éste ser el día y la noche de venticuatro horas. «También te he dicho cómo en la última parte de Noruega, casi debajo del polo Ártico, está la isla que se tiene por última en el mundo, a lo menos por aquella parte, cuyo nombre es Tile, a quien Virgilio llamó Tule en aquellos versos que dicen, en el libro I, Georg.:

...Ac tua nautae

numina sola colant: tibi serviat ultima Thule; que Tule, en griego, es lo mismo que Tile en latín. Esta isla es tan grande, o poco menos, que Inglaterra, rica y abundante de todas las cosas necesarias para la vida humana. Más adelante, debajo del mismo norte, como trecientas leguas de Tile, está la isla llamada Frislanda, que habrá cuatrocientos años que se descubrió a los ojos de las gentes, tan grande que tiene nombre de reino, y no pequeño. De Tile es rey y señor Magsimino, hijo de la reina Eustoquia, cuyo padre no ha muchos meses que pasó desta a mejor vida, el cual dejó dos hijos, que el uno es el Magsimino que te he dicho, que es el heredero del reino, y el otro, un generoso mozo llamado Persiles, rico de los bienes de la naturaleza sobre todo extremo, y querido de su madre sobre todo encarecimiento; y no sé yo con cuál poderte encarecer las virtudes deste Persiles, y así, quédense en su punto, que no será bien que con mi corto ingenio las menoscabe; que, puesto que el amor que le tengo, por haber sido su ayo y criádole desde niño, me pudiera llevar a decir mucho, todavía será mejor callar, por no quedar corto.»

Esto escuchaba Periandro, y luego cayó en la cuenta que el que le alababa no podía ser otro que Seráfido, un ayo suyo, y que, asimismo, el que le escuchaba era Rutilio, según la voz y las palabras que de cuando en cuando respondía. Si se admiró o no, a la buena consideración lo dejó; y más cuando Seráfido, que era el mismo que había imaginado Periandro, oyó que dijo:

-«Eusebia, reina de Frislanda, tenía dos hijas de estremada hermosura, principalmente la mayor, llamada Sigismunda (que la menor llamábase Eusebia, como su madre), donde naturaleza cifró toda la hermosura que por todas las partes de la tierra tiene repartida, a la cual, no sé yo con qué disignio, tomando ocasión de que la querían hacer guerra ciertos enemigos suyos, la envió a Tile en poder de Eustoquia, para que seguramente, y sin los sobresaltos de la guerra, en su casa se criase, puesto que yo para mí tengo que no fue esta la ocasión principal de envialla, sino para que el príncipe Magsimino se enamorase della y la recibiese por su esposa: que de las estremadas bellezas se puede esperar que vuelvan en cera los corazones de mármol, y junten en uno los extremos que entre sí están más apartados.

»Dos años, poco más, tardó en venir el príncipe Magsimino a su reino, que anduvo ocupado en la guerra que siempre tenía con sus enemigos; preguntó por Sigismunda, y el no hallarla fue hallar su desasosiego. Supo su viaje, y al momento se partió en su busca, si bien confiado de la bondad de su hermano, temeroso pero de los recelos, que por maravilla se apartan de los amantes.

»Como su madre supo su determinación, me llamó aparte, y me encargó la salud, la vida y la honra de su hijo, y me mandó me adelantase a buscarle y a darle noticia de que su hermano le buscaba. Partióse el príncipe Magsimino en dos gruesísimas naves, y, entrando por el estrecho hercúleo, con diferentes tiempos y diversas borrascas, llegó a la isla de Tinacria, y desde allí a la gran ciudad de Parténope, y agora queda no lejos de aquí, en un lugar llamado

Terrachina, último de los de Nápoles y primero de los de Roma; queda enfermo, porque le ha cogido esto que llaman mutación, que le tiene a punto de muerte. Yo, desde Lisboa, donde me desembarqué, traigo noticia de Persiles y Sigismunda, porque no pueden ser otros una peregrina y un peregrino, de quien la fama viene pregonando tan grande estruendo de hermosura, que si no son Persiles y Sigismunda, deben de ser ángeles humanados.»

-Si como los nombras -respondió el que escuchaba a Seráfido-Persiles y Sigismunda, los nombraras Periandro y Auristela, pudiera darte nueva certísima dellos, porque ha muchos días que los conozco, en cuya compañía he pasado muchos trabajos.

Y luego le comenzó a contar los de la Isla Bárbara, con otros algunos, en tanto que se venía el día y en tanto que Periandro, porque allí no le hallasen, los dejó solos y volvió a buscar a Auristela, para contar la venida de su hermano, y tomar consejo de lo que debían de hacer para huir de su indignación, teniendo a milagro haber sido informado en tan remoto lugar de aquel caso. Y así, lleno de nuevos pensamientos, volvió a los ojos de su contrita Auristela, ya las esperanzas casi perdidas de alcanzar su deseo.

Capítulo trece del cuarto libro

ENTRETIÉNESE el dolor y el sentimiento de las recién dadas heridas en la cólera y en la sangre caliente, que, después de fría, fatiga de manera que rinde la paciencia del que las sufre. Lo mismo acontece en las pasiones del alma: que, en dando el tiempo lugar y espacio para considerar en ellas, fatigan hasta quitar la vida.

Dijo su voluntad Auristela a Periandro, cumplió con su deseo, y, satisfecha de haberle declarado, esperaba su cumplimiento, confiada en la rendida voluntad de Periandro, el cual, como se ha dicho, librando la respuesta en su silencio, se salió de Roma, y le sucedió lo que se ha contado. Conoció a Rutilio, el cual contó a su ayo Seráfido toda la historia de la Isla Bárbara, con las sospechas que tenía de que Auristela y Periandro fuesen Sigismunda y Persiles; díjole asimismo que, sin duda, los hallarían en Roma, a quien, desde que los conoció, venían encaminados con la disimulación y cubierta de ser hermanos; preguntó muchísimas veces a Seráfido la condición de las gentes de aquellas islas remotas, de donde era rey Magsimino y reina la sin par Auristela.

Volvióle a repetir Seráfido cómo la isla de Tile o Tule, que agora vulgarmente se llama Islanda, era la última de aquellos mares setentrionales, puesto que «un poco más adelante está otra isla, como te he dicho, llamada Frislanda, que descubrió Nicolás Zeno, veneciano, el año de mil y treientos y ochenta, tan grande como Sicilia, ignorada hasta entonces de los antiguos, de quien es reina Eusebia, madre de Sigismunda, que yo busco. Hay otra isla, asimismo poderosa y casi siempre llena de nieve, que se llama Groenlanda, a una punta de la cual está fundado un monasterio debajo del título de Santo Tomás, en el cual hay religiosos de cuatro naciones: españoles, franceses, toscanos y latinos; enseñan sus lenguas a la gente principal de la isla, para que, en saliendo della, sean entendidos por doquiera que fueren. Está, como he dicho, la isla sepultada en nieve, y encima de una montañuela está una fuente, cosa maravillosa y digna de que se sepa, la cual derrama y vierte de sí tanta abundancia de agua, y tan caliente, que llega al mar, y, por muy gran espacio dentro dél, no solamente le desniega, pero le calienta de modo que se recogen en aquella parte increíble infinidad de diversos pescados, de cuya pesca se mantiene el monasterio y toda la isla, que de allí saca sus rentas y provechos. Esta fuente engendra asimismo unas piedras conglutinadas, de las cuales se hace un betún pegajoso, con el cual se fabrican las casas como si fuesen de duro mármol. Otras cosas te pudiera decir -dijo Seráfido a Rutilio-destas islas, que ponen en duda su crédito, pero en efeto son verdaderas».

Todo esto, que no oyó Periandro, lo contó después Rutilio, que, ayudado de la noticia que dellas Periandro tenía, muchos las pusieron en el verdadero punto que merecían. Llegó en esto el día, y hallóse Periandro junto a la iglesia y templo, magnífico y casi el mayor de la Europa, de San Pablo, y vio venir hacia sí alguna gente en montón, a caballo y a pie; y, llegando cerca, conoció que los que venían eran Auristela, Feliz Flora, Constanza y Antonio, su hermano, y asimismo Hipólita, que, habiendo sabido la ausencia de Periandro, no quiso dejar a que otra llevase las albricias de su hallazgo, y así, siguió los pasos de Auristela, encaminados por la noticia que dellos dio la mujer de Zabulón el judío, bien como aquella que tenía amistad con quien no la tiene con nadie.

Llegó en fin Periandro al hermoso escuadrón, saludó a Auristela, notóle el semblante del rostro, y halló más mansa su riguridad y más blandos sus ojos. Contó luego públicamente lo que aquella noche le había pasado con Seráfido, su ayo, y con Rutilio; dijo cómo su hermano el príncipe Magsimino quedaba en Terrachina, enfermo de la mutación, y con propósito de venirse a curar a Roma, y con autoridad disfrazada y nombre trocado a buscarlos; pidió consejo a Auristela y a los demás de lo que haría, porque de la condición de su hermano el príncipe no podía esperar ningún blando acogimiento.

Pasmóse Auristela con las no esperadas nuevas; desaparecieron en un punto, así las esperanzas de guardar su integridad y buen propósito, como de alcanzar por más llano camino la compañía de su querido Periandro.

Todos los demás circunstantes discurrieron en su imaginación qué consejo darían a Periandro, y la primera que salió con el suyo, aunque no se le pidieron, fue la rica y enamorada Hipólita, que le ofreció de llevarle a Nápoles con su hermana Auristela, y gastar con ellos cien mil y más ducados que su hacienda valía. Oyó este ofrecimiento Pirro el Calabrés, que allí estaba, que fue lo mismo que oír la sentencia irremisible de su muerte: que en los rufianes no engendra celos el desdén, sino el interés; y, como éste se perdía con los cuidados de Hipólita, por momentos iba tomando la desesperación posesión de su alma, en la cual iba atesorando odio mortal contra Periandro, cuya gentileza y gallardía, aunque era tan grande, como se ha dicho, a él le parecía mucho mayor, porque es propia condición del celoso parecerle magníficas y grandes las acciones de sus rivales.

Agradeció Periandro a Hipólita, pero no admitió su generoso ofrecimiento. Los demás no tuvieron lugar de aconsejarle nada, porque llegaron en aquel instante Rutilio y Seráfido, y entrambos a dos, apenas hubieron visto a Periandro, cuando corrieron a echarse a sus pies, porque la mudanza del hábito no le pudo mudar la de su gentileza. Teníale abrazado Rutilio por la cintura y Seráfido por el cuello; lloraba Rutilio de placer y Seráfido de alegría.

Todos los circunstantes estaban atentos mirando el extraño y gozoso recibimiento. Sólo en el corazón de Pirro andaba la melancolía, atenaceándole con tenazas más ardiendo que si fueran de fuego; y llegó a tanto extremo el dolor que sintió de ver engrandecido y honrado a Periandro que, sin mirar lo que hacía, o quizá mirándolo muy bien, metió mano a su espada, y por entre los brazos de Seráfido se la metió a Periandro por el hombro derecho, con tal furia y fuerza que le salió la punta por el izquierdo, atravesándole, poco menos que al soslayo, de parte a parte.

La primera que vio el golpe fue Hipólita, y la primera que gritó fue su voz, diciendo:

-¡Ay, traidor, enemigo mortal mío, y cómo has quitado la vida a quien no merecía perderla para siempre!

Abrió los brazos Seráfido, soltóle Rutilio, calientes ya en su derramada sangre, y cayó Periandro en los de Auristela, la cual, faltándole la voz a la garganta, el aliento a los suspiros y las lágrimas a los ojos, se le cayó la cabeza sobre el pecho y los brazos a una y a otra parte.

Este golpe, más mortal en la apariencia que en el efeto, suspendió los ánimos de los circunstantes y les robó la color de los rostros, dibujándoles la muerte en ellos, que ya, por la falta de la sangre, a más andar se entraba por la vida de Periandro, cuya falta amenazaba a todos el último fin de sus días; a lo menos, Auristela la tenía entre los dientes, y la quería escupir de los labios.

Seráfido y Antonio arremetieron a Pirro, y, a despecho de su fiereza y fuerzas, le asieron y, con gente que se llegó, le enviaron a la prisión; y el gobernador, de allí a cuatro días, le mandó llevar a la horca por incorregible y asasino, cuya muerte dio la vida a Hipólita, que vivió desde allí adelante.

Capítulo catorce del cuarto libro

ES TAN POCA la seguridad con que se gozan los humanos gozos, que nadie se puede prometer en ellos un mínimo punto de firmeza.

Auristela, arrepentida de haber declarado su pensamiento a Periandro, volvió a buscarle alegre, por pensar que en su mano y en su arrepentimiento estaba el volver a la parte que quisiese la voluntad de Periandro, porque se imaginaba ser ella el clavo de la rueda de su fortuna y la esfera del movimiento de sus deseos. Y no estaba engañada, pues ya los traía Periandro en disposición de no salir de los de Auristela.

Pero, ¡mirad los engaños de la variable fortuna! Auristela, en tan pequeño instante como se ha visto, se vee otra de lo que antes era: pensaba reír, y está llorando; pensaba vivir, y ya se muere; creía gozar de la vista de Periandro, y ofrécese a los ojos la del príncipe Magsimino, su hermano, que, con muchos coches y grande acompañamiento, entraba en Roma por aquel camino de Terrachina, y, llevándole la vista el escuadrón de gente que rodeaba al herido Periandro, llegó su coche a verlo, y salió a recibirle Seráfido, diciéndole:

-¡Oh príncipe Magsimino, y qué malas albricias espero de las nuevas que pienso darte! Este herido que ves en los brazos desta hermosa doncella, es tu hermano Persiles, y ella es la sin par Sigismunda, hallada de tu diligencia a tiempo tan áspero, y en sazón tan rigurosa, que te han quitado la ocasión de regalarlos y te han puesto en la de llevarlos a la sepultura.

-No irán solos -respondió Magsimino-, que yo les haré compañía, según vengo.

Y, sacando la cabeza fuera del coche, conoció a su hermano, aunque tinto y lleno de la sangre de la herida; conoció asimismo a Sigismunda por entre la perdida color de su rostro, porque el sobresalto, que le turbó sus colores, no le afeó sus facciones: hermosa era Sigismunda antes de su desgracia, pero hermosísima estaba después de haber caído en ella; que tal vez los accidentes del dolor suelen acrecentar la belleza.

Dejóse caer del coche sobre los brazos de Sigismunda, ya no Auristela, sino la reina de Frislanda, y, en su imaginación, también reina de Tile; que estas mudanzas tan estrañas caen debajo del poder de aquella que comúnmente es llamada Fortuna, que no es otra cosa sino un firme disponer del cielo.

Habíase partido Magsimino con intención de llegar a Roma a curarse con mejores médicos que los de Terrachina, los cuales le pronosticaron que antes que en Roma entrase le había de saltar la muerte (en esto más verdaderos y experimentados que en saber curarle). Verdad es que el mal que causa la mutación, pocos le saben curar.

En efeto, frontero del templo de San Pablo, en mitad de la campaña rasa, la fea muerte salió al encuentro al gallardo Persiles y le derribó en tierra, y enterró a Magsimino, el cual, viéndose a punto de muerte, con la mano derecha asió la izquierda de su hermano y se la llegó a los ojos, y con su izquierda le asió de la derecha y se la juntó con la de Sigismunda, y con voz turbada y aliento mortal y cansado dijo:

-De vuestra honestidad, verdaderos hijos y hermanos míos, creo que entre vosotros está por saber esto. Aprieta, ¡oh hermano!, estos párpados y ciérrame estos ojos en perpetuo sueño, y con esotra mano aprieta la de Sigismunda, y séllala con el sí que quiero que le des de esposo, y sean testigos de este casamiento la sangre que estás derramando y los amigos que te rodean. El reino de tus padres te queda; el de Sigismunda heredas; procura tener salud, y góceslos años infinitos.

Estas palabras, tan tiernas, tan alegres y tan tristes, avivaron los espíritus de Persiles, y, obedeciendo al mandamiento de su hermano, apretándole la muerte, con la mano le cerró los ojos, y con la lengua, entre triste y alegre, pronunció el sí, y le dio de ser su esposo a Sigismunda.

Hizo el sentimiento de la improvisa y dolorosa muerte en los presentes su efeto, y comenzaron a ocupar los suspiros el aire y a regar las lágrimas el suelo.

Recogieron el cuerpo muerto de Magsimino y lleváronle a San Pablo; y, el medio vivo de Persiles, en el coche del muerto, le volvieron a curar a Roma, donde no hallaron a Belarminia ni a Deleasir, que se habían ya ido a Francia con el duque.

Mucho sintió Arnaldo el nuevo y extraño casamiento de Sigismunda; muchísimo le pesó de que se hubiesen mal logrado tantos años de servicio, de buenas obras hechas, en orden a gozar pacífico de su sin igual belleza; y lo que más le tarazaba el alma eran las no creídas razones del maldiciente Clodio, de quien él, a su despecho, hacía tan manifiesta prueba. Confuso, atónito y espantado, estuvo por irse sin hablar palabra a Persiles y Sigismunda; mas, considerando ser reyes, y la disculpa que tenían, y que sola esta ventura estaba guardada para él, determinó de ir a verles, y así lo hizo. Fue muy bien recebido, y para que del todo no pudiese estar quejoso, le ofrecieron a la infanta Eusebia para su esposa, hermana de Sigismunda, a quien él acetó de buena gana; y se fuera luego con ellos, si no fuera por pedir licencia a su padre; que en los casamientos graves, y en todos, es justo se ajuste la voluntad de los hijos con la de los padres. Asistió a la cura de la herida de su cuñado en esperanza, y, dejándole sano, se fue a ver a su padre y prevenir fiestas para la entrada de su esposa.

Feliz Flora determinó de casarse con Antonio el Bárbaro, por no atreverse a vivir entre los parientes del que había muerto Antonio. Croriano y Ruperta, acabada su romería, se volvieron a Francia, llevando bien qué contar del suceso de la fingida Auristela. Bartolomé el manchego y la castellana Luisa se fueron a Nápoles, donde se dice que acabaron mal, porque no vivieron bien.

Persiles depositó a su hermano en San Pablo, recogió a todos sus criados, volvió a visitar los templos de Roma, acarició a Constanza, a quien Sigismunda dio la cruz de diamantes y la acompañó hasta dejarla casada con el conde su cuñado. Y, habiendo besado los pies al Pontífice, sosegó su espíritu y cumplió su voto, y vivió en compañía de su esposo Persiles hasta que bisnietos le alargaron los días, pues los vio en su larga y feliz posteridad.

Tasa

Yo, Hernando de Vallejo, escribano de Cámara del Rey nuestro señor, de los que residen en su Consejo, doy fe que, habiéndose visto por los señores dél un libro, que con su licencia fue impreso, intitulado Novelas ejemplares, compuesto por Miguel de Cervantes Saavedra, le tasaron a cuatro maravedís el pliego, el cual tiene setenta y un pliegos y medio, que al dicho precio suma y monta docientos y ochenta y seis maravedís en papel; y mandaron que a este precio, y no más, se venda, y que esta tasa se ponga al principio de cada volumen del dicho libro, para que se sepa y entienda lo que por él se ha de pedir y llevar, como consta y parece por el auto y decreto que está y queda en mi poder, a que me refiero.

Y para que dello conste, de mandamiento de los dichos señores del Consejo, y pedimiento de la parte del dicho Miguel de Cervantes, di esta fe, en la villa de Madrid, a doce días del mes de agosto de mil y seiscientos y trece años.

Monta ocho reales y catorce maravedís en papel.

Censura

Vea este libro el padre presentado Fr. Juan Bautista, de la orden de la Santísima Trinidad, y dígame si tiene cosa contra la fe o buenas costumbres, y si será justo imprimirse.

Fecho en Madrid, a 2 de julio de 1612.

Aprobación

Por comisión del señor doctor Gutierre de Cetina, vicario general por el ilustrísimo cardenal D. Bernardo de Sandoval y Rojas, en Corte, he visto y leído las doce Novelas ejemplares, compuestas por Miguel de Cervantes Saavedra; y, supuesto que es sentencia llana del angélico doctor Santo Tomás que la eutropelia es virtud, la que consiste en un entretenimiento honesto, juzgo que la verdadera eutropelia está en estas novelas, porque entretienen con su novedad, enseñan con sus ejemplos a huir vicios y seguir virtudes, y el autor cumple con su intento, con que da honra a nuestra lengua castellana, y avisa a las repúblicas de los daños que de algunos vicios se siguen, con otras muchas comodidades; y así, me parece se le puede y debe dar la licencia que pide, salvo &c.

En este convento de la Santísima Trinidad, calle de Atocha, en 9 de julio de 1612.

El padre presentado Fr. Juan Bautista.

Aprobación

Por comisión y mandado de los señores del Consejo de su Majestad, he hecho ver este libro de Novelas ejemplares, y no contiene cosa contra la fe ni buenas costumbres, antes con semejantes argumentos nos pretende enseñar su autor cosas de importancia, y el cómo nos hemos de haber en ellas; y este fin tienen los que escriben novelas y fábulas; y así, me parece se puede dar licencia para imprimir. En Madrid, a nueve de julio de mil y seiscientos y doce.

El doctor Cetina.

Aprobación

Por comisión de vuestra Alteza, he visto el libro intitulado Novelas ejemplares, de Miguel de Cervantes Saavedra, y no hallo en él cosa contra la fe y buenas costumbres, por donde no se pueda imprimir; antes hallo en él cosas de mucho entretenimiento para los curiosos lectores, y avisos y sentencias de mucho provecho, y que proceden de la fecundidad del ingenio de su autor, que no lo muestra en éste menos que en los demás que ha sacado a luz.

En este Monasterio de la Santísima Trinidad, en ocho de agosto de mil y seiscientos y doce.

Aprobación

Por comisión de los señores del Supremo Consejo de Aragón, vi un libro intitulado Novelas ejemplares, de honestísimo entretenimiento, su autor Miguel de Cervantes Saavedra, y no sólo no hallo en él cosa escrita en ofensa de la religión cristiana y perjuicio de las buenas costumbres, antes bien confirma el dueño desta obra la justa estimación que en España y fuera della se hace de su claro ingenio, singular en la invención y copioso en el lenguaje, que con lo uno y lo otro enseña y admira, dejando desta vez concluidos con la abundancia de sus palabras a los que, siendo émulos de la lengua española, la culpan de corta y niegan su fertilidad; y así, se debe imprimir: tal es mi parecer.

En Madrid, a treinta y uno de julio de mil y seiscientos y trece.

Prólogo al lector

Quisiera yo, si fuera posible, lector amantísimo, escusarme de escribir este prólogo, porque no me fue tan bien con el que puse en mi Don Quijote, que quedase con gana de segundar con éste. Desto tiene la culpa algún amigo, de los muchos que en el discurso de mi vida he granjeado, antes con mi condición que con mi ingenio; el cual amigo bien pudiera, como es uso y costumbre, grabarme y esculpirme en la primera hoja deste libro, pues le diera mi retrato el famoso don Juan de Jáurigui, y con esto quedara mi ambición satisfecha, y el deseo de algunos que querrían saber qué rostro y talle tiene quien se atreve a salir con tantas invenciones en la plaza del mundo, a los ojos de las gentes, poniendo debajo del retrato:

Éste que veis aquí, de rostro aguileño, de cabello castaño, frente lisa y desembarazada, de alegres ojos y de nariz corva, aunque bien proporcionada; las barbas de plata, que no ha veinte años que fueron de oro, los bigotes grandes, la boca pequeña, los dientes ni menudos ni crecidos, porque no tiene sino seis, y éstos mal acondicionados y peor puestos, porque no tienen correspondencia los unos con los otros; el cuerpo entre dos extremos, ni grande, ni pequeño, la color viva, antes blanca que morena; algo cargado de espaldas, y no muy ligero de pies; éste digo que es el rostro del autor de La Galatea y de Don Quijote de la Mancha, y del que hizo el Viaje del Parnaso, a imitación del de César Caporal Perusino, y otras obras que andan por ahí descarriadas y, quizá, sin el nombre de su dueño. Llámase comúnmente Miguel de Cervantes Saavedra. Fue soldado muchos años, y cinco y medio cautivo, donde aprendió a tener paciencia en las adversidades. Perdió en la batalla naval de Lepanto la mano izquierda de un arcabuzazo, herida que, aunque parece fea, él la tiene por hermosa, por haberla cobrado en la más memorable y alta ocasión que vieron los pasados siglos, ni esperan ver los venideros, militando debajo de las vencedoras banderas del hijo del rayo de la guerra, Carlo Quinto, de felice memoria.

Y cuando a la deste amigo, de quien me quejo, no ocurrieran otras cosas de las dichas que decir de mí, yo me levantara a mí mismo dos docenas de testimonios, y se los dijera en secreto, con que estendiera mi nombre y acreditara mi ingenio. Porque pensar que dicen puntualmente la verdad los tales elogios es disparate, por no tener punto preciso ni determinado las alabanzas ni los vituperios.

En fin, pues ya esta ocasión se pasó, y yo he quedado en blanco y sin figura, será forzoso valerme por mi pico, que, aunque tartamudo, no lo será para decir verdades, que, dichas por señas, suelen ser entendidas. Y así, te digo otra vez, lector amable, que destas novelas que te ofrezco, en ningún modo podrás hacer pepitoria, porque no tienen pies, ni cabeza, ni entrañas, ni cosa que les parezca; quiero decir que los requiebros amorosos que en algunas hallarás, son tan honestos, y tan medidos con la razón y discurso cristiano, que no podrán mover a mal pensamiento al descuidado o cuidadoso que las leyere.

Heles dado nombre de ejemplares, y si bien lo miras, no hay ninguna de quien no se pueda sacar algún ejemplo provechoso; y si no fuera por no alargar este sujeto, quizá te mostrara el sabroso y honesto fruto que se podría sacar, así de todas juntas como de cada una de por sí. Mi intento ha sido poner en la plaza de nuestra república una mesa de trucos, donde cada uno pueda llegar a entretenerse, sin daño de barras; digo, sin daño del alma ni del cuerpo, porque los ejercicios honestos y agradables antes aprovechan que dañan.

Sí, que no siempre se está en los templos, no siempre se ocupan los oratorios, no siempre se asiste a los negocios, por calificados que sean. Horas hay de recreación, donde el afligido espíritu descanse. Para este efeto se plantan las alamedas, se buscan las fuentes, se allanan las cuevas y se cultivan con curiosidad los jardines. Una cosa me atreveré a decirte: que si por algún modo alcanzara que la lección destas novelas pudiera inducir a quien las leyera a algún mal deseo o pensamiento, antes me cortara la mano con que las escribí que sacarlas en público. Mi edad no está ya para burlarse con la otra vida, que al cincuenta y cinco de los años gano por nueve más y por la mano.

A esto se aplicó mi ingenio, por aquí me lleva mi inclinación, y más, que me doy a entender, y es así, que yo soy el primero que he novelado en lengua castellana, que las muchas novelas que en ella andan impresas todas son traducidas de lenguas extranjeras, y éstas son mías propias, no imitadas ni hurtadas: mi ingenio las engendró, y las parió mi pluma, y van creciendo en los brazos de la estampa. Tras ellas, si la vida no me deja, te ofrezco los Trabajos de Persiles, libro que se atreve a competir con Heliodoro, si ya por atrevido no sale con las manos en la cabeza; y primero verás, y con brevedad dilatadas, las hazañas de don Quijote y donaires de Sancho Panza, y luego las Semanas del jardín. Mucho prometo con fuerzas tan pocas como las mías, pero ¿quién pondrá rienda a los deseos? Sólo esto quiero que consideres: que, pues yo he tenido osadía de dirigir estas novelas al gran Conde de Lemos, algún misterio tienen escondido que las levanta.

No más, sino que Dios te guarde y a mí me dé paciencia para llevar bien el mal que han de decir de mí más de cuatro sotiles y almidonados. Vale.

A don Pedro Fernández de Castro

Conde de Lemos, de Andrade y de Villalba, marqués de Sarriá, gentilhombre de la Cámara de Su Majestad, virrey, gobernador y capitán general del reino de Nápoles, comendador de la Encomienda de la Zarza de la Orden de Alcántara

En dos errores, casi de ordinario, caen los que dedican sus obras a algún príncipe. El primero es que en la carta que llaman dedicatoria, que ha de ser breve y sucinta, muy de propósito y espacio, ya llevados de la verdad o de la lisonja, se dilatan en ella en traerle a la memoria, no sólo las hazañas de sus padres y abuelos, sino las de todos sus parientes, amigos y bienhechores. Es el segundo decirles que las ponen debajo de su protección y amparo, porque las lenguas maldicientes y murmuradoras no se atrevan a morderlas y lacerarlas. Yo, pues, huyendo destos dos inconvenientes, paso en silencio aquí las grandezas y títulos de la antigua y Real Casa de Vuestra Excelencia, con sus infinitas virtudes, así naturales como adquiridas, dejándolas a que los nuevos Fidas y Lisipos busquen mármoles y bronce adonde grabarlas y esculpir las, para que sean émulas a la duración de los tiempos. Tampoco suplico a Vuestra Excelencia reciba en su tutela este libro, porque sé que si él no es bueno, aunque le ponga debajo de las alas del Hipogrifo de Astolfo y a la sombra de la clava de Hércules, no dejarán los Zoilos, los Cínicos, los Aretinos y los Bernias de darse un filo en su vituperio, sin guardar respecto a nadie. Sólo suplico que advierta Vuestra Excelencia que le envíe, como quien no dice nada, doce cuentos, que, a no haberse labrado en la oficina de mi entendimiento, presumieran ponerse al lado de los más pintados. Tales cuales son, allá van, y yo quedo aquí contentísimo, por parecerme que voy mostrando en algo el deseo que tengo de servir a Vuestra Excelencia como a mi verdadero señor y bienhechor mío. Guarde Nuestro Señor, &c. De Madrid, a catorce de julio de mil y seiscientos y trece.

Criado de Vuestra Excelencia,
Miguel de Cervantes Saavedra.

Poemas laudatorios

Del marqués de Alcañices, a Miguel de Cervantes

Soneto

Si en el moral ejemplo y dulce aviso, Cervantes, de la diestra grave lira, en docta frasis el concepto mira el lector retratado un paraíso;

mira mejor que con el arte quiso vuestro ingenio sacar de la mentira la verdad, cuya llama sólo aspira a lo que es voluntario hacer preciso.

Al asunto ofrecidas las memorias dedica el tiempo, que en tan breve suma caben todos sucintos los extremos;

y es noble calidad de vuestras glorias, que el uno se le deba a vuestra pluma, y el otro a las grandezas del de Lemos.

De Fernando Bermúdez y Carvajal, camarero del duque de Sesa, a Miguel de Cervantes

Hizo la memoria clara
de aquel Dédalo ingenioso, el laberinto famoso,
obra peregrina y rara;
mas si tu nombre alcanzara Creta en su monstruo cruel, le diera al bronce y pincel, cuando, en términos distintos, viera en doce laberintos mayor ingenio que en él;
y si la naturaleza,
en la mucha variedad
enseña mayor beldad,

más artificio y belleza,
celebre con más presteza, Cervantes, raro y sutil, aqueste florido abril,
cuya variedad admira
la fama veloz, que mira en él variedades mil.

De don Fernando de Lodeña, a Miguel de Cervantes

Soneto

Dejad, Nereidas, del albergue umbroso las piezas de cristales fabricadas, de la espuma ligera mal techadas, si bien guarnidas de coral precioso;
salid del sitio ameno y deleitoso, Dríades de las selvas no tocadas, y vosotras, ¡oh Musas celebradas!, dejad las fuentes del licor copioso;
todas juntas traed un ramo solo del árbol en quien Dafne convertida, al rubio dios mostró tanta dureza, que, cuando no lo fuera para Apolo, hoy se hiciera laurel, por ver ceñida a Miguel de Cervantes la cabeza.

De Juan de Solís Mejía, Gentilhombre cortesano, a los lectores

Soneto

¡Oh tú, que aquestas fábulas leíste: si lo secreto dellas contemplaste, verás que son de la verdad engaste, que por tu gusto tal disfraz se viste!

Bien, Cervantes insigne, conociste la humana inclinación, cuando mezclaste lo dulce con lo honesto, y lo templaste tan bien que plato al cuerpo y alma hiciste.

Rica y pomposa vas, filosofía;

ya, dotrina moral, con este traje no habrá quien de ti burle o te desprecie.

Si agora te faltare compañía, jamás esperes del mortal linaje que tu virtud y tus grandezas precie.

La Gitanilla

PARECE que los gitanos y gitanas solamente nacieron en el mundo para ser ladrones: nacen de padres ladrones, críanse con ladrones, estudian para ladrones y, finalmente, salen con ser ladrones corrientes y molientes a todo ruedo; y la gana del hurtar y el hurtar son en ellos como accidentes inseparables, que no se quitan sino con la muerte.

Una, pues, desta nación, gitana vieja, que podía ser jubilada en la ciencia de Caco, crió una muchacha en nombre de nieta suya, a quien puso nombre Preciosa, y a quien enseñó todas sus gitanerías y modos de embelecocos y trazas de hurtar. Salió la tal Preciosa la más única bailadora que se hallaba en todo el gitanismo, y la más hermosa y discreta que pudiera hallarse, no entre los gitanos, sino entre cuantas hermosas y discretas pudiera pregonar la fama. Ni los soles, ni los aires, ni todas las inclemencias del cielo, a quien más que otras gentes están sujetos los gitanos, pudieron deslustrar su rostro ni curtir las manos; y lo que es más, que la crianza tosca en que se criaba no descubría en ella sino ser nacida de mayores prendas que de gitana, porque era en extremo cortés y bien razonada. Y, con todo esto, era algo desenvuelta, pero no de modo que descubriese algún género de deshonestidad; antes, con ser aguda, era tan honesta, que en su presencia no osaba alguna gitana, vieja ni moza, cantar cantares lascivos ni decir palabras no buenas. Y, finalmente, la abuela conoció el tesoro que en la nieta tenía; y así, determinó el águila vieja sacar a volar su aguilucho y enseñarle a vivir por sus uñas.

Salió Preciosa rica de villancicos, de coplas, seguidillas y zarabandas, y de otros versos, especialmente de romances, que los cantaba con especial donaire. Porque su taimada abuela echó de ver que tales juguetes y gracias, en los pocos años y en la mucha hermosura de su nieta, habían de ser felicísimos atractivos e incentivos para acrecentar su caudal; y así, se los procuró y buscó por todas las vías que pudo, y no faltó poeta que se los diese: que también hay poetas que se acomodan con gitanos, y les venden sus obras, como los hay para ciegos, que les fingen milagros y van a la parte de la ganancia. De todo hay en el mundo, y esto de la hambre tal vez hace arrojar los ingenios a cosas que no están en el mapa.

Crióse Preciosa en diversas partes de Castilla, y, a los quince años de su edad, su abuela putativa la volvió a la Corte y a su antiguo rancho, que es adonde ordinariamente le tienen los gitanos, en los campos de Santa Bárbara, pensando en la Corte vender su mercadería, donde todo se compra y todo se vende. Y la primera entrada que hizo Preciosa en Madrid fue un día de Santa Ana, patrona y abogada de la villa, con una danza en que iban ocho gitanas, cuatro ancianas y cuatro muchachas, y un gitano, gran bailarín, que las guiaba. Y, aunque todas iban limpias y bien aderezadas, el aseo de Preciosa era tal, que poco a poco fue enamorando los ojos de cuantos la miraban. De entre el son del tamborín y castañetas y fuga del baile salió un rumor que encarecía la belleza y donaire de la gitanilla, y corrían los muchachos a verla y los hombres a mirarla. Pero cuando la oyeron cantar, por ser la danza cantada, ¡allí fue ello! Allí sí que cobró aliento la fama de la gitanilla, y de común consentimiento de los diputados de la fiesta, desde luego le señalaron el premio y joya de la mejor danza; y cuando llegaron a hacerla en la iglesia de Santa María, delante de la imagen de Santa Ana, después de haber bailado todas, tomó Preciosa unas sonajas, al son de las cuales, dando en redondo largas y ligerísimas vueltas, cantó el romance siguiente:

-Árbol preciosísimo que tardó en dar fruto años que pudieron
cubrirle de luto,

y hacer los deseos
del consorte puros,

contra su esperanza
no muy bien seguros;

de cuyo tardarse
nació aquel disgusto que lanzó del templo
al varón más justo;
santa tierra estéril,

que al cabo produjo

toda la abundancia
que sustenta el mundo;
casa de moneda,

do se forjó el cuño que dio a Dios la forma que como hombre tuvo;

madre de una hija

en quien quiso y pudo

mostrar Dios grandezas sobre humano curso.

Por vos y por ella
sois, Ana, el refugio

do van por remedio
nuestros infortunios.
En cierta manera,
tenéis, no lo dudo,
sobre el Nieto, imperio piadoso y justo.

A ser comunera
del alcázar sumo,

fueran mil parientes
con vos de consuno.
¡Qué hija, y qué nieto, y qué yerno! Al punto,
a ser causa justa,
cantárades triunfos.
Pero vos, humilde,

fuistes el estudio

donde vuestra Hija
hizo humildes cursos;
y agora a su lado,
a Dios el más junto, gozáis de la alteza
que apenas barrunto.

El cantar de Preciosa fue para admirar a cuantos la escuchaban. Unos decían: «¡Dios te bendiga la muchacha!». Otros: «¡Lástima es que esta mozuela sea gitana! En verdad, en verdad, que merecía ser hija de un gran señor». Otros había más groseros, que decían: «¡Dejen crecer a la rapaza, que ella hará de las suyas! ¡A fe que se va añudando en ella gentil red barredera para pescar corazones!» Otro, más humano, más basto y más modorro, viéndola andar tan ligera en el baile, le dijo: «¡A ello, hija, a ello! ¡Andad, amores, y pisad el polvito atán menudito!» Y ella respondió, sin dejar el baile: «¡Y pisarélo yo atán menudó!»

Acabáronse las vísperas y la fiesta de Santa Ana, y quedó Preciosa algo cansada, pero tan celebrada de hermosa, de aguda y de discreta y de bailadora, que a corrillos se hablaba della en toda la Corte. De allí a quince días, volvió a Madrid con otras tres muchachas, con sonajas y con un baile nuevo, todas apercebidas de romances y de cantarcillos alegres, pero todos honestos; que no consentía Preciosa que las que fuesen en su compañía cantasen cantares descompuestos, ni ella los cantó jamás, y muchos miraron en ello y la tuvieron en mucho.

Nunca se apartaba della la gitana vieja, hecha su Argos, temerosa no se la despabilasen y traspusiesen; llamábala nieta, y ella la tenía por abuela. Pusiéronse a bailar a la sombra en la calle de Toledo, y de los que las venían siguiendo se hizo luego un gran corro; y, en tanto que bailaban, la vieja pedía limosna a los circunstantes, y llovían en ella ochavos y cuartos como piedras a tablado; que también la hermosura tiene fuerza de despertar la caridad dormida.

Acabado el baile, dijo Preciosa:

-Si me dan cuatro cuartos, les cantaré un romance yo sola, lindísimo en extremo, que trata de cuando la Reina nuestra señora Margarita salió a misa de parida en Valladolid y fue a San Llorente; dígoles que es famoso, y compuesto por un poeta de los del número, como capitán del batallón.

Apenas hubo dicho esto, cuando casi todos los que en la rueda estaban dijeron a voces:

-¡Cántale, Preciosa, y ves aquí mis cuatro cuartos!

Y así granizaron sobre ella cuartos, que la vieja no se daba manos a cogerlos. Hecho, pues, su agosto y su vendimia, repicó Preciosa sus sonajas y, al tono correntío y loquesco, cantó el siguiente romance:

-Salió a misa de parida la mayor reina de Europa, en el valor y en el nombre rica y admirable joya.
Como los ojos se lleva,

se lleva las almas todas de cuantos miran y admiran su devoción y su pompa.

Y, para mostrar que es parte del cielo en la tierra toda, a un lado lleva el sol de Austria, al otro, la tierna Aurora.

A sus espaldas le sigue un Lucero que a deshora salió, la noche del día que el cielo y la tierra lloran.

Y si en el cielo hay estrellas que lucientes carros forman, en otros carros su cielo

vivas estrellas adornan.
Aquí el anciano Saturno la barba pule y remoja, y, aunque es tardo, va ligero;
que el placer cura la gota.
El dios parlero va en lenguas lisonjeras y amorosas,

y Cupido en cifras varias, que rubíes y perlas bordan.
Allí va el furioso Marte en la persona curiosa

de más de un gallardo joven, que de su sombra se asombra.
Junto a la casa del Sol va Júpiter; que no hay cosa difícil a la privanza fundada en prudentes obras.
Va la Luna en las mejillas de una y otra humana diosa; Venus casta, en la belleza de las que este cielo forman.
Pequeñuelos Ganimedes
cruzan, van, vuelven y tornan por el cinto tachonado

de esta esfera milagrosa.
Y, para que todo admire
y todo asombre, no hay cosa que de liberal no pase hasta el extremo de pródiga.

Milán con sus ricas telas allí va en vista curiosa;
las Indias con sus diamantes, y Arabia con sus aromas.

Con los mal intencionados va la envidia mordedora, y la bondad en los pechos
de la lealtad española.
La alegría universal,
huyendo de la congoja,
calles y plazas discurre, descompuesta y casi loca.

A mil mudas bendiciones abre el silencio la boca,

y repiten los muchachos lo que los hombres entonan.
Cuál dice: «Fecunda vid, crece, sube, abraza y toca el olmo felice tuyo que mil siglos te haga sombra para gloria de ti misma, para bien de España y honra, para arrimo de la Iglesia, para asombro de Mahoma».

Otra lengua clama y dice: «Vivas, ¡oh blanca paloma!, que nos has de dar por crías águilas de dos coronas, para ahuyentar de los aires las de rapiña furiosas;

para cubrir con sus alas
a las virtudes medrosas».
Otra, más discreta y grave, más aguda y más curiosa dice, vertiendo alegría por los ojos y la boca: «Esta perla que nos diste, nácar de Austria, única y sola, ¡qué de máquinas que rompe!, ¡qué de disignios que corta!, ¡qué de esperanzas que infunde!, ¡qué de deseos mal logra!, ¡qué de temores aumenta!, ¡qué de preñados aborta!» En esto, se llegó al templo del Fénix santo que en Roma fue abrasado, y quedó vivo en la fama y en la gloria.

A la imagen de la vida,
a la del cielo Señora,
a la que por ser humilde las estrellas pisa agora, a la Madre y Virgen junto, a la Hija y a la Esposa de Dios, hincada de hinojos, Margarita así razona:
«Lo que me has dado te doy, mano siempre dadivosa;
que a do falta el favor tuyo, siempre la miseria sobra.

Las primicias de mis frutos te ofrezco, Virgen hermosa:
tales cuales son las mira, recibe, ampara y mejora.
A su padre te encomiendo, que, humano Atlante, se encorva al peso de tantos reinos y de climas tan remotas.

Sé que el corazón del Rey en las manos de Dios mora, y sé que puedes con Dios cuanto quieres piadosa».
Acabada esta oración,

otra semejante entonan

himnos y voces que muestran que está en el suelo la Gloria.

Acabados los oficios
con reales ceremonias,

volvió a su punto este cielo
y esfera maravillosa.

Apenas acabó Preciosa su romance, cuando del ilustre auditorio y grave senado que la oía, de muchas se formó una voz sola que dijo:

-¡Torna a cantar, Preciosica, que no faltarán cuartos como tierra!

Más de docientas personas estaban mirando el baile y escuchando el canto de las gitanas, y en la fuga dél acertó a pasar por allí uno de los tinientes de la villa, y, viendo tanta gente junta, preguntó qué era; y fuele respondido que estaban escuchando a la gitanilla hermosa, que cantaba. Llegóse el tiniente, que era curioso, y escuchó un rato, y, por no ir contra su gravedad, no escuchó el romance hasta la fin; y, habiéndole parecido por todo extremo bien la gitanilla, mandó a un paje suyo dijese a la gitana vieja que al anochecer fuese a su casa con las gitanillas, que quería que las oyese doña Clara, su mujer. Hízolo así el paje, y la vieja dijo que sí iría.

Acabaron el baile y el canto, y mudaron lugar; y en esto llegó un paje muy bien aderezado a Preciosa, y, dándole un papel doblado, le dijo:

-Preciosica, canta el romance que aquí va, porque es muy bueno, y yo te daré otros de cuando en cuando, con que cobres fama de la mejor romancera del mundo.

-Eso aprenderé yo de muy buena gana -respondió Preciosa-; y mire, señor, que no me deje de dar los romances que dice, con tal condición que sean honestos; y si quisiere que se los pague, concertémonos por docenas, y docena cantada y docena pagada; porque pensar que le tengo de pagar adelantado es pensar lo imposible.

-Para papel, siquiera, que me dé la señora Preciosica -dijo el paje-, estaré contento; y más, que el romance que no saliere bueno y honesto, no ha de entrar en cuenta.

-A la mía quede el escogerlos -respondió Preciosa.

Y con esto, se fueron la calle adelante, y desde una reja llamaron unos caballeros a las gitanas. Asomóse Preciosa a la reja, que era baja, y vio en una sala muy bien aderezada y muy fresca muchos caballeros que, unos paseándose y otros jugando a diversos juegos, se entretenían.

-¿Quiérenme dar barato, cenores? -dijo Preciosa (que, como gitana, hablaba ceceoso, y esto es artificio en ellas, que no naturaleza).

A la voz de Preciosa y a su rostro, dejaron los que jugaban el juego y el paseo los paseantes; y los unos y los otros acudieron a la reja por verla, que ya tenían noticia della, y dijeron: -Entren, entren las gitanillas, que aquí les daremos barato.

-Caro sería ello -respondió Preciosa-si nos pellizcacen.

-No, a fe de caballeros -respondió uno-; bien puedes entrar, niña, segura, que nadie te tocará a la vira de tu zapato; no, por el hábito que traigo en el pecho.

Y púsose la mano sobre uno de Calatrava.

-Si tú quieres entrar, Preciosa -dijo una de las tres gitanillas que iban con ella-, entra en hora buena; que yo no pienso entrar adonde hay tantos hombres.

-Mira, Cristina -respondió Preciosa-: de lo que te has de guardar es de un hombre solo y a solas, y no de tantos juntos; porque antes el ser muchos quita el miedo y el recelo de ser ofendidas. Advierte, Cristinica, y está cierta de una cosa: que la mujer que se determina a ser honrada, entre un ejército de soldados lo puede ser. Verdad es que es bueno huir de las ocasiones, pero han de ser de las secretas y no de las públicas.

-Entremos, Preciosa -dijo Cristina-, que tú sabes más que un sabio.

Animólas la gitana vieja, y entraron; y apenas hubo entrado Preciosa, cuando el caballero del hábito vio el papel que traía en el seno, y llegándose a ella se le tomó, y dijo Preciosa: -¡Y no me le tome, señor, que es un romance que me acaban de dar ahora, que aún no le he leído!

-Y ¿sabes tú leer, hija? -dijo uno.

-Y escribir -respondió la vieja-; que a mi nieta hela criado yo como si fuera hija de un letrado.

Abrió el caballero el papel y vio que venía dentro dél un escudo de oro, y dijo:

-En verdad, Preciosa, que trae esta carta el porte dentro; toma este escudo que en el romance viene.

-¡Basta! -dijo Preciosa-, que me ha tratado de pobre el poeta, pues cierto que es más milagro darme a mí un poeta un escudo que yo recibirle; si con esta añadidura han de venir sus romances, traslade todo el Romancero general y envíemelos uno a uno, que yo les tentaré el pulso, y si vinieren duros, seré yo blanda en recibillos.

Admirados quedaron los que oían a la gitánica, así de su discreción como del donaire con que hablaba.

-Lea, señor -dijo ella-, y lea alto; veremos si es tan discreto ese poeta como es liberal.

Y el caballero leyó así:

-Gitana, que de hermosa
te pueden dar parabienes:
por lo que de piedra tienes te llama el mundo Preciosa.

Desta verdad me asegura esto, como en ti verás;
que no se apartan jamás
la esquiveza y la hermosura.

Si como en valor subido vas creciendo en arrogancia, no le arriendo la ganancia a la edad en que has nacido; que un basilisco se cría

en ti, que mate mirando, y un imperio que, aunque blando, nos parezca tiranía.
Entre pobres y aduares, ¿cómo nació tal belleza?

O ¿cómo crió tal pieza
el humilde Manzanares?
Por esto será famoso

al par del Tajo dorado

y por Preciosapreciado más que el Ganges caudaloso.
Dices la buenaventura,
y dasla mala contino;
que no van por un camino tu intención y tu hermosura.

Porque en el peligro fuerte de mirarte o contemplarte tu intención va a desculparte, y tu hermosura a dar muerte.

Dicen que son hechiceras todas las de tu nación, pero tus hechizos son

de más fuerzas y más veras;

pues por llevar los despojos de todos cuantos te ven, haces, ¡oh niña!, que estén
tus hechizos en tus ojos.
En sus fuerzas te adelantas, pues bailando nos admiras,
y nos matas si nos miras,
y nos encantas si cantas.
De cien mil modos hechizas:
hables, calles, cantes, mires;
o te acerques, o retires,
el fuego de amor atizas.
Sobre el más esento pecho tienes mando y señorío,
de lo que es testigo el mío,
de tu imperio satisfecho.

Preciosa joya de amor,

esto humildemente escribe el que por ti muere y vive, pobre, aunque humilde amador.

-En «pobre» acaba el último verso -dijo a esta sazón Preciosa-: ¡mala señal! Nunca los enamorados han de decir que son pobres, porque a los principios, a mi parecer, la pobreza es muy enemiga del amor.

-¿Quién te enseña eso, rapaza? -dijo uno.

-¿Quién me lo ha de enseñar? -respondió Preciosa-. ¿No tengo yo mi alma en mi cuerpo? ¿No tengo ya quince años? Y no soy manca, ni renca, ni estropeada del entendimiento. Los ingenios de las gitanas van por otro norte que los de las demás gentes: siempre se adelantan a sus años; no hay gitano necio, ni gitana lerda; que, como el sustentar su vida consiste en ser agudos, astutos y embusteros, despabilan el ingenio a cada paso, y no dejan que críe moho en ninguna manera. ¿Veen estas muchachas, mis compañeras, que están callando y parecen bobas? Pues éntrenles el dedo en la boca y tíntenlas las cordales, y verán lo que verán. No hay muchacha de doce que no sepa lo que de veinte y cinco, porque tienen por maestros y preceptores al diablo y al uso, que les enseña en una hora lo que habían de aprender en un año.

Con esto que la gitanilla decía, tenía suspensos a los oyentes, y los que jugaban le dieron barato, y aun los que no jugaban. Cogió la hucha de la vieja treinta reales, y más rica y más alegre que una Pascua de Flores, antecogió sus corderas y fuese en casa del señor teniente, quedando que otro día volvería con su manada a dar contento aquellos tan liberales señores.

Ya tenía aviso la señora doña Clara, mujer del señor teniente, cómo habían de ir a su casa las gitanillas, y estábanlas esperando como el agua de mayo ella y sus doncellas y dueñas, con las de otra señora vecina suya, que todas se juntaron para ver a Preciosa. Y apenas hubieron entrado las gitanas, cuando entre las demás resplandeció Preciosa como la luz de una antorcha entre otras luces menores. Y así, corrieron todas a ella: unas la abrazaban, otras la miraban, éstas la bendecían, aquéllas la alababan. Doña Clara decía: -¡Éste sí que se puede decir cabello de oro! ¡Éstos sí que son ojos de esmeraldas!

La señora su vecina la desmenuzaba toda, y hacía pepitoria de todos sus miembros y coyunturas. Y, llegando a alabar un pequeño hoyo que Preciosa tenía en la barba, dijo: -¡Ay, qué hoyo! En este hoyo han de tropezar cuantos ojos le miraren.

Oyó esto un escudero de brazo de la señora doña Clara, que allí estaba, de lengua barba y largos años, y dijo:

-¿Ése llama vuesa merced hoyo, señora mía? Pues yo sé poco de hoyos, o ése no es hoyo, sino sepultura de deseos vivos. ¡Por Dios, tan linda es la gitanilla que hecha de plata o de alcorza no podría ser mejor! ¿Sabes decir la buenaventura, niña?

-De tres o cuatro maneras -respondió Preciosa.

-¿Y eso más? -dijo doña Clara-. Por vida del tiniente, mi señor, que me la has de decir, niña de oro, y niña de plata, y niña de perlas, y niña de carbuncos, y niña del cielo, que es lo más que puedo decir.

-Denle, denle la palma de la mano a la niña, y con qué haga la cruz -dijo la vieja-, y verán qué de cosas les dice; que sabe más que un doctor de melecina.

Echó mano a la faldriquera la señora tenienta, y halló que no tenía blanca. Pidió un cuarto a sus criadas, y ninguna le tuvo, ni la señora vecina tampoco. Lo cual visto por Preciosa, dijo: -Todas las cruces, en cuanto cruces, son buenas; pero las de plata o de oro son mejores; y el señalar la cruz en la palma de la mano con moneda de cobre, sepan vuestas mercedes que menoscaba la buenaventura, a lo menos la mía; y así, tengo afición a hacer la cruz primera con algún escudo de oro, o con algún real de a ocho, o, por lo menos, de a cuatro, que soy como los sacristanes: que cuando hay buena ofrenda, se regocijan.

-Donaire tienes, niña, por tu vida -dijo la señora vecina.

Y, volviéndose al escudero, le dijo:

-Vos, señor Contreras, ¿tendréis a mano algún real de a cuatro? Dádmele, que, en viniendo el doctor, mi marido, os le volveré.

-Sí tengo -respondió Contreras-, pero téngole empeñado en veinte y dos maravedís que cené anoche. Dénmelos, que yo iré por él en volandas.

-No tenemos entre todas un cuarto -dijo doña Clara-, ¿y pedís veinte y dos maravedís? Andad, Contreras, que siempre fuistes impertinente.

Una doncella de las presentes, viendo la esterilidad de la casa, dijo a Preciosa:

-Niña, ¿hará algo al caso que se haga la cruz con un dedal de plata?

-Antes -respondió Preciosa-, se hacen las cruces mejores del mundo con dedales de plata, como sean muchos.

-Uno tengo yo -replicó la doncella-; si éste basta, hele aquí, con condición que también se me ha de decir a mí la buenaventura.

-¿Por un dedal tantas buenasventuras? -dijo la gitana vieja-. Nieta, acaba presto, que se hace noche.

Tomó Preciosa el dedal y la mano de la señora tenienta, y dijo:

-Hermosita, hermosa,
la de las manos de plata, más te quiere tu marido que el Rey de las Alpujarras.
Eres paloma sin hiel,

pero a veces eres brava como leona de Orán,
o como tigre de Ocaña.
Pero en un tras, en un tris, el enojo se te pasa,
y quedas como alfinique,
o como cordera mansa.

Riñes mucho y comes poco:
algo celosita andas;
que es juguetón el tiniente,
y quiere arrimar la vara.
Cuando doncella, te quiso uno de una buena cara;
que mal hayan los terceros,
que los gustos desbaratan.
Si a dicha tú fueras monja, hoy tu convento mandarás,

porque tienes de abadesa más de cuatrocientas rayas.
No te lo quiero decir...;
pero poco importa, vaya:
enviudarás, y otra vez,
y otras dos, serás casada.
No llores, señora mía;

que no siempre las gitanas decimos el Evangelio;
no llores, señora, acaba.

Como te mueras primero que el señor tiniente, basta para remediar el daño
de la viudez que amenaza.
Has de heredar, y muy presto, hacienda en mucha abundancia;
tendrás un hijo canónigo,
la iglesia no se señala;
de Toledo no es posible.

Una hija rubia y blanca tendrás, que si es religiosa, también vendrá a ser perlada.
Si tu esposo no se muere dentro de cuatro semanas, verásle corregidor

de Burgos o Salamanca.
Un lunar tienes, ¡qué lindo!
¡Ay Jesús, qué luna clara!
¡Qué sol, que allá en los antípodas oscuros valles aclara!
Más de dos ciegos por verle dieran más de cuatro blancas.
¡Agora sí es la risica!
¡Ay, que bien haya esa gracia!
Guárdate de las caídas, principalmente de espaldas, que suelen ser peligrosas en las principales damas.

Cosas hay más que decirte;
si para el viernes me aguardas, las oirás, que son de gusto,
y algunas hay de desgracias.

Acabó su buenaventura Preciosa, y con ella encendió el deseo de todas las circunstantes en querer saber la suya; y así se lo rogaron todas, pero ella las remitió para el viernes venidero, prometiéndole que tendrían reales de plata para hacer las cruces.

En esto vino el señor tiniente, a quien contaron maravillas de la gitanilla; él las hizo bailar un poco, y confirmó por verdaderas y bien dadas las alabanzas que a Preciosa habían dado; y, poniendo la mano en la faldriquera, hizo señal de querer darle algo, y, habiéndola espulgado, y sacudido, y rascado muchas veces, al cabo sacó la mano vacía y dijo: -¡Por Dios, que no tengo blanca! Dadle vos, doña Clara, un real a Preciosica, que yo os le daré después.

-¡Bueno es eso, señor, por cierto! ¡Sí, ahí está el real de manifiesto! No hemos tenido entre todas nosotras un cuarto para hacer la señal de la cruz, ¿y quiere que tengamos un real?

-Pues dadle alguna valoncica vuestra, o alguna cosita; que otro día nos volverá a ver Preciosa, y la regalaremos mejor.

A lo cual dijo doña Clara:

-Pues, porque otra vez venga, no quiero dar nada ahora a Preciosa.

Antes, si no me dan nada -dijo Preciosa-, nunca más volveré acá. Mas sí volveré, a servir a tan principales señores, pero trairé tragado que no me han de dar nada, y ahorraréme la fatiga del esperallo. Coheche vuesa merced, señor tiniente; coheche y tendrá dineros, y no haga usos nuevos, que morirá de hambre. Mire, señora: por ahí he oído decir (y, aunque moza, entiendo que no son buenos dichos) que de los oficios se ha de sacar dineros para pagar las condenaciones de las residencias y para pretender otros cargos.

-Así lo dicen y lo hacen los desalmados -replicó el teniente-, pero el juez que da buena residencia no tendrá que pagar condenación alguna, y el haber usado bien su oficio será el valedor para que le den otro.

-Habla vuesa merced muy a lo santo, señor teniente -respondió Preciosa;- ándese a eso y cortarémosle de los harapos para reliquias.

-Mucho sabes, Preciosa -dijo el tiniente-. Calla, que yo daré traza que sus Majestades te vean, porque eres pieza de reyes.

-Querránme para truhana -respondió Preciosa-, y yo no lo sabré ser, y todo irá perdido. Si me quisiesen para discreta, aún llevarme hían, pero en algunos palacios más medran los truhanes que los discretos. Yo me hallo bien con ser gitana y pobre, y corra la suerte por donde el cielo quisiere.

-Ea, niña -dijo la gitana vieja-, no hables más, que has hablado mucho, y sabes más de lo que yo te he enseñado. No te asotiles tanto, que te despuntarás; habla de aquello que tus años permiten, y no te metas en altanerías, que no hay ninguna que no amenace caída.

-¡El diablo tienen estas gitanas en el cuerpo! -dijo a esta sazón el tiniente.

Despidiéronse las gitanas, y, al irse, dijo la doncella del dedal:

-Preciosa, dime la buenaventura, o vuélveme mi dedal, que no me queda con qué hacer labor.

-Señora doncella -respondió Preciosa-, haga cuenta que se la he dicho y provéase de otro dedal, o no haga vainillas hasta el viernes, que yo volveré y le diré más venturas y aventuras que las que tiene un libro de caballerías.

Fuéronse y juntáronse con las muchas labradoras que a la hora de las avermarías suelen salir de Madrid para volverse a sus aldeas; y entre otras vuelven muchas, con quien siempre se acompañaban las gitanas, y volvían seguras; porque la gitana vieja vivía en continuo temor no le salteasen a su Preciosa.

Sucedió, pues, que la mañana de un día que volvían a Madrid a coger la garrama con las demás gitanillas, en un valle pequeño que está obra de quinientos pasos antes que se llegue a la villa, vieron un mancebo gallardo y ricamente aderezado de camino. La espada y daga que traía eran, como decirse suele, una ascua de oro; sombrero con rico cintillo y con plumas de diversas colores adornado. Repararon las gitanas en viéndole, y pusiéronsele a mirar muy de espacio, admiradas de que a tales horas un tan hermoso mancebo estuviese en tal lugar, a pie y solo.

Él se llegó a ellas, y, hablando con la gitana mayor, le dijo:

-Por vida vuestra, amiga, que me hagáis placer que vos y Preciosa me oyáis aquí aparte dos palabras, que serán de vuestro provecho.

-Como no nos desviemos mucho, ni nos tardemos mucho, sea en buen hora -respondió la vieja.

Y, llamando a Preciosa, se desviaron de las otras obra de veinte pasos; y así, en pie, como estaban, el mancebo les dijo:

-Yo vengo de manera rendido a la discreción y belleza de Preciosa, que después de haberme hecho mucha fuerza para escusar llegar a este punto, al cabo he quedado más rendido y más imposibilitado de escusallo. Yo, señoras mías

(que siempre os he de dar este nombre, si el cielo mi pretensión favorece), soy caballero, como lo puede mostrar este hábito -y, apartando el herreruelo, descubrió en el pecho uno de los más calificados que hay en España-; soy hijo de Fulano -que por buenos respectos aquí no se declara su nombre-; estoy debajo de su tutela y amparo, soy hijo único, y el que espera un razonable mayorazgo. Mi padre está aquí en la Corte pretendiendo un cargo, y ya está consultado, y tiene casi ciertas esperanzas de salir con él. Y, con ser de la calidad y nobleza que os he referido, y de la que casi se os debe ya de ir trasluciendo, con todo eso, quisiera ser un gran señor para levantar a mi grandeza la humildad de Preciosa, haciéndola mi igual y mi señora. Yo no la pretendo para burlalla, ni en las veras del amor que la tengo puede caber género de burla alguna; sólo quiero servirla del modo que ella más gustare: su voluntad es la mía. Para con ella es de cera mi alma, donde podrá imprimir lo que quisiere; y para conservarlo y guardarlo no será como impreso en cera, sino como esculpido en mármoles, cuya dureza se opone a la duración de los tiempos. Si creéis esta verdad, no admitirá ningún desmayo mi esperanza; pero si no me creéis, siempre me tendrá temeroso vuestra duda. Mi nombre es éste -y díjosele-; el de mi padre ya os le he dicho. La casa donde vive es en tal calle, y tiene tales y tales señas; vecinos tiene de quien podréis informaros, y aun de los que no son vecinos también, que no es tan oscura la calidad y el nombre de mi padre y el mío, que no le sepan en los patios de palacio, y aun en toda la Corte. Cien escudos traigo aquí en oro para daros en arra y señal de lo que pienso daros, porque no ha de negar la hacienda el que da el alma.

En tanto que el caballero esto decía, le estaba mirando Preciosa atentamente, y sin duda que no le debieron de parecer mal ni sus razones ni su talle; y, volviéndose a la vieja, le dijo: -Perdóneme, abuela, de que me tomo licencia para responder a este tan enamorado señor.

-Responde lo que quisieres, nieta -respondió la vieja-, que yo sé que tienes discreción para todo.

Y Preciosa dijo:

-Yo, señor caballero, aunque soy gitana pobre y humildemente nacida, tengo un cierto espiritallo fantástico acá dentro, que a grandes cosas me lleva. A mí ni me mueven promesas, ni me desmoronan dádivas, ni me inclinan sumisiones, ni me espantan finezas enamoradas; y, aunque de quince años (que, según la cuenta de mi abuela, para este San Miguel los haré), soy ya vieja en los pensamientos y alcanzo más de aquello que mi edad promete, más por mi buen natural que por la experiencia. Pero, con lo uno o con lo otro, sé que las pasiones amorosas en los recién enamorados son como ímpetus indiscretos que hacen salir a la voluntad de sus quicios; la cual, atropellando inconvenientes, desatinadamente se arroja tras su deseo, y, pensando dar con la gloria de sus ojos, da con el infierno de sus pesadumbres. Si alcanza lo que desea, mengua el deseo con la posesión de la cosa deseada, y quizá, abriéndose entonces los ojos del entendimiento, se ve ser bien que se aborrezca lo que antes se adoraba. Este temor engendra en mí un recato tal, que ningunas palabras creo y de muchas obras dudo. Una sola joya tengo, que la estimo en más que a la vida, que es la de mi entereza y virginidad, y no la tengo de vender a precio de promesas ni dádivas, porque, en fin, será vendida, y si puede ser comprada, será de muy poca estima; ni me la han de llevar trazas ni embelecocos: antes pienso irme con ella a la sepultura, y quizá al cielo, que ponerla en peligro que quimeras y fantasías soñadas la embistan o manoseen. Flor es la de la virginidad que, a ser posible, aun con la imaginación no había de dejar ofenderse. Cortada la rosa del rosal, ¡con qué brevedad y facilidad se marchita! Éste la toca, aquél la huele, el otro la deshoja, y, finalmente, entre las manos rústicas se deshace. Si vos, señor, por sola esta prenda venís, no la habéis de llevar sino atada con las ligaduras y lazos del matrimonio; que si la virginidad se ha de inclinar, ha de ser a este santo yugo, que entonces no sería perderla, sino emplearla en ferias que felices ganancias prometen. Si quisiéredes ser mi esposo, yo lo seré vuestra, pero han de preceder muchas condiciones y averiguaciones primero. Primero tengo de saber si sois el que decís; luego, hallando esta verdad, habéis de dejar la casa de vuestros padres y la habéis de trocar con nuestros ranchos; y, tomando el traje de gitano, habéis de cursar dos años en nuestras escuelas, en el cual tiempo me satisfaré yo de vuestra condición, y vos de la mía; al cabo del cual, si vos os contentáredes de mí, y yo de vos, me entregaré por vuestra esposa; pero hasta entonces tengo de ser vuestra hermana en el trato, y vuestra humilde en serviros. Y habéis de considerar que en el tiempo deste noviciado podría ser que cobrásedes la vista, que ahora debéis de tener perdida, o, por lo menos, turbada, y viésedes que os convenía huir de lo que ahora seguís con tanto ahínco. Y, cobrando la libertad perdida, con un buen arrepentimiento se perdona cualquier culpa. Si con estas condiciones queréis entrar a ser soldado de nuestra milicia, en vuestra mano está, pues, faltando alguna dellas, no habéis de tocar un dedo de la mía.

Pasmóse el mozo a las razones de Preciosa, y púsose como embelesado, mirando al suelo, dando muestras que consideraba lo que responder debía. Viendo lo cual Preciosa, tornó a decirle: -No es este caso de tan poco momento, que en los que aquí nos ofrece el tiempo pueda ni deba resolverse. Volveos, señor, a la villa, y considerad de espacio lo que viéredes que más os convenga, y en este mismo lugar me podéis hablar todas las fiestas que quisiéredes, al ir o venir de Madrid.

A lo cual respondió el gentilhombre:

-Cuando el cielo me dispuso para quererte, Preciosa mía, determiné de hacer por ti cuanto tu voluntad acertase a pedirme, aunque nunca cupo en mi pensamiento que me habías de pedir lo que me pides; pero, pues es tu gusto que el mío al tuyo se ajuste y acomode, cuéntame por gitano desde luego, y haz de mí todas las experiencias que más quisieres; que siempre me has de hallar el mismo que ahora te signifíco. Mira cuándo quieres que mude el traje, que yo querría que fuese luego; que, con ocasión de ir a Flandes, engañaré a mis padres y sacaré dineros para gastar algunos días, y serán hasta ocho los que podré tardar en acomodar mi partida. A los que fueren conmigo yo los sabré engañar de modo que salga con mi determinación. Lo que te pido es (si es que ya puedo tener atrevimiento de pedirte y suplicarte algo) que, si no es hoy, donde te puedes informar de mi calidad y de la de mis padres, que no vayas más a Madrid; porque no querría que algunas de las demasiadas ocasiones que allí pueden ofrecerse me saltease la buena ventura que tanto me cuesta.

-Eso no, señor galán -respondió Preciosa-: sepa que conmigo ha de andar siempre la libertad desenfadada, sin que la ahogue ni turbe la pesadumbre de los celos; y entienda que no la tomaré tan demasiada, que no se eche de ver desde bien lejos que llega mi honestidad a mi desenvoltura; y en el primero cargo en que quiero estaros es en el de la confianza que habéis de hacer de mí. Y mirad que los amantes que entran pidiendo celos, o son simples o confiados.

-Satanás tienes en tu pecho, muchacha -dijo a esta sazón la gitana vieja-: ¡mira que dices cosas que no las diría un colegial de Salamanca! Tú sabes de amor, tú sabes de celos, tú de confianzas: ¿cómo es esto?, que me tienes loca, y te estoy escuchando como a una persona espiritada, que habla latín sin saberlo.

-Calle, abuela -respondió Preciosa-, y sepa que todas las cosas que me oye son nonada, y son de burlas, para las muchas que de más veras me quedan en el pecho.

Todo cuanto Preciosa decía y toda la discreción que mostraba era añadir leña al fuego que ardía en el pecho del enamorado caballero. Finalmente, quedaron en que de allí a ocho días se verían en aquel mismo lugar, donde él vendría a dar cuenta del término en que sus negocios estaban, y ellas habrían tenido tiempo de informarse de la verdad que les había dicho. Sacó el mozo una bolsilla de brocado, donde dijo que iban cien escudos de oro, y dióselos a la vieja; pero no quería Preciosa que los tomase en ninguna manera, a quien la gitana dijo: -Calla, niña, que la mejor señal que este señor ha dado de estar rendido es haber entregado las armas en señal de rendimiento; y el dar, en cualquiera ocasión que sea, siempre fue indicio de generoso pecho. Y acuérdate de aquel refrán que dice: «Al cielo rogando, y con el mazo dando». Y más, que no quiero yo que por mí pierdan las gitanas el nombre que por luengos siglos tienen adquerido de codiciosas y aprovechadas. ¿Cien escudos quieres tú que deseche, Preciosa, y de oro en oro, que pueden andar cosidos en el alforza de una saya que no valga dos reales, y tenerlos allí como quien tiene un juro sobre las yerbas de Estremadura? Y si alguno de nuestros hijos, nietos o parientes cayere, por alguna desgracia, en manos de la justicia, ¿habrá favor tan bueno que llegue a la oreja del juez y del escribano como destos escudos, si llegan a sus bolsas? Tres veces por tres delitos diferentes me he visto casi puesta en el asno para ser azotada, y de la una me libró un jarro de plata, y de la otra una sarta de perlas, y de la otra cuarenta reales de a ocho que había trocado por cuartos, dando veinte reales más por el cambio. Mira, niña, que andamos en oficio muy peligroso y lleno de tropiezos y de ocasiones forzosas, y no hay defensas que más presto nos amparen y socorran como las armas invencibles del gran Filipo: no hay pasar adelante de su Plus ultra. Por un doblón de dos caras se nos muestra alegre la triste del procurador y de todos los ministros de la muerte, que son arpías de nosotras, las pobres gitanas, y más precian pelarnos y desollarnos a nosotras que a un salteador de caminos; jamás, por más rotas y desastradas que nos vean, nos tienen por pobres; que dicen que somos como los jubones de los gabachos de Belmonte: rotos y grasientos, y llenos de doblones.

-Por vida suya, abuela, que no diga más; que lleva término de alegar tantas leyes, en favor de quedarse con el dinero, que agote las de los emperadores: quédese con ellos, y buen provecho le hagan, y plega a Dios que los entierre en sepultura donde jamás tornen a ver la claridad del sol, ni haya necesidad que la vean. A estas nuestras compañeras será forzoso darles algo, que ha mucho que nos esperan, y ya deben de estar enfadadas.

-Así verán ellas -replicó la vieja-moneda déstas, como veen al Turco agora. Este buen señor verá si le ha quedado alguna moneda de plata, o cuartos, y los repartirá entre ellas, que con poco quedarán contentas.

-Sí traigo -dijo el galán.

Y sacó de la faldriquera tres reales de a ocho, que repartió entre las tres gitanillas, con que quedaron más alegres y más satisfechas que suele quedar un autor de comedias cuando, en competencia de otro, le suelen retular por la esquinas: «Víctor, Víctor».

En resolución, concertaron, como se ha dicho, la venida de allí a ocho días, y que se había de llamar, cuando fuese gitano, Andrés Caballero; porque también había gitanos entre ellos deste apellido.

No tuvo atrevimiento Andrés (que así le llamaremos de aquí adelante) de abrazar a Preciosa; antes, enviándole con la vista el alma, sin ella, si así decirse puede, las dejó y se entró en Madrid; y ellas, contentísimas, hicieron lo mismo. Preciosa, algo aficionada, más con benevolencia que con amor, de la gallarda disposición de Andrés, ya deseaba informarse si era el que había dicho. Entró en Madrid, y, a pocas calles andadas, encontró con el paje poeta de las coplas y el escudo; y cuando él la vio, se llegó a ella, diciendo: -Vengas en buen hora, Preciosa: ¿leíste por ventura las coplas que te di el otro día?

A lo que Preciosa respondió:

-Primero que le responda palabra, me ha de decir una verdad, por vida de lo que más quiere.

-Conjuro es ése -respondió el paje-que, aunque el decirla me costase la vida, no la negaré en ninguna manera.

-Pues la verdad que quiero que me diga -dijo Preciosa-es si por ventura es poeta.

-A serlo -replicó el paje-, forzosamente había de ser por ventura. Pero has de saber, Preciosa, que ese nombre de poeta muy pocos le merecen; y así, yo no lo soy, sino un aficionado a la poesía. Y para lo que he menester, no voy a pedir ni a buscar versos ajenos: los que te di son míos, y éstos que te doy agora también; mas no por esto soy poeta, ni Dios lo quiera.

-¿Tan malo es ser poeta? -replicó Preciosa.

-No es malo -dijo el paje-, pero el ser poeta a solas no lo tengo por muy bueno. Hase de usar de la poesía como de una joya preciosísima, cuyo dueño no la trae cada día, ni la muestra a todas gentes, ni a cada paso, sino cuando convenga y sea razón que la muestre. La poesía es una bellísima doncella, casta, honesta, discreta, aguda, retirada, y que se contiene en los límites de la discreción más alta. Es amiga de la soledad, las fuentes la entretienen, los prados la consuelan, los árboles la desenojan, las flores la alegran, y, finalmente, deleita y enseña a cuantos con ella comunican.

-Con todo eso -respondió Preciosa-, he oído decir que es pobrísima y que tiene algo de mendiga.

-Antes es al revés -dijo el paje-, porque no hay poeta que no sea rico, pues todos viven contentos con su estado: filosofía que la alcanzan pocos. Pero, ¿qué te ha movido, Preciosa, a hacer esta pregunta?

-Hame movido -respondió Preciosa-porque, como yo tengo a todos o los más poetas por pobres, causóme maravilla aquel escudo de oro que me distes entre vuestros versos envuelto; mas agora que sé que no sois poeta, sino aficionado de la poesía, podría ser que fuédeses rico, aunque lo dudo, a causa que por aquella parte que os toca de hacer coplas se ha de desaguar cuanta hacienda tuviéredes; que no hay poeta, según dicen, que sepa conservar la hacienda que tiene ni granjear la que no tiene.

-Pues yo no soy dósos -replicó el paje-: versos hago, y no soy rico ni pobre; y sin sentirlo ni descontarlo, como hacen los ginoveses sus convites, bien puedo dar un escudo, y dos, a quien yo quisiere. Tomad, preciosa perla, este segundo papel y este escudo segundo que va en él, sin que os pongáis a pensar si soy poeta o no; sólo quiero que penséis y creáis que quien os da esto quisiera tener para daros las riquezas de Midas.

Y, en esto, le dio un papel; y, tentándole Preciosa, halló que dentro venía el escudo, y dijo:

-Este papel ha de vivir muchos años, porque trae dos almas consigo: una, la del escudo, y otra, la de los versos, que siempre vienen llenos de almas y corazones. Pero sepa el señor paje que no quiero tantas almas conmigo, y si no saca la una, no haya miedo que reciba la otra; por poeta le quiero, y no por dadivoso, y desta manera tendremos amistad que dure; pues más aún puede faltar un escudo, por fuerte que sea, que la hechura de un romance.

-Pues así es -replicó el paje-que quieres, Preciosa, que yo sea pobre por fuerza, no deseches el alma que en ese papel te envió, y vuélveme el escudo; que, como le toques con la mano, le tendré por reliquia mientras la vida me durare.

Sacó Preciosa el escudo del papel, y quedóse con el papel, y no le quiso leer en la calle. El paje se despidió, y se fue contentísimo, creyendo que ya Preciosa quedaba rendida, pues con tanta afabilidad le había hablado.

Y, como ella llevaba puesta la mira en buscar la casa del padre de Andrés, sin querer detenerse a bailar en ninguna parte, en poco espacio se puso en la calle do estaba, que ella muy bien sabía; y, habiendo andado hasta la mitad, alzó los ojos a unos balcones de hierro dorados, que le habían dado por señas, y vio en ella a un caballero de hasta edad de cincuenta años, con un hábito de cruz colorada en los pechos, de venerable gravedad y presencia; el cual, apenas también hubo visto la gitanilla, cuando dijo: -Subid, niñas, que aquí os darán limosna.

A esta voz acudieron al balcón otros tres caballeros, y entre ellos vino el enamorado Andrés, que, cuando vio a Preciosa, perdió la color y estuvo a punto de perder los sentidos: tanto fue el sobresalto que recibió con su vista. Subieron las gitanillas todas, sino la grande, que se quedó abajo para informarse de los criados de las verdades de Andrés.

Al entrar las gitanillas en la sala, estaba diciendo el caballero anciano a los demás:

-Ésta debe de ser, sin duda, la gitanilla hermosa que dicen que anda por Madrid.

-Ella es -replicó Andrés-, y sin duda es la más hermosa criatura que se ha visto.

-Así lo dicen -dijo Preciosa, que lo oyó todo en entrando-, pero en verdad que se deben de engañar en la mitad del justo precio. Bonita, bien creo que lo soy;

pero tan hermosa como dicen, ni por pienso.

-¡Por vida de don Juanico, mi hijo, -dijo el anciano-, que aún sois más hermosa de lo que dicen, linda gitana!

-Y ¿quién es don Juanico, su hijo? -preguntó Preciosa.

-Ese galán que está a vuestro lado -respondió el caballero.

-En verdad que pensé -dijo Preciosa-que juraba vuestra merced por algún niño de dos años: ¡mirad qué don Juanico, y qué brinco! A mi verdad, que pudiera ya estar casado, y que, según tiene unas rayas en la frente, no pasarán tres años sin que lo esté, y muy a su gusto, si es que desde aquí allá no se le pierde o se le trueca.

-¡Basta! -dijo uno de los presentes-; ¿qué sabe la gitanilla de rayas?

En esto, las tres gitanillas que iban con Preciosa, todas tres se arrimaron a un rincón de la sala, y, cosiéndose las bocas unas con otras, se juntaron por no ser oídas. Dijo la Cristina: -Muchachas, éste es el caballero que nos dio esta mañana los tres reales de a ocho.

-Así es la verdad -respondieron ellas-, pero no se lo mentemos, ni le digamos nada, si él no nos lo mienta; ¿qué sabemos si quiere encubrirse?

En tanto que esto entre las tres pasaba, respondió Preciosa a lo de las rayas:

-Lo que veo con los ojos, con el dedo lo adivino. Yo sé del señor don Juanico, sin rayas, que es algo enamorado, impetuoso y acelerado, y gran prometededor de cosas que parecen imposibles; y plega a Dios que no sea mentiroso, que sería lo peor de todo. Un viaje ha de hacer ahora muy lejos de aquí, y uno piensa el bayo y otro el que le ensilla; el hombre pone y Dios dispone; quizá pensará que va a Óñez y dará en Gamboa.

A esto respondió don Juan:

-En verdad, gitana, que has acertado en muchas cosas de mi condición, pero en lo de ser mentiroso vas muy fuera de la verdad, porque me precio de decirla en todo acontecimiento. En lo del viaje largo has acertado, pues, sin duda, siendo Dios servido, dentro de cuatro o cinco días me partiré a Flandes, aunque tú me amenazas que he de torcer el camino, y no querría que en él me sucediese algún desmán que lo estorbase.

-Calle, señorito -respondió Preciosa-, y encomiéndose a Dios, que todo se hará bien; y sepa que yo no sé nada de lo que digo, y no es maravilla que, como hablo mucho y a bulto, acierte en alguna cosa, y yo querría acertar en persuadirte a que no te partieses, sino que sosegases el pecho y te estuvieses con tus padres, para darles buena vejez; porque no estoy bien con estas idas y venidas a Flandes, principalmente los mozos de tan tierna edad como la tuya. Déjate crecer un poco, para que puedas llevar los trabajos de la guerra; cuanto más, que harta guerra tienes en tu casa: hartos combates amorosos te sobresaltan el pecho. Sosiega, sosiega, alborotadito, y mira lo que haces primero que te cases, y danos una limosnita por Dios y por quien tú eres; que en verdad que creo que eres bien nacido. Y si a esto se junta el ser verdadero, yo cantaré la gala al vencimiento de haber acertado en cuanto te he dicho.

-Otra vez te he dicho, niña -respondió el don Juan que había de ser Andrés Caballero-, que en todo aciertas, sino en el temor que tienes que no debo de ser muy verdadero; que en esto te engañas, sin alguna duda. La palabra que yo doy en el campo, la cumpliré en la ciudad y adonde quiera, sin serme pedida, pues no se puede preciar de caballero quien toca en el vicio de mentiroso. Mi padre te dará limosna por Dios y por mí; que en verdad que esta mañana di cuanto tenía a unas damas, que a ser tan lisonjeras como hermosas, especialmente una dellas, no me arriendo la ganancia.

Oyendo esto Cristina, con el recato de la otra vez, dijo a las demás gitanas:

-¡Ay, niñas, que me maten si no lo dice por los tres reales de a ocho que nos dio esta mañana!

-No es así -respondió una de las dos-, porque dijo que eran damas, y nosotras no lo somos; y, siendo él tan verdadero como dice, no había de mentir en esto.

-No es mentira de tanta consideración -respondió Cristina-la que se dice sin perjuicio de nadie, y en provecho y crédito del que la dice. Pero, con todo esto, veo que no nos dan nada, ni nos mandan bailar.

Subió en esto la gitana vieja, y dijo:

-Nieta, acaba, que es tarde y hay mucho que hacer y más que decir.

-Y ¿qué hay, abuela? -preguntó Preciosa-. ¿Hay hijo o hija?

-Hijo, y muy lindo -respondió la vieja-. Ven, Preciosa, y oirás verdaderas maravillas.

-¡Plega a Dios que no muera de sobreparto! -dijo Preciosa.

-Todo se mirará muy bien -replicó la vieja-; cuanto más, que hasta aquí todo ha sido parto derecho, y el infante es como un oro.

-¿Ha parido alguna señora? -preguntó el padre de Andrés Caballero.

-Sí, señor -respondió la gitana-, pero ha sido el parto tan secreto, que no le sabe sino Preciosa y yo, y otra persona; y así, no podemos decir quién es.

-Ni aquí lo queremos saber -dijo uno de los presentes-, pero desdichada de aquella que en vuestras lenguas deposita su secreto, y en vuestra ayuda pone su honra.

-No todas somos malas -respondió Preciosa-: quizá hay alguna entre nosotras que se precia de secreta y de verdadera, tanto cuanto el hombre más estirado que hay en esta sala; y vámonos, abuela, que aquí nos tienen en poco; pues en verdad que no somos ladronas ni rogamos a nadie.

-No os enojéis, Preciosa -dijo el padre-; que, a lo menos de vos, imagino que no se puede presumir cosa mala, que vuestro buen rostro os acredita y sale por fiador de vuestras buenas obras. Por vida de Preciosita, que bailéis un poco con vuestras compañeras; que aquí tengo un doblón de oro de a dos caras, que ninguna es como la vuestra, aunque son de dos reyes.

Apenas hubo oído esto la vieja, cuando dijo:

-Ea, niñas, haldas en cinta, y dad contento a estos señores.

Tomó las sonajas Preciosa, y dieron sus vueltas, hicieron y deshicieron todos sus lazos con tanto donaire y desenvoltura, que tras los pies se llevaban los ojos de cuantos las miraban, especialmente los de Andrés, que así se iban entre los pies de Preciosa, como si allí tuvieran el centro de su gloria. Pero turbósele la suerte de manera que se la volvió en infierno; y fue el caso que en la fuga del baile se le cayó a Preciosa el papel que le había dado el paje, y, apenas hubo caído, cuando le alzó el que no tenía buen concepto de las gitanas, y, abriéndole al punto, dijo: -¡Bueno; sonetico tenemos! Cese el baile, y escúchenle; que, según el primer verso, en verdad que no es nada necio.

Pesóle a Preciosa, por no saber lo que en él venía, y rogó que no le leyesen, y que se le volviesen; y todo el ahínco que en esto ponía eran espuelas que apremiaban el deseo de Andrés para oírle. Finalmente, el caballero le leyó en alta voz, y era éste:

-Cuando Preciosa el panderete toca y hiere el dulce son los aires vanos, perlas son que derrama con las manos;
flores son que despide de la boca.

Suspensa el alma, y la cordura loca, queda a los dulces actos sobrehumanos, que, de limpios, de honestos y de sanos, su fama al cielo levantado toca.

Colgadas del menor de sus cabellos mil almas lleva, y a sus plantas tiene amor rendidas una y otra flecha.

Ciega y alumbra con sus soles bellos, su imperio amor por ellos le mantiene,
y aún más grandezas de su ser sospecha.

-¡Por Dios -dijo el que leyó el soneto-, que tiene donaire el poeta que le escribió!

-No es poeta, señor, sino un paje muy galán y muy hombre de bien -dijo Preciosa.

(Mirad lo que habéis dicho, Preciosa, y lo que vais a decir; que ésas no son alabanzas del paje, sino lanzas que traspasan el corazón de Andrés, que las escucha. ¿Queréislo ver, niña? Pues volved los ojos y veréisle desmayado encima de la silla, con un trasudor de muerte; no penséis, doncella, que os ama tan de burlas Andrés que no le hieran y sobresalten el menor de vuestros descuidos. Llegaos a él en hora buena, y decilde algunas palabras al oído, que vayan derechas al corazón y le vuelvan de su desmayo. ¡No, sino andaos a traer sonetos cada día en vuestra alabanza, y veréis cuál os le ponen!) Todo esto pasó así como se ha dicho: que Andrés, en oyendo el soneto, mil celosas imaginaciones le sobresaltaron. No se desmayó, pero perdió la color de manera que, viéndole su padre, le dijo: -¿Qué tienes, don Juan, que parece que te vas a desmayar, según se te ha mudado el color?

-Espérense -dijo a esta sazón Preciosa-: déjenmele decir unas ciertas palabras al oído, y verán como no se desmaya.

Y, llegándose a él, le dijo, casi sin mover los labios:

-¡Gentil ánimo para gitano! ¿Cómo podréis, Andrés, sufrir el tormento de toca, pues no podéis llevar el de un papel?

Y, haciéndole media docena de cruces sobre el corazón, se apartó dél; y entonces Andrés respiró un poco, y dio a entender que las palabras de Preciosa le habían aprovechado.

Finalmente, el doblón de dos caras se le dieron a Preciosa, y ella dijo a sus compañeras que le trocaría y repartiría con ellas hidalgamente. El padre de Andrés le dijo que le dejase por escrito las palabras que había dicho a don Juan, que las quería saber en todo caso. Ella dijo que las diría de muy buena gana, y que entendiesen que, aunque parecían cosa de burla, tenían gracia especial para preservar el mal del corazón y los vaguidos de cabeza, y que las palabras eran:

-«Cabecita, cabecita, tente en ti, no te resbales,

y apareja dos puntales
de la paciencia bendita.

Solicita

la bonita
confiancita;

no te inclines
a pensamientos ruines;
verás cosas
que toquen en milagrosas,

Dios delante
y San Cristóbal gigante».

»Con la mitad destas palabras que le digan, y con seis cruces que le hagan sobre el corazón a la persona que tuviere vaguidos de cabeza -dijo Preciosa-, quedará como una manzana.

Cuando la gitana vieja oyó el ensalmo y el embuste, quedó pasmada; y más lo quedó Andrés, que vio que todo era invención de su agudo ingenio. Quedáronse con el soneto, porque no quiso pedirle Preciosa, por no dar otro tártago a Andrés; que ya sabía ella, sin ser enseñada, lo que era dar sustos y martelos, y sobresaltos celosos a los rendidos amantes.

Despidiéronse las gitanas, y, al irse, dijo Preciosa a don Juan:

-Mire, señor, cualquiera día desta semana es próspero para partidas, y ninguno es aciago; apesure el irse lo más presto que pudiere, que le aguarda una vida ancha, libre y muy gustosa, si quiere acomodarse a ella.

-No es tan libre la del soldado, a mi parecer -respondió don Juan-, que no tenga más de sujeción que de libertad; pero, con todo esto, haré como viere.

-Más veréis de lo que pensáis -respondió Preciosa-, y Dios os lleve y traiga con bien, como vuestra buena presencia merece.

Con estas últimas palabras quedó contento Andrés, y las gitanas se fueron contentísimas.

Trocaron el doblón, repartiéronle entre todas igualmente, aunque la vieja guardiana llevaba siempre parte y media de lo que se juntaba, así por la mayoría, como por ser ella el aguja por quien se guiaban en el maremagno de sus bailes, donaires, y aun de sus embustes.

Llegóse, en fin, el día que Andrés Caballero se apareció una mañana en el primer lugar de su aparecimiento, sobre una mula de alquiler, sin criado alguno. Halló en él a Preciosa y a su abuela, de las cuales conocido, le recibieron con mucho gusto. Él les dijo que le guiasen al rancho antes que entrase el día y con él se descubriesen las señas que llevaba, si acaso le buscasen. Ellas, que, como advertidas, vinieron solas, dieron la vuelta, y de allí a poco rato llegaron a sus barracas.

Entró Andrés en la una, que era la mayor del rancho, y luego acudieron a verle diez o doce gitanos, todos mozos y todos gallardos y bien hechos, a quien ya la vieja había dado cuenta del nuevo compañero que les había de venir, sin tener necesidad de encomendarles el secreto; que, como ya se ha dicho, ellos le guardan con sagacidad y puntualidad nunca vista. Echaron luego ojo a la mula, y dijo uno dellos: -Ésta se podrá vender el jueves en Toledo.

-Eso no -dijo Andrés-, porque no hay mula de alquiler que no sea conocida de todos los mozos de mulas que trajinan por España.

-Par Dios, señor Andrés -dijo uno de los gitanos-, que, aunque la mula tuviera más señales que las que han de preceder al día tremendo, aquí la transformáramos de manera que no la conociera la madre que la parió ni el dueño que la ha criado.

-Con todo eso -respondió Andrés-, por esta vez se ha de seguir y tomar el parecer mío. A esta mula se ha de dar muerte, y ha de ser enterrada donde aun los huesos no parezcan.

-¡Pecado grande! -dijo otro gitano-: ¿a una inocente se ha de quitar la vida? No diga tal el buen Andrés, sino haga una cosa: mírela bien agora, de manera que se le queden estampadas todas sus señales en la memoria, y déjenmela llevar a mí; y si de aquí a dos horas la conociere, que me lardeen como a un negro fugitivo.

-En ninguna manera consentiré -dijo Andrés-que la mula no muera, aunque más me aseguren su transformación. Yo temo ser descubierto si a ella no la cubre la tierra. Y, si se hace por el provecho que de venderla puede seguirse, no vengo tan desnudo a esta cofradía, que no pueda pagar de entrada más de lo que valen cuatro mulas.

-Pues así lo quiere el señor Andrés Caballero -dijo otro gitano-, muera la sin culpa; y Dios sabe si me pesa, así por su mocedad, pues aún no ha cerrado (cosa no usada entre mulas de alquiler), como porque debe ser andariega, pues no tiene costras en las ijadas, ni llagas de la espuela.

Dilatóse su muerte hasta la noche, y en lo que quedaba de aquel día se hicieron las ceremonias de la entrada de Andrés a ser gitano, que fueron: desembarazaron luego un rancho de los mejores del aduar, y adornáronle de ramos y juncia; y, sentándose Andrés sobre un medio alcornoque, pusieronle en las manos un martillo y unas tenazas, y, al son de dos guitarras que dos gitanos tañían, le hicieron dar dos cabriolas; luego le desnudaron un brazo, y con una cinta de seda nueva y un garrote le dieron dos vueltas blandamente.

A todo se halló presente Preciosa y otras muchas gitanas, viejas y mozas; que las unas con maravilla, otras con amor, le miraban; tal era la gallarda disposición de Andrés, que hasta los gitanos le quedaron aficionadísimos.

Hechas, pues, las referidas ceremonias, un gitano viejo tomó por la mano a Preciosa, y, puesto delante de Andrés, dijo:

-Esta muchacha, que es la flor y la nata de toda la hermosura de las gitanas que sabemos que viven en España, te la entregamos, ya por esposa o ya por amiga, que en esto puedes hacer lo que fuere más de tu gusto, porque la libre y ancha vida nuestra no está sujeta a melindres ni a muchas ceremonias. Mírala bien, y mira si te agrada, o si vees en ella alguna cosa que te descontente; y si la vees, escoge entre las doncellas que aquí están la que más te contentare; que la que escogieres te daremos; pero has de saber que una vez escogida, no la has de dejar por otra, ni te has de empachar ni entremeter, ni con las casadas ni con las doncellas. Nosotros guardamos inviolablemente la ley de la amistad: ninguno solicita la prenda del otro; libres vivimos de la amarga pestilencia de los celos. Entre nosotros, aunque hay muchos incestos, no hay ningún adulterio; y, cuando le hay en la mujer propia, o alguna bellaquería en la amiga, no vamos a la justicia a pedir castigo: nosotros somos los jueces y los verdugos de nuestras esposas o amigas; con la misma facilidad las matamos, y las enterramos por las montañas y desiertos, como si fueran animales nocivos; no hay pariente que las venga, ni padres que nos pidan su muerte. Con este temor y miedo ellas procuran ser castas, y nosotros, como ya he dicho, vivimos seguros. Pocas cosas tenemos que no sean comunes a todos, excepto la mujer o la amiga, que queremos que cada una sea del que le cupo en suerte. Entre nosotros así hace divorcio la vejez como la muerte; el que quisiere puede dejar la mujer vieja, como él sea mozo, y escoger otra que corresponda al gusto de sus años. Con estas y con otras leyes y estatutos nos conservamos y vivimos alegres; somos señores de los campos, de los sembrados, de las selvas, de los montes, de las fuentes y de los ríos. Los montes nos ofrecen leña de balde; los árboles, frutas; las viñas, uvas; las huertas, hortaliza; las fuentes, agua; los ríos, peces, y los vedados, caza; sombra, las peñas; aire fresco, las quiebras; y casas, las cuevas. Para nosotros las inclemencias del cielo son oreos, refrigerio las nieves, baños la lluvia, músicas los truenos y hachas los relámpagos. Para nosotros son los duros terreros colchones de blandas plumas: el cuero curtido de nuestros cuerpos nos sirve de arnés impenetrable que nos defiende; a nuestra ligereza no la impiden grillos, ni la detienen barrancos, ni la contrastan paredes; a nuestro ánimo no le tuercen cordeles, ni le menoscaban garruchas, ni le ahogan tocas, ni le doman potros. Del sí al no no hacemos diferencia cuando nos conviene: siempre nos preciamos más de mártires que de confesores. Para nosotros se crían las bestias de carga en los campos, y se cortan las faldriqueras en las ciudades. No hay águila, ni ninguna otra ave de rapiña, que más presto se abalance a la presa que se le ofrece, que nosotros nos abalanzamos a las ocasiones que algún interés nos señalen; y, finalmente, tenemos muchas habilidades que felice fin nos prometen; porque en la cárcel cantamos, en el potro callamos, de día trabajamos y de noche hurtamos; o, por mejor decir, avisamos que nadie viva descuidado de mirar dónde pone su hacienda. No nos fatiga el temor de perder la honra, ni nos desvela la ambición de acrecentarla; ni sustentamos bandos, ni madrugamos a dar memoriales, ni acompañar magnates, ni a solicitar favores. Por dorados techos y suntuosos palacios estimamos estas barracas y movibles ranchos; por cuadros y países de Flandes, los que nos da la naturaleza en esos levantados riscos y nevadas peñas, tendidos prados y espesos bosques que a cada paso a los ojos se nos muestran. Somos astrólogos rústicos, porque, como casi siempre dormimos al cielo descubierto, a todas horas sabemos las que son del día y las que son de la noche; vemos cómo arrincona y barre la aurora las estrellas del cielo, y cómo ella sale con su compañera el alba, alegrando el aire, enfriando el agua y humedeciendo la tierra; y luego, tras ellas, el sol, dorando cumbres (como dijo el otro poeta) y rizando montes: ni tememos quedar helados por su ausencia cuando nos hiere a soslayo con sus rayos, ni quedar abrasados cuando con ellos particularmente nos toca; un mismo rostro hacemos al sol que al yelo, a la esterilidad que a la abundancia. En conclusión, somos gente que vivimos por nuestra industria y pico, y sin entremeternos con el antiguo refrán: «Iglesia, o mar, o casa real»; tenemos lo que queremos, pues nos contentamos con lo que tenemos. Todo esto os he dicho, generoso mancebo, porque no ignoréis la vida a que habéis venido y el trato que habéis de profesar, el cual os he pintado aquí en borrón; que otras muchas e infinitas cosas iréis descubriendo en él con el tiempo, no menos dignas de consideración que las que habéis oído.

Calló, en diciendo esto el elocuente y viejo gitano, y el novicio dijo que se holgaba mucho de haber sabido tan loables estatutos, y que él pensaba hacer profesión en aquella orden tan puesta en razón y en políticos fundamentos; y que sólo le pesaba no haber venido más presto en conocimiento de tan alegre vida, y que desde aquel punto renunciaba la profesión de caballero y la vanagloria de su ilustre linaje, y lo ponía todo debajo del yugo, o, por mejor decir, debajo de las leyes con que ellos vivían, pues con tan alta recompensa le satisfacían el deseo de servirlos, entregándole a la divina Preciosa, por quien él dejaría coronas e imperios, y sólo los desearía para servirla.

A lo cual respondió Preciosa:

-Puesto que estos señores legisladores han hallado por sus leyes que soy tuya, y que por tuya te me han entregado, yo he hallado por la ley de mi voluntad, que es la más fuerte de todas, que no quiero serlo si no es con las condiciones que antes que aquí vinieses entre los dos concertamos. Dos años has de vivir en nuestra compañía primero que de la mía goces, porque tú no te arrepientas por ligero, ni yo quede engañada por presurosa. Condiciones rompen leyes; las que te he puesto sabes: si las quisieres guardar, podrá ser que sea tuya y tú seas mío; y donde no, aún no es muerta la mula, tus vestidos están enteros, y de tus dineros no te falta un ardite; la ausencia que has hecho no ha sido aún de un día; que de lo que dél falta te puedes servir y dar lugar que consideres lo que más te conviene. Estos señores bien pueden entregarte mi cuerpo; pero no mi alma, que es libre y nació libre, y ha de ser libre en tanto que yo quisiere. Si te quedas, te estimaré en mucho; si te vuelves, no te tendré en menos; porque, a mi parecer, los ímpetus amorosos corren a rienda suelta, hasta que encuentran con la razón o con el desengaño; y no querría yo que fueses tú para conmigo como es el cazador, que, en alcanzado la liebre que sigue, la coge y la deja por correr tras otra que le huye. Ojos hay engañados que a la primera vista tan bien les parece el oropel como el oro, pero a poco rato bien conocen la diferencia que hay de lo fino a lo falso. Esta mi hermosura que tú dices que tengo, que la estimas sobre el sol y la encareces sobre el oro, ¿qué sé yo si de cerca te parecerá sombra, y tocada, cairás en que es de alquimia? Dos años te doy de tiempo para que tantees y ponderes lo que será bien que escojas o será justo que deseches; que la prenda que una vez comprada nadie se puede deshacer della, sino con la muerte, bien es que haya tiempo, y mucho, para miralla y remiralla, y ver en ella las faltas o las virtudes que tiene; que yo no me rijo por la bárbara e insolente licencia que estos mis parientes se han tomado de dejar las mujeres, o castigarlas, cuando se les antoja; y, como yo no pienso hacer cosa que llame al castigo, no quiero tomar compañía que por su gusto me deseche.

-Tienes razón, ¡oh Preciosa! -dijo a este punto Andrés-; y así, si quieres que asegure tus temores y menoscabe tus sospechas, jurándote que no saldré un punto de las órdenes que me pusieres, mira qué juramento quieres que haga, o qué otra seguridad puedo darte, que a todo me hallarás dispuesto.

-Los juramentos y promesas que hace el cautivo porque le den libertad, pocas veces se cumplen con ella -dijo Preciosa-; y así son, según pienso, los del amante: que, por conseguir su deseo, prometerá las alas de Mercurio y los rayos de Júpiter, como me prometió a mí un cierto poeta, y juraba por la laguna Estigia. No quiero juramentos, señor Andrés, ni quiero promesas; sólo quiero remitirlo todo a la experiencia deste noviciado, y a mí se me quedará el cargo de guardarme, cuando vos le tuviéredes de ofenderme.

-Sea así -respondió Andrés-. Sola una cosa pido a estos señores y compañeros míos, y es que no me fuercen a que hurte ninguna cosa por tiempo de un mes siquiera; porque me parece que no he de acertar a ser ladrón si antes no preceden muchas liciones.

-Calla, hijo -dijo el gitano viejo-, que aquí te industriaremos de manera que salgas un águila en el oficio; y cuando le sepas, has de gustar dél de modo que te comas las manos tras él. ¡Ya es cosa de burla salir vacío por la mañana y volver cargado a la noche al rancho!

-De azotes he visto yo volver a algunos dósos vacíos -dijo Andrés.

-No se toman truchas, etcétera -replicó el viejo-: todas las cosas desta vida están sujetas a diversos peligros, y las acciones del ladrón al de las galeras, azotes y horca; pero no porque corra un navío tormenta, o se anega, han de dejar los otros de navegar. ¡Bueno sería que porque la guerra come los hombres y los caballos, dejase de haber soldados! Cuanto más, que el que es azotado por justicia, entre nosotros, es tener un hábito en las espaldas, que le parece mejor que si le trujese en los pechos, y de los buenos. El toque está en no acabar acoceando el aire en la flor de nuestra juventud y a los primeros delitos; que el mosqueo de las espaldas, ni el apalear el agua en las galeras, no lo estimamos en un cacao. Hijo Andrés, reposad ahora en el nido debajo de nuestras alas, que a su tiempo os sacaremos a volar, y en parte donde no volváis sin presa; y lo dicho dicho: que os habéis de lamer los dedos tras cada hurto.

-Pues, para recompensar -dijo Andrés-lo que yo podía hurtar en este tiempo que se me da de venia, quiero repartir docientos escudos de oro entre todos los del rancho.

Apenas hubo dicho esto, cuando arremetieron a él muchos gitanos; y, levantándole en los brazos y sobre los hombros, le cantaban el «¡Víctor, víctor!», y el «¡grande Andrés!», añadiendo: «¡Y viva, viva Preciosa, amada prenda suya!» Las gitanas hicieron lo mismo con Preciosa, no sin envidia de Cristina y de otras gitanillas que se hallaron presentes; que la envidia tan bien se aloja en los aduares de los bárbaros y en las chozas de pastores, como en palacios de príncipes, y esto de ver medrar al vecino que me parece que no tiene más méritos que yo, fatiga.

Hecho esto, comieron lautamente; repartióse el dinero prometido con equidad y justicia; renováronse las alabanzas de Andrés, subieron al cielo la hermosura de Preciosa. Llegó la noche, acocotaron la mula y enterráronla de modo que quedó seguro Andrés de ser por ella descubierto; y también enterraron con ella sus alhajas, como fueron silla y freno y cinchas, a uso de los indios, que sepultan con ellos sus más ricas preases.

De todo lo que había visto y oído y de los ingenios de los gitanos quedó admirado Andrés, y con propósito de seguir y conseguir su empresa, sin entrometerse nada en sus costumbres; o, a lo menos, escusarlo por todas las vías que pudiese, pensando exentarse de la jurisdicción de obedecellos en las cosas injustas que le mandasen, a costa de su dinero.

Otro día les rogó Andrés que mudasen de sitio y se alejasen de Madrid, porque temía ser conocido si allí estaba. Ellos dijeron que ya tenían determinado irse a los montes de Toledo, y desde allí correr y garramar toda la tierra circunvecina. Levantaron, pues, el rancho y diéronle a Andrés una pollina en que fuese, pero él no la quiso, sino irse a pie, sirviendo de lacayo a Preciosa, que sobre otra iba: ella contentísima de ver cómo triunfaba de su gallardo escudero, y él ni más ni menos, de ver junto a sí a la que había hecho señora de su albedrío.

¡Oh poderosa fuerza deste que llaman dulce dios de la amargura (título que le ha dado la ociosidad y el descuido nuestro), y con qué veras nos avasallas, y cuán sin respecto nos tratas! Caballero es Andrés, y mozo de muy buen entendimiento, criado casi toda su vida en la Corte y con el regalo de sus ricos padres; y desde ayer acá ha hecho tal mudanza, que engañó a sus criados y a sus amigos, defraudó las esperanzas que sus padres en él tenían; dejó el camino de Flandes, donde había de ejercitar el valor de su persona y acrecentar la honra de su linaje, y se vino a postrarse a los pies de una muchacha, y a ser su lacayo; que, puesto que hermosísima, en fin, era gitana: privilegio de la hermosura, que trae al redopelo y por la melena a sus pies a la voluntad más esenta.

De allí a cuatro días llegaron a una aldea dos leguas de Toledo, donde asentaron su aduar, dando primero algunas prendas de plata al alcalde del pueblo, en fianzas de que en él ni en todo su término no hurtarían ninguna cosa. Hecho esto, todas las gitanas viejas, y algunas mozas, y los gitanos, se esparcieron por todos los lugares, o, a lo menos, apartados por cuatro o cinco leguas de aquel donde habían asentado su real. Fue con ellos Andrés a tomar la primera lición de ladrón; pero, aunque le dieron muchas en aquella salida, ninguna se le asentó; antes, correspondiendo a su buena sangre, con cada hurto que sus maestros hacían se le arrancaba a él el alma; y tal vez hubo que pagó de su dinero los hurtos que sus compañeros había hecho, conmovido de las lágrimas de sus dueños; de lo cual los gitanos se desesperaban, diciéndole que era contravenir a sus estatutos y ordenanzas, que prohibían la entrada a la caridad en sus pechos, la cual, en teniéndola, habían de dejar de ser ladrones, cosa que no les estaba bien en ninguna manera.

Viendo, pues, esto Andrés, dijo que él quería hurtar por sí solo, sin ir en compañía de nadie; porque para huir del peligro tenía ligereza, y para cometelle no le faltaba el ánimo; así que, el premio o el castigo de lo que hurtase quería que fuese suyo.

Procuraron los gitanos disuadirle deste propósito, diciéndole que le podrían suceder ocasiones donde fuese necesaria la compañía, así para acometer como para defenderse, y que una persona sola no podía hacer grandes presas. Pero, por más que dijeron, Andrés quiso ser ladrón solo y señero, con intención de apartarse de la cuadrilla y comprar por su dinero alguna cosa que pudiese decir que la había hurtado, y deste modo cargar lo que menos pudiese sobre su conciencia.

Usando, pues, desta industria, en menos de un mes trujo más provecho a la compañía que trujeron cuatro de los más estirados ladrones della; de que no poco se holgaba Preciosa, viendo a su tierno amante tan lindo y tan despejado ladrón.

Pero, con todo eso, estaba temerosa de alguna desgracia; que no quisiera ella verle en afrenta por todo el tesoro de Venecia, obligada a tenerle aquella buena voluntad por los muchos servicios y regalos que su Andrés le hacía.

Poco más de un mes se estuvieron en los términos de Toledo, donde hicieron su agosto, aunque era por el mes de setiembre, y desde allí se entraron en Estremadura, por ser tierra rica y caliente. Pasaba Andrés con Preciosa honestos, discretos y enamorados coloquios, y ella poco a poco se iba enamorando de la discreción y buen trato de su amante; y él, del mismo modo, si pudiera crecer su amor, fuera creciendo: tal era la honestidad, discreción y belleza de su Preciosa. A doquiera que llegaban, él se llevaba el precio y las apuestas de corredor y de saltar más que ninguno; jugaba a los bolos y a la pelota estremadamente; tiraba la barra con mucha fuerza y singular destreza. Finalmente, en poco tiempo voló su fama por toda Estremadura, y no había lugar donde no se hablase de la gallarda disposición del gitano Andrés Caballero y de sus gracias y habilidades; y al par desta fama corría la de la hermosura de la gitanilla, y no había villa, lugar ni aldea donde no los llamasen para regocijar las fiestas votivas suyas, o para otros particulares regocijos. Desta manera, iba el aduar rico, próspero y contento, y los amantes gozosos con sólo mirarse.

Sucedió, pues, que, teniendo el aduar entre unas encinas, algo apartado del camino real, oyeron una noche, casi a la mitad della, ladrar sus perros con mucho ahínco y más de lo que acostumbraban; salieron algunos gitanos, y con ellos Andrés, a ver a quién ladraban, y vieron que se defendía dellos un hombre vestido de blanco, a quien tenían dos perros asido de una pierna; llegaron y quitáronle, y uno de los gitanos le dijo: -¿Quién diablos os trujo por aquí, hombre, a tales horas y tan fuera de camino? ¿Venís a hurtar por ventura? Porque en verdad que habéis llegado a buen puerto.

-No vengo a hurtar -respondió el mordido-, ni sé si vengo o no fuera de camino, aunque bien veo que vengo descaminado. Pero decidme, señores, ¿está por aquí alguna venta o lugar donde pueda recogerme esta noche y curarme de las heridas que vuestros perros me han hecho?

-No hay lugar ni venta donde podamos encaminaros -respondió Andrés-; mas, para curar vuestras heridas y alojaros esta noche, no os faltará comodidad en nuestros ranchos. Veníos con nosotros, que, aunque somos gitanos, no lo parecemos en la caridad.

-Dios la use con vosotros -respondió el hombre-; y llevadme donde quisiéredes, que el dolor desta pierna me fatiga mucho.

Llegóse a él Andrés y otro gitano caritativo (que aun entre los demonios hay unos peores que otros, y entre muchos malos hombres suele haber algún bueno), y entre los dos le llevaron. Hacía la noche clara con la luna, de manera que puieron ver que el hombre era mozo de gentil rostro y talle; venía vestido todo de lienzo blanco, y atravesada por las espaldas y ceñida a los pechos una como camisa o talega de lienzo. Llegaron a la barraca o toldo de Andrés, y con presteza encendieron lumbre y luz, y acudió luego la abuela de Preciosa a curar el herido, de quien ya le habían dado cuenta. Tomó algunos pelos de los perros, friólos en aceite, y, lavando primero con vino dos mordeduras que tenía en la pierna izquierda, le puso los pelos con el aceite en ellas y encima un poco de romero verde mascado; lióselo muy bien con paños limpios y santiguóle las heridas y díjole: -Dormid, amigo, que, con el ayuda de Dios, no será nada.

En tanto que curaban al herido, estaba Preciosa delante, y estúvole mirando ahincadamente, y lo mismo hacía él a ella, de modo que Andrés echó de ver en la atención con que el mozo la miraba; pero echólo a que la mucha hermosura de Preciosa se llevaba tras sí los ojos. En resolución, después de curado el mozo, le dejaron solo sobre un lecho hecho de heno seco, y por entonces no quisieron preguntarle nada de su camino ni de otra cosa.

Apenas se apartaron dél, cuando Preciosa llamó a Andrés aparte y le dijo:

-¿Acuérdate, Andrés, de un papel que se me cayó en tu casa cuando bailaba con mis compañeras, que, según creo, te dio un mal rato?

-Sí acuerdo -respondió Andrés-, y era un soneto en tu alabanza, y no malo.

-Pues has de saber, Andrés -replicó Preciosa-, que el que hizo aquel soneto es ese mozo mordido que dejamos en la choza; y en ninguna manera me engaño, porque me habló en Madrid dos o tres veces, y aun me dio un romance muy bueno. Allí andaba, a mi parecer, como paje; mas no de los ordinarios, sino de los favorecidos de algún príncipe; y en verdad te digo, Andrés, que el mozo es discreto, y bien razonado, y sobremanera honesto, y no sé qué pueda imaginar desta su venida y en tal traje.

-¿Qué puedes imaginar, Preciosa? -respondió Andrés-. Ninguna otra cosa sino que la misma fuerza que a mí me ha hecho gitano le ha hecho a él parecer molinero y venir a buscarte. ¡Ah, Preciosa, Preciosa, y cómo se va descubriendo que te quieres preciar de tener más de un rendido! Y si esto es así, acábame a mí primero y luego matarás a este otro, y no quieras sacrificarnos juntos en las aras de tu engaño, por no decir de tu belleza.

-¡Válame Dios -respondió Preciosa-, Andrés, y cuán delicado andas, y cuán de un sutil cabello tienes colgadas tus esperanzas y mi crédito, pues con tanta facilidad te ha penetrado el alma la dura espada de los celos! Dime, Andrés: si en esto hubiera artificio o engaño alguno, ¿no supiera yo callar y encubrir quién era este mozo? ¿Soy tan necia, por ventura, que te había de dar ocasión de poner en duda mi bondad y buen término? Calla, Andrés, por tu vida, y mañana procura sacar del pecho deste tu asombro adónde va, o a lo que viene. Podría ser que estuviese engañada tu sospecha, como yo no lo estoy de que sea el que he dicho. Y, para más satisfacción tuya, pues ya he llegado a términos de satisfacerte, de cualquiera manera y con cualquiera intención que ese mozo venga, despídele luego y haz que se vaya, pues todos los de nuestra parcialidad te obedecen, y no habrá ninguno que contra tu voluntad le quiera dar acogida en su rancho; y, cuando esto así no suceda, yo te doy mi palabra de no salir del mío, ni dejarme ver de sus ojos, ni de todos aquellos que tú quisieres que no me vean. Mira, Andrés, no me pesa a mí de verte celoso, pero pesarme ha mucho si te veo indiscreto.

-Como no me veas loco, Preciosa -respondió Andrés-, cualquiera otra demostración será poca o ninguna para dar a entender adónde llega y cuánto fatiga la amarga y dura presunción de los celos. Pero, con todo eso, yo haré lo que me mandas, y sabré, si es que es posible, qué es lo que este señor paje poeta quiere, dónde va, o qué es lo que busca; que podría ser que por algún hilo que sin cuidado muestre, sacase yo todo el ovillo con que temo viene a enredarme.

-Nunca los celos, a lo que imagino -dijo Preciosa-, dejan el entendimiento libre para que pueda juzgar las cosas como ellas son. Siempre miran los celosos con antojos de allende, que hacen las cosas pequeñas, grandes; los enanos, gigantes, y las sospechas, verdades. Por vida tuya y por la mía, Andrés, que procedas en esto, y en todo lo que tocara a nuestros conciertos, cuerda y discretamente; que si así lo hicieres, sé que me has de conceder la palma de honesta y recatada, y de verdadera en todo extremo.

Con esto se despidió de Andrés, y él se quedó esperando el día para tomar la confesión al herido, llena de turbación el alma y de mil contrarias imaginaciones. No podía creer sino que aquel paje había venido allí atraído de la hermosura de Preciosa; porque piensa el ladrón que todos son de su condición. Por otra parte, la satisfacción que Preciosa le había dado le parecía ser de tanta fuerza, que le obligaba a vivir seguro y a dejar en las manos de su bondad toda su ventura.

Llegóse el día, visitó al mordido; preguntóle cómo se llamaba y adónde iba, y cómo caminaba tan tarde y tan fuera de camino; aunque primero le preguntó cómo estaba, y si se sentía sin dolor de las mordeduras. A lo cual respondió el mozo que se hallaba mejor y sin dolor alguno, y de manera que podía ponerse en camino. A lo de decir su nombre y adónde iba, no dijo otra cosa sino que se llamaba Alonso Hurtado, y que iba a Nuestra Señora de la Peña de Francia a un cierto negocio, y que por llegar con brevedad caminaba de noche, y que la pasada había perdido el camino, y acaso había dado con aquel aduar, donde los perros que le guardaban le habían puesto del modo que había visto.

No le pareció a Andrés legítima esta declaración, sino muy bastarda, y de nuevo volvieron a hacerle cosquillas en el alma sus sospechas; y así, le dijo: -

Hermano, si yo fuera juez y vos hubiérades caído debajo de mi jurisdicción por algún delito, el cual pidiera que se os hicieran las preguntas que yo os he hecho, la respuesta que me habéis dado obligara a que os apretara los cordeles. Yo no quiero saber quién sois, cómo os llamáis o adónde vais; pero adviértoos que, si os conviene mentir en este vuestro viaje, mintáis con más apariencia de verdad. Decís que vais a la Peña de Francia, y dejáisla a la mano derecha, más atrás deste lugar donde estamos bien treinta leguas; camináis de noche por llegar presto, y vais fuera de camino por entre bosques y encinares que no tienen sendas apenas, cuanto más caminos. Amigo, levantaos y aprended a mentir, y andad en hora buena. Pero, por este buen aviso que os doy, ¿no me diréis una verdad? (que sí diréis, pues tan mal sabéis mentir). Decidme: ¿sois por ventura uno que yo he visto muchas veces en la Corte, entre paje y caballero, que tenía fama de ser gran poeta; uno que hizo un romance y un soneto a una gitanilla que los días pasados andaba en Madrid, que era tenida por singular en la belleza? Decídmelo, que yo os prometo por la fe de caballero gitano de guardaros el secreto que vos viéredes que os conviene. Mirad que negarme la verdad, de que no sois el que yo digo, no llevaría camino, porque este rostro que yo veo aquí es el que vi en Madrid. Sin duda alguna que la gran fama de vuestro entendimiento me hizo muchas veces que os mirase como a hombre raro e insigne, y así se me quedó en la memoria vuestra figura, que os he venido a conocer por ella, aun puesto en el diferente traje en que estáis agora del en que yo os vi entonces. No os turbéis; animaos, y no penséis que habéis llegado a un pueblo de ladrones, sino a un asilo que os sabrá guardar y defender de todo el mundo. Mirad, yo imagino una cosa, y si es así como la imagino, vos habéis topado con vuestra buena suerte en haber encontrado conmigo. Lo que imagino es que, enamorado de Preciosa, aquella hermosa gitana a quien hicisteis los versos, habéis venido a buscarla, por lo que yo no os tendré en menos, sino en mucho más; que, aunque gitano, la experiencia me ha mostrado adónde se estiende la poderosa fuerza de amor, y las transformaciones que hace hacer a los que coge debajo de su jurisdicción y mando. Si esto es así, como creo que sin duda lo es, aquí está la gitana.

-Sí, aquí está, que yo la vi anoche -dijo el mordido; razón con que Andrés quedó como difunto, pareciéndole que había salido al cabo con la confirmación de sus sospechas-. Anoche la vi -tornó a referir el mozo-, pero no me atreví a decirle quién era, porque no me convenía.

-Desa manera -dijo Andrés-, vos sois el poeta que yo he dicho.

-Sí soy -replicó el mancebo-; que no lo puedo ni lo quiero negar. Quizá podía ser que donde he pensado perderme hubiese venido a ganarme, si es que hay fidelidad en las selvas y buen acogimiento en los montes.

-Hayle, sin duda -respondió Andrés-, y entre nosotros, los gitanos, el mayor secreto del mundo. Con esta confianza podéis, señor, descubrirme vuestro pecho, que hallaréis en el mío lo que veréis, sin doblez alguno. La gitanilla es parienta mía, y está sujeta a lo que quisiere hacer della; si la quisiéredes por esposa, yo y todos sus parientes gustaremos dello; y si por amiga, no usaremos de ningún melindre, con tal que tengáis dineros, porque la codicia por jamás sale de nuestros ranchos.

-Dineros traigo -respondió el mozo-: en estas mangas de camisa que traigo ceñida por el cuerpo vienen cuatrocientos escudos de oro.

Éste fue otro susto mortal que recibió Andrés, viendo que el traer tanto dinero no era sino para conquistar o comprar su prenda; y, con lengua ya turbada, dijo: - Buena cantidad es ésta; no hay sino descubriros, y manos a labor, que la muchacha, que no es nada boba, verá cuán bien le está ser vuestra.

-¡Ay amigo! -dijo a esta sazón el mozo-, quiero que sepáis que la fuerza que me ha hecho mudar de traje no es la de amor, que vos decís, ni de desear a Preciosa, que hermosas tiene Madrid que pueden y saben robar los corazones y rendir las almas tan bien y mejor que las más hermosas gitanas, puesto que confieso que la hermosura de vuestra parienta a todas las que yo he visto se aventaja. Quien me tiene en este traje, a pie y mordido de perros, no es amor, sino desgracia mía.

Con estas razones que el mozo iba diciendo, iba Andrés cobrando los espíritus perdidos, pareciéndole que se encaminaban a otro paradero del que él se imaginaba; y deseoso de salir de aquella confusión, volvió a reforzarle la seguridad con que podía descubrirse; y así, él prosiguió diciendo: -«Yo estaba en Madrid en casa de un título, a quien servía no como a señor, sino como a pariente. Éste tenía un hijo, único heredero suyo, el cual, así por el parentesco como por ser ambos de una edad y de una condición misma, me trataba con familiaridad y amistad grande. Sucedió que este caballero se enamoró de una doncella principal, a quien él escogiera de bonísima gana para su esposa, si no tuviera la voluntad sujeta, como buen hijo, a la de sus padres, que aspiraban a casarle más altamente; pero, con todo eso, la servía a hurto de todos los ojos que pudieran, con las lenguas, sacar a la plaza sus deseos; solos los míos eran testigos de sus intentos. Y una noche, que debía de haber escogido la desgracia para el caso que ahora os diré, pasando los dos por la puerta y calle desta señora, vimos arimados a ella dos hombres, al parecer, de buen talle. Quiso reconocerlos mi pariente, y apenas se encaminó hacia ellos, cuando echaron con mucha ligereza mano a las espadas y a dos broqueles, y se vinieron a nosotros, que hicimos lo mismo, y con iguales armas nos acometimos. Duró poco la pendencia, porque no duró mucho la vida de los dos contrarios, que, de dos estocadas que guiaron los celos de mi pariente y la defensa que yo le hacía, las perdieron (caso extraño y pocas veces visto). Triunfando, pues, de lo que no quisiéramos, volvimos a casa, y, secretamente, tomando todos los dineros que podimos, nos fuimos a San Jerónimo, esperando el día, que descubriese lo sucedido y las presunciones que se tenían de los matadores. Supimos que de nosotros no había indicio alguno, y aconsejáronnos los prudentes religiosos que nos volviésemos a casa, y que no diésemos ni despertásemos con nuestra ausencia alguna sospecha contra nosotros. Y, ya que estábamos determinados de seguir su parecer, nos avisaron que los señores alcaldes de Corte habían preso en su casa a los padres de la doncella y a la misma doncella, y que entre otros criados a quien tomaron la confesión, una criada de la señora dijo cómo mi pariente paseaba a su señora de noche y de día; y que con este indicio habían acudido a buscarnos, y, no hallándonos, sino muchas señales de nuestra fuga, se confirmó en toda la Corte ser nosotros los matadores de aquellos dos caballeros, que lo eran, y muy principales. Finalmente, con parecer del conde mi pariente, y del de los religiosos, después de quince días que estuvimos escondidos en el monasterio, mi camarada, en hábito de fraile, con otro fraile se fue la vuelta de Aragón, con intención de pasarse a Italia, y desde allí a Flandes, hasta ver en qué paraba el caso. Yo quise dividir y apartar nuestra fortuna, y que no corriese nuestra suerte por una misma derrota; seguí otro camino diferente del suyo, y, en hábito de mozo de fraile, a pie, salí con un religioso, que me dejó en Talavera; desde allí aquí he venido solo y fuera de camino, hasta que anoche llegué a este encinal, donde me ha sucedido lo que habéis visto. Y si pregunté por el camino de la Peña de Francia, fue por responder algo a lo que se me preguntaba; que en verdad que no sé dónde cae la Peña de Francia, puesto que sé que está más arriba de Salamanca.»

-Así es verdad -respondió Andrés-, y ya la dejáis a mano derecha, casi veinte leguas de aquí; porque veáis cuán derecho camino llevábades si allá fuéades.

-El que yo pensaba llevar -replicó el mozo-no es sino a Sevilla; que allí tengo un caballero ginovés, grande amigo del conde mi pariente, que suele enviar a Génova gran cantidad de plata, y llevo disignio que me acomode con los que la suelen llevar, como uno dellos; y con esta estratagema seguramente podré pasar hasta Cartagena, y de allí a Italia, porque han de venir dos galeras muy presto a embarcar esta plata. Ésta es, buen amigo, mi historia: mirad si puedo decir que nace más de desgracia pura que de amores aguados. Pero si estos señores gitanos quisiesen llevarme en su compañía hasta Sevilla, si es que van allá, yo se lo pagaría muy bien; que me doy a entender que en su compañía iría más seguro, y no con el temor que llevo.

-Sí llevarán -respondió Andrés-; y si no fuéredes en nuestro aduar, porque hasta ahora no sé si va al Andalucía, iréis en otro que creo que habemos de topar dentro de dos días, y con darles algo de lo que lleváis, facilitaréis con ellos otros imposibles mayores.

Dejóle Andrés, y vino a dar cuenta a los demás gitanos de lo que el mozo le había contado y de lo que pretendía, con el ofrecimiento que hacía de la buena paga y recompensa. Todos fueron de parecer que se quedase en el aduar. Sólo Preciosa tuvo el contrario, y la abuela dijo que ella no podía ir a Sevilla, ni a sus contornos, a causa que los años pasados había hecho una burla en Sevilla a un gorrero llamado Triguillos, muy conocido en ella, al cual le había hecho meter en una tinaja de agua hasta el cuello, desnudo en carnes, y en la cabeza puesta una corona de ciprés, esperando el filo de la media noche para salir de la tinaja a cavar y sacar un gran tesoro que ella le había hecho creer que estaba en cierta parte de su casa. Dijo que, como oyó el buen gorrero tocar a maitines, por no perder la coyuntura, se dio tanta priesa a salir de la tinaja que dio con ella y con él en el suelo, y con el golpe y con los cascos se magulló las carnes, derramóse el agua y él quedó nadando en ella, y dando voces que se ahogaba. Acudieron su mujer y sus vecinos con luces, y halláronle haciendo efectos de nadador, soplando y arrastrando la barriga por el suelo, y meneando brazos y piernas con mucha priesa, y diciendo a grandes voces: «¡Socorro, señores, que me ahogo!»; tal le tenía el miedo, que verdaderamente pensó que se ahogaba. Abrazáronse con él, sacáronle de aquel peligro, volvió en sí, contó la burla de la gitana, y, con todo eso, cavó en la parte señalada más de un estado en hondo, a pesar de todos cuantos le decían que era embuste mío; y si no se lo estorbara un vecino suyo, que tocaba ya en los cimientos de su casa, él diera con entrambas en el suelo, si le dejaran cavar todo cuanto él quisiera. Súpose este cuento por toda la ciudad, y hasta los muchachos le señalaban con el dedo y contaban su credulidad y mi embuste.

Esto contó la gitana vieja, y esto dio por excusa para no ir a Sevilla. Los gitanos, que ya sabían de Andrés Caballero que el mozo traía dineros en cantidad, con facilidad le acogieron en su compañía y se ofrecieron de guardarle y encubrirle todo el tiempo que él quisiese, y determinaron de torcer el camino a mano izquierda y entrarse en la Mancha y en el reino de Murcia.

Llamaron al mozo y diéronle cuenta de lo que pensaban hacer por él; él se lo agradeció y dio cien escudos de oro para que los repartiesen entre todos. Con esta dádiva quedaron más blandos que unas martas; sólo a Preciosa no contentó mucho la quedada de don Sancho, que así dijo el mozo que se llamaba; pero los gitanos se le mudaron en el de Clemente, y así le llamaron desde allí adelante. También quedó un poco torcido Andrés, y no bien satisfecho de haberse quedado Clemente, por parecerle que con poco fundamento había dejado sus primeros designios. Mas Clemente, como si le leyera la intención, entre otras cosas le dijo que se holgaba de ir al reino de Murcia, por estar cerca de Cartagena, adonde si viniesen galeras, como él pensaba que habían de venir, pudiese con facilidad pasar a Italia. Finalmente, por traelle más ante los ojos y mirar sus acciones y escudriñar sus pensamientos, quiso Andrés que fuese Clemente su camarada, y Clemente tuvo esta amistad por gran favor que se le hacía. Andaban siempre juntos, gastaban largo, llovían escudos, corrían, saltaban, bailaban y tiraban la barra mejor que ninguno de los gitanos, y eran de las gitanas más que medianamente queridos, y de los gitanos en todo extremo respetados.

Dejaron, pues, a Estremadura y entráronse en la Mancha, y poco a poco fueron caminando al reino de Murcia. En todas las aldeas y lugares que pasaban había desafíos de pelota, de esgrima, de correr, de saltar, de tirar la barra y de otros ejercicios de fuerza, maña y ligereza, y de todos salían vencedores Andrés y Clemente, como de solo Andrés queda dicho. Y en todo este tiempo, que fueron más de mes y medio, nunca tuvo Clemente ocasión, ni él la procuró, de hablar a Preciosa, hasta que un día, estando juntos Andrés y ella, llegó él a la conversación, porque le llamaron, y Preciosa le dijo: -Desde la vez primera que llegaste a nuestro aduar te conocí, Clemente, y se me vinieron a la memoria los versos que en Madrid me diste; pero no quise decir nada, por no saber con qué intención venías a nuestras estancias; y, cuando supe tu desgracia, me pesó en el alma, y se aseguró mi pecho, que estaba sobresaltado, pensando que como había don Joanes en el mundo, y que se mudaban en Andreses, así podía haber don Sanchos que se mudasen en otros nombres. Háblote desta manera porque Andrés me ha dicho que te ha dado cuenta de quién es y de la intención con que se ha vuelto gitano -y así era la verdad; que Andrés le había hecho sabidor de toda su historia, por poder comunicar con él sus pensamientos-. Y no pienses que te fue de poco provecho el conocerte, pues por mi respecto y por lo que yo de ti dije, se facilitó el acogerte y admitirte en nuestra compañía, donde plega a Dios te suceda todo el bien que acertes a desearte. Este buen deseo quiero que me pagues en que no afees a Andrés la bajeza de su intento, ni le pintes cuán mal le está perseverar en este estado; que, puesto que yo imagino que debajo de los candados de mi voluntad está la suya, todavía me pesaría de verle dar muestras, por mínimas que fuesen, de algún arrepentimiento.

A esto respondió Clemente:

-No pienses, Preciosa única, que don Juan con ligereza de ánimo me descubrió quién era: primero le conocí yo, y primero me descubrieron sus ojos sus intentos; primero le dije yo quién era, y primero le adiviné la prisión de su voluntad que tú señalas; y él, dándome el crédito que era razón que me diese, fió de mi secreto el suyo, y él es buen testigo si alabé su determinación y escogido empleo; que no soy, ¡oh Preciosa!, de tan corto ingenio que no alcance hasta dónde se estienden las fuerzas de la hermosura; y la tuya, por pasar de los límites de los mayores extremos de belleza, es disculpa bastante de mayores yerros, si es que deben llamarse yerros los que se hacen con tan forzosas causas. Agradézcote, señora, lo que en mi crédito dijiste, y yo pienso pagártelo en desear que estos enredos amorosos salgan a fines felices, y que tú goces de tu Andrés, y Andrés de su Preciosa, en conformidad y gusto de sus padres, porque de tan hermosa junta veamos en el mundo los más bellos renuevos que pueda formar la bien intencionada naturaleza. Esto desearé yo, Preciosa, y esto le diré siempre a tu Andrés, y no cosa alguna que le divierta de sus bien colocados pensamientos.

Con tales afectos dijo las razones pasadas Clemente, que estuvo en duda Andrés si las había dicho como enamorado o como comedido; que la infernal enfermedad celosa es tan delicada, y de tal manera, que en los átomos del sol se pega, y de los que tocan a la cosa amada se fatiga el amante y se desespera. Pero, con todo esto, no tuvo celos confirmados, más fiado de la bondad de Preciosa que de la ventura suya, que siempre los enamorados se tienen por infelices en tanto que no alcanzan lo que desean. En fin, Andrés y Clemente eran camaradas y grandes amigos, asegurándolo todo la buena intención de Clemente y el recato y prudencia de Preciosa, que jamás dio ocasión a que Andrés tuviese della celos.

Tenía Clemente sus puntas de poeta, como lo mostró en los versos que dio a Preciosa, y Andrés se picaba un poco, y entrambos eran aficionados a la música. Sucedió, pues, que, estando el aduar alojado en un valle cuatro leguas de Murcia, una noche, por entretenerse, sentados los dos, Andrés al pie de un alcornoque, Clemente al de una encina, cada uno con una guitarra, convidados del silencio de la noche, comenzando Andrés y respondiendo Clemente, cantaron estos versos:

ANDRÉS

Mira, Clemente, el estrellado velo con que esta noche fría compite con el día,
de luces bellas adornando el cielo;
y en esta semejanza,
si tanto tu divino ingenio alcanza,

aquel rostro figura
donde asiste el extremo de hermosura.

CLEMENTE

Donde asiste el extremo de hermosura,

y adonde la Preciosa

honestidad hermosa
con todo extremo de bondad se apura, en un sujeto cabe,
que no hay humano ingenio que le alabe,
si no toca en divino,
en alto, en raro, en grave y peregrino.

ANDRÉS

En alto, en raro, en grave y peregrino estilo nunca usado,
al cielo levantado,
por dulce al mundo y sin igual camino,
tu nombre, ¡oh gitanilla!, causando asombro, espanto y maravilla,

la fama yo quisiera
que le llevara hasta la octava esfera.

CLEMENTE

Que le llevara hasta la octava esfera fuera decente y justo,
dando a los cielos gusto,
cuando el son de su nombre allá se oyera,
y en la tierra causara, por donde el dulce nombre resonara, música en los oídos

paz en las almas, gloria en los sentidos.

ANDRÉS

Paz en las almas, gloria en los sentidos

se siente cuando canta
la sirena, que encanta
y adormece a los más apercebidos;
y tal es mi Preciosa,
que es lo menos que tiene ser hermosa:
dulce regalo mío,
corona del donaire, honor del brío.

CLEMENTE

Corona del donaire, honor del brío eres, bella gitana,
frescor de la mañana,
céfiro blando en el ardiente estío;

rayo con que Amor ciego convierte el pecho más de nieve en fuego;
fuerza que así la hace, que blandamente mata y satisface.

Señales iban dando de no acabar tan presto el libre y el cautivo, si no sonara a sus espaldas la voz de Preciosa, que las suyas había escuchado. Suspendiólos el oírla, y, sin moverse, prestándola maravillosa atención, la escucharon. Ella (o no sé si de improviso, o si en algún tiempo los versos que cantaba le compusieron), con estremada gracia, como si para responderles fueran hechos, cantó los siguientes:

-En esta empresa amorosa, donde el amor entretengo, por mayor ventura tengo ser honesta que hermosa.

La que es más humilde planta, si la subida endereza,

por gracia o naturaleza
a los cielos se levanta.
En este mi bajo cobre,

siendo honestidad su esmalte, no hay buen deseo que falte ni riqueza que no sobre.

No me causa alguna pena
no quererme o no estimarme;

que yo pienso fabricarme mi suerte y ventura buena.
Haga yo lo que en mí es, que a ser buena me encamine, y haga el cielo y determine lo que quisiere después.

Quiero ver si la belleza tiene tal prerrogativa, que me encumbre tan arriba, que aspire a mayor alteza.
Si las almas son iguales, podrá la de un labrador igualarse por valor

con las que son imperiales.
De la mía lo que siento me sube al grado mayor, porque majestad y amor

no tienen un mismo asiento.

Aquí dio fin Preciosa a su canto, y Andrés y Clemente se levantaron a recebilla. Pasaron entre los tres discretas razones, y Preciosa descubrió en las suyas su discreción, su honestidad y su agudeza, de tal manera que en Clemente halló disculpa la intención de Andrés, que aún hasta entonces no la había hallado, juzgando más a mocedad que a cordura su arrojada determinación.

Aquella mañana se levantó el aduar y se fueron a alojar en un lugar de la jurisdicción de Murcia, tres leguas de la ciudad, donde le sucedió a Andrés una desgracia que le puso en punto de perder la vida. Y fue que, después de haber dado en aquel lugar algunos vasos y prendas de plata en fianzas, como tenían de costumbre, Preciosa y su abuela y Cristina, con otras dos gitanillas y los dos, Clemente y Andrés, se alojaron en un mesón de una viuda rica, la cual tenía una hija de edad de diez y siete o diez y ocho años, algo más desenvuelta que hermosa; y, por más señas, se llamaba Juana Carducha. Ésta, habiendo visto bailar a las gitanas y gitanos, la tomó el diablo, y se enamoró de Andrés tan fuertemente que propuso de decírselo y tomarle por marido, si él quisiese, aunque a todos sus parientes les pesase; y así, buscó coyuntura para decírselo, y hallóla en un corral donde Andrés había entrado a requerir dos pollinos. Llegóse a él, y con priesa, por no ser vista, le dijo: -Andrés -que ya sabía su nombre-, yo soy doncella y rica; que mi madre no tiene otro hijo sino a mí, y este mesón es suyo; y amén desto tiene muchos majuelos y otros dos pares de casas. Hasme parecido bien: si me quieres por esposa, a ti está; respóndeme presto, y si eres discreto, quédate y verás qué vida nos damos.

Admirado quedó Andrés de la resolución de la Carducha, y con la presteza que ella pedía le respondió:

-Señora doncella, yo estoy apalabrado para casarme, y los gitanos no nos casamos sino con gitanas; guárdela Dios por la merced que me quería hacer, de quien yo no soy digno.

No estuvo en dos dedos de caerse muerta la Carducha con la aceda respuesta de Andrés, a quien replicara si no viera que entraban en el corral otras gitanas. Salióse corrida y asendereada, y de buena gana se vengara si pudiera. Andrés, como discreto, determinó de poner tierra en medio y desviarse de aquella ocasión que el diablo le ofrecía; que bien leyó en los ojos de la Carducha que sin los lazos matrimoniales se le entregara a toda su voluntad, y no quiso verse pie a pie y solo en aquella estacada; y así, pidió a todos los gitanos que aquella noche se partiesen de aquel lugar. Ellos, que siempre le obedecían, lo pusieron luego por obra, y, cobrando sus fianzas aquella tarde, se fueron.

La Carducha, que vio que en irse Andrés se le iba la mitad de su alma, y que no le quedaba tiempo para solicitar el cumplimiento de sus deseos, ordenó de hacer quedar a Andrés por fuerza, ya que de grado no podía. Y así, con la industria, sagacidad y secreto que su mal intento le enseñó, puso entre las alhajas de Andrés, que ella conoció por suyas, unos ricos corales y dos patenas de plata, con otros brincos suyos; y, apenas habían salido del mesón, cuando dio voces, diciendo que aquellos gitanos le llevaban robadas sus joyas, a cuyas voces acudió la justicia y toda la gente del pueblo.

Los gitanos hicieron alto, y todos juraban que ninguna cosa llevaban hurtada, y que ellos harían patentes todos los sacos y repuestos de su aduar. Desto se congojó mucho la gitana vieja, temiendo que en aquel escrutinio no se manifestasen los dijes de la Preciosa y los vestidos de Andrés, que ella con gran cuidado y recato guardaba; pero la buena de la Carducha lo remedió con mucha brevedad todo, porque al segundo envoltorio que miraron dijo que preguntasen cuál era el de aquel gitano gran bailador, que ella le había visto entrar en su aposento dos veces, y que podría ser que aquél las llevase. Entendió Andrés que por él lo decía y, riéndose, dijo: -Señora doncella, ésta es mi recámara y éste es mi pollino; si vos halláredes en ella ni en él lo que os falta, yo os lo pagaré con las setenas, fuera de sujetarme al castigo que la ley da a los ladrones.

Acudieron luego los ministros de la justicia a desvalijar el pollino, y a pocas vueltas dieron con el hurto, de que quedó tan espantado Andrés y tan absorto, que no pareció sino estatua, sin voz, de piedra dura.

-¿No sospeché yo bien? -dijo a esta sazón la Carducha-. ¡Mirad con qué buena cara se encubre un ladrón tan grande!

El alcalde, que estaba presente, comenzó a decir mil injurias a Andrés y a todos los gitanos, llamándolos de públicos ladrones y salteadores de caminos. A todo callaba Andrés, suspenso e imaginativo, y no acababa de caer en la traición de la Carducha. En esto se llegó a él un soldado bizarro, sobrino del alcalde, diciendo: -¿No veis cuál se ha quedado el gitanico podrido de hurtar? Apostaré yo que hace melindres y que niega el hurto, con habérsele cogido en las manos; que bien haya quien no os echa en galeras a todos. ¡Mirad si estuviera mejor este bellaco en ellas, sirviendo a su Majestad, que no andarse bailando de lugar en lugar y hurtando de venta en monte! A fe de soldado, que estoy por darle una bofetada que le derribe a mis pies.

Y, diciendo esto, sin más ni más, alzó la mano y le dio un bofetón tal, que le hizo volver de su embelesamiento, y le hizo acordar que no era Andrés Caballero, sino don Juan, y caballero; y, arremetiendo al soldado con mucha presteza y más cólera, le arrancó su misma espada de la vaina y se la envainó en el cuerpo, dando con él muerto en tierra.

Aquí fue el gritar del pueblo, aquí el amohinarse el tío alcalde, aquí el desmayarse Preciosa y el turbarse Andrés de verla desmayada; aquí el acudir todos a las armas y dar tras el homicida. Creció la confusión, creció la grita, y, por acudir Andrés al desmayo de Preciosa, dejó de acudir a su defensa; y quiso la suerte que Clemente no se hallase al desastrado suceso, que con los bagajes había ya salido del pueblo. Finalmente, tantos cargaron sobre Andrés, que le prendieron y le aherrojaron con dos muy gruesas cadenas. Bien quisiera el alcalde ahorcarle luego, si estuviera en su mano, pero hubo de remitirle a Murcia, por ser de su jurisdicción. No le llevaron hasta otro día, y en el que allí estuvo, pasó Andrés muchos martirios y vituperios que el indignado alcalde y sus ministros y todos los del lugar le hicieron. Prendió el alcalde todos los más gitanos y gitanas que pudo, porque los más huyeron, y entre ellos Clemente, que temió ser cogido y descubierto.

Finalmente, con la sumaria del caso y con una gran cáfila de gitanos, entraron el alcalde y sus ministros con otra mucha gente armada en Murcia, entre los cuales iba Preciosa, y el pobre Andrés, ceñido de cadenas, sobre un macho y con esposas y piede amigo. Salió toda Murcia a ver los presos, que ya se tenía noticia de la muerte del soldado. Pero la hermosura de Preciosa aquel día fue tanta, que ninguno la miraba que no la bendecía, y llegó la nueva de su belleza a los oídos de la señora corregidora, que por curiosidad de verla hizo que el corregidor, su marido, mandase que aquella gitana no entrase en la cárcel, y todos los demás sí. Y a Andrés le pusieron en un estrecho calabozo, cuya escuridad, y la falta de la luz de Preciosa, le trataron de manera que bien pensó no salir de allí sino para la sepultura. Llevaron a Preciosa con su abuela a que la corregidora la viese, y, así como la vio, dijo: -Con razón la alaban de hermosa.

Y, llegándola a sí, la abrazó tiernamente, y no se hartaba de mirarla, y preguntó a su abuela que qué edad tendría aquella niña.

-Quince años -respondió la gitana-, dos meses más a menos.

-Esos tuviera agora la desdichada de mi Costanza. ¡Ay, amigas, que esta niña me ha renovado mi desventura! -dijo la corregidora.

Tomó en esto Preciosa las manos de la corregidora, y, besándoselas muchas veces, se las bañaba con lágrimas y le decía:

-Señora mía, el gitano que está preso no tiene culpa, porque fue provocado: llamáronle ladrón, y no lo es; diéronle un bofetón en su rostro, que es tal que en él se descubre la bondad de su ánimo. Por Dios y por quien vos sois, señora, que le hagáis guardar su justicia, y que el señor corregidor no se dé prisa a ejecutar en él el castigo con que las leyes le amenazan; y si algún agrado os ha dado mi hermosura, entretenedla con entretener el preso, porque en el fin de su vida está el de la mía. Él ha de ser mi esposo, y justos y honestos impedimentos han estorbado que aun hasta ahora no nos habemos dado las manos. Si dineros fueren menester para alcanzar perdón de la parte, todo nuestro aduar se venderá en pública almoneda, y se dará aún más de lo que pidieren. Señora mía, si sabéis qué es amor, y algún tiempo le tuvistes, y ahora le tenéis a vuestro esposo, doleos de mí, que amo tierna y honestamente al mío.

En todo el tiempo que esto decía, nunca la dejó las manos, ni apartó los ojos de mirarla atentísimamente, derramando amargas y piadosas lágrimas en mucha abundancia. Asimismo, la corregidora la tenía a ella asida de las suyas, mirándola ni más ni menos, con no menor ahínco y con no más pocas lágrimas. Estando en esto, entró el corregidor, y, hallando a su mujer y a Preciosa tan llorosas y tan encadenadas, quedó suspenso, así de su llanto como de la hermosura. Preguntó la causa de aquel sentimiento, y la respuesta que dio Preciosa fue soltar las manos de la corregidora y asirse de los pies del corregidor, diciéndole: -¡Señor, misericordia, misericordia! ¡Si mi esposo muere, yo soy muerta! Él no tiene culpa; pero si la tiene, déseme a mí la pena, y si esto no puede ser, a lo menos entreténgase el pleito en tanto que se procuran y buscan los medios posibles para su remedio; que podrá ser que al que no pecó de malicia le enviase el cielo la salud de gracia.

Con nueva suspensión quedó el corregidor de oír las discretas razones de la gitanilla, y que ya, si no fuera por no dar indicios de flaqueza, le acompañara en sus lágrimas.

En tanto que esto pasaba, estaba la gitana vieja considerando grandes, muchas y diversas cosas; y, al cabo de toda esta suspensión y imaginación, dijo: -Espérenme vuestras mercedes, señores míos, un poco, que yo haré que estos llantos se conviertan en risa, aunque a mí me cueste la vida.

Y así, con ligero paso, se salió de donde estaba, dejando a los presentes confusos con lo que dicho había. En tanto, pues, que ella volvía, nunca dejó Preciosa las lágrimas ni los ruegos de que se entretuviese la causa de su esposo, con intención de avisar a su padre que viniese a entender en ella. Volvió la gitana con un pequeño cofre debajo del brazo, y dijo al corregidor que con su mujer y ella se entrasen en un aposento, que tenía grandes cosas que decirles en secreto. El corregidor, creyendo que algunos hurtos de los gitanos quería descubrirle, por tenerle propicio en el pleito del preso, al momento se retiró con ella y con su mujer en su recámara, adonde la gitana, hincándose de rodillas ante los dos, les dijo: -Si las buenas nuevas que os quiero dar, señores, no merecieren alcanzar en albricias el perdón de un gran pecado mío, aquí estoy para recibir el castigo que quisiéredes darme; pero antes que le confiese quiero que me digáis, señores, primero, si conocéis estas joyas.

Y, descubriendo un cofrecico donde venían las de Preciosa, se le puso en las manos al corregidor, y, en abriéndole, vio aquellos dijes pueriles; pero no cayó en lo que podían significar. Mirólos también la corregidora, pero tampoco dio en la cuenta; sólo dijo: -Estos son adornos de alguna pequeña criatura.

-Así es la verdad -dijo la gitana-; y de qué criatura sean lo dice ese escrito que está en ese papel doblado.

Abrióle con priesa el corregidor y leyó que decía:

Llamábase la niña doña Constanza de Azevedo y de Meneses; su madre, doña Guiomar de Meneses, y su padre, don Fernando de Azevedo, caballero del hábito de Calatrava. Desparecía día de la Ascensión del Señor, a las ocho de la mañana, del año de mil y quinientos y noventa y cinco. Traía la niña puestos estos brincos que en este cofre están guardados.

Apenas hubo oído la corregidora las razones del papel, cuando reconoció los brincos, se los puso a la boca, y, dándoles infinitos besos, se cayó desmayada. Acudió el corregidor a ella, antes que a preguntar a la gitana por su hija, y, habiendo vuelto en sí, dijo: -Mujer buena, antes ángel que gitana, ¿adónde está el dueño, digo la criatura cuyos eran estos dijes?

-¿Adónde, señora? -respondió la gitana-. En vuestra casa la tenéis: aquella gitanica que os sacó las lágrimas de los ojos es su dueño, y es sin duda alguna vuestra hija; que yo la hurté en Madrid de vuestra casa el día y hora que ese papel dice.

Oyendo esto la turbada señora, soltó los chapines, y desalada y corriendo salió a la sala adonde había dejado a Preciosa, y hallóla rodeada de sus doncellas y criadas, todavía llorando. Arremetió a ella, y, sin decirle nada, con gran priesa le desabrochó el pecho y miró si tenía debajo de la teta izquierda una señal pequeña, a modo de lunar blanco, con que había nacido, y hallóle ya grande, que con el tiempo se había dilatado. Luego, con la misma celeridad, la descalzó, y descubrió un pie de nieve y de marfil, hecho a torno, y vio en él lo que buscaba, que era que los dos dedos últimos del pie derecho se trababan el uno con el otro por medio con un poquito de carne, la cual, cuando niña, nunca se la habían querido cortar por no darle pesadumbre. El pecho, los dedos, los brincos, el día señalado del hurto, la confesión de la gitana y el sobresalto y alegría que habían recibido sus padres cuando la vieron, con toda verdad confirmaron en el alma de la corregidora ser Preciosa su hija. Y así, cogiéndola en sus brazos, se volvió con ella adonde el corregidor y la gitana estaban.

Iba Preciosa confusa, que no sabía a qué efeto se habían hecho con ella aquellas diligencias; y más, viéndose llevar en brazos de la corregidora, y que le daba de un beso hasta ciento. Llegó, en fin, con la preciosa carga doña Guiomar a la presencia de su marido, y, trasladándola de sus brazos a los del corregidor, le dijo: -Recebid, señor, a vuestra hija Costanza, que ésta es sin duda; no lo dudéis, señor, en ningún modo, que la señal de los dedos juntos y la del pecho he visto; y más, que a mí me lo está diciendo el alma desde el instante que mis ojos la vieron.

-No lo dudo -respondió el corregidor, teniendo en sus brazos a Preciosa-, que los mismos efectos han pasado por la mía que por la vuestra; y más, que tantas puntualidades juntas, ¿cómo podían suceder, si no fuera por milagro?

Toda la gente de casa andaba absorta, preguntando unos a otros qué sería aquello, y todos daban bien lejos del blanco; que, ¿quién había de imaginar que la gitanilla era hija de sus señores? El corregidor dijo a su mujer y a su hija, y a la gitana vieja, que aquel caso estuviese secreto hasta que él le descubriese; y asimismo dijo a la vieja que él la perdonaba el agravio que le había hecho en hurtarle el alma, pues la recompensa de habérsela vuelto mayores albricias recibía; y que sólo le pesaba de que, sabiendo ella la calidad de Preciosa, la hubiese desposado con un gitano, y más con un ladrón y homicida.

-¡Ay! -dijo a esto Preciosa-, señor mío, que ni es gitano ni ladrón, puesto que es matador; pero fue lo del que le quitó la honra, y no pudo hacer menos de mostrar quién era y matarle.

-¿Cómo que no es gitano, hija mía? -dijo doña Guiomar.

Entonces la gitana vieja contó brevemente la historia de Andrés Caballero, y que era hijo de don Francisco de Cárcamo, caballero del hábito de Santiago, y que se llamaba don Juan de Cárcamo; asimismo del mismo hábito, cuyos vestidos ella tenía, cuando los mudó en los de gitano. Contó también el concierto que entre Preciosa y don Juan estaba hecho, de aguardar dos años de aprobación para desposarse o no. Puso en su punto la honestidad de entrambos y la agradable condición de don Juan.

Tanto se admiraron desto como del hallazgo de su hija, y mandó el corregidor a la gitana que fuese por los vestidos de don Juan. Ella lo hizo así, y volvió con otro gitano, que los trujo.

En tanto que ella iba y volvía, hicieron sus padres a Preciosa cien mil preguntas, a quien respondió con tanta discreción y gracia que, aunque no la hubieran reconocido por hija, los enamorara. Preguntáronla si tenía alguna afición a don Juan. Respondió que no más de aquella que le obligaba a ser agradecida a quien se había querido humillar a ser gitano por ella; pero que ya no se extendería a más el agradecimiento de aquello que sus señores padres quisiesen.

-Calla, hija Preciosa -dijo su padre-, que este nombre de Preciosa quiero que se te quede, en memoria de tu pérdida y de tu hallazgo; que yo, como tu padre, tomo a cargo el ponerte en estado que no desdiga de quién eres.

Suspiró oyendo esto Preciosa, y su madre (como era discreta, entendió que suspiraba de enamorada de don Juan) dijo a su marido:

-Señor, siendo tan principal don Juan de Cárcamo como lo es, y queriendo tanto a nuestra hija, no nos estaría mal dársela por esposa.

Y él respondió:

-Aun hoy la habemos hallado, ¿y ya queréis que la perdamos? Gocémosla algún tiempo; que, en casándola, no será nuestra, sino de su marido.

-Razón tenéis, señor -respondió ella-, pero dad orden de sacar a don Juan, que debe de estar en algún calabozo.

-Sí estará -dijo Preciosa-; que a un ladrón, matador y, sobre todo, gitano, no le habrán dado mejor estancia.

-Yo quiero ir a verle, como que le voy a tomar la confesión -respondió el corregidor-, y de nuevo os encargo, señora, que nadie sepa esta historia hasta que yo lo quiera.

Y, abrazando a Preciosa, fue luego a la cárcel y entró en el calabozo donde don Juan estaba, y no quiso que nadie entrase con él. Hallóle con entrambos pies en un cepo y con las esposas a las manos, y que aún no le habían quitado el piede amigo. Era la estancia oscura, pero hizo que por arriba abriesen una lumbrera, por donde entraba luz, aunque muy escasa; y, así como le vio, le dijo: -¿Cómo está la buena pieza? ¡Que así tuviera yo atraillados cuantos gitanos hay en España, para acabar con ellos en un día, como Nerón quisiera con Roma, sin dar más de un golpe! Sabed, ladrón puntoso, que yo soy el corregidor desta ciudad, y vengo a saber, de mí a vos, si es verdad que es vuestra esposa una gitanilla que viene con vosotros.

Oyendo esto Andrés, imaginó que el corregidor se debía de haber enamorado de Preciosa; que los celos son de cuerpos sutiles y se entran por otros cuerpos sin romperlos, apartarlos ni dividirlos; pero, con todo esto, respondió: -Si ella ha dicho que yo soy su esposo, es mucha verdad; y si ha dicho que no lo soy, también ha dicho verdad, porque no es posible que Preciosa diga mentira.

-¿Tan verdadera es? -respondió el corregidor-. No es poco serlo, para ser gitana. Ahora bien, mancebo, ella ha dicho que es vuestra esposa, pero que nunca os ha dado la mano. Ha sabido que, según es vuestra culpa, habéis de morir por ella; y hame pedido que antes de vuestra muerte la despose con vos, porque se quiere honrar con quedar viuda de un tan gran ladrón como vos.

-Pues hágalo vuesa merced, señor corregidor, como ella lo suplica; que, como yo me despose con ella, iré contento a la otra vida, como parta ésta con nombre de ser suyo.

-¡Mucho la debéis de querer! -dijo el corregidor.

-Tanto -respondió el preso-, que, a poderlo decir, no fuera nada. En efeto, señor corregidor, mi causa se concluya: yo maté al que me quiso quitar la honra; yo adoro a esa gitana, moriré contento si muero en su gracia, y sé que no nos ha de faltar la de Dios, pues entrambos habremos guardado honestamente y con puntualidad lo que nos prometimos.

-Pues esta noche enviaré por vos -dijo el corregidor-, y en mi casa os desposaréis con Preciosica, y mañana a mediodía estaréis en la horca, con lo que yo habré cumplido con lo que pide la justicia y con el deseo de entrambos.

Agradecióselo Andrés, y el corregidor volvió a su casa y dio cuenta a su mujer de lo que con don Juan había pasado, y de otras cosas que pensaba hacer.

En el tiempo que él faltó dio cuenta Preciosa a su madre de todo el discurso de su vida, y de cómo siempre había creído ser gitana y ser nieta de aquella vieja; pero que siempre se había estimado en mucho más de lo que de ser gitana se esperaba. Preguntóle su madre que le dijese la verdad: si quería bien a don Juan de Cárcamo. Ella, con vergüenza y con los ojos en el suelo, le dijo que por haberse considerado gitana, y que mejoraba su suerte con casarse con un caballero de hábito y tan principal como don Juan de Cárcamo, y por haber visto por experiencia su buena condición y honesto trato, alguna vez le había mirado con ojos aficionados; pero que, en resolución, ya había dicho que no tenía otra voluntad de aquella que ellos quisiesen.

Llegóse la noche, y, siendo casi las diez, sacaron a Andrés de la cárcel, sin las esposas y el piedeamigo, pero no sin una gran cadena que desde los pies todo el cuerpo le ceñía. Llegó dese modo, sin ser visto de nadie, sino de los que le traían, en casa del corregidor, y con silencio y recato le entraron en un aposento, donde le dejaron solo. De allí a un rato entró un clérigo y le dijo que se confesase, porque había de morir otro día. A lo cual respondió Andrés: -De muy buena gana me confesaré, pero ¿cómo no me desposan primero? Y si me han de desposar, por cierto que es muy malo el tálamo que me espera.

Doña Guiomar, que todo esto sabía, dijo a su marido que eran demasiados los sustos que a don Juan daba; que los moderase, porque podría ser perdiese la vida con ellos. Parecióle buen consejo al corregidor, y así entró a llamar al que le confesaba, y díjole que primero habían de desposar al gitano con Preciosa, la gitana, y que después se confesaría, y que se encomendase a Dios de todo corazón, que muchas veces suele llover sus misericordias en el tiempo que están más secas las esperanzas.

En efeto, Andrés salió a una sala donde estaban solamente doña Guiomar, el corregidor, Preciosa y otros dos criados de casa. Pero, cuando Preciosa vio a don Juan ceñido y aherrojado con tan gran cadena, descolorido el rostro y los ojos con muestra de haber llorado, se le cubrió el corazón y se arrimó al brazo de su madre, que junto a ella estaba, la cual, abrazándola consigo, le dijo: -Vuelve en ti, niña, que todo lo que vees ha de redundar en tu gusto y provecho.

Ella, que estaba ignorante de aquello, no sabía cómo consolarse, y la gitana vieja estaba turbada, y los circunstantes, colgados del fin de aquel caso.

El corregidor dijo:

-Señor tiniente cura, este gitano y esta gitana son los que vuesa merced ha de desposar.

-Eso no podré yo hacer si no preceden primero las circunstancias que para tal caso se requieren. ¿Dónde se han hecho las amonestaciones? ¿Adónde está la licencia de mi superior, para que con ellas se haga el desposorio?

-Inadvertencia ha sido mía -respondió el corregidor-, pero yo haré que el vicario la dé.

-Pues hasta que la vea -respondió el tiniente cura-, estos señores perdonen.

Y, sin replicar más palabra, porque no sucediese algún escándalo, se salió de casa y los dejó a todos confusos.

-El padre ha hecho muy bien -dijo a esta sazón el corregidor-, y podría ser fuese providencia del cielo ésta, para que el suplicio de Andrés se dilate; porque, en efeto, él se ha de desposar con Preciosa y han de preceder primero las amonestaciones, donde se dará tiempo al tiempo, que suele dar dulce salida a muchas amargas dificultades; y, con todo esto, quería saber de Andrés, si la suerte encaminase sus sucesos de manera que sin estos sustos y sobresaltos se hallase esposo de Preciosa, si se tendría por dichoso, ya siendo Andrés Caballero, o ya don Juan de Cárcamo.

Así como oyó Andrés nombrarse por su nombre, dijo:

-Pues Preciosa no ha querido contenerse en los límites del silencio y ha descubierto quién soy, aunque esa buena dicha me hallara hecho monarca del mundo, la tuviera en tanto que pusiera término a mis deseos, sin osar desear otro bien sino el del cielo.

-Pues, por ese buen ánimo que habéis mostrado, señor don Juan de Cárcamo, a su tiempo haré que Preciosa sea vuestra legítima consorte, y agora os la doy y entrego en esperanza por la más rica joya de mi casa, y de mi vida, y de mi alma; y estimadla en lo que decís, porque en ella os doy a doña Costanza de Meneses, mi única hija, la cual, si os iguala en el amor, no os desdice nada en el linaje.

Atónito quedó Andrés viendo el amor que le mostraban, y en breves razones doña Guiomar contó la pérdida de su hija y su hallazgo, con las certísimas señas que la gitana vieja había dado de su hurto; con que acabó don Juan de quedar atónito y suspenso, pero alegre sobre todo encarecimiento. Abrazó a sus suegros, llamólos padres y señores suyos, besó las manos a Preciosa, que con lágrimas le pedía las suyas.

Rompióse el secreto, salió la nueva del caso con la salida de los criados que habían estado presentes; el cual sabido por el alcalde, tío del muerto, vio tomados los caminos de su venganza, pues no había de tener lugar el rigor de la justicia para ejecutarla en el yerno del corregidor.

Vistióse don Juan los vestidos de camino que allí había traído la gitana; volviéronse las prisiones y cadenas de hierro en libertad y cadenas de oro; la tristeza de los gitanos presos, en alegría, pues otro día los dieron en fiado. Recibió el tío del muerto la promesa de dos mil ducados, que le hicieron porque bajase de la querella y perdonase a don Juan, el cual, no olvidándose de su camarada Clemente, le hizo buscar; pero no le hallaron ni supieron dél, hasta que desde allí a cuatro días tuvo nuevas ciertas que se había embarcado en una de dos galeras de Génova que estaban en el puerto de Cartagena, y ya se habían partido.

Dijo el corregidor a don Juan que tenía por nueva cierta que su padre, don Francisco de Cárcamo, estaba proveído por corregidor de aquella ciudad, y que sería bien esperalle, para que con su beneplácito y consentimiento se hiciesen las bodas. Don Juan dijo que no saldría de lo que él ordenase, pero que, ante todas cosas, se había de desposar con Preciosa. Concedió licencia el arzobispo para que con sola una amonestación se hiciese. Hizo fiestas la ciudad, por ser muy bienquisto el corregidor, con luminarias, toros y cañas el día del desposorio; quedóse la gitana vieja en casa, que no se quiso apartar de su nieta Preciosa.

Llegaron las nuevas a la Corte del caso y casamiento de la gitanilla; supo don Francisco de Cárcamo ser su hijo el gitano y ser la Preciosa la gitanilla que él había visto, cuya hermosura disculpó con él la liviandad de su hijo, que ya le tenía por perdido, por saber que no había ido a Flandes; y más, porque vio cuán bien le estaba el casarse con hija de tan gran caballero y tan rico como era don Fernando de Azevedo. Dio priesa a su partida, por llegar presto a ver a sus hijos, y dentro de veinte días ya estaba en Murcia, con cuya llegada se renovaron los gustos, se hicieron las bodas, se contaron las vidas, y los poetas de la ciudad, que hay algunos, y muy buenos, tomaron a cargo celebrar el estraño caso, juntamente con la sin igual belleza de la gitanilla. Y de tal manera escribió el famoso licenciado Pozo, que en sus versos durará la fama de la Preciosa mientras los siglos duraren.

Olvidábaseme de decir cómo la enamorada mesonera descubrió a la justicia no ser verdad lo del hurto de Andrés el gitano, y confesó su amor y su culpa, a quien no respondió pena alguna, porque en la alegría del hallazgo de los desposados se enterró la venganza y resucitó la clemencia.

El amante liberal

-¡OH LAMENTABLES ruinas de la desdichada Nicosia, apenas enjutas de la sangre de vuestros valerosos y mal afortunados defensores! Si como carecéis de sentido, le tuviérades ahora, en esta soledad donde estamos, pudiéramos lamentar juntas nuestras desgracias, y quizá el haber hallado compañía en ellas aliviara nuestro tormento. Esta esperanza os puede haber quedado, mal derribados torreones, que otra vez, aunque no para tan justa defensa como la en que os derribaron, os podéis ver levantados. Mas yo, desdichado, ¿qué bien podré esperar en la miserable estrechez en que me hallo, aunque vuelva al estado en que estaba antes deste en que me veo? Tal es mi desdicha, que en la libertad fui sin ventura, y en el cautiverio ni la tengo ni la espero.

Estas razones decía un cautivo cristiano, mirando desde un recuesto las murallas derribadas de la ya perdida Nicosia; y así hablaba con ellas, y hacía comparación de sus miserias a las suyas, como si ellas fueran capaces de entenderle: propia condición de afligidos, que, llevados de sus imaginaciones, hacen y dicen cosas ajenas de toda razón y buen discurso.

En esto, salió de un pabellón o tienda, de cuatro que estaban en aquella campaña puestas, un turco, mancebo de muy buena disposición y gallardía, y, llegándose al cristiano, le dijo:

-Apostaría yo, Ricardo amigo, que te traen por estos lugares tus continuos pensamientos.

-Sí traen -respondió Ricardo (que éste era el nombre del cautivo)-; mas, ¿qué aprovecha, si en ninguna parte a do voy hallo tregua ni descanso en ellos, antes me los han acrecentado estas ruinas que desde aquí se descubren?

-Por las de Nicosia dirás -dijo el turco.

-Pues ¿por cuáles quieres que diga -repitió Ricardo-, si no hay otras que a los ojos por aquí se ofrezcan?

-Bien tendrás que llorar -replicó el turco-, si en esas contemplaciones entras, porque los que vieron habrá dos años a esta nombrada y rica isla de Chipre en su tranquilidad y sosiego, gozando sus moradores en ella de todo aquello que la felicidad humana puede conceder a los hombres, y ahora los ve o contempla, o desterrados della o en ella cautivos y miserables, ¿cómo podrá dejar de no dolerse de su calamidad y desventura? Pero dejemos estas cosas, pues no llevan remedio, y vengamos a las tuyas, que quiero ver si le tienen; y así, te ruego, por lo que debes a la buena voluntad que te he mostrado, y por lo que te obliga el ser entrambos de una misma patria y habernos criado en nuestra niñez juntos, que me digas qué es la causa que te trae tan demasiadamente triste; que, puesto caso que sola la del cautiverio es bastante para entristecer el corazón más alegre del mundo, todavía imagino que de más atrás traen la corriente tus desgracias. Porque los generosos ánimos, como el tuyo, no suelen rendirse a las comunes desdichas tanto que den muestras de extraordinarios sentimientos; y háceme creer esto el saber yo que no eres tan pobre que te falte para dar cuanto pidieren por tu rescate, ni estás en las torres del mar Negro, como cautivo de consideración, que tarde o nunca alcanza la deseada libertad. Así que, no habiéndote quitado la mala suerte las esperanzas de verte libre, y, con todo esto, verte rendido a dar miserables muestras de tu desventura, no es mucho que imagine que tu pena procede de otra causa que de la libertad que perdiste; la cual causa te suplico me digas, ofreciéndote cuanto puedo y valgo; quizá para que yo te sirva ha traído la fortuna este rodeo de haberme hecho vestir deste hábito que aborrezco. Ya sabes, Ricardo, que es mi amo el cadí desta ciudad (que es lo mismo que ser su obispo). Sabes también lo mucho que vale y lo mucho que con él puedo. Juntamente con esto, no ignoras el deseo encendido que tengo de no morir en este estado que parece que profeso, pues, cuando más no pueda, tengo de confesar y publicar a voces la fe de Jesucristo, de quien me apartó mi poca edad y menos entendimiento, puesto que sé que tal confesión me ha de costar la vida; que, a trueco de no perder la del alma, daré por bien empleado perder la del cuerpo. De todo lo dicho quiero que infieras y que consideres que te puede ser de algún provecho mi amistad, y que, para saber qué remedios o alivios puede tener tu desdicha, es menester que me la cuentes, como ha menester el médico la relación del enfermo, asegurándote que la depositaré en lo más escondido del silencio.

A todas estas razones estuvo callando Ricardo; y, viéndose obligado dellas y de la necesidad, le respondió con éstas:

-Si así como has acertado, ¡oh amigo Mahamut! -que así se llamaba el turco-, en lo que de mi desdicha imaginas, acertaras en su remedio, tuviera por bien perdida mi libertad, y no trocara mi desgracia con la mayor ventura que imaginarse pudiera; mas yo sé que ella es tal, que todo el mundo podrá saber bien la causa de donde procede, mas no habrá en él persona que se atreva, no sólo a hallarle remedio, pero ni aun alivio. Y, para que quedes satisfecho desta verdad, te la contaré en las menos razones que pudiere. Pero, antes que entre en el confuso laberinto de mis males, quiero que me digas qué es la causa que Hazán Bajá, mi amo, ha hecho plantar en esta campaña estas tiendas y pabellones antes de entrar en Nicosia, donde viene proveído por virrey, o por bajá, como los turcos llaman a los virreyes.

-Yo te satisfaré brevemente -respondió Mahamut-; y así, has de saber que es costumbre entre los turcos que los que van por virreyes de alguna provincia no entran en la ciudad donde su antecesor habita hasta que él salga della y deje hacer libremente al que viene la residencia; y, en tanto que el bajá nuevo la hace, el antiguo se está en la campaña esperando lo que resulta de sus cargos, los cuales se le hacen sin que él pueda intervenir a valerse de sobornos ni amistades, si ya primero no lo ha hecho. Hecha, pues, la residencia, se la dan al que deja el cargo en un pergamino cerrado y sellado, y con ella se presenta a la Puerta del Gran Señor, que es como decir en la Corte, ante el Gran Consejo del Turco; la cual vista por el visirbajá, y por los otros cuatro bajaes menores, como si dijésemos ante el presidente del Real Consejo y oidores, o le premian o le castigan, según la relación de la residencia; puesto que si viene culpado, con dineros rescata y escusa el castigo; si no viene culpado y no le premian, como sucede de ordinario, con dádivas y presentes alcanza el cargo que más se le antoja, porque no se dan allí los cargos y oficios por merecimientos, sino por dineros: todo se vende y todo se compra. Los proveedores de los cargos roban los proveídos en ellos y los desuellan; deste oficio comprado sale la sustancia para comprar otro que más ganancia promete. Todo va como digo, todo este imperio es violento, señal que prometía no ser durable; pero, a lo que yo creo, y así debe de ser verdad, le tienen sobre sus hombros nuestros pecados; quiero decir los de aquellos que descaradamente y a rienda suelta ofenden a Dios, como yo hago: ¡Él se acuerde de mí por quien Él es! Por la causa que he dicho, pues, tu amo, Hazán Bajá, ha estado en esta campaña cuatro días, y si el de Nicosia no ha salido, como debía, ha sido por haber estado muy malo; pero ya está mejor y saldrá hoy o mañana, sin duda alguna, y se ha de alojar en unas tiendas que están detrás deste recuesto, que tú no has visto, y tu amo entrará luego en la ciudad. Y esto es lo que hay que saber de lo que me preguntaste.

-Escucha, pues -dijo Ricardo-; mas no sé si podré cumplir lo que antes dije, que en breves razones te contaría mi desventura, por ser ella tan larga y desmedida, que no se puede medir con razón alguna; con todo esto, haré lo que pudiere y lo que el tiempo diere lugar. Y así, te pregunto primero si conoces en nuestro lugar de Trápana una doncella a quien la fama daba nombre de la más hermosa mujer que había en toda Sicilia. Una doncella, digo, por quien decían todas las curiosas lenguas, y afirmaban los más raros entendimientos, que era la de más perfecta hermosura que tuvo la edad pasada, tiene la presente y espera tener la que está por venir; una por quien los poetas cantaban que tenía los cabellos de oro, y que eran sus ojos dos resplandecientes soles, y sus mejillas purpúreas rosas, sus dientes perlas, sus labios rubíes, su garganta alabastro; y que sus partes con el todo, y el todo con sus partes, hacían una maravillosa y concertada armonía, esparciendo naturaleza sobre todo una suavidad de colores tan natural y perfecta, que jamás pudo la envidia hallar cosa en que ponerle tacha. Que ¿es posible, Mahamut, que ya no me has dicho quién es y cómo se llama? Sin duda creo, o que no me oyes, o que, cuando en Trápana estabas, carecías de sentido.

-En verdad, Ricardo -respondió Mahamut-, que si la que has pintado con tantos extremos de hermosura no es Leonisa, la hija de Rodolfo Florencio, no sé quién sea; que ésta sola tenía la fama que dices.

-Ésa es, ¡oh Mahamut! -respondió Ricardo-; ésa es, amigo, la causa principal de todo mi bien y de toda mi desventura; ésa es, que no la perdida libertad, por quien mis ojos han derramado, derraman y derramarán lágrimas sin cuento, y la por quien mis suspiros encienden el aire cerca y lejos, y la por quien mis razones cansan al cielo que las escucha y a los oídos que las oyen; ésa es por quien tú me has juzgado por loco o, por lo menos, por de poco valor y menos ánimo; esta Leonisa, para mí leona y mansa cordera para otro, es la que me tiene en este miserable estado. «Porque has de saber que desde mis tiernos años, o a lo menos desde que tuve uso de razón, no sólo la amé, mas la adoré y serví con tanta solicitud como si no tuviera en la tierra ni en el cielo otra deidad a quien sirviese ni adorase. Sabían sus deudos y sus padres mis deseos, y jamás dieron muestra de que les pesase, considerando que iban encaminados a fin honesto y virtuoso; y así, muchas veces sé yo que se lo dijeron a Leonisa, para disponerle la voluntad a que por su esposo me recibiese. Mas ella, que tenía puestos los ojos en Cornelio, el hijo de Ascanio Rótulo, que tú bien conoces (mancebo galán, atildado, de blandas manos y rizos cabellos, de voz meliflua y de amorosas palabras, y, finalmente, todo hecho de ámbar y de alfeñique, guarnecido de telas y adornado de brocados), no quiso ponerlos en mi rostro, no tan delicado como el de Cornelio, ni quiso agradecer siquiera mis muchos y continuos servicios, pagando mi voluntad con desdeñarme y aborrecerme; y a tanto llegó el extremo de amarla, que tomara por partido dichoso que me acabara a pura fuerza de desdenes y desagradecimientos, con que no diera descubiertos, aunque honestos, favores a Cornelio. ¡Mira, pues, si llegándose a la angustia del desdén y aborrecimiento, la mayor y más cruel rabia de los celos, cuál estaría mi alma de dos tan mortales pestes combatida! Disimulaban los padres de Leonisa los favores que a Cornelio hacía, creyendo, como estaba en razón que creyesen, que atraído el mozo de su incomparable y bellísima hermosura, la escogería por su esposa, y en ello granjearían yerno más rico que conmigo; y bien pudiera ser, si así fuera, pero no le alcanzaran, sin arrogancia sea dicho, de mejor condición que la mía, ni de más altos pensamientos, ni de más conocido valor que el mío. Sucedió, pues, que, en el discurso de mi pretensión, alcancé a saber que un día del mes pasado de mayo, que éste de hoy hace un año, tres días y cinco horas, Leonisa y sus padres, y Cornelio y los suyos, se iban a solazar con toda su parentela y criados al jardín de Ascanio, que está cercano a la marina, en el camino de las salinas.»

-Bien lo sé -dijo Mahamut-; pasa adelante, Ricardo, que más de cuatro días tuve en él, cuando Dios quiso, más de cuatro buenos ratos.

-«Súpelo -replicó Ricardo-, y, al mismo instante que lo supe, me ocupó el alma una furia, una rabia y un infierno de celos, con tanta vehemencia y rigor, que me sacó de mis sentidos, como lo verás por lo que luego hice, que fue irme al jardín donde me dijeron que estaban, y hallé a la más de la gente solazándose, y debajo de un nogal sentados a Cornelio y a Leonisa, aunque desviados un poco. Cuál ellos quedaron de mi vista, no lo sé; de mí sé decir que quedé tal con la suya, que perdí la de mis ojos, y me quedé como estatua sin voz ni movimiento alguno. Pero no tardó mucho en despertar el enojo a la cólera, y la cólera a la sangre del corazón, y la sangre a la ira, y la ira a las manos y a la lengua. Puesto que las manos se ataron con el respecto, a mi parecer, debido al hermoso rostro que tenía delante, pero la lengua rompió el silencio con estas razones: "Contenta estarás, ¡oh enemiga mortal de mi descanso!, en tener con tanto sosiego delante de tus ojos la causa que hará que los míos vivan en perpetuo y doloroso llanto. Llégate, llégate, cruel, un poco más, y enrede tu yedra a ese inútil tronco que te busca; peina o ensortija aquellos cabellos de ese tu nuevo Ganimedes, que tibiamente te solicita. Acaba ya de entregarte a los banderizos años dese mozo en quien contemplas, porque, perdiendo yo la esperanza de alcanzarte, acabe con ella la vida que aborrezco. ¿Piensas, por ventura, soberbia y mal considerada doncella, que contigo sola se han de romper y faltar las leyes y fueros que en semejantes casos en el mundo se usan? ¿Piensas, quiero decir, que este mozo, altivo por su riqueza, arrogante por su gallardía, inexperto por su edad poca, confiado por su linaje, ha de querer, ni poder, ni saber guardar firmeza en sus amores, ni estimar lo inestimable, ni conocer lo que conocen los maduros y experimentados años? No lo pienses, si lo piensas, porque no tiene otra cosa buena el mundo, sino hacer sus acciones siempre de una misma manera, porque no se engañe nadie sino por su propia ignorancia. En los pocos años está la inconstancia mucha; en los ricos, la soberbia; la vanidad, en los arrogantes, y en los hermosos, el desdén; y en los que todo esto tienen, la necedad, que es madre de todo mal suceso. Y tú, ¡oh mozo!, que tan a tu salvo piensas llevar el premio, más debido a mis buenos deseos que a los ociosos tuyos, ¿por qué no te levantas de ese estrado de flores donde yaces y vienes a sacarme el alma, que tanto la tuya aborrece? Y no porque me ofendas en lo que haces, sino porque no sabes estimar el bien que la ventura te concede; y véese claro que le tienes en poco, en que no quieres moverte a defendelle por no ponerte a riesgo de descomponer la afeitada compostura de tu galán vestido. Si esa tu reposada condición tuviera Aquiles, bien seguro estuviera Ulises de no salir con su empresa, aunque más le mostrara resplandecientes armas y acerados alfanjes. Vete, vete, y recreáte entre las doncellas de tu madre, y allí ten cuidado de tus cabellos y de tus manos, más despiertas a devanar blando sirgo que a empuñar la dura espada".

»A todas estas razones jamás se levantó Cornelio del lugar donde le hallé sentado, antes se estuvo quedo, mirándome como embelesado, sin moverse; y a las levantadas voces con que le dije lo que has oído, se fue llegando la gente que por la huerta andaba, y se pusieron a escuchar otros más impropios que a Cornelio dije; el cual, tomando ánimo con la gente que acudió, porque todos o los más eran sus parientes, criados o allegados, dio muestras de levantarse; mas, antes que se pusiese en pie, puse mano a mi espada y acometíle, no sólo a él, sino a todos cuantos allí estaban. Pero, apenas vio Leonisa relucir mi espada, cuando le tomó un recio desmayo, cosa que me puso en mayor coraje y mayor despecho. Y no te sabré decir si los muchos que me acometieron atendían no más de a defenderse, como quien se defiende de un loco furioso, o si fue mi buena suerte y diligencia, o el cielo, que para mayores males quería guardarme; porque, en efeto, herí siete o ocho de los que hallé más a mano. A Cornelio le valió su buena diligencia, pues fue tanta la que puso en los pies huyendo, que se escapó de mis manos.

»Estando en este tan manifiesto peligro, cercado de mis enemigos, que ya como ofendidos procuraban vengarse, me socorrió la ventura con un remedio que fuera mejor haber dejado allí la vida, que no, restaurándola por tan no pensado camino, venir a perderla cada hora mil y mil veces. Y fue que de improviso dieron en el jardín mucha cantidad de turcos de dos galeotas de cosarios de Biserta, que en una cala, que allí cerca estaba, habían desembarcado, sin ser sentidos de las centinelas de las torres de la marina, ni descubiertos de los corredores o atajadores de la costa. Cuando mis contrarios los vieron, dejándome solo, con presta celeridad se pusieron en cobro: de cuantos en el jardín estaban, no pudieron los turcos cautivar más de a tres personas y a Leonisa, que aún se estaba desmayada. A mí me cogieron con cuatro disformes heridas, vengadas antes por mi mano con cuatro turcos, que de otras cuatro dejé sin vida tendidos en el suelo. Este asalto hicieron los turcos con su acostumbrada diligencia, y, no muy contentos del suceso, se fueron a embarcar, y luego se hicieron a la mar, y a vela y remo en breve espacio se pusieron en la Fabiana. Hicieron reseña por ver qué gente les faltaba; y, viendo que los muertos eran cuatro soldados de aquellos que ellos llaman leventes, y de los mejores y más estimados que traían, quisieron tomar en mí la venganza; y así, mandó el arráez de la capitana bajar la entena para ahorcarme.

»Todo esto estaba mirando Leonisa, que ya había vuelto en sí; y, viéndose en poder de los cosarios, derramaba abundancia de hermosas lágrimas, y, torciendo sus manos delicadas, sin hablar palabra, estaba atenta a ver si entendía lo que los turcos decían. Mas uno de los cristianos del remo le dijo en italiano como el arráez mandaba ahorcar a aquel cristiano, señalándome a mí, porque había muerto en su defensa cuatro de los mejores soldados de las galeotas. Lo cual oído y entendido por Leonisa (la vez primera que se mostró para mí piadosa), dijo al cautivo que dijese a los turcos que no me ahorcasen, porque perderían un gran rescate, y que les rogaba volviesen a Trápana, que luego me rescatarían. Ésta, digo, fue la primera y aun será la última caridad que usó conmigo Leonisa, y todo para mayor mal mío. Oyendo, pues, los turcos lo que el cautivo les decía, le creyeron, y mudóles el interés la cólera. Otro día por la mañana, alzando bandera de paz, volvieron a Trápana; aquella noche la pasé con el dolor que imaginarse puede, no tanto por el que mis heridas me causaban, cuanto por imaginar el peligro en que la cruel enemiga mía entre aquellos bárbaros estaba.

»Llegados, pues, como digo, a la ciudad, entró en el puerto la una galeota y la otra se quedó fuera; coronóse luego todo el puerto y la ribera toda de cristianos, y el lindo de Cornelio desde lejos estaba mirando lo que en la galeota pasaba. Acudió luego un mayordomo mío a tratar de mi rescate, al cual dije que en ninguna manera tratase de mi libertad, sino de la de Leonisa, y que diese por ella todo cuanto valía mi hacienda; y más, le ordené que volviese a tierra y dijese a sus padres de Leonisa que le dejasen a él tratar de la libertad de su hija, y que no se pusiesen en trabajo por ella. Hecho esto, el arráez principal, que era un renegado griego llamado Yzuf, pidió por Leonisa seis mil escudos, y por mí cuatro mil, añadiendo que no daría el uno sin el otro. Pidió esta gran suma, según después supe, porque estaba enamorado de Leonisa, y no quisiera él rescatalla, sino darle al arráez de la otra galeota, con quien había de partir las presas que se hiciesen por mitad, a mí, en precio de cuatro mil escudos y mil en dinero, que hacían cinco mil, y quedarse con Leonisa por otros cinco mil. Y ésta fue la causa por que nos apreció a los dos en diez mil escudos. Los padres de Leonisa no ofrecieron de su parte nada, ateniéndose a la promesa que de mi parte mi mayordomo les había hecho, ni Cornelio movió los labios en su provecho; y así, después de muchas demandas y respuestas, concluyó mi mayordomo en dar por Leonisa cinco mil y por mí tres mil escudos.

»Aceptó Yzuf este partido, forzado de las persuasiones de su compañero y de lo que todos sus soldados le decían; mas, como mi mayordomo no tenía junta tanta cantidad de dineros, pidió tres días de término para juntarlos, con intención de malbaratar mi hacienda hasta cumplir el rescate. Holgóse desto Yzuf, pensando hallar en este tiempo ocasión para que el concierto no pasase adelante; y, volviéndose a la isla de la Fabiana, dijo que llegado el término de los tres días volvería por el dinero. Pero la ingrata fortuna, no cansada de maltratarme, ordenó que estando desde lo más alto de la isla puesta a la guarda una centinela de los turcos, bien dentro a la mar descubrió seis velas latinas, y entendió, como fue verdad, que debían ser, o la escuadra de Malta, o algunas de las de Sicilia. Bajó corriendo a dar la nueva, y en un pensamiento se embarcaron los turcos, que estaban en tierra, cuál guisando de comer, cuál lavando su ropa; y, zarpando con no vista presteza, dieron al agua los remos y al viento las velas, y, puestas las proas en Berbería, en menos de dos horas perdieron de vista las galeras; y así, cubiertos con la isla y con la noche, que venía cerca, se aseguraron del miedo que habían cobrado.

»A tu buena consideración dejo, ¡oh Mahamut amigo!, que consideres cuál iría mi ánimo en aquel viaje, tan contrario del que yo esperaba; y más cuando otro día, habiendo llegado las dos galeotas a la isla de la Pantanalea, por la parte del mediodía, los turcos saltaron en tierra a hacer leña y carne, como ellos dicen; y más, cuando vi que los arráeces saltaron en tierra y se pusieron a hacer las partes de todas las presas que habían hecho. Cada acción destas fue para mí una dilatada muerte. Viniendo, pues, a la partición mía y de Leonisa, Yzuf dio a Fetala (que así se llamaba el arráez de la otra galeota) seis cristianos, los cuatro para el remo, y dos muchachos hermosísimos, de nación corsos, y a mí con ellos, por quedarse con Leonisa, de lo cual se contentó Fetala. Y, aunque estuve presente a todo esto, nunca pude entender lo que decían, aunque sabía lo que hacían, ni entendiera por entonces el modo de la partición si Fetala no se llegara a mí y me dijera en italiano: "Cristiano, ya eres mío; en dos mil escudos de oro te me han dado; si quisieres libertad, has de dar cuatro mil, si no, acá morir". Preguntéle si era también suya la cristiana; díjome que no, sino que Yzuf se quedaba con ella, con intención de volverla mora y casarse con ella. Y así era la verdad, porque me lo dijo uno de los cautivos del remo, que entendía bien el turquesco, y se lo había oído tratar a Yzuf y a Fetala. Díjele a mi amo que hiciese de modo como se quedase con la cristiana, y que le daría por su rescate solo diez mil escudos de oro en oro. Respondióme no ser posible, pero que haría que Yzuf supiese la gran suma que él ofrecía por la cristiana; quizá, llevado del interese, mudaría de intención y la rescataría. Hízolo así, y mandó que todos los de su galeota se embarcasen luego, porque se quería ir a Trípol de Berbería, de donde él era. Yzuf, asimismo, determinó irse a Biserta; y así, se embarcaron con la misma priesa que suelen cuando descubren o galeras de quien temer, o bajeles a quien robar. Movióles a darse priesa, por parecerles que el tiempo mudaba con

»Estaba Leonisa en tierra, pero no en parte que yo la pudiese ver, si no fue que al tiempo del embarcarnos llegamos juntos a la marina. Llevábala de la mano su nuevo amo y su más nuevo amante, y al entrar por la escala que estaba puesta desde tierra a la galeota, volvió los ojos a mirarme, y los míos, que no se quitaban della, la miraron con tan tierno sentimiento y dolor que, sin saber cómo, se me puso una nube ante ellos que me quitó la vista, y sin ella y sin sentido alguno di conmigo en el suelo. Lo mismo, me dijeron después, que había sucedido a Leonisa, porque la vieron caer de la escala a la mar, y que Yzuf se había echado tras della y la sacó en brazos. Esto me contaron dentro de la galeota de mi amo, donde me habían puesto sin que yo lo sintiese; mas, cuando volví de mi desmayo y me vi solo en la galeota, y que la otra, tomando otra derrota, se apartaba de nosotros, llevándose consigo la mitad de mi alma, o, por mejor decir, toda ella, cubrióseme el corazón de nuevo, y de nuevo maldije mi ventura y llamé a la muerte a voces; y eran tales los sentimientos que hacía, que mi amo, enfadado de oírme, con un grueso palo me amenazó que, si no callaba, me maltrataría. Reprimí las lágrimas, recogí los suspiros, creyendo que con la fuerza que les hacía reventarían por parte que abriesen puerta al alma, que tanto deseaba desamparar este miserable cuerpo; mas la suerte, aún no contenta de haberme puesto en tan encogido estrecho, ordenó de acabar con todo, quitándome las esperanzas de todo mi remedio; y fue que en un instante se declaró la borrasca que ya se temía, y el viento que de la parte de mediodía soplaba y nos embestía por la proa, comenzó a reforzar con tanto brío, que fue forzoso volverle la popa y dejar correr el bajel por donde el viento quería llevarle.

»Llevaba designio el arraéz de despuntar la isla y tomar abrigo en ella por la banda del norte, mas sucedióle al revés su pensamiento, porque el viento cargó con tanta furia que, todo lo que habíamos navegado en dos días, en poco más de catorce horas nos vimos a seis millas o siete de la propia isla de donde habíamos partido, y sin remedio alguno íbamos a embestir en ella, y no en alguna playa, sino en unas muy levantadas peñas que a la vista se nos ofrecían, amenazando de inevitable muerte a nuestras vidas. Vimos a nuestro lado la galeota de nuestra conserva, donde estaba Leonisa, y a todos sus turcos y cautivos remeros haciendo fuerza con los remos para entretenerse y no dar en las peñas. Lo mismo hicieron los de la nuestra, con más ventaja y esfuerzo, a lo que pareció, que los de la otra, los cuales, cansados del trabajo y vencidos del tesón del viento y de la tormenta, soltando los remos, se abandonaron y se dejaron ir a vista de nuestros ojos a embestir en las peñas, donde dio la galeota tan grande golpe que toda se hizo pedazos. Comenzaba a cerrar la noche, y fue tamaña la grita de los que se

perdían y el sobresalto de los que en nuestro bajel temían perderse, que ninguna cosa de las que nuestro arráez mandaba se entendía ni se hacía; sólo se atendía a no dejar los remos de las manos, tomando por remedio volver la proa al viento y echar las dos áncoras a la mar, para entretener con esto algún tiempo la muerte, que por cierta tenían. Y, aunque el miedo de morir era general en todos, en mí era muy al contrario, porque con la esperanza engañosa de ver en el otro mundo a la que había tan poco que déste se había partido, cada punto que la galeota tardaba en anegarse o en embestir en las peñas, era para mí un siglo de más penosa muerte. Las levantadas olas, que por encima del bajel y de mi cabeza pasaban, me hacían estar atento a ver si en ellas venía el cuerpo de la desdichada Leonisa.

»No quiero detenerme ahora, ¡oh Mahamut!, en contarte por menudo los sobresaltos, los temores, las ansias, los pensamientos que en aquella luenga y amarga noche tuve y pasé, por no ir contra lo que primero propuse de contarte brevemente mi desventura. Basta decirte que fueron tantos y tales que, si la muerte viniera en aquel tiempo, tuviera bien poco que hacer en quitarme la vida.

»Vino el día con muestras de mayor tormenta que la pasada, y hallamos que el bajel había virado un gran trecho, habiéndose desviado de las peñas un buen trecho, y llegádose a una punta de la isla; y, viéndose tan a pique de doblarla, turcos y cristianos, con nueva esperanza y fuerzas nuevas, al cabo de seis horas doblamos la punta, y hallamos más blando el mar y más sosegado, de modo que más fácilmente nos aprovechamos de los remos, y, abrigados con la isla, tuvieron lugar los turcos de saltar en tierra para ir a ver si había quedado alguna reliquia de la galeota que la noche antes dio en las peñas; mas aún no quiso el cielo concederme el alivio que esperaba tener de ver en mis brazos el cuerpo de Leonisa; que, aunque muerto y despedazado, holgara de verle, por romper aquel imposible que mi estrella me puso de juntarme con él, como mis buenos deseos merecían; y así, rogué a un renegado que quería desembarcarse que le buscase y viese si la mar lo había arrojado a la orilla. Pero, como ya he dicho, todo esto me negó el cielo, pues al mismo instante tornó a embravecerse el viento, de manera que el amparo de la isla no fue de algún provecho. Viendo esto Fetala, no quiso contrastar contra la fortuna, que tanto le perseguía, y así, mandó poner el trinquete al árbol y hacer un poco de vela; volvió la proa a la mar y la popa al viento; y, tomando él mismo el cargo del timón, se dejó correr por el ancho mar, seguro que ningún impedimento le estorbaría su camino. Iban los remos igualados en la crujía y toda la gente sentada por los bancos y ballesteras, sin que en toda la galeota se descubriese otra persona que la del cómitre, que por más seguridad suya se hizo atar fuertemente al estanterol. Volaba el bajel con tanta ligereza que, en tres días y tres noches, pasando a la vista de Trápana, de Melazo

y de Palermo, embocó por el faro de Micina, con maravilloso espanto de los que iban dentro y de aquellos que desde la tierra los miraban.

»En fin, por no ser tan prolijo en contar la tormenta como ella lo fue en su porfía, digo que cansados, hambrientos y fatigados con tan largo rodeo, como fue bajar casi toda la isla de Sicilia, llegamos a Trípol de Berbería, adonde a mi amo (antes de haber hecho con sus levantes la cuenta del despojo, y dádoles lo que les tocaba, y su quinto al rey, como es costumbre) le dio un dolor de costado tal, que dentro de tres días dio con él en el infierno. Púsose luego el rey de Trípol en toda su hacienda, y el alcaide de los muertos que allí tiene el Gran Turco (que, como sabes, es heredero de los que no le dejan en su muerte); estos dos tomaron toda la hacienda de Fetala, mi amo, y yo cupe a éste, que entonces era virrey de Trípol; y de allí a quince días le vino la patente de virrey de Chipre, con el cual he venido hasta aquí sin intento de rescatarme, porque él me ha dicho muchas veces que me rescate, pues soy hombre principal, como se lo dijeron los soldados de Fetala, jamás he acudido a ello, antes le he dicho que le engañaron los que le dijeron grandezas de mi posibilidad. Y si quieres, Mahamut, que te diga todo mi pensamiento, has de saber que no quiero volver a parte donde por alguna vía pueda tener cosa que me consuele, y quiero que, juntándose a la vida del cautiverio, los pensamientos y memorias que jamás me dejan de la muerte de Leonisa vengan a ser parte para que yo no la tenga jamás de gusto alguno. Y si es verdad que los continuos dolores forzosamente se han de acabar o acabar a quien los padece, los míos no podrán dejar de hacello, porque pienso darles rienda de manera que, a pocos días, den alcance a la miserable vida que tan contra mi voluntad sostengo.

Y en este «todavía» se le pegó la lengua al paladar, de manera que no pudo hablar más palabra ni detener las lágrimas, que, como suele decirse, hilo a hilo le corrían por el rostro, en tanta abundancia, que llegaron a humedecer el suelo. Acompañóle en ellas Mahamut; pero, pasándose aquel parasismo, causado de la memoria renovada en el amargo cuento, quiso Mahamut consolar a Ricardo con las mejores razones que supo; mas él se las atajó, diciéndole:

-Lo que has de hacer, amigo, es aconsejarme qué haré yo para caer en desgracia de mi amo, y de todos aquellos con quien yo comunicare; para que, siendo aborrecido dél y dellos, los unos y los otros me maltraten y persigan de suerte que, añadiendo dolor a dolor y pena a pena, alcance con brevedad lo que deseo, que es acabar la vida.

-Ahora he hallado ser verdadero -dijo Mahamut-, lo que suele decirse: que lo que se sabe sentir se sabe decir, puesto que algunas veces el sentimiento enmudece la lengua; pero, comoquiera que ello sea, Ricardo, ora llegue tu dolor a tus palabras, ora ellas se le aventajen, siempre has de hallar en mí un verdadero amigo, o para ayuda o para consejo; que, aunque mis pocos años y el desatino que he hecho en vestirme este hábito están dando voces que de ninguna destas dos cosas que te ofrezco se puede fiar ni esperar alguna, yo procuraré que no salga verdadera esta sospecha, ni pueda tenerse por cierta tal opinión. Y, puesto que tú no quieras ni ser aconsejado ni favorecido, no por eso dejaré de hacer lo que te conviniera, como suele hacerse con el enfermo, que pide lo que no le dan y le dan lo que le conviene. No hay en toda esta ciudad quien pueda ni valga más que el cadí, mi amo, ni aun el tuyo, que viene por visorrey della, ha de poder tanto; y, siendo esto así, como lo es, yo puedo decir que soy el que más puede en la ciudad, pues puedo con mi patrón todo lo que quiero. Digo esto, porque podría ser dar traza con él para que vinieses a ser suyo, y, estando en mi compañía, el tiempo nos dirá lo que habemos de hacer, así para consolarte, si quisieres o pudieres tener consuelo, y a mí para salir desta a mejor vida, o, a lo menos, a parte donde la tenga más segura cuando la deje.

-Yo te agradezco -respondió Ricardo-, Mahamut, la amistad que me ofreces, aunque estoy cierto que, con cuanto hicieres, no has de poder cosa que en mi provecho resulte. Pero dejemos ahora esto y vamos a las tiendas, porque, a lo que veo, sale de la ciudad mucha gente, y sin duda es el antiguo virrey que sale a estarse en la campaña, por dar lugar a mi amo que entre en la ciudad a hacer la residencia.

-Así es -dijo Mahamut-; ven, pues, Ricardo, y verás las ceremonias con que se reciben; que sé que gustarás de verlas.

-Vamos en buena hora -dijo Ricardo-; quizá te habré menester si acaso el guardián de los cautivos de mi amo me ha echado menos, que es un renegado, corso de nación y de no muy piadosas entrañas.

Con esto dejaron la plática, y llegaron a las tiendas a tiempo que llegaba el antiguo bajá, y el nuevo le salía a recibir a la puerta de la tienda.

Venía acompañado Alí Bajá (que así se llamaba el que dejaba el gobierno) de todos los jenízaros que de ordinario están de presidio en Nicosia, después que los turcos la ganaron, que serían hasta quinientos. Venían en dos alas o hileras, los unos con escopetas y los otros con alfanjes desnudos. Llegaron a la puerta del nuevo bajá Hazán, la rodearon todos, y Alí Bajá, inclinando el cuerpo, hizo reverencia a Hazán, y él con menos inclinación le saludó. Luego se entró Alí en el pabellón de Hazán, y los turcos le subieron sobre un poderoso caballo ricamente aderezado, y, trayéndole a la redonda de las tiendas y por todo un buen espacio de la campaña, daban voces y gritos, diciendo en su lengua: «¡Viva, viva Solimán sultán, y Hazán Bajá en su nombre!» Repitieron esto muchas veces, reforzando las voces y los alaridos, y luego le volvieron a la tienda, donde había quedado Alí Bajá, el cual, con el cadí y Hazán, se encerraron en ella por espacio de una hora solos. Dijo Mahamut a Ricardo que se habían encerrado a tratar de lo que convenía hacer en la ciudad cerca de las obras que Alí dejaba comenzadas. De allí a poco tiempo salió el cadí a la puerta de la tienda, y dijo a voces en lengua turquesca, arábica y griega, que todos los que quisiesen entrar a pedir justicia, o otra cosa contra Alí Bajá, podrían entrar libremente; que allí estaba Hazán Bajá, a quien el Gran Señor enviaba por virrey de Chipre, que les guardaría toda razón y justicia. Con esta licencia, los jenízaros dejaron desocupada la puerta de la tienda y dieron lugar a que entrasen los que quisiesen. Mahamut hizo que entrase con él Ricardo, que, por ser esclavo de Hazán, no se le impidió la entrada.

Entraron a pedir justicia, así griegos cristianos como algunos turcos, y todos de cosas de tan poca importancia, que las más despachó el cadí sin dar traslado a la parte, sin autos, demandas ni respuestas; que todas las causas, si no son las matrimoniales, se despachan en pie y en un punto, más a juicio de buen varón que por ley alguna. Y entre aquellos bárbaros, si lo son en esto, el cadí es el juez competente de todas las causas, que las abrevia en la uña y las sentencia en un soplo, sin que haya apelación de su sentencia para otro tribunal.

En esto entró un chاوز, que es como alguacil, y dijo que estaba a la puerta de la tienda un judío que traía a vender una hermosísima cristiana; mandó el cadí que le hiciese entrar, salió el chاوز, y volvió a entrar luego, y con él un venerable judío, que traía de la mano a una mujer vestida en hábito berberisco, tan bien aderezada y compuesta que no lo pudiera estar tan bien la más rica mora de Fez ni de Marruecos, que en aderezarse llevan la ventaja a todas las africanas, aunque entren las de Argel con sus perlas tantas. Venía cubierto el rostro con un tafetán carmesí; por las gargantas de los pies, que se descubrían, parecían dos carcajes (que así se llaman las manillas en arábigo), al parecer de puro oro; y en los brazos, que asimismo por una camisa de cendal delgado se descubrían o traslucían, traía otros carcajes de oro sembrados de muchas perlas; en resolución, en cuanto el traje, ella venía rica y gallardamente aderezada.

Admirados desta primera vista el cadí y los demás bajaes, antes que otra cosa dijese ni preguntase, mandaron al judío que hiciese que se quitase el antifaz la cristiana. Hízolo así, y descubrió un rostro que así deslumbró los ojos y alegró los corazones de los circunstantes, como el sol que, por entre cerradas nubes, después de mucha escuridad, se ofrece a los ojos de los que le desean: tal era la belleza de la cautiva cristiana, y tal su brío y su gallardía. Pero en quien con más efeto hizo impresión la maravillosa luz que había descubierto, fue en el lastimado Ricardo, como en aquel que mejor que otro la conocía, pues era su cruel y amada Leonisa, que tantas veces y con tantas lágrimas por él había sido tenida y llorada por muerta.

Quedó a la improvisa vista de la singular belleza de la cristiana traspasado y rendido el corazón de Alí, y en el mismo grado y con la misma herida se halló el de Hazán, sin quedarse esento de la amorosa llaga el del cadí, que, más suspenso que todos, no sabía quitar los ojos de los hermosos de Leonisa. Y, para encarecer las poderosas fuerzas de amor, se ha de saber que en aquel mismo punto nació en los corazones de los tres una, a su parecer, firme esperanza de alcanzarla y de gozarla; y así, sin querer saber el cómo, ni el dónde, ni el cuándo había venido a poder del judío, le preguntaron el precio que por ella quería.

El codicioso judío respondió que cuatro mil doblas, que vienen a ser dos mil escudos; mas, apenas hubo declarado el precio, cuando Alí Bajá dijo que él los daba por ella, y que fuese luego a contar el dinero a su tienda. Empero Hazán Bajá, que estaba de parecer de no dejarla, aunque aventurase en ello la vida, dijo:

-Yo asimismo doy por ella las cuatro mil doblas que el judío pide, y no las diera ni me pusiera a ser contrario de lo que Alí ha dicho si no me forzara lo que él mismo dirá que es razón que me obligue y fuerce, y es que esta gentil esclava no pertenece para ninguno de nosotros, sino para el Gran Señor solamente; y así, digo que en su nombre la compro: veamos ahora quién será el atrevido que me la quite.

-Yo seré -replicó Alí-, porque para el mismo efeto la compro, y estáme a mí más a cuento hacer al Gran Señor este presente, por la comodidad de llevarla luego a Constantinopla, granjeando con él la voluntad del Gran Señor; que, como hombre que quedo, Hazán, como tú vees, sin cargo alguno, he menester buscar medios de tenelle, de lo que tú estás seguro por tres años, pues hoy comienzas a mandar y a gobernar este riquísimo reino de Chipre. Así que, por estas razones y por haber sido yo el primero que ofrecí el precio por la cautiva, está puesto en razón, ¡oh Hazán!, que me la dejes.

-Tanto más es de agradecerme a mí -respondió Hazán-el procurarla y enviarla al Gran Señor, cuanto lo hago sin moverme a ello interés alguno; y, en lo de la comodidad de llevarla, una galeota armaré con sola mi chusma y mis esclavos que la lleve.

Azoróse con estas razones Alí, y, levantándose en pie, empuñó el alfanje, diciendo:

-Siendo, ¡oh Hazán!, mis intentos unos, que es presentar y llevar esta cristiana al Gran Señor, y, habiendo sido yo el comprador primero, está puesto en razón y en justicia que me la dejes a mí; y, cuando otra cosa pensares, este alfanje que empuño defenderá mi derecho y castigará tu atrevimiento.

El cadí, que a todo estaba atento, y que no menos que los dos ardía, temeroso de quedar sin la cristiana, imaginó cómo poder atajar el gran fuego que se había encendido, y, juntamente, quedarse con la cautiva, sin dar alguna sospecha de su dañada intención; y así, levantándose en pie, se puso entre los dos, que ya también lo estaban, y dijo:

-Sosiégate, Hazán, y tú, Alí, estáte quedo; que yo estoy aquí, que sabré y podré componer vuestras diferencias de manera que los dos consigáis vuestros intentos, y el Gran Señor, como deseáis, sea servido.

A las palabras del cadí obedecieron luego; y aun si otra cosa más dificultosa les mandara, hicieran lo mismo: tanto es el respecto que tienen a sus canas los de aquella dañada secta. Prosiguió, pues, el cadí, diciendo:

-Tú dices, Alí, que quieres esta cristiana para el Gran Señor, y Hazán dice lo mismo; tú alegas que por ser el primero en ofrecer el precio ha de ser tuya; Hazán te lo contradice; y, aunque él no sabe fundar su razón, yo hallo que tiene la misma que tú tienes, y es la intención, que sin duda debió de nacer a un mismo tiempo que la tuya, en querer comprar la esclava para el mismo efeto; sólo le llevaste tú la ventaja en haberte declarado primero, y esto no ha de ser parte para que de todo en todo quede defraudado su buen deseo; y así, me parece ser bien concertaros en esta forma: que la esclava sea de entrambos; y, pues el uso della ha de quedar a la voluntad del Gran Señor, para quien se compró, a él toca disponer della; y, en tanto, pagarás tú, Hazán, dos mil doblas, y Alí otras dos mil, y quedaráse la cautiva en poder mío para que en nombre de entrambos yo la envíe a Constantinopla, porque no quede sin algún premio, siquiera por haberme hallado presente; y así, me ofrezco de enviarla a mi costa, con la autoridad y decencia que se debe a quien se envía, escribiendo al Gran Señor todo lo que aquí ha pasado y la voluntad que los dos habéis mostrado a su servicio.

No supieron, ni pudieron, ni quisieron contradecirle los dos enamorados turcos; y, aunque vieron que por aquel camino no conseguían su deseo, hubieron de pasar por el parecer del cadí, formando y criando cada uno allá en su ánimo una esperanza que, aunque dudosa, les prometía poder llegar al fin de sus encendidos deseos. Hazán, que se quedaba por virrey en Chipre, pensaba dar tantas dádivas al cadí que, vencido y obligado, le diese la cautiva; Alí imaginó de hacer un hecho que le aseguró salir con lo que deseaba. Y, teniendo por cierto cada cual su designio, vinieron con facilidad en lo que el cadí quiso, y, de consentimiento y voluntad de los dos, se la entregaron luego, y luego pagaron al judío cada uno dos mil doblas. Dijo el judío que no la había de dar con los vestidos que tenía, porque valían otras dos mil doblas; y así era la verdad, a causa que en los cabellos, que parte por las espaldas sueltos traía y parte atados y enlazados por la frente, se parecían algunas hileras de perlas que con estremada gracia se enredaban con ellos. Las manillas de los pies y manos asimismo venían llenas de gruesas perlas. El vestido era una almalafa de raso verde, toda bordada y llena de trencillas de oro. En fin, les pareció a todos que el judío anduvo corto en el precio que pidió por el vestido, y el cadí, por no mostrarse menos liberal que los dos bajaes, dijo que él quería pagarle, porque de aquella manera se presentase al Gran Señor la cristiana. Tuviéronlo por bien los dos competidores, creyendo cada uno que todo había de venir a su poder.

Falta ahora por decir lo que sintió Ricardo de ver andar en almoneda su alma, y los pensamientos que en aquel punto le vinieron, y los temores que le sobresaltaron, viendo que el haber hallado a su querida prenda era para más perderla; no sabía darse a entender si estaba dormiendo o despierto, no dando crédito a sus mismos ojos de lo que veían, porque le parecía cosa imposible ver tan impensadamente delante dellos a la que pensaba que para siempre los había cerrado. Llegóse en esto a su amigo Mahamut y díjole:

-¿No la conoces, amigo?

-No la conozco -dijo Mahamut.

-Pues has de saber -replicó Ricardo- que es Leonisa.

-¿Qué es lo que dices, Ricardo? -dijo Mahamut.

-Lo que has oído -dijo Ricardo.

-Pues calla y no la descubras -dijo Mahamut-, que la ventura va ordenando que la tengas buena y próspera, porque ella va a poder de mi amo.

-¿Parécete -dijo Ricardo- que será bien ponerme en parte donde pueda ser visto?

-No -dijo Mahamut- porque no la sobresaltes o te sobresaltes, y no vengas a dar indicio de que la conoces ni que la has visto; que podría ser que redundase en perjuicio de mi designio.

-Seguiré tu parecer -respondió Ricardo.

Y así, anduvo huyendo de que sus ojos se encontrasen con los de Leonisa, la cual tenía los suyos, en tanto que esto pasaba, clavados en el suelo, derramando algunas lágrimas. Llegóse el cadí a ella, y, asiéndola de la mano, se la entregó a Mahamut, mandándole que la llevase a la ciudad y se la entregase a su señora Halima, y le dijese la tratase como a esclava del Gran Señor. Hízolo así Mahamut y dejó sólo a Ricardo, que con los ojos fue siguiendo a su estrella hasta que se le encubrió con la nube de los muros de Nicosia. Llegóse al judío y preguntóle que adónde había comprado, o en qué modo había venido a su poder aquella cautiva cristiana. El judío le respondió que en la isla de la Pantanalea la había comprado a unos turcos que allí habían dado al través; y, queriendo proseguir adelante, lo estorbó el venirle a llamar de parte de los bajaes, que querían preguntarle lo que Ricardo deseaba saber; y con esto se despidió dél.

En el camino que había desde las tiendas a la ciudad, tuvo lugar Mahamut de preguntar a Leonisa, en lengua italiana, que de qué lugar era. La cual le respondió que de la ciudad de Trápana. Preguntóle asimismo Mahamut si conocía en aquella ciudad a un caballero rico y noble que se llamaba Ricardo. Oyendo lo cual Leonisa, dio un gran suspiro y dijo:

-Sí conozco, por mi mal.

-¿Cómo por vuestro mal? -dijo Mahamut.

-Porque él me conoció a mí por el suyo y por mi desventura -respondió Leonisa.

-¿Y, por ventura -preguntó Mahamut-, conocistes también en la misma ciudad a otro caballero de gentil disposición, hijo de padres muy ricos, y él por su persona muy valiente, muy liberal y muy discreto, que se llamaba Cornelio?

-También le conozco -respondió Leonisa-, y podré decir más por mi mal que no a Ricardo. Mas, ¿quién sois vos, señor, que los conocéis y por ellos me preguntáis?

-Soy -dijo Mahamut-natural de Palermo, que por varios accidentes estoy en este traje y vestido, diferente del que yo solía traer, y conózcolos porque no ha muchos días que entrambos estuvieron en mi poder, que a Cornelio le cautivaron unos moros de Trípol de Berbería y le vendieron a un turco que le trujo a esta isla, donde vino con mercancías, porque es mercader de Rodas, el cual fiaba de Cornelio toda su hacienda.

-Bien se la sabrá guardar -dijo Leonisa-, porque sabe guardar muy bien la suya; pero decidme, señor, ¿cómo o con quién vino Ricardo a esta isla?

-Vino -respondió Mahamut-con un cosario que le cautivó estando en un jardín de la marina de Trápana, y con él dijo que habían cautivado a una doncella que nunca me quiso decir su nombre. Estuvo aquí algunos días con su amo, que iba a visitar el sepulcro de Mahoma, que está en la ciudad de Almedina, y al tiempo de la partida cayó Ricardo muy enfermo y indispuesto, que su amo me lo dejó, por ser de mi tierra, para que le curase y tuviese cargo dél hasta su vuelta, o que si por aquí no volviese, se le enviase a Constantinopla, que él me avisaría cuando allá estuviese. Pero el cielo lo ordenó de otra manera, pues el sin ventura de Ricardo, sin tener accidente alguno, en pocos días se acabaron los de su vida, siempre llamando entre sí a una Leonisa, a quien él me había dicho que quería más que a su vida y a su alma; la cual Leonisa me dijo que en una galeota que había dado al través en la isla de la Pantanalea se había ahogado, cuya muerte siempre lloraba y siempre plañía, hasta que le trujo a término de perder la vida, que yo no le sentí enfermedad en el cuerpo, sino muestras de dolor en el alma.

-Decidme, señor, -replicó Leonisa-, ese mozo que decís, en las pláticas que trató con vos (que, como de una patria, debieron ser muchas), ¿nombró alguna vez a esa Leonisa con todo el modo con que a ella y a Ricardo cautivaron?

-Sí nombró -dijo Mahamut-, y me preguntó si había aportado por esta isla una cristiana dese nombre, de tales y tales señas, a la cual holgaría de hallar para rescatarla, si es que su amo se había ya desengañado de que no era tan rica como él pensaba, aunque podía ser que por haberla gozado la tuviese en menos; que, como no pasasen de trecientos o cuatrocientos escudos, él los daría de muy buena gana por ella, porque un tiempo la había tenido alguna afición.

-Bien poca debía de ser -dijo Leonisa-, pues no pasaba de cuatrocientos escudos; más liberal es Ricardo, y más valiente y comedido; Dios perdone a quien fue causa de su muerte, que fui yo, que yo soy la sin ventura que él lloró por muerta; y sabe Dios si holgara de que él fuera vivo para pagarle con el sentimiento, que viera que tenía de su desgracia el que él mostró de la mía. Yo, señor, como ya os he dicho, soy la poco querida de Cornelio y la bien llorada de Ricardo, que, por muy muchos y varios casos, he venido a este miserable estado en que me veo; y, aunque es tan peligroso, siempre, por favor del cielo, he conservado en él la entereza de mi honor, con la cual vivo contenta en mi miseria. Ahora, ni sé donde estoy, ni quién es mi dueño, ni adónde han de dar conmigo mis contrarios hados, por lo cual os ruego, señor, siquiera por la sangre que de cristiano tenéis, me aconsejéis en mis trabajos; que, puesto que el ser muchos me han hecho algo advertida, sobrevienen cada momento tantos y tales, que no sé cómo me he de avenir con ellos.

A lo cual respondió Mahamut que él haría lo que pudiese en servirla, aconsejándola y ayudándola con su ingenio y con sus fuerzas; advirtiéndola de la diferencia que por su causa habían tenido los dos bajaes, y cómo quedaba en poder del cadí, su amo, para llevarla presentada al Gran Turco Selín a Constantinopla; pero que, antes que esto tuviese efeto, tenía esperanza en el verdadero Dios, en quien él creía, aunque mal cristiano, que lo había de disponer de otra manera, y que la aconsejaba se hubiese bien con Halima, la mujer del cadí, su amo, en cuyo poder había de estar hasta que la enviasen a Constantinopla, advirtiéndola de la condición de Halima; y con ésas le dijo otras cosas de su provecho, hasta que la dejó en su casa y en poder de Halima, a quien dijo el recaudo de su amo.

Recibióla bien la mora por verla tan bien aderezada y tan hermosa. Mahamut se volvió a las tiendas a contar a Ricardo lo que con Leonisa le había pasado; y, hallándole, se lo contó todo punto por punto, y, cuando llegó al del sentimiento que Leonisa había hecho cuando le dijo que era muerto, casi se le vinieron las lágrimas a los ojos. Díjole cómo había fingido el cuento del cautiverio de Cornelio, por ver lo que ella sentía; advirtiéndole la tibieza y la malicia con que de Cornelio había hablado; todo lo cual fue píctima para el afligido corazón de Ricardo, el cual dijo a Mahamut:

-Acuérdome, amigo Mahamut, de un cuento que me contó mi padre, que ya sabes cuán curioso fue, y oíste cuánta honra le hizo el Emperador Carlos Quinto, a quien siempre sirvió en honrosos cargos de la guerra. Digo que me contó que, cuando el Emperador estuvo sobre Túnez, y la tomó con la fuerza de la Goleta, estando un día en la campaña y en su tienda, le trujeron a presentar una mora por cosa singular en belleza, y que al tiempo que se la presentaron entraban algunos rayos del sol por unas partes de la tienda y daban en los cabellos de la mora, que con los mismos del sol en ser rubios competían: cosa nueva en las moras, que siempre se precian de tenerlos negros. Contaba que en aquella ocasión se hallaron en la tienda, entre otros muchos, dos caballeros españoles: el uno era andaluz y el otro era catalán, ambos muy discretos y ambos poetas; y, habiéndola visto el andaluz, comenzó con admiración a decir unos versos que ellos llaman coplas, con unas consonancias o consonantes dificultosos, y, parando en los cinco versos de la copla, se detuvo sin darle fin ni a la copla ni a la sentencia, por no ofrecérsele tan de improviso los consonantes necesarios para acabarla; mas el otro caballero, que estaba a su lado y había oído los versos, viéndole suspenso, como si le hurtara la media copla de la boca, la prosiguió y acabó con las mismas consonancias. Y esto mismo se me vino a la memoria cuando vi entrar a la hermosísima Leonisa por la tienda del bajá, no solamente escureciendo los rayos del sol si la tocaran, sino a todo el cielo con sus estrellas.

-Paso, no más -dijo Mahamut-; detente, amigo Ricardo, que a cada paso temo que has de pasar tanto la raya en las alabanzas de tu bella Leonisa que, dejando de parecer cristiano, parezcas gentil. Dime, si quieres, esos versos o coplas, o como los llamas, que después hablaremos en otras cosas que sean de más gusto, y aun quizá de más provecho.

-En buen hora -dijo Ricardo-; y vuélvete a advertir que los cinco versos dijo el uno y los otros cinco el otro, todos de improviso; y son éstos:

Como cuando el sol asoma
por una montaña baja
y de súbito nos toma,
y con su vista nos doma
nuestra vista y la relaja;
como la piedra balaja,
que no consiente carcoma,
tal es el tu rostro, Aja,
dura lanza de Mahoma,
que las mis entrañas raja.

-Bien me suenan al oído -dijo Mahamut-, y mejor me suena y me parece que estés para decir versos, Ricardo, porque el decirlos o el hacerlos requieren ánimos de ánimos desapasionados.

-También se suelen -respondió Ricardo-llorar endechas, como cantar himnos, y todo es decir versos; pero, dejando esto aparte, dime qué piensas hacer en nuestro negocio, que, puesto que no entendí lo que los bajaes trataron en la tienda, en tanto que tú llevaste a Leonisa, me lo contó un renegado de mi amo, veneciano, que se halló presente y entiende bien la lengua turquesca; y lo que es menester ante todas cosas es buscar traza cómo Leonisa no vaya a mano del Gran Señor.

-Lo primero que se ha de hacer -respondió Mahamut-es que tú vengas a poder de mi amo; que, esto hecho, después nos aconsejaremos en lo que más nos conviniere.

En esto, vino el guardián de los cautivos cristianos de Hazán, y llevó consigo a Ricardo. El cadí volvió a la ciudad con Hazán, que en breves días hizo la residencia de Alí y se la dio cerrada y sellada, para que se fuese a Constantinopla. Él se fue luego, dejando muy encargado al cadí que con brevedad enviase la cautiva, escribiendo al Gran Señor de modo que le aprovechase para sus pretensiones. Prometióselo el cadí con traidoras entrañas, porque las tenía hechas ceniza por la cautiva. Ido Alí lleno de falsas esperanzas, y quedando Hazán no vacío de ellas, Mahamut hizo de modo que Ricardo vino a poder de su amo. Íbanse los días, y el deseo de ver a Leonisa apretaba tanto a Ricardo, que no alcanzaba un punto de sosiego. Mudóse Ricardo el nombre en el de Mario, porque no llegase el suyo a oídos de Leonisa antes que él la viese; y el verla era muy dificultoso, a causa que los moros son en extremo celosos y encubren de todos los hombres los rostros de sus mujeres, puesto que en mostrarse ellas a los cristianos no se les hace de mal; quizá debe de ser que, por ser cautivos, no los tienen por hombres cabales.

Avino, pues, que un día la señora Halima vio a su esclavo Mario, y tan visto y tan mirado fue, que se le quedó grabado en el corazón y fijo en la memoria; y, quizá poco contenta de los abrazos flojos de su anciano marido, con facilidad dio lugar a un mal deseo, y con la misma dio cuenta dél a Leonisa, a quien ya quería mucho por su agradable condición y proceder discreto, y tratábala con mucho respecto, por ser prenda del Gran Señor. Díjole cómo el cadí había traído a casa un cautivo cristiano, de tan gentil donaire y parecer, que a sus ojos no había visto más lindo hombre en toda su vida, y que decían que era chilibí (que quiere decir caballero) y de la misma tierra de Mahamut, su renegado, y que no sabía cómo darle a entender su voluntad, sin que el cristiano la tuviese en poco por habérsela declarado. Preguntóle Leonisa cómo se llamaba el cautivo, y díjole Halima que se llamaba Mario; a lo cual replicó Leonisa:

-Si él fuera caballero y del lugar que dicen, yo le conociera, más dese nombre Mario no hay ninguno en Trápana; pero haz, señora, que yo le vea y hable, que te diré quién es y lo que dél se puede esperar.

-Así será -dijo Halima-, porque el viernes, cuando esté el cadí haciendo la zalá en la mezquita, le haré entrar acá dentro, donde le podrás hablar a solas; y si te pareciere darle indicios de mi deseo, haráslo por el mejor modo que pudieres.

Esto dijo Halima a Leonisa, y no habían pasado dos horas cuando el cadí llamó a Mahamut y a Mario, y, con no menos eficacia que Halima había descubierto su pecho a Leonisa, descubrió el enamorado viejo el suyo a sus dos esclavos, pidiéndoles consejo en lo que haría para gozar de la cristiana y cumplir con el Gran Señor, cuya ella era, diciéndoles que antes pensaba morir mil veces que entregalla una al Gran Turco. Con tales afectos decía su pasión el religioso moro, que la puso en los corazones de sus dos esclavos, que todo lo contrario de lo que él pensaba pensaban. Quedó puesto entre ellos que Mario, como hombre de su tierra, aunque había dicho que no la conocía, tomase la mano en solicitarla y en declararle la voluntad suya; y, cuando por este modo no se pudiese alcanzar, que usaría el de la fuerza, pues estaba en su poder. Y, esto hecho, con decir que era muerta, se escusarían de enviarla a Constantinopla.

Contentísimo quedó el cadí con el parecer de sus esclavos, y, con la imaginada alegría, ofreció desde luego libertad a Mahamut, mandándole la mitad de su hacienda después de sus días; asimismo prometió a Mario, si alcanzaba lo que quería, libertad y dineros con que volviese a su tierra rico, honrado y contento. Si él fue liberal en prometer, sus cautivos fueron pródigos ofreciéndole de alcanzar la luna del cielo, cuanto más a Leonisa, como él diese comodidad de hablarla.

-Ésa daré yo a Mario cuanta él quisiere -respondió el cadí-, porque haré que Halima se vaya en casa de sus padres, que son griegos cristianos, por algunos días; y, estando fuera, mandaré al portero que deje entrar a Mario dentro de casa todas las veces que él quisiere, y diré a Leonisa que bien podrá hablar con su paisano cuando le diere gusto.

Desta manera comenzó a volver el viento de la ventura de Ricardo, soplando en su favor, sin saber lo que hacían sus mismos amos.

Tomado, pues, entre los tres este apuntamiento, quien primero le puso en plática fue Halima, bien así como mujer, cuya naturaleza es fácil y arrojadiza para todo aquello que es de su gusto. Aquel mismo día dijo el cadí a Halima que cuando quisiese podría irse a casa de sus padres a holgarse con ellos los días que gustase. Pero, como ella estaba alborozada con las esperanzas que Leonisa le había dado, no sólo no se fuera a casa de sus padres, sino al fingido paraíso de Mahoma no quisiera irse; y así, le respondió que por entonces no tenía tal voluntad, y que cuando ella la tuviese lo diría, mas que había de llevar consigo a la cautiva cristiana.

-Eso no -replicó el cadí-, que no es bien que la prenda del Gran Señor sea vista de nadie; y más, que se le ha de quitar que converse con cristianos, pues sabéis que, en llegando a poder del Gran Señor, la han de encerrar en el serrallo y volverla turca, quiera o no quiera.

-Como ella ande conmigo -replicó Halima-, no importa que esté en casa de mis padres, ni que comunique con ellos, que más comunico yo, y no dejo por eso de ser buena turca; y más, que lo más que pienso estar en su casa serán hasta cuatro o cinco días, porque el amor que os tengo no me dará licencia para estar tanto ausente y sin veros.

No la quiso replicar el cadí, por no darle ocasión de engendrar alguna sospecha de su intención.

Llegóse en esto el viernes, y él se fue a la mezquita, de la cual no podía salir en casi cuatro horas; y, apenas le vio Halima apartado de los umbrales de casa, cuando mandó llamar a Mario; mas no le dejaba entrar un cristiano corso que servía de portero en la puerta del patio, si Halima no le diera voces que le dejase; y así, entró confuso y temblando, como si fuera a pelear con un ejército de enemigos.

Estaba Leonisa del mismo modo y traje que cuando entró en la tienda del Bajá, sentada al pie de una escalera grande de mármol que a los corredores subía. Tenía la cabeza inclinada sobre la palma de la mano derecha y el brazo sobre las rodillas, los ojos a la parte contraria de la puerta por donde entró Mario, de manera que, aunque él iba hacia la parte donde ella estaba, ella no le veía. Así como entró Ricardo, paseó toda la casa con los ojos, y no vio en toda ella sino un mudo y sosegado silencio, hasta que paró la vista donde Leonisa estaba. En un instante, al enamorado Ricardo le sobrevinieron tantos pensamientos, que le suspendieron y alegraron, considerándose veinte pasos, a su parecer, o poco más, desviado de su felicidad y contento: considerábase cautivo, y a su gloria en poder ajeno. Estas cosas revolviendo entre sí mismo, se movía poco a poco, y, con temor y sobresalto, alegre y triste, temeroso y esforzado, se iba llegando al centro donde estaba el de su alegría, cuando a deshora volvió el rostro Leonisa, y puso los ojos en los de Mario, que atentamente la miraba. Mas, cuando la vista de los dos se encontraron, con diferentes efectos dieron señal de lo que sus almas habían sentido. Ricardo se paró y no pudo echar pie adelante; Leonisa, que por la relación de Mahamut tenía a Ricardo por muerto, y el verle vivo tan no esperadamente, llena de temor y espanto, sin quitar dél los ojos ni volver las espaldas, volvió atrás cuatro o cinco escalones, y, sacando una pequeña cruz del seno, la besaba muchas veces, y se santiguó infinitas, como si alguna fantasma o otra cosa del otro mundo estuviera mirando.

Volvió Ricardo de su embelesamiento, y conoció, por lo que Leonisa hacía, la verdadera causa de su temor, y así le dijo:

-A mí me pesa, ¡oh hermosa Leonisa!, que no hayan sido verdad las nuevas que de mi muerte te dio Mahamut, porque con ella escusara los temores que ahora tengo de pensar si todavía está en su ser y entereza el rigor que continuo has usado conmigo. Sosiégate, señora, y baja, y si te atreves a hacer lo que nunca hiciste, que es llegarte a mí, llega y verás que no soy cuerpo fantástico: Ricardo soy, Leonisa; Ricardo, el de tanta ventura cuanta tú quisieres que tenga.

Púsose Leonisa en esto el dedo en la boca, por lo cual entendió Ricardo que era señal de que callase o hablase más quedo; y, tomando algún poco de ánimo, se fue llegando a ella en distancia que pudo oír estas razones:

-Habla paso, Mario, que así me parece que te llamas ahora, y no trates de otra cosa de la que yo te tratare; y advierte que podría ser que el habernos oído fuese parte para que nunca nos volviésemos a ver. Halima, nuestra ama, creo que nos escucha, la cual me ha dicho que te adora; hame puesto por intercesora de su deseo. Si a él quisieres corresponder, aprovecharte ha más para el cuerpo que para el alma; y, cuando no quieras, es forzoso que lo finjas, siquiera porque yo te lo ruego y por lo que merecen deseos de mujer declarados.

A esto respondió Ricardo:

-Jamás pensé ni pude imaginar, hermosa Leonisa, que cosa que me pidieras trujera consigo imposible de cumplirla, pero la que me pides me ha desengañado. ¿Es por ventura la voluntad tan ligera que se pueda mover y llevar donde quisieren llevarla, o estarle ha bien al varón honrado y verdadero fingir en cosas de tanto peso? Si a ti te parece que alguna destas cosas se debe o puede hacer, haz lo que más gustares, pues eres señora de mi voluntad; mas ya sé que también me engañas en esto, pues jamás la has conocido, y así no sabes lo que has de hacer della. Pero, a trueco que no digas que en la primera cosa que me mandaste dejaste de ser obedecida, yo perderé del derecho que debo a ser quien soy, y satisfaré tu deseo y el de Halima fingidamente, como dices, si es que se ha de granjear con esto el bien de verte; y así, finge tú las respuestas a tu gusto, que desde aquí las firma y confirma mi fingida voluntad. Y, en pago desto que por ti hago (que es lo más que a mi parecer podré hacer, aunque de nuevo te dé el alma que tantas veces te he dado), te ruego que brevemente me digas cómo escapaste de las manos de los cosarios y cómo veniste a las del judío que te vendió.

-Más espacio -respondió Leonisa-pide el cuento de mis desgracias, pero, con todo eso, te quiero satisfacer en algo. «Sabrás, pues, que, a cabo de un día que nos apartamos, volvió el bajel de Yzuf con un recio viento a la misma isla de la Pantanalea, donde también vimos a vuestra galeota; pero la nuestra, sin poderlo remediar, embistió en las peñas. Viendo, pues, mi amo tan a los ojos su perdición, vació con gran presteza dos barriles que estaban llenos de agua, tapólos muy bien, y atólos con cuerdas el uno con el otro; púsome a mí entre ellos, desnudóse luego, y, tomando otro barril entre los brazos, se ató con un cordel el cuerpo, y con el mismo cordel dio cabo a mis barriles, y con grande ánimo se arrojó a la mar, llevándome tras sí. Yo no tuve ánimo para arrojarme, que otro turco me impelió y me arrojó tras Yzuf, donde caí sin ningún sentido, ni volví en mí hasta que me hallé en tierra en brazos de dos turcos, que vuelta la boca al suelo me tenían, derramando gran cantidad de agua que había bebido. Abrí los ojos, atónita y espantada, y vi a Yzuf junto a mí, hecha la cabeza pedazos; que, según después supe, al llegar a tierra dio con ella en las peñas, donde acabó la vida. Los turcos asimismo me dijeron que, tirando de la cuerda, me sacaron a tierra casi ahogada; solas ocho personas se escaparon de la desdichada galeota.

señas al bajel, que estaba cerca de tierra, tanto que conoció ser turcos los que los llamaban, ellos contaron sus desgracias, y los moros los recibieron en su bajel, en el cual venía un judío, riquísimo mercader, y toda la mercancía del bajel, o la más, era suya; era de barraganes y alquiceles y de otras cosas que de Berbería se llevaban a Levante. En el mismo bajel los turcos se fueron a Trípol, y en el camino me vendieron al judío, que dio por mí dos mil doblas, precio excesivo, si no le hiciera liberal el amor que el judío me descubrió.

-No dices mal, señora -respondió Ricardo-, si la muerte no me hubiera estorbado el bien de volver a verte; que ahora en más estimo este instante de gloria que gozo en mirarte, que otra ventura, como no fuera la eterna, que en la vida o en la muerte pudiera asegurarme mi deseo. El que tiene mi amo el cadí, a cuyo poder he venido por no menos varios accidentes que los tuyos, es el mismo para contigo que para conmigo lo es el de Halima. Hame puesto a mí por intérprete de sus pensamientos; acepté la empresa, no por darle gusto, sino por el que granjeaba en la comodidad de hablarte, porque veas, Leonisa, el término a que nuestras desgracias nos han traído: a ti a ser medianera de un imposible, que en lo que me pides conoces; a mí a serlo también de la cosa que menos pensé, y de la que daré por no alcanzalla la vida, que ahora estimo en lo que vale la alta ventura de verte.

-No sé qué te diga, Ricardo -replicó Leonisa-, ni qué salida se tome al laberinto donde, como dices, nuestra corta ventura nos tiene puestos. Sólo sé decir que es menester usar en esto lo que de nuestra condición no se puede esperar, que es el fingimiento y engaño; y así, digo que de ti daré a Halima algunas razones que antes la entretengan que desesperen. Tú de mí podrás decir al cadí lo que para seguridad de mi honor y de su engaño vieres que más convenga; y, pues yo pongo mi honor en tus manos, bien puedes creer dél que le tengo con la entereza y verdad que podían poner en duda tantos caminos como he andado, y tantos combates como he sufrido. El hablarnos será fácil y a mí será de grandísimo gusto el hacello, con presupuesto que jamás me has de tratar cosa que a tu declarada pretensión pertenezca, que en la hora que tal hicieres, en la misma me despediré de verte, porque no quiero que pienses que es de tan pocos quilates mi valor, que ha de hacer con él la cautividad lo que la libertad no pudo: como el oro tengo de ser, con el favor del cielo, que mientras más se acrisola, queda con más pureza y más limpio. Conténtate con que he dicho que no me dará, como solía, fastidio tu vista, porque te hago saber, Ricardo, que siempre te tuve por desabrido y arrogante, y que presumías de ti algo más de lo que debías. Confieso también que me engañaba, y que podría ser que hacer ahora la experiencia me pusiese la verdad delante de los ojos el desengaño; y, estando desengañada, fuese, con ser honesta, más humana. Vete con Dios, que temo no nos haya escuchado Halima, la cual entiende algo de la lengua cristiana, a lo menos de aquella mezcla de lenguas que se usa, con que todos nos entendemos.

-Dices muy bien, señora -respondió Ricardo-, y agradézcote infinito el desengaño que me has dado, que le estimo en tanto como la merced que me haces en dejar verte; y, como tú dices, quizá la experiencia te dará a entender cuán llana es mi condición y cuán humilde, especialmente para adorarte; y sin que tú pusieras término ni raya a mi trato, fuera él tan honesto para contigo que no acertaras a desearle mejor. En lo que toca a entretener al cadí, vive descuidada; haz tú lo mismo con Halima, y entiende, señora, que después que te he visto ha nacido en mí una esperanza tal, que me asegura que presto hemos de alcanzar la libertad deseada. Y, con esto, quédate con Dios, que otra vez te contaré los rodeos por donde la fortuna me trujo a este estado, después que de ti me aparté, o, por mejor decir, me apartaron.

Con esto, se despidieron, y quedó Leonisa contenta y satisfecha del llano proceder de Ricardo, y él contentísimo de haber oído una palabra de la boca de Leonisa sin aspereza.

Estaba Halima cerrada en su aposento, rogando a Mahoma trujese Leonisa buen despacho de lo que le había encomendado. El cadí estaba en la mezquita recompensando con los suyos los deseos de su mujer, teniéndolos solícitos y colgados de la respuesta que esperaba oír de su esclavo, a quien había dejado encargado hablase a Leonisa, pues para poderlo hacer le daría comodidad Mahamut, aunque Halima estuviese en casa. Leonisa acrecentó en Halima el torpe deseo y el amor, dándole muy buenas esperanzas que Mario haría todo lo que pidiese; pero que había de dejar pasar primero dos lunes, antes que concediese con lo que deseaba él mucho más que ella; y este tiempo y término pedía, a causa que hacía una plegaria y oración a Dios para que le diese libertad. Contentóse Halima de la disculpa y de la relación de su querido Ricardo, a quien ella diera libertad antes del término devoto, como él concediera con su deseo; y así, rogó a Leonisa le rogase dispensase con el tiempo y acortase la dilación, que ella le ofrecía cuanto el cadí pidiese por su rescate.

Antes que Ricardo respondiese a su amo, se aconsejó con Mahamut de qué le respondería; y acordaron entre los dos que le desearasen y le aconsejasen que lo más presto que pudiese la llevase a Constantinopla, y que en el camino, o por grado o por fuerza, alcanzaría su deseo; y que, para el inconveniente que se podía ofrecer de cumplir con el Gran Señor, sería bueno comprar otra esclava, y en el viaje fingir o hacer de modo como Leonisa cayese enferma, y que una noche echarían la cristiana comprada a la mar, diciendo que era Leonisa, la cautiva del Gran Señor, que se había muerto; y que esto se podía hacer y se haría en modo que jamás la verdad fuese descubierta, y él quedase sin culpa con el Gran Señor y con el cumplimiento de su voluntad; y que, para la duración de su gusto, después se daría traza conveniente y más provechosa. Estaba tan ciego el mísero y anciano cadí que, si otros mil disparates le dijeran, como fueran encaminados a cumplir sus esperanzas, todos los creyera; cuanto más, que le pareció que todo lo que le decían llevaba buen camino y prometía próspero suceso; y así era la verdad, si la intención de los dos consejeros no fuera levantarse con el bajel y darle a él la muerte en pago de sus locos pensamientos. Ofreciósele al cadí otra dificultad, a su parecer mayor de las que en aquel caso se le podía ofrecer; y era pensar que su mujer Halima no le había de dejar ir a Constantinopla si no la llevaba consigo; pero presto la facilitó, diciendo que en cambio de la cristiana que habían de comprar para que muriese por Leonisa, serviría Halima, de quien deseaba librarse más que de la muerte.

Con la misma facilidad que él lo pensó, con la misma se lo concedieron Mahamut y Ricardo; y, quedando firmes en esto, aquel mismo día dio cuenta el cadí a Halima del viaje que pensaba hacer a Constantinopla a llevar la cristiana al Gran Señor, de cuya liberalidad esperaba que le hiciese Gran Cadí del Cairo o de Constantinopla. Halima le dijo que le parecía muy bien su determinación, creyendo que se dejaría a Ricardo en casa; mas, cuando el cadí le certificó que le había de llevar consigo y a Mahamut también, tornó a mudar de parecer y a desaconsejarle lo que primero le había aconsejado. En resolución, concluyó que si no la llevaba consigo, no pensaba dejarle ir en ninguna manera. Contentóse el cadí de hacer lo que ella quería, porque pensaba sacudir presto de su cuello aquella para él tan pesada carga.

No se descuidaba en este tiempo Hazán Bajá de solicitar al cadí le entregase la esclava, ofreciéndole montes de oro, y habiéndole dado a Ricardo de balde, cuyo

rescate apreciaba en dos mil escudos; facilitábale la entrega con la misma industria que él se había imaginado de hacer muerta la cautiva cuando el Gran Turco enviase por ella. Todas estas dádivas y promesas aprovecharon con el cadí no más de ponerle en la voluntad que abreviase su partida. Y así, solicitado de su deseo y de las importunaciones de Hazán, y aun de las de Halima, que también fabricaba en el aire vanas esperanzas, dentro de veinte días aderezó un bergantín de quince bancos, y le armó de buenas boyas, moros y de algunos cristianos griegos. Embarcó en él toda su riqueza, y Halima no dejó en su casa cosa de momento, y rogó a su marido que la dejase llevar consigo a sus padres, para que viesen a Constantinopla. Era la intención de Halima la misma que la de Mahamut: hacer con él y con Ricardo que en el camino se alzasen con el bergantín; pero no les quiso declarar su pensamiento hasta verse embarcada, y esto con voluntad de irse a tierra de cristianos, y volverse a lo que primero había sido, y casarse con Ricardo, pues era de creer que, llevando tantas riquezas consigo y volviéndose cristiana, no dejaría de tomarla por mujer.

En este tiempo habló otra vez Ricardo con Leonisa y le declaró toda su intención, y ella le dijo la que tenía Halima, que con ella había comunicado; encomendáronse los dos el secreto, y, encomendándose a Dios, esperaban el día de la partida, el cual llegado, salió Hazán acompañándolos hasta la marina con todos sus soldados, y no los dejó hasta que se hicieron a la vela, ni aun quitó los ojos del bergantín hasta perderle de vista; y parece que el aire de los suspiros que el enamorado moro arrojaba impelía con mayor fuerza las velas que le apartaban y llevaban el alma. Mas como aquel a quien el amor había tanto tiempo que sosegar no le dejaba, pensando en lo que había de hacer para no morir a manos de sus deseos, puso luego por obra lo que con largo discurso y resoluta determinación tenía pensado; y así, en un bajel de diez y siete bancos, que en otro puerto había hecho armar, puso en él cincuenta soldados, todos amigos y conocidos suyos, y a quien él tenía obligados con muchas dádivas y promesas, y dioles orden que saliesen al camino y tomasen el bajel del cadí y sus riquezas, pasando a cuchillo cuantos en él iban, si no fuese a Leonisa la cautiva; que a ella sola quería por despojo aventajado a los muchos haberes que el bergantín llevaba; ordenóles también que le echasen a fondo, de manera que ninguna cosa quedase que pudiese dar indicio de su perdición. La codicia del saco les puso alas en los pies y esfuerzo en el corazón, aunque bien vieron cuán poca defensa habían de hallar en los del bergantín, según iban desarmados y sin sospecha de semejante acontecimiento.

Dos días había ya que el bergantín caminaba, que al cadí se le hicieron dos siglos, porque luego en el primero quisiera poner en efeto su determinación; mas aconsejaronle sus esclavos que convenía primero hacer de suerte que Leonisa cayese mala, para dar color a su muerte, y que esto había de ser con algunos días de enfermedad. Él no quisiera sino decir que había muerto de repente, y acabar presto con todo, y despachar a su mujer y aplacar el fuego que las entrañas poco a poco le iba consumiendo; pero, en efeto, hubo de condecender con el parecer de los dos.

Ya en esto había Halima declarado su intento a Mahamut y a Ricardo, y ellos estaban en ponerlo por obra al pasar de las cruces de Alejandría, o al entrar de los castillos de la Natolia. Pero fue tanta la priesa que el cadí les daba, que se ofrecieron de hacerlo en la primera comodidad que se les ofreciese. Y un día, al cabo de seis que navegaban y que ya le parecía al cadí que bastaba el fingimiento de la enfermedad de Leonisa, importunó a sus esclavos que otro día concluyesen con Halima, y la arrojasen al mar amortajada, diciendo ser la cautiva del Gran Señor.

Amaneciendo, pues, el día en que, según la intención de Mahamut y de Ricardo, había de ser el cumplimiento de sus deseos, o del fin de sus días, descubrieron un bajel que a vela y remo les venía dando caza. Temieron fuese de cosarios cristianos, de los cuales, ni los unos ni los otros podían esperar buen suceso; porque, de serlo, se temía ser los moros cautivos, y los cristianos, aunque quedasen con libertad, quedarían desnudos y robados; pero Mahamut y Ricardo con la libertad de Leonisa y de la de entrambos se contentaran; con todo esto que se imaginaban, temían la insolencia de la gente cosaria, pues jamás la que se da a tales ejercicios, de cualquiera ley o nación que sea, deja de tener un ánimo cruel y una condición insolente. Pusiéronse en defensa, sin dejar los remos de las manos y hacer todo cuanto pudiesen; pero pocas horas tardaron que vieron que les iban entrando, de modo que en menos de dos se les pusieron a tiro de cañón. Viendo esto, amainaron, soltaron los remos, tomaron las armas y los esperaron, aunque el cadí dijo que no temiesen, porque el bajel era turquesco, y que no les haría daño alguno. Mandó poner luego una banderita blanca de paz en el peñol de la popa, por que le viesen los que, ya ciegos y codiciosos, venían con gran furia a embestir el mal defendido bergantín. Volvió, en esto, la cabeza Mahamut y vio que de la parte de poniente venía una galeota, a su parecer de veinte bancos, y díjoselo al cadí; y algunos cristianos que iban al remo dijeron que el bajel que se descubría era de cristianos; todo lo cual les dobló la confusión y el miedo, y estaban suspensos sin saber lo que harían, temiendo y esperando el suceso que Dios quisiese darles.

Paréceme que diera el cadí en aquel punto por hallarse en Nicosia toda la esperanza de su gusto: tanta era la confusión en que se hallaba, aunque le quitó presto della el bajel primero, que sin respecto de las banderas de paz ni de lo que a su religión debían, embistieron con el del cadí con tanta furia, que estuvo poco en echarle a fondo. Luego conoció el cadí los que le acometían, y vio que eran soldados de Nicosia y adivinó lo que podía ser, y dióse por perdido y muerto; y si no fuera que los soldados se dieron antes a robar que a matar, ninguno quedara con vida. Mas, cuando ellos andaban más encendidos y más atentos en su robo, dio un turco voces diciendo:

-¡Arma, soldados!, que un bajel de cristianos nos embiste.

Y así era la verdad, porque el bajel que descubrió el bergantín del cadí venía con insignias y banderas cristianescas, el cual llegó con toda furia a embestir el bajel de Hazán; pero, antes que llegase, preguntó uno desde la proa en lengua turquesca que qué bajel era aquél. Respondiéronle que era de Hazán Bajá, virrey de Chipre.

-¿Pues cómo -replicó el turco-, siendo vosotros mosolimanos, embestís y robáis a ese bajel, que nosotros sabemos que va en él el cadí de Nicosia?

A lo cual respondieron que ellos no sabían otra cosa más de que al bajel les había ordenado le tomasen, y que ellos, como sus soldados y obedientes, habían hecho su mandamiento.

Satisfecho de lo que saber quería, el capitán del segundo bajel, que venía a la cristianesca, dejóle embestir al de Hazán, y acudió al del cadí, y a la primera rociada mató más de diez turcos de los que dentro estaban, y luego le entró con grande ánimo y presteza; mas, apenas hubieron puesto los pies dentro, cuando el cadí conoció que el que le embestía no era cristiano, sino Alí Bajá, el enamorado de Leonisa, el cual, con el mismo intento que Hazán, había estado esperando su venida, y, por no ser conocido, había hecho vestidos a sus soldados como cristianos, para que con esta industria fuese más cubierto su hurto. El cadí, que conoció las intenciones de los amantes y traidores, comenzó a grandes voces a decir su maldad, diciendo:

-¿Qué es esto, traidor Alí Bajá? ¿Cómo, siendo tú mosolimán (que quiere decir turco), me salteas como cristiano? Y vosotros, traidores soldados de Hazán, ¿qué demonio os ha movido a acometer tan grande insulto? ¿Cómo, por cumplir el apetito lascivo del que aquí os envía, queréis ir contra vuestro natural señor?

A estas palabras suspendieron todos las armas, y unos a otros se miraron y se conocieron, porque todos habían sido soldados de un mismo capitán y militado debajo de una bandera; y, confundiéndose con las razones del cadí y con su mismo maleficio, ya se les embotaron los filos de los alfanjes y se les desamayaron los ánimos. Sólo Alí cerró los ojos y los oídos a todo, y arremetiendo al cadí, le dio una tal cuchillada en la cabeza que, si no fuera por la defensa que hicieron cien varas de toca con que venía ceñida, sin duda se la partiera por medio; pero, con todo, le derribó entre los bancos del bajel, y al caer dijo el cadí:

-¡Oh cruel renegado, enemigo de mi profeta! ¿Y es posible que no ha de haber quien castigue tu crueldad y tu grande insolencia? ¿Cómo, maldito, has osado poner las manos y las armas en tu cadí, y en un ministro de Mahoma?

Estas palabras añadieron fuerza a fuerza a las primeras, las cuales oídas de los soldados de Hazán, y movidos de temor que los soldados de Alí les habían de quitar la presa, que ya ellos por suya tenían, determinaron de ponerlo todo en aventura; y, comenzando uno y siguiéndole todos, dieron en los soldados de Alí con tanta priesa, rancor y brío, que en poco espacio los pararon tales, que, aunque eran muchos más que ellos, los redujeron a número pequeño; pero los que quedaron, volviendo sobre sí, vengaron a sus compañeros, no dejando de los de Hazán apenas cuatro con vida, y éstos muy malheridos.

Estábanlos mirando Ricardo y Mahamut, que de cuando en cuando sacaban la cabeza por el escutillón de la cámara de popa, por ver en qué paraba aquella grande herrería que sonaba; y, viendo cómo los turcos estaban casi todos muertos, y los vivos malheridos, y cuán fácilmente se podía dar cabo de todos, llamó a Mahamut y a dos sobrinos de Halima, que ella había hecho embarcar consigo para que ayudasen a levantar el bajel, y con ellos y con su padre, tomando alfanjes de los muertos, saltaron en crujía; y, apellidando «¡libertad, libertad!», y ayudados de las buenas boyas, cristianos griegos, con facilidad y sin recibir herida, los degollaron a todos; y, pasando sobre la galeota de Alí, que sin defensa estaba, la rindieron y ganaron con cuanto en ella venía. De los que en el segundo encuentro murieron, fue de los primeros Alí Bajá, que un turco, en venganza del cadí, le mató a cuchilladas.

Diéronse luego todos, por consejo de Ricardo, a pasar cuantas cosas había de precio en su bajel y en el de Hazán a la galeota de Alí, que era bajel mayor y acomodado para cualquier cargo o viaje, y ser los remeros cristianos, los cuales, contentos con la alcanzada libertad y con muchas cosas que Ricardo repartió entre todos, se ofrecieron de llevarle hasta Trápana, y aun hasta el cabo del mundo si quisiese. Y, con esto, Mahamut y Ricardo, llenos de gozo por el buen suceso, se fueron a la mora Halima y le dijeron que, si quería volverse a Chipre, que con las buenas boyas le armarían su mismo bajel, y le darían la mitad de las riquezas que había embarcado; mas ella, que en tanta calamidad aún no había perdido el cariño y amor que a Ricardo tenía, dijo que quería irse con ellos a tierra de cristianos, de lo cual sus padres se holgaron en extremo.

El cadí volvió en su acuerdo, y le curaron como la ocasión les dio lugar, a quien también dijeron que escogiese una de dos: o que se dejase llevar a tierra de cristianos, o volverse en su mismo bajel a Nicosia. Él respondió que, ya que la fortuna le había traído a tales términos, les agradecía la libertad que le daban, y que quería ir a Constantinopla a quejarse al Gran Señor del agravio que de Hazán y de Alí había recibido; mas, cuando supo que Halima le dejaba y se quería volver cristiana, estuvo en poco de perder el juicio. En resolución, le armaron su mismo bajel y le proveyeron de todas las cosas necesarias para su viaje, y aun le dieron algunos cequíes de los que habían sido suyos; y, despidiéndose de todos con determinación de volverse a Nicosia, pidió antes que se hiciese a la vela que Leonisa le abrazase, que aquella merced y favor sería bastante para poner en olvido toda su desventura. Todos suplicaron a Leonisa diese aquel favor a quien tanto la quería, pues en ello no iría contra el decoro de su honestidad. Hizo Leonisa lo que le rogaron, y el cadí le pidió le pusiese las manos sobre la cabeza, porque él llevase esperanzas de sanar de su herida; en todo le contentó Leonisa. Hecho esto y habiendo dado un barreno al bajel de Hazán, favoreciéndoles un levante fresco que parecía que llamaba las velas para entregarse en ellas, se las dieron, y en breves horas perdieron de vista al bajel del cadí, el cual, con lágrimas en los ojos, estaba mirando cómo se llevaban los vientos su hacienda, su gusto, su mujer y su alma.

Con diferentes pensamientos de los del cadí navegaban Ricardo y Mahamut; y así, sin querer tocar en tierra en ninguna parte, pasaron a la vista de Alejandría de golfo lanzado, y, sin amainar velas, y sin tener necesidad de aprovecharse de los remos, llegaron a la fuerte isla del Corfú, donde hicieron agua, y luego, sin detenerse, pasaron por los infamados riscos Acroceraunos; y desde lejos, al segundo día, descubrieron a Paquino, promontorio de la fertilísima Tinacria, a vista de la cual y de la insigne isla de Malta volaron, que no con menos ligereza navegaba el dichoso leño.

En resolución, bajando la isla, de allí a cuatro días descubrieron la Lampadosa, y luego la isla donde se perdieron, con cuya vista Leonisa se estremeció toda, viniéndole a la memoria el peligro en que en ella se había visto. Otro día vieron delante de sí la deseada y amada patria; renovóse la alegría en sus corazones, alborotáronse sus espíritus con el nuevo contento, que es uno de los mayores que en esta vida se puede tener, llegar después de luengo cautiverio salvo y sano a la patria. Y al que a éste se le puede igualar, es el que se recibe de la vitoria alcanzada de los enemigos.

Habíase hallado en la galeota una caja llena de banderetas y flámulas de diversas colores de sedas, con las cuales hizo Ricardo adornar la galeota. Poco después de amanecer sería, cuando se hallaron a menos de una legua de la ciudad, y, bogando a cuarteles, y alzando de cuando en cuando alegres voces y gritos, se iban llegando al puerto, en el cual en un instante pareció infinita gente del pueblo; que, habiendo visto cómo aquel bien adornado bajel tan de espacio se llegaba a tierra, no quedó gente en toda la ciudad que dejase de salir a la marina.

En este entretanto había Ricardo pedido y suplicado a Leonisa que se adornase y vistiese de la misma manera que cuando entró en la tienda de los bajaes, porque quería hacer una graciosa burla a sus padres. Hízolo así, y, añadiendo galas a galas, perlas a perlas, y belleza a belleza, que suele acrecentarse con el contento, se vistió de modo que de nuevo causó admiración y maravilla. Vistióse asimismo Ricardo a la turquesca, y lo mismo hizo Mahamut y todos los cristianos del remo, que para todos hubo en los vestidos de los turcos muertos. Cuando llegaron al puerto serían las ocho de la mañana, que tan serena y clara se mostraba, que parecía que estaba atenta mirando aquella alegre entrada. Antes de entrar en el puerto, hizo Ricardo disparar las piezas de la galeota, que eran un cañón de crujía y dos falconetes; respondió la ciudad con otras tantas.

Estaba toda la gente confusa, esperando llegase el bizarro bajel; pero, cuando vieron de cerca que era turquesco, porque se divisaban los blancos turbantes de los que moros parecían, temerosos y con sospecha de algún engaño, tomaron las armas y acudieron al puerto todos los que en la ciudad son de milicia, y la gente de a caballo se tendió por toda la marina; de todo lo cual recibieron gran contento los que poco a poco se fueron llegando hasta entrar en el puerto, dando fondo junto a tierra y arrojando en ella la plancha, soltando a una los remos, todos, uno a uno, como en procesión, salieron a tierra, la cual con lágrimas de alegría besaron una y muchas veces, señal clara que dio a entender ser cristianos que con aquel bajel se habían alzado. A la postre de todos salieron el padre y madre de Halima, y sus dos sobrinos, todos, como está dicho, vestidos a la turquesca; hizo fin y remate la hermosa Leonisa, cubierto el rostro con un tafetán carmesí. Traíanla en medio Ricardo y Mahamut, cuyo espectáculo llevó tras sí los ojos de toda aquella infinita multitud que los miraba.

En llegando a tierra, hicieron como los demás, besándola postrados por el suelo. En esto, llegó a ellos el capitán y gobernador de la ciudad, que bien conoció que eran los principales de todos; mas, apenas hubo llegado, cuando conoció a Ricardo, y corrió con los brazos abiertos y con señales de grandísimo contento a abrazarle. Llegaron con el gobernador Cornelio y su padre, y los de Leonisa con todos sus parientes, y los de Ricardo, que todos eran los más principales de la ciudad. Abrazó Ricardo al gobernador y respondió a todos los parabienes que le daban; trabó de la mano a Cornelio, el cual, como le conoció y se vio asido dél, perdió la color del rostro, y casi comenzó a temblar de miedo, y, teniendo asimismo de la mano a Leonisa, dijo:

-Por cortesía os ruego, señores, que, antes que entremos en la ciudad y en el templo a dar las debidas gracias a Nuestro Señor de las grandes mercedes que en nuestra desgracia nos ha hecho, me escuchéis ciertas razones que deciros quiero.

A lo cual el gobernador respondió que dijese lo que quisiese, que todos le escucharían con gusto y con silencio.

Rodeáronle luego todos los más de los principales; y él, alzando un poco la voz, dijo desta manera:

-Bien se os debe acordar, señores, de la desgracia que algunos meses ha en el jardín de las Salinas me sucedió con la pérdida de Leonisa; también no se os habrá caído de la memoria la diligencia que yo puse en procurar su libertad, pues, olvidándome del mío, ofrecí por su rescate toda mi hacienda (aunque ésta, que al parecer fue liberalidad, no puede ni debe redundar en mi alabanza, pues la daba por el rescate de mi alma). Lo que después acá a los dos ha sucedido requiere para más tiempo otra sazón y coyuntura, y otra lengua no tan turbada como la mía; baste deciros por ahora que, después de varios y estraños acaescimientos, y después de mil perdidas esperanzas de alcanzar remedio de nuestras desdichas, el piadoso cielo, sin ningún merecimiento nuestro, nos ha vuelto a la deseada patria, cuanto llenos de contento, colmados de riquezas; y no nace dellas ni de la libertad alcanzada el sin igual gusto que tengo, sino del que imagino que tiene ésta en paz y en guerra dulce enemiga mía, así por verse libre, como por ver, como vee, el retrato de su alma; todavía me alegro de la general alegría que tienen los que me han sido compañeros en la miseria. Y, aunque las desventuras y tristes acontecimientos suelen mudar las condiciones y aniquilar los ánimos valerosos, no ha sido así con el verdugo de mis buenas esperanzas; porque, con más valor y entereza que buenamente decirse puede, ha pasado el naufragio de sus desdichas y los encuentros de mis ardientes cuanto honestas importunaciones; en lo cual se verifica que mudan el cielo, y no las costumbres, los que en ellas tal vez hicieron asiento. De todo esto que he dicho quiero inferir que yo le ofrecí mi hacienda en rescate, y le di mi alma en mis deseos; di traza en su libertad y aventuré por ella, más que por la mía, la vida; y de todos éstos que, en otro sujeto más agradecido, pudieran ser cargos de algún momento, no quiero yo que lo sean; sólo quiero lo sea éste en que te pongo ahora.

Y, diciendo esto, alzó la mano y con honesto comedimiento quitó el antifaz del rostro de Leonisa, que fue como quitarse la nube que tal vez cubre la hermosa claridad del sol, y prosiguió diciendo:

-Vees aquí, ¡oh Cornelio!, te entrego la prenda que tú debes de estimar sobre todas las cosas que son dignas de estimarse; y vees aquí tú, ¡hermosa Leonisa!, te doy al que tú siempre has tenido en la memoria. Ésta sí quiero que se tenga por liberalidad, en cuya comparación dar la hacienda, la vida y la honra no es nada. Recíbela, ¡oh venturoso mancebo!; recíbela, y si llega tu conocimiento a tanto que llegue a conocer valor tan grande, estímate por el más venturoso de la tierra. Con ella te daré asimismo todo cuanto me tocara de parte en lo que a todos el cielo nos ha dado, que bien creo que pasará de treinta mil escudos. De todo puedes gozar a tu sabor con libertad, quietud y descanso; y plega al cielo que sea por luengos y felices años. Yo, sin ventura, pues quedo sin Leonisa, gusto de quedar pobre, que a quien Leonisa le falta, la vida le sobra.

Y en diciendo esto calló, como si al paladar se le hubiera pegado la lengua; pero, desde allí a un poco, antes que ninguno hablase, dijo:

-¡Válame Dios, y cómo los apretados trabajos turban los entendimientos! Yo, señores, con el deseo que tengo de hacer bien, no he mirado lo que he dicho, porque no es posible que nadie pueda mostrarse liberal de lo ajeno: ¿qué jurisdicción tengo yo en Leonisa para darla a otro? O, ¿cómo puedo ofrecer lo que está tan lejos de ser mío? Leonisa es suya, y tan suya que, a faltarle sus padres, que felices años vivan, ningún opósito tuviera a su voluntad; y si se pudieran poner las obligaciones que como discreta debe de pensar que me tiene, desde aquí las borro, las cancelo y doy por ningunas; y así, de lo dicho me desdigo, y no doy a Cornelio nada, pues no puedo; sólo confirmo la manda de mi hacienda hecha a Leonisa, sin querer otra recompensa sino que tenga por verdaderos mis honestos pensamientos, y que crea dellos que nunca se encaminaron ni miraron a otro punto que el que pide su incomparable honestidad, su grande valor e infinita hermosura.

Calló Ricardo, en diciendo esto; a lo cual Leonisa respondió en esta manera:

-Si algún favor, ¡oh Ricardo!, imaginas que yo hice a Cornelio en el tiempo que tú andabas de mí enamorado y celoso, imagina que fue tan honesto como guiado por la voluntad y orden de mis padres, que, atentos a que le moviesen a ser mi esposo, permitían que se los diese; si quedas desto satisfecho, bien lo estarás de lo que de mí te ha mostrado la experiencia cerca de mi honestidad y recato. Esto digo por darte a entender, Ricardo, que siempre fui mía, sin estar sujeta a otro que a mis padres, a quien ahora humildemente, como es razón, suplico me den licencia y libertad para disponer la que tu mucha valentía y liberalidad me ha dado.

Sus padres dijeron que se la daban, porque fiaban de su discreción que usaría della de modo que siempre redundase en su honra y en su provecho.

-Pues con esa licencia -prosiguió la discreta Leonisa-, quiero que no se me haga de mal mostrarme desenvuelta, a trueque de no mostrarme desagradecida; y así, ¡oh valiente Ricardo!, mi voluntad, hasta aquí recatada, perpleja y dudosa, se declara en favor tuyo; porque sepan los hombres que no todas las mujeres son ingratas, mostrándome yo siquiera agradecida. Tuya soy, Ricardo, y tuya será hasta la muerte, si ya otro mejor conocimiento no te mueve a negar la mano que de mi esposo te pido.

Quedó como fuera de sí a estas razones Ricardo, y no supo ni pudo responder con otras a Leonisa, que con hincarse de rodillas ante ella y besarle las manos, que le tomó por fuerza muchas veces, bañándoselas en tiernas y amorosas lágrimas. Derramólas Cornelio de pesar, y de alegría los padres de Leonisa, y de admiración y de contento todos los circunstantes. Hallóse presente el obispo o arzobispo de la ciudad, y con su bendición y licencia los llevó al templo, y, dispensando en el tiempo, los desposó en el mismo punto. Derramóse la alegría por toda la ciudad, de la cual dieron muestra aquella noche infinitas luminarias, y otros muchos días la dieron muchos juegos y regocijos que hicieron los parientes de Ricardo y de Leonisa. Reconciliáronse con la iglesia Mahamut y Halima, la cual, imposibilitada de cumplir el deseo de verse esposa de Ricardo, se contentó con serlo de Mahamut. A sus padres y a los sobrinos de Halima dio la liberalidad de Ricardo, de las partes que le cupieron del despojo, suficientemente con que viviesen. Todos, en fin, quedaron contentos, libres y satisfechos; y la fama de Ricardo, saliendo de los términos de Sicilia, se extendió por todos los de Italia y de otras muchas partes, debajo del nombre del amante liberal; y aún hasta hoy dura en los muchos hijos que tuvo en Leonisa, que fue ejemplo raro de discreción, honestidad, recato y hermosura.

Rinconete y Cortadillo

EN LA VENTA del Molinillo, que está puesta en los fines de los famosos campos de Alcudia, como vamos de Castilla a la Andalucía, un día de los calurosos del verano, se hallaron en ella acaso dos muchachos de hasta edad de catorce a quince años: el uno ni el otro no pasaban de diez y siete; ambos de buena gracia, pero muy descosidos, rotos y maltratados; capa, no la tenían; los calzones eran de lienzo y las medias de carne. Bien es verdad que lo enmendaban los zapatos, porque los del uno eran alpargates, tan traídos como llevados, y los del otro picados y sin suelas, de manera que más le servían de cormas que de zapatos. Traía el uno montera verde de cazador, el otro un sombrero sin toquilla, bajo de copa y ancho de falda. A la espalda y ceñida por los pechos, traía el uno una camisa de color de camuza, encerrada y recogida toda en una manga; el otro venía escueto y sin alforjas, puesto que en el seno se le parecía un gran bulto, que, a lo que después pareció, era un cuello de los que llaman valones, almidonado con grasa, y tan deshilado de roto, que todo parecía hilachas. Venían en él envueltos y guardados unos naipes de figura ovada, porque de ejercitarlos se les habían gastado las puntas, y porque durasen más se las cercenaron y los dejaron de aquel talle. Estaban los dos quemados del sol, las uñas caireladas y las manos no muy limpias; el uno tenía una media espada, y el otro un cuchillo de cachas amarillas, que los suelen llamar vaqueros.

Saliéronse los dos a sestear en un portal, o cobertizo, que delante de la venta se hace; y, sentándose frontero el uno del otro, el que parecía de más edad dijo al más pequeño:

-¿De qué tierra es vuesa merced, señor gentilhombre, y para adónde bueno camina?

-Mi tierra, señor caballero -respondió el preguntado-, no la sé, ni para dónde camino, tampoco.

-Pues en verdad -dijo el mayor- que no parece vuesa merced del cielo, y que éste no es lugar para hacer su asiento en él; que por fuerza se ha de pasar adelante.

-Así es -respondió el mediano-, pero yo he dicho verdad en lo que he dicho, porque mi tierra no es mía, pues no tengo en ella más de un padre que no me tiene por hijo y una madrastra que me trata como alnado; el camino que llevo es a la ventura, y allí le daría fin donde hallase quien me diese lo necesario para pasar esta miserable vida.

-Y ¿sabe vuesa merced algún oficio? -preguntó el grande.

Y el menor respondió:

-No sé otro sino que corro como una liebre, y salto como un gamo y corto de tijera muy delicadamente.

-Todo eso es muy bueno, útil y provechoso -dijo el grande-, porque habrá sacristán que le dé a vuesa merced la ofrenda de Todos Santos, porque para el Jueves Santo le corte florones de papel para el monumento.

-No es mi corte desamano -respondió el menor-, sino que mi padre, por la misericordia del cielo, es sastre y calcetero, y me enseñó a cortar antiparas, que, como vuesa merced bien sabe, son medias calzas con avampiés, que por su propio nombre se suelen llamar polainas; y córtolas tan bien, que en verdad que me podría examinar de maestro, sino que la corta suerte me tiene arrinconado.

-Todo eso y más acontece por los buenos -respondió el grande-, y siempre he oído decir que las buenas habilidades son las más perdidas, pero aún edad tiene vuesa merced para enmendar su ventura. Mas, si yo no me engaño y el ojo no me miente, otras gracias tiene vuesa merced secretas, y no las quiere manifestar.

-Sí tengo -respondió el pequeño-, pero no son para en público, como vuesa merced ha muy bien apuntado.

A lo cual replicó el grande:

-Pues yo le sé decir que soy uno de los más secretos mozos que en gran parte se puedan hallar; y, para obligar a vuesa merced que descubra su pecho y descanse conmigo, le quiero obligar con descubrirle el mío primero; porque imagino que no sin misterio nos ha juntado aquí la suerte, y pienso que habemos de ser, déste hasta el último día de nuestra vida, verdaderos amigos. «Yo, señor hidalgo, soy natural de la Fuenfrida, lugar conocido y famoso por los ilustres pasajeros que por él de continuo pasan; mi nombre es Pedro del Rincón; mi padre es persona de calidad, porque es ministro de la Santa Cruzada: quiero decir que es bulero, o buldero, como los llama el vulgo. Algunos días le acompañé en el oficio, y le aprendí de manera, que no daría ventaja en echar las bulas al que más presumiese en ello. Pero, habiéndome un día aficionado más al dinero de las bulas que a las mismas bulas, me abracé con un talego y di conmigo y con él en Madrid, donde con las comodidades que allí de ordinario se ofrecen, en pocos días saqué las entrañas al talego y le dejé con más dobleces que pañizuelo de desposado. Vino el que tenía a cargo el dinero tras mí, prendiéronme, tuve poco favor, aunque, viendo aquellos señores mi poca edad, se contentaron con que me arrimasen al aldabilla y me mosqueasen las espaldas por un rato, y con que saliese desterrado por cuatro años de la Corte. Tuve paciencia, encogí los hombros, sufrí la tanda y mosqueo, y salí a cumplir mi destierro, con tanta priesa, que no tuve lugar de buscar cabalgaduras. Tomé de mis alhajas las que pude y las que me parecieron más necesarias, y entre ellas saqué estos naipes -y a este tiempo descubrió los que se han dicho, que en el cuello traía-, con los cuales he ganado mi vida por los mesones y ventas que hay desde Madrid aquí, jugando a la veintiuna;» y, aunque vuesa merced los vee tan astrosos y maltratados, usan de una maravillosa virtud con quien los entiende, que no alzarán que no quede un as debajo. Y si vuesa merced es versado en este juego, verá cuánta ventaja lleva el que sabe que tiene cierto un as a la primera carta, que le puede servir de un punto y de once; que con esta ventaja, siendo la veintiuna envidada, el dinero se queda en casa. Fuera desto, aprendí de un cocinero de un cierto embajador ciertas tretas de quínolas y del parar, a quien también llaman el andaboba; que, así como vuesa merced se puede examinar en el corte de sus antiparas, así puedo yo ser maestro en la ciencia vilhanesca. Con esto voy seguro de no morir de hambre, porque, aunque llegue a un cortijo, hay quien quiera pasar tiempo jugando un rato. Y desto hemos de hacer luego la experiencia los dos: armemos la red, y veamos si cae algún pájaro destos arrieros que aquí hay; quiero decir que jugaremos los dos a la veintiuna, como si fuese de veras; que si alguno quisiere ser tercero, él será el primero que deje la pecunia.

-Sea en buen hora -dijo el otro-, y en merced muy grande tengo la que vuesa merced me ha hecho en darme cuenta de su vida, con que me ha obligado a que yo no le encubra la mía, que, diciéndola más breve, es ésta: «yo nací en el piadoso lugar puesto entre Salamanca y Medina del Campo; mi padre es sastre, enseñóme su oficio, y de corte de tiseras, con mi buen ingenio, salté a cortar bolsas. Enfadóme la vida estrecha del aldea y el desamorado trato de mi madrastra. Dejé mi pueblo, vine a Toledo a ejercitar mi oficio, y en él he hecho maravillas; porque no pende relicario de toca ni hay faldriquera tan escondida que mis dedos no visiten ni mis tiseras no corten, aunque le estén guardando con ojos de Argos. Y, en cuatro meses que estuve en aquella ciudad, nunca fui cogido entre puertas, ni sobresaltado ni corrido de corchetes, ni soplado de ningún cañuto. Bien es verdad que habrá ocho días que una espía doble dio noticia de mi habilidad al Corregidor, el cual, aficionado a mis buenas partes, quisiera verme; mas yo, que, por ser humilde, no quiero tratar con personas tan graves, procuré de no verme con él, y así, salí de la ciudad con tanta priesa, que no tuve lugar de acomodarme de cabalgaduras ni blancas, ni de algún coche de retorno, o por lo menos de un carro.»

-Eso se borre -dijo Rincón-; y, pues ya nos conocemos, no hay para qué aquesas grandezas ni altiveces: confesemos llanamente que no teníamos blanca, ni aun zapatos.

-Sea así -respondió Diego Cortado, que así dijo el menor que se llamaba-; y, pues nuestra amistad, como vuesa merced, señor Rincón, ha dicho, ha de ser perpetua, comencémosla con santas y loables ceremonias.

Y, levantándose, Diego Cortado abrazó a Rincón y Rincón a él tierna y estrechamente, y luego se pusieron los dos a jugar a la veintiuna con los ya referidos naipes, limpios de polvo y de paja, mas no de grasa y malicia; y, a pocas manos, alzaba tan bien por el as Cortado como Rincón, su maestro.

Salió en esto un arriero a refrescarse al portal, y pidió que quería hacer tercio. Acogieronle de buena gana, y en menos de media hora le ganaron doce reales y veinte y dos maravedís, que fue darle doce lanzadas y veinte y dos mil pesadumbres. Y, creyendo el arriero que por ser muchachos no se lo defenderían, quiso quitalles el dinero; mas ellos, poniendo el uno mano a su media espada y el otro al de las cachas amarillas, le dieron tanto que hacer, que, a no salir sus compañeros, sin duda lo pasara mal.

A esta sazón, pasaron acaso por el camino una tropa de caminantes a caballo, que iban a sestar a la venta del Alcalde, que está media legua más adelante, los cuales, viendo la pendencia del arriero con los dos muchachos, los apaciguaron y les dijeron que si acaso iban a Sevilla, que se viniesen con ellos.

-Allá vamos -dijo Rincón-, y serviremos a vuestas mercedes en todo cuanto nos mandaren.

Y, sin más detenerse, saltaron delante de las mulas y se fueron con ellos, dejando al arriero agraviado y enojado, y a la ventera admirada de la buena crianza de los pícaros, que les había estado oyendo su plática sin que ellos advirtiesen en ello. Y, cuando dijo al arriero que les había oído decir que los naipes que traían eran falsos, se pelaba las barbas, y quisiera ir a la venta tras ellos a cobrar su hacienda, porque decía que era grandísima afrenta, y caso de menos valer, que dos muchachos hubiesen engañado a un hombrazo tan grande como él. Sus compañeros le detuvieron y aconsejaron que no fuese, siquiera por no publicar su inhabilidad y simpleza. En fin, tales razones le dijeron, que, aunque no le consolaron, le obligaron a quedarse.

En esto, Cortado y Rincón se dieron tan buena maña en servir a los caminantes, que lo más del camino los llevaban a las ancas; y, aunque se les ofrecían algunas ocasiones de tentar las valijas de sus medios amos, no las admitieron, por no perder la ocasión tan buena del viaje de Sevilla, donde ellos tenían grande deseo de verse.

Con todo esto, a la entrada de la ciudad, que fue a la oración y por la puerta de la Aduana, a causa del registro y almojarifazgo que se paga, no se pudo contener Cortado de no cortar la valija o maleta que a las ancas traía un francés de la camarada; y así, con el de sus cachas le dio tan larga y profunda herida, que se parecían patentemente las entrañas, y sutilmente le sacó dos camisas buenas, un reloj de sol y un librito de memoria, cosas que cuando las vieron no les dieron mucho gusto; y pensaron que, pues el francés llevaba a las ancas aquella maleta, no la había de haber ocupado con tan poco peso como era el que tenían aquellas preseas, y quisieran volver a darle otro tiento; pero no lo hicieron, imaginando que ya lo habrían echado menos y puesto en recaudo lo que quedaba.

Habíanse despedido antes que el salto hiciesen de los que hasta allí los habían sustentado, y otro día vendieron las camisas en el malbaratillo que se hace fuera de la puerta del Arenal, y dellas hicieron veinte reales. Hecho esto, se fueron a ver la ciudad, y admiróles la grandeza y sumptuosidad de su mayor iglesia, el gran concurso de gente del río, porque era en tiempo de cargazón de flota y había en él seis galeras, cuya vista les hizo suspirar, y aun temer el día que sus culpas les habían de traer a morar en ellas de por vida. Echaron de ver los muchos muchachos de la esportilla que por allí andaban; informáronse de uno dellos qué oficio era aquél, y si era de mucho trabajo, y de qué ganancia.

Un muchacho asturiano, que fue a quien le hicieron la pregunta, respondió que el oficio era descansado y de que no se pagaba alcabala, y que algunos días salía con cinco y con seis reales de ganancia, con que comía y bebía y triunfaba como cuerpo de rey, libre de buscar amo a quien dar fianzas y seguro de comer a la hora que quisiese, pues a todas lo hallaba en el más mínimo bodegón de toda la ciudad.

No les pareció mal a los dos amigos la relación del asturianillo, ni les descontentó el oficio, por parecerles que venía como de molde para poder usar el suyo con cubierta y seguridad, por la comodidad que ofrecía de entrar en todas las casas; y luego determinaron de comprar los instrumentos necesarios para usalle, pues lo podían usar sin examen. Y, preguntándole al asturiano qué habían de comprar, les respondió que sendos costales pequeños, limpios o nuevos, y cada uno tres espuestas de palma, dos grandes y una pequeña, en las cuales se repartía la carne, pescado y fruta, y en el costal, el pan; y él les guió donde lo vendían, y ellos, del dinero de la galima del francés, lo compraron todo, y dentro de dos horas pudieran estar graduados en el nuevo oficio, según les ensayaban las esportillas y asentaban los costales. Avisóles su adalid de los puestos donde habían de acudir: por las mañanas, a la Carnicería y a la plaza de San Salvador; los días de pescado, a la Pescadería y a la Costanilla; todas las tardes, al río; los jueves, a la Feria.

Toda esta lición tomaron bien de memoria, y otro día bien de mañana se plantaron en la plaza de San Salvador; y, apenas hubieron llegado, cuando los rodearon otros mozos del oficio, que, por lo flamante de los costales y espuestas, vieron ser nuevos en la plaza; hiciéronles mil preguntas, y a todas respondían con discreción y mesura. En esto, llegaron un medio estudiante y un soldado, y, convidados de la limpieza de las espuestas de los dos novatos, el que parecía estudiante llamó a Cortado, y el soldado a Rincón.

-En nombre sea de Dios -dijeron ambos.

-Para bien se comience el oficio -dijo Rincón-, que vuesa merced me estrena, señor mío.

A lo cual respondió el soldado:

-La estrena no será mala, porque estoy de ganancia y soy enamorado, y tengo de hacer hoy banquete a unas amigas de mi señora.

-Pues cargue vuesa merced a su gusto, que ánimo tengo y fuerzas para llevarme toda esta plaza, y aun si fuere menester que ayude a guisarlo, lo haré de muy buena voluntad.

Contentóse el soldado de la buena gracia del mozo, y díjole que si quería servir, que él le sacaría de aquel abatido oficio. A lo cual respondió Rincón que, por ser aquel día el primero que le usaba, no le quería dejar tan presto, hasta ver, a lo menos, lo que tenía de malo y bueno; y, cuando no le contentase, él daba su palabra de servirle a él antes que a un canónigo.

Rióse el soldado, cargóle muy bien, mostróle la casa de su dama, para que la supiese de allí adelante y él no tuviese necesidad, cuando otra vez le enviase, de acompañarle. Rincón prometió fidelidad y buen trato. Diole el soldado tres cuartos, y en un vuelo volvió a la plaza, por no perder coyuntura; porque también desta diligencia les advirtió el asturiano, y de que cuando llevasen pescado menudo (conviene a saber: albuces, o sardinas o acedías), bien podían tomar algunas y hacerles la salva, siquiera para el gasto de aquel día; pero que esto había de ser con toda sagacidad y advertimiento, porque no se perdiese el crédito, que era lo que más importaba en aquel ejercicio.

Por presto que volvió Rincón, ya halló en el mismo puesto a Cortado. Llegóse Cortado a Rincón, y preguntóle que cómo le había ido. Rincón abrió la mano y mostróle los tres cuartos. Cortado entró la suya en el seno y sacó una bolsilla, que mostraba haber sido de ámbar en los pasados tiempos; venía algo hinchada, y dijo:

-Con ésta me pagó su reverencia del estudiante, y con dos cuartos; mas tomadla vos, Rincón, por lo que puede suceder.

Y, habiéndosela ya dado secretamente, veis aquí do vuelve el estudiante trasudando y turbado de muerte; y, viendo a Cortado, le dijo si acaso había visto una bolsa de tales y tales señas, que, con quince escudos de oro en oro y con tres reales de a dos y tantos maravedís en cuartos y en ochavos, le faltaba, y que le dijese si la había tomado en el entretanto que con él había andado comprando. A lo cual, con estraño disimulo, sin alterarse ni mudarse en nada, respondió Cortado:

-Lo que yo sabré decir desa bolsa es que no debe de estar perdida, si ya no es que vuesa merced la puso a mal recaudo.

-¡Eso es ello, pecador de mí -respondió el estudiante-: que la debí de poner a mal recaudo, pues me la hurtaron!

-Lo mismo digo yo -dijo Cortado-; pero para todo hay remedio, si no es para la muerte, y el que vuesa merced podrá tomar es, lo primero y principal, tener paciencia; que de menos nos hizo Dios y un día viene tras otro día, y donde las dan las toman; y podría ser que, con el tiempo, el que llevó la bolsa se viniese a arrepentir y se la volviese a vuesa merced sahumada.

-El sahumero le perdonaríamos -respondió el estudiante.

Y Cortado prosiguió diciendo:

-Cuanto más, que cartas de descomuni3n hay, paulinas, y buena diligencia, que es madre de la buena ventura; aunque, a la verdad, no quisiera yo ser el llevador de tal bolsa; porque, si es que vuesa merced tiene alguna orden sacra, parecerme hía a mí que había cometido alg3n grande incesto, o sacrilegio.

-Y ¡cómo que ha cometido sacrilegio! -dijo a esto el adolorido estudiante-; que, puesto que yo no soy sacerdote, sino sacristán de unas monjas, el dinero de la bolsa era del tercio de una capellanía, que me dio a cobrar un sacerdote amigo mío, y es dinero sagrado y bendito.

-Con su pan se lo coma -dijo Rinc3n a este punto-; no le arriendo la ganancia; día de juicio hay, donde todo saldrá en la colada, y entonces se verá qui3n fue Callejas y el atrevido que se atrevió a tomar, hurtar y menoscabar el tercio de la capellanía. Y ¿cuánto renta cada año? Dígame, se3or sacristán, por su vida.

-¡Renta la puta que me parió! ¡Y estoy yo agora para decir lo que renta! -respondió el sacristán con alg3n tanto de demasiada cólera-. Decidme, hermanos, si sabéis algo; si no, quedad con Dios, que yo la quiero hacer pregonar.

-No me parece mal remedio ese -dijo Cortado-, pero advierta vuesa merced no se le olviden las señas de la bolsa, ni la cantidad puntualmente del dinero que va en ella; que si yerra en un ardite, no parecerá en días del mundo, y esto le doy por hado.

-No hay que temer deso -respondió el sacristán-, que lo tengo más en la memoria que el tocar de las campanas: no me erraré en un átomo.

Sacó, en esto, de la faldriquera un pañuelo randado para limpiarse el sudor, que llovía de su rostro como de alquitara; y, apenas le hubo visto Cortado, cuando le marcó por suyo. Y, habiéndose ido el sacristán, Cortado le siguió y le alcanzó en las Gradass, donde le llamó y le retiró a una parte; y allí le comenzó a decir tantos disparates, al modo de lo que llaman bernardinas, cerca del hurto y hallazgo de su bolsa, dándole buenas esperanzas, sin concluir jamás razón que comenzase, que el pobre sacristán estaba embelesado escuchándole. Y, como no acababa de entender lo que le decía, hacía que le replicase la razón dos y tres veces.

Estáble mirando Cortado a la cara atentamente y no quitaba los ojos de sus ojos. El sacristán le miraba de la misma manera, estando colgado de sus palabras. Este tan grande embelesamiento dio lugar a Cortado que concluyese su obra, y sutilmente le sacó el pañuelo de la faldriquera; y, despidiéndose dél, le dijo que a la tarde procurase de verle en aquel mismo lugar, porque él traía entre ojos que un muchacho de su mismo oficio y de su mismo tamaño, que era algo ladroncillo, le había tomado la bolsa, y que él se obligaba a saberlo, dentro de pocos o de muchos días.

Con esto se consoló algo el sacristán, y se despidió de Cortado, el cual se vino donde estaba Rincón, que todo lo había visto un poco apartado dél; y más abajo estaba otro mozo de la esportilla, que vio todo lo que había pasado y cómo Cortado daba el pañuelo a Rincón; y, llegándose a ellos, les dijo:

-Díganme, señores galanes: ¿voacedes son de mala entrada, o no?

-No entendemos esa razón, señor galán -respondió Rincón.

-¿Qué no entrevan, señores murcios? -respondió el otro.

-Ni somos de Teba ni de Murcia -dijo Cortado-. Si otra cosa quiere, díjala; si no, váyase con Dios.

-¿No lo entienden? -dijo el mozo-. Pues yo se lo daré a entender, y a beber, con una cuchara de plata; quiero decir, señores, si son vuestas mercedes ladrones. Mas no sé para qué les pregunto esto, pues sé ya que lo son; mas díganme: ¿cómo no han ido a la aduana del señor Monipodio?

-¿Págase en esta tierra almojarifazgo de ladrones, señor galán? -dijo Rincón.

-Si no se paga -respondió el mozo-, a lo menos regístranse ante el señor Monipodio, que es su padre, su maestro y su amparo; y así, les aconsejo que vengan conmigo a darle la obediencia, o si no, no se atrevan a hurtar sin su señal, que les costará caro.

-Yo pensé -dijo Cortado-que el hurtar era oficio libre, horro de pecho y alcabala; y que si se paga, es por junto, dando por fiadores a la garganta y a las espaldas. Pero, pues así es, y en cada tierra hay su uso, guardemos nosotros el ésta, que, por ser la más principal del mundo, será el más acertado de todo él. Y así, puede vuesa merced guiarnos donde está ese caballero que dice, que ya yo tengo barruntos, según lo que he oído decir, que es muy calificado y generoso, y además hábil en el oficio.

-¡Y cómo que es calificado, hábil y suficiente! -respondió el mozo-. Eslo tanto, que en cuatro años que ha que tiene el cargo de ser nuestro mayor y padre no han padecido sino cuatro en el finibusterrae, y obra de treinta envesados y de sesenta y dos en gurapas.

-En verdad, señor -dijo Rincón-, que así entendemos esos nombres como volar.

-Comencemos a andar, que yo los iré declarando por el camino -respondió el mozo-, con otros algunos, que así les conviene saberlos como el pan de la boca.

Y así, les fue diciendo y declarando otros nombres, de los que ellos llaman germanescos o de la germanía, en el discurso de su plática, que no fue corta, porque el camino era largo; en el cual dijo Rincón a su guía:

-¿Es vuesa merced, por ventura, ladrón?

-Sí -respondió él-, para servir a Dios y a las buenas gentes, aunque no de los muy cursados; que todavía estoy en el año del noviciado.

A lo cual respondió Cortado:

-Cosa nueva es para mí que haya ladrones en el mundo para servir a Dios y a la buena gente.

A lo cual respondió el mozo:

-Señor, yo no me meto en tologías; lo que sé es que cada uno en su oficio puede alabar a Dios, y más con la orden que tiene dada Monipodio a todos sus ahijados.

-Sin duda -dijo Rincón-, debe de ser buena y santa, pues hace que los ladrones sirvan a Dios.

-Es tan santa y buena -replicó el mozo-, que no sé yo si se podrá mejorar en nuestro arte. Él tiene ordenado que de lo que hurtáremos demos alguna cosa o limosna para el aceite de la lámpara de una imagen muy devota que está en esta ciudad, y en verdad que hemos visto grandes cosas por esta buena obra; porque los días pasados dieron tres ansias a un cuatrero que había murciado dos roznos, y con estar flaco y cuartanario, así las sufrió sin cantar como si fueran nada. Y esto atribuimos los del arte a su buena devoción, porque sus fuerzas no eran bastantes para sufrir el primer desconcierto del verdugo. Y, porque sé que me han de preguntar algunos vocablos de los que he dicho, quiero curarme en salud y decírselo antes que me lo pregunten. Sepan voacedes que cuatrero es ladrón de bestias; ansia es el tormento; rosnos, los asnos, hablando con perdón; primer desconcierto es las primeras vueltas de cordel que da el verdugo. Tenemos más: que rezamos nuestro rosario, repartido en toda la semana, y muchos de nosotros no hurtamos el día del viernes, ni tenemos conversación con mujer que se llame María el día del sábado.

-De perlas me parece todo eso -dijo Cortado-; pero dígame vuesa merced: ¿hácese otra restitución o otra penitencia más de la dicha?

-En eso de restituir no hay que hablar -respondió el mozo-, porque es cosa imposible, por las muchas partes en que se divide lo hurtado, llevando cada uno de los ministros y contrayentes la suya; y así, el primer hurtador no puede restituir nada; cuanto más, que no hay quien nos mande hacer esta diligencia, a causa que nunca nos confesamos; y si sacan cartas de excomunión, jamás llegan a nuestra noticia, porque jamás vamos a la iglesia al tiempo que se leen, si no es los días de jubileo, por la ganancia que nos ofrece el concurso de la mucha gente.

-Y ¿con sólo eso que hacen, dicen esos señores -dijo Cortadillo-que su vida es santa y buena?

-Pues ¿qué tiene de malo? -replicó el mozo-. ¿No es peor ser hereje o renegado, o matar a su padre y madre, o ser solomico?

-Sodomita querrá decir vuesa merced -respondió Rincón.

-Eso digo -dijo el mozo.

-Todo es malo -replicó Cortado-. Pero, pues nuestra suerte ha querido que entremos en esta cofradía, vuesa merced alargue el paso, que muero por verme con el señor Monipodio, de quien tantas virtudes se cuentan.

-Presto se les cumplirá su deseo -dijo el mozo-, que ya desde aquí se descubre su casa. Vuelas mercedes se queden a la puerta, que yo entraré a ver si está desocupado, porque éstas son las horas cuando él suele dar audiencia.

-En buena sea -dijo Rincón.

Y, adelantándose un poco el mozo, entró en una casa no muy buena, sino de muy mala apariencia, y los dos se quedaron esperando a la puerta. Él salió luego y los llamó, y ellos entraron, y su guía les mandó esperar en un pequeño patio ladrillado, y de puro limpio y aljimiado parecía que vertía carmín de lo más fino. Al un lado estaba un banco de tres pies y al otro un cántaro desbocado con un jarrillo encima, no menos falto que el cántaro; a otra parte estaba una estera de enea, y en el medio un tiesto, que en Sevilla llaman maceta, de albahaca.

Miraban los mozos atentamente las alhajas de la casa, en tanto que bajaba el señor Monipodio; y, viendo que tardaba, se atrevió Rincón a entrar en una sala baja, de dos pequeñas que en el patio estaban, y vio en ella dos espadas de esgrima y dos broqueles de corcho, pendientes de cuatro clavos, y una arca grande sin tapa ni cosa que la cubriese, y otras tres esteras de enea tendidas por el suelo. En la pared frontera estaba pegada a la pared una imagen de Nuestra Señora, destas de mala estampa, y más abajo pendía una esportilla de palma, y, encajada en la pared, una almofía blanca, por do coligió Rincón que la esportilla servía de cepo para limosna, y la almofía de tener agua bendita, y así era la verdad.

Estando en esto, entraron en la casa dos mozos de hasta veinte años cada uno, vestidos de estudiantes; y de allí a poco, dos de la esportilla y un ciego; y, sin hablar palabra ninguno, se comenzaron a pasear por el patio. No tardó mucho, cuando entraron dos viejos de bayeta, con antojos que los hacían graves y dignos de ser respectados, con sendos rosarios de sonadoras cuentas en las manos. Tras ellos entró una vieja halduda, y, sin decir nada, se fue a la sala; y, habiendo tomado agua bendita, con grandísima devoción se puso de rodillas ante la imagen, y, a cabo de una buena pieza, habiendo primero besado tres veces el suelo y levantados los brazos y los ojos al cielo otras tantas, se levantó y echó su limosna en la esportilla, y se salió con los demás al patio. En resolución, en poco espacio se juntaron en el patio hasta catorce personas de diferentes trajes y oficios. Llegaron también de los postreros dos bravos y bizarros mozos, de bigotes largos, sombreros de grande falda, cuellos a la valona, medias de color, ligas de gran balumba, espadas de más de marca, sendos pistolettes cada uno en lugar de dagas, y sus broqueles pendientes de la pretina; los cuales, así como entraron, pusieron los ojos de través en Rincón y Cortado, a modo de que los estrañaban y no conocían. Y, llegándose a ellos, les preguntaron si eran de la cofradía. Rincón respondió que sí, y muy servidores de sus mercedes.

Llegóse en esto la sazón y punto en que bajó el señor Monipodio, tan esperado como bien visto de toda aquella virtuosa compañía. Parecía de edad de cuarenta y cinco a cuarenta y seis años, alto de cuerpo, moreno de rostro, cejijunto, barbinegro y muy espeso; los ojos, hundidos. Venía en camisa, y por la abertura de delante descubría un bosque: tanto era el vello que tenía en el pecho. Traía cubierta una capa de bayeta casi hasta los pies, en los cuales traía unos zapatos enchancletados, cubríanle las piernas unos zaragüelles de lienzo, anchos y largos hasta los tobillos; el sombrero era de los de la hampa, campanudo de copa y tendido de falda; atravesábale un tahalí por espalda y pechos a do colgaba una espada ancha y corta, a modo de las del perrillo; las manos eran cortas, pelosas, y los dedos gordos, y las uñas hembras y remachadas; las piernas no se le parecían, pero los pies eran descomunales de anchos y juanetudos. En efeto, él representaba el más rústico y disforme bárbaro del mundo. Bajó con él la guía de los dos, y, trabádoles de las manos, los presentó ante Monipodio, diciéndole:

-Éstos son los dos buenos mancebos que a vuesa merced dije, mi sor Monipodio: vuesa merced los desamine y verá como son dignos de entrar en nuestra congregación.

-Eso haré yo de muy buena gana -respondió Monipodio.

Olvidábaseme de decir que, así como Monipodio bajó, al punto, todos los que aguardándole estaban le hicieron una profunda y larga reverencia, excepto los dos bravos, que, a medio magate, como entre ellos se dice, le quitaron los capelos, y luego volvieron a su paseo por una parte del patio, y por la otra se paseaba Monipodio, el cual preguntó a los nuevos el ejercicio, la patria y padres.

A lo cual Rincón respondió:

-El ejercicio ya está dicho, pues venimos ante vuesa merced; la patria no me parece de mucha importancia decilla, ni los padres tampoco, pues no se ha de hacer información para recibir algún hábito honroso.

A lo cual respondió Monipodio:

-Vos, hijo mío, estáis en lo cierto, y es cosa muy acertada encubrir eso que decís; porque si la suerte no corriere como debe, no es bien que quede asentado debajo de signo de escribano, ni en el libro de las entradas: «Fulano, hijo de Fulano, vecino de tal parte, tal día le ahorcaron, o le azotaron», o otra cosa semejante, que, por lo menos, suena mal a los buenos oídos; y así, torno a decir que es provechoso documento callar la patria, encubrir los padres y mudar los propios nombres; aunque para entre nosotros no ha de haber nada encubierto, y sólo ahora quiero saber los nombres de los dos.

Rincón dijo el suyo y Cortado también.

-Pues, de aquí adelante -respondió Monipodio-, quiero y es mi voluntad que vos, Rincón, os llaméis Rinconete, y vos, Cortado, Cortadillo, que son nombres que asientan como de molde a vuestra edad y a nuestras ordenanzas, debajo de las cuales cae tener necesidad de saber el nombre de los padres de nuestros cofrades, porque tenemos de costumbre de hacer decir cada año ciertas misas por las ánimas de nuestros difuntos y bienhechores, sacando el estupendo para la limosna de quien las dice de alguna parte de lo que se garbea; y estas tales misas, así dichas como pagadas, dicen que aprovechan a las tales ánimas por vía de naufragio, y caen debajo de nuestros bienhechores: el procurador que nos defiende, el guro que nos avisa, el verdugo que nos tiene lástima, el que, cuando alguno de nosotros va huyendo por la calle y detrás le van dando voces: «¡Al ladrón, al ladrón! ¡Deténganle, deténganle!», uno se pone en medio y se opone al raudal de los que le siguen, diciendo: «¡Déjenle al cuitado, que harta mala ventura lleva! ¡Allá se lo haya; castíguele su pecado!» Son también bienhechoras nuestras las socorridas, que de su sudor nos socorren, ansí en la trena como en las guras; y también lo son nuestros padres y madres, que nos echan al mundo, y el escribano, que si anda de buena, no hay delito que sea culpa ni culpa a quien se dé mucha pena; y, por todos estos que he dicho, hace nuestra hermandad cada año su adversario con la mayor popa y solenidad que podemos.

-Por cierto -dijo Rinconete, ya confirmado con este nombre-, que es obra digna del altísimo y profundísimo ingenio que hemos oído decir que vuesa merced, señor Monipodio, tiene. Pero nuestros padres aún gozan de la vida; si en ella les alcanzáremos, daremos luego noticia a esta felicísima y abogada confraternidad, para que por sus almas se les haga ese naufragio o tormenta, o ese adversario que vuesa merced dice, con la solenidad y pompa acostumbrada; si ya no es que se hace mejor con popa y soledad, como también apuntó vuesa merced en sus razones.

-Así se hará, o no quedará de mí pedazo -replicó Monipodio.

Y, llamando a la guía, le dijo:

-Ven acá, Ganchuelo: ¿están puestas las postas?

-Sí -dijo la guía, que Ganchuelo era su nombre-: tres centinelas quedan avizorando, y no hay que temer que nos cojan de sobresalto.

-Volviendo, pues, a nuestro propósito -dijo Monipodio-, querría saber, hijos, lo que sabéis, para daros el oficio y ejercicio conforme a vuestra inclinación y habilidad.

-Yo -respondió Rinconete-sé un poquito de floreo de Vilhán; entiéndeseme el retén; tengo buena vista para el humillo; juego bien de la sola, de las cuatro y de las ocho; no se me va por pies el raspadillo, verrugueta y el colmillo; éntrome por la boca de lobo como por mi casa, y atreveríame a hacer un tercio de chanza mejor que un tercio de Nápoles, y a dar un astillazo al más pintado mejor que dos reales prestados.

-Principios son -dijo Monipodio-, pero todas éstas son flores de cantueso viejas, y tan usadas que no hay principiante que no las sepa, y sólo sirven para alguno que sea tan blanco que se deje matar de media noche abajo; pero andará el tiempo y vernos hemos: que, asentando sobre ese fundamento media docena de liciones, yo espero en Dios que habéis de salir oficial famoso, y aun quizá maestro.

-Todo será para servir a vuesa merced y a los señores cofrades -respondió Rinconete.

-Y vos, Cortadillo, ¿qué sabéis? -preguntó Monipodio.

-Yo -respondió Cortadillo-sé la treta que dicen mete dos y saca cinco, y sé dar tiento a una faldriquera con mucha puntualidad y destreza.

-¿Sabéis más? -dijo Monipodio.

-No, por mis grandes pecados -respondió Cortadillo.

-No os aflijáis, hijo -replicó Monipodio-, que a puerto y a escuela habéis llegado donde ni os anegaréis ni dejaréis de salir muy bien aprovechado en todo aquello que más os conviniere. Y en esto del ánimo, ¿cómo os va, hijos?

-¿Cómo nos ha de ir -respondió Rinconete-sino muy bien? Ánimo tenemos para acometer cualquiera empresa de las que tocaren a nuestro arte y ejercicio.

-Está bien -replicó Monipodio-, pero querría yo que también le tuviédeses para sufrir, si fuese menester, media docena de ansias sin desplegar los labios y sin decir esta boca es mía.

-Ya sabemos aquí -dijo Cortadillo-, señor Monipodio, qué quiere decir ansias, y para todo tenemos ánimo; porque no somos tan ignorantes que no se nos alcance que lo que dice la lengua paga la gorja; y harta merced le hace el cielo al hombre atrevido, por no darle otro título, que le deja en su lengua su vida o su muerte, ¡como si tuviese más letras un no que un sí!

-¡Alto, no es menester más! -dijo a esta sazón Monipodio-. Digo que sola esa razón me convence, me obliga, me persuade y me fuerza a que desde luego asentéis por cofrades mayores y que se os sobrelleve el año del noviciado.

-Yo soy dese parecer -dijo uno de los bravos.

Y a una voz lo confirmaron todos los presentes, que toda la plática habían estado escuchando, y pidieron a Monipodio que desde luego les concediese y permitiese gozar de las inmunidades de su cofradía, porque su presencia agradable y su buena plática lo merecía todo. Él respondió que, por dalles contento a todos, desde aquel punto se las concedía, y advirtiéndoles que las estimasen en mucho, porque eran no pagar media nata del primer hurto que hiciesen; no hacer oficios menores en todo aquel año, conviene a saber: no llevar recaudo de ningún hermano mayor a la cárcel, ni a la casa, de parte de sus contribuyentes; piar el turco puro; hacer banquete cuando, como y adonde quisieren, sin pedir licencia a su mayoral; entrar a la parte, desde luego, con lo que entrujasen los hermanos mayores, como uno dellos, y otras cosas que ellos tuvieron por merced señaladísima, y los demás, con palabras muy comedidas, las agradecieron mucho.

Estando en esto, entró un muchacho corriendo y desalentado, y dijo:

-El alguacil de los vagabundos viene encaminado a esta casa, pero no trae consigo gurullada.

-Nadie se alborote -dijo Monipodio-, que es amigo y nunca viene por nuestro daño. Sosiéguese, que yo le saldré a hablar.

Todos se sosegaron, que ya estaban algo sobresaltados, y Monipodio salió a la puerta, donde halló al alguacil, con el cual estuvo hablando un rato, y luego volvió a entrar Monipodio y preguntó:

-¿A quién le cupo hoy la plaza de San Salvador?

-A mí -dijo el de la guía.

-Pues ¿cómo -dijo Monipodio-no se me ha manifestado una bolsilla de ámbar que esta mañana en aquel paraje dio al traste con quince escudos de oro y dos reales de a dos y no sé cuántos cuartos?

-Verdad es -dijo la guía-que hoy faltó esa bolsa, pero yo no la he tomado, ni puedo imaginar quién la tomase.

-¡No hay levas conmigo! -replicó Monipodio-. ¡La bolsa ha de parecer, porque la pide el alguacil, que es amigo y nos hace mil placeres al año!

Tornó a jurar el mozo que no sabía della. Comenzóse a encolerizar Monipodio, de manera que parecía que fuego vivo lanzaba por los ojos, diciendo:

-¡Nadie se burle con quebrantar la más mínima cosa de nuestra orden, que le costará la vida! Manifiéstese la cica; y si se encubre por no pagar los derechos, yo le daré enteramente lo que le toca y pondré lo demás de mi casa; porque en todas maneras ha de ir contento el alguacil.

Tornó de nuevo a jurar el mozo y a maldecirse, diciendo que él no había tomado tal bolsa ni vístola de sus ojos; todo lo cual fue poner más fuego a la cólera de Monipodio, y dar ocasión a que toda la junta se alborotase, viendo que se rompían sus estatutos y buenas ordenanzas.

Viendo Rinconete, pues, tanta disensión y alboroto, parecióle que sería bien sosegalle y dar contento a su mayor, que reventaba de rabia; y, aconsejándose con su amigo Cortadillo, con parecer de entrambos, sacó la bolsa del sacristán y dijo:

-Cese toda cuestión, mis señores, que ésta es la bolsa, sin faltarle nada de lo que el alguacil manifiesta; que hoy mi camarada Cortadillo le dio alcance, con un pañuelo que al mismo dueño se le quitó por añadidura.

Luego sacó Cortadillo el pañizuelo y lo puso de manifiesto; viendo lo cual, Monipodio dijo:

-Cortadillo el Bueno, que con este título y renombre ha de quedar de aquí adelante, se quede con el pañuelo y a mi cuenta se quede la satisfacción deste servicio; y la bolsa se ha de llevar el alguacil, que es de un sacristán pariente suyo, y conviene que se cumpla aquel refrán que dice: «No es mucho que a quien te da la gallina entera, tú des una pierna della». Más disimula este buen alguacil en un día que nosotros le podremos ni solemos dar en ciento.

De común consentimiento aprobaron todos la hidalguía de los dos modernos y la sentencia y parecer de su mayoral, el cual salió a dar la bolsa al alguacil; y Cortadillo se quedó confirmado con el renombre de Bueno, bien como si fuera don Alonso Pérez de Guzmán el Bueno, que arrojó el cuchillo por los muros de Tarifa para degollar a su único hijo.

Al volver, que volvió, Monipodio, entraron con él dos mozas, afeitados los rostros, llenos de color los labios y de albayalde los pechos, cubiertas con medios mantos de anascote, llenas de desenfado y desvergüenza: señales claras por donde, en viéndolas Rinconete y Cortadillo, conocieron que eran de la casa llana; y no se engañaron en nada. Y, así como entraron, se fueron con los brazos abiertos, la una a Chiquiznaque y la otra a Maniferro, que éstos eran los nombres de los dos bravos; y el de Maniferro era porque traía una mano de hierro, en lugar de otra que le habían cortado por justicia. Ellos las abrazaron con grande regocijo, y les preguntaron si traían algo con que mojar la canal maestra.

-Pues, ¿había de faltar, diestro mío? -respondió la una, que se llamaba la Gananciosa-. No tardará mucho a venir Silbatillo, tu trainel, con la canasta de colar atestada de lo que Dios ha sido servido.

Y así fue verdad, porque al instante entró un muchacho con una canasta de colar cubierta con una sábana.

Alegráronse todos con la entrada de Silbato, y al momento mandó sacar Monipodio una de las esteras de enea que estaban en el aposento, y tenderla en medio del patio. Y ordenó, asimismo, que todos se sentasen a la redonda; porque, en cortando la cólera, se trataría de lo que más conviniese. A esto, dijo la vieja que había rezado a la imagen:

-Hijo Monipodio, yo no estoy para fiestas, porque tengo un vaguido de cabeza, dos días ha, que me trae loca; y más, que antes que sea mediodía tengo de ir a cumplir mis devociones y poner mis candelicas a Nuestra Señora de las Aguas y al Santo Crucifijo de Santo Agustín, que no lo dejaría de hacer si nevase y ventiscase. A lo que he venido es que anoche el Renegado y Centopiés llevaron a mi casa una canasta de colar, algo mayor que la presente, llena de ropa blanca; y en Dios y en ni ánima que venía con su cernada y todo, que los pobretes no debieron de tener lugar de quitalla, y venían sudando la gota tan gorda, que era una compasión verlos entrar ijadeando y corriendo agua de sus rostros, que parecían unos angelicos. Dijéronme que iban en seguimiento de un ganadero que había pesado ciertos carneros en la Carnicería, por ver si le podían dar un tientito en un grandísimo gato de reales que llevaba. No desembanastaron ni contaron la ropa, fiados en la entereza de mi conciencia; y así me cumpla Dios mis buenos deseos y nos libre a todos de poder de justicia, que no he tocado a la canasta, y que se está tan entera como cuando nació.

-Todo se le cree, señora madre -respondió Monipodio-, y estése así la canasta, que yo iré allá, a boca de sorna, y haré cala y cata de lo que tiene, y daré a cada uno lo que le tocare, bien y fielmente, como tengo de costumbre.

-Sea como vos lo ordenáredes, hijo -respondió la vieja-; y, porque se me hace tarde, dadme un traguillo, si tenéis, para consolar este estómago, que tan desmayado anda de continuo.

-Y ¡qué tal lo beberéis, madre mía! -dijo a esta sazón la Escalanta, que así se llamaba la compañera de la Gananciosa.

Y, descubriendo la canasta, se manifestó una bota a modo de cuero, con hasta dos arrobas de vino, y un corcho que podría caber sosegadamente y sin apremio hasta una azumbre; y, llenándole la Escalanta, se le puso en las manos a la devotísima vieja, la cual, tomándole con ambas manos y habiéndole soplado un poco de espuma, dijo:

-Mucho echaste, hija Escalanta, pero Dios dará fuerzas para todo.

Y, aplicándosele a los labios, de un tirón, sin tomar aliento, lo trasegó del corcho al estómago, y acabó diciendo:

-De Guadalcanal es, y aun tiene un es no es de yeso el señorico. Dios te consuele, hija, que así me has consolado; sino que temo que me ha de hacer mal, porque no me he desayunado.

-No hará, madre -respondió Monipodio-, porque es trasañejo.

-Así lo espero yo en la Virgen -respondió la vieja.

Y añadió:

-Mirad, niñas, si tenéis acaso algún cuarto para comprar las candelicas de mi devoción, porque, con la priesa y gana que tenía de venir a traer las nuevas de la canasta, se me olvidó en casa la escarcela.

-Yo sí tengo, señora Pipota -(que éste era el nombre de la buena vieja) respondió la Gananciosa-; tome, ahí le doy dos cuartos: del uno le ruego que compre una para mí, y se la ponga al señor San Miguel; y si puede comprar dos, ponga la otra al señor San Blas, que son mis abogados. Quisiera que pusiera otra a la señora Santa Lucía, que, por lo de los ojos, también le tengo devoción, pero no tengo trocado; mas otro día habrá donde se cumpla con todos.

-Muy bien harás, hija, y mira no seas miserable; que es de mucha importancia llevar la persona las candelas delante de sí antes que se muera, y no aguardar a que las pongan los herederos o albaceas.

-Bien dice la madre Pipota -dijo la Escalanta.

Y, echando mano a la bolsa, le dio otro cuarto y le encargó que pusiese otras dos candelicas a los santos que a ella le pareciesen que eran de los más aprovechados y agradecidos. Con esto, se fue la Pipota, diciéndoles:

-Holgaos, hijos, ahora que tenéis tiempo; que vendrá la vejez y lloraréis en ella los ratos que perdistes en la mocedad, como yo los lloro; y encomendadme a Dios en vuestras oraciones, que yo voy a hacer lo mismo por mí y por vosotros, porque Él nos libre y conserve en nuestro trato peligroso, sin sobresaltos de justicia.

Y con esto, se fue.

Ida la vieja, se sentaron todos alrededor de la estera, y la Gananciosa tendió la sábana por manteles; y lo primero que sacó de la cesta fue un grande haz de rábanos y hasta dos docenas de naranjas y limones, y luego una cazuela grande llena de tajadas de bacallao frito. Manifestó luego medio queso de Flandes, y una olla de famosas aceitunas, y un plato de camarones, y gran cantidad de cangrejos, con su llamativo de alcaparrones ahogados en pimientos, y tres hogazas blanquísimas de Gandul. Serían los del almuerzo hasta catorce, y ninguno dellos dejó de sacar su cuchillo de cachas amarillas, si no fue Rinconete, que sacó su media espada. A los dos viejos de bayeta y a la guía tocó el escanciar con el corcho de colmena. Mas, apenas habían comenzado a dar asalto a las naranjas, cuando les dio a todos gran sobresalto los golpes que dieron a la puerta. Mandóles Monipodio que se sosegasen, y, entrando en la sala baja y descolgando un broquel, puesto mano a la espada, llegó a la puerta y con voz hueca y espantosa preguntó:

-¿Quién llama?

Respondieron de fuera:

-Yo soy, que no es nadie, señor Monipodio: Tagarete soy, centinela desta mañana, y vengo a decir que viene aquí Juliana la Cariharta, toda desgredada y llorosa, que parece haberle sucedido algún desastre.

En esto llegó la que decía, sollozando, y, sintiéndola Monipodio, abrió la puerta, y mandó a Tagarete que se volviese a su posta y que de allí adelante avisase lo que viese con menos estruendo y ruido. Él dijo que así lo haría. Entró la Cariharta, que era una moza del jaez de las otras y del mismo oficio. Venía descabellada y la cara llena de tolondrones, y, así como entró en el patio, se cayó en el suelo desmayada. Acudieron a socorrerla la Gananciosa y la Escalanta, y, desabrochándola el pecho, la hallaron toda denegrida y como magullada. Echáronle agua en el rostro, y ella volvió en sí, diciendo a voces:

-¡La justicia de Dios y del Rey venga sobre aquel ladrón desuellacaros, sobre aquel cobarde bajamanero, sobre aquel pícaro lendroso, que le he quitado más veces de la horca que tiene pelos en las barbas! ¡Desdichada de mí! ¡Mirad por quién he perdido y gastado mi mocedad y la flor de mis años, sino por un bellaco desalmado, facinoroso e incorregible!

-Sosiégate, Cariharta -dijo a esta sazón Monipodio-, que aquí estoy yo que te haré justicia. Cuéntanos tu agravio, que más estarás tú en contarle que yo en hacerte vengada; dime si has habido algo con tu respecto; que si así es y quieres venganza, no has menester más que boquear.

-¿Qué respecto? -respondió Juliana-. Respectada me vea yo en los infiernos, si más lo fuere de aquel león con las ovejas y cordero con los hombres. ¿Con aquél había yo de comer más pan a manteles, ni yacer en uno? Primero me vea yo comida de adivas estas carnes, que me ha parado de la manera que ahora veréis.

Y, alzándose al instante las faldas hasta la rodilla, y aun un poco más, las descubrió llenas de cardenales.

-Desta manera -prosiguió-me ha parado aquel ingrato del Repolido, debiéndome más que a la madre que le parió. Y ¿por qué pensáis que lo ha hecho? ¡Montas, que le di yo ocasión para ello! No, por cierto, no lo hizo más sino porque, estando jugando y perdiendo, me envió a pedir con Cabrillas, su trainel, treinta reales, y no le envié más de veinte y cuatro, que el trabajo y afán con que yo los había ganado ruego yo a los cielos que vaya en descuento de mis pecados. Y, en pago desta cortesía y buena obra, creyendo él que yo le sisaba algo de la cuenta que él allá en su imaginación había hecho de lo que yo podía tener, esta mañana me sacó al campo, detrás de la Güerta del Rey, y allí, entre unos olivares, me desnudó, y con la petrina, sin escusar ni recoger los hierros, que en malos grillos y hierros le vea yo, me dio tantos azotes que me dejó por muerta. De la cual verdadera historia son buenos testigos estos cardenales que miráis.

Aquí tornó a levantar las voces, aquí volvió a pedir justicia, y aquí se la prometió de nuevo Monipodio y todos los bravos que allí estaban. La Gananciosa tomó la mano a consolalla, diciéndole que ella diera de muy buena gana una de las mejores preseas que tenía porque le hubiera pasado otro tanto con su querido.

-Porque quiero -dijo-que sepas, hermana Cariharta, si no lo sabes, que a lo que se quiere bien se castiga; y cuando estos bellacones nos dan, y azotan y acocean, entonces nos adoran; si no, confiésame una verdad, por tu vida: después que te hubo Repolido castigado y brumado, ¿no te hizo alguna caricia?

-¿Cómo una? -respondió la llorosa-. Cien mil me hizo, y diera él un dedo de la mano porque me fuera con él a su posada; y aun me parece que casi se le saltaron las lágrimas de los ojos después de haberme molido.

-No hay dudar en eso -replicó la Gananciosa-. Y lloraría de pena de ver cuál te había puesto; que en estos tales hombres, y en tales casos, no han cometido la culpa cuando les viene el arrepentimiento; y tú verás, hermana, si no viene a buscarte antes que de aquí nos vamos, y a pedirte perdón de todo lo pasado, rindiéndosete como un cordero.

-En verdad -respondió Monipodio-que no ha de entrar por estas puertas el cobarde envesado, si primero no hace una manifiesta penitencia del cometido delito. ¿Las manos había él de ser osado ponerlas en el rostro de la Cariharta, ni en sus carnes, siendo persona que puede competir en limpieza y ganancia con la misma Gananciosa que está delante, que no lo puedo más encarecer?

-¡Ay! -dijo a esta sazón la Juliana-. No diga vuesa merced, señor Monipodio, mal de aquel maldito, que con cuan malo es, le quiero más que a las telas de mi corazón, y hanme vuelto el alma al cuerpo las razones que en su abono me ha dicho mi amiga la Gananciosa, y en verdad que estoy por ir a buscarle.

-Eso no harás tú por mi consejo -replicó la Gananciosa-, porque se estenderá y ensanchará y hará tretas en ti como en cuerpo muerto. Sosiégate, hermana, que antes de mucho le verás venir tan arrepentido como he dicho; y si no viniere, escribirémosle un papel en coplas que le amargue.

-Eso sí -dijo la Cariharta-, que tengo mil cosas que escribirle.

-Yo seré el secretario cuando sea menester -dijo Monipodio-; y, aunque no soy nada poeta, todavía, si el hombre se arremanga, se atreverá a hacer dos millares de coplas en daga las pajas, y, cuando no salieren como deben, yo tengo un barbero amigo, gran poeta, que nos hinchirá las medidas a todas horas; y en la de agora acabemos lo que teníamos comenzado del almuerzo, que después todo se andará.

Fue contenta la Juliana de obedecer a su mayor; y así, todos volvieron a su gaudeamus, y en poco espacio vieron el fondo de la canasta y las heces del cuero. Los viejos bebieron sine fine; los mozos adunia; las señoras, los quiries. Los viejos pidieron licencia para irse. Dióselo luego Monipodio, encargándoles viniesen a dar noticia con toda puntualidad de todo aquello que vieses ser útil y conveniente a la comunidad. Respondieron que ellos se lo tenían bien en cuidado y fuéronse.

Rinconete, que de suyo era curioso, pidiendo primero perdón y licencia, preguntó a Monipodio que de qué servían en la cofradía dos personajes tan canos, tan graves y apersonados. A lo cual respondió Monipodio que aquéllos, en su germanía y manera de hablar, se llamaban avispones, y que servían de andar de día por toda la ciudad avisando en qué casas se podía dar tiento de noche, y en seguir los que sacaban dinero de la Contratación o Casa de la Moneda, para ver dónde lo llevaban, y aun dónde lo ponían; y, en sabiéndolo, tanteaban la groseza del muro de la tal casa y diseñaban el lugar más conveniente para hacer los guzpátaros -que son agujeros-para facilitar la entrada. En resolución, dijo que era la gente de más o de tanto provecho que había en su hermandad, y que de todo aquello que por su industria se hurtaba llevaban el quinto, como Su Majestad de los tesoros; y que, con todo esto, eran hombres de mucha verdad, y muy honrados, y de buena vida y fama, temerosos de Dios y de sus conciencias, que cada día oían misa con estraña devoción.

-Y hay dellos tan comedidos, especialmente estos dos que de aquí se van agora, que se contentan con mucho menos de lo que por nuestros aranceles les toca. Otros dos que hay son palanquines, los cuales, como por momentos mudan casas, saben las entradas y salidas de todas las de la ciudad, y cuáles pueden ser de provecho y cuáles no.

-Todo me parece de perlas -dijo Rinconete-, y querría ser de algún provecho a tan famosa cofradía.

-Siempre favorece el cielo a los buenos deseos -dijo Monipodio.

Estando en esta plática, llamaron a la puerta; salió Monipodio a ver quién era, y, preguntándolo, respondieron:

-Abra voacé, sor Monipodio, que el Repolido soy.

Oyó esta voz Cariharta y, alzando al cielo la suya, dijo:

-No le abra vuesa merced, señor Monipodio; no le abra a ese marinero de Tarpeya, a este tigre de Ocaña.

No dejó por esto Monipodio de abrir a Repolido; pero, viendo la Cariharta que le abría, se levantó corriendo y se entró en la sala de los broqueles, y, cerrando tras sí la puerta, desde dentro, a grandes voces decía:

-Quítenmele de delante a ese gesto de por demás, a ese verdugo de inocentes, asombrador de palomas duendas.

Maniferro y Chiquiznaque tenían a Repolido, que en todas maneras quería entrar donde la Cariharta estaba; pero, como no le dejaban, decía desde afuera:

-¡No haya más, enojada mía; por tu vida que te sosiegues, ansí te veas casada!

-¿Casada yo, malino? -respondió la Cariharta-. ¡Mirá en qué tecla toca! ¡Ya quisieras tú que lo fuera contigo, y antes lo sería yo con una sotomía de muerte que contigo!

-¡Ea, boba -replicó Repolido-, acabemos ya, que es tarde, y mire no se ensanche por verme hablar tan manso y venir tan rendido! Porque, ¡vive el Dador, si se me sube la cólera al campanario, que sea peor la recaída que la caída! Humíllese, y humillémonos todos, y no demos de comer al diablo.

-Y aun de cenar le daría yo -dijo la Cariharta-, porque te llevase donde nunca más mis ojos te vieses.

-¿No os digo yo? -dijo Repolido-. ¡Por Dios que voy oliendo, señora trinquete, que lo tengo de echar todo a doce, aunque nunca se venda!

A esto dijo Monipodio:

-En mi presencia no ha de haber demasías: la Cariharta saldrá, no por amenazas, sino por amor mío, y todo se hará bien; que las riñas entre los que bien se quieren son causa de mayor gusto cuando se hacen las paces. ¡Ah Juliana! ¡Ah niña! ¡Ah Cariharta mía! Sal acá fuera por mi amor, que yo haré que el Repolido te pida perdón de rodillas.

-Como él eso haga -dijo la Escalanta-, todas seremos en su favor y en rogar a Juliana salga acá fuera.

-Si esto ha de ir por vía de rendimiento que güela a menoscabo de la persona -dijo el Repolido-, no me rendiré a un ejército formado de esguízaros; mas si es por vía de que la Cariharta gusta dello, no digo yo hincarme de rodillas, pero un clavo me hincaré por la frente en su servicio.

Riyéronse desto Chiquiznaque y Maniferro, de lo cual se enojó tanto el Repolido, pensando que hacían burla dél, que dijo con muestras de infinita cólera:

-Cualquiera que se riere o se pensare reír de lo que la Cariharta, o contra mí, o yo contra ella hemos dicho o dijéremos, digo que miente y mentirá todas las veces que se riere, o lo pensare, como ya he dicho.

Miráronse Chiquiznaque y Maniferro de tan mal garbo y talle, que advirtió Monipodio que pararía en un gran mal si no lo remediaba; y así, poniéndose luego en medio dellos, dijo:

-No pase más adelante, caballeros; cesen aquí palabras mayores, y desháganse entre los dientes; y, pues las que se han dicho no llegan a la cintura, nadie las tome por sí.

-Bien seguros estamos -respondió Chiquiznaque-que no se dijeron ni dirán semejantes monitorios por nosotros; que, si se hubiera imaginado que se decían, en manos estaba el pandero que lo supiera bien tañer.

-También tenemos acá pandero, sor Chiquiznaque -replicó el Repolido-, y también, si fuere menester, sabremos tocar los cascabeles, y ya he dicho que el que se huelga, miente; y quien otra cosa pensare, sígame, que con un palmo de espada menos hará el hombre que sea lo dicho dicho.

Y, diciendo esto, se iba a salir por la puerta afuera. Estábalo escuchando la Cariharta, y, cuando sintió que se iba enojado, salió diciendo:

-¡Ténganle no se vaya, que hará de las suyas! ¿No veen que va enojado, y es un Judas Macarelo en esto de la valentía? ¡Vuelve acá, valentón del mundo y de mis ojos!

Y, cerrando con él, le asió fuertemente de la capa, y, acudiendo también Monipodio, le detuvieron. Chiquiznaque y Maniferro no sabían si enojarse o si no, y estuviéronse quedos esperando lo que Repolido haría; el cual, viéndose rogar de la Cariharta y de Monipodio, volvió diciendo:

-Nunca los amigos han de dar enojo a los amigos, ni hacer burla de los amigos, y más cuando veen que se enojan los amigos.

-No hay aquí amigo -respondió Maniferro-que quiera enojar ni hacer burla de otro amigo; y, pues todos somos amigos, dense las manos los amigos.

A esto dijo Monipodio:

-Todos voacedes han hablado como buenos amigos, y como tales amigos se den las manos de amigos.

Diéronselas luego, y la Escalanta, quitándose un chapín, comenzó a tañer en él como en un pandero; la Gananciosa tomó una escoba de palma nueva, que allí se halló acaso, y, rascándola, hizo un son que, aunque ronco y áspero, se concertaba con el del chapín. Monipodio rompió un plato y hizo dos tejoletas, que, puestas entre los dedos y repicadas con gran ligereza, llevaba el contrapunto al chapín y a la escoba.

Espantáronse Rinconete y Cortadillo de la nueva invención de la escoba, porque hasta entonces nunca la habían visto. Conociólo Maniferro y díjoles:

-¿Admíranse de la escoba? Pues bien hacen, pues música más presta y más sin pesadumbre, ni más barata, no se ha inventado en el mundo; y en verdad que oí decir el otro día a un estudiante que ni el Negrofeo, que sacó a la Arauz del infierno; ni el Marión, que subió sobre el delfín y salió del mar como si viniera caballero sobre una mula de alquiler; ni el otro gran músico que hizo una ciudad que tenía cien puertas y otros tantos postigos, nunca inventaron mejor género de música, tan fácil de aprender, tan manera de tocar, tan sin trastes, clavijas ni cuerdas, y tan sin necesidad de templarse; y aun voto a tal, que dicen que la inventó un galán desta ciudad, que se pica de ser un Héctor en la música.

-Eso creo yo muy bien -respondió Rinconete-, pero escuchemos lo que quieren cantar nuestros músicos, que parece que la Gananciosa ha escupido, señal de que quiere cantar.

Y así era la verdad, porque Monipodio le había rogado que cantase algunas seguidillas de las que se usaban; mas la que comenzó primero fue la Escalanta, y con voz sutil y quebradiza cantó lo siguiente:

Por un sevillano, rufo a lo valón, tengo socarrado todo el corazón.

Siguió la Gananciosa cantando:

Por un morenico de color verde, ¿cuál es la fogosa que no se pierde?

Y luego Monipodio, dándose gran prisa al meneo de sus tejoletas, dijo:

Riñen dos amantes, hácese la paz:
si el enojo es grande, es el gusto más.

No quiso la Cariharta pasar su gusto en silencio, porque, tomando otro chapín, se metió en danza, y acompañó a las demás diciendo:

Detente, enojado, no me azotes más; que si bien lo miras, a tus carnes das.

-Cántese a lo llano -dijo a esta sazón Repolido-, y no se toquen estorias pasadas, que no hay para qué: lo pasado sea pasado, y tómese otra vereda, y basta.

Talle llevaban de no acabar tan presto el comenzado cántico, si no sintieran que llamaban a la puerta apriesa; y con ella salió Monipodio a ver quién era, y la centinela le dijo cómo al cabo de la calle había asomado el alcalde de la justicia, y que delante dél venían el Tordillo y el Cernícalo, corchetes neutrales. Oyéronlo los de dentro, y alborotáronse todos de manera que la Cariharta y la Escalanta se calzaron sus chapines al revés, dejó la escoba la Gananciosa, Monipodio sus tejoletas, y quedó en turbado silencio toda la música, enmudeció Chiquiznaque, pasmóse Repolido y suspendióse Maniferro; y todos, cuál por una y cuál por otra parte, desaparecieron, subiéndose a las azoteas y tejados, para escaparse y pasar por ellos a otra calle. Nunca ha disparado arcabuz a deshora, ni trueno repentino espantó así a banda de descuidadas palomas, como puso en alboroto y espanto a toda aquella recogida compañía y buena gente la nueva de la venida del alcalde de la justicia. Los dos novicios, Rinconete y Cortadillo, no sabían qué hacerse, y estuviéronse quedos, esperando ver en qué paraba aquella repentina borrasca, que no paró en más de volver la centinela a decir que el alcalde se había pasado de largo, sin dar muestra ni resabio de mala sospecha alguna.

Y, estando diciendo esto a Monipodio, llegó un caballero mozo a la puerta, vestido, como se suele decir, de barrio; Monipodio le entró consigo, y mandó llamar a Chiquiznaque, a Maniferro y al Repolido, y que de los demás no bajase alguno. Como se habían quedado en el patio, Rinconete y Cortadillo pudieron oír toda la plática que pasó Monipodio con el caballero recién venido, el cual dijo a Monipodio que por qué se había hecho tan mal lo que le había encomendado. Monipodio respondió que aún no sabía lo que se había hecho; pero que allí estaba el oficial a cuyo cargo estaba su negocio, y que él daría muy buena cuenta de sí.

Bajó en esto Chiquiznaque, y preguntóle Monipodio si había cumplido con la obra que se le encomendó de la cuchillada de a catorce.

-¿Cuál? -respondió Chiquiznaque-. ¿Es la de aquel mercader de la Encrucijada?

-Ésa es -dijo el caballero.

-Pues lo que en eso pasa -respondió Chiquiznaque-es que yo le aguardé anoche a la puerta de su casa, y él vino antes de la oración; lleguéme cerca dél, marquéle el rostro con la vista, y vi que le tenía tan pequeño que era imposible de toda imposibilidad caber en él cuchillada de catorce puntos; y, hallándome imposibilitado de poder cumplir lo prometido y de hacer lo que llevaba en mi destrucción...

-Instrucción querrá vuesa merced decir -dijo el caballero-, que no destrucción.

-Eso quise decir -respondió Chiquiznaque-. Digo que, viendo que en la estrechez y poca cantidad de aquel rostro no cabían los puntos propuestos, porque no fuese mi ida en balde, di la cuchillada a un lacayo suyo, que a buen seguro que la pueden poner por mayor de marca.

-Más quisiera -dijo el caballero-que se la hubiera dado al amo una de a siete, que al criado la de a catorce. En efeto, conmigo no se ha cumplido como era razón, pero no importa; poca mella me harán los treinta ducados que dejé en señal. Beso a vuestas mercedes las manos.

Y, diciendo esto, se quitó el sombrero y volvió las espaldas para irse; pero Monipodio le asió de la capa de mezcla que traía puesta, diciéndole:

-Voacé se detenga y cumpla su palabra, pues nosotros hemos cumplido la nuestra con mucha honra y con mucha ventaja: veinte ducados faltan, y no ha de salir de aquí voacé sin darlos, o prendas que lo valgan.

-Pues, ¿a esto llama vuesa merced cumplimiento de palabra -respondió el caballero-: dar la cuchillada al mozo, habiéndose de dar al amo?

-¡Qué bien está en la cuenta el señor! -dijo Chiquiznaque-. Bien parece que no se acuerda de aquel refrán que dice: «Quien bien quiere a Beltrán, bien quiere a su can».

-¿Pues en qué modo puede venir aquí a propósito ese refrán? -replicó el caballero.

-¿Pues no es lo mismo -prosiguió Chiquiznaque-decir: «Quien mal quiere a Beltrán, mal quiere a su can»? Y así, Beltrán es el mercader, voacé le quiere mal, su lacayo es su can; y dando al can se da a Beltrán, y la deuda queda líquida y trae aparejada ejecución; por eso no hay más sino pagar luego sin apercibimiento de remate.

-Eso juro yo bien -añadió Monipodio-, y de la boca me quitaste, Chiquiznaque amigo, todo cuanto aquí has dicho; y así, voacé, señor galán, no se meta en puntillos con sus servidores y amigos, sino tome mi consejo y pague luego lo trabajado; y si fuere servido que se le dé otra al amo, de la cantidad que pueda llevar su rostro, haga cuenta que ya se la están curando.

-Como eso sea -respondió el galán-, de muy entera voluntad y gana pagaré la una y la otra por entero.

-No dude en esto -dijo Monipodio-más que en ser cristiano; que Chiquiznaque se la dará pintiparada, de manera que parezca que allí se le nació.

-Pues con esa seguridad y promesa -respondió el caballero-, recíbase esta cadena en prendas de los veinte ducados atrasados y de cuarenta que ofrezco por la venidera cuchillada. Pesa mil reales, y podría ser que se quedase rematada, porque traigo entre ojos que serán menester otros catorce puntos antes de mucho.

Quitóse, en esto, una cadena de vueltas menudas del cuello y dióselo a Monipodio, que al color y al peso bien vio que no era de alquimia. Monipodio la recibió con mucho contento y cortesía, porque era en extremo bien criado; la ejecución quedó a cargo de Chiquiznaque, que sólo tomó término de aquella noche. Fuese muy satisfecho el caballero, y luego Monipodio llamó a todos los ausentes y azorados. Bajaron todos, y, poniéndose Monipodio en medio dellos, sacó un libro de memoria que traía en la capilla de la capa y dióselo a Rinconete que leyese, porque él no sabía leer. Abrióle Rinconete, y en la primera hoja vio que decía:

MEMORIA DE LAS CUCHILLADAS QUE SE HAN DE DAR ESTA SEMANA

La primera, al mercader de la encrucijada: vale cincuenta escudos. Están recibidos treinta a buena cuenta. Secutor, Chiquiznaque.

-No creo que hay otra, hijo -dijo Monipodio-; pasá adelante y mirá donde dice: MEMORIA DE PALOS.

Volvió la hoja Rinconete, y vio que en otra estaba escrito:

MEMORIA DE PALOS

Y más abajo decía:

Al bodegonero de la Alfalfa, doce palos de mayor cuantía a escudo cada uno. Están dados a buena cuenta ocho. El término, seis días. Secutor, Maniferro.

-Bien podía borrarse esa partida -dijo Maniferro-, porque esta noche traeré finiquito della.

-¿Hay más, hijo? -dijo Monipodio.

-Sí, otra -respondió Rinconete-, que dice así:

Al sastre corcovado que por mal nombre se llama el Silguero, seis palos de mayor cuantía, a pedimiento de la dama que dejó la gargantilla. Secutor, el Desmochado.

-Maravillado estoy -dijo Monipodio-cómo todavía está esa partida en ser. Sin duda alguna debe de estar mal dispuesto el Desmochado, pues son dos días pasados del término y no ha dado puntada en esta obra.

-Yo le topé ayer -dijo Maniferro-, y me dijo que por haber estado retirado por enfermo el Corcovado no había cumplido con su débito.

-Eso creo yo bien -dijo Monipodio-, porque tengo por tan buen oficial al Desmochado, que, si no fuera por tan justo impedimento, ya él hubiera dado al cabo con mayores empresas. ¿Hay más, mocito?

-No señor -respondió Rinconete.

-Pues pasad adelante -dijo Monipodio-, y mirad donde dice: MEMORIAL DE AGRAVIOS COMUNES.

Pasó adelante Rinconete, y en otra hoja halló escrito:

MEMORIAL DE AGRAVIOS COMUNES.

CONVIENE A SABER: REDOMAZOS, UNTOS DE MIERA, CLAVAZÓN DE SAMBENITOS Y CUERNOS, MATRACAS, ESPANTOS, ALBOROTOS Y CUCHILLADAS FINGIDAS, PUBLICACIÓN DE NIBELOS, ETC.

-¿Qué dice más abajo? -dijo Monipodio.

-Dice -dijo Rinconete-:

Unto de miera en la casa...

-No se lea la casa, que ya yo sé dónde es -respondió Monipodio-, y yo soy el tuáutem y esecutor desa niñería, y están dados a buena cuenta cuatro escudos, y el principal es ocho.

-Así es la verdad -dijo Rinconete-, que todo eso está aquí escrito; y aun más abajo dice:

Clavazón de cuernos.

-Tampoco se lea -dijo Monipodio-la casa, ni adónde; que basta que se les haga el agravio, sin que se diga en público; que es gran cargo de conciencia. A lo menos, más querría yo clavar cien cuernos y otros tantos sambenitos, como se me pagase mi trabajo, que decillo sola una vez, aunque fuese a la madre que me parió.

-El esecutor desto es -dijo Rinconete-el Narigueta.

-Ya está eso hecho y pagado -dijo Monipodio-. Mirad si hay más, que si mal no me acuerdo, ha de haber ahí un espanto de veinte escudos; está dada la mitad, y el ejecutor es la comunidad toda, y el término es todo el mes en que estamos; y cumplirás al pie de la letra, sin que falte una tilde, y será una de las mejores cosas que hayan sucedido en esta ciudad de muchos tiempos a esta parte. Dadme el libro, mancebo, que yo sé que no hay más, y sé también que anda muy flaco el oficio; pero tras este tiempo vendrá otro y habrá que hacer más de lo que quisiéremos; que no se mueve la hoja sin la voluntad de Dios, y no hemos de hacer nosotros que se vengue nadie por fuerza; cuanto más, que cada uno en su causa suele ser valiente y no quiere pagar las hechuras de la obra que él se puede hacer por sus manos.

-Así es -dijo a esto el Repolido-. Pero mire vuesa merced, señor Monipodio, lo que nos ordena y manda, que se va haciendo tarde y va entrando el calor más que de paso.

-Lo que se ha de hacer -respondió Monipodio-es que todos se vayan a sus puestos, y nadie se mude hasta el domingo, que nos juntaremos en este mismo lugar y se repartirá todo lo que hubiere caído, sin agraviar a nadie. A Rinconete el Bueno y a Cortadillo se les da por distrito, hasta el domingo, desde la Torre del Oro, por defuera de la ciudad, hasta el postigo del Alcázar, donde se puede trabajar a sentadillas con sus flores; que yo he visto a otros, de menos habilidad que ellos, salir cada día con más de veinte reales en menudos, amén de la plata, con una baraja sola, y ésa con cuatro naipes menos. Este distrito os enseñará Ganchoso; y, aunque os estendáis hasta San Sebastián y San Telmo, importa poco, puesto que es justicia mera mista que nadie se entre en pertenencia de nadie.

Besáronle la mano los dos por la merced que se les hacía, y ofreciéronse a hacer su oficio bien y fielmente, con toda diligencia y recato.

Sacó, en esto, Monipodio un papel doblado de la capilla de la capa, donde estaba la lista de los cofrades, y dijo a Rinconete que pusiese allí su nombre y el de Cortadillo; mas, porque no había tintero, le dio el papel para que lo llevase, y en el primer boticario los escribiese, poniendo: Rinconete y Cortadillo, cofrades: noviciado, ninguno; Rinconete, floreo; Cortadillo, bajón; y el día, mes y año, callando padres y patria.

Estando en esto, entró uno de los viejos avispones y dijo:

-Vengo a decir a vuestras mercedes cómo ahora, ahora, topé en Gradas a Lobillo el de Málaga, y dícame que viene mejorado en su arte de tal manera, que con naipe limpio quitará el dinero al mismo Satanás; y que por venir maltratado no viene luego a registrarse y a dar la sálita obediencia; pero que el domingo será aquí sin falta.

-Siempre se me asentó a mí -dijo Monipodio-que este Lobillo había de ser único en su arte, porque tiene las mejores y más acomodadas manos para ello que se pueden desear; que, para ser uno buen oficial en su oficio, tanto ha menester los buenos instrumentos con que le ejercita, como el ingenio con que le aprende.

-También topé -dijo el viejo-en una casa de posadas, en la calle de Tintores, al Judío, en hábito de clérigo, que se ha ido a posar allí por tener noticia que dos peruleros viven en la misma casa, y querría ver si pudiese trabar juego con ellos, aunque fuese de poca cantidad, que de allí podría venir a mucha. Dice también que el domingo no faltará de la junta y dará cuenta de su persona.

-Ese Judío también -dijo Monipodio-es gran sacre y tiene gran conocimiento. Días ha que no le he visto, y no lo hace bien. Pues a fe que si no se enmienda, que yo le deshaga la corona; que no tiene más órdenes el ladrón que las tiene el turco, ni sabe más latín que mi madre. ¿Hay más de nuevo?

-No -dijo el viejo-; a lo menos que yo sepa.

-Pues sea en buen hora -dijo Monipodio-. Voacedes tomen esta miseria -y repartió entre todos hasta cuarenta reales-, y el domingo no falte nadie, que no faltará nada de lo corrido.

Todos le volvieron las gracias. Tornáronse a abrazar Repolido y la Cariharta, la Escalanta con Maniferro y la Gananciosa con Chiquiznaque, concertando que aquella noche, después de haber alzado de obra en la casa, se viesen en la de la Pipota, donde también dijo que iría Monipodio, al registro de la canasta de colar, y que luego había de ir a cumplir y borrar la partida de la miera. Abrazó a Rinconete y a Cortadillo, y, echándolos su bendición, los despidió, encargándoles que no tuviesen jamás posada cierta ni de asiento, porque así convenía a la salud de todos. Acompañólos Ganchoso hasta enseñarles sus puestos, acordándoles que no faltasen el domingo, porque, a lo que creía y pensaba, Monipodio había de leer una lición de posición acerca de las cosas concernientes a su arte. Con esto, se fue, dejando a los dos compañeros admirados de lo que habían visto.

Era Rinconete, aunque muchacho, de muy buen entendimiento, y tenía un buen natural; y, como había andado con su padre en el ejercicio de las bulas, sabía algo de buen lenguaje, y dábale gran risa pensar en los vocablos que había oído a Monipodio y a los demás de su compañía y bendita comunidad, y más cuando por decir per modum sufragii había dicho per modo de naufragio; y que sacaban el estupendo, por decir estipendio, de lo que se garbeaba; y cuando la Cariharta dijo que era Repolido como un marinero de Tarpeya y un tigre de Ocaña, por decir Hircania, con otras mil impertinencias (especialmente le cayó en gracia cuando dijo que el trabajo que había pasado en ganar los veinte y cuatro reales lo recibiese el cielo en descuento de sus pecados) a éstas y a otras peores semejantes; y, sobre todo, le admiraba la seguridad que tenían y la confianza de irse al cielo con no faltar a sus devociones, estando tan llenos de hurtos, y de homicidios y de ofensas a Dios. Y reíase de la otra buena vieja de la Pipota, que dejaba la canasta de colar hurtada, guardada en su casa y se iba a poner las candelillas de cera a las imágenes, y con ello pensaba irse al cielo calzada y vestida. No menos le suspendía la obediencia y respecto que todos tenían a Monipodio, siendo un hombre bárbaro, rústico y desalmado. Consideraba lo que había leído en su libro de memoria y los ejercicios en que todos se ocupaban. Finalmente, exageraba cuán descuidada justicia había en aquella tan famosa ciudad de Sevilla, pues casi al descubierto vivía en ella gente tan perniciosa y tan contraria a la misma naturaleza; y propuso en sí de aconsejar a su compañero no durasen mucho en aquella vida tan perdida y tan mala, tan inquieta, y tan libre y disoluta. Pero, con todo esto, llevado de sus pocos años y de su poca experiencia, pasó con ella adelante algunos meses, en los cuales le sucedieron cosas que piden más luenga escritura; y así, se deja para otra ocasión contar su vida y milagros, con los de su maestro Monipodio, y otros sucesos de aquéllos de la infame academia, que todos serán de grande consideración y que podrán servir de ejemplo y aviso a los que las leyeren.

La española inglesa

ENTRE los despojos que los ingleses llevaron de la ciudad de Cádiz, Clotaldo, un caballero inglés, capitán de una escuadra de navíos, llevó a Londres una niña de edad de siete años, poco más o menos; y esto contra la voluntad y sabiduría del conde de Leste, que con gran diligencia hizo buscar la niña para volvérsela a sus padres, que ante él se quejaron de la falta de su hija, pidiéndole que, pues se contentaba con las haciendas y dejaba libres las personas, no fuesen ellos tan desdichados que, ya que quedaban pobres, quedasen sin su hija, que era la lumbré de sus ojos y la más hermosa criatura que había en toda la ciudad.

Mandó el conde echar bando por toda su armada que, so pena de la vida, volviese la niña cualquiera que la tuviese; mas ningunas penas ni temores fueron bastantes a que Clotaldo la obedeciese; que la tenía escondida en su nave, aficionado, aunque cristianamente, a la incomparable hermosura de Isabel, que así se llamaba la niña. Finalmente, sus padres se quedaron sin ella, tristes y desconsolados, y Clotaldo, alegre sobremodo, llegó a Londres y entregó por riquísimo despojo a su mujer a la hermosa niña.

Quiso la buena suerte que todos los de la casa de Clotaldo eran católicos secretos, aunque en lo público mostraban seguir la opinión de su reina. Tenía Clotaldo un hijo llamado Ricaredo, de edad de doce años, enseñado de sus padres a amar y temer a Dios y a estar muy entero en las verdades de la fe católica. Catalina, la mujer de Clotaldo, noble, cristiana y prudente señora, tomó tanto amor a Isabel que, como si fuera su hija, la criaba, regalaba e industriaba; y la niña era de tan buen natural, que con facilidad aprendía todo cuanto le enseñaban. Con el tiempo y con los regalos, fue olvidando los que sus padres verdaderos le habían hecho; pero no tanto que dejase de acordarse y de suspirar por ellos muchas veces; y, aunque iba aprendiendo la lengua inglesa, no perdía la española, porque Clotaldo tenía cuidado de traerle a casa secretamente españoles que hablasen con ella. Desta manera, sin olvidar la suya, como está dicho, hablaba la lengua inglesa como si hubiera nacido en Londres.

Después de haberle enseñado todas las cosas de labor que puede y debe saber una doncella bien nacida, la enseñaron a leer y escribir más que medianamente; pero en lo que tuvo extremo fue en tañer todos los instrumentos que a una mujer son lícitos, y esto con toda perfección de música, acompañándola con una voz que le dio el cielo, tan estremada que encantaba cuando cantaba.

Todas estas gracias, adquiridas y puestas sobre la natural suya, poco a poco fueron encendiendo el pecho de Ricaredo, a quien ella, como a hijo de su señor, quería y servía. Al principio le salteó amor con un modo de agradarse y complacerse de ver la sin igual belleza de Isabel, y de considerar sus infinitas virtudes y gracias, amándola como si fuera su hermana, sin que sus deseos saliesen de los términos honrados y virtuosos. Pero, como fue creciendo Isabel, que ya cuando Ricaredo ardía tenía doce años, aquella benevolencia primera y aquella complacencia y agrado de mirarla se volvió en ardentísimos deseos de gozarla y de poseerla: no porque aspirase a esto por otros medios que por los de ser su esposo, pues de la incomparable honestidad de Isabela (que así la llamaban ellos) no se podía esperar otra cosa, ni aun él quisiera esperarla, aunque pudiera, porque la noble condición suya, y la estimación en que a Isabela tenía, no consentían que ningún mal pensamiento echase raíces en su alma.

Mil veces determinó manifestar su voluntad a sus padres, y otras tantas no aprobó su determinación, porque él sabía que le tenían dedicado para ser esposo de una muy rica y principal doncella escocesa, asimismo secreta cristiana como ellos. Y estaba claro, según él decía, que no habían de querer dar a una esclava (si este nombre se podía dar a Isabela) lo que ya tenían concertado de dar a una señora. Y así, perplejo y pensativo, sin saber qué camino tomar para venir al fin de su buen deseo, pasaba una vida tal, que le puso a punto de perderla. Pero, pareciéndole ser gran cobardía dejarse morir sin intentar algún género de remedio a su dolencia, se animó y esforzó a declarar su intento a Isabela.

Andaban todos los de casa tristes y alborotados por la enfermedad de Ricaredo, que de todos era querido, y de sus padres con el extremo posible, así por no tener otro, como porque lo merecía su mucha virtud y su gran valor y entendimiento. No le acertaban los médicos la enfermedad, ni él osaba ni quería descubrísela. En fin, puesto en romper por las dificultades que él se imaginaba, un día que entró Isabela a servirle, viéndola sola, con desmayada voz y lengua turbada le dijo:

-Hermosa Isabela, tu valor, tu mucha virtud y grande hermosura me tienen como me vees; si no quieres que deje la vida en manos de las mayores penas que pueden imaginarse, responde el tuyo a mi buen deseo, que no es otro que el de recebirte por mi esposa a hurto de mis padres, de los cuales temo que, por no conocer lo que yo conozco que mereces, me han de negar el bien que tanto me importa. Si me das la palabra de ser mía, yo te la doy, desde luego, como verdadero y católico cristiano, de ser tuyo; que, puesto que no llegue a gozarte, como no llegaré, hasta que con bendición de la Iglesia y de mis padres sea, aquel imaginar que con seguridad eres mía será bastante a darme salud y a mantenerme alegre y contento hasta que llegue el felice punto que deseo.

En tanto que esto dijo Ricaredo, estuvo escuchándole Isabela, los ojos bajos, mostrando en aquel punto que su honestidad se igualaba a su hermosura, y a su mucha discreción su recato. Y así, viendo que Ricaredo callaba, honesta, hermosa y discreta, le respondió desta suerte:

-Después que quiso el rigor o la clemencia del cielo, que no sé a cuál destos extremos lo atribuya, quitarme a mis padres, señor Ricaredo, y darme a los vuestros, agradecida a las infinitas mercedes que me han hecho, determiné que jamás mi voluntad saliese de la suya; y así, sin ella tendría no por buena, sino por mala fortuna la inestimable merced que queréis hacerme. Si con su sabiduría fuere yo tan venturosa que os merezca, desde aquí os ofrezco la voluntad que ellos me dieren; y, en tanto que esto se dilatase o no fuere, entretengan vuestros deseos saber que los míos serán eternos y limpios en desearos el bien que el cielo puede daros.

Aquí puso silencio Isabela a sus honestas y discretas razones, y allí comenzó la salud de Ricaredo, y comenzaron a revivir las esperanzas de sus padres, que en su enfermedad muertas estaban.

Despidiéronse los dos cortésmente: él, con lágrimas en los ojos; ella, con admiración en el alma de ver tan rendida a su amor la de Ricaredo, el cual, levantado del lecho, al parecer de sus padres por milagro, no quiso tenerles más tiempo ocultos sus pensamientos. Y así, un día se los manifestó a su madre, diciéndole en el fin de su plática, que fue larga, que si no le casaban con Isabela, que el negársela y darle la muerte era todo una misma cosa. Con tales razones, con tales encarecimientos subió al cielo las virtudes de Isabela Ricaredo, que le pareció a su madre que Isabela era la engañada en llevar a su hijo por esposo. Dio buenas esperanzas a su hijo de disponer a su padre a que con gusto viniese en lo que ya ella también venía; y así fue; que, diciendo a su marido las mismas razones que a ella había dicho su hijo, con facilidad le movió a querer lo que tanto su hijo deseaba, fabricando excusas que impidiesen el casamiento que casi tenía concertado con la doncella de Escocia.

A esta sazón tenía Isabela catorce y Ricaredo veinte años; y, en esta tan verde y tan florida edad, su mucha discreción y conocida prudencia los hacía ancianos. Cuatro días faltaban para llegarse aquél en el cual sus padres de Ricaredo querían que su hijo inclinase el cuello al yugo santo del matrimonio, teniéndose por prudentes y dichosísimos de haber escogido a su prisionera por su hija, teniendo en más la dote de sus virtudes que la mucha riqueza que con la escocesa se les ofrecía. Las galas estaban ya a punto, los parientes y los amigos convidados, y no faltaba otra cosa sino hacer a la reina sabidora de aquel concierto; porque, sin su voluntad y consentimiento, entre los de ilustre sangre, no se efetúa casamiento alguno; pero no dudaron de la licencia, y así, se detuvieron en pedirla.

Digo, pues, que, estando todo en este estado, cuando faltaban los cuatro días hasta el de la boda, una tarde turbó todo su regocijo un ministro de la reina que dio un recaudo a Clotaldo: que su Majestad mandaba que otro día por la mañana llevasen a su presencia a su prisionera, la española de Cádiz. Respondióle Clotaldo que de muy buena gana haría lo que su Majestad le mandaba. Fuese el ministro, y dejó llenos los pechos de todos de turbación, de sobresalto y miedo.

-¡Ay -decía la señora Catalina-, si sabe la reina que yo he criado a esta niña a la católica, y de aquí viene a inferir que todos los desta casa somos cristianos! Pues si la reina le pregunta qué es lo que ha aprendido en ocho años que ha que es prisionera, ¿qué ha de responder la cuitada que no nos condene, por más discreción que tenga?

Oyendo lo cual Isabela, le dijo:

-No le dé pena alguna, señora mía, ese temor, que yo confío en el cielo que me ha de dar palabras en aquel instante, por su divina misericordia, que no sólo no os condenen, sino que redunden en provecho vuestro.

Temblaba Ricaredo, casi como adivino de algún mal suceso. Clotaldo buscaba modos que pudiesen dar ánimo a su mucho temor, y no los hallaba sino en la mucha confianza que en Dios tenía y en la prudencia de Isabela, a quien encomendó mucho que, por todas las vías que pudiese escusase el condenallos por católicos; que, puesto que estaban prompts con el espíritu a recibir martirio, todavía la carne enferma rehusaba su amarga carrera. Una y muchas veces le aseguró Isabela estuviesen seguros que por su causa no sucedería lo que temían y sospechaban, porque, aunque ella entonces no sabía lo que había de responder a las preguntas que en tal caso le hiciesen, tenía tan viva y cierta esperanza que había de responder de modo que, como otra vez había dicho, sus respuestas les sirviesen de abono.

Discurrieron aquella noche en muchas cosas, especialmente en que si la reina supiera que eran católicos, no les enviara recaudo tan manso, por donde se podía inferir que sólo quería ver a Isabela, cuya sin igual hermosura y habilidades habría llegado a sus oídos, como a todos los de la ciudad. Pero ya en no habérsela presentado se hallaban culpados, de la cual culpa hallaron sería bien disculparse con decir que desde el punto que entró en su poder la escogieron y señalaron para esposa de su hijo Ricaredo. Pero también en esto se culpaban, por haber hecho el casamiento sin licencia de la reina, aunque esta culpa no les pareció digna de gran castigo.

Con esto se consolaron, y acordaron que Isabela no fuese vestida humildemente, como prisionera, sino como esposa, pues ya lo era de tan principal esposo como su hijo. Resueltos en esto, otro día vistieron a Isabela a la española, con una saya entera de raso verde, acuchillada y forrada en rica tela de oro, tomadas las cuchilladas con unas eses de perlas, y toda ella bordada de riquísimas perlas; collar y cintura de diamantes, y con abanico a modo de las señoras damas españolas; sus mismos cabellos, que eran muchos, rubios y largos, entretejidos y sembrados de diamantes y perlas, le sirvían de tocado. Con este adorno riquísimo y con su gallarda disposición y milagrosa belleza, se mostró aquel día a Londres sobre una hermosa carroza, llevando colgados de su vista las almas y los ojos de cuantos la miraban. Iban con ella Clotaldo y su mujer y Ricaredo en la carroza, y a caballo muchos ilustres parientes suyos. Toda esta honra quiso hacer Clotaldo a su prisionera, por obligar a la reina la tratase como a esposa de su hijo.

Llegados, pues, a palacio, y a una gran sala donde la reina estaba, entró por ella Isabela, dando de sí la más hermosa muestra que pudo caber en una imaginación. Era la sala grande y espaciosa, y a dos pasos se quedó el acompañamiento y se adelantó Isabela; y, como quedó sola, pareció lo mismo que parece la estrella o exhalación que por la región del fuego en serena y sosegada noche suele moverse, o bien ansí como rayo del sol que al salir del día por entre dos montañas se descubre. Todo esto pareció, y aun cometa que pronosticó el incendio de más de un alma de los que allí estaban, a quien Amor abrasó con los rayos de los hermosos soles de Isabela; la cual, llena de humildad y cortesía, se fue a poner de hinojos ante la reina, y, en lengua inglesa, le dijo:

-Dé Vuestra Majestad las manos a esta su sierva, que, desde hoy más, se tendrá por señora, pues ha sido tan venturosa que ha llegado a ver la grandeza vuestra.

Estúvola la reina mirando por un buen espacio, sin hablarle palabra, pareciéndole, como después dijo a su camarera, que tenía delante un cielo estrellado, cuyas estrellas eran las muchas perlas y diamantes que Isabela traía; su bello rostro y sus ojos, el sol y la luna, y toda ella una nueva maravilla de hermosura. Las damas que estaban con la reina quisieran hacerse todas ojos, porque no les quedase cosa por mirar en Isabela: cuál acababa la viveza de sus ojos, cuál la color del rostro, cuál la gallardía del cuerpo y cuál la dulzura de la habla; y tal hubo que, de pura envidia, dijo:

-Buena es la española, pero no me contenta el traje.

Después que pasó algún tanto la suspensión de la reina, haciendo levantar a Isabela, le dijo:

-Habladme en español, doncella, que yo le entiendo bien y gustaré dello.

Y, volviéndose a Clotaldo, dijo:

-Clotaldo, agravio me habéis hecho en tenerme este tesoro tantos años ha encubierto; mas él es tal, que os haya movido a codicia: obligado estáis a restituírmele, porque de derecho es mío.

-Señora -respondió Clotaldo-, mucha verdad es lo que Vuestra Majestad dice: confieso mi culpa, si lo es haber guardado este tesoro a que estuviese en la perfección que convenía para parecer ante los ojos de Vuestra Majestad; y, ahora que lo está, pensaba traerle mejorado, pidiendo licencia a Vuestra Majestad para que Isabela fuese esposa de mi hijo Ricaredo, y daros, alta Majestad, en los dos, todo cuanto puedo daros.

-Hasta el nombre me contenta -respondió la reina-: no le faltaba más sino llamarse Isabela la española, para que no me quedase nada de perfección que desear en ella. Pero advertid, Clotaldo, que sé que sin mi licencia la teníades prometida a vuestro hijo.

-Así es verdad, señora -respondió Clotaldo-, pero fue en confianza que los muchos y relevados servicios que yo y mis pasados tenemos hechos a esta corona alcanzarían de Vuestra Majestad otras mercedes más dificultosas que las desta licencia; cuanto más, que aún no está desposado mi hijo.

-Ni lo estará -dijo la reina-con Isabela hasta que por sí mismo lo merezca. Quiero decir que no quiero que para esto le aprovechen vuestros servicios ni de sus pasados: él por sí mismo se ha de disponer a servirme y a merecer por sí esta prenda, que ya la estimo como si fuese mi hija.

Apenas oyó esta última palabra Isabela, cuando se volvió a hincar de rodillas ante la reina, diciéndole en lengua castellana:

-Las desgracias que tales descuentos traen, serenísima señora, antes se han de tener por dichas que por desventuras. Ya Vuestra Majestad me ha dado nombre de hija: sobre tal prenda, ¿qué males podré temer o qué bienes no podré esperar?

Con tanta gracia y donaire decía cuanto decía Isabela, que la reina se le aficionó en extremo y mandó que se quedase en su servicio, y se la entregó a una gran señora, su camarera mayor, para que la enseñase el modo de vivir suyo.

Ricaredo, que se vio quitar la vida en quitarle a Isabela, estuvo a pique de perder el juicio; y así, temblando y con sobresalto, se fue a poner de rodillas ante la reina, a quien dijo:

-Para servir yo a Vuestra Majestad no es menester incitarme con otros premios que con aquellos que mis padres y mis pasados han alcanzado por haber servido a sus reyes; pero, pues Vuestra Majestad gusta que yo la sirva con nuevos deseos y pretensiones, querría saber en qué modo y en qué ejercicio podré mostrar que cumplo con la obligación en que Vuestra Majestad me pone.

-Dos navíos -respondió la reina-están para partirse en corso, de los cuales he hecho general al barón de Lansac: del uno dellos os hago a vos capitán, porque la sangre de do venís me asegura que ha de suplir la falta de vuestros años. Y advertid a la merced que os hago, pues os doy ocasión en ella a que, correspondiendo a quien sois, sirviendo a vuestra reina, mostréis el valor de vuestro ingenio y de vuestra persona, y alcancéis el mejor premio que a mi parecer vos mismo podéis acertar a desearos. Yo misma os seré guarda de Isabela, aunque ella da muestras que su honestidad será su más verdadera guarda. Id con Dios, que, pues vais enamorado, como imagino, grandes cosas me prometo de vuestras hazañas. Felice fuera el rey batallador que tuviera en su ejército diez mil soldados amantes que esperaran que el premio de sus vitorias había de ser gozar de sus amadas. Levantaos, Ricaredo, y mirad si tenéis o queréis decir algo a Isabela, porque mañana ha de ser vuestra partida.

Besó las manos Ricaredo a la reina, estimando en mucho la merced que le hacía, y luego se fue a hincar de rodillas ante Isabela; y, queriéndola hablar, no pudo, porque se le puso un nudo en la garganta que le ató la lengua y las lágrimas acudieron a los ojos, y él acudió a disimularlas lo más que le fue posible. Pero, con todo esto, no se pudieron encubrir a los ojos de la reina, pues dijo:

-No os afrentéis, Ricaredo, de llorar, ni os tengáis en menos por haber dado en este trance tan tiernas muestras de vuestro corazón: que una cosa es pelear con los enemigos y otra despedirse de quien bien se quiere. Abrazad, Isabela, a Ricaredo y dadle vuestra bendición, que bien lo merece su sentimiento.

Isabela, que estaba suspensa y atónita de ver la humildad y dolor de Ricaredo, que como a su esposo le amaba, no entendió lo que la reina le mandaba, antes comenzó a derramar lágrimas, tan sin pensar lo que hacía, y tan sesga y tan sin movimiento alguno, que no parecía sino que lloraba una estatua de alabastro. Estos afectos de los dos amantes, tan tiernos y tan enamorados, hicieron verter lágrimas a muchos de los circunstantes; y, sin hablar más palabra Ricaredo, y sin le haber hablado alguna a Isabela, haciendo Clotaldo y los que con él venían reverencia a la reina, se salieron de la sala, llenos de compasión, de despecho y de lágrimas.

Quedó Isabela como huérfana que acaba de enterrar sus padres, y con temor que la nueva señora quisiese que mudase las costumbres en que la primera la había criado. En fin, se quedó, y de allí a dos días Ricaredo se hizo a la vela, combatido, entre otros muchos, de dos pensamientos que le tenían fuera de sí: era el uno considerar que le convenía hacer hazañas que le hiciesen merecedor de Isabela; y el otro, que no podía hacer ninguna, si había de responder a su católico intento, que le impedía no desenvainar la espada contra católicos; y si no la desenvainaba, había de ser notado de cristiano o de cobarde, y todo esto redundaba en perjuicio de su vida y en obstáculo de su pretensión.

Pero, en fin, determinó de posponer al gusto de enamorado el que tenía de ser católico, y en su corazón pedía al cielo le deparase ocasiones donde, con ser valiente, cumpliese con ser cristiano, dejando a su reina satisfecha y a Isabela merecida.

Seis días navegaron los dos navíos con próspero viento, siguiendo la derrota de las islas Terceras, paraje donde nunca faltan o naves portuguesas de las Indias orientales o algunas derrotadas de las occidentales. Y, al cabo de los seis días, les dio de costado un reciísimo viento (que en el mar océano tiene otro nombre que en el Mediterráneo, donde se llama mediodía), el cual viento fue tan durable y tan recio que, sin dejarles tomar las islas, les fue forzoso correr a España; y, junto a su costa, a la boca del estrecho de Gibraltar, descubrieron tres navíos: uno poderoso y grande, y los dos pequeños. Arribó la nave de Ricaredo a su capitán, para saber de su general si quería embestir a los tres navíos que se descubrían; y, antes que a ella llegase, vio poner sobre la gavia mayor un estandarte negro, y, llegándose más cerca, oyó que tocaban en la nave clarines y trompetas roncadas: señales claras o que el general era muerto o alguna otra principal persona de la nave. Con este sobresalto llegaron a poderse hablar, que no lo habían hecho después que salieron del puerto. Dieron voces de la nave capitana, diciendo que el capitán Ricaredo pasase a ella, porque el general la noche antes había muerto de una apoplejía. Todos se entristecieron, si no fue Ricaredo, que le alegró, no por el daño de su general, sino por ver que quedaba él libre para mandar en los dos navíos, que así fue la orden de la reina: que, faltando el general, lo fuese Ricaredo; el cual con presteza se pasó a la capitana, donde halló que unos lloraban por el general muerto y otros se alegraban con el vivo.

Finalmente, los unos y los otros le dieron luego la obediencia y le aclamaron por su general con breves ceremonias, no dando lugar a otra cosa dos de los tres navíos que habían descubierto, los cuales, desviándose del grande, a las dos naves se venían.

Luego conocieron ser galeras, y turquescas, por las medias lunas que en las banderas traían, de que recibió gran gusto Ricaredo, pareciéndole que aquella presa, si el cielo se la concediese, sería de consideración, sin haber ofendido a ningún católico. Las dos galeras turquescas llegaron a reconocer los navíos ingleses, los cuales no traían insignias de Inglaterra, sino de España, por desmentir a quien llegase a reconocerlos, y no los tuviese por navíos de cosarios. Creyeron los turcos ser naves derrotadas de las Indias y que con facilidad las rendirían. Fuéronse entrando poco a poco, y de industria los dejó llegar Ricaredo hasta tenerlos a gusto de su artillería, la cual mandó disparar a tan buen tiempo, que con cinco balas dio en la mitad de una de las galeras, con tanta furia, que la abrió por medio toda. Dio luego a la banda, y comenzó a irse a pique sin poderse remediar. La otra galera, viendo tan mal suceso, con mucha priesa le dio cabo, y le llevó a poner debajo del costado del gran navío; pero Ricaredo, que tenía los suyos prestos y ligeros, y que salían y entraban como si tuvieran remos, mandando cargar de nuevo toda la artillería, los fue siguiendo hasta la nave, lloviendo sobre ellos infinidad de balas. Los de la galera abierta, así como llegaron a la nave, la desampararon, y con priesa y celeridad procuraban acogerse a la nave. Lo cual visto por Ricaredo y que la galera sana se ocupaba con la rendida, cargó sobre ella con sus dos navíos, y, sin dejarla rodear ni valerse de los remos, la puso en estrecho: que los turcos se aprovecharon ansimismo del refugio de acogerse a la nave, no para defenderse en ella, sino por escapar las vidas por entonces. Los cristianos de quien venían armadas las galeras, arrancando las branzas y rompiendo las cadenas, mezclados con los turcos, también se acogieron a la nave; y, como iban subiendo por su costado, con la arcabucería de los navíos los iban tirando como a blanco; a los turcos no más, que a los cristianos mandó Ricaredo que nadie los tirase. Desta manera, casi todos los más turcos fueron muertos, y los que en la nave entraron, por los cristianos que con ellos se mezclaron, aprovechándose de sus mismas armas, fueron hechos pedazos: que la fuerza de los valientes, cuando caen, se pasa a la flaqueza de los que se levantan. Y así, con el calor que les daba a los cristianos pensar que los navíos ingleses eran españoles, hicieron por su libertad maravillas. Finalmente, habiendo muerto casi todos los turcos, algunos españoles se pusieron a borde del navío, y a grandes voces llamaron a los que pensaban ser españoles entrasen a gozar el premio del vencimiento.

Preguntóles Ricaredo en español que qué navío era aquél. Respondiéronle que era una nave que venía de la India de Portugal, cargada de especería, y con tantas perlas y diamantes, que valía más de un millón de oro, y que con tormenta había arribado a aquella parte, toda destruida y sin artillería, por haberla echado a la mar la gente, enferma y casi muerta de sed y de hambre; y que aquellas dos galeras, que eran del cosario Arnaúte Mamí, el día antes la habían rendido, sin haberse puesto en defensa; y que, a lo que habían oído decir, por no poder pasar tanta riqueza a sus dos bajeles, la llevaban a jorro para meterla en el río de Larache, que estaba allí cerca.

Ricaredo les respondió que si ellos pensaban que aquellos dos navíos eran españoles, se engañaban; que no eran sino de la señora reina de Inglaterra, cuya nueva dio que pensar y que temer a los que la oyeron, pensando, como era razón que pensasen, que de un lazo habían caído en otro. Pero Ricaredo les dijo que no temiesen algún daño, y que estuviesen ciertos de su libertad, con tal que no se pusiesen en defensa.

-Ni es posible ponernos en ella -respondieron-, porque, como se ha dicho, este navío no tiene artillería ni nosotros armas; así que, nos es forzoso acudir a la gentileza y liberalidad de vuestro general; pues será justo que quien nos ha librado del insufrible cautiverio de los turcos lleve adelante tan gran merced y beneficio, pues le podrá hacer famoso en todas las partes, que serán infinitas, donde llegare la nueva desta memorable vitoria y de su liberalidad, más de nosotros esperada que temida.

No le parecieron mal a Ricaredo las razones del español; y, llamando a consejo los de su navío, les preguntó cómo haría para enviar todos los cristianos a España sin ponerse a peligro de algún siniestro suceso, si el ser tantos les daba ánimo para levantarse. Pareceres hubo que los hiciese pasar uno a uno a su navío, y, así como fuesen entrando debajo de cubierta, matarle, y desta manera matarlos a todos, y llevar la gran nave a Londres, sin temor ni cuidado alguno.

A esto respondió Ricaredo:

-Pues que Dios nos ha hecho tan gran merced en darnos tanta riqueza, no quiero corresponderle con ánimo cruel y desagradecido, ni es bien que lo que puedo remediar con la industria lo remedie con la espada. Y así, soy de parecer que ningún cristiano católico muera: no porque los quiero bien, sino porque me quiero a mí muy bien, y querría que esta hazaña de hoy ni a mí ni a vosotros, que en ella me habéis sido compañeros, nos diese, mezclado con el nombre de valientes, el renombre de crueles: porque nunca dijo bien la crueldad con la valentía. Lo que se ha de hacer es que toda la artillería de un navío destes se ha de pasar a la gran nave portuguesa, sin dejar en el navío otras armas ni otra cosa más del bastimento, y no lejando la nave de nuestra gente, la llevaremos a Inglaterra, y los españoles se irán a España.

Nadie osó contradecir lo que Ricaredo había propuesto, y algunos le tuvieron por valiente y magnánimo y de buen entendimiento; otros le juzgaron en sus corazones por más católico que debía. Resuelto, pues, en esto Ricaredo, pasó con cincuenta arcabuceros a la nave portuguesa, todos alerta y con las cuerdas encendidas. Halló en la nave casi trecientas personas, de las que habían escapado de las galeras. Pidió luego el registro de la nave, y respondióle aquel mismo que desde el borde le habló la vez primera, que el registro le había tomado el cosario de los bajeles, que con ellos se había ahogado. Al instante puso el torno en orden, y, acostando su segundo bajel a la gran nave, con maravillosa presteza y con fuerza de fortísimos cabestrantes, pasaron la artillería del pequeño bajel a la mayor nave. Luego, haciendo una breve plática a los cristianos, les mandó pasar al bajel desembarazado, donde hallaron bastimento en abundancia para más de un mes y para más gente; y, así como se iban embarcando, dio a cada uno cuatro escudos de oro españoles, que hizo traer de su navío, para remediar en parte su necesidad cuando llegasen a tierra: que estaba tan cerca, que las altas montañas de Abala y Calpe desde allí se parecían. Todos le dieron infinitas gracias por la merced que les hacía, y el último que se iba a embarcar fue aquel que por los demás había hablado, el cual le dijo:

-Por más ventura tuviera, valeroso caballero, que me llevaras contigo a Inglaterra, que no que me enviaras a España; porque, aunque es mi patria y no habrá sino seis días que della partí, no he de hallar en ella otra cosa que no sea de ocasiones de tristezas y soledades mías.

Preguntóles Ricaredo cómo se llamaba su hija. Respondióle que Isabel. Con esto acabó de confirmarse Ricaredo en lo que ya había sospechado, que era que el que se lo contaba era el padre de su querida Isabela. Y, sin darle algunas nuevas della, le dijo que de muy buena gana llevaría a él y a su mujer a Londres, donde podría ser hallasen nuevas de la que deseaban. Hízolos pasar luego a su capitana, poniendo marineros y guardas bastantes en la nao portuguesa.

Aquella noche alzaron velas, y se dieron prisa a apartarse de las costas de España, porque el navío de los cautivos libres, entre los cuales también iban hasta veinte turcos, a quien también Ricaredo dio libertad, por mostrar que más por su buena condición y generoso ánimo se mostraba liberal, que por forzarle amor que a los católicos tuviese. Rogó a los españoles que en la primera ocasión que se ofreciese diesen entera libertad a los turcos, que ansimismo se le mostraron agradecidos.

El viento, que daba señales de ser próspero y largo, comenzó a calmar un tanto, cuya calma levantó gran tormenta de temor en los ingleses, que culpaban a Ricaredo y a su liberalidad, diciéndole que los libres podían dar aviso en España de aquel suceso, y que si acaso había galeones de armada en el puerto, podían salir en su busca y ponerlos en aprieto y en término de perderse. Bien conocía Ricaredo que tenían razón, pero, venciéndolos a todos con buenas razones, los sosegó; pero más los quietó el viento, que volvió a refrescar de modo que, dándole todas las velas, sin tener necesidad de acanallas ni aun de templallas, dentro de nueve días se hallaron a la vista de Londres; y, cuando en él, victorioso, volvieron, habría treinta que dél faltaban.

No quiso Ricaredo entrar en el puerto con muestras de alegría, por la muerte de su general; y así, mezcló las señales alegres con las tristes: unas veces sonaban clarines regocijados; otras, trompetas roncadas; unas tocaban los atambores, alegres y sobresaltadas armas, a quien con señas tristes y lamentables respondían los pífaros; de una gavia colgaba, puesta al revés, una bandera de medias lunas sembrada; en otra se veía un luengo estandarte de tafetán negro, cuyas puntas besaban el agua. Finalmente, con estos tan contrarios extremos entró en el río de Londres con su navío, porque la nave no tuvo fondo en él que la sufriese; y así, se quedó en la mar a lo largo.

Estas tan contrarias muestras y señales tenían suspenso el infinito pueblo que desde la ribera les miraba. Bien conocieron por algunas insignias que aquel navío menor era la capitana del barón de Lansac, mas no podían alcanzar cómo el otro navío se hubiese cambiado con aquella poderosa nave que en la mar se quedaba; pero sacólos desta duda haber saltado en el esquife, armado de todas armas, ricas y resplandecientes, el valeroso Ricaredo, que a pie, sin esperar otro acompañamiento que aquel de un innumerable vulgo que le seguía, se fue a palacio, donde ya la reina, puesta a unos corredores, estaba esperando le trujesen la nueva de los navíos.

Estaba con la reina, con las otras damas, Isabela, vestida a la inglesa, y parecía tan bien como a la castellana. Antes que Ricaredo llegase, llegó otro que dio las nuevas a la reina de cómo Ricaredo venía. Alborozas Isabela oyendo el nombre de Ricaredo, y en aquel instante temió y esperó malos y buenos sucesos de su venida.

Era Ricaredo alto de cuerpo, gentilhomme y bien proporcionado. Y, como venía armado de peto, espaldar, gola y brazaletes y escarcelas, con unas armas milanesas de once vistas, grabadas y doradas, parecía en extremo bien a cuantos le miraban; no le cubría la cabeza morrión alguno, sino un sombrero de gran falda, de color leonado con mucha diversidad de plumas terciadas a la valona; la espada, ancha; los tiros, ricos; las calzas, a la esguízara. Con este adorno y con el paso brioso que llevaba, algunos hubo que le compararon a Marte, dios de la batallas, y otros, llevados de la hermosura de su rostro, dicen que le compararon a Venus, que, para hacer alguna burla a Marte, de aquel modo se había disfrazado. En fin, él llegó ante la reina; puesto de rodillas, le dijo:

-Alta Majestad, en fuerza de vuestra ventura y en consecución de mi deseo, después de haber muerto de una apoplejía el general de Lansac, quedando yo en su lugar, merced a la liberalidad vuestra, me deparó la suerte dos galeras turquescas que llevaban remolcando aquella gran nave que allí se parece. Acometila, pelearon vuestros soldados como siempre, echáronse a fondo los bajeles de los cosarios; en el uno de los nuestros, en vuestro real nombre, di libertad a los cristianos que del poder de los turcos escaparon; sólo truje conmigo a un hombre y a una mujer españoles, que por su gusto quisieron venir a ver la grandeza vuestra. Aquella nave es de las que vienen de la India de Portugal, la cual por tormenta vino a dar en poder de los turcos, que con poco trabajo, o, por mejor decir, sin ninguno, la rindieron; y, según dijeron algunos portugueses de los que en ella venían, pasa de un millón de oro el valor de la especería y otras mercancías de perlas y diamantes que en ella vienen. A ninguna cosa se ha tocado, ni los turcos habían llegado a ella, porque todo lo dedicó el cielo, y yo lo mandé guardar, para Vuestra Majestad, que con una joya sola que se me dé, quedaré en deuda de otras diez naves, la cual joya ya Vuestra Majestad me la tiene prometida, que es a mi buena Isabela. Con ella quedaré rico y premiado, no sólo deste servicio, cual él se sea, que a Vuestra Majestad he hecho, sino de otros muchos que pienso hacer por pagar alguna parte del todo casi infinito que en esta joya Vuestra Majestad me ofrece.

-Levantaos, Ricaredo -respondió la reina-, y creedme que si por precio os hubiera de dar a Isabela, según yo la estimo, no la peteretes pagar ni con lo que trae esa nave ni con lo que queda en las Indias. Deslayo porque os la prometí, y porque ella es digna de vos y vos lo sois della. Vuestro valor solo la merece. Si vos habéis guardado las joyas de la nave para mí, yo os he guardado la joya vuestra para vos; y, aunque os parezca que no hago mucho en volveros lo que es vuestro, yo sé que os hago mucha merced en ello; que las prendas que se compran a deseos y tienen su estimación en el alma del comprador, aquello valen que vale una alma: que no hay precio en la tierra con que aprecialla. Isabela es vuestra, veisla allí; cuando quisiéredes podéis tomar su entera posesión, y creo será con su gusto, porque es discreta y sabrá ponderar la amistad que le hacéis, que no la quiero llamar merced, sino amistad, porque me quiero alzar con el nombre de que yo sola puedo hacerle mercedes. Idos a descansar y venidme a ver mañana, que quiero más particularmente oír vuestras hazañas; y traedme esos dos que decís que de su voluntad han querido venir a verme, que se lo quiero agradecer.

Besóle las manos Ricaredo por las muchas mercedes que le hacía. Entróse la reina en una sala, y las damas rodearon a Ricaredo; y una dellas, que había tomado grande amistad con Isabela, llamada la señora Tansi, tenida por la más discreta, desenvuelta y graciosa de todas, dijo a Ricaredo:

-¿Qué es esto, señor Ricaredo, qué armas son éstas? ¿Pensábadles por ventura que veníades a pelear con vuestros enemigos? Pues en verdad que aquí todas somos vuestras amigas, si no es la señora Isabela, que, como española, está obligada a no teneros buena voluntad.

-Acuérdese ella, señora Tansi, de tenerme alguna, que como yo esté en su memoria -dijo Ricaredo-, yo sé que la voluntad será buena, pues no puede caber en su mucho valor y entendimiento y rara hermosura la fealdad de ser desagradecida

A lo cual respondió Isabela:

-Señor Ricaredo, pues he de ser vuestra, a vos está tomar de mí toda la satisfacción que quisiéredes para recompensaros de las alabanzas que me habéis dado y de las mercedes que pensáis hacerme.

Estas y otras honestas razones pasó Ricaredo con Isabela y con las damas, entre las cuales había una doncella de pequeña edad, la cual no hizo sino mirar a Ricaredo mientras allí estuvo. Alzábale las escarcelas, por ver qué traía debajo dellas, tentábale la espada y con simplicidad de niña quería que las armas le sirviesen de espejo, llegándose a mirar de muy cerca en ellas; y, cuando se hubo ido, volviéndose a las damas, dijo:

-Ahora, señoras, yo imagino que debe de ser cosa hermosísima la guerra, pues aun entre mujeres parecen bien los hombres armados.

-¡Y cómo si parecen! -respondió la señora Tansi-; si no, mirad, a Ricaredo, que no parece sino que el sol se ha bajado a la tierra y en aquel hábito va caminando por la calle.

Riieron todas del dicho de la doncella y de la disparatada semejanza de Tansi, y no faltaron murmuradores que tuvieron por impertinencia el haber venido armado Ricaredo a palacio, puesto que halló disculpa en otros, que dijeron que, como soldado, lo pudo hacer para mostrar su gallarda bizarría.

Fue Ricaredo de sus padres, amigos, parientes y conocidos con muestras de entrañable amor recibido. Aquella noche se hicieron generales alegrías en Londres por su buen suceso. Ya los padres de Isabela estaban en casa de Clotaldo, a quien Ricaredo había dicho quién eran, pero que no les diesen nueva ninguna de Isabela hasta que él mismo se la diese. Este aviso tuvo la señora Catalina, su madre, y todos los criados y criadas de su casa. Aquella misma noche, con muchos bajeles, lanchas y barcos, y con no menos ojos que lo miraban, se comenzó a descargar la gran nave, que en ocho días no acabó de dar la mucha pimienta y otras riquísimas mercaderías que en su vientre encerradas tenía.

El día que siguió a esta noche fue Ricaredo a palacio, llevando consigo al padre y madre de Isabela, vestidos de nuevo a la inglesa, diciéndoles que la reina quería verlos. Llegaron todos donde la reina estaba en medio de sus damas, esperando a Ricaredo, a quien quiso lisonjear y favorecer con tener junto a sí a Isabela, vestida con aquel mismo vestido que llevó la vez primera, mostrándose no menos hermosa ahora que entonces. Los padres de Isabela quedaron admirados y suspensos de ver tanta grandeza y bizarría junta. Pusieron los ojos en Isabela, y no la conocieron, aunque el corazón, presagio del bien que tan cerca tenían, les comenzó a saltar en el pecho, no con sobresalto que les entristeciese, sino con un no sé qué de gusto, que ellos no acertaban a entendelle. No consintió la reina que Ricaredo estuviese de rodillas ante ella; antes, le hizo levantar y sentar en una silla rasa, que para sólo esto allí puesta tenían: inusitada merced, para la altiva condición de la reina; y alguno dijo a otro:

-Ricaredo no se sienta hoy sobre la silla que le han dado, sino sobre la pimienta que él trujo.

Otro acudió y dijo:

-Ahora se verifica lo que comúnmente se dice, que dádivas quebrantan peñas, pues las que ha traído Ricaredo han ablandado el duro corazón de nuestra reina.

Otro acudió y dijo:

-Ahora que está tan bien ensillado, más de dos se atreverán a correrle.

En efeto, de aquella nueva honra que la reina hizo a Ricaredo tomó ocasión la envidia para nacer en muchos pechos de aquéllos que mirándole estaban; porque no hay merced que el príncipe haga a su privado que no sea una lanza que atraviesa el corazón del envidioso.

Quiso la reina saber de Ricaredo menudamente cómo había pasado la batalla con los bajeles de los cosarios. Él la contó de nuevo, atribuyendo la vitoria a Dios y a los brazos valerosos de sus soldados, encareciéndolos a todos juntos y particularizando algunos hechos de algunos que más que los otros se habían señalado, con que obligó a la reina a hacer a todos merced, y en particular a los particulares; y, cuando llegó a decir la libertad que en nombre de su Majestad había dado a los turcos y cristianos, dijo:

-Aquella mujer y aquel hombre que allí están, señalando a los padres de Isabela, son los que dije ayer a Vuestra Majestad que, con deseo de ver vuestra grandeza, encarecidamente me pidieron los trujese conmigo. Ellos son de Cádiz, y de lo que ellos me han contado, y de lo que en ellos he visto y notado, sé que son gente principal y de valor.

Mandóles la reina que se llegasen cerca. Alzó los ojos Isabela a mirar los que decían ser españoles, y más de Cádiz, con deseo de saber si por ventura conocían a sus padres. Así como Isabela alzó los ojos, los puso en ella su madre y detuvo el paso para mirarla más atentamente, y en la memoria de Isabela se comenzaron a despertar unas confusas noticias que le querían dar a entender que en otro tiempo ella había visto aquella mujer que delante tenía. Su padre estaba en la misma confusión, sin osar determinarse a dar crédito a la verdad que sus ojos le mostraban. Ricaredo estaba atentísimo a ver los afectos y movimientos que hacían las tres dudosas y perplejas almas, que tan confusas estaban entre el sí y el no de conocerse. Conoció la reina la suspensión de entrambos, y aun el desasosiego de Isabela, porque la vio trasudar y levantar la mano muchas veces a componerse el cabello.

En esto, deseaba Isabela que hablase la que pensaba ser su madre: quizá los oídos la sacarían de la duda en que sus ojos la habían puesto. La reina dijo a Isabela que en lengua española dijese a aquella mujer y a aquel hombre le dijese qué causa les había movido a no querer gozar de la libertad que Ricaredo les había dado, siendo la libertad la cosa más amada, no sólo de la gente de razón, mas aun de los animales que carecen della.

Todo esto preguntó Isabela a su madre, la cual, sin responderle palabra, desatentadamente y medio tropezando, se llegó a Isabela y, sin mirar a respecto, temores ni miramientos cortesanos, alzó la mano a la oreja derecha de Isabela, y descubrió un lunar negro que allí tenía, la cual señal acabó de certificar su sospecha. Y, viendo claramente ser Isabela su hija, abrazándose con ella, dio una gran voz, diciendo:

-¡Oh, hija de mi corazón! ¡Oh, prenda cara del alma mía!

Y, sin poder pasar adelante, se cayó desmayada en los brazos de Isabela.

Su padre, no menos tierno que prudente, dio muestras de su sentimiento no con otras palabras que con derramar lágrimas, que sesgamente su venerable rostro y barbas le bañaron. Juntó Isabela su rostro con el de su madre, y, volviendo los ojos a su padre, de tal manera le miró, que le dio a entender el gusto y el descontento que de verlos allí su alma tenía. La reina, admirada de tal suceso, dijo a Ricaredo:

-Yo pienso, Ricaredo, que en vuestra discreción se han ordenado estas vistas, y no se os diga que han sido acertadas, pues sabemos que así suele matar una súbita alegría como mata una tristeza.

Y, diciendo esto, se volvió a Isabela y la apartó de su madre, la cual, habiéndole echado agua en el rostro, volvió en sí; y, estando un poco más en su acuerdo, puesta de rodillas delante de la reina, le dijo:

-Perdone Vuestra Majestad mi atrevimiento, que no es mucho perder los sentidos con la alegría del hallazgo desta amada prenda.

Respondióle la reina que tenía razón, sirviéndole de intérprete, para que lo entendiese, Isabela; la cual, de la manera que se ha contado, conoció a sus padres, y sus padres a ella, a los cuales mandó la reina quedar en palacio, para que de espacio pudiesen ver y hablar a su hija y regocijarse con ella; de lo cual Ricaredo se holgó mucho, y de nuevo pidió a la reina le cumpliese la palabra que le había dado de dársela, si es que acaso la merecía; y, de no merecerla, le suplicaba desde luego le mandase ocupar en cosas que le hiciesen digno de alcanzar lo que deseaba. Bien entendió la reina que estaba Ricaredo satisfecho de sí mismo y de su mucho valor, que no había necesidad de nuevas pruebas para calificarle; y así, le dijo que de allí a cuatro días le entregaría a Isabela, haciendo a los dos la honra que a ella fuese posible. Con esto se despidió Ricaredo, contentísimo con la esperanza propincua que llevaba de tener en su poder a Isabela sin sobresalto de perderla, que es el último deseo de los amantes.

Corrió el tiempo, y no con la ligereza que él quisiera: que los que viven con esperanzas de promesas venideras siempre imaginan que no vuela el tiempo, sino que anda sobre los pies de la pereza misma. Pero en fin llegó el día, no donde pensó Ricaredo poner fin a sus deseos, sino de hallar en Isabela gracias nuevas que le moviesen a quererla más, si más pudiese. Mas en aquel breve tiempo, donde él pensaba que la nave de su buena fortuna corría con próspero viento hacia el deseado puerto, la contraria suerte levantó en su mar tal tormenta, que mil veces temió anegarle.

Es, pues, el caso que la camarera mayor de la reina, a cuyo cargo estaba Isabela, tenía un hijo de edad de veinte y dos años, llamado el conde Arnesto. Hacíanle la grandeza de su estado, la alteza de su sangre, el mucho favor que su madre con la reina tenía...; hacíanle, digo, estas cosas más de lo justo arrogante, altivo y confiado. Este Arnesto, pues, se enamoró de Isabela tan encendidamente, que en la luz de los ojos de Isabela tenía abrasada el alma; y aunque, en el tiempo que Ricaredo había estado ausente, con algunas señales le había descubierto su deseo, nunca de Isabela fue admitido. Y, puesto que la repugnancia y los desdenes en los principios de los amores suelen hacer desistir de la empresa a los enamorados, en Arnesto obraron lo contrario los muchos y conocidos desdenes que le dio Isabela, porque con su celo ardía y con su honestidad se abrasaba. Y como vio que Ricaredo, según el parecer de la reina, tenía merecida a Isabela, y que en tan poco tiempo se la había de entregar por mujer, quiso desesperarse; pero, antes que llegase a tan infame y tan cobarde remedio, habló a su madre, diciéndole pidiese a la reina le diese a Isabela por esposa; donde no, que pensase que la muerte estaba llamando a las puertas de su vida. Quedó la camarera admirada de las razones de su hijo; y, como conocía la aspereza de su arrojada condición y la tenacidad con que se le pegaban los deseos en el alma, temió que sus amores habían de parar en algún infelice suceso. Con todo eso, como madre, a quien es natural desear y procurar el bien de sus hijos, prometió al suyo de hablar a la reina: no con esperanza de alcanzar della el imposible de romper su palabra, sino por no dejar de intentar, como en salir desahuciada, los últimos remedios.

Y, estando aquella mañana Isabela vestida, por orden de la reina, tan ricamente que no se atreve la pluma a contarlo, y habiéndole echado la misma reina al cuello una sarta de perlas de las mejores que traía la nave, que las apreciaron en veinte mil ducados, y puéstole un anillo de un diamante, que se apreció en seis mil escudos, y estando alborozadas las damas por la fiesta que esperaban del cercano desposorio, entró la camarera mayor a la reina, y de rodillas le suplicó suspendiese el desposorio de Isabela por otros dos días; que, con esta merced sola que su Majestad le hiciese, se tendría por satisfecha y pagada de todas las mercedes que por sus servicios merecía y esperaba.

Quiso saber la reina primero por qué le pedía con tanto ahínco aquella suspensión, que tan derechamente iba contra la palabra que tenía dada a Ricaredo; pero no se la quiso dar la camarera hasta que le hubo otorgado que haría lo que le pedía: tanto deseo tenía la reina de saber la causa de aquella demanda. Y así, después que la camarera alcanzó lo que por entonces deseaba, contó a la reina los amores de su hijo, y cómo temía que si no le daban por mujer a Isabela, o se había de desesperar, o hacer algún hecho escandaloso; y que si había pedido aquellos dos días, era por dar lugar a su Majestad pensase qué medio sería a propósito y conveniente para dar a su hijo remedio.

La reina respondió que si su real palabra no estuviera de por medio, que ella hallara salida a tan cerrado laberinto, pero que no la quebrantaría, ni defraudaría las esperanzas de Ricaredo, por todo el interés del mundo. Esta respuesta dio la camarera a su hijo, el cual, sin detenerse un punto, ardiendo en amor y en celos, se armó de todas armas, y sobre un fuerte y hermoso caballo se presentó ante la casa de Clotaldo, y a grandes voces pidió que se asomase Ricaredo a la ventana, el cual a aquella sazón estaba vestido de galas de desposado y a punto para ir a palacio con el acompañamiento que tal acto requería; mas, habiendo oído las voces, y siéndole dicho quién las daba y del modo que venía, con algún sobresalto se asomó a una ventana; y como le vio Arnesto, dijo:

-Ricaredo, estáme atento a lo que decirte quiero: la reina mi señora te mandó fueses a servirla y a hacer hazañas que te hiciesen merecedor de la sin par Isabela. Tú fuiste, y volviste cargadas las naves de oro, con el cual piensas haber comprado y merecido a Isabela. Y, aunque la reina mi señora te la ha prometido, ha sido creyendo que no hay ninguno en su corte que mejor que tú la sirva, ni quien con mejor título merezca a Isabela, y en esto bien podrá ser se haya engañado; y así, llegándome a esta opinión, que yo tengo por verdad averiguada, digo que ni tú has hecho cosas tales que te hagan merecer a Isabela, ni ninguna podrás hacer que a tanto bien te levanten; y, en razón de que no la mereces, si quisieres contradecirme, te desafío a todo trance de muerte.

Calló el conde, y desta manera le respondió Ricaredo:

-En ninguna manera me toca salir a vuestro desafío, señor conde, porque yo confieso, no sólo que no merezco a Isabela, sino que no la merece ninguno de los que hoy viven en el mundo. Así que, confesando yo lo que vos decís, otra vez digo que no me toca vuestro desafío; pero yo le acepto por el atrevimiento que habéis tenido en desafiarme.

Con esto se quitó de la ventana, y pidió apriesa sus armas. Alborotáronse sus parientes y todos aquellos que para ir a palacio habían venido a acompañarle. De la mucha gente que había visto al conde Arnesto armado, y le había oído las voces del desafío, no faltó quien lo fue a contar a la reina, la cual mandó al capitán de su guarda que fuese a prender al conde. El capitán se dio tanta prisa, que llegó a tiempo que ya Ricaredo salía de su casa, armado con las armas con que se había desembarcado, puesto sobre un hermoso caballo.

Cuando el conde vio al capitán, luego imaginó a lo que venía, y determinó de no dejar prenderse, y, alzando la voz contra Ricaredo, dijo:

-Ya vees, Ricaredo, el impedimento que nos viene. Si tuvieres gana de castigarme, tú me buscarás; y, por la que yo tengo de castigarte, también te buscaré; y, pues dos que se buscan fácilmente se hallan, dejemos para entonces la ejecución de nuestros deseos.

-Soy contento -respondió Ricaredo.

En esto, llegó el capitán con toda su guarda, y dijo al conde que fuese preso en nombre de su Majestad. Respondió el conde que sí daba; pero no para que le llevasen a otra parte que a la presencia de la reina. Contentóse con esto el capitán, y, cogiéndole en medio de la guarda, le llevó a palacio ante la reina, la cual ya de su camarera estaba informada del amor grande que su hijo tenía a Isabela, y con lágrimas había suplicado a la reina perdonase al conde, que, como mozo y enamorado, a mayores yerros estaba sujeto.

Llegó Arnesto ante la reina, la cual, sin entrar con él en razones, le mandó quitar la espada y llevasen preso a una torre.

Todas estas cosas atormentaban el corazón de Isabela y de sus padres, que tan presto veían turbado el mar de su sosiego. Aconsejó la camarera a la reina que para sosegar el mal que podía suceder entre su parentela y la de Ricaredo, que se quitase la causa de por medio, que era Isabela, enviándola a España, y así cesarían los efetos que debían de temerse; añadiendo a estas razones decir que Isabela era católica, y tan cristiana que ninguna de sus persuasiones, que habían sido muchas, la habían podido torcer en nada de su católico intento. A lo cual respondió la reina que por eso la estimaba en más, pues tan bien sabía guardar la ley que sus padres la habían enseñado; y que en lo de enviarla a España no tratase, porque su hermosa presencia y sus muchas gracias y virtudes le daban mucho gusto; y que, sin duda, si no aquel día, otro se la había de dar por esposa a Ricaredo, como se lo tenía prometido.

Con esta resolución de la reina, quedó la camarera tan desconsolada que no le replicó palabra; y, pareciéndole lo que ya le había parecido, que si no era quitando a Isabela de por medio, no había de haber medio alguno que la rigurosa condición de su hijo ablandase ni redujese a tener paz con Ricaredo, determinó de hacer una de las mayores crueldades que pudo caber jamás en pensamiento de mujer principal, y tanto como ella lo era. Y fue su determinación matar con tósigo a Isabela; y, como por la mayor parte sea la condición de las mujeres ser prestas y determinadas, aquella misma tarde atosigó a Isabela en una conserva que le dio, forzándola que la tomase por ser buena contra las ansias de corazón que sentía.

Poco espacio pasó después de haberla tomado, cuando a Isabela se le comenzó a hinchar la lengua y la garganta, y a ponérsele denegridos los labios, y a enronquecerse la voz, turbársele los ojos y apretársele el pecho: todas conocidas señales de haberle dado veneno. Acudieron las damas a la reina, contándole lo que pasaba y certificándole que la camarera había hecho aquel mal recaudo. No fue menester mucho para que la reina lo creyese, y así, fue a ver a Isabela, que ya casi estaba espirando. Mandó llamar la reina con priesa a sus médicos, y, en tanto que tardaban, la hizo dar cantidad de polvos de unicornio, con otros muchos antídotos que los grandes príncipes suelen tener prevenidos para semejantes necesidades. Vinieron los médicos, y esforzaron los remedios y pidieron a la reina hiciese decir a la camarera qué género de veneno le había dado, porque no se dudaba que otra persona alguna sino ella la hubiese avenenado. Ella lo descubrió, y con esta noticia los médicos aplicaron tantos remedios y tan eficaces, que con ellos y con el ayuda de Dios quedó Isabela con vida, o a lo menos con esperanza de tenerla.

Mandó la reina prender a su camarera y encerrarla en un aposento estrecho de palacio, con intención de castigarla como su delito merecía, puesto que ella se disculpaba diciendo que en matar a Isabela hacía sacrificio al cielo, quitando de la tierra a una católica, y con ella la ocasión de las pependencias de su hijo.

Estas tristes nuevas oídas de Ricaredo, le pusieron en términos de perder el juicio: tales eran las cosas que hacía y las lastimeras razones con que se quejaba. Finalmente, Isabela no perdió la vida, que el quedar con ella la naturaleza lo comutó en dejarla sin cejas, pestañas y sin cabello; el rostro hinchado, la tez perdida, los cueros levantados y los ojos lagrimosos. Finalmente, quedó tan fea que, como hasta allí había parecido un milagro de hermosura, entonces parecía un monstruo de fealdad. Por mayor desgracia tenían los que la conocían haber quedado de aquella manera que si la hubiera muerto el veneno. Con todo esto, Ricaredo se la pidió a la reina, y le suplicó se la dejase llevar a su casa, porque el amor que la tenía pasaba del cuerpo al alma; y que si Isabela había perdido su belleza, no podía haber perdido sus infinitas virtudes.

-Así es -dijo la reina-, lleváosla, Ricaredo, y haced cuenta que lleváis una riquísima joya encerrada en una caja de madera tosca; Dios sabe si quisiera dárosela como me la entregastes, pero, pues no es posible, perdonadme: quizá el castigo que diere a la cometidora de tal delito satisfará en algo el deseo de la venganza.

Muchas cosas dijo Ricaredo a la reina desculpando a la camarera y suplicándola la perdonase, pues las disculpas que daba eran bastantes para perdonar mayores insultos. Finalmente, le entregaron a Isabela y a sus padres, y Ricaredo los llevó a su casa; digo a la de sus padres. A las ricas perlas y al diamante, añadió otras joyas la reina, y otros vestidos tales, que descubrieron el mucho amor que a Isabela tenía, la cual duró dos meses en su fealdad, sin dar indicio alguno de poder reducirse a su primera hermosura; pero, al cabo deste tiempo, comenzó a caérsele el cuero y a descubrirse su hermosa tez.

En este tiempo, los padres de Ricaredo, pareciéndoles no ser posible que Isabela en sí volviese, determinaron enviar por la doncella de Escocia, con quien primero que con Isabela tenían concertado de casar a Ricaredo; y esto sin que él lo supiese, no dudando que la hermosura presente de la nueva esposa hiciese olvidar a su hijo la ya pasada de Isabela, a la cual pensaban enviar a España con sus padres, dándoles tanto haber y riquezas, que recompensasen sus pasadas pérdidas. No pasó mes y medio cuando, sin sabiduría de Ricaredo, la nueva esposa se le entró por las puertas, acompañada como quien ella era, y tan hermosa que, después de la Isabela que solía ser, no había otra tan bella en toda Londres. Sobresaltóse Ricaredo con la improvisa vista de la doncella, y temió que el sobresalto de su venida había de acabar la vida a Isabela; y así, para templar este temor, se fue al lecho donde Isabela estaba, y hallóla en compañía de sus padres, delante de los cuales dijo:

-Isabela de mi alma: mis padres, con el grande amor que me tienen, aún no bien enterados del mucho que yo te tengo, han traído a casa una doncella escocesa, con quien ellos tenían concertado de casarme antes que yo conociese lo que vales. Y esto, a lo que creo, con intención que la mucha belleza desta doncella borre de mi alma la tuya, que en ella estampada tengo. Yo, Isabela, desde el punto que te quise fue con otro amor de aquel que tiene su fin y paradero en el cumplimiento del sensual apetito; que, puesto que tu corporal hermosura me cautivó los sentidos, tus infinitas virtudes me aprisionaron el alma, de manera que, si hermosa te quise, fea te adoro; y, para confirmar esta verdad, dame esa mano.

Y, dándole ella la derecha y asiéndola él con la suya, prosiguió diciendo:

-Por la fe católica que mis cristianos padres me enseñaron, la cual si no está en la entereza que se requiere, por aquélla juro que guarda el Pontífice romano, que es la que yo en mi corazón confieso, creo y tengo, y por el verdadero Dios que nos está oyendo, te prometo, ¡oh Isabela, mitad de mi alma!, de ser tu esposo, y lo soy desde luego si tú quieres levantarme a la alteza de ser tuyo.

Quedó suspensa Isabela con las razones de Ricaredo, y sus padres atónitos y pasmados. Ella no supo qué decir, ni hacer otra cosa que besar muchas veces la mano de Ricaredo y decirle, con voz mezclada con lágrimas, que ella le aceptaba por suyo y se entregaba por su esclava. Besóla Ricaredo en el rostro feo, no habiendo tenido jamás atrevimiento de llegarse a él cuando hermoso.

Los padres de Isabela solenizaron con tiernas y muchas lágrimas las fiestas del desposorio. Ricaredo les dijo que él dilataría el casamiento de la escocesa, que ya estaba en casa, del modo que después verían; y, cuando su padre los quisiese enviar a España a todos tres, no lo rehusasen, sino que se fuesen y le aguardasen en Cádiz o en Sevilla dos años, dentro de los cuales les daba su palabra de ser con ellos, si el cielo tanto tiempo le concedía de vida; y que si deste término pasase, tuviese por cosa certísima que algún grande impedimento, o la muerte, que era lo más cierto, se había opuesto a su camino.

Isabela le respondió que no solos dos años le aguardaría, sino todos aquéllos de su vida, hasta estar enterada que él no la tenía, porque en el punto que esto supiese, sería el mismo de su muerte. Con estas tiernas palabras, se renovaron las lágrimas en todos, y Ricaredo salió a decir a sus padres cómo en ninguna manera se casaría ni daría la mano a su esposa la escocesa, sin haber primero ido a Roma a asegurar su conciencia. Tales razones supo decir a ellos y a los parientes que habían venido con Clisterna, que así se llamaba la escocesa, que, como todos eran católicos, fácilmente las creyeron, y Clisterna se contentó de quedar en casa de su suegro hasta que Ricaredo volviese, el cual pidió de término un año.

Esto así puesto y concertado, Clotaldo dijo a Ricaredo cómo determinaba enviar a España a Isabela y a sus padres, si la reina le daba licencia: quizá los aires de la patria apresurarían y facilitarían la salud que ya comenzaba a tener. Ricaredo, por no dar indicio de sus designios, respondió tibiamente a su padre que hiciese lo que mejor le pareciese; sólo le suplicó que no quitase a Isabela ninguna cosa de las riquezas que la reina le había dado. Prometióselo Clotaldo, y aquel mismo día fue a pedir licencia a la reina, así para casar a su hijo con Clisterna, como para enviar a Isabela y a sus padres a España. De todo se contentó la reina, y tuvo por acertada la determinación de Clotaldo. Y aquel mismo día, sin acuerdo de letrados y sin poner a su camarera en tela de juicio, la condenó en que no sirviese más su oficio y en diez mil escudos de oro para Isabela; y al conde Arnesto, por el desafío, le desterró por seis años de Inglaterra. No pasaron cuatro días, cuando ya Arnesto se puso a punto de salir a cumplir su destierro y los dineros estuvieron juntos. La reina llamó a un mercader rico, que habitaba en Londres y era francés, el cual tenía correspondencia en Francia, Italia y España, al cual entregó los diez mil escudos, y le pidió cédulas para que se los entregasen al padre de Isabela en Sevilla o en otra playa de España. El mercader, descontados sus intereses y ganancias, dijo a la reina que las daría ciertas y seguras para Sevilla, sobre otro mercader francés, su correspondiente, en esta forma: que él escribiría a París para que allí se hiciesen las cédulas por otro correspondiente suyo, a causa que rezasen las fechas de Francia y no de Inglaterra, por el contrabando de la comunicación de los dos reinos, y que bastaba llevar una letra de aviso suya sin fecha, con sus contraseñas, para que luego diese el dinero el mercader de Sevilla, que ya estaría avisado del de París.

En resolución, la reina tomó tales seguridades del mercader, que no dudó de no ser cierta la partida; y, no contenta con esto, mandó llamar a un patrón de una nave flamenca, que estaba para partirse otro día a Francia, a sólo tomar en algún puerto della testimonio para poder entrar en España, a título de partir de Francia y no de Inglaterra; al cual pidió encarecidamente llevase en su nave a Isabela y a sus padres, y con toda seguridad y buen tratamiento los pusiese en un puerto de España, el primero a do llegase.

El patrón, que deseaba contentar a la reina, dijo que sí haría, y que los pondría en Lisboa, Cádiz o Sevilla. Tomados, pues, los recaudos del mercader, envió la reina a decir a Clotaldo no quitase a Isabela todo lo que ella la había dado, así de joyas como de vestidos. Otro día, vino Isabela y sus padres a despedirse de la reina, que los recibió con mucho amor. Dioles la reina la carta del mercader y otras muchas dádivas, así de dineros como de otras cosas de regalo para el viaje. Con tales razones se lo agradeció Isabela, que de nuevo dejó obligada a la reina para hacerle siempre mercedes. Despidióse de las damas, las cuales, como ya estaba fea, no quisieran que se partiera, viéndose libres de la envidia que a su hermosura tenían, y contentas de gozar de sus gracias y discreciones. Abrazó la reina a los tres, y, encomendándolos a la buena ventura y al patrón de la nave, y pidiendo a Isabela la avisase de su buena llegada a España, y siempre de su salud, por la vía del mercader francés, se despidió de Isabela y de sus padres, los cuales aquella misma tarde se embarcaron, no sin lágrimas de Clotaldo y de su mujer y de todos los de su casa, de quien era en todo extremo bien querida. No se halló a esta despedida presente Ricaredo, que por no dar muestras de tiernos sentimientos, aquel día hizo con unos amigos suyos le llevasen a caza. Los regalos que la señora Catalina dio a Isabela para el viaje fueron muchos, los abrazos infinitos, las lágrimas en abundancia, las encomiendas de que la escribiese sin número, y los agradecimientos de Isabela y de sus padres correspondieron a todo; de suerte que, aunque llorando, los dejaron satisfechos.

Aquella noche se hizo el bajel a la vela; y, habiendo con próspero viento tocado en Francia y tomado en ella los recados necesarios para poder entrar en España, de allí a treinta días entró por la barra de Cádiz, donde se desembarcaron Isabela y sus padres; y, siendo conocidos de todos los de la ciudad, los recibieron con muestras de mucho contento. Recibieron mil parabienes del hallazgo de Isabela y de la libertad que habían alcanzado, así de los moros que los habían cautivado (habiendo sabido todo su suceso de los cautivos que dio libertad la liberalidad de Ricaredo), como de la que habían alcanzado de los ingleses.

Ya Isabela en este tiempo comenzaba a dar grandes esperanzas de volver a cobrar su primera hermosura. Poco más de un mes estuvieron en Cádiz, restaurando los trabajos de la navegación, y luego se fueron a Sevilla por ver si salía cierta la paga de los diez mil ducados que, librados sobre el mercader francés, traían. Dos días después de llegar a Sevilla le buscaron, y le hallaron y le dieron la carta del mercader francés de la ciudad de Londres. Él la reconoció, y dijo que hasta que de París le viniesen las letras y carta de aviso no podía dar el dinero; pero que por momentos aguardaba el aviso.

Los padres de Isabela alquilaron una casa principal, frontero de Santa Paula, por ocasión que estaba monja en aquel santo monasterio una sobrina suya, única y estremada en la voz, y así por tenerla cerca como por haber dicho Isabela a Ricaredo que, si viniese a buscarla, la hallaría en Sevilla y le diría su casa su prima la monja de Santa Paula, y que para conocella no había menester más de preguntar por la monja que tenía la mejor voz en el monasterio, porque estas señas no se le podían olvidar. Otros cuarenta días tardaron de venir los avisos de París; y, a dos que llegaron, el mercader francés entregó los diez mil ducados a Isabela, y ella a sus padres; y con ellos y con algunos más que hicieron vendiendo algunas de las muchas joyas de Isabela, volvió su padre a ejercitar su oficio de mercader, no sin admiración de los que sabían sus grandes pérdidas.

En fin, en pocos meses fue restaurando su perdido crédito, y la belleza de Isabela volvió a su ser primero, de tal manera que, en hablando de hermosas, todos daban el lauro a la española inglesa; que, tanto por este nombre como por su hermosura, era de toda la ciudad conocida. Por la orden del mercader francés de Sevilla, escribieron Isabela y sus padres a la reina de Inglaterra su llegada, con los agradecimientos y sumisiones que requerían las muchas mercedes della recebidas. Asimismo, escribieron a Clotaldo y a su señora Catalina, llamándolos Isabela padres, y sus padres, señores. De la reina no tuvieron respuesta, pero de Clotaldo y de su mujer sí, donde les daban el parabién de la llegada a salvo, y los avisaban cómo su hijo Ricaredo, otro día después que ellos se hicieron a la vela, se había partido a Francia, y de allí a otras partes, donde le convenía a ir para seguridad de su conciencia, añadiendo a éstas otras razones y cosas de mucho amor y de muchos ofrecimientos. A la cual carta respondieron con otra no menos cortés y amorosa que agradecida.

Luego imaginó Isabela que el haber dejado Ricaredo a Inglaterra sería para venirla a buscar a España; y, alentada con esta esperanza, vivía la más contenta del mundo, y procuraba vivir de manera que, cuando Ricaredo llegase a Sevilla, antes le diese en los oídos la fama de sus virtudes que el conocimiento de su casa. Pocas o ninguna vez salía de su casa, si no para el monasterio; no ganaba otros jubileos que aquellos que en el monasterio se ganaban. Desde su casa y desde su oratorio andaba con el pensamiento los viernes de Cuaresma la santísima estación de la cruz, y los siete venideros del Espíritu Santo. Jamás visitó el río, ni pasó a Triana, ni vio el común regocijo en el campo de Tablada y puerta de Jerez el día, si le hace claro, de San Sebastián, celebrado de tanta gente, que apenas se puede reducir a número. Finalmente, no vio regocijo público ni otra fiesta en Sevilla: todo lo libraba en su recogimiento y en sus oraciones y buenos deseos esperando a Ricaredo. Este su grande retraimiento tenía abrasados y encendidos los deseos, no sólo de los pisaverdes del barrio, sino de todos aquellos que una vez la hubiesen visto: de aquí nacieron músicas de noche en su calle y carreras de día. Deste no dejar verse y desearlo muchos crecieron las alhajas de las terceras, que prometieron mostrarse primas y únicas en solicitar a Isabela; y no faltó quien se quiso aprovechar de lo que llaman hechizos, que no son sino embustes y disparates. Pero a todo esto estaba Isabela como roca en mitad del mar, que la tocan, pero no la mueven las olas ni los vientos.

Año y medio era ya pasado cuando la esperanza propincua de los dos años por Ricaredo prometidos comenzó con más ahínco que hasta allí a fatigar el corazón de Isabela. Y, cuando ya le parecía que su esposo llegaba y que le tenía ante los ojos, y le preguntaba qué impedimentos le habían detenido tanto; cuando ya llegaban a sus oídos las disculpas de su esposo, y cuando ya ella le perdonaba y le abrazaba, y como a mitad de su alma le recibía, llegó a sus manos una carta de la señora Catalina, fecha en Londres cincuenta días había; venía en lengua inglesa, pero, leyéndola en español, vio que así decía:

Hija de mi alma: bien conociste a Guillarte, el paje de Ricaredo. Éste se fue con él al viaje, que por otra te avisé, que Ricaredo a Francia y a otras partes había hecho el segundo día de tu partida. Pues este mismo Guillarte, a cabo de diez y seis meses que no habíamos sabido de mi hijo, entró ayer por nuestra puerta con nuevas que el conde Arnesto había muerto a traición en Francia a Ricaredo. Considera, hija, cuál quedaríamos su padre y yo y su esposa con tales nuevas; tales, digo, que aun no nos dejaron poner en duda nuestra desventura. Lo que Clotaldo y yo te rogamos otra vez, hija de mi alma, es que encomiendes muy de veras a Dios la de Ricaredo, que bien merece este beneficio el que tanto te quiso como tú sabes. También pedirás a Nuestro Señor nos dé a nosotros paciencia y buena muerte, a quien nosotros también pediremos y suplicaremos te dé a ti y a tus padres largos años de vida.

Por la letra y por la firma, no le quedó que dudar a Isabela para no creer la muerte de su esposo. Conocía muy bien al paje Guillarte, y sabía que era verdadero y que de suyo no habría querido ni tenía para qué fingir aquella muerte; ni menos su madre, la señora Catalina, la habría fingido, por no importarle nada enviarle nuevas de tanta tristeza. Finalmente, ningún discurso que hizo, ninguna cosa que imaginó, le pudo quitar del pensamiento no ser verdadera la nueva de su desventura.

Acabada de leer la carta, sin derramar lágrimas ni dar señales de doloroso sentimiento, con sesgo rostro y, al parecer, con sosegado pecho, se levantó de un estrado donde estaba sentada y se entró en un oratorio; y, hincándose de rodillas ante la imagen de un devoto crucifijo, hizo voto de ser monja, pues lo podía ser teniéndose por viuda. Sus padres disimularon y encubrieron con discreción la pena que les había dado la triste nueva, por poder consolar a Isabela en la amarga que sentía; la cual, casi como satisfecha de su dolor, templándole con la santa y cristiana resolución que había tomado, ella consolaba a sus padres, a los cuales descubrió su intento, y ellos le aconsejaron que no le pusiese en ejecución hasta que pasasen los dos años que Ricaredo había puesto por término a su venida; que con esto se confirmaría la verdad de la muerte de Ricaredo, y ella con más seguridad podía mudar de estado. Ansí lo hizo Isabela, y los seis meses y medio que quedaban para cumplirse los dos años, los pasó en ejercicios de religiosa y en concertar la entrada del monasterio, habiendo elegido el de Santa Paula, donde estaba su prima.

Pasóse el término de los dos años y llegóse el día de tomar el hábito, cuya nueva se extendió por la ciudad; y de los que conocían de vista a Isabela, y de aquéllos que por sola su fama, se llenó el monasterio y la poca distancia que dél a la casa de Isabela había. Y, convidando su padre a sus amigos y aquéllos a otros, hicieron a Isabela uno de los más honrados acompañamientos que en semejantes actos se había visto en Sevilla. Hallóse en él el asistente, y el provisor de la Iglesia y vicario del arzobispo, con todas las señoras y señores de título que había en la ciudad: tal era el deseo que en todos había de ver el sol de la hermosura de Isabela, que tantos meses se les había eclipsado. Y, como es costumbre de las doncellas que van a tomar el hábito ir lo posible galanas y bien compuestas, como quien en aquel punto echa el resto de la bizarría y se descarta della, quiso Isabela ponerse la más bizarra que le fue posible; y así, se vistió con aquel vestido mismo que llevó cuando fue a ver la reina de Inglaterra, que ya se ha dicho cuán rico y cuán vistoso era. Salieron a luz las perlas y el famoso diamante, con el collar y cintura, que asimismo era de mucho valor.

Con este adorno y con su gallardía, dando ocasión para que todos alabasen a Dios en ella, salió Isabela de su casa a pie, que el estar tan cerca del monasterio escusó los coches y carrozas. El concurso de la gente fue tanto, que les pesó de no haber entrado en los coches, que no les daban lugar de llegar al monasterio. Unos bendecían a sus padres, otros al cielo, que de tanta hermosura la había dotado; unos se empinaban por verla; otros, habiéndola visto una vez, corrían adelante por verla otra; y el que más solícito se mostró en esto, y tanto que muchos echaron de ver en ello, fue un hombre vestido en hábito de los que vienen rescatados de cautivos, con una insignia de la Trinidad en el pecho, en señal que han sido rescatados por la limosna de sus redemptores. Este cautivo, pues, al tiempo que ya Isabela tenía un pie dentro de la portería del convento, donde habían salido a recibirla, como es uso, la priora y las monjas con la cruz, a grandes voces dijo:

-¡Detente, Isabela, detente!; que mientras yo fuere vivo no puedes tú ser religiosa.

A estas voces, Isabela y sus padres volvieron los ojos, y vieron que, hendiendo por toda la gente, hacia ellos venía aquel cautivo; que, habiéndosele caído un bonete azul redondo que en la cabeza traía, descubrió una confusa madeja de cabellos de oro ensortijados, y un rostro como el carmín y como la nieve, colorado y blanco: señales que luego le hicieron conocer y juzgar por extranjero de todos. En efeto, cayendo y levantando, llegó donde Isabela estaba; y, asiéndola de la mano, le dijo:

-¿Conócesme, Isabela? Mira que yo soy Ricaredo, tu esposo.

-Sí conozco -dijo Isabela-, si ya no eres fantasma que viene a turbar mi reposo.

Sus padres le asieron y atentamente le miraron, y en resolución conocieron ser Ricaredo el cautivo; el cual, con lágrimas en los ojos, hincando las rodillas delante de Isabela, le suplicó que no impidiese la estrañeza del traje en que estaba su buen conocimiento, ni estorbase su baja fortuna que ella no correspondiese a la palabra que entre los dos se habían dado. Isabela, a pesar de la impresión que en su memoria había hecho la carta de su madre de Ricaredo, dándole nuevas de su muerte, quiso dar más crédito a sus ojos y a la verdad que presente tenía; y así, abrazándose con el cautivo, le dijo:

-Vos, sin duda, señor mío, sois aquel que sólo podrá impedir mi cristiana determinación. Vos, señor, sois sin duda la mitad de mi alma, pues sois mi verdadero esposo; estampado os tengo en mi memoria y guardado en mi alma. Las nuevas que de vuestra muerte me escribió mi señora, y vuestra madre, ya que no me quitaron la vida, me hicieron escoger la de la religión, que en este punto quería entrar a vivir en ella. Mas, pues Dios con tan justo impedimento muestra querer otra cosa, ni podemos ni conviene que por mi parte se impida. Venid, señor, a la casa de mis padres, que es vuestra, y allí os entregaré mi posesión por los términos que pide nuestra santa fe católica.

Todas estas razones oyeron los circunstantes, y el asistente, y vicario, y provisor del arzobispo; y de oírlas se admiraron y suspendieron, y quisieron que luego se les dijese qué historia era aquélla, qué extranjero aquél y de qué casamiento trataban. A todo lo cual respondió el padre de Isabela, diciendo que aquella historia pedía otro lugar y algún término para decirse. Y así, suplicaba a todos aquellos que quisiesen saberla, diesen la vuelta a su casa, pues estaba tan cerca; que allí se la contarían de modo que con la verdad quedasen satisfechos, y con la grandeza y estrañeza de aquel suceso admirados. En esto, uno de los presentes alzó la voz, diciendo:

-Señores, este mancebo es un gran cosario inglés, que yo le conozco; y es aquel que habrá poco más de dos años tomó a los cosarios de Argel la nave de Portugal que venía de las Indias. No hay duda sino que es él, que yo le conozco, porque él me dio libertad y dineros para venirme a España, y no sólo a mí, sino a otros treientos cautivos.

Con estas razones se alborotó la gente y se avivó el deseo que todos tenían de saber y ver la claridad de tan intrincadas cosas. Finalmente, la gente más principal, con el asistente y aquellos dos señores eclesiásticos, volvieron a acompañar a Isabela a su casa, dejando a las monjas tristes, confusas y llorando por lo que perdían en no tener en su compañía a la hermosa Isabela; la cual, estando en su casa, en una gran sala della hizo que aquellos señores se sentasen. Y, aunque Ricaredo quiso tomar la mano en contar su historia, todavía le pareció que era mejor fiarlo de la lengua y discreción de Isabela, y no de la suya, que no muy expertamente hablaba la lengua castellana.

Callaron todos los presentes; y, teniendo las almas pendientes de las razones de Isabela, ella así comenzó su cuento; el cual le reduzgo yo a que dijo todo aquello que, desde el día que Clotaldo la robó de Cádiz, hasta que entró y volvió a él, le había sucedido, contando asimismo la batalla que Ricaredo había tenido con los turcos, la liberalidad que había usado con los cristianos, la palabra que entrambos a dos se habían dado de ser marido y mujer, la promesa de los dos años, las nuevas que había tenido de su muerte: tan ciertas a su parecer, que la pusieron en el término que habían visto de ser religiosa. Engrandeció la liberalidad de la reina, la cristiandad de Ricaredo y de sus padres, y acabó con decir que dijese Ricaredo lo que le había sucedido después que salió de Londres hasta el punto presente, donde le veían con hábito de cautivo y con una señal de haber sido rescatado por limosna.

-Así es -dijo Ricaredo-, y en breves razones sumaré los inmensos trabajos míos:

«Después que me partí de Londres, por escusar el casamiento que no podía hacer con Clisterna, aquella doncella escocesa católica con quien ha dicho Isabela que mis padres me querían casar, llevando en mi compañía a Guillarte, aquel paje que mi madre escribe que llevó a Londres las nuevas de mi muerte, atravesando por Francia, llegué a Roma, donde se alegró mi alma y se fortaleció mi fe. Besé los pies al Sumo Pontífice, confesé mis pecados con el mayor penitenciario; absolvióme dellos, y diome los recaudos necesarios que diesen fe de mi confesión y penitencia y de la reducción que había hecho a nuestra universal madre la Iglesia. Hecho esto, visité los lugares tan santos como innumerables que hay en aquella ciudad santa; y de dos mil escudos que tenía en oro, di los mil y seiscientos a un cambio, que me los libró en esta ciudad sobre un tal Roqui Florentín. Con los cuatrocientos que me quedaron, con intención de venir a España, me partí para Génova, donde había tenido nuevas que estaban dos galeras de aquella señoría de partida para España.

»Llegué con Guillarte, mi criado, a un lugar que se llama Aquapendente, que, viniendo de Roma a Florencia, es el último que tiene el Papa, y en una hostería o posada, donde me apeé, hallé al conde Arnesto, mi mortal enemigo, que con cuatro criados disfrazado y encubierto, más por ser curioso que por ser católico, entiendo que iba a Roma. Creí sin duda que no me había conocido. Encerréme en un aposento con mi criado, y estuve con cuidado y con determinación de mudarme a otra posada en cerrando la noche. No lo hice así, porque el descuido grande que yo pensé que tenían el conde y sus criados, me aseguró que no me habían conocido. Cené en mi aposento, cerré la puerta, apercibí mi espada, encomendéme a Dios y no quise acostarme. Durmióse mi criado, y yo sobre una silla me quedé medio dormido; mas, poco después de la media noche, me despertaron, para hacerme dormir el eterno sueño, cuatro pistoletes que, como después supe, dispararon contra mí el conde y sus criados; y, dejándome por muerto, teniendo ya a punto los caballos, se fueron, diciendo al huésped de la posada que me enterrase, porque era hombre principal; y, con esto, se fueron.

se arrojó por una ventana que caía a un patio; y, diciendo "¡desventurado de mí, que han muerto a mi señor!", se salió del mesón; y debió de ser con tal miedo, que no debió de parar hasta Londres, pues él fue el que llevó las nuevas de mi muerte. Subieron los de la hostería y halláronme atravesado con cuatro balas y con muchos perdigones; pero todas por partes, que de ninguna fue mortal la herida. Pedí confesión y todos los sacramentos como católico cristiano; diéronmelos, curáronme, y no estuve para ponerme en camino en dos meses; al cabo de los cuales vine a Génova, donde no hallé otro pasaje, sino en dos falugas que fletamos yo y otros dos principales españoles: la una para que fuese delante descubriendo, y la otra donde nosotros fuésemos.

»Con esta seguridad nos embarcamos, navegando tierra a tierra con intención de no engolfarnos; pero, llegando a un paraje que llaman las Tres Marías, que es en la costa de Francia, yendo nuestra primera faluga descubriendo, a deshora salieron de una cala dos galeotas turquescas; y, tomándonos la una la mar y la otra la tierra, cuando íbamos a embestir en ella, nos cortaron el camino y nos cautivaron. En entrando en la galeota, nos desnudaron hasta dejarnos en carnes. Despojaron las falugas de cuanto llevaban, y dejáronlas embestir en tierra sin echallas a fondo, diciendo que aquéllas les servirían otra vez de traer otra galima, que con este nombre llaman ellos a los despojos que de los cristianos toman. Bien se me podrá creer si digo que sentí en el alma mi cautiverio, y sobre todo la pérdida de los recaudos de Roma, donde en una caja de lata los traía, con la cédula de los mil y seiscientos ducados; mas la buena suerte quiso que viniese a manos de un cristiano cautivo español, que las guardó; que si vinieran a poder de los turcos, por lo menos había de dar por mi rescate lo que rezaba la cédula, que ellos averiguaran cómo era.

»Casi un año se tardó en volver la nave de la limosna; y lo que en este año me pasó, a poderlo contar ahora, fuera otra nueva historia. Sólo diré que fui conocido de uno de los veinte turcos que di libertad con los demás cristianos ya referidos, y fue tan agradecido y tan hombre de bien, que no quiso descubrirme; porque, a conocerme los turcos por aquél que había echado a fondo sus dos bajeles, y quitádoles de las manos la gran nave de la India, o me presentaran al Gran Turco o me quitaran la vida; y de presentarme al Gran Señor redundara no tener libertad en mi vida. Finalmente, el padre redemptor vino a España conmigo y con otros cincuenta cristianos rescatados. En Valencia hicimos la procesión general, y desde allí cada uno se partió donde más le plugo, con las insignias de su libertad, que son estos habiticos. Hoy llegué a esta ciudad, con tanto deseo de ver a Isabela, mi esposa, que, sin detenerme a otra cosa, pregunté por este monasterio, donde me habían de dar nuevas de mi esposa. Lo que en él me ha sucedido ya se ha visto. Lo que queda por ver son estos recaudos, para que se pueda tener por verdadera mi historia, que tiene tanto de milagrosa como de verdadera.»

Y luego, en diciendo esto, sacó de una caja de lata los recaudos que decía, y se los puso en manos del provisor, que los vio junto con el señor asistente; y no halló en ellos cosa que le hiciese dudar de la verdad que Ricaredo había contado. Y, para más confirmación della, ordenó el cielo que se hallase presente a todo esto el mercader Florentín, sobre quien venía la cédula de los mil y seiscientos ducados, el cual pidió que le mostrasen la cédula; y, mostrándosela, la reconoció y la aceptó para luego, porque él muchos meses había que tenía aviso desta partida. Todo esto fue añadir admiración a admiración y espanto a espanto. Ricaredo dijo que de nuevo ofrecía los quinientos ducados que había prometido. Abrazó el asistente a Ricaredo y a sus padres de Isabela y a ella, ofreciéndoselos a todos con corteses razones. Lo mismo hicieron los dos señores eclesiásticos, y rogaron a Isabela que pusiese toda aquella historia por escrito, para que la leyese su señor el arzobispo; y ella lo prometió.

El grande silencio que todos los circunstantes habían tenido, escuchando el extraño caso, se rompió en dar alabanzas a Dios por sus grandes maravillas; y, dando desde el mayor hasta el más pequeño el parabién a Isabela, a Ricaredo y a sus padres, los dejaron; y ellos suplicaron al asistente honrase sus bodas, que de allí a ocho días pensaban hacerlas. Holgó de hacerlo así el asistente, y, de allí a ocho días, acompañado de los más principales de la ciudad, se halló en ellas.

Por estos rodeos y por estas circunstancias, los padres de Isabela cobraron su hija y restauraron su hacienda; y ella, favorecida del cielo y ayudada de sus muchas virtudes, a despecho de tantos inconvenientes, halló marido tan principal como Ricaredo, en cuya compañía se piensa que aún hoy vive en las casas que alquilaron frontero de Santa Paula, que después las compraron de los herederos de un hidalgo burgalés que se llamaba Hernando de Cifuentes.

Esta novela nos podría enseñar cuánto puede la virtud, y cuánto la hermosura, pues son bastantes juntas, y cada una de por sí, a enamorar aun hasta los mismos enemigos; y de cómo sabe el cielo sacar, de las mayores adversidades nuestras, nuestros mayores provechos.

El licenciado Vidriera

PASEÁNDOSE dos caballeros estudiantes por las riberas de Tormes, hallaron en ellas, debajo de un árbol durmiendo, a un muchacho de hasta edad de once años, vestido como labrador. Mandaron a un criado que le despertase; despertó y preguntáronle de adónde era y qué hacía durmiendo en aquella soledad. A lo cual el muchacho respondió que el nombre de su tierra se le había olvidado, y que iba a la ciudad de Salamanca a buscar un amo a quien servir, por sólo que le diese estudio. Preguntáronle si sabía leer; respondió que sí, y escribir también.

-Desa manera -dijo uno de los caballeros-, no es por falta de memoria habérsete olvidado el nombre de tu patria.

-Sea por lo que fuere -respondió el muchacho-; que ni el della ni del de mis padres sabrá ninguno hasta que yo pueda honrarlos a ellos y a ella.

-Pues, ¿de qué suerte los piensas honrar? -preguntó el otro caballero.

-Con mis estudios -respondió el muchacho-, siendo famoso por ellos; porque yo he oído decir que de los hombres se hacen los obispos.

Esta respuesta movió a los dos caballeros a que le recibiesen y llevasen consigo, como lo hicieron, dándole estudio de la manera que se usa dar en aquella universidad a los criados que sirven. Dijo el muchacho que se llamaba Tomás Rodaja, de donde infirieron sus amos, por el nombre y por el vestido, que debía de ser hijo de algún labrador pobre. A pocos días le vistieron de negro, y a pocas semanas dio Tomás muestras de tener raro ingenio, sirviendo a sus amos con tanta fidelidad, puntualidad y diligencia que, con no faltar un punto a sus estudios, parecía que sólo se ocupaba en servirlos. Y, como el buen servir del siervo mueve la voluntad del señor a tratarle bien, ya Tomás Rodaja no era criado de sus amos, sino su compañero.

Finalmente, en ocho años que estuvo con ellos, se hizo tan famoso en la universidad, por su buen ingenio y notable habilidad, que de todo género de gentes era estimado y querido. Su principal estudio fue de leyes; pero en lo que más se mostraba era en letras humanas; y tenía tan felice memoria que era cosa de espanto, e ilustrábala tanto con su buen entendimiento, que no era menos famoso por él que por ella.

Sucedió que se llegó el tiempo que sus amos acabaron sus estudios y se fueron a su lugar, que era una de las mejores ciudades de la Andalucía. Lleváronse consigo a Tomás, y estuvo con ellos algunos días; pero, como le fatigasen los deseos de volver a sus estudios y a Salamanca (que enhechiza la voluntad de volver a ella a todos los que de la apacibilidad de su vivienda han gustado), pidió a sus amos licencia para volverse. Ellos, cortesés y liberales, se la dieron, acomodándole de suerte que con lo que le dieron se pudiera sustentar tres años.

Despidióse dellos, mostrando en sus palabras su agradecimiento, y salió de Málaga (que ésta era la patria de sus señores); y, al bajar de la cuesta de la Zambra, camino de Antequera, se topó con un gentilhombre a caballo, vestido bizarramente de camino, con dos criados también a caballo. Juntóse con él y supo cómo llevaba su mismo viaje. Hicieron camarada, departieron de diversas cosas, y a pocos lances dio Tomás muestras de su raro ingenio, y el caballero las dio de su bizarria y cortesano trato, y dijo que era capitán de infantería por Su Majestad, y que su alférez estaba haciendo la compañía en tierra de Salamanca.

Alabó la vida de la soldadesca; pintóle muy al vivo la belleza de la ciudad de Nápoles, las holguras de Palermo, la abundancia de Milán, los festines de Lombardía, las espléndidas comidas de las hosterías; dibujóle dulce y puntualmente el aconcha, patrón; pasa acá, manigoldo; venga la macarela, li polastri e li macarroni. Puso las alabanzas en el cielo de la vida libre del soldado y de la libertad de Italia; pero no le dijo nada del frío de las centinelas, del peligro de los asaltos, del espanto de las batallas, de la hambre de los cercos, de la ruina de la minas, con otras cosas deste jaez, que algunos las toman y tienen por añadiduras del peso de la soldadesca, y son la carga principal della. En resolución, tantas cosas le dijo, y tan bien dichas, que la discreción de nuestro Tomás Rodaja comenzó a titubear y la voluntad a aficionarse a aquella vida, que tan cerca tiene la muerte.

El capitán, que don Diego de Valdivia se llamaba, contentísimo de la buena presencia, ingenio y desenvoltura de Tomás, le rogó que se fuese con él a Italia, si quería, por curiosidad de verla; que él le ofrecía su mesa y aun, si fuese necesario, su bandera, porque su alférez la había de dejar presto.

Poco fue menester para que Tomás tuviese el envite, haciendo consigo en un instante un breve discurso de que sería bueno ver a Italia y Flandes y otras diversas tierras y países, pues las luengas peregrinaciones hacen a los hombres discretos; y que en esto, a lo más largo, podía gastar tres o cuatro años, que, añadidos a los pocos que él tenía, no serían tantos que impidiesen volver a sus estudios. Y, como si todo hubiera de suceder a la medida de su gusto, dijo al capitán que era contento de irse con él a Italia; pero había de ser condición que no se había de sentar debajo de bandera, ni poner en lista de soldado, por no obligarse a seguir su bandera; y, aunque el capitán le dijo que no importaba ponerse en lista, que ansí gozaría de los socorros y pagas que a la compañía se diesen, porque él le daría licencia todas las veces que se la pidiese.

-Eso sería -dijo Tomás- ir contra mi conciencia y contra la del señor capitán; y así, más quiero ir suelto que obligado.

-Conciencia tan escrupulosa -dijo don Diego-, más es de religioso que de soldado; pero, comoquiera que sea, ya somos camaradas.

Llegaron aquella noche a Antequera, y en pocos días y grandes jornadas se pusieron donde estaba la compañía, ya acabada de hacer, y que comenzaba a marchar la vuelta de Cartagena, alojándose ella y otras cuatro por los lugares que le venían a mano. Allí notó Tomás la autoridad de los comisarios, la incomodidad de algunos capitanes, la solicitud de los aposentadores, la industria y cuenta de los pagadores, las quejas de los pueblos, el rescatar de las boletas, las insolencias de los bisoños, las pendencias de los huéspedes, el pedir bagajes más de los necesarios, y, finalmente, la necesidad casi precisa de hacer todo aquello que notaba y mal le parecía.

Habíase vestido Tomás de papagayo, renunciando los hábitos de estudiante, y púsose a lo de Dios es Cristo, como se suele decir. Los muchos libros que tenía los redujo a unas Horas de Nuestra Señora y un Garcilaso sin comento, que en las dos faldriqueras llevaba. Llegaron más presto de lo que quisieran a Cartagena, porque la vida de los alojamientos es ancha y varia, y cada día se topan cosas nuevas y gustosas.

Allí se embarcaron en cuatro galeras de Nápoles, y allí notó también Tomás Rodaja la estraña vida de aquellas marítimas casas, adonde lo más del tiempo maltratan las chinches, roban los forzados, enfadan los marineros, destruyen los ratones y fatigan las maretas. Pusiéronle temor las grandes borrascas y tormentas, especialmente en el golfo de León, que tuvieron dos; que la una los echó en Córcega y la otra los volvió a Tolón, en Francia. En fin, trasnochados, mojados y con ojeras, llegaron a la hermosa y bellísima ciudad de Génova; y, desembarcándose en su recogido mandrache, después de haber visitado una iglesia, dio el capitán con todas sus camaradas en una hostería, donde pusieron en olvido todas las borrascas pasadas con el presente gaudeamus.

Allí conocieron la suavidad del Treviano, el valor del Montefrascón, la fuerza del Asperino, la generosidad de los dos griegos Candia y Soma, la grandeza del de las Cinco Viñas, la dulzura y apacibilidad de la señora Guarnacha, la rusticidad de la Chéntola, sin que entre todos estos señores osase parecer la bajeza del Romanesco. Y, habiendo hecho el huésped la reseña de tantos y tan diferentes vinos, se ofreció de hacer parecer allí, sin usar de tropelía, ni como pintados en mapa, sino real y verdaderamente, a Madrigal, Coca, Alaejos, y a la imperial más que Real Ciudad, recámara del dios de la risa; ofreció a Esquivias, a Alanís, a Cazalla, Guadalcanal y la Membrilla, sin que se le olvidase de Ribadavia y de Descargamaría. Finalmente, más vinos nombró el huésped, y más les dio, que pudo tener en sus bodegas el mismo Baco.

Admiráronle también al buen Tomás los rubios cabellos de las ginovesas, y la gentileza y gallarda disposición de los hombres; la admirable belleza de la ciudad, que en aquellas peñas parece que tiene las casas engastadas como diamantes en oro. Otro día se desembarcaron todas las compañías que habían de ir al Piamonte; pero no quiso Tomás hacer este viaje, sino irse desde allí por tierra a Roma y a Nápoles, como lo hizo, quedando de volver por la gran Venecia y por Loreto a Milán y al Piamonte, donde dijo don Diego de Valdivia que le hallaría si ya no los hubiesen llevado a Flandes, según se decía.

Despidióse Tomás del capitán de allí a dos días, y en cinco llegó a Florencia, habiendo visto primero a Luca, ciudad pequeña, pero muy bien hecha, y en la que, mejor que en otras partes de Italia, son bien vistos y agasajados los españoles. Contentóle Florencia en extremo, así por su agradable asiento como por su limpieza, sumptuosos edificios, fresco río y apacibles calles. Estuvo en ella cuatro días, y luego se partió a Roma, reina de las ciudades y señora del mundo. Visitó sus templos, adoró sus reliquias y admiró su grandeza; y, así como por las uñas del león se viene en conocimiento de su grandeza y ferocidad, así él sacó la de Roma por sus despedazados mármoles, medias y enteras estatuas, por sus rotos arcos y derribadas termas, por sus magníficos pórticos y anfiteatros grandes; por su famoso y santo río, que siempre llena sus márgenes de agua y las beatifica con las infinitas reliquias de cuerpos de mártires que en ellas tuvieron sepultura; por sus puentes, que parece que se están mirando unas a otras, que con sólo el nombre cobran autoridad sobre todas las de las otras ciudades del mundo: la vía Apia, la Flaminia, la Julia, con otras deste jaez. Pues no le admiraba menos la división de sus montes dentro de sí misma: el Celio, el Quirinal y el Vaticano, con los otros cuatro, cuyos nombres manifiestan la grandeza y majestad romana. Notó también la autoridad del Colegio de los Cardenales, la majestad del Sumo Pontífice, el concurso y variedad de gentes y naciones. Todo lo miró, y notó y puso en su punto. Y, habiendo andado la estación de las siete iglesias, y confesándose con un penitenciario, y besado el pie a Su Santidad, lleno de agnusdeis y cuentas, determinó irse a Nápoles; y, por ser tiempo de mutación, malo y dañoso para todos los que en él entran o salen de Roma, como hayan caminado por tierra, se fue por mar a Nápoles, donde a la admiración que traía de haber visto a Roma añadió la que le causó ver a Nápoles, ciudad, a su parecer y al de todos cuantos la han visto, la mejor de Europa y aun de todo el mundo.

Desde allí se fue a Sicilia, y vio a Palermo, y después a Micina; de Palermo le pareció bien el asiento y belleza, y de Micina, el puerto, y de toda la isla, la abundancia, por quien propiamente y con verdad es llamada granero de Italia. Volvióse a Nápoles y a Roma, y de allí fue a Nuestra Señora de Loreto, en cuyo santo templo no vio paredes ni murallas, porque todas estaban cubiertas de muletas, de mortajas, de cadenas, de grillos, de esposas, de cabelleras, de medios bultos de cera y de pinturas y retablos, que daban manifiesto indicio de las innumerables mercedes que muchos habían recibido de la mano de Dios, por intercesión de su divina Madre, que aquella sacrosanta imagen suya quiso engrandecer y autorizar con muchedumbre de milagros, en recompensa de la devoción que le tienen aquellos que con semejantes doseles tienen adornados los muros de su casa. Vio el mismo aposento y estancia donde se relató la más alta embajada y de más importancia que vieron y no entendieron todos los cielos, y todos los ángeles y todos los moradores de las moradas sempiternas.

Desde allí, embarcándose en Ancona, fue a Venecia, ciudad que, a no haber nacido Colón en el mundo, no tuviera en él semejante: merced al cielo y al gran Hernando Cortés, que conquistó la gran Méjico, para que la gran Venecia tuviese en alguna manera quien se le opusiese. Estas dos famosas ciudades se parecen en las calles, que son todas de agua: la de Europa, admiración del mundo antiguo; la de América, espanto del mundo nuevo. Parecióle que su riqueza era infinita, su gobierno prudente, su sitio inexpugnable, su abundancia mucha, sus contornos alegres, y, finalmente, toda ella en sí y en sus partes digna de la fama que de su valor por todas las partes del orbe se estiende, dando causa de acreditar más esta verdad la máquina de su famoso Arsenal, que es el lugar donde se fabrican las galeras, con otros bajeles que no tienen número.

Por poco fueran los de Calipso los regalos y pasatiempos que halló nuestro curioso en Venecia, pues casi le hacían olvidar de su primer intento. Pero, habiendo estado un mes en ella, por Ferrara, Parma y Plasencia volvió a Milán, oficina de Vulcano, ojeriza del reino de Francia; ciudad, en fin, de quien se dice que puede decir y hacer, haciéndola magnífica la grandeza suya y de su templo y su maravillosa abundancia de todas las cosas a la vida humana necesarias. Desde allí se fue a Aste, y llegó a tiempo que otro día marchaba el tercio a Flandes.

Fue muy bien recibido de su amigo el capitán, y en su compañía y camarada pasó a Flandes, y llegó a Amberes, ciudad no menos para maravillar que las que había visto en Italia. Vio a Gante, y a Bruselas, y vio que todo el país se disponía a tomar las armas, para salir en campaña el verano siguiente.

Y, habiendo cumplido con el deseo que le movió a ver lo que había visto, determinó volverse a España y a Salamanca a acabar sus estudios; y como lo pensó lo puso luego por obra, con pesar grandísimo de su camarada, que le rogó, al tiempo del despedirse, le avisase de su salud, llegada y suceso. Prometióselo así como lo pedía, y, por Francia, volvió a España, sin haber visto a París, por estar puesta en armas. En fin, llegó a Salamanca, donde fue bien recibido de sus amigos, y, con la comodidad que ellos le hicieron, prosiguió sus estudios hasta graduarse de licenciado en leyes.

Sucedió que en este tiempo llegó a aquella ciudad una dama de todo rumbo y manejo. Acudieron luego a la añagaza y reclamo todos los pájaros del lugar, sin quedar vademécum que no la visitase. Dijéronle a Tomás que aquella dama decía que había estado en Italia y en Flandes, y, por ver si la conocía, fue a visitarla, de cuya visita y vista quedó ella enamorada de Tomás. Y él, sin echar de ver en ello, si no era por fuerza y llevado de otros, no quería entrar en su casa. Finalmente, ella le descubrió su voluntad y le ofreció su hacienda. Pero, como él atendía más a sus libros que a otros pasatiempos, en ninguna manera respondía al gusto de la señora; la cual, viéndose desdeñada y, a su parecer, aborrecida y que por medios ordinarios y comunes no podía conquistar la roca de la voluntad de Tomás, acordó de buscar otros modos, a su parecer más eficaces y bastantes para salir con el cumplimiento de sus deseos. Y así, aconsejada de una morisca, en un membrillo toledano dio a Tomás unos destos que llaman hechizos, creyendo que le daba cosa que le forzase la voluntad a quererla: como si hubiese en el mundo yerbas, encantos ni palabras suficientes a forzar el libre albedrío; y así, las que dan estas bebidas o comidas amatorias se llaman veneficios; porque no es otra cosa lo que hacen sino dar veneno a quien las toma, como lo tiene mostrado la experiencia en muchas y diversas ocasiones.

Comió en tan mal punto Tomás el membrillo, que al momento comenzó a herir de pie y de mano como si tuviera alfilería, y sin volver en sí estuvo muchas horas, al cabo de las cuales volvió como atontado, y dijo con lengua turbada y tartamuda que un membrillo que había comido le había muerto, y declaró quién se le había dado. La justicia, que tuvo noticia del caso, fue a buscar la malhechora; pero ya ella, viendo el mal suceso, se había puesto en cobro y no pareció jamás.

Seis meses estuvo en la cama Tomás, en los cuales se secó y se puso, como suele decirse, en los huesos, y mostraba tener turbados todos los sentidos. Y, aunque le hicieron los remedios posibles, sólo le sanaron la enfermedad del cuerpo, pero no de lo del entendimiento, porque quedó sano, y loco de la más estraña locura que entre las locuras hasta entonces se había visto. Imagínese el desdichado que era todo hecho de vidrio, y con esta imaginación, cuando alguno se llegaba a él, daba terribles voces pidiendo y suplicando con palabras y razones concertadas que no se le acercasen, porque le quebrarían; que real y verdaderamente él no era como los otros hombres: que todo era de vidrio de pies a cabeza.

Para sacarle desta estraña imaginación, muchos, sin atender a sus voces y rogativas, arremetieron a él y le abrazaron, diciéndole que advirtiese y mirase cómo no se quebraba. Pero lo que se granjeaba en esto era que el pobre se echaba en el suelo dando mil gritos, y luego le tomaba un desmayo del cual no volvía en sí en cuatro horas; y cuando volvía, era renovando las plegarias y rogativas de que otra vez no le llegasen. Decía que le hablasen desde lejos y le preguntasen lo que quisiesen, porque a todo les respondería con más entendimiento, por ser hombre de vidrio y no de carne: que el vidrio, por ser de materia sutil y delicada, obraba por ella el alma con más promptitud y eficacia que no por la del cuerpo, pesada y terrestre.

Quisieron algunos experimentar si era verdad lo que decía; y así, le preguntaron muchas y difíciles cosas, a las cuales respondió espontáneamente con grandísima agudeza de ingenio: cosa que causó admiración a los más letrados de la Universidad y a los profesores de la medicina y filosofía, viendo que en un sujeto donde se contenía tan extraordinaria locura como era el pensar que fuese de vidrio, se encerrase tan grande entendimiento que respondiese a toda pregunta con propiedad y agudeza.

Pidió Tomás le diesen alguna funda donde pusiese aquel vaso quebradizo de su cuerpo, porque al vestirse algún vestido estrecho no se quebrase; y así, le dieron una ropa parda y una camisa muy ancha, que él se vistió con mucho tiento y se ciñó con una cuerda de algodón. No quiso calzarse zapatos en ninguna manera, y el orden que tuvo para que le diesen de comer, sin que a él llegasen, fue poner en la punta de una vara una vasera de orinal, en la cual le ponían alguna cosa de fruta de las que la sazón del tiempo ofrecía. Carne ni pescado, no lo quería; no bebía sino en fuente o en río, y esto con las manos; cuando andaba por las calles iba por la mitad dellas, mirando a los tejados, temeroso no le cayese alguna teja encima y le quebrase. Los veranos dormía en el campo al cielo abierto, y los inviernos se metía en algún mesón, y en el pajar se enterraba hasta la garganta, diciendo que aquélla era la más propia y más segura cama que podían tener los hombres de vidrio. Cuando tronaba, temblaba como un azogado, y se salía al campo y no entraba en poblado hasta haber pasado la tempestad.

Tuviéronle encerrado sus amigos mucho tiempo; pero, viendo que su desgracia pasaba adelante, determinaron de condecender con lo que él les pedía, que era le dejasen andar libre; y así, le dejaron, y él salió por la ciudad, causando admiración y lástima a todos los que le conocían.

Cercáronle luego los muchachos; pero él con la vara los detenía, y les rogaba le hablasen apartados, porque no se quebrase; que, por ser hombre de vidrio, era muy tierno y quebradizo. Los muchachos, que son la más traviesa generación del mundo, a despecho de sus ruegos y voces, le comenzaron a tirar trapos, y aun piedras, por ver si era de vidrio, como él decía. Pero él daba tantas voces y hacía tales extremos, que movía a los hombres a que riñesen y castigasen a los muchachos porque no le tirasen.

Mas un día que le fatigaron mucho se volvió a ellos, diciendo:

-¿Qué me queréis, muchachos, porfiados como moscas, sucios como chinches, atrevidos como pulgas? ¿Soy yo, por ventura, el monte Testacho de Roma, para que me tiréis tantos tiestos y tejas?

Por oírle reñir y responder a todos, le seguían siempre muchos, y los muchachos tomaron y tuvieron por mejor partido antes oírle que tiralle.

Pasando, pues, una vez por la ropería de Salamanca, le dijo una ropera:

-En mi ánima, señor Licenciado, que me pesa de su desgracia; pero, ¿qué haré, que no puedo llorar?

Él se volvió a ella, y muy mesurado le dijo:

-Filiae Hierusalem, plorate super vos et super filios vestros.

Entendió el marido de la ropera la malicia del dicho y díjole:

-Hermano licenciado Vidriera (que así decía él que se llamaba), más tenéis de bellaco que de loco.

-No se me da un ardite -respondió él-, como no tenga nada de necio.

Pasando un día por la casa llana y venta común, vio que estaban a la puerta della muchas de sus moradoras, y dijo que eran bagajes del ejército de Satanás que estaban alojados en el mesón del infierno.

Preguntóle uno que qué consejo o consuelo daría a un amigo suyo que estaba muy triste porque su mujer se le había ido con otro.

A lo cual respondió:

-Dile que dé gracias a Dios por haber permitido le llevasen de casa a su enemigo.

-Luego, ¿no irá a buscarla? -dijo el otro.

-¡Ni por pienso! -replicó Vidriera-; porque sería el hallarla hallar un perpetuo y verdadero testigo de su deshonra.

-Ya que eso sea así -dijo el mismo-, ¿qué haré yo para tener paz con mi mujer?

Respondióle:

-Dale lo que hubiere menester; déjala que mande a todos los de su casa, pero no sufras que ella te mande a ti.

Díjole un muchacho:

-Señor licenciado Vidriera, yo me quiero desgarrar de mi padre porque me azota muchas veces.

Y respondióle:

-Advierte, niño, que los azotes que los padres dan a los hijos honran, y los del verdugo afrentan.

Estando a la puerta de una iglesia, vio que entraba en ella un labrador de los que siempre blasonan de cristianos viejos, y detrás dél venía uno que no estaba en tan buena opinión como el primero; y el Licenciado dio grandes voces al labrador, diciendo:

-Esperad, Domingo, a que pase el Sábado.

De los maestros de escuela decía que eran dichosos, pues trataban siempre con ángeles; y que fueran dichosísimos si los angelitos no fueran mocosos.

Otro le preguntó que qué le parecía de las alcahuetas. Respondió que no lo eran las apartadas, sino las vecinas.

Las nuevas de su locura y de sus respuestas y dichos se extendió por toda Castilla; y, llegando a noticia de un príncipe, o señor, que estaba en la Corte, quiso enviar por él, y encargóselo a un caballero amigo suyo, que estaba en Salamanca, que se lo enviase; y, topándole el caballero un día, le dijo:

-Sepa el señor licenciado Vidriera que un gran personaje de la Corte le quiere ver y envía por él.

A lo cual respondió:

-Vuesa merced me escuse con ese señor, que yo no soy bueno para palacio, porque tengo vergüenza y no sé lisonjear.

Con todo esto, el caballero le envió a la Corte, y para traerle usaron con él desta invención: pusieronle en unas árguenas de paja, como aquéllas donde llevan el vidrio, igualando los tercios con piedras, y entre paja puestos algunos vidrios, porque se diese a entender que como vaso de vidrio le llevaban. Llegó a Valladolid; entró de noche y desembanastáronle en la casa del señor que había enviado por él, de quien fue muy bien recibido, diciéndole:

-Sea muy bien venido el señor licenciado Vidriera. ¿Cómo ha ido en el camino? ¿Cómo va de salud?

A lo cual respondió:

-Ningún camino hay malo, como se acabe, si no es el que va a la horca. De salud estoy neutral, porque están encontrados mis pulsos con mi cerebro.

Otro día, habiendo visto en muchas alcándaras muchos neblíes y azores y otros pájaros de volatería, dijo que la caza de altanería era digna de príncipes y de grandes señores; pero que advirtiesen que con ella echaba el gusto censo sobre el provecho a más de dos mil por uno. La caza de liebres dijo que era muy gustosa, y más cuando se cazaba con galgos prestados.

El caballero gustó de su locura y dejóle salir por la ciudad, debajo del amparo y guarda de un hombre que tuviese cuenta que los muchachos no le hiciesen mal; de los cuales y de toda la Corte fue conocido en seis días, y a cada paso, en cada calle y en cualquiera esquina, respondía a todas las preguntas que le hacían; entre las cuales le preguntó un estudiante si era poeta, porque le parecía que tenía ingenio para todo.

A lo cual respondió:

-Hasta ahora no he sido tan necio ni tan venturoso.

-No entiendo eso de necio y venturoso -dijo el estudiante.

Y respondió Vidriera:

-No he sido tan necio que diese en poeta malo, ni tan venturoso que haya merecido serlo bueno.

Preguntóle otro estudiante que en qué estimación tenía a los poetas. Respondió que a la ciencia, en mucha; pero que a los poetas, en ninguna. Replicáronle que por qué decía aquello. Respondió que del infinito número de poetas que había, eran tan pocos los buenos, que casi no hacían número; y así, como si no hubiese poetas, no los estimaba; pero que admiraba y reverenciaba la ciencia de la poesía porque encerraba en sí todas las demás ciencias: porque de todas se sirve, de todas se adorna, y pule y saca a luz sus maravillosas obras, con que llena el mundo de provecho, de deleite y de maravilla.

Añadió más:

-Yo bien sé en lo que se debe estimar un buen poeta, porque se me acuerda de aquellos versos de Ovidio que dicen:

*Cum ducum fuerant olim Regnumque poeta: premiaque antiqui magna tulere chori.
Sanctaque maiestas, et erat venerabile nomen vatibus; et large saepe dabantur opes.*

»Y menos se me olvida la alta calidad de los poetas, pues los llama Platón intérpretes de los dioses, y dellos dice Ovidio:

Est Deus in nobis, agitante calescimus illo.

»Y también dice:

At sacri vates, et Divum cura vocamus.

»Esto se dice de los buenos poetas; que de los malos, de los churrulleros, ¿qué se ha de decir, sino que son la idiotez y la arrogancia del mundo?

Y añadió más:

-¡Qué es ver a un poeta destos de la primera impresión cuando quiere decir un soneto a otros que le rodean, las salvas que les hace diciendo: «Vuestas mercedes escuchen un sonetillo que anoche a cierta ocasión hice, que, a mi parecer, aunque no vale nada, tiene un no sé qué de bonito!» Y en esto tuerce los labios, pone en arco las cejas y se rasca la faldriquera, y de entre otros mil papeles mugrientos y medio rotos, donde queda otro millar de sonetos, saca el que quiere relatar, y al fin le dice con tono melifluo y alfenicado. Y si acaso los que le escuchan, de socarrones o de ignorantes, no se le alaban, dice: «O vuestas mercedes no han entendido el soneto, o yo no le he sabido decir; y así, será bien recitarle otra vez y que vuestas mercedes le presten más atención, porque en verdad en verdad que el soneto lo merece». Y vuelve como primero a recitarle con nuevos ademanes y nuevas pausas. Pues, ¿qué es verlos censurar los unos a los otros? ¿Qué diré del ladrar que hacen los cachorros y modernos a los mastinazos antiguos y graves? ¿Y qué de los que murmuran de algunos ilustres y excelentes sujetos, donde resplandece la verdadera luz de la poesía; que, tomándola por alivio y entretenimiento de sus muchas y graves ocupaciones, muestran la divinidad de sus ingenios y la alteza de sus conceptos, a despecho y pesar del circunspecto ignorante que juzga de lo que no sabe y aborrece lo que no entiende, y del que quiere que se estime y tenga en precio la necedad que se sienta debajo de doseles y la ignorancia que se arrima a los sitios?»

Otra vez le preguntaron qué era la causa de que los poetas, por la mayor parte, eran pobres. Respondió que porque ellos querían, pues estaba en su mano ser ricos, si se sabían aprovechar de la ocasión que por momentos traían entre las manos, que eran las de sus damas, que todas eran riquísimas en extremo, pues tenían los cabellos de oro, la frente de plata bruñida, los ojos de verdes esmeraldas, los dientes de marfil, los labios de coral y la garganta de cristal transparente, y que lo que lloraban eran líquidas perlas; y más, que lo que sus plantas pisaban, por dura y estéril tierra que fuese, al momento producía jazmines y rosas; y que su aliento era de puro ámbar, almizcle y algalia; y que todas estas cosas eran señales y muestras de su mucha riqueza. Estas y otras cosas decía de los malos poetas, que de los buenos siempre dijo bien y los levantó sobre el cuerno de la luna.

Vio un día en la acera de San Francisco unas figuras pintadas de mala mano, y dijo que los buenos pintores imitaban a naturaleza, pero que los malos la vomitaban.

Arrimóse un día con grandísimo tiento, porque no se quebrase, a la tienda de un librero, y díjole:

-Este oficio me contentara mucho si no fuera por una falta que tiene.

Preguntóle el librero se la dijese. Respondióle:

-Los melindres que hacen cuando compran un privilegio de un libro, y de la burla que hacen a su autor si acaso le imprime a su costa; pues, en lugar de mil y quinientos, imprimen tres mil libros, y, cuando el autor piensa que se venden los suyos, se despachan los ajenos.

Acaeció este mismo día que pasaron por la plaza seis azotados; y, diciendo el pregón: «Al primero, por ladrón», dio grandes voces a los que estaban delante dél, diciéndoles:

-¡Apartaos, hermanos, no comience aquella cuenta por alguno de vosotros!

Y cuando el pregonero llegó a decir: «Al trasero...», dijo:

-Aquel debe de ser el fiador de los muchachos.

Un muchacho le dijo:

-Hermano Vidriera, mañana sacan a azotar a una alcagüeta.

Respondióle:

-Si dijeras que sacaban a azotar a un alcagüete, entendiera que sacaban a azotar un coche.

Hallóse allí uno destos que llevan sillas de manos, y díjole:

-De nosotros, Licenciado, ¿no tenéis qué decir?

-No -respondió Vidriera-, sino que sabe cada uno de vosotros más pecados que un confesor; más es con esta diferencia: que el confesor los sabe para tenerlos secretos, y vosotros para publicarlos por las tabernas.

Oyó esto un mozo de mulas, porque de todo género de gente le estaba escuchando contino, y díjole:

-De nosotros, señor Redoma, poco o nada hay que decir, porque somos gente de bien y necesaria en la república.

A lo cual respondió Vidriera:

-La honra del amo descubre la del criado. Según esto, mira a quién sirves y verás cuán honrado eres: mozos sois vosotros de la más ruin canalla que sustenta la tierra. Una vez, cuando no era de vidrio, caminé una jornada en una mula de alquiler tal, que le conté ciento y veinte y una tachas, todas capitales y enemigas del género humano. Todos los mozos de mulas tienen su punta de rufianes, su punta de cacos, y su es no es de truhanes. Si sus amos (que así llaman ellos a los que llevan en sus mulas) son boquimuelles, hacen más suertes en ellos que las que echaron en esta ciudad los años pasados: si son extranjeros, los roban; si estudiantes, los maldicen; y si religiosos, los reniegan; y si soldados, los tiemblan. Estos, y los marineros y carreteros y arrieros, tienen un modo de vivir extraordinario y sólo para ellos: el carretero pasa lo más de la vida en espacio de vara y media de lugar, que poco más debe de haber del yugo de las mulas a la boca del carro; canta la mitad del tiempo y la otra mitad reniega; y en decir: «Háganse a zaga» se les pasa otra parte; y si acaso les queda por sacar alguna rueda de algún atolladero, más se ayudan de dos pésetes que de tres mulas. Los marineros son gente gentil, inurbana, que no sabe otro lenguaje que el que se usa en los navíos; en la bonanza son diligentes y en la borrasca perezosos; en la tormenta mandan muchos y obedecen pocos; su Dios es su arca y su rancho, y su pasatiempo ver mareados a los pasajeros. Los arrieros son gente que ha hecho divorcio con las sábanas y se ha casado con las enjalmas; son tan diligentes y presurosos que, a trueco de no perder la jornada, perderán el alma; su música es la del mortero; su salsa, la hambre; sus maitines, levantarse a dar sus piensos; y sus misas, no oír ninguna.

Cuando esto decía, estaba a la puerta de un boticario, y, volviéndose al dueño, le dijo:

-Vuesa merced tiene un saludable oficio, si no fuese tan enemigo de sus candiles.

-¿En qué modo soy enemigo de mis candiles? -preguntó el boticario.

Y respondió Vidriera:

-Esto digo porque, en faltando cualquiera aceite, la suple la del candil que está más a mano; y aún tiene otra cosa este oficio bastante a quitar el crédito al más acertado médico del mundo.

Preguntándole por qué, respondió que había boticario que, por no decir que faltaba en su botica lo que recetaba el médico, por las cosas que le faltaban ponía otras que a su parecer tenían la misma virtud y calidad, no siendo así; y con esto, la medicina mal compuesta obraba al revés de lo que había de obrar la bien ordenada.

Preguntóle entonces uno que qué sentía de los médicos, y respondió esto:

-Honora medicum propter necessitatem, etenim creavit eum Altissimus. A Deo enim est omnis medela, et a rege accipiet donationem. Disciplina medici exaltavit caput illius, et in conspectu magnatum collaudabitur. Altissimus de terra creavit medicinam, et vir prudens non abhorrebit illam. Esto dice -dijo-el Eclesiástico de la medicina y de los buenos médicos, y de los malos se podría decir todo al revés, porque no hay gente más dañosa a la república que ellos. El juez nos puede torcer o dilatar la justicia; el letrado, sustentar por su interés nuestra injusta demanda; el mercader, chuparnos la hacienda; finalmente, todas las personas con quien de necesidad tratamos nos pueden hacer algún daño; pero quitarnos la vida, sin quedar sujetos al temor del castigo, ninguno. Sólo los médicos nos pueden matar y nos matan sin temor y a pie quedo, sin desenvainar otra espada que la de un récipe. Y no hay descubrirse sus delictos, porque al momento los meten debajo de la tierra. Acuérdaseme que cuando yo era hombre de carne, y no de vidrio como agora soy, que a un médico destos de segunda clase le despidió un enfermo por curarse con otro, y el primero, de allí a cuatro días, acertó a pasar por la botica donde receptaba el segundo, y preguntó al boticario que cómo le iba al enfermo que él había dejado, y que si le había receptado alguna purga el otro médico. El boticario le respondió que allí tenía una recepta de purga que el día siguiente había de tomar el enfermo. Dijo que se la mostrase, y vio que al fin della estaba escrito: Sumat dilúculo; y dijo: «Todo lo que lleva esta purga me contenta, si no es este dilúculo, porque es húmido demasiadamente».

Por estas y otras cosas que decía de todos los oficios, se andaban tras él, sin hacerle mal y sin dejarle sosegar; pero, con todo esto, no se pudiera defender de los muchachos si su guardián no le defendiera. Preguntóle uno qué haría para no tener envidia a nadie. Respondióle:

-Duerme; que todo el tiempo que durmieres serás igual al que envidias.

Otro le preguntó qué remedio tendría para salir con una comisión que había dos años que la pretendía. Y díjole:

-Parte a caballo y a la mira de quien la lleva, y acompañaile hasta salir de la ciudad, y así saldrás con ella.

Pasó acaso una vez por delante donde él estaba un juez de comisión que iba de camino a una causa criminal, y llevaba mucha gente consigo y dos alguaciles; preguntó quién era, y, como se lo dijeron, dijo:

-Yo apostaré que lleva aquel juez víboras en el seno, pistoletes en la cinta y rayos en las manos, para destruir todo lo que alcanzare su comisión. Yo me acuerdo haber tenido un amigo que, en una comisión criminal que tuvo, dio una sentencia tan exorbitante, que excedía en muchos quilates a la culpa de los delincuentes. Preguntéle que por qué había dado aquella tan cruel sentencia y hecho tan manifiesta injusticia. Respondióme que pensaba otorgar la apelación, y que con esto dejaba campo abierto a los señores del Consejo para mostrar su misericordia, moderando y poniendo aquella su rigurosa sentencia en su punto y debida proporción. Yo le respondí que mejor fuera haberla dado de manera que les quitara de aquel trabajo, pues con esto le tuvieran a él por juez recto y acertado.

En la rueda de la mucha gente que, como se ha dicho, siempre le estaba oyendo, estaba un conocido suyo en hábito de letrado, al cual otro le llamó Señor Licenciado; y, sabiendo Vidriera que el tal a quien llamaron licenciado no tenía ni aun título de bachiller, le dijo:

-Guardaos, compadre, no encuentren con vuestro título los frailes de la redención de cautivos, que os le llevarán por mostrenco.

A lo cual dijo el amigo:

-Tratémonos bien, señor Vidriera, pues ya sabéis vos que soy hombre de altas y de profundas letras.

Respondióle Vidriera:

-Ya yo sé que sois un Tántalo en ellas, porque se os van por altas y no las alcanzáis de profundas.

Estando una vez arrimado a la tienda de un sastre, viole que estaba mano sobre mano, y díjole:

-Sin duda, señor maeso, que estáis en camino de salvación.

-¿En qué lo veis? -preguntó el sastre.

-¿En qué lo veo? -respondió Vidriera-. Véolo en que, pues no tenéis qué hacer, no tendréis ocasión de mentir.

Y añadió:

-Desdichado del sastre que no miente y cose las fiestas; cosa maravillosa es que casi en todos los deste oficio apenas se hallará uno que haga un vestido justo, habiendo tantos que los hagan pecadores.

De los zapateros decía que jamás hacían, conforme a su parecer, zapato malo; porque si al que se le calzaban venía estrecho y apretado, le decían que así había de ser, por ser de galanes calzar justo, y que en trayéndolos dos horas vendrían más anchos que alpargates; y si le venían anchos, decían que así habían de venir, por amor de la gota.

Un muchacho agudo que escribía en un oficio de Provincia le apretaba mucho con preguntas y demandas, y le traía nuevas de lo que en la ciudad pasaba, porque sobre todo discantaba y a todo respondía. Éste le dijo una vez:

-Vidriera, esta noche se murió en la cárcel un banco que estaba condenado ahorcar.

A lo cual respondió:

-Él hizo bien a darse prisa a morir antes que el verdugo se sentara sobre él.

En la acera de San Francisco estaba un corro de ginoveses; y, pasando por allí, uno dellos le llamó, diciéndole:

-Lléguese acá el señor Vidriera y cuéntenos un cuento.

Él respondió:

-No quiero, porque no me le paséis a Génova.

Topó una vez a una tendera que llevaba delante de sí una hija suya muy fea, pero muy llena de dijes, de galas y de perlas; y díjole a la madre:

-Muy bien habéis hecho en empedralla, porque se pueda pasear.

De los pasteleros dijo que había muchos años que jugaban a la dobladilla, sin que les llevasen a la pena, porque habían hecho el pastel de a dos de a cuatro, el de a cuatro de a ocho, y el de a ocho de a medio real, por sólo su albedrío y beneplácito.

De los titereros decía mil males: decía que era gente vagamunda y que trataba con indecencia de las cosas divinas, porque con las figuras que mostraban en sus retratos volvían la devoción en risa, y que les acontecía envasar en un costal todas o las más figuras del Testamento Viejo y Nuevo y sentarse sobre él a comer y beber en los bodegones y tabernas. En resolución, decía que se maravillaba de cómo quien podía no les ponía perpetuo silencio en sus retablos, o los desterraba del reino.

Acertó a pasar una vez por donde él estaba un comediante vestido como un príncipe, y, en viéndole, dijo:

-Yo me acuerdo haber visto a éste salir al teatro enharinado el rostro y vestido un zamarro del revés; y, con todo esto, a cada paso fuera del tablado, jura a fe de hijodalgo.

-Débelo de ser -respondió uno-, porque hay muchos comediantes que son muy bien nacidos y hijosdalgo.

-Así será verdad -replicó Vidriera-, pero lo que menos ha menester la farsa es personas bien nacidas; galanes sí, gentileshombres y de espeditas lenguas. También sé decir dellos que en el sudor de su cara ganan su pan con inllevable trabajo, tomando continuo de memoria, hechos perpetuos gitanos, de lugar en lugar y de mesón en venta, desvelándose en contentar a otros, porque en el gusto ajeno consiste su bien propio. Tienen más, que con su oficio no engañan a nadie, pues por momentos sacan su mercadería a pública plaza, al juicio y a la vista de todos. El trabajo de los autores es increíble, y su cuidado, extraordinario, y han de ganar mucho para que al cabo del año no salgan tan empeñados, que les sea forzoso hacer pleito de acreedores. Y, con todo esto, son necesarios en la república, como lo son las florestas, las alamedas y las vistas de recreación, y como lo son las cosas que honestamente recrean.

Decía que había sido opinión de un amigo suyo que el que servía a una comedianta, en sola una servía a muchas damas juntas, como era a una reina, a una ninfa, a una diosa, a una fregona, a una pastora, y muchas veces caía la suerte en que serviese en ella a un paje y a un lacayo: que todas estas y más figuras suele hacer una farsanta.

Preguntóle uno que cuál había sido el más dichoso del mundo. Respondió que Nemo; porque Nemo novit Patrem, Nemo sine crimine vivit, Nemo sua sorte contentus, Nemo ascendit in coelum.

De los diestros dijo una vez que eran maestros de una ciencia o arte que cuando la habían menester no la sabían, y que tocaban algo en presumptuosos, pues querían reducir a demostraciones matemáticas, que son infalibles, los movimientos y pensamientos coléricos de sus contrarios. Con los que se teñían las barbas tenía particular enemistad; y, riñendo una vez delante dél dos hombres, que el uno era portugués, éste dijo al castellano, asiéndose de las barbas, que tenía muy teñidas:

-¡Por istas barbas que teño no rostro...!

A lo cual acudió Vidriera:

-¡Ollay, home, naon digáis teño, sino tiño!

Otro traía las barbas jaspeadas y de muchas colores, culpa de la mala tinta; a quien dijo Vidriera que tenía las barbas de muladar overo. A otro, que traía las barbas por mitad blancas y negras, por haberse descuidado, y los cañones crecidos, le dijo que procurase de no porfiar ni reñir con nadie, porque estaba aparejado a que le dijese que mentía por la mitad de la barba.

Una vez contó que una doncella discreta y bien entendida, por acudir a la voluntad de sus padres, dio el sí de casarse con un viejo todo cano, el cual la noche antes del día del desposorio se fue, no al río Jordán, como dicen las viejas, sino a la redomilla del agua fuerte y plata, con que renovó de manera su barba, que la acostó de nieve y la levantó de pez. Llegóse la hora de darse las manos, y la doncella conoció por la pinta y por la tinta la figura, y dijo a sus padres que le diesen el mismo esposo que ellos le habían mostrado, que no quería otro. Ellos le dijeron que aquel que tenía delante era el mismo que le habían mostrado y dado por esposo. Ella replicó que no era, y trujo testigos cómo el que sus padres le dieron era un hombre grave y lleno de canas; y que, pues el presente no las tenía, no era él, y se llamaba a engaño. Atúvose a esto, corrióse el teñido y deshízose el casamiento.

Con las dueñas tenía la misma ojeriza que con los escabechados: decía maravillas de su permafoy, de las mortajas de sus tocas, de sus muchos melindres, de sus escrúpulos y de su extraordinaria miseria. Amohinábanle sus flaquezas de estómago, su vaguidos de cabeza, su modo de hablar, con más repulgos que sus tocas; y, finalmente, su inutilidad y sus vainillas.

Uno le dijo:

-¿Qué es esto, señor licenciado, que os he oído decir mal de muchos oficios y jamás lo habéis dicho de los escribanos, habiendo tanto que decir?

A lo cual respondió:

-Aunque de vidrio, no soy tan frágil que me deje ir con la corriente del vulgo, las más veces engañado. Paréceme a mí que la gramática de los murmuradores y el la, la, la de los que cantan son los escribanos; porque, así como no se puede pasar a otras ciencias, si no es por la puerta de la gramática, y como el músico primero murmura que canta, así, los maldicientes, por donde comienzan a mostrar la malignidad de sus lenguas es por decir mal de los escribanos y alguaciles y de los otros ministros de la justicia, siendo un oficio el del escribano sin el cual andaría la verdad por el mundo a sombra de tejados, corrida y maltratada; y así, dice el Eclesiástico: In manu Dei potestas hominis est, et super faciem scribe imponet honorem. Es el escribano persona pública, y el oficio del juez no se puede ejercitar cómodamente sin el suyo. Los escribanos han de ser libres, y no esclavos, ni hijos de esclavos: legítimos, no bastardos ni de ninguna mala raza nacidos. Juran de secreto fidelidad y que no harán escritura usuraria; que ni amistad ni enemistad, provecho o daño les moverá a no hacer su oficio con buena y cristiana conciencia. Pues si este oficio tantas buenas partes requiere, ¿por qué se ha de pensar que de más de veinte mil escribanos que hay en España se lleve el diablo la cosecha, como si fuesen cepas de su majuelo? No lo quiero creer, ni es bien que ninguno lo crea; porque, finalmente, digo que es la gente más necesaria que había en las repúblicas bien ordenadas, y que si llevaban demasiados derechos, también hacían demasiados tuertos, y que destos dos extremos podía resultar un medio que les hiciese mirar por el virote.

De los alguaciles dijo que no era mucho que tuviesen algunos enemigos, siendo su oficio, o prenderte, o sacarte la hacienda de casa, o tenerte en la suya en guarda y comer a tu costa. Tachaba la negligencia e ignorancia de los procuradores y solicitadores, comparándolos a los médicos, los cuales, que sane o no sane el enfermo, ellos llevan su propina, y los procuradores y solicitadores, lo mismo, salgan o no salgan con el pleito que ayudan.

Preguntóle uno cuál era la mejor tierra. Respondió que la temprana y agradecida. Replicó el otro:

-No pregunto eso, sino que cuál es mejor lugar: ¿Valladolid o Madrid?

Y respondió:

-De Madrid, los extremos; de Valladolid, los medios.

-No lo entiendo -repitió el que se lo preguntaba.

Y dijo:

-De Madrid, cielo y suelo; de Valladolid, los entresuelos.

Oyó Vidriera que dijo un hombre a otro que, así como había entrado en Valladolid, había caído su mujer muy enferma, porque la había probado la tierra.

A lo cual dijo Vidriera:

-Mejor fuera que se la hubiera comido, si acaso es celosa.

De los músicos y de los correos de a pie decía que tenían las esperanzas y las suertes limitadas, porque los unos la acababan con llegar a serlo de a caballo, y los otros con alcanzar a ser músicos del rey. De las damas que llaman cortesanas decía que todas, o las más, tenían más de cortesanas que de sanas.

Estando un día en una iglesia vio que traían a enterrar a un viejo, a bautizar a un niño y a velar una mujer, todo a un mismo tiempo, y dijo que los templos eran campos de batalla, donde los viejos acaban, los niños vencen y las mujeres triunfan.

Picábale una vez una avispa en el cuello, y no se la osaba sacudir por no quebrarse; pero, con todo eso, se quejaba. Preguntóle uno que cómo sentía aquella avispa, si era su cuerpo de vidrio. Y respondió que aquella avispa debía de ser murmuradora, y que las lenguas y picos de los murmuradores eran bastantes a desmoronar cuerpos de bronce, no que de vidrio.

Pasando acaso un religioso muy gordo por donde él estaba, dijo uno de sus oyentes:

-De hético no se puede mover el padre.

Enojóse Vidriera, y dijo:

-Nadie se olvide de lo que dice el Espíritu Santo: Nolite tangere christos meos.

Y, subiéndose más en cólera, dijo que mirasen en ello, y verían que de muchos santos que de pocos años a esta parte había canonizado la Iglesia y puesto en el número de los bienaventurados, ninguno se llamaba el capitán don Fulano, ni el secretario don Tal de don Tales, ni el Conde, Marqués o Duque de tal parte, sino fray Diego, fray Jacinto, fray Raimundo, todos frailes y religiosos; porque las religiones son los Aranjueces del cielo, cuyos frutos, de ordinario, se ponen en la mesa de Dios.

Decía que las lenguas de los murmuradores eran como las plumas del águila: que roen y menoscaban todas las de las otras aves que a ellas se juntan. De los gariteros y tahúres decía milagros: decía que los gariteros eran públicos prevaricadores, porque, en sacando el barato del que iba haciendo suertes, deseaban que perdiese y pasase el naípe adelante, porque el contrario las hiciese y él cobrase sus derechos. Alababa mucho la paciencia de un tahúr, que estaba toda una noche jugando y perdiendo, y con ser de condición colérico y endemoniado, a trueco de que su contrario no se alzase, no descosía la boca, y sufría lo que un mártir de Barrabás. Alababa también las conciencias de algunos honrados gariteros que ni por imaginación consentían que en su casa se jugase otros juegos que polla y cientos; y con esto, a fuego lento, sin temor y nota de malsines, sacaban al cabo del mes más barato que los que consentían los juegos de estocada, del reparolo, siete y llevar, y pinta en la del punto.

En resolución, él decía tales cosas que, si no fuera por los grandes gritos que daba cuando le tocaban o a él se arrimaban, por el hábito que traía, por la estrechez de su comida, por el modo con que bebía, por el no querer dormir sino al cielo abierto en el verano y el invierno en los pajares, como queda dicho, con que daba tan claras señales de su locura, ninguno pudiera creer sino que era uno de los más cuerdos del mundo.

Dos años o poco más duró en esta enfermedad, porque un religioso de la Orden de San Jerónimo, que tenía gracia y ciencia particular en hacer que los mudos entendiesen y en cierta manera hablasen, y en curar locos, tomó a su cargo de curar a Vidriera, movido de caridad; y le curó y sanó, y volvió a su primer juicio, entendimiento y discurso. Y, así como le vio sano, le vistió como letrado y le hizo volver a la Corte, adonde, con dar tantas muestras de cuerdo como las había dado de loco, podía usar su oficio y hacerse famoso por él.

Hízolo así; y, llamándose el licenciado Rueda, y no Rodaja, volvió a la Corte, donde, apenas hubo entrado, cuando fue conocido de los muchachos; mas, como le vieron en tan diferente hábito del que solía, no le osaron dar grita ni hacer preguntas; pero seguíanle y decían unos a otros:

-¿Este no es el loco Vidriera? ¡A fe que es él! Ya viene cuerdo. Pero tan bien puede ser loco bien vestido como mal vestido; preguntémosle algo, y salgamos desta confusión.

Todo esto oía el licenciado y callaba, y iba más confuso y más corrido que cuando estaba sin juicio.

Pasó el conocimiento de los muchachos a los hombres; y, antes que el licenciado llegase al patio de los Consejos, llevaba tras de sí más de docientas personas de todas suertes. Con este acompañamiento, que era más que de un catedrático, llegó al patio, donde le acabaron de circundar cuantos en él estaban. Él, viéndose con tanta turba a la redonda, alzó la voz y dijo:

-Señores, yo soy el licenciado Vidriera, pero no el que solía: soy ahora el licenciado Rueda; sucesos y desgracias que acontecen en el mundo, por permisión del cielo, me quitaron el juicio, y las misericordias de Dios me le han vuelto. Por las cosas que dicen que dije cuando loco, podéis considerar las que diré y haré cuando cuerdo. Yo soy graduado en leyes por Salamanca, adonde estudié con pobreza y adonde llevé segundo en licencias: de do se puede inferir que más la virtud que el favor me dio el grado que tengo. Aquí he venido a este gran mar de la Corte para abogar y ganar la vida; pero si no me dejáis, habré venido a bogar y granjear la muerte. Por amor de Dios que no hagáis que el seguirme sea perseguirme, y que lo que alcancé por loco, que es el sustento, lo pierda por cuerdo. Lo que solíades preguntarme en las plazas, preguntádmelo ahora en mi casa, y veréis que el que os respondía bien, según dicen, de improviso, os responderá mejor de pensado.

Escucháronle todos y dejáronle algunos. Volvióse a su posada con poco menos acompañamiento que había llevado.

Salió otro día y fue lo mismo; hizo otro sermón y no sirvió de nada. Perdía mucho y no ganaba cosa; y, viéndose morir de hambre, determinó de dejar la Corte y volverse a Flandes, donde pensaba valerse de las fuerzas de su brazo, pues no se podía valer de las de su ingenio.

Y, poniéndolo en efeto, dijo al salir de la Corte:

-¡Oh Corte, que alargas las esperanzas de los atrevidos pretendientes, y acortas las de los virtuosos encogidos, sustentas abundantemente a los truhanes desvergonzados y matas de hambre a los discretos vergonzosos!

Esto dijo y se fue a Flandes, donde la vida que había comenzado a eternizar por las letras la acabó de eternizar por las armas, en compañía de su buen amigo el capitán Valdivia, dejando fama en su muerte de prudente y valentísimo soldado.

La fuerza de la sangre

UNA NOCHE de las calurosas del verano, volvían de recrearse del río en Toledo un anciano hidalgo con su mujer, un niño pequeño, una hija de edad de diez y seis años y una criada. La noche era clara; la hora, las once; el camino, solo, y el paso, tardo, por no pagar con cansancio la pensión que traen consigo las holguras que en el río o en la vega se toman en Toledo.

Con la seguridad que promete la mucha justicia y bien inclinada gente de aquella ciudad, venía el buen hidalgo con su honrada familia, lejos de pensar en desastre que sucederles pudiese. Pero, como las más de las desdichas que vienen no se piensan, contra todo su pensamiento, les sucedió una que les turbó la holgura y les dio que llorar muchos años.

Hasta veinte y dos tendría un caballero de aquella ciudad a quien la riqueza, la sangre ilustre, la inclinación torcida, la libertad demasiada y las compañías libres, le hacían hacer cosas y tener atrevimientos que desdecían de su calidad y le daban renombre de atrevido. Este caballero, pues (que por ahora, por buenos respetos, encubriendo su nombre, le llamaremos con el de Rodolfo), con otros cuatro amigos suyos, todos mozos, todos alegres y todos insolentes, bajaba por la misma cuesta que el hidalgo subía.

Encontráronse los dos escuadrones: el de las ovejas con el de los lobos; y, con deshonesta desenvoltura, Rodolfo y sus camaradas, cubiertos los rostros, miraron los de la madre, y de la hija y de la criada. Alborotóse el viejo y reprochóles y afeóles su atrevimiento. Ellos le respondieron con muecas y burla, y, sin desmandarse a más, pasaron adelante. Pero la mucha hermosura del rostro que había visto Rodolfo, que era el de Leocadia, que así quieren que se llamase la hija del hidalgo, comenzó de tal manera a imprimírsele en la memoria, que le llevó tras sí la voluntad y despertó en él un deseo de gozarla a pesar de todos los inconvenientes que sucederle pudiesen. Y en un instante comunicó su pensamiento con sus camaradas, y en otro instante se resolvieron de volver y robarla, por dar gusto a Rodolfo; que siempre los ricos que dan en liberales hallan quien canonicen sus desafueros y califique por buenos sus malos gustos. Y así, el nacer el mal propósito, el comunicarle y el aprobarle y el determinarse de robar a Leocadia y el robarla, casi todo fue en un punto.

Pusiéronse los pañizuelos en los rostros, y, desenvainadas las espadas, volvieron, y a pocos pasos alcanzaron a los que no habían acabado de dar gracias a Dios, que de las manos de aquellos atrevidos les había librado.

Arremetió Rodolfo con Leocadia, y, cogiéndola en brazos, dio a huir con ella, la cual no tuvo fuerzas para defenderse, y el sobresalto le quitó la voz para quejarse, y aun la luz de los ojos, pues, desmayada y sin sentido, ni vio quién la llevaba, ni adónde la llevaban. Dio voces su padre, gritó su madre, lloró su hermanico, arañóse la criada; pero ni las voces fueron oídas, ni los gritos escuchados, ni movió a compasión el llanto, ni los araños fueron de provecho alguno, porque todo lo cubría la soledad del lugar y el callado silencio de la noche, y las crueles entrañas de los malhechores.

Finalmente, alegres se fueron los unos y tristes se quedaron los otros. Rodolfo llegó a su casa sin impedimento alguno, y los padres de Leocadia llegaron a la suya lastimados, afligidos y desesperados: ciegos, sin los ojos de su hija, que eran la lumbré de los suyos; solos, porque Leocadia era su dulce y agradable compañía; confusos, sin saber si sería bien dar noticia de su desgracia a la justicia, temerosos no fuesen ellos el principal instrumento de publicar su deshonor. Veíanse necesitados de favor, como hidalgos pobres. No sabían de quién quejarse, sino de su corta ventura. Rodolfo, en tanto, sagaz y astuto, tenía ya en su casa y en su aposento a Leocadia; a la cual, puesto que sintió que iba desmayada cuando la llevaba, la había cubierto los ojos con un pañuelo, porque no viese las calles por donde la llevaba, ni la casa ni el aposento donde estaba; en el cual, sin ser visto de nadie, a causa que él tenía un cuarto aparte en la casa de su padre, que aún vivía, y tenía de su estancia la llave y las de todo el cuarto (inadvertencia de padres que quieren tener sus hijos recogidos), antes que de su desmayo volviese Leocadia, había cumplido su deseo Rodolfo; que los ímpetus no castos de la mocedad pocas veces o ninguna reparan en comodidades y requisitos que más los inciten y levanten. Ciego de la luz del entendimiento, a oscuras robó la mejor prenda de Leocadia; y, como los pecados de la sensualidad por la mayor parte no tiran más allá la barra del término del cumplimiento dellos, quisiera luego Rodolfo que de allí se desapareciera Leocadia, y le vino a la imaginación de ponella en la calle, así desmayada como estaba. Y, yéndolo a poner en obra, sintió que volvía en sí, diciendo:

-¿Adónde estoy, desdichada? ¿Qué oscuridad es ésta, qué tinieblas me rodean? ¿Estoy en el limbo de mi inocencia o en el infierno de mis culpas? ¡Jesús!, ¿quién me toca? ¿Yo en cama, yo lastimada? ¿Escúchasme, madre y señora mía? ¿Oyesme, querido padre? ¡Ay sin ventura de mí!, que bien advierto que mis padres no me escuchan y que mis enemigos me tocan; venturosa sería yo si esta oscuridad durase para siempre, sin que mis ojos volviesen a ver la luz del mundo, y que este lugar donde ahora estoy, cualquiera que él se fuese, sirviese de sepultura a mi honra, pues es mejor la deshonor que se ignora que la honra que está puesta en opinión de las gentes. Ya me acuerdo (¡que nunca yo me acordara!) que ha poco que venía en la compañía de mis padres; ya me acuerdo que me saltaron, ya me imagino y veo que no es bien que me vean las gentes. ¡Oh tú, cualquiera que seas, que aquí estás conmigo (y en esto tenía asido de las manos a Rodolfo), si es que tu alma admite género de ruego alguno, te ruego que, ya que has triunfado de mi fama, triunfes también de mi vida! ¡Quítamela al momento, que no es bien que la tenga la que no tiene honra! ¡Mira que el rigor de la crueldad que has usado conmigo en ofenderme se templará con la piedad que usarás en matarme; y así, en un mismo punto, vendrás a ser cruel y piadoso!

Confuso dejaron las razones de Leocadia a Rodolfo; y, como mozo poco experimentado, ni sabía qué decir ni qué hacer, cuyo silencio admiraba más a Leocadia, la cual con las manos procuraba desengañarse si era fantasma o sombra la que con ella estaba. Pero, como tocaba cuerpo y se le acordaba de la fuerza que se le había hecho, viniendo con sus padres, caía en la verdad del cuento de su desgracia. Y con este pensamiento tornó a añudar las razones que los muchos sollozos y suspiros habían interrumpido, diciendo:

-Atrevido mancebo, que de poca edad hacen tus hechos que te juzgue, yo te perdono la ofensa que me has hecho con sólo que me prometas y jures que, como la has cubierto con esta escuridad, la cubrirás con perpetuo silencio sin decirla a nadie. Poca recompensa te pido de tan grande agravio, pero para mí será la mayor que yo sabré pedirte ni tú querrás darme. Advierte en que yo nunca he visto tu rostro, ni quiero vértelo; porque, ya que se me acuerde de mi ofensa, no quiero acordarme de mi ofensor ni guardar en la memoria la imagen del autor de mi daño. Entre mí y el cielo pasarán mis quejas, sin querer que las oiga el mundo, el cual no juzga por los sucesos las cosas, sino conforme a él se le asienta en la estimación. No sé cómo te digo estas verdades, que se suelen fundar en la experiencia de muchos casos y en el discurso de muchos años, no llegando los míos a diez y siete; por do me doy a entender que el dolor de una misma manera ata y desata la lengua del afligido: unas veces exagerando su mal, para que se le crean, otras veces no diciéndole, porque no se le remedien. De cualquiera manera, que yo calle o hable, creo que he de moverte a que me creas o que me remedies, pues el no creerme será ignorancia, y el no remediarme, imposible de tener algún alivio. No quiero desesperarme, porque te costará poco el dármele; y es éste: mira, no aguardes ni confíes que el discurso del tiempo temple la justa saña que contra ti tengo, ni quieras amontonar los agravios: mientras menos me gozares, y habiéndome ya gozado, menos se encenderán tus malos deseos. Haz cuenta que me ofendiste por accidente, sin dar lugar a ningún buen discurso; yo la haré de que no nací en el mundo, o que si nací, fue para ser desdichada. Ponme luego en la calle, o a lo menos junto a la iglesia mayor, porque desde allí bien sabré volverme a mi casa; pero también has de jurar de no seguirme, ni saberla, ni preguntarme el nombre de mis padres, ni el mío, ni de mis parientes, que, a ser tan ricos como nobles, no fueran en mí tan desdichados. Respóndeme a esto; y si temes que te pueda conocer en la habla, hágote saber que, fuera de mi padre y de mi confesor, no he hablado con hombre alguno en mi vida, y a pocos he oído hablar con tanta comunicación que pueda distinguirles por el sonido de la habla.

La respuesta que dio Rodolfo a las discretas razones de la lastimada Leocadia no fue otra que abrazarla, dando muestras que quería volver a confirmar en él su gusto y en ella su deshonra. Lo cual visto por Leocadia, con más fuerzas de las que su tierna edad prometían, se defendió con los pies, con las manos, con los dientes y con la lengua, diciéndole:

-Haz cuenta, traidor y desalmado hombre, quienquiera que seas, que los despojos que de mí has llevado son los que podiste tomar de un tronco o de una columna sin sentido, cuyo vencimiento y triunfo ha de redundar en tu infamia y menosprecio. Pero el que ahora pretendes no le has de alcanzar sino con mi muerte. Desmayada me pisaste y aniquilaste; mas, ahora que tengo bríos, antes podrás matarme que vencerme: que si ahora, despierta, sin resistencia concediese con tu abominable gusto, podrías imaginar que mi desmayo fue fingido cuando te atreviste a destruirme.

Finalmente, tan gallarda y porfiadamente se resistió Leocadia, que las fuerzas y los deseos de Rodolfo se enflaquecieron; y, como la insolencia que con Leocadia había usado no tuvo otro principio que de un ímpetu lascivo, del cual nunca nace el verdadero amor, que permanece, en lugar del ímpetu, que se pasa, queda, si no el arrepentimiento, a lo menos una tibia voluntad de segundalle. Frío, pues, y cansado Rodolfo, sin hablar palabra alguna, dejó a Leocadia en su cama y en su casa; y, cerrando el aposento, se fue a buscar a sus camaradas para aconsejarse con ellos de lo que hacer debía.

Sintió Leocadia que quedaba sola y encerrada; y, levantándose del lecho, anduvo todo el aposento, tentando las paredes con las manos, por ver si hallaba puerta por do irse o ventana por do arrojar. Halló la puerta, pero bien cerrada, y topó una ventana que pudo abrir, por donde entró el resplandor de la luna, tan claro, que pudo distinguir Leocadia los colores de unos damascos que el aposento adornaban. Vio que era dorada la cama, y tan ricamente compuesta que más parecía lecho de príncipe que de algún particular caballero. Contó las sillas y los escritorios; notó la parte donde la puerta estaba, y, aunque vio pendientes de las paredes algunas tablas, no pudo alcanzar a ver las pinturas que contenían. La ventana era grande, guarnecida y guardada de una gruesa reja; la vista caía a un jardín que también se cerraba con paredes altas; dificultades que se opusieron a la intención que de arrojar a la calle tenía. Todo lo que vio y notó de la capacidad y ricos adornos de aquella estancia le dio a entender que el dueño della debía de ser hombre principal y rico, y no comoquiera, sino aventajadamente. En un escritorio, que estaba junto a la ventana, vio un crucifijo pequeño, todo de plata, el cual tomó y se le puso en la manga de la ropa, no por devoción ni por hurto, sino llevada de un discreto designio suyo. Hecho esto, cerró la ventana como antes estaba y volvióse al lecho, esperando qué fin tendría el mal principio de su suceso.

No habría pasado, a su parecer, media hora, cuando sintió abrir la puerta del aposento y que a ella se llegó una persona; y, sin hablarle palabra, con un pañuelo le vendó los ojos, y tomándola del brazo la sacó fuera de la estancia, y sintió que volvía a cerrar la puerta. Esta persona era Rodolfo, el cual, aunque había ido a buscar a sus camaradas, no quiso hallarlas, pareciéndole que no le estaba bien hacer testigos de lo que con aquella doncella había pasado; antes, se resolvió en decirles que, arrepentido del mal hecho y movido de sus lágrimas, la había dejado en la mitad del camino. Con este acuerdo volvió tan presto a poner a Leocadia junto a la iglesia mayor, como ella se lo había pedido, antes que amaneciese y el día le estorbase de echalla, y le forzase a tenerla en su aposento hasta la noche venidera, en el cual espacio de tiempo ni él quería volver a usar de sus fuerzas ni dar ocasión a ser conocido. Llevóla, pues, hasta la plaza que llaman de Ayuntamiento; y allí, en voz trocada y en lengua medio portuguesa y castellana, le dijo que seguramente podía irse a su casa, porque de nadie sería seguida; y, antes que ella tuviese lugar de quitarse el pañuelo, ya él se había puesto en parte donde no pudiese ser visto.

Quedó sola Leocadia, quitóse la venda, reconoció el lugar donde la dejaron. Miró a todas partes, no vio a persona; pero, sospechosa que desde lejos la siguiesen, a cada paso se detenía, dándolos hacia su casa, que no muy lejos de allí estaba. Y, por desmentir las espías, si acaso la seguían, se entró en una casa que halló abierta, y de allí a poco se fue a la suya, donde halló a sus padres atónitos y sin desnudarse, y aun sin tener pensamiento de tomar descanso alguno.

Cuando la vieron, corrieron a ella con brazos abiertos, y con lágrimas en los ojos la recibieron. Leocadia, llena de sobresalto y alboroto, hizo a sus padres que se tirasen con ella aparte, como lo hicieron; y allí, en breves palabras, les dio cuenta de todo su desastrado suceso, con todas las circunstancias dél y de la ninguna noticia que traía del salteador y robador de su honra. Díjoles lo que había visto en el teatro donde se representó la tragedia de su desventura: la ventana, el jardín, la reja, los escritorios, la cama, los damascos; y a lo último les mostró el crucifijo que había traído, ante cuya imagen se renovaron las lágrimas, se hicieron deprecaciones, se pidieron venganzas y desearon milagrosos castigos. Dijo ansimismo que, aunque ella no deseaba venir en conocimiento de su ofensor, que si a sus padres les parecía ser bien conocelle, que por medio de aquella imagen podrían, haciendo que los sacristanes dijesen en los púlpitos de todas las parroquias de la ciudad, que el que hubiese perdido tal imagen la hallaría en poder del religioso que ellos señalasen; y que ansí, sabiendo el dueño de la imagen, se sabría la casa y aun la persona de su enemigo.

A esto replicó el padre:

-Bien habías dicho, hija, si la malicia ordinaria no se opusiera a tu discreto discurso, pues está claro que esta imagen hoy, en este día, se ha de echar menos en el aposento que dices, y el dueño della ha de tener por cierto que la persona que con él estuvo se la llevó; y, de llegar a su noticia que la tiene algún religioso, antes ha de servir de conocer quién se la dio al tal que la tiene, que no de declarar el dueño que la perdió, porque puede hacer que venga por ella otro a quien el dueño haya dado las señas. Y, siendo esto ansí, antes quedaremos confusos que informados; puesto que podamos usar del mismo artificio que sospechamos, dándola al religioso por tercera persona. Lo que has de hacer, hija, es guardarla y encomendarte a ella; que, pues ella fue testigo de tu desgracia, permitirá que haya juez que vuelva por tu justicia. Y advierte, hija, que más lastima una onza de deshonra pública que una arroba de infamia secreta. Y, pues puedes vivir honrada con Dios en público, no te pene de estar deshonrada contigo en secreto: la verdadera deshonra está en el pecado, y la verdadera honra en la virtud; con el dicho, con el deseo y con la obra se ofende a Dios; y, pues tú, ni en dicho, ni en pensamiento, ni en hecho le has ofendido, tente por honrada, que yo por tal te tendré, sin que jamás te mire sino como verdadero padre tuyo.

Con estas prudentes razones consoló su padre a Leocadia, y, abrazándola de nuevo su madre, procuró también consolarla. Ella gimió y lloró de nuevo, y se redujo a cubrir la cabeza, como dicen, y a vivir recogidamente debajo del amparo de sus padres, con vestido tan honesto como pobre.

Rodolfo, en tanto, vuelto a su casa, echando menos la imagen del crucifijo, imaginó quién podía haberla llevado; pero no se le dio nada, y, como rico, no hizo cuenta dello, ni sus padres se la pidieron cuando de allí a tres días, que él se partió a Italia, entregó por cuenta a una camarera de su madre todo lo que en el aposento dejaba.

Muchos días había que tenía Rodolfo determinado de pasar a Italia; y su padre, que había estado en ella, se lo persuadía, diciéndole que no eran caballeros los que solamente lo eran en su patria, que era menester serlo también en las ajenas. Por estas y otras razones, se dispuso la voluntad de Rodolfo de cumplir la de su padre, el cual le dio crédito de muchos dineros para Barcelona, Génova, Roma y Nápoles; y él, con dos de sus camaradas, se partió luego, goloso de lo que había oído decir a algunos soldados de la abundancia de las hosterías de Italia y Francia, y de la libertad que en los alojamientos tenían los españoles. Sonábale bien aquel Eco li buoni polastri, picioni, presuto e salcie, con otros nombres deste jaez, de quien los soldados se acuerdan cuando de aquellas partes vienen a éstas y pasan por la estrechez e incomodidades de las ventas y mesones de España. Finalmente, él se fue con tan poca memoria de lo que con Leocadia le había sucedido, como si nunca hubiera pasado.

Ella, en este entretanto, pasaba la vida en casa de sus padres con el recogimiento posible, sin dejar verse de persona alguna, temerosa que su desgracia se la habían de leer en la frente. Pero a pocos meses vio serle forzoso hacer por fuerza lo que hasta allí de grado hacía. Vio que le convenía vivir retirada y escondida, porque se sintió preñada: suceso por el cual las en algún tanto olvidadas lágrimas volvieron a sus ojos, y los suspiros y lamentos comenzaron de nuevo a herir los vientos, sin ser parte la discreción de su buena madre a consolalla. Voló el tiempo, y llegóse el punto del parto, y con tanto secreto, que aun no se osó fiar de la partera; usurpando este oficio la madre, dio a la luz del mundo un niño de los hermosos que pudieran imaginarse. Con el mismo recato y secreto que había nacido, le llevaron a una aldea, donde se crió cuatro años, al cabo de los cuales, con nombre de sobrino, le trujo su abuela a su casa, donde se criaba, si no muy rica, a lo menos muy virtuosamente.

Era el niño (a quien pusieron nombre Luis, por llamarse así su abuelo), de rostro hermoso, de condición mansa, de ingenio agudo, y, en todas las acciones que en aquella edad tierna podía hacer, daba señales de ser de algún noble padre engendrado; y de tal manera su gracia, belleza y discreción enamoraron a sus abuelos, que vinieron a tener por dicha la desdicha de su hija por haberles dado tal nieto. Cuando iba por la calle, llovían sobre él millares de bendiciones: unos bendecían su hermosura, otros la madre que lo había parido, éstos el padre que le engendró, aquéllos a quien tan bien criado le criaba. Con este aplauso de los que le conocían y no conocían, llegó el niño a la edad de siete años, en la cual ya sabía leer latín y romance y escribir formada y muy buena letra; porque la intención de sus abuelos era hacerle virtuoso y sabio, ya que no le podían hacer rico; como si la sabiduría y la virtud no fuesen las riquezas sobre quien no tienen jurisdicción los ladrones, ni la que llaman Fortuna.

Sucedió, pues, que un día que el niño fue con un recaudo de su abuela a una parienta suya, acertó a pasar por una calle donde había carrera de caballeros. Púsose a mirar, y, por mejorarse de puesto, pasó de una parte a otra, a tiempo que no pudo huir de ser atropellado de un caballo, a cuyo dueño no fue posible detenerle en la furia de su carrera. Pasó por encima dél, y dejóle como muerto, tendido en el suelo, derramando mucha sangre de la cabeza. Apenas esto hubo sucedido, cuando un caballero anciano que estaba mirando la carrera, con no vista ligereza se arrojó de su caballo y fue donde estaba el niño; y, quitándole de los brazos de uno que ya le tenía, le puso en los suyos, y, sin tener cuenta con sus canas ni con su autoridad, que era mucha, a paso largo se fue a su casa, ordenando a sus criados que le dejasen y fuesen a buscar un cirujano que al niño curase. Muchos caballeros le siguieron, lastimados de la desgracia de tan hermoso niño, porque luego salió la voz que el atropellado era Luisico, el sobrino del tal caballero, nombrando a su abuelo. Esta voz corrió de boca en boca hasta que llegó a los oídos de sus abuelos y de su encubierta madre; los cuales, certificados bien del caso, como desatinados y locos, salieron a buscar a su querido; y por ser tan conocido y tan principal el caballero que le había llevado, muchos de los que encontraron les dijeron su casa, a la cual llegaron a tiempo que ya estaba el niño en poder del cirujano.

El caballero y su mujer, dueños de la casa, pidieron a los que pensaron ser sus padres que no llorasen ni alzasen la voz a quejarse, porque no le sería al niño de ningún provecho. El cirujano, que era famoso, habiéndole curado con grandísimo tiento y maestría, dijo que no era tan mortal la herida como él al principio había temido. En la mitad de la cura volvió Luis a su acuerdo, que hasta allí había estado sin él, y alegróse en ver a sus tíos, los cuales le preguntaron llorando que cómo se sentía. Respondió que bueno, sino que le dolía mucho el cuerpo y la cabeza. Mandó el médico que no hablasen con él, sino que le dejasen reposar. Hízose así, y su abuelo comenzó a agradecer al señor de la casa la gran caridad que con su sobrino había usado. A lo cual respondió el caballero que no tenía qué agradecerle, porque le hacía saber que, cuando vio al niño caído y atropellado, le pareció que había visto el rostro de un hijo suyo, a quien él quería tiernamente, y que esto le movió a tomarle en sus brazos y traerle a su casa, donde estaría todo el tiempo que la cura durase, con el regalo que fuese posible y necesario. Su mujer, que era una noble señora, dijo lo mismo y hizo aun más encarecidas promesas.

Admirados quedaron de tanta cristiandad los abuelos, pero la madre quedó más admirada; porque, habiendo con las nuevas del cirujano sosegádose algún tanto su alborotado espíritu, miró atentamente el aposento donde su hijo estaba, y claramente, por muchas señales, conoció que aquella era la estancia donde se había dado fin a su honra y principio a su desventura; y, aunque no estaba adornada de los damascos que entonces tenía, conoció la disposición della, vio la ventana de la reja que caía al jardín; y, por estar cerrada a causa del herido, preguntó si aquella ventana respondía a algún jardín, y fuele respondido que sí; pero lo que más conoció fue que aquélla era la misma cama que tenía por tumba de su sepultura; y más, que el propio escritorio, sobre el cual estaba la imagen que había traído, se estaba en el mismo lugar.

Finalmente, sacaron a luz la verdad de todas sus sospechas los escalones, que ella había contado cuando la sacaron del aposento tapados los ojos (digo los escalones que había desde allí a la calle, que con advertencia discreta contó). Y, cuando volvió a su casa, dejando a su hijo, los volvió a contar y halló cabal el número. Y, confiriendo unas señales con otras, de todo punto certificó por verdadera su imaginación, de la cual dio por estenso cuenta a su madre, que, como discreta, se informó si el caballero donde su nieto estaba había tenido o tenía algún hijo. Y halló que el que llamamos Rodolfo lo era, y que estaba en Italia; y, tanteando el tiempo que le dijeron que había faltado de España, vio que eran los mismos siete años que el nieto tenía.

Dio aviso de todo esto a su marido, y entre los dos y su hija acordaron de esperar lo que Dios hacía del herido, el cual dentro de quince días estuvo fuera de peligro y a los treinta se levantó; en todo el cual tiempo fue visitado de la madre y de la abuela, y regalado de los dueños de la casa como si fuera su mismo hijo. Y algunas veces, hablando con Leocadia doña Estefanía, que así se llamaba la mujer del caballero, le decía que aquel niño parecía tanto a un hijo suyo que estaba en Italia, que ninguna vez le miraba que no le pareciese ver a su hijo delante. Destas razones tomó ocasión de decirle una vez, que se halló sola con ella, las que con acuerdo de sus padres había determinado de decille, que fueron éstas o otras semejantes:

-El día, señora, que mis padres oyeron decir que su sobrino estaba tan malparado, creyeron y pensaron que se les había cerrado el cielo y caído todo el mundo auestas. Imaginaron que ya les faltaba la lumbre de sus ojos y el báculo de su vejez, faltándoles este sobrino, a quien ellos quieren con amor de tal manera, que con muchas ventajas excede al que suelen tener otros padres a sus hijos. Mas, como decirse suele, que cuando Dios da la llaga da la medicina, la halló el niño en esta casa, y yo en ella el acuerdo de unas memorias que no las podré olvidar mientras la vida me durare. Yo, señora, soy noble porque mis padres lo son y lo han sido todos mis antepasados, que, con una medianía de los bienes de fortuna, han sustentado su honra felizmente dondequiera que han vivido.

Admirada y suspensa estaba doña Estefanía, escuchando las razones de Leocadia, y no podía creer, aunque lo veía, que tanta discreción pudiese encerrarse en tan pocos años, puesto que, a su parecer, la juzgaba por de veinte, poco más a menos. Y, sin decirle ni replicarle palabra, esperó todas las que quiso decirle, que fueron aquellas que bastaron para contarle la travesura de su hijo, la deshonra suya, el robo, el cubrirle los ojos, el traerla a aquel aposento, las señales en que había conocido ser aquel mismo que sospechaba. Para cuya confirmación sacó del pecho la imagen del crucifijo que había llevado, a quien dijo:

-Tú, Señor, que fuiste testigo de la fuerza que se me hizo, sé juez de la enmienda que se me debe hacer. De encima de aquel escritorio te llevé con propósito de acordarte siempre mi agravio, no para pedirte venganza dél, que no la pretendo, sino para rogarte me diceses algún consuelo con que llevar en paciencia mi desgracia.

»Este niño, señora, con quien habéis mostrado el extremo de vuestra caridad, es vuestro verdadero nieto. Permisi6n fue del cielo el haberle atropellado, para que, trayéndole a vuestra casa, hallase yo en ella, como espero que he de hallar, si no el remedio que mejor convenga, y cuando no con mi desventura, a lo menos el medio con que pueda sobrellevalla.

Diciendo esto, abrazada con el crucifijo, cayó desmayada en los brazos de Estefanía, la cual, en fin, como mujer y noble, en quien la compasi6n y misericordia suele ser tan natural como la crueldad en el hombre, apenas vio el desmayo de Leocadia, cuando juntó su rostro con el suyo, derramando sobre él tantas lágrimas que no fue menester esparcirle otra agua encima para que Leocadia en sí volviese.

Estando las dos desta manera, acertó a entrar el caballero marido de Estefanía, que traía a Luisico de la mano; y, viendo el llanto de Estefanía y el desmayo de Leocadia, preguntó a gran priesa le dijesen la causa de do procedía. El niño abrazaba a su madre por su prima y a su abuela por su bienhechora, y asimismo preguntaba por qué lloraban.

-Grandes cosas, señor, hay que deciros -respondió Estefanía a su marido-, cuyo remate se acabará con deciros que hagáis cuenta que esta desmayada es hija vuestra y este niño vuestro nieto. Esta verdad que os digo me ha dicho esta niña, y la ha confirmado y confirma el rostro deste niño, en el cual entrambos habemos visto el de nuestro hijo.

En esto volvió en sí Leocadia, y, abrazada del crucifijo, parecía estar convertida en un mar de llanto. Todo lo cual tenía puesto en gran confusi6n al caballero, de la cual salió contándole su mujer todo aquello que Leocadia le había contado; y él lo creyó, por divina permisi6n del cielo, como si con muchos y verdaderos testigos se lo hubieran probado. Consoló y abrazó a Leocadia, besó a su nieto, y aquel mismo día despacharon un correo a Nápoles, avisando a su hijo se viniese luego, porque le tenían concertado casamiento con una mujer hermosa sobremanera y tal cual para él convenía. No consintieron que Leocadia ni su hijo volviesen más a la casa de sus padres, los cuales, contentísimos del buen suceso de su hija, daban sin cesar infinitas gracias a Dios por ello.

Llegó el correo a Nápoles, y Rodolfo, con la golosina de gozar tan hermosa mujer como su padre le significaba, de allí a dos días que recibió la carta, ofreciéndosele ocasión de cuatro galeras que estaban a punto de venir a España, se embarcó en ellas con sus dos camaradas, que aún no le habían dejado, y con próspero suceso en doce días llegó a Barcelona, y de allí, por la posta, en otros siete se puso en Toledo y entró en casa de su padre, tan galán y tan bizarro, que los extremos de la gala y de la bizarría estaban en él todos juntos.

Alegráronse sus padres con la salud y bienvenida de su hijo. Suspendióse Leocadia, que de parte escondida le miraba, por no salir de la traza y orden que doña Estefanía le había dado. Las camaradas de Rodolfo quisieran irse a sus casas luego, pero no lo consintió Estefanía por haberlos menester para su designio. Estaba cerca la noche cuando Rodolfo llegó, y, en tanto que se aderezaba la cena, Estefanía llamó aparte las camaradas de su hijo, creyendo, sin duda alguna, que ellos debían de ser los dos de los tres que Leocadia había dicho que iban con Rodolfo la noche que la robaron, y con grandes ruegos les pidió le dijese si se acordaban que su hijo había robado a una mujer tal noche, tanto años había; porque el saber la verdad desto importaba la honra y el sosiego de todos sus parientes. Y con tales y tantos encarecimientos se lo supo rogar, y de tal manera les asegurar que de descubrir este robo no les podía suceder daño alguno, que ellos tuvieron por bien de confesar ser verdad que una noche de verano, yendo ellos dos y otro amigo con Rodolfo, robaron en la misma que ella señalaba a una muchacha, y que Rodolfo se había venido con ella, mientras ellos detenían a la gente de su familia, que con voces la querían defender, y que otro día les había dicho Rodolfo que la había llevado a su casa; y sólo esto era lo que podían responder a lo que les preguntaban.

La confesión destos dos fue echar la llave a todas las dudas que en tal caso le podían ofrecer; y así, determinó de llevar al cabo su buen pensamiento, que fue éste: poco antes que se sentasen a cenar, se entró en un aposento a solas su madre con Rodolfo, y, poniéndole un retrato en las manos, le dijo:

-Yo quiero, Rodolfo hijo, darte una gustosa cena con mostrarte a tu esposa: éste es su verdadero retrato, pero quíerote advertir que lo que le falta de belleza le sobra de virtud; es noble y discreta y medianamente rica, y, pues tu padre y yo te la hemos escogido, asegúrate que es la que te conviene.

Atentamente miró Rodolfo el retrato, y dijo:

-Si los pintores, que ordinariamente suelen ser pródigos de la hermosura con los rostros que retratan, lo han sido también con éste, sin duda creo que el original debe de ser la misma fealdad. A la fe, señora y madre mía, justo es y bueno que los hijos obedezcan a sus padres en cuanto les mandaren; pero también es conveniente, y mejor, que los padres den a sus hijos el estado de que más gustaren. Y, pues el del matrimonio es nudo que no le desata sino la muerte, bien será que sus lazos sean iguales y de unos mismos hilos fabricados. La virtud, la nobleza, la discreción y los bienes de la fortuna bien pueden alegrar el entendimiento de aquel a quien le cupieron en suerte con su esposa; pero que la fealdad della alegre los ojos del esposo, paréceme imposible. Mozo soy, pero bien se me entiende que se compadece con el sacramento del matrimonio el justo y debido deleite que los casados gozan, y que si él falta, cojea el matrimonio y desdice de su segunda intención. Pues pensar que un rostro feo, que se ha de tener a todas horas delante de los ojos, en la sala, en la mesa y en la cama, pueda deleitar, otra vez digo que lo tengo por casi imposible. Por vida de vuesa merced, madre mía, que me dé compañera que me entretenga y no enfade; porque, sin torcer a una o a otra parte, igualmente y por camino derecho llevemos ambos a dos el yugo donde el cielo nos pusiere. Si esta señora es noble, discreta y rica, como vuesa merced dice, no le faltará esposo que sea de diferente humor que el mío: unos hay que buscan nobleza, otros discreción, otros dineros y otros hermosura; y yo soy destos últimos. Porque la nobleza, gracias al cielo y a mis pasados y a mis padres, que me la dejaron por herencia; discreción, como una mujer no sea necia, tonta o boba, bástale que ni por aguda despunte ni por boba no aproveche; de las riquezas, también las de mis padres me hacen no estar temeroso de venir a ser pobre. La hermosura busco, la belleza quiero, no con otra dote que con la de la honestidad y buenas costumbres; que si esto trae mi esposa, yo serviré a Dios con gusto y daré buena vejez a mis padres.

Contentísima quedó su madre de las razones de Rodolfo, por haber conocido por ellas que iba saliendo bien con su designio. Respondióle que ella procuraría casarle conforme su deseo, que no tuviese pena alguna, que era fácil deshacerse los conciertos que de casarle con aquella señora estaban hechos. Agradecióselo Rodolfo, y, por ser llegada la hora de cenar, se fueron a la mesa. Y, habiéndose ya sentado a ella el padre y la madre, Rodolfo y sus dos camaradas, dijo doña Estefanía al descuido:

-¡Pecadora de mí, y qué bien que trato a mi huésped! Andad vos -dijo a un criado-, decid a la señora doña Leocadia que, sin entrar en cuentas con su mucha honestidad, nos venga a honrar esta mesa, que los que a ella están todos son mis hijos y sus servidores.

Todo esto era traza suya, y de todo lo que había de hacer estaba avisada y advertida Leocadia. Poco tardó en salir Leocadia y dar de sí la improvisa y más hermosa muestra que pudo dar jamás compuesta y natural hermosura.

Venía vestida, por ser invierno, de una saya entera de terciopelo negro, llovida de botones de oro y perlas, cintura y collar de diamantes. Sus mismos cabellos, que eran luengos y no demasadamente rubios, le servían de adorno y tocas, cuya invención de lazos y rizos y vislumbres de diamantes que con ellas se entretejían, turbaban la luz de los ojos que los miraban. Era Leocadia de gentil disposición y brío; traía de la mano a su hijo, y delante della venían dos doncellas, alumbrándola con dos velas de cera en dos candeleros de plata.

Levantáronse todos a hacerla reverencia, como si fuera a alguna cosa del cielo que allí milagrosamente se había aparecido. Ninguno de los que allí estaban embebecidos mirándola parece que, de atónitos, no acertaron a decirle palabra. Leocadia, con airosa gracia y discreta crianza, se humilló a todos; y, tomándola de la mano Estefanía la sentó junto a sí, frontero de Rodolfo. Al niño sentaron junto a su abuelo.

Rodolfo, que desde más cerca miraba la incomparable belleza de Leocadia, decía entre sí: «Si la mitad desta hermosura tuviera la que mi madre me tiene escogida por esposa, tuviérame yo por el más dichoso hombre del mundo. ¡Válame Dios! ¿Qué es esto que veo? ¿Es por ventura algún ángel humano el que estoy mirando?» Y en esto, se le iba entrando por los ojos a tomar posesión de su alma la hermosa imagen de Leocadia, la cual, en tanto que la cena venía, viendo también tan cerca de sí al que ya quería más que a la luz de los ojos, con que alguna vez a hurto le miraba, comenzó a revolver en su imaginación lo que con Rodolfo había pasado. Comenzaron a enflaquecerse en su alma las esperanzas que de ser su esposo su madre le había dado, temiendo que a la cortedad de su ventura habían de corresponder las promesas de su madre. Consideraba cuán cerca estaba de ser dichosa o sin dicha para siempre. Y fue la consideración tan intensa y los pensamientos tan revueltos, que le apretaron el corazón de manera que comenzó a sudar y a perderse de color en un punto, sobreviniéndole un desmayo que le forzó a reclinar la cabeza en los brazos de doña Estefanía, que, como ansí la vio, con turbación la recibió en ellos.

Sobresaltáronse todos, y, dejando la mesa, acudieron a remediarla. Pero el que dio más muestras de sentirlo fue Rodolfo, pues por llegar presto a ella tropezó y cayó dos veces. Ni por desabrocharla ni echarla agua en el rostro volvía en sí; antes, el levantado pecho y el pulso, que no se le hallaban, iban dando precisas señales de su muerte; y las criadas y criados de casa, como menos considerados, dieron voces y la publicaron por muerta. Estas amargas nuevas llegaron a los oídos de los padres de Leocadia, que para más gustosa ocasión los tenía doña Estefanía escondidos. Los cuales, con el cura de la parroquia, que ansimismo con ellos estaba, rompiendo el orden de Estefanía, salieron a la sala.

Llegó el cura presto, por ver si por algunas señales daba indicios de arrepentirse de sus pecados, para absolverla dellos; y donde pensó hallar un desmayado halló dos, porque ya estaba Rodolfo, puesto el rostro sobre el pecho de Leocadia. Diole su madre lugar que a ella llegase, como a cosa que había de ser suya; pero, cuando vio que también estaba sin sentido, estuvo a pique de perder el suyo, y le perdiera si no viera que Rodolfo tornaba en sí, como volvió, corrido de que le hubiesen visto hacer tan estremados estremos.

Pero su madre, casi como adivina de lo que su hijo sentía, le dijo:

-No te corras, hijo, de los estremos que has hecho, sino córrete de los que no hicieres cuando sepas lo que no quiero tenerte más encubierto, puesto que pensaba dejarlo hasta más alegre coyuntura. Has de saber, hijo de mi alma, que esta desmayada que en los brazos tengo es tu verdadera esposa: llamo verdadera porque yo y tu padre te la teníamos escogida, que la del retrato es falsa.

Cuando esto oyó Rodolfo, llevado de su amoroso y encendido deseo, y quitándole el nombre de esposo todos los estorbos que la honestidad y decencia del lugar le podían poner, se abalanzó al rostro de Leocadia, y, juntando su boca con la della, estaba como esperando que se le saliese el alma para darle acogida en la suya. Pero, cuando más las lágrimas de todos por lástima crecían, y por dolor las voces se aumentaban, y los cabellos y barbas de la madre y padre de Leocadia arrancados venían a menos, y los gritos de su hijo penetraban los cielos, volvió en sí Leocadia, y con su vuelta volvió la alegría y el contento que de los pechos de los circunstantes se había ausentado.

Hallóse Leocadia entre los brazos de Rodolfo, y quisiera con honesta fuerza desasirse dellos; pero él le dijo:

-No, señora, no ha de ser así. No es bien que punéis por apartaros de los brazos de aquel que os tiene en el alma.

A esta razón acabó de todo en todo de cobrar Leocadia sus sentidos, y acabó doña Estefanía de no llevar más adelante su determinación primera, diciendo al cura que luego luego desposase a su hijo con Leocadia. Él lo hizo así, que por haber sucedido este caso en tiempo cuando con sola la voluntad de los contrayentes, sin las diligencias y prevenciones justas y santas que ahora se usan, quedaba hecho el matrimonio, no hubo dificultad que impidiese el desposorio. El cual hecho, déjese a otra pluma y a otro ingenio más delicado que el mío el contar la alegría universal de todos los que en él se hallaron: los abrazos que los padres de Leocadia dieron a Rodolfo, las gracias que dieron al cielo y a sus padres, los ofrecimientos de las partes, la admiración de las camaradas de Rodolfo, que tan impensadamente vieron la misma noche de su llegada tan hermoso desposorio, y más cuando supieron, por contarle delante de todos doña Estefanía, que Leocadia era la doncella que en su compañía su hijo había robado, de que no menos suspenso quedó Rodolfo. Y, por certificarse más de aquella verdad, preguntó a Leocadia le dijese alguna señal por donde viniese en conocimiento entero de lo que no dudaba, por parecerles que sus padres lo tendrían bien averiguado. Ella respondió:

-Cuando yo recordé y volví en mí de otro desmayo, me hallé, señor, en vuestros brazos sin honra; pero yo lo doy por bien empleado, pues, al volver del que ahora he tenido, ansimismo me hallé en los brazos de entonces, pero honrada. Y si esta señal no basta, baste la de una imagen de un crucifijo que nadie os la pudo hurtar sino yo, si es que por la mañana le echastes menos y si es el mismo que tiene mi señora.

-Vos lo sois de mi alma, y lo seréis los años que Dios ordenare, bien mío.

Y, abrazándola de nuevo, de nuevo volvieron las bendiciones y parabienes que les dieron.

Vino la cena, y vinieron músicos que para esto estaban prevenidos. Viose Rodolfo a sí mismo en el espejo del rostro de su hijo; lloraron sus cuatro abuelos de gusto; no quedó rincón en toda la casa que no fuese visitado del júbilo, del contento y de la alegría. Y, aunque la noche volaba con sus ligeras y negras alas, le parecía a Rodolfo que iba y caminaba no con alas, sino con muletas: tan grande era el deseo de verse a solas con su querida esposa.

Llegóse, en fin, la hora deseada, porque no hay fin que no le tenga. Fuéronse a acostar todos, quedó toda la casa sepultada en silencio, en el cual no quedará la verdad deste cuento, pues no lo consentirán los muchos hijos y la ilustre descendencia que en Toledo dejaron, y agora viven, estos dos venturosos desposados, que muchos y felices años gozaron de sí mismos, de sus hijos y de sus nietos, permitido todo por el cielo y por la fuerza de la sangre, que vio derramada en el suelo el valeroso, ilustre y cristiano abuelo de Luisico.

El celoso extremeño

NO HA MUCHOS años que de un lugar de Estremadura salió un hidalgo, nacido de padres nobles, el cual, como un otro Pródigo, por diversas partes de España, Italia y Flandes anduvo gastando así los años como la hacienda; y, al fin de muchas peregrinaciones, muertos ya sus padres y gastado su patrimonio, vino a parar a la gran ciudad de Sevilla, donde halló ocasión muy bastante para acabar de consumir lo poco que le quedaba. Viéndose, pues, tan falto de dineros, y aun no con muchos amigos, se acogió al remedio a que otros muchos perdidos en aquella ciudad se acogen, que es el pasarse a las Indias, refugio y amparo de los desesperados de España, iglesia de los alzados, salvoconduto de los homicidas, pala y cubierta de los jugadores (a quien llaman ciertos los peritos en el arte), ñagaza general de mujeres libres, engaño común de muchos y remedio particular de pocos.

En fin, llegado el tiempo en que una flota se partía para Tierrafirme, acomodándose con el almirante della, aderezó su matalotaje y su mortaja de esparto; y, embarcándose en Cádiz, echando la bendición a España, zarpó la flota, y con general alegría dieron las velas al viento, que blando y próspero soplabá, el cual en pocas horas les encubrió la tierra y les descubrió las anchas y espaciosas llanuras del gran padre de las aguas, el mar Océano.

Iba nuestro pasajero pensativo, revolviendo en su memoria los muchos y diversos peligros que en los años de su peregrinación había pasado, y el mal gobierno que en todo el discurso de su vida había tenido; y sacaba de la cuenta que a sí mismo se iba tomando una firme resolución de mudar manera de vida, y de tener otro estilo en guardar la hacienda que Dios fuese servido de darle, y de proceder con más recato que hasta allí con las mujeres.

La flota estaba como en calma cuando pasaba consigo esta tormenta Felipe de Carrizales, que éste es el nombre del que ha dado materia a nuestra novela. Tornó a soplar el viento, impeliendo con tanta fuerza los navíos, que no dejó a nadie en sus asientos; y así, le fue forzoso a Carrizales dejar sus imaginaciones, y dejarse llevar de solos los cuidados que el viaje le ofrecía; el cual viaje fue tan próspero que, sin recibir algún revés ni contraste, llegaron al puerto de Cartagena. Y, por concluir con todo lo que no hace a nuestro propósito, digo que la edad que tenía Filipo cuando pasó a las Indias sería de cuarenta y ocho años; y en veinte que en ellas estuvo, ayudado de su industria y diligencia, alcanzó a tener más de ciento y cincuenta mil pesos ensayados.

Viéndose, pues, rico y próspero, tocado del natural deseo que todos tienen de volver a su patria, pospuestos grandes intereses que se le ofrecían, dejando el Pirú, donde había granjeado tanta hacienda, trayéndola toda en barras de oro y plata, y registrada, por quitar inconvenientes, se volvió a España. Desembarcó en Sanlúcar; llegó a Sevilla, tan lleno de años como de riquezas; sacó sus partidas sin zozobras; buscó sus amigos: hallólos todos muertos; quiso partirse a su tierra, aunque ya había tenido nuevas que ningún pariente le había dejado la muerte. Y si cuando iba a Indias, pobre y menesteroso, le iban combatiendo muchos pensamientos, sin dejarle sosegar un punto en mitad de las ondas del mar, no menos ahora en el sosiego de la tierra le combatían, aunque por diferente causa: que si entonces no dormía por pobre, ahora no podía sosegar de rico; que tan pesada carga es la riqueza al que no está usado a tenerla ni sabe usar della, como lo es la pobreza al que continuo la tiene. Cuidados acarrea el oro y cuidados la falta dél; pero los unos se remedian con alcanzar alguna mediana cantidad, y los otros se aumentan mientras más parte se alcanzan.

Contemplaba Carrizales en sus barras, no por miserable, porque en algunos años que fue soldado aprendió a ser liberal, sino en lo que había de hacer dellas, a causa que tenerlas en ser era cosa infrutuosa, y tenerlas en casa, cebo para los codiciosos y despertador para los ladrones.

Habíase muerto en él la gana de volver al inquieto trato de las mercancías, y parecíale que, conforme a los años que tenía, le sobraban dineros para pasar la vida, y quisiera pasarla en su tierra y dar en ella su hacienda a tributo, pasando en ella los años de su vejez en quietud y sosiego, dando a Dios lo que podía, pues había dado al mundo más de lo que debía. Por otra parte, consideraba que la estrechez de su patria era mucha y la gente muy pobre, y que el irse a vivir a ella era ponerse por blanco de todas las importunidades que los pobres suelen dar al rico que tienen por vecino, y más cuando no hay otro en el lugar a quien acudir con sus miserias. Quisiera tener a quien dejar sus bienes después de sus días, y con este deseo tomaba el pulso a su fortaleza, y parecíale que aún podía llevar la carga del matrimonio; y, en viniéndole este pensamiento, le sobresaltaba un tan gran miedo, que así se le desbarataba y deshacía como hace a la niebla el viento; porque de su natural condición era el más celoso hombre del mundo, aun sin estar casado, pues con sólo la imaginación de serlo le comenzaban a ofender los celos, a fatigar las sospechas y a sobresaltar las imaginaciones; y esto con tanta eficacia y vehemencia, que de todo en todo propuso de no casarse.

Y, estando resuelto en esto, y no lo estando en lo que había de hacer de su vida, quiso su suerte que, pasando un día por una calle, alzase los ojos y viese a una ventana puesta una doncella, al parecer de edad de trece a catorce años, de tan agradable rostro y tan hermosa que, sin ser poderoso para defenderse, el buen viejo Carrizales rindió la flaqueza de sus muchos años a los pocos de Leonora, que así era el nombre de la hermosa doncella. Y luego, sin más detenerse, comenzó a hacer un gran montón de discursos; y, hablando consigo mismo, decía:

-Esta muchacha es hermosa, y a lo que muestra la presencia desta casa, no debe de ser rica; ella es niña, sus pocos años pueden asegurar mis sospechas; casarme he con ella; encerraréla y haréla a mis mañas, y con esto no tendrá otra condición que aquella que yo le enseñare. Y no soy tan viejo que pueda perder la esperanza de tener hijos que me hereden. De que tenga dote o no, no hay para qué hacer caso, pues el cielo me dio para todos; y los ricos no han de buscar en sus matrimonios hacienda, sino gusto: que el gusto alarga la vida, y los disgustos entre los casados la acortan. Alto, pues: echada está la suerte, y ésta es la que el cielo quiere que yo tenga.

Y así hecho este soliloquio, no una vez, sino ciento, al cabo de algunos días habló con los padres de Leonora, y supo como, aunque pobres, eran nobles; y, dándoles cuenta de su intención y de la calidad de su persona y hacienda, les rogó le diesen por mujer a su hija. Ellos le pidieron tiempo para informarse de lo que decía, y que él también le tendría para enterarse ser verdad lo que de su nobleza le habían dicho. Despidiéronse, informáronse las partes, y hallaron ser así lo que entrambos dijeron; y, finalmente, Leonora quedó por esposa de Carrizales, habiéndola dotado primero en veinte mil ducados: tal estaba de abrasado el pecho del celoso viejo. El cual, apenas dio el sí de esposo, cuando de golpe le embistió un tropel de rabiosos celos, y comenzó sin causa alguna a temblar y a tener mayores cuidados que jamás había tenido. Y la primera muestra que dio de su condición celosa fue no querer que sastre alguno tomase la medida a su esposa de los muchos vestidos que pensaba hacerle; y así, anduvo mirando cuál otra mujer tendría, poco más a menos, el talle y cuerpo de Leonora, y halló una pobre, a cuya medida hizo hacer una ropa, y, probándosela su esposa, halló que le venía bien; y por aquella medida hizo los demás vestidos, que fueron tantos y tan ricos, que los padres de la desposada se tuvieron por más que dichosos en haber acertado con tan buen yerno, para remedio suyo y de su hija. La niña estaba asombrada de ver tantas galas, a causa que las que ella en su vida se había puesto no pasaban de una saya de raja y una ropilla de tafetán.

La segunda señal que dio Filipo fue no querer juntarse con su esposa hasta tenerla puesta casa aparte, la cual aderezó en esta forma: compró una en doce mil ducados, en un barrio principal de la ciudad, que tenía agua de pie y jardín con muchos naranjos; cerró todas las ventanas que miraban a la calle y dioles vista al cielo, y lo mismo hizo de todas las otras de casa. En el portal de la calle, que en Sevilla llaman casapuerta, hizo una caballeriza para una mula, y encima della un pajar y apartamiento donde estuviese el que había de curar della, que fue un negro viejo y eunuco; levantó las paredes de las azuteas de tal manera, que el que entraba en la casa había de mirar al cielo por línea recta, sin que pudiesen ver otra cosa; hizo torno que de la casapuerta respondía al patio.

Compró un rico menaje para adornar la casa, de modo que por tapicerías, estrados y doseles ricos mostraba ser de un gran señor. Compró, asimismo, cuatro esclavas blancas, y herrólas en el rostro, y otras dos negras bozales. Concertóse con un despensero que le trujese y comprase de comer, con condición que no durmiese en casa ni entrase en ella sino hasta el torno, por el cual había de dar lo que trujese. Hecho esto, dio parte de su hacienda a censo, situada en diversas y buenas partes, otra puso en el banco, y quedóse con alguna, para lo que se le ofreciese. Hizo, asimismo, llave maestra para toda la casa, y encerró en ella todo lo que suele comprarse en junto y en sus sazones, para la provisión de todo el año; y, teniéndolo todo así aderezado y compuesto, se fue a casa de sus suegros y pidió a su mujer, que se la entregaron no con pocas lágrimas, porque les pareció que la llevaban a la sepultura.

La tierna Leonora aún no sabía lo que la había acontecido; y así, llorando con sus padres, les pidió su bendición, y, despidiéndose dellos, rodeada de sus esclavas y criadas, asida de la mano de su marido, se vino a su casa; y, en entrando en ella, les hizo Carrizales un sermón a todas, encargándoles la guarda de Leonora y que por ninguna vía ni en ningún modo dejasen entrar a nadie de la segunda puerta adentro, aunque fuese al negro eunuco. Y a quien más encargó la guarda y regalo de Leonora fue a una dueña de mucha prudencia y gravedad, que recibió como para aya de Leonora, y para que fuese superintendente de todo lo que en la casa se hiciese, y para que mandase a las esclavas y a otras dos doncellas de la misma edad de Leonora, que para que se entretuviese con las de sus mismos años asimismo había recibido. Prometióles que las trataría y regalaría a todas de manera que no sintiesen su encerramiento, y que los días de fiesta, todos, sin faltar ninguno, irían a oír misa; pero tan de mañana, que apenas tuviese la luz lugar de verlas. Prometiéronle las criadas y esclavas de hacer todo aquello que les mandaba, sin pesadumbre, con prompta voluntad y buen ánimo. Y la nueva esposa, encogiendo los hombros, bajó la cabeza y dijo que ella no tenía otra voluntad que la de su esposo y señor, a quien estaba siempre obediente.

Hecha esta prevención y recogido el buen estremeño en su casa, comenzó a gozar como pudo los frutos del matrimonio, los cuales a Leonora, como no tenía experiencia de otros, ni eran gustosos ni desabridos; y así, pasaba el tiempo con su dueña, doncellas y esclavas, y ellas, por pasarle mejor, dieron en ser golosas, y pocos días se pasaban sin hacer mil cosas a quien la miel y el azúcar hacen sabrosas. Sobrábales para esto en grande abundancia lo que habían menester, y no menos sobraba en su amo la voluntad de dárselo, pareciéndole que con ello las tenía entretenidas y ocupadas, sin tener lugar donde ponerse a pensar en su encerramiento.

Leonora andaba a lo igual con sus criadas, y se entretenía en lo mismo que ellas, y aun dio con su simplicidad en hacer muñecas y en otras niñerías, que mostraban la llaneza de su condición y la terneza de sus años; todo lo cual era de grandísima satisfacción para el celoso marido, pareciéndole que había acertado a escoger la vida mejor que se la supo imaginar, y que por ninguna vía la industria ni la malicia humana podía perturbar su sosiego. Y así, sólo se desvelaba en traer regalos a su esposa y en acordarle le pidiese todos cuantos le viniesen al pensamiento, que de todos sería servida. Los días que iba a misa, que, como está dicho, era entre dos luces, venían sus padres y en la iglesia hablaban a su hija, delante de su marido, el cual les daba tantas dádivas que, aunque tenían lástima a su hija por la estrechez en que vivía, la templaban con las muchas dádivas que Carrizales, su liberal yerno, les daba.

Levantábase de mañana y aguardaba a que el despensero viniese, a quien de la noche antes, por una cédula que ponían en el torno, le avisaban lo que había de traer otro día; y, en viniendo el despensero, salía de casa Carrizales, las más veces a pie, dejando cerradas las dos puertas, la de la calle y la de en medio, y entre las dos quedaba el negro. Íbase a sus negocios, que eran pocos, y con brevedad daba la vuelta; y, encerrándose, se entretenía en regalar a su esposa y acariciar a sus criadas, que todas le querían bien, por ser de condición llana y agradable, y, sobre todo, por mostrarse tan liberal con todas.

Desta manera pasaron un año de noviciado y hicieron profesión en aquella vida, determinándose de llevarla hasta el fin de las suyas: y así fuera si el sagaz perturbador del género humano no lo estorbara, como ahora oiréis.

Dígame ahora el que se tuviere por más discreto y recatado qué más prevenciones para su seguridad podía haber hecho el anciano Felipo, pues aun no consintió que dentro de su casa hubiese algún animal que fuese varón. A los ratones della jamás los persiguió gato, ni en ella se oyó ladrido de perro: todos eran del género femenino. De día pensaba, de noche no dormía; él era la ronda y centinela de su casa y el Argos de lo que bien quería. Jamás entró hombre de la puerta adentro del patio. Con sus amigos negociaba en la calle. Las figuras de los paños que sus salas y cuadras adornaban, todas eran hembras, flores y boscajes. Toda su casa olía a honestidad, recogimiento y recato: aun hasta en las consejas que en las largas noches del invierno en la chimenea sus criadas contaban, por estar él presente, en ninguna ningún género de lascivia se descubría. La plata de las canas del viejo, a los ojos de Leonora, parecían cabellos de oro puro, porque el amor primero que las doncellas tienen se les imprime en el alma como el sello en la cera. Su demasiada guarda le parecía advertido recato: pensaba y creía que lo que ella pasaba pasaban todas las recién casadas. No se desmandaban sus pensamientos a salir de las paredes de su casa, ni su voluntad deseaba otra cosa más de aquella que la de su marido quería; sólo los días que iba a misa veía las calles, y esto era tan de mañana que, si no era al volver de la iglesia, no había luz para mirallas.

No se vio monasterio tan cerrado, ni monjas más recogidas, ni manzanas de oro tan guardadas; y con todo esto, no pudo en ninguna manera prevenir ni excusar de caer en lo que recelaba; a lo menos, en pensar que había caído.

Hay en Sevilla un género de gente ociosa y holgazana, a quien comúnmente suelen llamar gente de barrio. Éstos son los hijos de vecino de cada colación, y de los más ricos della; gente baldía, atildada y meliflua, de la cual y de su traje y manera de vivir, de su condición y de las leyes que guardan entre sí, había mucho que decir; pero por buenos respetos se deja.

Uno destos galanes, pues, que entre ellos es llamado virote (mozo soltero, que a los recién casados llaman mantones), asestó a mirar la casa del recatado Carrizales; y, viéndola siempre cerrada, le tomó gana de saber quién vivía dentro; y con tanto ahínco y curiosidad hizo la diligencia, que de todo en todo vino a saber lo que deseaba. Supo la condición del viejo, la hermosura de su esposa y el modo que tenía en guardarla; todo lo cual le encendió el deseo de ver si sería posible expunar, por fuerza o por industria, fortaleza tan guardada. Y, comunicándolo con dos virotes y un mantón, sus amigos, acordaron que se pudiese por obra; que nunca para tales obras faltan consejeros y ayudadores.

Dificultaban el modo que se tendría para intentar tan dificultosa hazaña; y, habiendo entrado en bureo muchas veces, convinieron en esto: que, fingiendo Loaysa, que así se llamaba el virote, que iba fuera de la ciudad por algunos días, se quitase de los ojos de sus amigos, como lo hizo; y, hecho esto, se puso unos calzones de lienzo limpio y camisa limpia; pero encima se puso unos vestidos tan rotos y remendados, que ningún pobre en toda la ciudad los traía tan astrosos. Quitóse un poco de barba que tenía, cubrióse un ojo con un parche, vendóse una pierna estrechamente, y, arrimándose a dos muletas, se convirtió en un pobre tullido: tal, que el más verdadero estropeado no se le igualaba.

Con este talle se ponía cada noche a la oración a la puerta de la casa de Carrizales, que ya estaba cerrada, quedando el negro, que Luis se llamaba, cerrado entre las dos puertas. Puesto allí Loaysa, sacaba una guitarrilla algo grasienta y falta de algunas cuerdas, y, como él era algo músico, comenzaba a tañer algunos sones alegres y regocijados, mudando la voz por no ser conocido. Con esto, se daba prisa a cantar romances de moros y moras, a la loquesca, con tanta gracia, que cuantos pasaban por la calle se ponían a escucharle; y siempre, en tanto que cantaba, estaba rodeado de muchachos; y Luis, el negro, poniendo los oídos por entre las puertas, estaba colgado de la música del virote, y diera un brazo por poder abrir la puerta y escucharle más a su placer: tal es la inclinación que los negros tienen a ser músicos. Y, cuando Loaysa quería que los que le escuchaban le dejaran, dejaba de cantar y recogía su guitarra, y, acogiéndose a sus muletas, se iba.

Cuatro o cinco veces había dado música al negro (que por solo él la daba), pareciéndole que, por donde se había de comenzar a desmoronar aquel edificio, había y debía ser por el negro; y no le salió vano su pensamiento, porque, llegándose una noche, como solía, a la puerta, comenzó a templar su guitarra, y sintió que el negro estaba ya atento; y, llegándose al quicio de la puerta, con voz baja, dijo:

-¿Será posible, Luis, darme un poco de agua, que perezco de sed y no puedo cantar?

-No -dijo el negro-, porque no tengo la llave desta puerta, ni hay agujero por donde pueda dárosela.

-Pues, ¿quién tiene la llave? -preguntó Loaysa.

-Mi amo -respondió el negro-, que es el más celoso hombre del mundo. Y si él supiese que yo estoy ahora aquí hablando con nadie, no sería más mi vida. Pero, ¿quién sois vos que me pedís el agua?

-Yo -respondió Loaysa-soy un pobre estropeado de una pierna, que gano mi vida pidiendo por Dios a la buena gente; y, juntamente con esto, enseño a tañer a algunos morenos y a otra gente pobre; y ya tengo tres negros, esclavos de tres veinticuatro, a quien he enseñado de modo que pueden cantar y tañer en cualquier baile y en cualquier taberna, y me lo han pagado muy rebién.

-Harto mejor os lo pagara yo -dijo Luis-a tener lugar de tomar lición; pero no es posible, a causa que mi amo, en saliendo por la mañana, cierra la puerta de la calle, y cuando vuelve hace lo mismo, dejándome emparedado entre dos puertas.

-¡Por Dios!, Luis -replicó Loaysa, que ya sabía el nombre del negro-, que si vos diédeses traza a que yo entrase algunas noches a daros lición, en menos de quince días os sacaría tan diestro en la guitarra, que pudiédeses tañer sin vergüenza alguna en cualquiera esquina; porque os hago saber que tengo grandísima gracia en el enseñar, y más, que he oído decir que vos tenéis muy buena habilidad; y, a lo que siento y puedo juzgar por el órgano de la voz, que es atiplada, debéis de cantar muy bien.

-No canto mal -respondió el negro-; pero, ¿qué aprovecha?, pues no sé tonada alguna, si no es la de La Estrella de Venus y la de Por un verde prado, y aquélla que ahora se usa que dice:

A los hierros de una reja la turbada mano asida...

-Todas ésas son aire -dijo Loaysa-para las que yo os podría enseñar, porque sé todas las del moro Abindarráez, con las de su dama Jarifa, y todas las que se cantan de la historia del gran sofí Tomunibeyo, con las de la zarabanda a lo divino, que son tales, que hacen pasmar a los mismos portugueses; y esto enseño con tales modos y con tanta facilidad que, aunque no os deis prisa a aprender, apenas habréis comido tres o cuatro moyos de sal, cuando ya os veáis músico corriente y moliente en todo género de guitarra.

A esto suspiró el negro y dijo:

-¿Qué aprovecha todo eso, si no sé cómo meteros en casa?

-Buen remedio -dijo Loaysa-: procurad vos tomar las llaves a vuestro amo, y yo os daré un pedazo de cera, donde las imprimiréis de manera que queden señaladas las guardas en la cera; que, por la afición que os he tomado, yo haré que un cerrajero amigo mío haga las llaves, y así podré entrar dentro de noche y enseñaros mejor que al Preste Juan de las Indias, porque veo ser gran lástima que se pierda una tal voz como la vuestra, faltándole el arrimo de la guitarra; que quiero que sepáis, hermano Luis, que la mejor voz del mundo pierde de sus quilates cuando no se acompaña con el instrumento, ora sea de guitarra o clavicímbano, de órganos o de arpa; pero el que más a vuestra voz le conviene es el instrumento de la guitarra, por ser el más mañero y menos costoso de los instrumentos.

-Bien me parece eso -replicó el negro-; pero no puede ser, pues jamás entran las llaves en mi poder, ni mi amo las suelta de la mano de día, y de noche duermen debajo de su almohada.

-Pues haced otra cosa, Luis -dijo Loaysa-, si es que tenéis gana de ser músico consumado; que si no la tenéis, no hay para qué cansarme en aconsejaros.

-¡Y cómo si tengo gana! -replicó Luis-. Y tanta, que ninguna cosa dejaré de hacer, como sea posible salir con ella, a trueco de salir con ser músico.

-Pues así es -dijo el virote-, yo os daré por entre estas puertas, haciendo vos lugar quitando alguna tierra del quicio; digo que os daré unas tenazas y un martillo, con que podáis de noche quitar los clavos de la cerradura de loba con mucha facilidad, y con la misma volveremos a poner la chapa, de modo que no se eche de ver que ha sido desclavada; y, estando yo dentro, encerrado con vos en vuestro pajar, o adonde dormís, me daré tal priesa a lo que tengo de hacer, que vos veáis aun más de lo que os he dicho, con aprovechamiento de mi persona y aumento de vuestra suficiencia. Y de lo que hubiéremos de comer no tengáis cuidado, que yo llevaré matalotaje para entrambos y para más de ocho días; que discípulos tengo yo y amigos que no me dejarán mal pasar.

-De la comida -replicó el negro-no habrá de qué temer, que, con la ración que me da mi amo y con los relieves que me dan las esclavas, sobrará comida para otros dos. Venga ese martillo y tenazas que decís, que yo haré por junto a este quicio lugar por donde quepa, y le volveré a cubrir y tapar con barro; que, puesto que dé algunos golpes en quitar la chapa, mi amo duerme tan lejos desta puerta, que será milagro, o gran desgracia nuestra, si los oye.

-Pues, a la mano de Dios -dijo Loaysa-: que de aquí a dos días tendréis, Luis, todo lo necesario para poner en ejecución nuestro virtuoso propósito; y advertid en no comer cosas flemosas, porque no hacen ningún provecho, sino mucho daño a la voz.

-Ninguna cosa me enronquece tanto -respondió el negro-como el vino, pero no me lo quitaré yo por todas cuantas voces tiene el suelo.

-No digo tal -dijo Loaysa-, ni Dios tal permita. Bebed, hijo Luis, bebed, y buen provecho os haga, que el vino que se bebe con medida jamás fue causa de daño alguno.

-Con medida lo bebo -replicó el negro-: aquí tengo un jarro que cabe una azumbre justa y cabal; éste me llenan las esclavas, sin que mi amo lo sepa, y el dispensero, a solapo, me trae una botilla, que también cabe justas dos azumbres, con que se suplen las faltas del jarro.

-Digo -dijo Loaysa-que tal sea mi vida como eso me parece, porque la seca garganta ni gruñe ni canta.

-Andad con Dios -dijo el negro-; pero mirad que no dejéis de venir a cantar aquí las noches que tardáredes en traer lo que habéis de hacer para entrar acá dentro, que ya me comen los dedos por verlos puestos en la guitarra.

-Y ¡cómo si vendré! -replicó Loaysa-. Y aun con tonadicas nuevas.

-Eso pido -dijo Luis-; y ahora no me dejéis de cantar algo, porque me vaya a acostar con gusto; y, en lo de la paga, entienda el señor pobre que le he de pagar mejor que un rico.

-No reparo en eso -dijo Loaysa-; que, según yo os enseñaré, así me pagaréis, y por ahora escuchad esta tonadilla, que cuando esté dentro veréis milagros.

-Sea en buen hora -respondió el negro.

Y, acabado este largo coloquio, cantó Loaysa un romancito agudo, con que dejó al negro tan contento y satisfecho, que ya no veía la hora de abrir la puerta.

Apenas se quitó Loaysa de la puerta, cuando, con más ligereza que el traer de sus muletas prometía, se fue a dar cuenta a sus consejeros de su buen comienzo, adivino del buen fin que por él esperaba. Hallólos y contó lo que con el negro dejaba concertado, y otro día hallaron los instrumentos, tales que rompían cualquier clavo como si fuera de palo.

No se descuidó el virote de volver a dar música al negro, ni menos tuvo descuido el negro en hacer el agujero por donde cupiese lo que su maestro le diese, cubriéndolo de manera que, a no ser mirado con malicia y sospechosamente, no se podía caer en el agujero.

La segunda noche le dio los instrumentos Loaysa, y Luis probó sus fuerzas; y, casi sin poner alguna, se halló rompidos los clavos y con la chapa de la cerradura en las manos: abrió la puerta y recogió dentro a su Orfeo y maestro; y, cuando le vio con sus dos muletas, y tan andrajoso y tan fajada su pierna, quedó admirado. No llevaba Loaysa el parche en el ojo, por no ser necesario, y, así como entró, abrazó a su buen discípulo y le besó en el rostro, y luego le puso una gran bota de vino en las manos, y una caja de conserva y otras cosas dulces, de que llevaba unas alforjas bien proveídas. Y, dejando las muletas, como si no tuviera mal alguno, comenzó a hacer cabriolas, de lo cual se admiró más el negro, a quien Loaysa dijo:

-Sabed, hermano Luis, que mi cojera y estropeamiento no nace de enfermedad, sino de industria, con la cual gano de comer pidiendo por amor de Dios, y ayudándome della y de mi música paso la mejor vida del mundo, en el cual todos aquellos que no fueren industriosos y tracistas morirán de hambre; y esto lo veréis en el discurso de nuestra amistad.

-Ello dirá -respondió el negro-; pero demos orden de volver esta chapa a su lugar, de modo que no se eche de ver su mudanza.

-En buen hora -dijo Loaysa.

Y, sacando clavos de sus alforjas, asentaron la cerradura de suerte que estaba tan bien como de antes, de lo cual quedó contentísimo el negro; y, subiéndose Loaysa al aposento que en el pajar tenía el negro, se acomodó lo mejor que pudo.

Encendió luego Luis un torzal de cera y, sin más aguardar, sacó su guitarra Loaysa; y, tocándola baja y suavemente, suspendió al pobre negro de manera que estaba fuera de sí escuchándole. Habiendo tocado un poco, sacó de nuevo colación y diola a su discípulo; y, aunque con dulce, bebió con tan buen talante de la bota, que le dejó más fuera de sentido que la música. Pasado esto, ordenó que luego tomase lición Luis, y, como el pobre negro tenía cuatro dedos de vino sobre los sesos, no acertaba traste; y, con todo eso, le hizo creer Loaysa que ya sabía por lo menos dos tonadas; y era lo bueno que el negro se lo creía, y en toda la noche no hizo otra cosa que tañer con la guitarra destemplada y sin las cuerdas necesarias.

Durmieron lo poco que de la noche les quedaba, y, a obra de las seis de la mañana, bajó Carrizales y abrió la puerta de en medio, y también la de la calle, y estuvo esperando al dispensero, el cual vino de allí a un poco, y, dando por el torno la comida se volvió a ir, y llamó al negro, que bajase a tomar cebada para la mula y su ración; y, en tomándola, se fue el viejo Carrizales, dejando cerradas ambas puertas, sin echar de ver lo que en la de la calle se había hecho, de que no poco se alegraron maestro y discípulo.

Apenas salió el amo de casa, cuando el negro arrebató la guitarra y comenzó a tocar de tal manera que todas las criadas le oyeron, y por el torno le preguntaron:

-¿Qué es esto, Luis? ¿De cuándo acá tienes tú guitarra, o quién te la ha dado?

-¿Quién me la ha dado? -respondió Luis-. El mejor músico que hay en el mundo, y el que me ha de enseñar en menos de seis días más de seis mil sonos.

-Y ¿dónde está ese músico? -preguntó la dueña.

-No está muy lejos de aquí -respondió el negro-; y si no fuera por vergüenza y por el temor que tengo a mi señor, quizá os le enseñara luego, y a fe que os holgásedes de verle.

-Y ¿adónde puede él estar que nosotras le podamos ver -replicó la dueña-, si en esta casa jamás entró otro hombre que nuestro dueño?

-Ahora bien -dijo el negro-, no os quiero decir nada hasta que veáis lo que yo sé y él me ha enseñado en el breve tiempo que he dicho.

-Por cierto -dijo la dueña-que, si no es algún demonio el que te ha de enseñar, que yo no sé quién te pueda sacar músico con tanta brevedad.

-Andad -dijo el negro-, que lo oiréis y lo veréis algún día.

-No puede ser eso -dijo otra doncella-, porque no tenemos ventanas a la calle para poder ver ni oír a nadie.

-Bien está -dijo el negro-; que para todo hay remedio si no es para escusar la muerte; y más si vosotras sabéis o queréis callar.

-¡Y cómo que callaremos, hermano Luis! -dijo una de las esclavas-. Callaremos más que si fuésemos mudas; porque te prometo, amigo, que me muero por oír una buena voz, que después que aquí nos emparedaron, ni aun el canto de los pájaros habemos oído.

Todas estas pláticas estaba escuchando Loaysa con grandísimo contento, pareciéndole que todas se encaminaban a la consecución de su gusto, y que la buena suerte había tomado la mano en guiarlas a la medida de su voluntad.

Despidiéronse las criadas con prometerles el negro que, cuando menos se pensasen, las llamaría a oír una muy buena voz; y, con temor que su amo volviese y le hallase hablando con ellas, las dejó y se recogió a su estancia y clausura. Quisiera tomar lición, pero no se atrevió a tocar de día, porque su amo no le oyese, el cual vino de allí a poco espacio, y, cerrando las puertas según su costumbre, se encerró en casa. Y, al dar aquel día de comer por el torno al negro, dijo Luis a una negra que se lo daba, que aquella noche, después de dormido su amo, bajasen todas al torno a oír la voz que les había prometido, sin falta alguna. Verdad es que antes que dijese esto había pedido con muchos ruegos a su maestro fuese contento de cantar y tañer aquella noche al torno, porque él pudiese cumplir la palabra que había dado de hacer oír a las criadas una voz estremada, asegurándole que sería en extremo regalado de todas ellas. Algo se hizo de rogar el maestro de hacer lo que él más deseaba; pero al fin dijo que haría lo que su buen discípulo pedía, sólo por darle gusto, sin otro interés alguno. Abrazóle el negro y diole un beso en el carrillo, en señal del contento que le había causado la merced prometida; y aquel día dio de comer a Loaysa tan bien como si comiera en su casa, y aun quizá mejor, pues pudiera ser que en su casa le faltara.

Llegóse la noche, y en la mitad della, o poco menos, comenzaron a cecear en el torno, y luego entendió Luis que era la cáfila, que había llegado; y, llamando a su maestro, bajaron del pajar, con la guitarra bien encordada y mejor templada. Preguntó Luis quién y cuántas eran las que escuchaban. Respondiéronle que todas, sino su señora, que quedaba durmiendo con su marido, de que le pesó a Loaysa; pero, con todo eso, quiso dar principio a su disignio y contentar a su discípulo; y, tocando mansamente la guitarra, tales sones hizo que dejó admirado al negro y suspenso el rebaño de las mujeres que le escuchaba.

Pues, ¿qué diré de lo que ellas sintieron cuando le oyeron tocar el Pésame dello y acabar con el endemoniado son de la zarabanda, nuevo entonces en España? No quedó vieja por bailar, ni moza que no se hiciese pedazos, todo a la sorda y con silencio extraño, poniendo centinelas y espías que avisasen si el viejo despertaba. Cantó asimismo Loaysa coplillas de la seguida, con que acabó de echar el sello al gusto de las escuchantes, que ahincadamente pidieron al negro les dijese quién era tan milagroso músico. El negro les dijo que era un pobre mendigante: el más galán y gentil hombre que había en toda la pobrería de Sevilla. Rogáronle que hiciese de suerte que ellas le viesan, y que no le dejase ir en quince días de casa, que ellas le regalarían muy bien y darían cuanto hubiese menester. Preguntáronle qué modo había tenido para meterle en casa. A esto no les respondió palabra; a lo demás dijo que, para poderle ver, hiciesen un agujero pequeño en el torno, que después lo taparían con cera; y que, a lo de tenerle en casa, que él lo procuraría.

Hablólas también Loaysa, ofreciéndoseles a su servicio, con tan buenas razones, que ellas echaron de ver que no salían de ingenio de pobre mendigante. Rogáronle que otra noche viniese al mismo puesto; que ellas harían con su señora que bajase a escucharle, a pesar del ligero sueño de su señor, cuya ligereza no nacía de sus muchos años, sino de sus muchos celos. A lo cual dijo Loaysa que si ellas gustaban de oírle sin sobresalto del viejo, que él les daría unos polvos que le echasen en el vino, que le harían dormir con pesado sueño más tiempo del ordinario.

-¡Jesús, valme -dijo una de las doncellas-, y si eso fuese verdad, qué buena ventura se nos habría entrado por las puertas, sin sentillo y sin merecello! No serían ellos polvos de sueño para él, sino polvos de vida para todas nosotras y para la pobre de mi señora Leonora, su mujer, que no la deja a sol ni a sombra, ni la pierde de vista un solo momento. ¡Ay, señor mío de mi alma, traiga esos polvos: así Dios le dé todo el bien que desea! Vaya y no tarde; tráigalos, señor mío, que yo me ofrezco a mezclarlos en el vino y a ser la escanciadora; y pluguiese a Dios que durmiese el viejo tres días con sus noches, que otros tantos tendríamos nosotras de gloria.

-Pues yo los trairé -dijo Loaysa-; y son tales, que no hacen otro mal ni daño a quien los toma si no es provocarle a sueño pesadísimo.

Todas le rogaron que los trujese con brevedad, y, quedando de hacer otra noche con una barrena el agujero en el torno, y de traer a su señora para que le viese y oyese, se despidieron; y el negro, aunque era casi el alba, quiso tomar lición, la cual le dio Loaysa, y le hizo entender que no había mejor oído que el suyo en cuantos discípulos tenía: y no sabía el pobre negro, ni lo supo jamás, hacer un cruzado.

Tenían los amigos de Loaysa cuidado de venir de noche a escuchar por entre las puertas de la calle, y ver si su amigo les decía algo, o si había menester alguna cosa; y, haciendo una señal que dejaron concertada, conoció Loaysa que estaban a la puerta, y por el agujero del quicio les dio breve cuenta del buen término en que estaba su negocio, pidiéndoles encarecidamente buscasen alguna cosa que provocase a sueño, para dárselo a Carrizales; que él había oído decir que había unos polvos para este efeto. Dijéronle que tenían un médico amigo que les daría el mejor remedio que supiese, si es que le había; y, animándole a proseguir la empresa y prometiéndole de volver la noche siguiente con todo recaudo, apriesa se despidieron.

Vino la noche, y la banda de las palomas acudió al reclamo de la guitarra. Con ellas vino la simple Leonora, temerosa y temblando de que no despertase su marido; que, aunque ella, vencida deste temor, no había querido venir, tantas cosas le dijeron sus criadas, especialmente la dueña, de la suavidad de la música y de la gallarda disposición del músico pobre (que, sin haberle visto, le alababa y le subía sobre Absalón y sobre Orfeo), que la pobre señora, convencida y persuadida dellas, hubo de hacer lo que no tenía ni tuviera jamás en voluntad. Lo primero que hicieron fue barrenar el torno para ver al músico, el cual no estaba ya en hábitos de pobre, sino con unos calzones grandes de tafetán leonado, anchos a la marineresca; un jubón de lo mismo con trencillas de oro, y una montera de raso de la misma color, con cuello almidonado con grandes puntas y encaje; que de todo vino proveído en las alforjas, imaginando que se había de ver en ocasión que le conviniese mudar de traje.

Era mozo y de gentil disposición y buen parecer; y, como había tanto tiempo que todas tenían hecha la vista a mirar al viejo de su amo, parecióles que miraban a un ángel. Poníase una al agujero para verle, y luego otra; y porque le pudiesen ver mejor, andaba el negro paseándole el cuerpo de arriba abajo con el torzal de cera encendido. Y, después que todas le hubieron visto, hasta las negras bozales, tomó Loaysa la guitarra, y cantó aquella noche tan estremadamente, que las acabó de dejar suspensas y atónitas a todas, así a la vieja como a las mozas; y todas rogaron a Luis diese orden y traza cómo el señor su maestro entrase allá dentro, para oírle y verle de más cerca, y no tan por brújula como por el agujero, y sin el sobresalto de estar tan apartadas de su señor, que podía cogerlas de sobresalto y con el hurto en las manos; lo cual no sucedería así si le tuviesen escondido dentro.

A esto contradijo su señora con muchas veras, diciendo que no se hiciese la tal cosa ni la tal entrada, porque le pesaría en el alma, pues desde allí le podían ver y oír a su salvo y sin peligro de su honra.

-¿Qué honra? -dijo la dueña-. ¡El Rey tiene harta! Estése vuesa merced encerrada con su Matusalén y déjenos a nosotras holgar como pudiéremos. Cuanto más, que este señor parece tan honrado que no querrá otra cosa de nosotras más de lo que nosotras quisiéremos.

-Yo, señoras mías -dijo a esto Loaysa-, no vine aquí sino con intención de servir a todas vuestas mercedes con el alma y con la vida, condolido de su no vista clausura y de los ratos que en este estrecho género de vida se pierden. Hombre soy yo, por vida de mi padre, tan sencillo, tan manso y de tan buena condición, y tan obediente, que no haré más de aquello que se me mandare; y si cualquiera de vuestas mercedes dijere: «Maestro, siéntese aquí; maestro, pásese allí; echaos acá, pasaos acullá», así lo haré, como el más doméstico y enseñado perro que salta por el Rey de Francia.

-Si eso ha de ser así -dijo la ignorante Leonora-, ¿qué medio se dará para que entre acá dentro el señor maeso?

-Bueno -dijo Loaysa-: vuestas mercedes pugnen por sacar en cera la llave desta puerta de en medio, que yo haré que mañana en la noche venga hecha otra, tal que nos pueda servir.

-En sacar esa llave -dijo una doncella-, se sacan las de toda la casa, porque es llave maestra.

-No por eso será peor -replicó Loaysa.

-Así es verdad -dijo Leonora-; pero ha de jurar este señor, primero, que no ha de hacer otra cosa cuando esté acá dentro sino cantar y tañer cuando se lo mandaren, y que ha de estar encerrado y quedito donde le pusiéremos.

-Sí juro -dijo Loaysa.

-No vale nada ese juramento -respondió Leonora-; que ha de jurar por vida de su padre, y ha de jurar la cruz y besalla que lo veamos todas.

-Por vida de mi padre juro, -dijo Loaysa-, y por esta señal de cruz, que la beso con mi boca sucia.

Y, haciendo la cruz con dos dedos, la besó tres veces.

Esto hecho, dijo otra de las doncellas:

-Mire, señor, que no se le olvide aquello de los polvos, que es el tuáutem de todo.

Con esto cesó la plática de aquella noche, quedando todos muy contentos del concierto. Y la suerte, que de bien en mejor encaminaba los negocios de Loaysa, trujo a aquellas horas, que eran dos después de la medianoche, por la calle a sus amigos; los cuales, haciendo la señal acostumbrada, que era tocar una trompa de París, Loaysa los habló y les dio cuenta del término en que estaba su pretensión, y les pidió si traían los polvos o otra cosa, como se la había pedido, para que Carrizales durmiese. Díjoles, asimismo, lo de la llave maestra. Ellos le dijeron que los polvos, o un ungüento, vendría la siguiente noche, de tal virtud que, untados los pulsos y las sienes con él, causaba un sueño profundo, sin que dél se pudiese despertar en dos días, si no era lavándose con vinagre todas las partes que se habían untado; y que se les diese la llave en cera, que asimismo la harían hacer con facilidad. Con esto se despidieron, y Loaysa y su discípulo durmieron lo poco que de la noche les quedaba, esperando Loaysa con gran deseo la venidera, por ver si se le cumplía la palabra prometida de la llave. Y, puesto que el tiempo parece tardío y perezoso a los que en él esperan, en fin, corre a las parejas con el mismo pensamiento, y llega el término que quiere, porque nunca para ni sosiega.

Vino, pues, la noche y la hora acostumbrada de acudir al torno, donde vinieron todas las criadas de casa, grandes y chicas, negras y blancas, porque todas estaban deseosas de ver dentro de su serrallo al señor músico; pero no vino Leonora, y, preguntando Loaysa por ella, le respondieron que estaba acostada con su velado, el cual tenía cerrada la puerta del aposento donde dormía con llave, y después de haber cerrado se la ponía debajo de la almohada; y que su señora les había dicho que, en durmiéndose el viejo, haría por tomarle la llave maestra y sacarla en cera, que ya llevaba preparada y blanda, y que de allí a un poco habían de ir a requerirla por una gatera.

Maravillado quedó Loaysa del recato del viejo, pero no por esto se le desmayó el deseo. Y, estando en esto, oyó la trompa de París; acudió al puesto; halló a sus amigos, que le dieron un botecico de ungüento de la propiedad que le habían significado; tomólo Loaysa y díjoles que esperasen un poco, que les daría la muestra de la llave; volvióse al torno y dijo a la dueña, que era la que con más ahínco mostraba desear su entrada, que se lo llevase a la señora Leonora, diciéndole la propiedad que tenía, y que procurase untar a su marido con tal tiento, que no lo sintiese, y que vería maravillas. Hízolo así la dueña, y, llegándose a la gatera, halló que estaba Leonora esperando tendida en el suelo de largo a largo, puesto el rostro en la gatera. Llegó la dueña, y, tendiéndose de la misma manera, puso la boca en el oído de su señora, y con voz baja le dijo que traía el ungüento y de la manera que había de probar su virtud. Ella tomó el ungüento, y respondió a la dueña como en ninguna manera podía tomar la llave a su marido, porque no la tenía debajo de la almohada, como solía, sino entre los dos colchones y casi debajo de la mitad de su cuerpo; pero que dijese al maeso que si el ungüento obraba como él decía, con facilidad sacarían la llave todas las veces que quisiesen, y así no sería necesario sacarla en cera. Dijo que fuese a decirlo luego y volviese a ver lo que el ungüento obraba, porque luego luego le pensaba untar a su velado.

Bajó la dueña a decirlo al maeso Loaysa, y él despidió a sus amigos, que esperando la llave estaban. Temblando y pasito, y casi sin osar despedir el aliento de la boca, llegó Leonora a untar los pulsos del celoso marido, y asimismo le untó las ventanas de las narices; y cuando a ellas le llegó, le parecía que se estremecía, y ella quedó mortal, pareciéndole que la había cogido en el hurto. En efeto, como mejor pudo, le acabó de untar todos los lugares que le dijeron ser necesarios, que fue lo mismo que haberle embalsamado para la sepultura.

Poco espacio tardó el alopiado ungüento en dar manifiestas señales de su virtud, porque luego comenzó a dar el viejo tan grandes ronquidos, que se pudieran oír en la calle: música, a los oídos de su esposa, más acordada que la del maeso de su negro. Y, aún mal segura de lo que veía, se llegó a él y le estremeció un poco, y luego más, y luego otro poquito más, por ver si despertaba; y a tanto se atrevió, que le volvió de una parte a otra sin que despertase. Como vio esto, se fue a la gatera de la puerta y, con voz no tan baja como la primera, llamó a la dueña, que allí la estaba esperando, y le dijo:

-Dame albricias, hermana, que Carrizales duerme más que un muerto.

-Pues, ¿a qué aguardas a tomar la llave, señora? -dijo la dueña-. Mira que está el músico aguardándola más ha de una hora.

-Espera, hermana, que ya voy por ella -respondió Leonora.

Y, volviendo a la cama, metió la mano por entre los colchones y sacó la llave de en medio dellos sin que el viejo lo sintiese; y, tomándola en sus manos, comenzó a dar brincos de contento, y sin más esperar abrió la puerta y la presentó a la dueña, que la recibió con la mayor alegría del mundo.

Mandó Leonora que fuese a abrir al músico, y que le trujese a los corredores, porque ella no osaba quitarse de allí, por lo que podía suceder; pero que, ante todas cosas, hiciese que de nuevo ratificase el juramento que había hecho de no hacer más de lo que ellas le ordenasen, y que, si no le quisiese confirmar y hacer de nuevo, en ninguna manera le abriesen.

-Así será -dijo la dueña-; y a fe que no ha de entrar si primero no jura y rejura y besa la cruz seis veces.

-No le pongas tasa -dijo Leonora-: bésela él y sean las veces que quisiere; pero mira que jure la vida de sus padres y por todo aquello que bien quiere, porque con esto estaremos seguras y nos hartaremos de oírle cantar y tañer, que en mi ánima que lo hace delicadamente; y anda, no te detengas más, porque no se nos pase la noche en pláticas.

Alzóse las faldas la buena dueña, y con no vista ligereza se puso en el torno, donde estaba toda la gente de casa esperándola; y, habiéndoles mostrado la llave que traía, fue tanto el contento de todas, que la alzaron en peso, como a catredático, diciendo: «¡Viva, viva!»; y más, cuando les dijo que no había necesidad de contrahacer la llave, porque, según el untado viejo dormía, bien se podían aprovechar de la de casa todas las veces que la quisiesen.

-¡Ea, pues, amiga -dijo una de las doncellas-, ábrase esa puerta y entre este señor, que ha mucho que aguarda, y démonos un verde de música que no haya más que ver!

-Más ha de haber que ver -replicó la dueña-; que le hemos de tomar juramento, como la otra noche.

-Él es tan bueno -dijo una de las esclavas-, que no reparará en juramentos.

Abrió en esto la dueña la puerta, y, teniéndola entreabierta, llamó a Loaysa, que todo lo había estado escuchando por el agujero del torno; el cual, llegándose a la puerta, quiso entrarse de golpe; mas, poniéndole la dueña la mano en el pecho, le dijo:

-Sabrá vuesa merced, señor mío, que, en Dios y en mi conciencia, todas las que estamos dentro de las puertas desta casa somos doncellas como las madres que nos parieron, excepto mi señora; y, aunque yo debo de parecer de cuarenta años, no teniendo treinta cumplidos, porque les faltan dos meses y medio, también lo soy, mal pecado; y si acaso parezco vieja, corrimientos, trabajos y desabrimientos echan un cero a los años, y a veces dos, según se les antoja. Y, siendo esto ansí, como lo es, no sería razón que, a trueco de oír dos, o tres, o cuatro cantares, nos pusiésemos a perder tanta virginidad como aquí se encierra; porque hasta esta negra, que se llama Guiomar, es doncella. Así que, señor de mi corazón, vuesa merced nos ha de hacer, primero que entre en nuestro reino, un muy solene juramento de que no ha de hacer más de lo que nosotras le ordenáremos; y si le parece que es mucho lo que se le pide, considere que es mucho más lo que se aventura. Y si es que vuesa merced viene con buena intención, poco le ha de doler el jurar, que al buen pagador no le duelen prendas.

-Bien y rebién ha dicho la señora Marialonso -dijo una de las doncellas-; en fin, como persona discreta y que está en las cosas como se debe; y si es que el señor no quiere jurar, no entre acá dentro.

A esto dijo Guiomar, la negra, que no era muy ladina:

-Por mí, mas que nunca jura, entre con todo diablo; que, aunque más jura, si acá estás, todo olvida.

Oyó con gran sosiego Loaysa la arenga de la señora Marialonso, y con grave reposo y autoridad respondió:

-Por cierto, señoras hermanas y compañeras mías, que nunca mi intento fue, es, ni será otro que daros gusto y contento en cuanto mis fuerzas alcanzaren; y así, no se me hará cuesta arriba este juramento que me piden; pero quisiera yo que se fiara algo de mi palabra, porque dada de tal persona como yo soy, era lo mismo que hacer una obligación guarentigia; y quiero hacer saber a vuesa merced que debajo del sayal hay ál, y que debajo de mala capa suele estar un buen bebedor. Mas, para que todas estén seguras de mi buen deseo, determino de jurar como católico y buen varón; y así, juro por la intemerata eficacia, donde más santa y largamente se contiene, y por las entradas y salidas del santo Líbano monte, y por todo aquello que en su prohemio encierra la verdadera historia de Carlomagno, con la muerte del gigante Fierabrás, de no salir ni pasar del juramento hecho y del mandamiento de la más mínima y desechada destas señoras, so pena que si otra cosa hiciere o quisiere hacer, desde ahora para entonces y desde entonces para ahora, lo doy por nulo y no hecho ni valedero.

Aquí llegaba con su juramento el buen Loaysa, cuando una de las dos doncellas, que con atención le había estado escuchando, dio una gran voz diciendo:

-¡Este sí que es juramento para enternecer las piedras! ¡Mal haya yo si más quiero que jures, pues con sólo lo jurado podías entrar en la misma sima de Cabra!

Y, asiéndole de los gregüescos, le metió dentro, y luego todas las demás se le pusieron a la redonda. Luego fue una a dar las nuevas a su señora, la cual estaba haciendo centinela al sueño de su esposo; y, cuando la mensajera le dijo que ya subía el músico, se alegró y se turbó en un punto, y preguntó si había jurado. Respondióle que sí, y con la más nueva forma de juramento que en su vida había visto.

-Pues si ha jurado -dijo Leonora-, asido le tenemos. ¡Oh, qué avisada que anduve en hacelle que jurase!

En esto, llegó toda la caterva junta, y el músico en medio, alumbrándolos el negro y Guiomar la negra. Y, viendo Loaysa a Leonora, hizo muestras de arrojársele a los pies para besarle las manos. Ella, callando y por señas, le hizo levantar, y todas estaban como mudas, sin osar hablar, temerosas que su señor las oyese; lo cual considerado por Loaysa, les dijo que bien podían hablar alto, porque el ungüento con que estaba untado su señor tenía tal virtud que, fuera de quitar la vida, ponía a un hombre como muerto.

-Así lo creo yo -dijo Leonora-; que si así no fuera, ya él hubiera despertado veinte veces, según le hacen de sueño ligero sus muchas indisposiciones; pero, después que le unté, ronca como un animal.

-Pues eso es así -dijo la dueña-, vámonos a aquella sala frontera, donde podremos oír cantar aquí al señor y regocijarnos un poco.

-Vamos -dijo Leonora-; pero quédese aquí Guiomar por guarda, que nos avise si Carrizales despierta.

A lo cual respondió Guiomar:

-¡Yo, negra, quedo; blancas, van! ¡Dios perdone a todas!

Quedóse la negra; fuéronse a la sala, donde había un rico estrado, y, cogiendo al señor en medio, se sentaron todas. Y, tomando la buena Marialonso una vela, comenzó a mirar de arriba abajo al bueno del músico, y una decía: «¡Ay, qué copete que tiene tan lindo y tan rizado!» Otra: «¡Ay, qué blancura de dientes! ¡Mal año para piñones mondados, que más blancos ni más lindos sean!» Otra: «¡Ay, qué ojos tan grandes y tan rasgados! Y, por el siglo de mi madre, que son verdes; que no parecen sino que son de esmeraldas!» Ésta alababa la boca, aquélla los pies, y todas juntas hicieron dél una menuda anatomía y pepitoria. Sola Leonora callaba y le miraba, y le iba pareciendo de mejor talle que su velado.

En esto, la dueña tomó la guitarra, que tenía el negro, y se la puso en las manos de Loaysa, rogándole que la tocara y que cantara unas coplillas que entonces andaban muy validas en Sevilla, que decían:

Madre, la mi madre,
guardas me ponéis.

Cumplióle Loaysa su deseo. Levantáronse todas y se comenzaron a hacer pedazos bailando. Sabía la dueña las coplas, y cantólas con más gusto que buena voz; y fueron éstas:

Madre, la mi madre,
guardas me ponéis;
que si yo no me guardo,
no me guardaréis.

Dicen que está escrito,
y con gran razón,
ser la privación
causa de apetito;

crece en infinito
encerrado amor;

por eso es mejor
que no me encerréis;
que si yo, etc.

Si la voluntad
por sí no se guarda,
no la harán guarda
miedo o calidad;
romperá, en verdad,
por la misma muerte,

hasta hallar la suerte
que vos no entendéis;
que si yo, etc.

Quien tiene costumbre
de ser amorosa,

como mariposa
se irá tras su lumbre,

aunque muchedumbre
de guardas le pongan,
y aunque más propongan
de hacer lo que hacéis;
que si yo, etc.

Es de tal manera
la fuerza amorosa,
que a la más hermosa
la vuelve en quimera;
el pecho de cera,
de fuego la gana,

las manos de lana,
de fieltro los pies;
que si yo no me guardo,
mal me guardaréis.

Al fin llegaban de su canto y baile el corro de las mozas, guiado por la buena dueña, cuando llegó Guiomar, la centinela, toda turbada, hiriendo de pie y de mano como si tuviera alferecía; y, con voz entre ronca y baja, dijo:

-¡Despierto señor, señora; y, señora, despierto señor, y levantas y viene!

Quien ha visto banda de palomas estar comiendo en el campo, sin miedo, lo que ajenas manos sembraron, que al furioso estrépito de disparada escopeta se azora y levanta, y, olvidada del pasto, confusa y atónita, cruza por los aires, tal se imagine que quedó la banda y corro de las bailadoras, pasmadas y temerosas, oyendo la no esperada nueva que Guiomar había traído; y, procurando cada una su disculpa y todas juntas su remedio, cuál por una y cuál por otra parte, se fueron a esconder por los desvanes y rincones de la casa, dejando solo al músico; el cual, dejando la guitarra y el canto, lleno de turbación, no sabía qué hacerse.

Torcía Leonora sus hermosas manos; abofeteábase el rostro, aunque blandamente, la señora Marialonso. En fin, todo era confusión, sobresalto y miedo. Pero la dueña, como más astuta y reportada, dio orden que Loaysa se entrase en un aposento suyo, y que ella y su señora se quedarían en la sala, que no faltaría excusa que dar a su señor si allí las hallase.

Escondióse luego Loaysa, y la dueña se puso atenta a escuchar si su amo venía; y, no sintiendo rumor alguno, cobró ánimo, y poco a poco, paso ante paso, se fue llegando al aposento donde su señor dormía y oyó que roncaba como primero; y, asegurada de que dormía, alzó las faldas y volvió corriendo a pedir albricias a su señora del sueño de su amo, la cual se las mandó de muy entera voluntad.

No quiso la buena dueña perder la coyuntura que la suerte le ofrecía de gozar, primero que todas, las gracias que ésta se imaginaba que debía tener el músico; y así, diciéndole a Leonora que esperase en la sala, en tanto que iba a llamarlo, la dejó y se entró donde él estaba, no menos confuso que pensativo, esperando las nuevas de lo que hacía el viejo untado. Maldecía la falsedad del ungüento, y quejábase de la credulidad de sus amigos y del poco advertimiento que había tenido en no hacer primero la experiencia en otro antes de hacerla en Carrizales.

En esto, llegó la dueña y le aseguró que el viejo dormía a más y mejor; sosegó el pecho y estuvo atento a muchas palabras amorosas que Marialonso le dijo, de las cuales coligió la mala intención suya, y propuso en sí de ponerla por anzuelo para pescar a su señora. Y, estando los dos en sus pláticas, las demás criadas, que estaban escondidas por diversas partes de la casa, una de aquí y otra de allí, volvieron a ver si era verdad que su amo había despertado; y, viendo que todo estaba sepultado en silencio, llegaron a la sala donde habían dejado a su señora, de la cual supieron el sueño de su amo; y, preguntándole por el músico y por la dueña, les dijo dónde estaban, y todas, con el mismo silencio que habían traído, se llegaron a escuchar por entre las puertas lo que entrambos trataban.

No faltó de la junta Guiomar, la negra; el negro sí, porque, así como oyó que su amo había despertado, se abrazó con su guitarra y se fue a esconder en su pajar, y, cubierto con la manta de su pobre cama, sudaba y trasudaba de miedo; y, con todo eso, no dejaba de tentar las cuerdas de la guitarra: tanta era (encomendado él sea a Satanás) la afición que tenía a la música.

Entreoyeron las mozas los requiebros de la vieja, y cada una le dijo el nombre de las Pascuas: ninguna la llamó vieja que no fuese con su epíteto y adjetivo de hechicera y de barbuda, de antojadiza y de otros que por buen respecto se callan; pero lo que más risa causara a quien entonces las oyera eran las razones de Guiomar, la negra, que por ser portuguesa y no muy ladina, era extraña la gracia con que la vituperaba. En efeto, la conclusión de la plática de los dos fue que él condecendería con la voluntad della, cuando ella primero le entregase a toda su voluntad a su señora.

Cuesta arriba se le hizo a la dueña ofrecer lo que el músico pedía; pero, a trueco de cumplir el deseo que ya se le había apoderado del alma y de los huesos y médulas del cuerpo, le prometiera los imposibles que pudieran imaginarse. Dejóle y salió a hablar a su señora; y, como vio su puerta rodeada de todas las criadas, les dijo que se recogiesen a sus aposentos, que otra noche habría lugar para gozar con menos o con ningún sobresalto del músico, que ya aquella noche el alboroto les había agitado el gusto.

Bien entendieron todas que la vieja se quería quedar sola, pero no pudieron dejar de obedecerla, porque las mandaba a todas. Fuéronse las criadas y ella acudió a la sala a persuadir a Leonora acudiese a la voluntad de Loaysa, con una larga y tan concertada arenga, que pareció que de muchos días la tenía estudiada. Encarecióle su gentileza, su valor, su donaire y sus muchas gracias. Pintóle de cuánto más gusto le serían los abrazos del amante mozo que los del marido viejo, asegurándole el secreto y la duración del deleite, con otras cosas semejantes a éstas, que el demonio le puso en la lengua, llenas de colores retóricos, tan demostrativos y eficaces, que movieran no sólo el corazón tierno y poco advertido de la simple e incauta Leonora, sino el de un endurecido mármol. ¡Oh dueñas, nacidas y usadas en el mundo para perdición de mil recatadas y buenas intenciones! ¡Oh, luengas y repulgadas tocas, escogidas para autorizar las salas y los estrados de señoras principales, y cuán al revés de lo que debíades usáis de vuestro casi ya forzoso oficio! En fin, tanto dijo la dueña, tanto persuadió la dueña, que Leonora se rindió, Leonora se engañó y Leonora se perdió, dando en tierra con todas las prevenciones del discreto Carrizales, que dormía el sueño de la muerte de su honra.

Tomó Marialonso por la mano a su señora, y, casi por fuerza, preñados de lágrimas los ojos, la llevó donde Loaysa estaba; y, echándoles la bendición con una risa falsa de demonio, cerrando tras sí la puerta, los dejó encerrados, y ella se puso a dormir en el estrado, o, por mejor decir, a esperar su contento de recudida. Pero, como el desvelo de las pasadas noches la venciese, se quedó dormida en el estrado.

Bueno fuera en esta sazón preguntar a Carrizales, a no saber que dormía, que adónde estaban sus advertidos recatos, sus recelos, sus advertimientos, sus persuaciones, los altos muros de su casa, el no haber entrado en ella, ni aun en sombra, alguien que tuviese nombre de varón, el torno estrecho, las gruesas paredes, las ventanas sin luz, el encerramiento notable, la gran dote en que a Leonora había dotado, los regalos continuos que la hacía, el buen tratamiento de sus criadas y esclavas; el no faltar un punto a todo aquello que él imaginaba que habían menester, que podían desear... Pero ya queda dicho que no había que preguntárselo, porque dormía más de aquello que fuera menester; y si él lo oyera y acaso respondiera, no podía dar mejor respuesta que encoger los hombros y enarcar las cejas y decir: «¡Todo aque-so derribó por los fundamentos la astucia, a lo que yo creo, de un mozo holgazán y vicioso, y la malicia de una falsa dueña, con la inadvertencia de una muchacha rogada y persuadida!» Libre Dios a cada uno de tales enemigos, contra los cuales no hay escudo de prudencia que defienda ni espada de recato que corte.

Pero, con todo esto, el valor de Leonora fue tal, que, en el tiempo que más le convenía, le mostró contra las fuerzas villanas de su astuto engañador, pues no fueron bastantes a vencerla, y él se cansó en balde, y ella quedó vencedora y entrambos dormidos. Y, en esto, ordenó el cielo que, a pesar del ungüento, Carrizales despertase, y, como tenía de costumbre, tentó la cama por todas partes; y, no hallando en ella a su querida esposa, saltó de la cama des-pavorido y atónito, con más ligereza y desnudo que sus muchos años prometían. Y cuando en el aposento no halló a su esposa, y le vio abierto y que le faltaba la llave de entre los colchones, pensó perder el juicio. Pero, reportándose un poco, salió al corredor, y de allí, andando pie ante pie por no ser sentido, llegó a la sala donde la dueña dormía; y, viéndola sola, sin Leonora, fue al aposento de la dueña, y, abriendo la puerta muy quedo, vio lo que nunca quisiera haber visto, vio lo que diera por bien empleado no tener ojos para verlo: vio a Leonora en brazos de Loaysa, durmiendo tan a sueño suelto como si en ellos obrara la virtud del ungüento y no en el celoso anciano.

Sin pulsos quedó Carrizales con la amarga vista de lo que miraba; la voz se le pegó a la garganta, los brazos se le cayeron de desmayo, y quedó hecho una estatua de mármol frío; y, aunque la cólera hizo su natural oficio, avivándole los casi muertos espíritus, pudo tanto el dolor, que no le dejó tomar aliento. Y, con todo eso, tomara la venganza que aquella grande maldad requería si se hallara con armas para poder tomarla; y así, determinó volverse a su aposento a tomar una daga y volver a sacar las manchas de su honra con sangre de sus dos enemigos, y aun con toda aquella de toda la gente de su casa. Con esta determinación honrosa y necesaria volvió, con el mismo silencio y recato que había venido, a su estancia, donde le apretó el corazón tanto el dolor y la angustia que, sin ser poderoso a otra cosa, se dejó caer desmayado sobre el lecho.

Llegóse en esto el día, y cogió a los nuevos adúlteros enlazados en la red de sus brazos. Despertó Marialonso y quiso acudir por lo que, a su parecer, le tocaba; pero, viendo que era tarde, quiso dejarlo para la venidera noche. Alborotóse Leonora, viendo tan entrado el día, y maldijo su descuido y el de la maldita dueña; y las dos, con sobresaltados pasos, fueron donde estaba su esposo, rogando entre dientes al cielo que le hallasen todavía roncando; y, cuando le vieron encima de la cama callando, creyeron que todavía obraba la untura, pues dormía, y con gran regocijo se abrazaron la una a la otra. Llegóse Leonora a su marido, y asiéndole de un brazo le volvió de un lado a otro, por ver si despertaba sin ponerles en necesidad de lavarle con vinagre, como decían era menester para que en sí volviese. Pero con el movimiento volvió Carrizales de su desmayo, y, dando un profundo suspiro, con una voz lamentable y desmayada dijo:

-¡Desdichado de mí, y a qué tristes términos me ha traído mi fortuna!

No entendió bien Leonora lo que dijo su esposo; mas, como le vio despierto y que hablaba, admirada de ver que la virtud del ungüento no duraba tanto como habían significado, se llegó a él, y, poniendo su rostro con el suyo, teniéndole estrechamente abrazado, le dijo:

-¿Qué tenéis, señor mío, que me parece que os estáis quejando?

Oyó la voz de la dulce enemiga suya el desdichado viejo, y, abriendo los ojos desencasadamente, como atónito y embelesado, los puso en ella, y con grande ahínco, sin mover pestaña, la estuvo mirando una gran pieza, al cabo de la cual le dijo:

-Hacedme placer, señora, que luego luego enviéis a llamar a vuestros padres de mi parte, porque siento no sé qué en el corazón que me da grandísima fatiga, y temo que brevemente me ha de quitar la vida, y querríalos ver antes que me muriese.

Sin duda creyó Leonora ser verdad lo que su marido le decía, pensando antes que la fortaleza del ungüento, y no lo que había visto, le tenía en aquel trance; y, respondiéndole que haría lo que la mandaba, mandó al negro que luego al punto fuese a llamar a sus padres, y, abrazándose con su esposo, le hacía las mayores caricias que jamás le había hecho, preguntándole qué era lo que sentía, con tan tiernas y amorosas palabras, como si fuera la cosa del mundo que más amaba. Él la miraba con el embelesamiento que se ha dicho, siéndole cada palabra o caricia que le hacía una lanzada que le atravesaba el alma.

Ya la dueña había dicho a la gente de casa y a Loaysa la enfermedad de su amo, encareciéndoles que debía de ser de momento, pues se le había olvidado de mandar cerrar las puertas de la calle cuando el negro salió a llamar a los padres de su señora; de la cual embajada asimismo se admiraron, por no haber entrado ninguno dellos en aquella casa después que casaron a su hija.

En fin, todos andaban callados y suspensos, no dando en la verdad de la causa de la indisposición de su amo; el cual, de rato en rato, tan profunda y dolorosamente suspiraba, que con cada suspiro parecía arrancársele el alma.

Lloraba Leonora por verle de aquella suerte, y reíase él con una risa de persona que estaba fuera de sí, considerando la falsedad de sus lágrimas.

En esto, llegaron los padres de Leonora, y, como hallaron la puerta de la calle y la del patio abiertas y la casa sepultada en silencio y sola, quedaron admirados y con no pequeño sobresalto. Fueron al aposento de su yerno y halláronle, como se ha dicho, siempre clavados los ojos en su esposa, a la cual tenía asida de las manos, derramando los dos muchas lágrimas: ella, con no más ocasión de verlas derramar a su esposo; él, por ver cuán fingidamente ella las derramaba.

Así como sus padres entraron, habló Carrizales, y dijo:

-Siéntense aquí vuestas mercedes, y todos los demás dejen desocupado este aposento, y sólo quede la señora Marialonso.

Hiciéronlo así; y, quedando solos los cinco, sin esperar que otro hablase, con sosegada voz, limpiándose los ojos, desta manera dijo Carrizales:

-Bien seguro estoy, padres y señores míos, que no será menester traerlos testigos para que me creáis una verdad que quiero deciros. Bien se os debe acordar (que no es posible se os haya caído de la memoria) con cuánto amor, con cuán buenas entrañas, hace hoy un año, un mes, cinco días y nueve horas que me entregastes a vuestra querida hija por legítima mujer mía. También sabéis con cuánta liberalidad la doté, pues fue tal la dote, que más de tres de su misma calidad se pudieran casar con opinión de ricas. Asimismo, se os debe acordar la diligencia que puse en vestirla y adornarla de todo aquello que ella se acertó a desear y yo alcancé a saber que le convenía. Ni más ni menos habéis visto, señores, cómo, llevado de mi natural condición y temeroso del mal de que, sin duda, he de morir, y experimentado por mi mucha edad en los estraños y varios acaescimientos del mundo, quise guardar esta joya, que yo escogí y vosotros me distes, con el mayor recato que me fue posible. Alcé las murallas desta casa, quité la vista a las ventanas de la calle, doblé las cerraduras de las puertas, púsele torno como a monasterio; desterré perpetuamente della todo aquello que sombra o nombre de varón tuviese. Dile criadas y esclavas que la sirviesen, ni les negué a ellas ni a ella cuanto quisieron pedirme; hícela mi igual, comuniquéle mis más secretos pensamientos, entreguéla toda mi hacienda. Todas éstas eran obras para que, si bien lo considerara, yo viviera seguro de gozar sin sobresalto lo que tanto me había costado y ella procurara no darme ocasión a que ningún género de temor celoso entrara en mi pensamiento. Mas, como no se puede prevenir con diligencia humana el castigo que la voluntad divina quiere dar a los que en ella no ponen del todo en todo sus deseos y esperanzas, no es mucho que yo quede defraudado en las mías, y que yo mismo haya sido el fabricante del veneno que me va quitando la vida. Pero, porque veo la suspensión en que todos estáis, colgados de las palabras de mi boca, quiero concluir los largos preámbulos desta plática con deciros en una palabra lo que no es posible decirse en millares dellas. Digo, pues, señores, que todo lo que he dicho y hecho ha parado en que esta madrugada hallé a ésta, nacida en el mundo para perdición de mi sosiego y fin de mi vida (y esto, señalando a su esposa), en los brazos de un gallardo mancebo, que en la estancia desta pestífera dueña ahora está encerrado.

Apenas acabó estas últimas palabras Carrizales, cuando a Leonora se le cubrió el corazón, y en las mismas rodillas de su marido se cayó desmayada. Perdió la color Marialonso, y a las gargantas de los padres de Leonora se les atravesó un nudo que no les dejaba hablar palabra. Pero, prosiguiendo adelante Carrizales, dijo:

-La venganza que pienso tomar desta afrenta no es, ni ha de ser, de las que ordinariamente suelen tomarse, pues quiero que, así como yo fui estremado en lo que hice, así sea la venganza que tomaré, tomándola de mí mismo como del más culpado en este delito; que debiera considerar que mal podían estar ni compadecerse en uno los quince años desta muchacha con los casi ochenta míos. Yo fui el que, como el gusano de seda, me fabriqué la casa donde muriese, y a ti no te culpo, ¡oh niña mal aconsejada! (y, diciendo esto, se inclinó y besó el rostro de la desmayada Leonora). No te culpo, digo, porque persuaciones de viejas taimadas y requiebros de mozos enamorados fácilmente vencen y triunfan del poco ingenio que los pocos años encierran. Mas, porque todo el mundo vea el valor de los quilates de la voluntad y fe con que te quise, en este último trance de mi vida quiero mostrarlo de modo que quede en el mundo por ejemplo, si no de bondad, al menos de simplicidad jamás oída ni vista; y así, quiero que se traiga luego aquí un escribano, para hacer de nuevo mi testamento, en el cual mandaré doblar la dote a Leonora y le rogaré que, después de mis días, que serán bien breves, disponga su voluntad, pues lo podrá hacer sin fuerza, a casarse con aquel mozo, a quien nunca ofendieron las canas deste lastimado viejo; y así verá que, si viviendo jamás salí un punto de lo que pude pensar ser su gusto, en la muerte hago lo mismo, y quiero que le tenga con el que ella debe de querer tanto. La demás hacienda mandaré a otras obras pías; y a vosotros, señores míos, dejaré con que podáis vivir honradamente lo que de la vida os queda. La venida del escribano sea luego, porque la pasión que tengo me aprieta de manera que, a más andar, me va acortando los pasos de la vida.

Esto dicho, le sobrevino un terrible desmayo, y se dejó caer tan junto de Leonora, que se juntaron los rostros: ¡estraño y triste espectáculo para los padres, que a su querida hija y a su amado yerno miraban! No quiso la mala dueña esperar a las reprehensiones que pensó le darían los padres de su señora; y así, se salió del aposento y fue a decir a Loaysa todo lo que pasaba, aconsejándole que luego al punto se fuese de aquella casa, que ella tendría cuidado de avisarle con el negro lo que sucediese, pues ya no había puertas ni llaves que lo impidiesen. Admiróse Loaysa con tales nuevas, y, tomando el consejo, volvió a vestirse como pobre, y fuese a dar cuenta a sus amigos del extraño y nunca visto suceso de sus amores.

En tanto, pues, que los dos estaban transportados, el padre de Leonora envió a llamar a un escribano amigo suyo, el cual vino a tiempo que ya habían vuelto hija y yerno en su acuerdo. Hizo Carrizales su testamento en la manera que había dicho, sin declarar el yerro de Leonora, más de que por buenos respectos le pedía y rogaba se casase, si acaso él muriese, con aquel mancebo que él la había dicho en secreto. Cuando esto oyó Leonora, se arrojó a los pies de su marido y, saltándole el corazón en el pecho, le dijo:

-Vivid vos muchos años, mi señor y mi bien todo, que, puesto caso que no estáis obligado a creerme ninguna cosa de las que os dijere, sabed que no os he ofendido sino con el pensamiento.

Y, comenzando a disculparse y a contar por extenso la verdad del caso, no pudo mover la lengua y volvió a desmayarse. Abrazóla así desmayada el lastimado viejo; abrazáronla sus padres; lloraron todos tan amargamente, que obligaron y aun forzaron a que en ellas les acompañase el escribano que hacía el testamento, en el cual dejó de comer a todas las criadas de casa, horras las esclavas y el negro, y a la falsa de Marialonso no le mandó otra cosa que la paga de su salario; mas, sea lo que fuere, el dolor le apretó de manera que al seteno día le llevaron a la sepultura.

Quedó Leonora viuda, llorosa y rica; y cuando Loaysa esperaba que cumplierse lo que ya él sabía que su marido en su testamento dejaba mandado, vio que dentro de una semana se entró monja en uno de los más recogidos monasterios de la ciudad. Él, despechado y casi corrido, se pasó a las Indias. Quedaron los padres de Leonora tristísimos, aunque se consolaron con lo que su yerno les había dejado y mandado por su testamento. Las criadas se consolaron con lo mismo, y las esclavas y esclavo con la libertad; y la malvada de la dueña, pobre y defraudada de todos sus malos pensamientos.

Y yo quedé con el deseo de llegar al fin deste suceso: ejemplo y espejo de lo poco que hay que fiar de llaves, tornos y paredes cuando queda la voluntad libre; y de lo menos que hay que confiar de verdes y pocos años, si les andan al oído exhortaciones destas dueñas de monjil negro y tendido, y tocas blancas y luengas. Sólo no sé qué fue la causa que Leonora no puso más ahínco en disculparse, y dar a entender a su celoso marido cuán limpia y sin ofensa había quedado en aquel suceso; pero la turbación le ató la lengua, y la priesa que se dio a morir su marido no dio lugar a su disculpa.

La ilustre fregona

EN BURGOS, ciudad ilustre y famosa, no ha muchos años que en ella vivían dos caballeros principales y ricos: el uno se llamaba don Diego de Carriazo y el otro don Juan de Avendaño. El don Diego tuvo un hijo, a quien llamó de su mismo nombre, y el don Juan otro, a quien puso don Tomás de Avendaño. A estos dos caballeros mozos, como quien han de ser las principales personas deste cuento, por escusar y ahorrar letras, les llamaremos con solos los nombres de Carriazo y de Avendaño.

Trece años, o poco más, tendría Carriazo cuando, llevado de una inclinación picaresca, sin forzarle a ello algún mal tratamiento que sus padres le hiciesen, sólo por su gusto y antojo, se desgarró, como dicen los muchachos, de casa de sus padres, y se fue por ese mundo adelante, tan contento de la vida libre, que, en la mitad de las incomodidades y miserias que trae consigo, no echaba menos la abundancia de la casa de su padre, ni el andar a pie le cansaba, ni el frío le ofendía, ni el calor le enfadaba. Para él todos los tiempos del año le eran dulce y templada primavera; tan bien dormía en parvas como en colchones; con tanto gusto se soterraba en un pajar de un mesón, como si se acostara entre dos sábanas de holanda. Finalmente, él salió tan bien con el asunto de pícaro, que pudiera leer cátedra en la facultad al famoso de Alfarache.

En tres años que tardó en parecer y volver a su casa, aprendió a jugar a la taba en Madrid, y al rentoy en las Ventillas de Toledo, y a presa y pinta en pie en las barbacanas de Sevilla; pero, con serle anejo a este género de vida la miseria y estrechez, mostraba Carriazo ser un príncipe en sus cosas: a tiro de escopeta, en mil señales, descubría ser bien nacido, porque era generoso y bien partido con sus camaradas. Visitaba pocas veces las ermitas de Baco, y, aunque bebía vino, era tan poco que nunca pudo entrar en el número de los que llaman desgraciados, que, con alguna cosa que beban demasiada, luego se les pone el rostro como si se le hubiesen jalbegado con bermellón y almagre. En fin, en Carriazo vio el mundo un pícaro virtuoso, limpio, bien criado y más que medianamente discreto. Pasó por todos los grados de pícaro hasta que se graduó de maestro en las almadrabas de Zahara, donde es el finibusterra de la picaresca.

os llaméis pícaros si no habéis cursado dos cursos en la academia de la pesca de los atunes. ¡Allí, allí, que está en su centro el trabajo junto con la poltronería! Allí está la suciedad limpia, la gordura rolliza, la hambre prompta, la hartura abundante, sin disfraz el vicio, el juego siempre, las pendencias por momentos, las muertes por puntos, las pullas a cada paso, los bailes como en bodas, las seguidillas como en estampa, los romances con estribos, la poesía sin acciones. Aquí se canta, allí se reniega, acullá se riñe, acá se juega, y por todo se hurta. Allí campea la libertad y luce el trabajo; allí van o envían muchos padres principales a buscar a sus hijos y los hallan; y tanto sienten sacarlos de aquella vida como si los llevaran a dar la muerte.

Pero toda esta dulzura que he pintado tiene un amargo acíbar que la amarga, y es no poder dormir sueño seguro, sin el temor de que en un instante los trasladan de Zahara a Berbería. Por esto, las noches se recogen a unas torres de la marina, y tienen sus atajadores y centinelas, en confianza de cuyos ojos cierran ellos los suyos, puesto que tal vez ha sucedido que centinelas y atajadores, pícaros, mayores, barcos y redes, con toda la turbamulta que allí se ocupa, han anochecido en España y amanecido en Tetuán. Pero no fue parte este temor para que nuestro Carriazo dejase de acudir allí tres veranos a darse buen tiempo. El último verano le dijo tan bien la suerte, que ganó a los naipes cerca de setecientos reales, con los cuales quiso vestirse y volverse a Burgos, y a los ojos de su madre, que habían derramado por él muchas lágrimas. Despidióse de sus amigos, que los tenía muchos y muy buenos; prometiéndoles que el verano siguiente sería con ellos, si enfermedad o muerte no lo estorbaba. Dejó con ellos la mitad de su alma, y todos sus deseos entregó a aquellas secas arenas, que a él le parecían más frescas y verdes que los Campos Elíseos. Y, por estar ya acostumbrado de caminar a pie, tomó el camino en la mano, y sobre dos alpargates, se llegó desde Zahara hasta Valladolid cantando Tres ánades, madre.

Estúvose allí quince días para reformar la color del rostro, sacándola de mulata a flamenca, y para trastejarse y sacarse del borrador de pícaro y ponerse en limpio de caballero. Todo esto hizo según y como le dieron comodidad quinientos reales con que llegó a Valladolid; y aun dellos reservó ciento para alquilar una mula y un mozo, con que se presentó a sus padres honrado y contento. Ellos le recibieron con mucha alegría, y todos sus amigos y parientes vinieron a darles el parabién de la buena venida del señor don Diego de Carriazo, su hijo. Es de advertir que, en su peregrinación, don Diego mudó el nombre de Carriazo en el de Urdiales, y con este nombre se hizo llamar de los que el suyo no sabían.

Entre los que vinieron a ver el recién llegado, fueron don Juan de Avendaño y su hijo don Tomás, con quien Carriazo, por ser ambos de una misma edad y vecinos, trabó y confirmó una amistad estrechísima. Contó Carriazo a sus padres y a todos mil magníficas y luengas mentiras de cosas que le habían sucedido en los tres años de su ausencia; pero nunca tocó, ni por pienso, en las almadrabas, puesto que en ellas tenía de continuo puesta la imaginación: especialmente cuando vio que se llegaba el tiempo donde había prometido a sus amigos la vuelta. Ni le entretenía la caza, en que su padre le ocupaba, ni los muchos, honestos y gustosos convites que en aquella ciudad se usan le daban gusto: todo pasatiempo le cansaba, y a todos los mayores que se le ofrecían anteponía el que había recibido en las almadrabas.

Avendaño, su amigo, viéndole muchas veces melancólico e imaginativo, fiado en su amistad, se atrevió a preguntarle la causa, y se obligó a remediarla, si pudiese y fuese menester, con su sangre misma. No quiso Carriazo tenérsela encubierta, por no hacer agravio a la grande amistad que profesaban; y así, le contó punto por punto la vida de la jábega, y cómo todas sus tristezas y pensamientos nacían del deseo que tenía de volver a ella; pintósela de modo que Avendaño, cuando le acabó de oír, antes alabó que vituperó su gusto.

En fin, el de la plática fue disponer Carriazo la voluntad de Avendaño de manera que determinó de irse con él a gozar un verano de aquella felicísima vida que le había descrito, de lo cual quedó sobremodo contento Carriazo, por parecerle que había ganado un testigo de abono que calificase su baja determinación. Trazaron, ansimismo, de juntar todo el dinero que pudiesen; y el mejor modo que hallaron fue que de allí a dos meses había de ir Avendaño a Salamanca, donde por su gusto tres años había estado estudiando las lenguas griega y latina, y su padre quería que pasase adelante y estudiase la facultad que él quisiese, y que del dinero que le diese habría para lo que deseaban.

En este tiempo, propuso Carriazo a su padre que tenía voluntad de irse con Avendaño a estudiar a Salamanca. Vino su padre con tanto gusto en ello que, hablando al de Avendaño, ordenaron de ponerles juntos casa en Salamanca, con todos los requisitos que pedían ser hijos suyos.

Llegóse el tiempo de la partida; proveyéronles de dineros y enviaron con ellos un ayo que los gobernase, que tenía más de hombre de bien que de discreto. Los padres dieron documentos a sus hijos de lo que habían de hacer y de cómo se habían de gobernar para salir aprovechados en la virtud y en las ciencias, que es el fruto que todo estudiante debe pretender sacar de sus trabajos y vigiliass, principalmente los bien nacidos. Mostráronse los hijos humildes y obedientes; lloraron las madres; recibieron la bendición de todos; pusiéronse en camino con mulas propias y con dos criados de casa, amén del ayo, que se había dejado crecer la barba porque diese autoridad a su cargo.

En llegando a la ciudad de Valladolid, dijeron al ayo que querían estarse en aquel lugar dos días para verle, porque nunca le habían visto ni estado en él. Reprehendiólos mucho el ayo, severa y ásperamente, la estada, diciéndoles que los que iban a estudiar con tanta priesa como ellos no se habían de detener una hora a mirar niñerías, cuanto más dos días, y que él formaría escrúpulo si los dejaba detener un solo punto, y que se partiesen luego, y si no, que sobre eso, morena.

Hasta aquí se extendía la habilidad del señor ayo, o mayordomo, como más nos diere gusto llamarle. Los mancebitos, que tenían ya hecho su agosto y su vendimia, pues habían ya robado cuatrocientos escudos de oro que llevaba su mayor, dijeron que sólo los dejase aquel día, en el cual querían ir a ver la fuente de Argales, que la comenzaban a conducir a la ciudad por grandes y espaciosos acueductos. En efeto, aunque con dolor de su ánima, les dio licencia, porque él quisiera escusar el gasto de aquella noche y hacerle en Valdeastillas, y repartir las diez y ocho leguas que hay desde Valdeastillas a Salamanca en dos días, y no las veinte y dos que hay desde Valladolid; pero, como uno piensa el bayo y otro el que le ensilla, todo le sucedió al revés de lo que él quisiera.

Los mancebos, con solo un criado y a caballo en dos muy buenas y caseras mulas, salieron a ver la fuente de Argales, famosa por su antigüedad y sus aguas, a despecho del Caño Dorado y de la reverenda Priora, con paz sea dicho de Leganitos y de la estremadísima fuente Castellana, en cuya competencia pueden callar Corpa y la Pizarra de la Mancha. Llegaron a Argales, y cuando creyó el criado que sacaba Avendaño de las bolsas del cojín alguna cosa con que beber, vio que sacó una carta cerrada, diciéndole que luego al punto volviese a la ciudad y se la diese a su ayo, y que en dándosela les esperase en la puerta del Campo.

Obedeció el criado, tomó la carta, volvió a la ciudad, y ellos volvieron las riendas y aquella noche durmieron en Mojados, y de allí a dos días en Madrid; y en otros cuatro se vendieron las mulas en pública plaza, y hubo quien les fiase por seis escudos de prometido, y aun quien les diese el dinero en oro por sus cabales. Vistiéronse a lo payo, con capotillos de dos haldas, zahones o zaragüelles y medias de paño pardo. Roperero hubo que por la mañana les compró sus vestidos y a la noche los había mudado de manera que no los conociera la propia madre que los había parido. Puestos, pues, a la ligera y del modo que Avendaño quiso y supo, se pusieron en camino de Toledo ad pedem literae y sin espadas; que también el ropero, aunque no atañía a su menester, se las había comprado.

Dejémoslos ir, por ahora, pues van contentos y alegres, y volvamos a contar lo que el ayo hizo cuando abrió la carta que el criado le llevó y halló que decía desta manera:

Vuesa merced será servido, señor Pedro Alonso, de tener paciencia y dar la vuelta a Burgos, donde dirá a nuestros padres que, habiendo nosotros sus hijos, con madura consideración, considerado cuán más propias son de los caballeros las armas que las letras, habemos determinado de trocar a Salamanca por Bruselas y a España por Flandes. Los cuatrocientos escudos llevamos; las mulas pensamos vender. Nuestra hidalga intención y el largo camino es bastante disculpa de nuestro yerro, aunque nadie le juzgará por tal si no es cobarde. Nuestra partida es ahora; la vuelta será cuando Dios fuere servido, el cual guarde a vuesa merced como puede y estos sus menores discípulos deseamos.

De la fuente de Argales, puesto ya el pie en el estribo para caminar a Flandes.

Quedó Pedro Alonso suspenso en leyendo la epístola y acudió presto a su valija, y el hallarla vacía le acabó de confirmar la verdad de la carta; y luego al punto, en la mula que le había quedado, se partió a Burgos a dar las nuevas a sus amos con toda presteza, porque con ella pusiesen remedio y diesen traza de alcanzar a sus hijos. Pero destas cosas no dice nada el autor desta novela, porque, así como dejó puesto a caballo a Pedro Alonso, volvió a contar de lo que les sucedió a Avendaño y a Carriazo a la entrada de Illescas, diciendo que al entrar de la puerta de la villa encontraron dos mozos de mulas, al parecer andaluces, en calzones de lienzo anchos, jubones acuchillados de anjeo, sus coletos de ante, dagas de ganchos y espadas sin tiros; al parecer, el uno venía de Sevilla y el otro iba a ella. El que iba estaba diciendo al otro:

-Si no fueran mis amos tan adelante, todavía me detuviera algo más a preguntarte mil cosas que deseo saber, porque me has maravillado mucho con lo que has contado de que el conde ha ahorcado a Alonso Genís y a Ribera, sin querer otorgarles la apelación.

-¡Oh pecador de mí! -replicó el sevillano-. Armóles el conde zancadilla y cogiólos debajo de su jurisdicción, que eran soldados, y por contrabando se aprovechó dellos, sin que la Audiencia se los pudiese quitar. Sábetelo, amigo, que tiene un Bercebú en el cuerpo este conde de Puñonrostro, que nos mete los dedos de su puño en el alma. Barrida está Sevilla y diez leguas a la redonda de jácara; no para ladrón en sus contornos. Todos le temen como al fuego, aunque ya se suena que dejará presto el cargo de Asistente, porque no tiene condición para verse a cada paso en dimes ni diretes con los señores de la Audiencia.

-¡Vivan ellos mil años -dijo el que iba a Sevilla-, que son padres de los miserables y amparo de los desdichados! ¡Cuántos pobretes están mascando barro no más de por la cólera de un juez absoluto, de un corregidor, o mal informado o bien apasionado! Más veen muchos ojos que dos: no se apodera tan presto el veneno de la injusticia de muchos corazones como se apodera de uno solo.

-Predicador te has vuelto -dijo el de Sevilla-, y, según llevas la retahíla, no acabarás tan presto, y yo no te puedo aguardar; y esta noche no vayas a posar donde sueles, sino en la posada del Sevillano, porque verás en ella la más hermosa fregona que se sabe. Marinilla, la de la venta Tejada, es asco en su comparación; no te digo más sino que hay fama que el hijo del Corregidor bebe los vientos por ella. Uno desos mis amos que allá van jura que, al volver que vuelva al Andalucía, se ha de estar dos meses en Toledo y en la misma posada, sólo por hartarse de mirarla. Ya le dejo yo en señal un pellizco, y me llevo en contracambio un gran torniscón. Es dura como un mármol, y zahareña como villana de Sayago, y áspera como una ortiga; pero tiene una cara de pascua y un rostro de buen año: en una mejilla tiene el sol y en la otra la luna; la una es hecha de rosas y la otra de claveles, y en entrambas hay también azucenas y jazmines. No te digo más, sino que la veas, y verás que no te he dicho nada, según lo que te pudiera decir, acerca de su hermosura. En las dos mulas rucias que sabes que tengo mías, la dotara de buena gana, si me la quisieran dar por mujer; pero yo sé que no me la darán, que es joya para un arcipreste o para un conde. Y otra vez torno a decir que allá lo verás. Y adiós, que me mudo.

Con esto se despidieron los dos mozos de mulas, cuya plática y conversación dejó mudos a los dos amigos que escuchado la habían, especialmente Avendaño, en quien la simple relación que el mozo de mulas había hecho de la hermosura de la fregona despertó en él un intenso deseo de verla. También le despertó en Carriazo; pero no de manera que no desease más llegar a sus almadrabas que detenerse a ver las pirámides de Egipto, o otra de las siete maravillas, o todas juntas.

En repetir las palabras de los mozos, y en remedar y contrahacer el modo y los ademanes con que las decían, entretuvieron el camino hasta Toledo; y luego, siendo la guía Carriazo, que ya otra vez había estado en aquella ciudad, bajando por la Sangre de Cristo, dieron con la posada del Sevillano; pero no se atrevieron a pedirla allí, porque su traje no lo pedía.

Era ya anochecido, y, aunque Carriazo importunaba a Avendaño que fuesen a otra parte a buscar posada, no le pudo quitar de la puerta de la del Sevillano, esperando si acaso parecía la tan celebrada fregona. Entrábase la noche y la fregona no salía; desesperábase Carriazo, y Avendaño se estaba quedado; el cual, por salir con su intención, con excusa de preguntar por unos caballeros de Burgos que iban a la ciudad de Sevilla, se entró hasta el patio de la posada; y, apenas hubo entrado, cuando de una sala que en el patio estaba vio salir una moza, al parecer de quince años, poco más o menos, vestida como labradora, con una vela encendida en un candelero.

No puso Avendaño los ojos en el vestido y traje de la moza, sino en su rostro, que le parecía ver en él los que suelen pintar de los ángeles. Quedó suspenso y atónito de su hermosura, y no acertó a preguntarle nada: tal era su suspensión y embelesamiento. La moza, viendo aquel hombre delante de sí, le dijo:

-¿Qué busca, hermano? ¿Es por ventura criado de alguno de los huéspedes de casa?

-No soy criado de ninguno, sino vuestro -respondió Avendaño, todo lleno de turbación y sobresalto.

La moza, que de aquel modo se vio responder, dijo:

-Vaya, hermano, norabuena, que las que servimos no hemos menester criados. Y, llamando a su señor, le dijo:

-Mire, señor, lo que busca este mancebo.

Salió su amo y preguntóle qué buscaba. Él respondió que a unos caballeros de Burgos que iban a Sevilla, uno de los cuales era su señor, el cual le había enviado delante por Alcalá de Henares, donde había de hacer un negocio que les importaba; y que junto con esto le mandó que se viniese a Toledo y le esperase en la posada del Sevillano, donde vendría a apearse; y que pensaba que llegaría aquella noche o otro día a más tardar. Tan buen color dio Avendaño a su mentira, que a la cuenta del huésped pasó por verdad, pues le dijo:

-Quédese, amigo, en la posada, que aquí podrá esperar a su señor hasta que venga.

-Muchas mercedes, señor huésped -respondió Avendaño-; y mande vuesa merced que se me dé un aposento para mí y un compañero que viene conmigo, que está allí fuera, que dineros traemos para pagarlo tan bien como otro.

-En buen hora -respondió el huésped.

Y, volviéndose a la moza, dijo:

-Costancica, di a Argüello que lleve a estos galanes al aposento del rincón y que les eche sábanas limpias.

-Sí haré, señor -respondió Costanza, que así se llamaba la doncella.

Y, haciendo una reverencia a su amo, se les quitó delante, cuya ausencia fue para Avendaño lo que suele ser al caminante ponerse el sol y sobrevenir la noche lóbrega y oscura. Con todo esto, salió a dar cuenta a Carriazo de lo que había visto y de lo que dejaba negociado; el cual por mil señales conoció cómo su amigo venía herido de la amorosa pestilencia; pero no le quiso decir nada por entonces, hasta ver si lo merecía la causa de quien nacían las extraordinarias alabanzas y grandes hipérboles con que la belleza de Costanza sobre los mismos cielos levantaba.

Entraron, en fin, en la posada, y la Argüello, que era una mujer de hasta cuarenta y cinco años, superintendente de las camas y aderezo de los aposentos, los llevó a uno que ni era de caballeros ni de criados, sino de gente que podía hacer medio entre los dos extremos. Pidieron de cenar; respondiéndoles Argüello que en aquella posada no daban de comer a nadie, puesto que guisaban y aderezaban lo que los huéspedes traían de fuera comprado; pero que bodegones y casas de estado había cerca, donde sin escrúpulo de conciencia podían ir a cenar lo que quisiesen.

Tomaron los dos el consejo de Argüello, y dieron con sus cuerpos en un bodega, donde Carriazo cenó lo que le dieron y Avendaño lo que con él llevaba: que fueron pensamientos e imaginaciones. Lo poco o nada que Avendaño comía admiraba mucho a Carriazo. Por enterarse del todo de los pensamientos de su amigo, al volverse a la posada, le dijo:

-Conviene que mañana madruguem, porque antes que entre la calor estemos ya en Orgaz.

-No estoy en eso -respondió Avendaño-, porque pienso antes que desta ciudad me parta ver lo que dicen que hay famoso en ella, como es el Sagrario, el artificio de Juanelo, las Vistillas de San Agustín, la Huerta del Rey y la Vega.

-Norabuena -respondió Carriazo-: eso en dos días se podrá ver.

-En verdad que lo he de tomar de espacio, que no vamos a Roma a alcanzar alguna vacante.

-¡Ta, ta! -replicó Carriazo-. A mí me maten, amigo, si no estáis vos con más deseo de quedaros en Toledo que de seguir nuestra comenzada romería.

-Así es la verdad -respondió Avendaño-; y tan imposible será apartarme de ver el rostro desta doncella, como no es posible ir al cielo sin buenas obras.

-¡Gallardo encarecimiento -dijo Carriazo-y determinación digna de un tan generoso pecho como el vuestro! ¡Bien cuadra un don Tomás de Avendaño, hijo de don Juan de Avendaño (caballero, lo que es bueno; rico, lo que basta; mozo, lo que alegra; discreto, lo que admira), con enamorado y perdido por una fregona que sirve en el mesón del Sevillano!

-Lo mismo me parece a mí que es -respondió Avendaño-considerar un don Diego de Carriazo, hijo del mismo, caballero del hábito de Alcántara el padre, y el hijo a pique de heredarle con su mayorazgo, no menos gentil en el cuerpo que en el ánimo, y con todos estos generosos atributos, verle enamorado, ¿de quién, si pensáis? ¿De la reina Ginebra? No, por cierto, sino de la almadraba de Zahara, que es más fea, a lo que creo, que un miedo de santo Antón.

-¡Pata es la traviesa, amigo! -respondió Carriazo-; por los filos que te herí me has muerto; quédese aquí nuestra pendencia, y vámonos a dormir, y amanecerá Dios y medraremos.

-Mira, Carriazo, hasta ahora no has visto a Costanza; en viéndola, te doy licencia para que me digas todas las injurias o reprehensiones que quisieres.

-Ya sé yo en qué ha de parar esto -dijo Carriazo.

-¿En qué? -replicó Avendaño.

-En que yo me iré con mi almadraba, y tú te quedarás con tu fregona -dijo Carriazo.

-No seré yo tan venturoso -dijo Avendaño.

-Ni yo tan necio -respondió Carriazo-que, por seguir tu mal gusto, deje de conseguir el bueno mío.

En estas pláticas llegaron a la posada, y aun se les pasó en otras semejantes la mitad de la noche. Y, habiendo dormido, a su parecer, poco más de una hora, los despertó el son de muchas chirimías que en la calle sonaban. Sentáronse en la cama y estuvieron atentos, y dijo Carriazo:

-Apostaré que es ya de día y que debe de hacerse alguna fiesta en un monasterio de Nuestra Señora del Carmen que esta aquí cerca, y por eso tocan estas chirimías.

-No es eso -respondió Avendaño-, porque no ha tanto que dormimos que pueda ser ya de día.

Estando en esto, sintieron llamar a la puerta de su aposento, y, preguntando quién llamaba, respondieron de fuera diciendo:

-Mancebos, si queréis oír una brava música, levantaos y asomaos a una reja que sale a la calle, que está en aquella sala frontera, que no hay nadie en ella.

Levantáronse los dos, y cuando abrieron no hallaron persona ni supieron quién les había dado el aviso; mas, porque oyeron el son de una arpa, creyeron ser verdad la música; y así en camisa, como se hallaron, se fueron a la sala, donde ya estaban otros tres o cuatro huéspedes puestos a las rejas; hallaron lugar, y de allí a poco, al son de la arpa y de una vihuela, con maravillosa voz, oyeron cantar este soneto, que no se le pasó de la memoria a Avendaño:

Raro, humilde sujeto, que levantas a tan excelsa cumbre la belleza, que en ella se excedió naturaleza a sí misma, y al cielo la adelantas;

si hablas, o si ríes, o si cantas, si muestras mansedumbre o aspereza (efeto sólo de tu gentileza), las potencias del alma nos encantas.

Para que pueda ser más conocida la sin par hermosura que contiene y la alta honestidad de que blasonas, deja el servir, pues debes ser servida de cuantos veen sus manos y sus sienes resplandecer por cetros y coronas.

No fue menester que nadie les dijese a los dos que aquella música se daba por Costanza, pues bien claro lo había descubierto el soneto, que sonó de tal manera en los oídos de Avendaño, que diera por bien empleado, por no haberle oído, haber nacido sordo y estarlo todos los días de la vida que le quedaba, a causa que desde aquel punto la comenzó a tener tan mala como quien se halló traspasado el corazón de la rigurosa lanza de los celos. Y era lo peor que no sabía de quién debía o podía tenerlos. Pero presto le sacó deste cuidado uno de los que a la reja estaban, diciendo:

-¡Que tan simple sea este hijo del corregidor, que se ande dando músicas a una fregona...! Verdad es que ella es de las más hermosas muchachas que yo he visto, y he visto muchas; mas no por esto había de solicitarla con tanta publicidad.

A lo cual añadió otro de los de la reja:

-Pues en verdad que he oído yo decir por cosa muy cierta que así hace ella cuenta dél como si no fuese nadie: apostaré que se está ella agora durmiendo a sueño suelto detrás de la cama de su ama, donde dicen que duerme, sin acordársele de músicas ni canciones.

-Así es la verdad -replicó el otro-, porque es la más honesta doncella que se sabe; y es maravilla que, con estar en esta casa de tanto tráfico y donde hay cada día gente nueva, y andar por todos los aposentos, no se sabe della el menor desmán del mundo.

Con esto que oyó, Avendaño tornó a revivir y a cobrar aliento para poder escuchar otras muchas cosas, que al son de diversos instrumentos los músicos cantaron, todas encaminadas a Costanza, la cual, como dijo el huésped, se estaba durmiendo sin ningún cuidado.

Por venir el día, se fueron los músicos, despidiéndose con las chirimías.

Avendaño y Carriazo se volvieron a su aposento, donde durmió el que pudo hasta la mañana, la cual venida, se levantaron los dos, entrambos con deseo de ver a Costanza; pero el deseo del uno era deseo curioso, y el del otro deseo enamorado. Pero a entrambos se los cumplió Costanza, saliendo de la sala de su amo tan hermosa, que a los dos les pareció que todas cuantas alabanzas le había dado el mozo de mulas eran cortas y de ningún encarecimiento.

Su vestido era una saya y corpiños de paño verde, con unos ribetes del mismo paño. Los corpiños eran bajos, pero la camisa alta, plegado el cuello, con un cabezón labrado de seda negra, puesta una gargantilla de estrellas de azabache sobre un pedazo de una columna de alabastro, que no era menos blanca su garganta; ceñida con un cordón de San Francisco, y de una cinta pendiente, al lado derecho, un gran manojito de llaves. No traía chinelas, sino zapatos de dos suelas, colorados, con unas calzas que no se le parecían sino cuanto por un perfil mostraban también ser coloradas. Traía tranzados los cabellos con unas cintas blancas de hiladillo; pero tan largo el tranzado, que por las espaldas le pasaba de la cintura; el color salía de castaño y tocaba en rubio; pero, al parecer, tan limpio, tan igual y tan peinado, que ninguno, aunque fuera de hebras de oro, se le pudiera comparar. Pendíanle de las orejas dos calabacillas de vidrio que parecían perlas; los mismos cabellos le servían de garbín y de tocas.

Cuando salió de la sala se persignó y santiguó, y con mucha devoción y sosiego hizo una profunda reverencia a una imagen de Nuestra Señora que en una de las paredes del patio estaba colgada; y, alzando los ojos, vio a los dos, que mirándola estaban, y, apenas los hubo visto, cuando se retiró y volvió a entrar en la sala, desde la cual dio voces a Argüello que se levantara.

Resta ahora por decir qué es lo que le pareció a Carriazo de la hermosura de Costanza, que de lo que le pareció a Avendaño ya está dicho, cuando la vio la vez primera. No digo más, sino que a Carriazo le pareció tan bien como a su compañero, pero enamoróle mucho menos; y tan menos, que quisiera no anochechar en la posada, sino partirse luego para sus almadrabas.

En esto, a las voces de Costanza salió a los corredores la Argüello, con otras dos mocetonas, también criadas de casa, de quien se dice que eran gallegas; y el haber tantas lo requería la mucha gente que acude a la posada del Sevillano, que es una de las mejores y más frecuentadas que hay en Toledo. Acudieron también los mozos de los huéspedes a pedir cebada; salió el huésped de casa a dársela, maldiciendo a sus mozas, que por ellas se le había ido un mozo que la solía dar con muy buena cuenta y razón, sin que le hubiese hecho menos, a su parecer, un solo grano. Avendaño, que oyó esto, dijo:

-No se fatigue, señor huésped, déme el libro de la cuenta, que los días que hubiere de estar aquí yo la tendré tan buena en dar la cebada y paja que pidieren, que no eche menos al mozo que dice que se le ha ido.

-En verdad que os lo agradezca, mancebo -respondió el huésped-, porque yo no puedo atender a esto, que tengo otras muchas cosas a que acudir fuera de casa. Bajad; daros he el libro, y mirad que estos mozos de mulas son el mismo diablo y hacen trampantojos un celemín de cebada con menos conciencia que si fuese de paja.

Bajó al patio Avendaño y entregóse en el libro, y comenzó a despachar celemines como agua, y a asentarlos por tan buena orden que el huésped, que lo estaba mirando, quedó contento; y tanto, que dijo:

-Pluguiese a Dios que vuestro amo no viniese y que a vos os diese gana de quedaros en casa, que a fe que otro gallo os cantase, porque el mozo que se me fue vino a mi casa, habrá ocho meses, roto y flaco, y ahora lleva dos pares de vestidos muy buenos y va gordo como una nutria. Porque quiero que sepáis, hijo, que en esta casa hay muchos provechos, amén de los salarios.

-Si yo me quedase -replicó Avendaño-no repararía mucho en la ganancia; que con cualquiera cosa me contentaría a trueco de estar en esta ciudad, que me dicen que es la mejor de España.

-A lo menos -respondió el huésped- de las mejores y más abundantes que hay en ella; mas otra cosa nos falta ahora, que es buscar quien vaya por agua al río; que también se me fue otro mozo que, con un asno que tengo famoso, me tenía rebosando las tinajas y hecha un lago de agua la casa. Y una de las causas por que los mozos de mulas se huelgan de traer sus amos a mi posada es por la abundancia de agua que hallan siempre en ella; porque no llevan su ganado al río, sino dentro de casa beben las cabalgaduras en grandes barreños.

Todo esto estaba oyendo Carriazo; el cual, viendo que ya Avendaño estaba acomodado y con oficio en casa, no quiso él quedarse a buenas noches; y más, que consideró el gran gusto que haría a Avendaño si le seguía el humor; y así, dijo al huésped:

-Venga el asno, señor huésped, que tan bien sabré yo cinchalle y cargalle, como sabe mi compañero asentar en el libro su mercancía.

-Sí -dijo Avendaño-, mi compañero Lope Asturiano servirá de traer agua como un príncipe, y yo le fío.

La Argüello, que estaba atenta desde el corredor a todas estas pláticas, oyendo decir a Avendaño que él fiaba a su compañero, dijo:

-Dígame, gentilhomme, ¿y quién le ha de fiar a él? Que en verdad que me parece que más necesidad tiene de ser fiado que de ser fiador.

-Calla, Argüello -dijo el huésped-, no te metas donde no te llaman; yo los fío a entrambos, y, por vida de vosotras, que no tengáis dares ni tomares con los mozos de casa, que por vosotras se me van todos.

-Pues qué -dijo otra moza-, ¿ya se quedan en casa estos mancebos? Para mi santiguada, que si yo fuera camino con ellos, que nunca les fiara la bota.

-Déjese de chocarrerías, señora Gallega -respondió el huésped-, y haga su hacienda, y no se entremeta con los mozos, que la moleré a palos.

-¡Por cierto, sí! -replicó la Gallega-. ¡Mirad qué joyas para codiciallas! Pues en verdad que no me ha hallado el señor mi amo tan juguetona con los mozos de la casa, ni de fuera, para tenerme en la mala piñón que me tiene: ellos son bellacos y se van cuando se les antoja, sin que nosotras les demos ocasión alguna. ¡Bonica gente es ella, por cierto, para tener necesidad de appetites que les inciten a dar un madrugón a sus amos cuando menos se percatan!

-Mucho habláis, Gallega hermana -respondió su amo-; punto en boca, y atended a lo que tenéis a vuestro cargo.

Ya en esto tenía Carriazo enjaezado el asno; y, subiendo en él de un brinco, se encaminó al río, dejando a Avendaño muy alegre de haber visto su gallarda resolución.

He aquí: tenemos ya -en buena hora se cuente-a Avendaño hecho mozo del mesón, con nombre de Tomás Pedro, que así dijo que se llamaba, y a Carriazo, con el de Lope Asturiano, hecho aguador: transformaciones dignas de anteponerse a las del narigudo poeta.

A malas penas acabó de entender la Argüello que los dos se quedaban en casa, cuando hizo designio sobre el Asturiano, y le marcó por suyo, determinándose a regalarle de suerte que, aunque él fuese de condición esquiva y retirada, le volviese más blando que un guante. El mismo discurso hizo la Gallega melindrosa sobre Avendaño; y, como las dos, por trato y conversación, y por dormir juntas, fuesen grandes amigas, al punto declaró la una a la otra su determinación amorosa, y desde aquella noche determinaron de dar principio a la conquista de sus dos desapasionados amantes. Pero lo primero que advirtieron fue en que les habían de pedir que no las habían de pedir celos por cosas que las viesan hacer de sus personas, porque mal pueden regalar las mozas a los de dentro si no hacen tributarios a los de fuera de casa. «Callad, hermanos -decían ellas (como si los tuvieran presentes y fueran ya sus verdaderos mancebos o amancebados)-; callad y tapaos los ojos, y dejad tocar el pandero a quien sabe y que guíe la danza quien la entiende, y no habrá par de canónigos en esta ciudad más regalados que vosotros lo seréis destas tributarias vuestras».

Estas y otras razones desta sustancia y jaez dijeron la Gallega y la Argüello; y, en tanto, caminaba nuestro buen Lope Asturiano la vuelta del río, por la cuesta del Carmen, puestos los pensamientos en sus almadrabas y en la súbita mutación de su estado. O ya fuese por esto, o porque la suerte así lo ordenase, en un paso estrecho, al bajar de la cuesta, encontró con un asno de un aguador que subía cargado; y, como él descendía y su asno era gallardo, bien dispuesto y poco trabajado, tal encuentro dio al cansado y flaco que subía, que dio con él en el suelo; y, por haberse quebrado los cántaros, se derramó también el agua, por cuya desgracia el aguador antiguo, despechado y lleno de cólera, arremetió al aguador moderno, que aún se estaba caballero; y, antes que se desenvolviese y hubiese apeado, le había pegado y asentado una docena de palos tales, que no le supieron bien al Asturiano.

Apeóse, en fin; pero con tan malas entrañas, que arremetió a su enemigo, y, asiéndole con ambas manos por la garganta, dio con él en el suelo; y tal golpe dio con la cabeza sobre una piedra, que se la abrió por dos partes, saliendo tanta sangre que pensó que le había muerto.

Otros muchos aguadores que allí venían, como vieron a su compañero tan malparado, arremetieron a Lope, yuviéronle asido fuertemente, gritando:

-¡Justicia, justicia; que este aguador ha muerto a un hombre!

Y, a vuelta destas razones y gritos, le molían a mojicones y a palos. Otros acudieron al caído, y vieron que tenía hendida la cabeza y que casi estaba espirando. Subieron las voces de boca en boca por la cuesta arriba, y en la plaza del Carmen dieron en los oídos de un alguacil; el cual, con dos corchetes, con más ligereza que si volara, se puso en el lugar de la pendencia, a tiempo que ya el herido estaba atravesado sobre su asno, y el de Lope asido, y Lope rodeado de más de veinte aguadores, que no le dejaban rodear, antes le brumaban las costillas de manera que más se pudiera temer de su vida que de la del herido, según menudeaban sobre él los puños y las varas aquellos vengadores de la ajena injuria.

Llegó el alguacil, apartó la gente, entregó a sus corchetes al Asturiano, y antecogiendo a su asno y al herido sobre el suyo, dio con ellos en la cárcel, acompañado de tanta gente y de tantos muchachos que le seguían, que apenas podía hender por las calles.

Al rumor de la gente, salió Tomás Pedro y su amo a la puerta de casa, a ver de qué procedía tanta grita, y descubrieron a Lope entre los dos corchetes, lleno de sangre el rostro y la boca; miró luego por su asno el huésped, y viole en poder de otro corchete que ya se les había juntado. Preguntó la causa de aquellas prisiones; fuele respondida la verdad del suceso; pesóle por su asno, temiendo que le había de perder, o a lo menos hacer más costas por cobrarle que él valía.

Tomás Pedro siguió a su compañero, sin que le dejasen llegar a hablarle una palabra: tanta era la gente que lo impedía, y el recato de los corchetes y del alguacil que le llevaba. Finalmente, no le dejó hasta verle poner en la cárcel, y en un calabozo, con dos pares de grillos, y al herido en la enfermería, donde se halló a verle curar, y vio que la herida era peligrosa, y mucho, y lo mismo dijo el cirujano.

El alguacil se llevó a su casa los dos asnos, y más cinco reales de a ocho que los corchetes habían quitado a Lope.

Volvióse a la posada lleno de confusión y de tristeza; halló al que ya tenía por amo con no menos pesadumbre que él traía, a quien dijo de la manera que quedaba su compañero, y del peligro de muerte en que estaba el herido, y del suceso de su asno. Díjole más: que a su desgracia se le había añadido otra de no menor fastidio; y era que un grande amigo de su señor le había encontrado en el camino, y le había dicho que su señor, por ir muy de priesa y ahorrar dos leguas de camino, desde Madrid había pasado por la barca de Azeca, y que aquella noche dormía en Orgaz; y que le había dado doce escudos que le diese, con orden de que se fuese a Sevilla, donde le esperaba.

-Pero no puede ser así -añadió Tomás-, pues no será razón que yo deje a mi amigo y camarada en la cárcel y en tanto peligro. Mi amo me podrá perdonar por ahora; cuanto más, que él es tan bueno y honrado, que dará por bien cualquier falta que le hiciere, a trueco que no la haga a mi camarada. Vuesa merced, señor amo, me la haga de tomar este dinero y acudir a este negocio; y, en tanto que esto se gasta, yo escribiré a mi señor lo que pasa, y sé que me enviará dineros que basten a sacarnos de cualquier peligro.

Abrió los ojos de un palmo el huésped, alegre de ver que, en parte, iba saneando la pérdida de su asno. Tomó el dinero y consoló a Tomás, diciéndole que él tenía personas en Toledo de tal calidad, que valían mucho con la justicia: especialmente una señora monja, parienta del Corregidor, que le mandaba con el pie; y que una lavandera del monasterio de la tal monja tenía una hija que era grandísima amiga de una hermana de un fraile muy familiar y conocido del confesor de la dicha monja, la cual lavandera lavaba la ropa en casa. «Y, como ésta pida a su hija, que sí pedirá, hable a la hermana del fraile que hable a su hermano que hable al confesor, y el confesor a la monja y la monja guste de dar un billete (que será cosa fácil) para el corregidor, donde le pida encarecidamente mire por el negocio de Tomás, sin duda alguna se podrá esperar buen suceso. Y esto ha de ser con tal que el aguador no muera, y con que no falte ungüento para untar a todos los ministros de la justicia, porque si no están untados, gruñen más que carretas de bueyes».

En gracia le cayó a Tomás los ofrecimientos del favor que su amo le había hecho, y los infinitos y revueltos arcaduces por donde le había derivado; y, aunque conoció que antes lo había dicho de socarrón que de inocente, con todo eso, le agradeció su buen ánimo y le entregó el dinero, con promesa que no faltaría mucho más, según él tenía la confianza en su señor, como ya le había dicho.

La Argüello, que vio atraillado a su nuevo cuyo, acudió luego a la cárcel a llevarle de comer; mas no se le dejaron ver, de que ella volvió muy sentida y malcontenta; pero no por esto disistió de su buen propósito.

En resolución, dentro de quince días estuvo fuera de peligro el herido, y a los veinte declaró el cirujano que estaba del todo sano; y ya en este tiempo había dado traza Tomás cómo le viniesen cincuenta escudos de Sevilla, y, sacándolos él de su seno, se los entregó al huésped con cartas y cédula fingida de su amo; y, como al huésped le iba poco en averiguar la verdad de aquella correspondencia, cogía el dinero, que por ser en escudos de oro le alegraba mucho.

Por seis ducados se apartó de la querella el herido; en diez, y en el asno y las costas, sentenciaron al Asturiano. Salió de la cárcel, pero no quiso volver a estar con su compañero, dándole por disculpa que en los días que había estado preso le había visitado la Argüello y requerídole de amores: cosa para él de tanta molestia y enfado, que antes se dejara ahorcar que corresponder con el deseo de tan mala hembra; que lo que pensaba hacer era, ya que él estaba determinado de seguir y pasar adelante con su propósito, comprar un asno y usar el oficio de aguador en tanto que estuviesen en Toledo; que, con aquella cubierta, no sería juzgado ni preso por vagamundo, y que, con sola una carga de agua, se podía andar todo el día por la ciudad a sus anchuras, mirando bobas.

-Antes mirarás hermosas que bobas en esta ciudad, que tiene fama de tener las más discretas mujeres de España, y que andan a una su discreción con su hermosura; y si no, míralo por Costancica, de cuyas sobras de belleza puede enriquecer no sólo a las hermosas desta ciudad, sino a las de todo el mundo.

-Paso, señor Tomás -replicó Lope-: vámonos poquito a poquito en esto de las alabanzas de la señora fregona, si no quiere que, como le tengo por loco, le tenga por hereje.

-¿Fregona has llamado a Costanza, hermano Lope? -respondió Tomás-. Dios te lo perdone y te traiga a verdadero conocimiento de tu yerro.

-Pues ¿no es fregona? -replicó el Asturiano.

-Hasta ahora le tengo por ver fregar el primer plato.

-No importa -dijo Lope- no haberle visto fregar el primer plato, si le has visto fregar el segundo y aun el centésimo.

-Yo te digo, hermano -replicó Tomás-, que ella no friega ni entiende en otra cosa que en su labor, y en ser guarda de la plata labrada que hay en casa, que es mucha.

-Pues ¿cómo la llaman por toda la ciudad -dijo Lope- la fregona ilustre, si es que no friega? Mas sin duda debe de ser que, como friega plata, y no loza, la dan nombre de ilustre. Pero, dejando esto aparte, dime, Tomás: ¿en qué estado están tus esperanzas?

-En el de perdición -respondió Tomás-, porque, en todos estos días que has estado preso, nunca la he podido hablar una palabra, y, a muchas que los huéspedes le dicen, con ninguna otra cosa responde que con bajar los ojos y no desplegar los labios; tal es su honestidad y su recato, que no menos enamora con su recogimiento que con su hermosura. Lo que me trae alcanzado de paciencia es saber que el hijo del corregidor, que es mozo brioso y algo atrevido, muere por ella y la solicita con músicas; que pocas noches se pasan sin dársela, y tan al descubierto, que en lo que cantan la nombran, la alaban y la solenizan. Pero ella no las oye, ni desde que anochece hasta la mañana no sale del aposento de su ama, escudo que no deja que me pase el corazón la dura saeta de los celos.

-Pues ¿qué piensas hacer con el imposible que se te ofrece en la conquista desta Porcia, desta Minerva y desta nueva Penélope, que en figura de doncella y de fregona te enamora, te acobarda y te desvanece?

-Haz la burla que de mí quisieres, amigo Lope, que yo sé que estoy enamorado del más hermoso rostro que pudo formar naturaleza, y de la más incomparable honestidad que ahora se puede usar en el mundo. Costanza se llama, y no Porcia, Minerva o Penélope; en un mesón sirve, que no lo puedo negar, pero, ¿qué puedo yo hacer, si me parece que el destino con oculta fuerza me inclina, y la elección con claro discurso me mueve a que la adore? Mira, amigo: no sé cómo te diga -prosiguió Tomás- de la manera con que amor el bajo sujeto desta fregona, que tú llamas, me le encumbra y levanta tan alto, que viéndole no le vea, y conociéndole le desconozca. No es posible que, aunque lo procuro, pueda un breve término contemplar, si así se puede decir, en la bajeza de su estado, porque luego acuden a borrar este pensamiento su belleza, su donaire, su sosiego, su honestidad y recogimiento, y me dan a entender que, debajo de aquella rústica corteza, debe de estar encerrada y escondida alguna mina de gran valor y de merecimiento grande. Finalmente, sea lo que se fuere, yo la quiero bien; y no con aquel amor vulgar con que a otras he querido, sino con amor tan limpio, que no se estiende a más que a servir y a procurar que ella me quiera, pagándome con honesta voluntad lo que a la mía, también honesta, se debe.

A este punto, dio una gran voz el Asturiano y, como exclamando, dijo:

-¡Oh amor platónico! ¡Oh fregona ilustre! ¡Oh felicísimos tiempos los nuestros, donde vemos que la belleza enamora sin malicia, la honestidad enciende sin que abrase, el donaire da gusto sin que incite, la bajeza del estado humilde obliga y fuerza a que le suban sobre la rueda de la que llaman Fortuna! ¡Oh pobres atunes míos, que os pasáis este año sin ser visitados deste tan enamorado y aficionado vuestro! Pero el que viene yo haré la enmienda, de manera que no se quejen de mí los mayores de las mis deseadas almadrabas.

A esto dijo Tomás:

-Ya veo, Asturiano, cuán al descubierto te burlas de mí. Lo que podías hacer es irte norabuena a tu pesquería, que yo me quedaré en mi caza, y aquí me hallarás a la vuelta. Si quisieres llevarte contigo el dinero que te toca, luego te lo daré; y ve en paz, y cada uno siga la senda por donde su destino le guiare.

-Por más discreto te tenía -replicó Lope-; y ¿tú no ves que lo que digo es burlando? Pero, ya que sé que tú hablas de veras, de veras te serviré en todo aquello que fuere de tu gusto. Una cosa sola te pido, en recompensa de las muchas que pienso hacer en tu servicio: y es que no me pongas en ocasión de que la Argüello me requiebre ni solicite; porque antes romperé con tu amistad que ponerme a peligro de tener la suya. Vive Dios, amigo, que habla más que un relator y que le huele el aliento a rasuras desde una legua: todos los dientes de arriba son postizos, y tengo para mí que los cabellos son cabellera; y, para adobar y suplir estas faltas, después que me descubrió su mal pensamiento, ha dado en afeitarse con albayalde, y así se jalbega el rostro, que no parece sino mascarón de yeso puro.

-Todo eso es verdad -replicó Tomás-, y no es tan mala la Gallega que a mí me martiriza. Lo que se podrá hacer es que esta noche sola estés en la posada, y mañana comprarás el asno que dices y buscarás dónde estar; y así huirás los encuentros de Argüello, y yo quedaré sujeto a los de la Gallega y a los irreparables de los rayos de la vista de mi Costanza.

En esto se convinieron los dos amigos y se fueron a la posada, adonde de la Argüello fue con muestras de mucho amor recibido el Asturiano. Aquella noche hubo un baile a la puerta de la posada, de muchos mozos de mulas que en ella y en las convecinas había. El que tocó la guitarra fue el Asturiano; las bailadoras, amén de las dos gallegas y de la Argüello, fueron otras tres mozas de otra posada. Juntáronse muchos embozados, con más deseo de ver a Costanza que el baile, pero ella no pareció ni salió a verle, con que dejó burlados muchos deseos.

De tal manera tocaba la guitarra Lope, que decían que la hacía hablar. Pidiéronle las mozas, y con más ahínco la Argüello, que cantase algún romance; él dijo que, como ellas le bailasen al modo como se canta y baila en las comedias, que le cantarían, y que, para que no lo errasen, que hiciesen todo aquello que él dijese cantando y no otra cosa.

Había entre los mozos de mulas bailarines, y entre las mozas ni más ni menos. Mondó el pecho Lope, escupiendo dos veces, en el cual tiempo pensó lo que diría; y, como era de presto, fácil y lindo ingenio, con una felicísima corriente, de improviso comenzó a cantar desta manera:

Salga la hermosa Argüello, moza una vez, y no más;
y, haciendo una reverencia,
dé dos pasos hacia atrás.

De la mano la arrebate
el que llaman Barrabás:
andaluz mozo de mulas,
canónigo del Compás.

De las dos mozas gallegas que en esta posada están, salga la más carigorda

en cuerpo y sin devantal.
Engarráfela Torote,
y todos cuatro a la par,
con mudanzas y meneos,
den principio a un contrapás.

Todo lo que iba cantando el Asturiano hicieron al pie de la letra ellos y ellas; mas, cuando llegó a decir que diesen principio a un contrapás, respondió Barrabás, que así le llamaban por mal nombre al bailarín mozo de mulas:

-Hermano músico, mire lo que canta y no moteje a naide de mal vestido, porque aquí no hay naide con trapos, y cada uno se viste como Dios le ayuda.

El huésped, que oyó la ignorancia del mozo, le dijo:

-Hermano mozo, contrapás es un baile extranjero, y no motejo de mal vestidos.

-Si eso es -replicó el mozo-, no hay para qué nos metan en dibujos: toquen sus zarabandas, chaconas y folías al uso, y escudillen como quisieren, que aquí hay presonas que les sabrán llenar las medidas hasta el gollete.

El Asturiano, sin replicar palabra, prosiguió su canto diciendo:

Entren, pues, todas las ninfas y los ninfos que han de entrar, que el baile de la chacona es más ancho que la mar.
Requieran las castañetas
y bájense a refregar

las manos por esa arena
o tierra del muladar.
Todos lo han hecho muy bien,
no tengo qué les rectar;

santígüense, y den al diablo dos higas de su higueral.

Escupan al hideputa
por que nos deje holgar, puesto que de la chacona nunca se suele apartar.

Cambio el son, divina Argüello, más bella que un hospital;
pues eres mi nueva musa,
tu favor me quieras dar.
El baile de la chacona encierra la vida bona.

Hállase allí el ejercicio que la salud acomoda,

sacudiendo de los miembros
a la pereza poltrona.
Bulle la risa en el pecho de quien baila y de quien toca, del que mira y del que escucha baile y música sonora.
Vierten azogue los pies, derrítese la persona
y con gusto de sus dueños las mulillas se descorchan.
El brío y la ligereza
en los viejos se remoza, y en los mancebos se ensalza y sobremodo se entona.
*Que el baile de la chacona
encierra la vida bona.*

¡Qué de veces ha intentado aquesta noble señora,
con la alegre zarabanda,
el pésame y perra mora, entrarse por los resquicios

de las casas religiosas

a inquietar la honestidad que en las santas celdas mora!
¡Cuántas fue vituperada de los mismos que la adoran!

Porque imagina el lascivo y al que es necio se le antoja, que el baile de chacona
encierra la vida bona.

Esta indiana amulatada,

de quien la fama pregonaba que ha hecho más sacrilegios e insultos que hizo Aroba; ésta, a quien es tributaria la turba de las fregonas, la caterva de los pajes

y de lacayos las tropas, dice, jura y no revienta, que, a pesar de la persona
del soberbio zambapalo, ella es la flor de la olla, *y que sola la chacona
encierra la vida bona.*

En tanto que Lope cantaba, se hacían rajas bailando la turbamulta de los mulantes y fregatrices del baile, que llegaban a doce; y, en tanto que Lope se acomodaba a pasar adelante cantando otras cosas de más tomo, sustancia y consideración de las cantadas, uno de los muchos embozados que el baile miraban dijo, sin quitarse el embozo:

-¡Calla, borracho! ¡Calla, cuero! ¡Calla, odrina, poeta de viejo, músico falso!

Tras esto, acudieron otros, diciéndole tantas injurias y muecas, que Lope tuvo por bien de callar; pero los mozos de mulas lo tuvieron tan mal, que si no fuera por el huésped, que con buenas razones los sosegó, allí fuera la de Mazagatos; y aun con todo eso, no dejaron de menear las manos si a aquel instante no llegara la justicia y los hiciera recoger a todos.

Apenas se habían retirado, cuando llegó a los oídos de todos los que en el barrio despiertos estaban una voz de un hombre que, sentado sobre una piedra, frontero de la posada del Sevillano, cantaba con tan maravillosa y suave armonía, que los dejó suspensos y les obligó a que le escuchasen hasta el fin. Pero el que más atento estuvo fue Tomás Pedro, como aquel a quien más le tocaba, no sólo el oír la música, sino entender la letra, que para él no fue oír canciones, sino cartas de excomunión que le acongojaban el alma; porque lo que el músico cantó fue este romance:

¿Dónde estás, que no pareces, esfera de la hermosura, belleza a la vida humana

de divina compostura?
Cielo impíreo, donde amor tiene su estancia segura; primer mueble, que arrebató tras sí todas las venturas; lugar cristalino, donde transparentes aguas puras enfrian de amor las llamas, las acrecientan y apuran;

nuevo hermoso firmamento,
donde dos estrellas juntas, sin tomar la luz prestada, al cielo y al suelo alumbran;
alegría que se opone

a las tristezas confusas del padre que da a sus hijos en su vientre sepultura;

humildad que se resiste de la alteza con que encumbran el gran Jove, a quien influye su benignidad, que es mucha.
Red invisible y sutil,

que pone en prisiones duras al adúltero guerrero que de las batallas triunfa;
cuarto cielo y sol segundo, que el primero deja a oscuras cuando acaso deja verse:
que el verle es caso y ventura;
grave embajador, que hablas con tan estraña cordura, que persuades callando,
aún más de lo que procuras;

del segundo cielo tienes
no más que la hermosura, y del primero, no más que el resplandor de la luna;
esta esfera sois, Costanza, puesta, por corta fortuna,
en lugar que, por indigno, vuestras venturas deslumbra.
Fabricad vos vuestra suerte, consintiendo se reduzga la entereza a trato al uso, la esquividad a blandura.

Con esto veréis, señora, que envidian vuestra fortuna las soberbias por linaje;

las grandes por hermosura.

Si queréis ahorrar camino, la más rica y la más pura voluntad en mí os ofrezco que vio amor en alma alguna.

El acabar estos últimos versos y el llegar volando dos medios ladrillos fue todo uno; que, si como dieron junto a los pies del músico le dieran en mitad de la cabeza, con facilidad le sacaran de los cascos la música y la poesía. Asombróse el pobre, y dio a correr por aquella cuesta arriba con tanta priesa, que no le alcanzara un galgo. ¡Infelice estado de los músicos, murciégalos y lechuzos, siempre sujetos a semejantes lluvias y desmanes!

A todos los que escuchado habían la voz del apedreado, les pareció bien; pero a quien mejor, fue a Tomás Pedro, que admiró la voz y el romance; mas quisiera él que de otra que Costanza naciera la ocasión de tantas músicas, puesto que a sus oídos jamás llegó ninguna. Contrario deste parecer fue Barrabás, el mozo de mulas, que también estuvo atento a la música; porque, así como vio huir al músico, dijo:

-¡Allá irás, mentecato, trovador de Judas, que pulgas te coman los ojos! Y ¿quién diablos te enseñó a cantar a una fregona cosas de esferas y de cielos, llamándola lunes y martes, y de ruedas de Fortuna? Dijérasla, noramala para ti y para quien le hubiere parecido bien tu trova, que es tiesa como un espárrago, entonada como un plumaje, blanca como una leche, honesta como un fraile novicio, melindrosa y zahareña como una mula de alquiler, y más dura que un pedazo de argamasa; que, como esto le dijeras, ella lo entendiera y se holgara; pero llamarla embajador, y red, y moble, y alteza y bajeza, más es para decirlo a un niño de la dotrina que a una fregona. Verdaderamente que hay poetas en el mundo que escriben trovas que no hay diablo que las entienda. Yo, a lo menos, aunque soy Barrabás, éstas que ha cantado este músico de ninguna manera las entrevo: ¡miren qué hará Costancica! Pero ella lo hace mejor; que se está en su cama haciendo burla del mismo Preste Juan de las Indias. Este músico, a lo menos, no es de los del hijo del Corregidor, que aquéllos son muchos, y una vez que otra se dejan entender; pero éste, ¡voto a tal que me deja mohíno!

Todos los que escucharon a Barrabás recibieron gran gusto, y tuvieron su censura y parecer por muy acertado.

Con esto, se acostaron todos; y, apenas estaba sosegada la gente, cuando sintió Lope que llamaban a la puerta de su aposento muy paso. Y, preguntando quién llamaba, fuele respondido con voz baja:

-La Argüello y la Gallega somos: ábrannos que mos morimos de frío.

-Pues en verdad -respondió Lope-que estamos en la mitad de los caniculares.

-Déjate de gracias, Lope -replicó la Gallega-: levántate y abre, que venimos hechas unas archiduquesas.

-¿Archiduquesas y a tal hora? -respondió Lope-. No creo en ellas; antes entiendo que sois brujas, o unas grandísimas bellacas: idos de ahí luego; si no, por vida de..., hago juramento que si me levanto, que con los hierros de mi pretina os tengo de poner las posaderas como unas amapolas.

Ellas, que se vieron responder tan acerbamente, y tan fuera de aquello que primero se imaginaron, temieron la furia del Asturiano; y, defraudadas sus esperanzas y borrados sus designios, se volvieron tristes y malaventuradas a sus lechos; aunque, antes de apartarse de la puerta, dijo la Argüello, poniendo los hocicos por el agujero de la llave:

-No es la miel para la boca del asno.

Y con esto, como si hubiera dicho una gran sentencia y tomado una justa venganza, se volvió, como se ha dicho, a su triste cama.

Lope, que sintió que se habían vuelto, dijo a Tomás Pedro, que estaba despierto:

-Mirad, Tomás: ponedme vos a pelear con dos gigantes, y en ocasión que me sea forzoso desquijarar por vuestro servicio media docena o una de leones, que yo lo haré con más facilidad que beber una taza de vino; pero que me pongáis en necesidad que me tome a brazo partido con la Argüello, no lo consentiré si me asaeteen. ¡Mirad qué doncellas de Dinamarca nos había ofrecido la suerte esta noche! Ahora bien, amanecerá Dios y medraremos.

-Ya te he dicho, amigo -respondió Tomás-, que puedes hacer tu gusto, o ya en irte a tu romería, o ya en comprar el asno y hacerte aguador, como tienes determinado.

-En lo de ser aguador me afirmo -respondió Lope-. Y durmamos lo poco que queda hasta venir el día, que tengo esta cabeza mayor que una cuba, y no estoy para ponerme ahora a departir contigo.

Durmiéronse; vino el día, levantáronse, y acudió Tomás a dar cebada y Lope se fue al mercado de las bestias, que es allí junto, a comprar un asno que fuese tal como bueno.

Sucedió, pues, que Tomás, llevado de sus pensamientos y de la comodidad que le daba la soledad de las siestas, había compuesto en algunas unos versos amorosos y escrítolos en el mismo libro do tenía la cuenta de la cebada, con intención de sacarlos aparte en limpio y romper o borrar aquellas hojas. Pero, antes que esto hiciese, estando él fuera de casa y habiéndose dejado el libro sobre el cajón de la cebada, le tomó su amo, y, abriéndole para ver cómo estaba la cuenta, dio con los versos, que leídos le turbaron y sobresaltaron. Fuese con ellos a su mujer, y, antes que se los leyese, llamó a Costanza; y, con grandes encarecimientos, mezclados con amenazas, le dijo le dijese si Tomás Pedro, el mozo de la cebada, la había dicho algún requiebro, o alguna palabra descompuesta o que diese indicio de tenerla afición. Costanza juró que la primera palabra, en aquella o en otra materia alguna, estaba aún por hablarla, y que jamás, ni aun con los ojos, le había dado muestras de pensamiento malo alguno.

Creyéronla sus amos, por estar acostumbrados a oírla siempre decir verdad en todo cuanto le preguntaban. Dijéronla que se fuese de allí, y el huésped dijo a su mujer:

-No sé qué me diga desto. Habréis de saber, señora, que Tomás tiene escritas en este libro de la cebada unas coplas que me ponen mala espina que está enamorado de Costancica.

-Veamos las coplas -respondió la mujer-, que yo os diré lo que en eso debe de haber.

-Así será, sin duda alguna -replicó su marido-; que, como sois poeta, luego daréis en su sentido.

-No soy poeta -respondió la mujer-, pero ya sabéis vos que tengo buen entendimiento y que sé rezar en latín las cuatro oraciones.

-Mejor haríades de rezallas en romance: que ya os dijo vuestro tío el clérigo que decíades mil gazafatones cuando rezábades en latín y que no rezábades nada.

-Esa flecha, de la ahijada de su sobrina ha salido, que está envidiosa de verme tomar las Horas de latín en la mano yirme por ellas como por viña vendimiada.

-Sea como vos quisiéredes -respondió el huésped-. Estad atenta, que las coplas son éstas:

¿Quién de amor venturas halla?

El que calla.

¿Quién triunfa de su aspereza?

La firmeza.

¿Quién da alcance a su alegría?

La porfía.

Dese modo, bien podría

esperar dichosa palma si en esta empresa mi alma calla, está firme y porfía.

¿Con quién se sustenta amor?

Con favor.

¿Y con qué mengua su furia?

Con la injuria.

¿Antes con desdenes crece?

Desfallece.

Claro en esto se parece que mi amor será inmortal, pues la causa de mi mal ni injuria ni favorece.

Quien desespera, ¿qué espera?
Muerte entera.
Pues, ¿qué muerte el mal remedia?
La que es media.
Luego, ¿bien será morir?
Mejor sufrir.
Porque se suele decir,
y esta verdad se reciba, que tras la tormenta esquivada suele la calma venir.

¿Descubriré mi pasión?

En ocasión.

¿Y si jamás se me da?

Sí hará.

Llegará la muerte en tanto.

Llegue a tanto
tu limpia fe y esperanza, que, en sabiéndolo Costanza, convierta en risa tu llanto.

-¿Hay más? -dijo la huéspeda.

-No -respondió el marido-; pero, ¿qué os parece destos versos?

-Lo primero -dijo ella-, es menester averiguar si son de Tomás.

-En eso no hay que poner duda -replicó el marido-, porque la letra de la cuenta de la cebada y la de las coplas toda es una, sin que se pueda negar.

-Mirad, marido -dijo la huéspeda-: a lo que yo veo, puesto que las coplas nombran a Costancica, por donde se puede pensar que se hicieron para ella, no por eso lo habemos de afirmar nosotros por verdad, como si se los viéramos escribir; cuanto más, que otras Costanzas que la nuestra hay en el mundo; pero, ya que sea por ésta, ahí no le dice nada que la deshonne ni la pide cosa que le importe. Estemos a la mira y avisemos a la muchacha, que si él está enamorado della, a buen seguro que él haga más coplas y que procure dárse las.

-¿No sería mejor -dijo el marido-quitarnos desos cuidados y echarle de casa?

-Eso -respondió la huéspeda-en vuestra mano está; pero en verdad que, según vos decís, el mozo sirve de manera que sería conciencia el despedille por tan liviana ocasión.

-Ahora bien -dijo el marido-, estaremos alerta, como vos decís, y el tiempo nos dirá lo que habemos de hacer.

Quedaron en esto, y tornó a poner el huésped el libro donde le había hallado. Volvió Tomás ansioso a buscar su libro, hallóle, y porque no le diese otro sobresalto, trasladó las coplas y rasgó aquellas hojas, y propuso de aventurarse a descubrir su deseo a Costanza en la primera ocasión que se le ofreciese. Pero, como ella andaba siempre sobre los estribos de su honestidad y recato, a ninguno daba lugar de miralla, cuanto más de ponerse a pláticas con ella; y, como había tanta gente y tantos ojos de ordinario en la posada, aumentaba más la dificultad de hablarla, de que se desesperaba el pobre enamorado.

Mas, habiendo salido aquel día Costanza con una toca ceñida por las mejillas, y dicho a quien se lo preguntó que por qué se la había puesto, que tenía un gran dolor de muelas, Tomás, a quien sus deseos avivaban el entendimiento, en un instante discurrió lo que sería bueno que hiciese, y dijo:

-Señora Costanza, yo le daré una oración en escrito, que a dos veces que la rece se le quitará como con la mano su dolor.

-Norabuena -respondió Costanza-; que yo la rezaré, porque sé leer.

-Ha de ser con condición -dijo Tomás-que no la ha de mostrar a nadie, porque la estimo en mucho, y no será bien que por saberla muchos se menosprecie.

-Yo le prometo -dijo Costanza-, Tomás, que no la dé a nadie; y démela luego, porque me fatiga mucho el dolor.

-Yo la trasladaré de la memoria -respondió Tomás-y luego se la daré.

Estas fueron las primeras razones que Tomás dijo a Costanza, y Costanza a Tomás, en todo el tiempo que había que estaba en casa, que ya pasaban de veinte y cuatro días. Retiróse Tomás y escribió la oración, y tuvo lugar de dársela a Costanza sin que nadie lo viese; y ella, con mucho gusto y más devoción, se entró en un aposento a solas, y abriendo el papel vio que decía desta manera:

Señora de mi alma:

Yo soy un caballero natural de Burgos; si alcanzo de días a mi padre, heredo un mayorazgo de seis mil ducados de renta. A la fama de vuestra hermosura, que por muchas leguas se estiende, dejé mi patria, mudé vestido, y en el traje que me veis vine a servir a vuestro dueño; si vos lo quisiéredes ser mío, por los medios que más a vuestra honestidad convengan, mirad qué pruebas queréis que haga para enteraros desta verdad; y, enterada en ella, siendo gusto vuestro, seré vuestro esposo y me tendré por el más bien afortunado del mundo. Sólo, por ahora, os pido que no echéis tan enamorados y limpios pensamientos como los míos en la calle; que si vuestro dueño los sabe y no los cree, me condenará a destierro de vuestra presencia, que sería lo mismo que condenarme a muerte. Dejadme, señora, que os vea hasta que me creáis, considerando que no merece el riguroso castigo de no veros el que no ha cometido otra culpa que adoraros. Con los ojos podréis responderme, a hurto de los muchos que siempre os están mirando; que ellos son tales, que airados matan y piadosos resucitan.

En tanto que Tomás entendió que Costanza se había ido a leer su papel, le estuvo palpitando el corazón, temiendo y esperando, o ya la sentencia de su muerte o la restauración de su vida. Salió en esto Costanza, tan hermosa, aunque rebozada, que si pudiera recibir aumento su hermosura con algún accidente, se pudiera juzgar que el sobresalto de haber visto en el papel de Tomás otra cosa tan lejos de la que pensaba había acrecentado su belleza. Salió con el papel entre las manos hecho menudas piezas, y dijo a Tomás, que apenas se podía tener en pie:

-Hermano Tomás, ésta tu oración más parece hechicería y embuste que oración santa; y así, yo no la quiero creer ni usar della, y por eso la he rasgado, porque no la vea nadie que sea más crédula que yo. Aprende otras oraciones más fáciles, porque ésta será imposible que te sea de provecho.

En diciendo esto, se entró con su ama, y Tomás quedó suspenso, pero algo consolado, viendo que en solo el pecho de Costanza quedaba el secreto de su deseo; pareciéndole que, pues no había dado cuenta dél a su amo, por lo menos no estaba en peligro de que le echasen de casa. Parecióle que en el primero paso que había dado en su pretensión había atropellado por mil montes de inconvenientes, y que, en las cosas grandes y dudosas, la mayor dificultad está en los principios.

En tanto que esto sucedió en la posada, andaba el Asturiano comprando el asno donde los vendían; y, aunque halló muchos, ninguno le satisfizo, puesto que un gitano anduvo muy solícito por encajalle uno que más caminaba por el azogue que le había echado en los oídos que por ligereza suya; pero lo que contentaba con el paso desagradaba con el cuerpo, que era muy pequeño y no del grandor y talle que Lope quería, que le buscaba suficiente para llevarle a él por añadidura, ora fuesen vacíos o llenos los cántaros.

Llegóse a él en esto un mozo y díjole al oído:

-Galán, si busca bestia cómoda para el oficio de aguador, yo tengo un asno aquí cerca, en un prado, que no le hay mejor ni mayor en la ciudad; y aconséjole que no compre bestia de gitanos, porque, aunque parezcan sanas y buenas, todas son falsas y llenas de dolamas; si quiere comprar la que le conviene, véngase conmigo y calle la boca.

Creyóle el Asturiano y díjole que guiase adonde estaba el asno que tanto encarecía. Fuéronse los dos mano a mano, como dicen, hasta que llegaron a la Huerta del Rey, donde a la sombra de una azuda hallaron muchos aguadores, cuyos asnos pacían en un prado que allí cerca estaba. Mostró el vendedor su asno, tal que le hinchó el ojo al Asturiano, y de todos los que allí estaban fue alabado el asno de fuerte, de caminador y comedor sobremanera. Hicieron su concierto, y, sin otra seguridad ni información, siendo corredores y medianeros los demás aguadores, dio diez y seis ducados por el asno, con todos los adherentes del oficio.

Hizo la paga real en escudos de oro. Diéronle el parabién de la compra y de la entrada en el oficio, y certificáronle que había comprado un asno dichosísimo, porque el dueño que le dejaba, sin que se le mancasse ni matase, había ganado con él en menos tiempo de un año, después de haberse sustentado a él y al asno honradamente, dos pares de vestidos y más aquellos diez y seis ducados, con que pensaba volver a su tierra, donde le tenían concertado un casamiento con una media parienta suya.

Amén de los corredores del asno, estaban otros cuatro aguadores jugando a la primera, tendidos en el suelo, sirviéndoles de bufete la tierra y de sobremesa sus capas. Púsose el Asturiano a mirarlos y vio que no jugaban como aguadores, sino como arcedianos, porque tenía de resto cada uno más de cien reales en cuartos y en plata. Llegó una mano de echar todos el resto, y si uno no diera partido a otro, él hiciera mesa gallega. Finalmente, a los dos en aquel resto se les acabó el dinero y se levantaron; viendo lo cual el vendedor del asno, dijo que si hubiera cuarto, que él jugara, porque era enemigo de jugar en tercio. El Asturiano, que era de propiedad del azúcar, que jamás gastó menestra, como dice el italiano, dijo que él haría cuarto. Sentáronse luego, anduvo la cosa de buena manera; y, queriendo jugar antes el dinero que el tiempo, en poco rato perdió Lope seis escudos que tenía; y, viéndose sin blanca, dijo que si le querían jugar el asno, que él le jugaría. Acetáronle el envite, y hizo de resto un cuarto del asno, diciendo que por cuartos quería jugarle. Díjole tan mal, que en cuatro restos consecutivamente perdió los cuatro cuartos del asno, y ganóselos el mismo que se le había vendido; y, levantándose para volverse a entregarse en él, dijo el Asturiano que advirtiesen que él solamente había jugado los cuatro cuartos del asno, pero la cola, que se la diesen y se le llevasen norabuena.

Causóles risa a todos la demanda de la cola, y hubo letrados que fueron de parecer que no tenía razón en lo que pedía, diciendo que cuando se vende un carnero o otra res alguna no se saca ni quita la cola, que con uno de los cuartos traseros ha de ir forzosamente. A lo cual replicó Lope que los carneros de Berbería ordinariamente tienen cinco cuartos, y que el quinto es de la cola; y, cuando los tales carneros se cuarteán, tanto vale la cola como cualquier cuarto; y que a lo de ir la cola junto con la res que se vende viva y no se cuarteá, que lo concedía; pero que la suya no fue vendida, sino jugada, y que nunca su intención fue jugar la cola, y que al punto se la volviesen luego con todo lo a ella anejo y concerniente, que era desde la punta del cerebro, contada la osamenta del espinazo, donde ella tomaba principio y decendía, hasta parar en los últimos pelos della.

-Dadme vos -dijo uno-que ello sea así como decís y que os la den como la pedís, y sentaos junto a lo que del asno queda.

-¡Pues así es! -replicó Lope-. Venga mi cola; si no, por Dios que no me lleven el asno si bien viniesen por él cuantos aguadores hay en el mundo; y no piensen que por ser tantos los que aquí están me han de hacer superchería, porque soy yo un hombre que me sabré llegar a otro hombre y meterle dos palmos de daga por las tripas sin que sepa de quién, por dónde o cómo le vino; y más, que no quiero que me paguen la cola rata por cantidad, sino que quiero que me la den en ser y la corten del asno como tengo dicho.

Al ganancioso y a los demás les pareció no ser bien llevar aquel negocio por fuerza, porque juzgaron ser de tal brío el Asturiano, que no consentiría que se la hiciesen; el cual, como estaba hecho al trato de las almadrabas, donde se ejercita todo género de rumbo y jácara y de extraordinarios juramentos y boatos, voleó allí el capelo y empuñó un puñal que debajo del capotillo traía, y púsose en tal postura, que infundió temor y respecto en toda aquella aguadora compañía.

Finalmente, uno dellos, que parecía de más razón y discurso, los concertó en que se echase la cola contra un cuarto del asno a una quínola o a dos y pasante. Fueron contentos, ganó la quínola Lope; picóse el otro, echó el otro cuarto, y a otras tres manos quedó sin asno. Quiso jugar el dinero; no quería Lope, pero tanto le porfiaron todos, que lo hubo de hacer, con que hizo el viaje del desposado, dejándole sin un solo maravedí; y fue tanta la pesadumbre que desto recibió el perdidoso, que se arrojó en el suelo y comenzó a darse de calabazadas por la tierra. Lope, como bien nacido y como liberal y compasivo, le levantó y le volvió todo el dinero que le había ganado y los diez y seis ducados del asno, y aun de los que él tenía repartió con los circunstantes, cuya estraña liberalidad pasmó a todos; y si fueran los tiempos y las ocasiones del Tamorlán, le alzarán por rey de los aguadores.

Con grande acompañamiento volvió Lope a la ciudad, donde contó a Tomás lo sucedido, y Tomás asimismo le dio cuenta de sus buenos sucesos. No quedó taberna, ni bodegón, ni junta de pícaros donde no se supiese el juego del asno, el esquite por la cola y el brío y la liberalidad del Asturiano. Pero, como la mala bestia del vulgo, por la mayor parte, es mala, maldita y maldiciente, no tomó de memoria la liberalidad, brío y buenas partes del gran Lope, sino solamente la cola. Y así, apenas hubo andado dos días por la ciudad echando agua, cuando se vio señalar de muchos con el dedo, que decían: «Este es el aguador de la cola». Estuvieron los muchachos atentos, supieron el caso; y, no había asomado Lope por la entrada de cualquiera calle, cuando por toda ella le gritaban, quién de aquí y quién de allí: «¡Asturiano, daca la cola! ¡Daca la cola, Asturiano!» Lope, que se vio asaetear de tantas lenguas y con tantas voces, dio en callar, creyendo que en su mucho silencio se anegara tanta insolencia. Mas ni por éstas, pues mientras más callaba, más los muchachos gritaban; y así, probó a mudar su paciencia en cólera, y apeándose del asno dio a palos tras los muchachos, que fue afinar el polvorín y ponerle fuego, y fue otro cortar las cabezas de la serpiente, pues en lugar de una que quitaba, apaleando a algún muchacho, nacían en el mismo instante, no otras siete, sino setecientas, que con mayor ahínco y menudeo le pedían la cola. Finalmente, tuvo por bien de retirarse a una posada que había tomado fuera de la de su compañero, por huir de la Argüello, y de estarse en ella hasta que la influencia de aquel mal planeta pasase, y se borrara de la memoria de los muchachos aquella demanda mala de la cola que le pedían.

Seis días se pasaron sin que saliese de casa, si no era de noche, que iba a ver a Tomás y a preguntarle del estado en que se hallaba; el cual le contó que, después que había dado el papel a Costanza, nunca más había podido hablarla una sola palabra; y que le parecía que andaba más recatada que solía, puesto que una vez tuvo lugar de llegar a hablarla, y, viéndolo ella, le había dicho antes que llegase:

"Tomás, no me duele nada; y así, ni tengo necesidad de tus palabras ni de tus oraciones: conténtate que no te acuso a la Inquisición, y no te canses"; pero que estas razones las dijo sin mostrar ira en los ojos ni otro desabrimiento que pudiera dar indicio de reguridad alguna. Lope le contó a él la priesa que le daban los muchachos, pidiéndole la cola porque él había pedido la de su asno, con que hizo el famoso esquite. Aconsejóle Tomás que no saliese de casa, a lo menos sobre el asno, y que si saliese, fuese por calles solas y apartadas; y que, cuando esto no bastase, bastaría dejar el oficio, último remedio de poner fin a tan poco honesta demanda. Preguntóle Lope si había acudido más la Gallega. Tomás dijo que no, pero que no dejaba de sobornarle la voluntad con regalos y presentes de lo que hurtaba en la cocina a los huéspedes. Retiróse con esto a su posada Lope, con determinación de no salir della en otros seis días, a lo menos con el asno.

Las once serían de la noche cuando, de improviso y sin pensarlo, vieron entrar en la posada muchas varas de justicia, y al cabo el Corregidor. Alborotóse el huésped y aun los huéspedes; porque, así como los cometas cuando se muestran siempre causan temores de desgracias e infortunios, ni más ni menos la justicia, cuando de repente y de tropel se entra en una casa, sobresalta y atemoriza hasta las conciencias no culpadas. Entróse el Corregidor en una sala y llamó al huésped de casa, el cual vino temblando a ver lo que el señor Corregidor quería. Y, así como le vio el Corregidor, le preguntó con mucha gravedad:

-¿Sois vos el huésped?

-Sí señor -respondió él-, para lo que vuesa merced me quisiere mandar.

Mandó el Corregidor que saliesen de la sala todos los que en ella estaban, y que le dejasen solo con el huésped. Hiciéronlo así; y, quedándose solos, dijo el Corregidor al huésped:

-Huésped, ¿qué gente de servicio tenéis en esta vuestra posada?

-Señor -respondió él-, tengo dos mozas gallegas, y una ama y un mozo que tiene cuenta con dar la cebada y paja.

-¿No más? -replicó el Corregidor.

-No señor -respondió el huésped.

-Pues decidme, huésped -dijo el Corregidor-, ¿dónde está una muchacha que dicen que sirve en esta casa, tan hermosa que por toda la ciudad la llaman la ilustre fregona; y aun me han llegado a decir que mi hijo don Periquito es su enamorado, y que no hay noche que no le da músicas?

-Señor -respondió el huésped-, esa fregona ilustre que dicen es verdad que está en esta casa, pero ni es mi criada ni deja de serlo.

-No entiendo lo que decís, huésped, en eso de ser y no ser vuestra criada la fregona.

-Yo he dicho bien -añadió el huésped-; y si vuesa merced me da licencia, le diré lo que hay en esto, lo cual jamás he dicho a persona alguna.

-Primero quiero ver a la fregona que saber otra cosa; llamadla acá -dijo el Corregidor.

Asomóse el huésped a la puerta de la sala y dijo:

-¡Oíslo, señora: haced que entre aquí Costancica!

Cuando la huéspeda oyó que el Corregidor llamaba a Costanza, turbóse y comenzó a torcerse las manos, diciendo:

-¡Ay desdichada de mí! ¡El Corregidor a Costanza y a solas! Algún gran mal debe de haber sucedido, que la hermosura desta muchacha trae encantados los hombres.

Costanza, que lo oía, dijo:

-Señora, no se congoje, que yo iré a ver lo que el señor Corregidor quiere; y si algún mal hubiere sucedido, esté segura vuesa merced que no tendré yo la culpa.

Y, en esto, sin aguardar que otra vez la llamasen, tomó una vela encendida sobre un candelero de plata, y, con más vergüenza que temor, fue donde el Corregidor estaba.

Así como el Corregidor la vio, mandó al huésped que cerrase la puerta de la sala; lo cual hecho, el Corregidor se levantó, y, tomando el candelero que Costanza traía, llegándole la luz al rostro, la anduvo mirando toda de arriba abajo; y, como Costanza estaba con sobresalto, habíasele encendido la color del rostro, y estaba tan hermosa y tan honesta, que al Corregidor le pareció que estaba mirando la hermosura de un ángel en la tierra; y, después de haberla bien mirado, dijo:

-Huésped, ésta no es joya para estar en el bajo engaste de un mesón; desde aquí digo que mi hijo Periquito es discreto, pues tan bien ha sabido emplear sus pensamientos. Digo, doncella, que no solamente os pueden y deben llamar ilustre, sino ilustrísima; pero estos títulos no habían de caer sobre el nombre de fregona, sino sobre el de una duquesa.

-No es fregona, señor -dijo el huésped-, que no sirve de otra cosa en casa que de traer las llaves de la plata, que por la bondad de Dios tengo alguna, con que se sirven los huéspedes honrados que a esta posada vienen.

-Con todo eso -dijo el Corregidor-, digo, huésped, que ni es decente ni conviene que esta doncella esté en un mesón. ¿Es parienta vuestra, por ventura?

-Ni es mi parienta ni es mi criada; y si vuesa merced gustare de saber quién es, como ella no esté delante, oirá vuesa merced cosas que, juntamente con darle gusto, le admiren.

-Sí gustaré -dijo el Corregidor-; y sálgase Costancica allá fuera, y prométase de mí lo que de su mismo padre pudiera prometerse; que su mucha honestidad y hermosura obligan a que todos los que la vieren se ofrezcan a su servicio.

No respondió palabra Costanza, sino con mucha mesura hizo una profunda reverencia al Corregidor y salióse de la sala; y halló a su ama desalada esperándola, para saber della qué era lo que el Corregidor la quería. Ella le contó lo que había pasado, y cómo su señor quedaba con él para contalle no sé qué cosas que no quería que ella las oyese. No acabó de sosegarse la huéspeda, y siempre estuvo rezando hasta que se fue el Corregidor y vio salir libre a su marido; el cual, en tanto que estuvo con el Corregidor, le dijo:

-«Hoy hacen, señor, según mi cuenta, quince años, un mes y cuatro días que llegó a esta posada una señora en hábito de peregrina, en una litera, acompañada de cuatro criados de a caballo y de dos dueñas y una doncella, que en un coche venían. Traía asimismo dos acémilas cubiertas con dos ricos reposteros, y cargadas con una rica cama y con aderezos de cocina. Finalmente, el aparato era principal y la peregrina representaba ser una gran señora; y, aunque en la edad mostraba ser de cuarenta o pocos más años, no por eso dejaba de parecer hermosa en todo extremo. Venía enferma y descolorida, y tan fatigada que mandó que luego luego le hiciesen la cama, y en esta misma sala se la hicieron sus criados. Preguntáronme cuál era el médico de más fama desta ciudad. Díjeles que el doctor de la Fuente. Fueron luego por él, y él vino luego; comunicó a solas con él su enfermedad; y lo que de su plática resultó fue que mandó el médico que se le hiciese la cama en otra parte y en lugar donde no le diesen ningún ruido. Al momento la mudaron a otro aposento que está aquí arriba apartado, y con la comodidad que el doctor pedía. Ninguno de los criados entraban donde su señora, y solas las dos dueñas y la doncella la servían.

mi necesidad ni desgracia; a estas mis mujeres ni he podido ni he querido encubrírselo. Por huir de los maliciosos ojos de mi tierra, y porque esta hora no me tomase en ella, hice voto de ir a Nuestra Señora de Guadalupe; ella debe de haber sido servida que en esta vuestra casa me tome el parto; a vosotros está ahora el remediarme y acudirme, con el secreto que merece la que su honra pone en vuestras manos. La paga de la merced que me hiciéredes, que así quiero llamarla, si no respondiere al gran beneficio que espero, responderá, a lo menos, a dar muestra de una voluntad muy agradecida; y quiero que comiencen a dar muestras de mi voluntad estos ducientos escudos de oro que van en este bolsillo". Y, sacando debajo de la almohada de la cama un bolsillo de aguja, de oro y verde, se le puso en las manos de mi mujer; la cual, como simple y sin mirar lo que hacía, porque estaba suspensa y colgada de la peregrina, tomó el bolsillo, sin responderle palabra de agradecimiento ni de comedimiento alguno. Yo me acuerdo que le dije que no era menester nada de aquello: que no éramos personas que por interés, más que por caridad, nos movíamos a hacer bien cuando se ofrecía. Ella prosiguió, diciendo: "Es menester, amigos, que busquéis donde llevar lo que pariere luego luego, buscando también mentiras que decir a quien lo entregáredes; que por ahora será en la ciudad, y después quiero que se lleve a una aldea. De lo que después se hubiere de hacer, siendo Dios servido de alumbrarme y de llevarme a cumplir mi voto, cuando de Guadalupe vuelva lo sabréis, porque el tiempo me habrá dado lugar de que piense y escoja lo mejor que me convenga. Partera no la he menester, ni la quiero: que otros partos más honrados que he tenido me aseguran que, con sola la ayuda destas mis criadas, facilitaré sus dificultades y ahorraré de un testigo más de mis sucesos".

»Aquí dio fin a su razonamiento la lastimada peregrina y principio a un copioso llanto, que en parte fue consolado por las muchas y buenas razones que mi mujer, ya vuelta en más acuerdo, le dijo. Finalmente, yo salí luego a buscar donde llevar lo que pariese, a cualquier hora que fuese; y, entre las doce y la una de aquella misma noche, cuando toda la gente de casa estaba entregada al sueño, la buena señora parió una niña, la más hermosa que mis ojos hasta entonces habían visto, que es esta misma que vuesa merced acaba de ver ahora. Ni la madre se quejó en el parto ni la hija nació llorando: en todos había sosiego y silencio maravilloso, y tal cual convenía para el secreto de aquel extraño caso. Otros seis días estuvo en la cama, y en todos ellos venía el médico a visitarla, pero no porque ella le hubiese declarado de qué procedía su mal; y las medicinas que le ordenaba nunca las puso en ejecución, porque sólo pretendió engañar a sus criados con la visita del médico. Todo esto me dijo ella misma, después que se vio fuera de peligro, y a los ocho días se levantó con el mismo bulto, o con otro que se parecía a aquel con que se había echado.

»Fue a su romería y volvió de allí a veinte días, ya casi sana, porque poco a poco se iba quitando del artificio con que después de parida se mostraba hídrica. Cuando volvió, estaba ya la niña dada a criar por mi orden, con nombre de mi sobrina, en una aldea dos leguas de aquí. En el bautismo se le puso por nombre Costanza, que así lo dejó ordenado su madre; la cual, contenta de lo que yo había hecho, al tiempo de despedirse me dio una cadena de oro, que hasta agora tengo, de la cual quitó seis trozos, los cuales dijo que trairía la persona que por la niña viniese. También cortó un blanco pergamino a vueltas y a ondas, a la traza y manera como cuando se enclavijan las manos y en los dedos se escribiese alguna cosa, que estando enclavijados los dedos se puede leer, y después de apartadas las manos queda dividida la razón, porque se dividen las letras; que, en volviendo a enclavijar los dedos, se juntan y corresponden de manera que se pueden leer continuamente: digo que el un pergamino sirve de alma del otro, y encajados se leerán, y divididos no es posible, si no es adivinando la mitad del pergamino; y casi toda la cadena quedó en mi poder, y todo lo tengo, esperando el contraseña hasta ahora, puesto que ella me dijo que dentro de dos años enviaría por su hija, encargándome que la criase no como quien ella era, sino del modo que se suele criar una labradora. Encargóme también que si por algún suceso no le fuese posible enviar tan presto por su hija, que, aunque creciese y llegase a tener entendimiento, no la dijese del modo que había nacido, y que la perdonase el no decirme su nombre ni quién era, que lo guardaba para otra ocasión más importante. En resolución, dándome otros cuatrocientos escudos de oro y abrazando a mi mujer con tiernas lágrimas, se partió, dejándonos admirados de su discreción, valor, hermosura y recato.

»Resta ahora, señor Corregidor, decir a vuesa merced, si es posible que yo sepa decirlas, las bondades y las virtudes de Costancica. Ella, lo primero y principal, es devotísima de Nuestra Señora: confiesa y comulga cada mes; sabe escribir y leer; no hay mayor randera en Toledo; canta a la almohadilla como unos ángeles; en ser honesta no hay quien la iguale. Pues en lo que toca a ser hermosa, ya vuesa merced lo ha visto. El señor don Pedro, hijo de vuesa merced, en su vida la ha hablado; bien es verdad que de cuando en cuando le da alguna música, que ella jamás escucha. Muchos señores, y de título, han posado en esta posada, y apostado, por hartarse de verla, han detenido su camino muchos días; pero yo sé bien que no habrá ninguno que con verdad se pueda alabar que ella le haya dado lugar de decirle una palabra sola ni acompañada.» Esta es, señor, la verdadera historia de la ilustre fregona, que no friega, en la cual no he salido de la verdad un punto.

Calló el huésped y tardó un gran rato el Corregidor en hablarle: tan suspenso le tenía el suceso que el huésped le había contado. En fin, le dijo que le trujese allí la cadena y el pergamino, que quería verlo. Fue el huésped por ello, y, trayéndoselo, vio que era así como le había dicho; la cadena era de trozos, curiosamente labrada; en el pergamino estaban escritas, una debajo de otra, en el espacio que había de hinchir el vacío de la otra mitad, estas letras: E T E L S N V D D R; por las cuales letras vio ser forzoso que se juntasen con las de la mitad del otro pergamino para poder ser entendidas. Tuvo por discreta la señal del conocimiento, y juzgó por muy rica a la señora peregrina que tal cadena había dejado al huésped; y, teniendo en pensamiento de sacar de aquella posada la hermosa muchacha cuando hubiese concertado un monasterio donde llevarla, por entonces se contentó de llevar sólo el pergamino, encargando al huésped que si acaso viniesen por Costanza, le avisase y diese noticia de quién era el que por ella venía, antes que le mostrase la cadena, que dejaba en su poder. Con esto se fue tan admirado del cuento y suceso de la ilustre fregona como de su incomparable hermosura.

Todo el tiempo que gastó el huésped en estar con el Corregidor, y el que ocupó Costanza cuando la llamaron, estuvo Tomás fuera de sí, combatida el alma de mil varios pensamientos, sin acertar jamás con ninguno de su gusto; pero cuando vio que el Corregidor se iba y que Costanza se quedaba, respiró su espíritu y volviéronle los pulsos, que ya casi desamparado le tenían. No osó preguntar al huésped lo que el Corregidor quería, ni el huésped lo dijo a nadie sino a su mujer, con que ella también volvió en sí, dando gracias a Dios que de tan grande sobresalto la había librado.

El día siguiente, cerca de la una, entraron en la posada, con cuatro hombres de a caballo, dos caballeros ancianos de venerables presencias, habiendo primero preguntado uno de dos mozos que a pie con ellos venían si era aquélla la posada del Sevillano; y, habiéndole respondido que sí, se entraron todos en ella. Apeáronse los cuatro y fueron a apearse a los dos ancianos: señal por lo que se conoció que aquellos dos eran señores de los seis. Salió Costanza con su acostumbrada gentileza a ver los nuevos huéspedes, y, apenas la hubo visto uno de los dos ancianos, cuando dijo al otro:

-Yo creo, señor don Juan, que hemos hallado todo aquello que venimos a buscar.

Tomás, que acudió a dar recado a las cabalgaduras, conoció luego a dos criados de su padre, y luego conoció a su padre y al padre de Carriazo, que eran los dos ancianos a quien los demás respetaban; y, aunque se admiró de su venida, consideró que debían de ir a buscar a él y a Carriazo a las almadrabas: que no habría faltado quien les hubiese dicho que en ellas, y no en Flandes, los hallarían. Pero no se atrevió a dejarse conocer en aquel traje; antes, aventurándolo todo, puesta la mano en el rostro, pasó por delante dellos, y fue a buscar a Costanza, y quiso la buena suerte que la hallase sola; y, apriesa y con lengua turbada, temeroso que ella no le daría lugar para decirle nada, le dijo:

-Costanza, uno destos dos caballeros ancianos que aquí han llegado ahora es mi padre, que es aquel que oyes llamar don Juan de Avendaño; infórmate de sus criados si tiene un hijo que se llama don Tomás de Avendaño, que soy yo, y de aquí podrás ir coligiendo y averiguando que te he dicho verdad en cuanto a la calidad de mi persona, y que te la diré en cuanto de mi parte te tengo ofrecido; y quédate a Dios, que hasta que ellos se vayan no pienso volver a esta casa.

No le respondió nada Costanza, ni él aguardó a que le respondiese; sino, volviéndose a salir, cubierto como había entrado, se fue a dar cuenta a Carriazo de cómo sus padres estaban en la posada. Dio voces el huésped a Tomás que viniese a dar cebada; pero, como no pareció, diola él mismo. Uno de los dos ancianos llamó aparte a una de las dos mozas gallegas, y preguntóle cómo se llamaba aquella muchacha hermosa que habían visto, y que si era hija o parienta del huésped o huéspeda de casa. La Gallega le respondió:

-La moza se llama Costanza; ni es parienta del huésped ni de la huéspeda, ni sé lo que es; sólo digo que la doy a la mala landre, que no sé qué tiene que no deja hacer baza a ninguna de las mozas que estamos en esta casa. ¡Pues en verdad que tenemos nuestras faciones como Dios nos las puso! No entra huésped que no pregunte luego quién es la hermosa, y que no diga: «Bonita es, bien parece, a fe que no es mala; mal año para las más pintadas; nunca peor me la depare la fortuna». Y a nosotras no hay quien nos diga: «¿Qué tenéis ahí, diablos, o mujeres, o lo que sois?»

-Luego esta niña, a esa cuenta -replicó el caballero-, debe de dejarse manosear y requebrar de los huéspedes.

-¡Sí! -respondió la Gallega-: ¡tenedle el pie al herrar! ¡Bonita es la niña para eso! Par Dios, señor, si ella se dejara mirar siquiera, manara en oro; es más áspera que un erizo; es una tragaavemarías; labrando está todo el día y rezando. Para el día que ha de hacer milagros quisiera yo tener un cuento de renta. Mi ama dice que trae un silencio pegado a las carnes; ¡tome qué, mi padre!

Contentísimo el caballero de lo que había oído a la Gallega, sin esperar a que le quitasen las espuelas, llamó al huésped; y, retirándose con él aparte en una sala, le dijo:

-Yo, señor huésped, vengo a quitaros una prenda mía que ha algunos años que tenéis en vuestro poder; para quitárosla os traigo mil escudos de oro, y estos trozos de cadena y este pergamino.

Y, diciendo esto, sacó los seis de la señal de la cadena que él tenía.

Asimismo conoció el pergamino, y, alegre sobremanera con el ofrecimiento de los mil escudos, respondió:

-Señor, la prenda que queréis quitar está en casa; pero no están en ella la cadena ni el pergamino con que se ha de hacer la prueba de la verdad que yo creo que vuesa merced trata; y así, le suplico tenga paciencia, que yo vuelvo luego.

Y al momento fue a avisar al Corregidor de lo que pasaba, y de cómo estaban dos caballeros en su posada que venían por Costanza.

Acababa de comer el Corregidor, y, con el deseo que tenía de ver el fin de aquella historia, subió luego a caballo y vino a la posada del Sevillano, llevando consigo el pergamino de la muestra. Y, apenas hubo visto a los dos caballeros cuando, abiertos los brazos, fue a abrazar al uno, diciendo:

-¡Válame Dios! ¿Qué buena venida es ésta, señor don Juan de Avendaño, primo y señor mío?

El caballero le abrazó asimismo, diciéndole:

-Sin duda, señor primo, habrá sido buena mi venida, pues os veo, y con la salud que siempre os deseo. Abrazad, primo, a este caballero, que es el señor don Diego de Carriazo, gran señor y amigo mío.

-Ya conozco al señor don Diego -respondió el Corregidor-, y le soy muy servidor.

Y, abrazándose los dos, después de haberse recibido con grande amor y grandes cortesías, se entraron en una sala, donde se quedaron solos con el huésped, el cual ya tenía consigo la cadena, y dijo:

-Ya el señor Corregidor sabe a lo que vuesa merced viene, señor don Diego de Carriazo; vuesa merced saque los trozos que faltan a esta cadena, y el señor Corregidor sacará el pergamino que está en su poder, y hagamos la prueba que ha tantos años que espero a que se haga.

-Desa manera -respondió don Diego-, no habrá necesidad de dar cuenta de nuevo al señor Corregidor de nuestra venida, pues bien se verá que ha sido a lo que vos, señor huésped, habréis dicho.

-Algo me ha dicho; pero mucho me quedó por saber. El pergamino, hele aquí.

Sacó don Diego el otro, y juntando las dos partes se hicieron una, y a las letras del que tenía el huésped, que, como se ha dicho, eran E T E L S N V D D R, respondían en el otro pergamino éstas: S A S A E A L E R A E A, que todas juntas decían: ESTA ES LA SEÑAL VERDADERA. Cotejéronse luego los trozos de la cadena y hallaron ser las señas verdaderas.

-¡Esto está hecho! -dijo el Corregidor-. Resta ahora saber, si es posible, quién son los padres desta hermosísima prenda.

-El padre -respondió don Diego-yo lo soy; la madre ya no vive: basta saber que fue tan principal que pudiera yo ser su criado. Y, porque como se encubre su nombre no se encubra su fama, ni se culpe lo que en ella parece manifiesto error y culpa conocida, se ha de saber que la madre desta prenda, siendo viuda de un gran caballero, se retiró a vivir a una aldea suya; y allí, con recato y con honestidad grandísima, pasaba con sus criados y vasallos una vida sosegada y quieta. Ordenó la suerte que un día, yendo yo a caza por el término de su lugar, quise visitarla, y era la hora de siesta cuando llegué a su alcázar: que así se puede llamar su gran casa; dejé el caballo a un criado mío; subí sin topar a nadie hasta el mismo aposento donde ella estaba durmiendo la siesta sobre un estrado negro. Era por extremo hermosa, y el silencio, la soledad, la ocasión, despertaron en mí un deseo más atrevido que honesto; y, sin ponerme a hacer discretos discursos, cerré tras mí la puerta, y, llegándome a ella, la desperté; y, teniéndola asida fuertemente, le dije: «Vuesa merced, señora mía, no grite, que las voces que diere serán pregoneras de su deshonra: nadie me ha visto entrar en este aposento; que mi suerte, para que la tenga bonísima en gozaros, ha llovido sueño en todos vuestros criados, y cuando ellos acudan a vuestras voces no podrán más que quitarme la vida, y esto ha de ser en vuestro mismos brazos, y no por mi muerte dejará de quedar en opinión vuestra fama». Finalmente, yo la gocé contra su voluntad y a pura fuerza mía: ella, cansada, rendida y turbada, o no pudo o no quiso hablarme palabra, y yo, dejándola como atontada y suspensa, me volví a salir por los mismos pasos donde había entrado, y me vine a la aldea de otro amigo mío, que estaba dos leguas de la suya. Esta señora se mudó de aquel lugar a otro, y, sin que yo jamás la viese, ni lo procurase, se pasaron dos años, al cabo de los cuales supe que era muerta; y podrá haber veinte días que, con grandes encarecimientos, escribiéndome que era cosa que me importaba en ella el contento y la honra, me envió a llamar un mayordomo desta señora. Fui a ver lo que me quería, bien lejos de pensar en lo que me dijo; halléle a punto de muerte, y, por abreviar razones, en muy breves me dijo cómo al tiempo que murió su señora le dijo todo lo que conmigo le había sucedido, y cómo había quedado preñada de aquella fuerza; y que, por encubrir el bulto, había venido en romería a Nuestra Señora de Guadalupe, y cómo había parido en esta casa una niña, que se había de llamar Costanza. Diome las señas con que la hallaría, que fueron las que habéis visto de la cadena y pergamino. Y diome ansimismo treinta mil escudos de oro, que su señora dejó para casar a su hija. Díjome ansimismo que el no habérmelos dado luego, como su señora había muerto, ni declarádome lo que ella encomendó a su confianza y secreto, había sido por pura codicia y por poderse aprovechar de aquel dinero; pero que ya que estaba a punto de ir a dar cuenta a Dios, por descargo de su conciencia me daba el dinero y me avisaba adónde y cómo había de hallar mi hija. Recebí el dinero y las señales, y, dando cuenta desto al señor don Juan de Avendaño, nos pusimos en camino desta ciudad.

A estas razones llegaba don Diego, cuando oyeron que en la puerta de la calle decían a grandes voces:

-Díganle a Tomás Pedro, el mozo de la cebada, cómo llevan a su amigo el Asturiano preso; que acuda a la cárcel, que allí le espera.

A la voz de cárcel y de preso, dijo el Corregidor que entrase el preso y el alguacil que le llevaba. Dijeron al alguacil que el Corregidor, que estaba allí, le mandaba entrar con el preso; y así lo hubo de hacer.

Venía el Asturiano todos los dientes bañados en sangre, y muy malparado y muy bien asido del alguacil; y, así como entró en la sala, conoció a su padre y al de Avendaño. Turbóse, y, por no ser conocido, con un paño, como que se limpiaba la sangre, se cubrió el rostro. Preguntó el Corregidor que qué había hecho aquel mozo, que tan malparado le llevaban. Respondió el alguacil que aquel mozo era un aguador que le llamaban el Asturiano, a quien los muchachos por las calles decían: «¡Daca la cola, Asturiano: daca la cola!»; y luego, en breves palabras, contó la causa porque le pedían la tal cola, de que no rieron poco todos. Dijo más: que, saliendo por la puente de Alcántara, dándole los muchachos priesa con la demanda de la cola, se había apeado del asno, y, dando tras todos, alcanzó a uno, a quien dejaba medio muerto a palos; y que, queriéndole prender, se había resistido, y que por eso iba tan malparado.

Mandó el Corregidor que se descubriese el rostro; y, porfiando a no querer descubrirse, llegó el alguacil y quitóle el pañuelo, y al punto le conoció su padre, y dijo todo alterado:

-Hijo don Diego, ¿cómo estás desta manera? ¿Qué traje es éste? ¿Aún no se te han olvidado tus picardías?

Hincó las rodillas Carriazo y fuese a poner a los pies de su padre, que, con lágrimas en los ojos, le tuvo abrazado un buen espacio. Don Juan de Avendaño, como sabía que don Diego había venido con don Tomás, su hijo, preguntóle por él, a lo cual respondió que don Tomás de Avendaño era el mozo que daba cebada y paja en aquella posada. Con esto que el Asturiano dijo se acabó de apoderar la admiración en todos los presentes, y mandó el Corregidor al huésped que trujese allí al mozo de la cebada.

-Yo creo que no está en casa -respondió el huésped-, pero yo le buscaré.

Y así, fue a buscallo.

Preguntó don Diego a Carriazo que qué transformaciones eran aquéllas, y qué les había movido a ser él aguador y don Tomás mozo de mesón. A lo cual respondió Carriazo que no podía satisfacer a aquellas preguntas tan en público; que él respondería a solas.

Estaba Tomás Pedro escondido en su aposento, para ver desde allí, sin ser visto, lo que hacían su padre y el de Carriazo. Teníale suspenso la venida del Corregidor y el alboroto que en toda la casa andaba. No faltó quien le dijese al huésped como estaba allí escondido; subió por él, y más por fuerza que por grado le hizo bajar; y aun no bajara si el mismo Corregidor no saliera al patio y le llamara por su nombre, diciendo:

-Baje vuesa merced, señor pariente, que aquí no le aguardan osos ni leones.

Bajó Tomás, y, con los ojos bajos y sumisión grande, se hincó de rodillas ante su padre, el cual le abrazó con grandísimo contento, a fuer del que tuvo el padre del Hijo Pródigo cuando le cobró de perdido.

Ya en esto había venido un coche del Corregidor, para volver en él, pues la gran fiesta no permitía volver a caballo. Hizo llamar a Costanza, y, tomándola de la mano, se la presentó a su padre, diciendo:

-Recebid, señor don Diego, esta prenda y estimalda por la más rica que acertáades a desear. Y vos, hermosa doncella, besad la mano a vuestro padre y dad gracias a Dios, que con tan honrado suceso ha enmedado, subido y mejorado la bajeza de vuestro estado.

Costanza, que no sabía ni imaginaba lo que le había acontecido, toda turbada y temblando, no supo hacer otra cosa que hincarse de rodillas ante su padre; y, tomándole las manos, se las comenzó a besar tiernamente, bañándose las con infinitas lágrimas que por sus hermosísimos ojos derramaba.

En tanto que esto pasaba, había persuadido el Corregidor a su primo don Juan que se viniesen todos con él a su casa; y, aunque don Juan lo rehusaba, fueron tantas las persuasiones del Corregidor, que lo hubo de conceder; y así, entraron en el coche todos. Pero, cuando dijo el Corregidor a Costanza que entrase también en el coche, se le anubló el corazón, y ella y la huéspeda se asieron una a otra y comenzaron a hacer tan amargo llanto, que quebraba los corazones de cuantos le escuchaban. Decía la huéspeda:

-¿Cómo es esto, hija de mi corazón, que te vas y me dejas? ¿Cómo tienes ánimo de dejar a esta madre, que con tanto amor te ha criado?

Costanza lloraba y la respondía con no menos tiernas palabras. Pero el Corregidor, enternecido, mandó que asimismo la huéspeda entrase en el coche, y que no se apartase de su hija, pues por tal la tenía, hasta que saliese de Toledo. Así, la huéspeda y todos entraron en el coche, y fueron a casa del Corregidor, donde fueron bien recibidos de su mujer, que era una principal señora. Comieron regalada y sumptuosamente, y después de comer contó Carriazo a su padre cómo por amor de Costanza don Tomás se había puesto a servir en el mesón, y que estaba enamorado de tal manera della, que, sin que le hubiera descubierto ser tan principal, como era siendo su hija, la tomara por mujer en el estado de fregona. Vistió luego la mujer del Corregidor a Costanza con unos vestidos de una hija que tenía de la misma edad y cuerpo de Costanza; y si parecía hermosa con los de labradora, con los cortesanos parecía cosa del cielo: tan bien la cuadraban, que daba a entender que desde que nació había sido señora y usado los mejores trajes que el uso trae consigo.

Pero, entre tantos alegres, no pudo faltar un triste, que fue don Pedro, el hijo del Corregidor, que luego se imaginó que Costanza no había de ser suya; y así fue la verdad, porque, entre el Corregidor y don Diego de Carriazo y don Juan de Avendaño, se concertaron en que don Tomás se casase con Costanza, dándole su padre los treinta mil escudos que su madre le había dejado, y el aguador don Diego de Carriazo casase con la hija del Corregidor, y don Pedro, el hijo del Corregidor, con una hija de don Juan de Avendaño; que su padre se ofrecía a traer dispensación del parentesco.

Destá manera quedaron todos contentos, alegres y satisfechos, y la nueva de los casamientos y de la ventura de la fregona ilustre se extendió por la ciudad; y acudía infinita gente a ver a Costanza en el nuevo hábito, en el cual tan señora se mostraba como se ha dicho. Vieron al mozo de la cebada, Tomás Pedro, vuelto en don Tomás de Avendaño y vestido como señor; notaron que Lope Asturiano era muy gentilhomme después que había mudado vestido y dejado el asno y las aguaderas; pero, con todo eso, no faltaba quien, en el medio de su pompa, cuando iba por la calle, no le pidiese la cola.

Un mes se estuvieron en Toledo, al cabo del cual se volvieron a Burgos don Diego de Carriazo y su mujer, su padre, y Costanza con su marido don Tomás, y el hijo del Corregidor, que quiso ir a ver su parienta y esposa. Quedó el Sevillano rico con los mil escudos y con muchas joyas que Costanza dio a su señora; que siempre con este nombre llamaba a la que la había criado.

Dio ocasión la historia de la fregona ilustre a que los poetas del dorado Tajo ejercitasen sus plumas en solenizar y en alabar la sin par hermosura de Costanza, la cual aún vive en compañía de su buen mozo de mesón; y Carriazo, ni más ni menos, con tres hijos, que, sin tomar el estilo del padre ni acordarse si hay almadrabas en el mundo, hoy están todos estudiando en Salamanca; y su padre, apenas vee algún asno de aguador, cuando se le representa y viene a la memoria el que tuvo en Toledo; y teme que, cuando menos se cate, ha de remanecer en alguna sátira el «¡Daca la cola, Asturiano! ¡Asturiano, daca la cola!»

Las dos doncellas

CINCO leguas de la ciudad de Sevilla, está un lugar que se llama Castiblanco; y, en uno de muchos mesones que tiene, a la hora que anohecía, entró un caminante sobre un hermoso cuartago, extranjero. No traía criado alguno, y, sin esperar que le tuviesen el estribo, se arrojó de la silla con gran ligereza.

Acudió luego el huésped, que era hombre diligente y de recado; mas no fue tan presto que no estuviese ya el caminante sentado en un poyo que en el portal había, desabrochándose muy apriesa los botones del pecho, y luego dejó caer los brazos a una y a otra parte, dando manifiesto indicio de desmayarse. La huéspeda, que era caritativa, se llegó a él, y, rociándole con agua el rostro, le hizo volver en su acuerdo, y él, dando muestras que le había pesado de que así le hubiesen visto, se volvió a abrochar, pidiendo que le diesen luego un aposento donde se recogiese, y que, si fuese posible, fuese solo.

Díjole la huéspeda que no había más de uno en toda la casa, y que tenía dos camas, y que era forzoso, si algún huésped acudiese, acomodarle en la una. A lo cual respondió el caminante que él pagaría los dos lechos, viniese o no huésped alguno; y, sacando un escudo de oro, se le dio a la huéspeda, con condición que a nadie diese el lecho vacío.

No se descontentó la huéspeda de la paga; antes, se ofreció de hacer lo que le pedía, aunque el mismo deán de Sevilla llegase aquella noche a su casa. Preguntóle si quería cenar, y respondió que no; mas que sólo quería que se tuviese gran cuidado con su cuartago. Pidió la llave del aposento, y, llevando consigo unas bolsas grandes de cuero, se entró en él y cerró tras sí la puerta con llave, y aun, a lo que después pareció, arrimó a ella dos sillas.

Apenas se hubo encerrado, cuando se juntaron a consejo el huésped y la huéspeda, y el mozo que daba la cebada, y otros dos vecinos que acaso allí se hallaron; y todos trataron de la grande hermosura y gallarda disposición del nuevo huésped, concluyendo que jamás tal belleza habían visto.

Tanteáronle la edad y se resolvieron que tendría de diez y seis a diez y siete años. Fueron y vinieron y dieron y tomaron, como suele decirse, sobre qué podía haber sido la causa del desmayo que le dio; pero, como no la alcanzaron, quedáronse con la admiración de su gentileza.

Fuéronse los vecinos a sus casas, y el huésped a pensar el cuartago, y la huéspeda a aderezar algo de cenar por si otros huéspedes viniesen. Y no tardó mucho cuando entró otro de poca más edad que el primero y no de menos gallardía; y, apenas le hubo visto la huéspeda, cuando dijo:

-¡Válame Dios!, ¿y qué es esto? ¿Vienen, por ventura, esta noche a posar ángeles a mi casa?

-¿Por qué dice eso la señora huéspeda? -dijo el caballero.

-No lo digo por nada, señor -respondió la mesonera-; sólo digo que vuesa merced no se apee, porque no tengo cama que darle, que dos que tenía las ha tomado un caballero que está en aquel aposento, y me las ha pagado entrambas, aunque no había menester más de la una sola, porque nadie le entre en el aposento; y, es que debe de gustar de la soledad; y, en Dios y en mi ánima que no sé yo por qué, que no tiene él cara ni disposición para esconderse, sino para que todo el mundo le vea y le bendiga.

-¿Tan lindo es, señora huéspeda? -replicó el caballero.

-¡Y cómo si es lindo! -dijo ella-; y aun más que relindo.

-Ten aquí, mozo -dijo a esta sazón el caballero-; que, aunque duerma en el suelo tengo de ver hombre tan alabado.

Y, dando el estribo a un mozo de mulas que con él venía, se apeó y hizo que le diesen luego de cenar, y así fue hecho. Y, estando cenando, entró un alguacil del pueblo (como de ordinario en los lugares pequeños se usa) y sentóse a conversación con el caballero en tanto que cenaba; y no dejó, entre razón y razón, de echar abajo tres cubiletes de vino, y de roer una pechuga y una cadera de perdiz que le dio el caballero. Y todo se lo pagó el alguacil con preguntarle nuevas de la Corte y de las guerras de Flandes y bajada del Turco, no olvidándose de los sucesos del Trasilvano, que Nuestro Señor guarde.

El caballero cenaba y callaba, porque no venía de parte que le pudiese satisfacer a sus preguntas. Ya en esto, había acabado el mesonero de dar recado al cuartago, y sentóse a hacer tercio en la conversación y a probar de su mismo vino no menos tragos que el alguacil; y a cada trago que envasaba volvía y derribaba la cabeza sobre el hombro izquierdo, y alababa el vino, que le ponía en las nubes, aunque no se atrevía a dejarle mucho en ellas por que no se aguase. De lance en lance, volvieron a las alabanzas del huésped encerrado, y contaron de su desmayo y encerramiento, y de que no había querido cenar cosa alguna. Ponderaron el aparato de las bolsas, y la bondad del cuartago y del vestido vistoso que de camino traía: todo lo cual requería no venir sin mozo que le sirviese. Todas estas exageraciones pusieron nuevo deseo de verle, y rogó al mesonero hiciese de modo como él entrase a dormir en la otra cama y le daría un escudo de oro. Y, puesto que la codicia del dinero acabó con la voluntad del mesonero de dársela, halló ser imposible, a causa que estaba cerrado por de dentro y no se atrevía a despertar al que dentro dormía, y que también tenía pagados los dos lechos. Todo lo cual facilitó el alguacil diciendo:

-Lo que se podrá hacer es que yo llamaré a la puerta, diciendo que soy la justicia, que por mandado del señor alcalde traigo a aposentar a este caballero a este mesón, y que, no habiendo otra cama, se le manda dar aquélla. A lo cual ha de replicar el huésped que se le hace agravio, porque ya está alquilada y no es razón quitarla al que la tiene. Con esto quedará el mesonero desculpado y vuesa merced conseguirá su intento.

A todos les pareció bien la traza del alguacil, y por ella le dio el deseoso cuatro reales.

Púsose luego por obra; y, en resolución, mostrando gran sentimiento, el primer huésped abrió a la justicia, y el segundo, pidiéndole perdón del agravio que al parecer se le había hecho, se fue acostar en el lecho desocupado. Pero ni el otro le respondió palabra, ni menos se dejó ver el rostro, porque apenas hubo abierto cuando se fue a su cama, y, vuelta la cara a la pared, por no responder, hizo que dormía. El otro se acostó, esperando cumplir por la mañana su deseo, cuando se levantasen.

Eran las noches de las perezosas y largas de diciembre, y el frío y el cansancio del camino forzaba a procurar pasarlas con reposo; pero, como no le tenía el huésped primero, a poco más de la media noche, comenzó a suspirar tan amargamente que con cada suspiro parecía despedírsele el alma; y fue de tal manera que, aunque el segundo dormía, hubo de despertar al lastimero son del que se quejaba. Y, admirado de los sollozos con que acompañaba los suspiros, atentamente se puso a escuchar lo que al parecer entre sí murmuraba. Estaba la sala oscura y las camas bien desviadas; pero no por esto dejó de oír, entre otras razones, éstas, que, con voz debilitada y flaca, el lastimado huésped primero decía:

-¡Ay sin ventura! ¿Adónde me lleva la fuerza incontrastable de mis hados? ¿Qué camino es el mío, o qué salida espero tener del intricado laberinto donde me hallo? ¡Ay pocos y mal experimentados años, incapaces de toda buena consideración y consejo! ¿Qué fin ha de tener esta no sabida peregrinación mía? ¡Ay honra menospreciada; ay amor mal agradecido; ay respetos de honrados padres y parientes atropellados, y ay de mí una y mil veces, que tan a rienda suelta me dejé llevar de mi deseos! ¡Oh palabras fingidas, que tan de veras me obligastes a que con obras os respondiese! Pero, ¿de quién me quejo, cuitada? ¿Yo no soy la que quise engañarme? ¿No soy yo la que tomó el cuchillo con sus misma manos, con que corté y eché por tierra mi crédito, con el que de mi valor tenían mis ancianos padres? ¡Oh fementido Marco Antonio! ¿Cómo es posible que en las dulces palabras que me decías viniese mezclada la hiel de tus descortesías y desdenes? ¿Adónde estás, ingrato; adónde te fuiste, desconocido? Respóndeme, que te hablo; espérame, que te sigo; susténtame, que descaezco;

págame, que me debes; socórreme, pues por tantas vías te tengo obligado.

Calló, en diciendo esto, dando muestra en los ayes y suspiros que no dejaban los ojos de derramar tiernas lágrimas. Todo lo cual, con sosegado silencio, estuvo escuchando el segundo huésped, coligiendo por las razones que había oído que, sin duda alguna, era mujer la que se quejaba: cosa que le avivó más el deseo de conocella, y estuvo muchas veces determinado de irse a la cama de la que creía ser mujer; y hubiéralo hecho si en aquella sazón no le sintiera levantar: y, abriendo la puerta de la sala, dio voces al huésped de casa que le ensillase el cuartago, porque quería partirse. A lo cual, al cabo de un buen rato que el mesonero se dejó llamar, le respondió que se sosegase, porque aún no era pasada la media noche, y que la oscuridad era tanta, que sería temeridad ponerse en camino. Quietóse con esto, y, volviendo a cerrar la puerta, se arrojó en la cama de golpe, dando un recio suspiro.

Parecióle al que escuchaba que sería bien hablarle y ofrecerle para su remedio lo que de su parte podía, por obligarle con esto a que se descubriese y su lastimera historia le contase; y así le dijo:

-Por cierto, señor gentilhombre, que si los suspiros que habéis dado y las palabras que habéis dicho no me hubieran movido a condolerme del mal de que os quejáis, entendiera que carecía de natural sentimiento, o que mi alma era de piedra y mi pecho de bronce duro; y si esta compasión que os tengo y el presupuesto que en mí ha nacido de poner mi vida por vuestro remedio, si es que vuestro mal le tiene, merece alguna cortesía en recompensa, ruégoos que la uséis conmigo declarándome, sin encubrirme cosa, la causa de vuestro dolor.

-Si él no me hubiera sacado de sentido -respondió el que se quejaba-, bien debiera yo de acordarme que no estaba solo en este aposento, y así hubiera puesto más freno a mi lengua y más tregua a mis suspiros; pero, en pago de haberme faltado la memoria en parte donde tanto me importaba tenerla, quiero hacer lo que me pedís, porque, renovando la amarga historia de mis desgracias, podría ser que el nuevo sentimiento me acabase. Mas, si queréis que haga lo que me pedís, habéisme de prometer, por la fe que me habéis mostrado en el ofrecimiento que me habéis hecho y por quien vos sois (que, a lo que en vuestras palabras mostráis, prometéis mucho), que, por cosas que de mí oyáis en lo que os dijere, no os habéis de mover de vuestro lecho ni venir al mío, ni preguntarme más de aquello que yo quisiere deciros; porque si al contrario desto hiciéredes, en el punto que os sienta mover, con una espada que a la cabecera tengo, me pasaré el pecho.

Esotro, que mil imposibles prometiera por saber lo que tanto deseaba, le respondió que no saldría un punto de lo que le había pedido, afirmándoselo con mil juramentos.

-Con ese seguro, pues -dijo el primero-, yo haré lo que hasta ahora no he hecho, que es dar cuenta de mi vida a nadie; y así, escuchad: «Habéis de saber, señor, que yo, que en esta posada entré, como sin duda os habrán dicho, en traje de varón, soy una desdichada doncella: a lo menos una que lo fue no ha ocho días y lo dejó de ser por inadvertida y loca, y por creerse de palabras compuestas y afeitadas de fermentidos hombres. Mi nombre es Teodosia; mi patria, un principal lugar desta Andalucía, cuyo nombre callo (porque no os importa a vos tanto el saberlo como a mí el encubrirlo); mis padres son nobles y más que medianamente ricos, los cuales tuvieron un hijo y una hija: él para descanso y honra suya, y ella para todo lo contrario. A él enviaron a estudiar a Salamanca; a mí me tenían en su casa, adonde me criaban con el recogimiento y recato que su virtud y nobleza pedían; y yo, sin pesadumbre alguna, siempre les fui obediente, ajustando mi voluntad a la suya sin discrepar un solo punto, hasta que mi suerte menguada, o mi mucha demasía, me ofreció a los ojos un hijo de un vecino nuestro, más rico que mis padres y tan noble como ellos.

»La primera vez que le miré no sentí otra cosa que fuese más de una complacencia de haberle visto; y no fue mucho, porque su gala, gentileza, rostro y costumbres eran de los alabados y estimados del pueblo, con su rara discreción y cortesía. Pero, ¿de qué me sirve alabar a mi enemigo ni ir alargando con razones el suceso tan desgraciado mío, o, por mejor decir, el principio de mi locura? Digo, en fin, que él me vio una y muchas veces desde una ventana que frontero de otra mía estaba. Desde allí, a lo que me pareció, me envió el alma por los ojos; y los míos, con otra manera de contento que el primero, gustaron de miralle, y aun me forzaron a que creyese que eran puras verdades cuanto en sus ademanes y en su rostro leía. Fue la vista la intercesora y medianera de la habla, la habla de declarar su deseo, su deseo de encender el mío y de dar fe al suyo. Llegóse a todo esto las promesas, los juramentos, las lágrimas, los suspiros y todo aquello que, a mi parecer, puede hacer un firme amador para dar a entender la entereza de su voluntad y la firmeza de su pecho. Y en mí, desdichada (que jamás en semejantes ocasiones y trances me había visto), cada palabra era un tiro de artillería que derribaba parte de la fortaleza de mi honra; cada lágrima era un fuego en que se abrasaba mi honestidad; cada suspiro, un furioso viento que el incendio aumentaba, de tal suerte que acabó de consumir la virtud que hasta entonces aún no había sido tocada; y, finalmente, con la promesa de ser mi esposo, a pesar de sus padres, que para otra le guardaban, di con todo mi recogimiento en tierra; y, sin saber cómo, me entregué en su poder a hurto de mis padres, sin tener otro testigo de mi desatino que un paje de Marco Antonio, que éste es el nombre del inquietador de mi sosiego. Y, apenas hubo tomado de mí la posesión que quiso, cuando de allí a dos días desapareció del pueblo, sin que sus padres ni otra persona alguna supiesen decir ni imaginar dónde había ido.

»Cual yo quedé, dígallo quien tuviere poder para decirlo, que yo no sé ni supe más de sentillo. Castigué mis cabellos, como si ellos tuvieran la culpa de mi yerro; martiricé mi rostro, por parecerme que él había dado toda la ocasión a mi desventura; maldije mi suerte, acusé mi presta determinación, derramé muchas e infinitas lágrimas, vime casi ahogada entre ellas y entre los suspiros que de mi lastimado pecho salían; quejéme en silencio al cielo, discurrí con la imaginación, por ver si descubría algún camino o senda a mi remedio, y la que hallé fue vestirme en hábito de hombre y ausentarme de la casa de mis padres, yirme a buscar a este segundo engañador Eneas, a este cruel y fementido Vireno, a este defraudador de mis buenos pensamientos y legítimas y bien fundadas esperanzas.

»Y así, sin ahondar mucho en mis discursos, ofreciéndome la ocasión un vestido de camino de mi hermano y un cuartago de mi padre, que yo ensillé, una noche escurísima me salí de casa con intención de ir a Salamanca, donde, según después se dijo, creían que Marco Antonio podía haber venido, porque también es estudiante y camarada del hermano mío que os he dicho. No dejé, asimismo de sacar cantidad de dineros en oro para todo aquello que en mi impensado viaje pueda sucederme. Y lo que más me fatiga es que mis padres me han de seguir y hallar por las señas del vestido y del cuartago que traigo; y, cuando esto no tema, temo a mi hermano, que está en Salamanca, del cual, si soy conocida, ya se puede entender el peligro en que está puesta mi vida; porque, aunque él escuche mis disculpas, el menor punto de su honor pasa a cuantas yo pudiere darle.

»Con todo esto, mi principal determinación es, aunque pierda la vida, buscar al desalmado de mi esposo: que no puede negar el serlo sin que le desmientan las prendas que dejó en mi poder, que son una sortija de diamantes con unas cifras que dicen: ES MARCO ANTONIO ESPOSO DE TEODOSIA. Si le hallo, sabré dél qué halló en mí que tan presto le movió a dejarme; y, en resolución, haré que me cumpla la palabra y fe prometida, o le quitaré la vida, mostrándome tan presta a la venganza como fui fácil al dejar agraviarme; porque la nobleza de la sangre que mis padres me han dado va despertando en mí bríos que me prometen o ya remedio, o ya venganza de mi agravio.» Esta es, señor caballero, la verdadera y desdichada historia que deseábades saber, la cual será bastante disculpa de los suspiros y palabras que os despertaron. Lo que os ruego y suplico es que, ya que no podáis darme remedio, a lo menos me deis consejo con que pueda huir los peligros que me contrastan, y templar el temor que tengo de ser hallada, y facilitar los modos que he de usar para conseguir lo que tanto deseo y he menester.

Un gran espacio de tiempo estuvo sin responder palabra el que había estado escuchando la historia de la enamorada Teodosia; y tanto, que ella pensó que estaba dormido y que ninguna cosa le había oído; y, para certificarse de lo que sospechaba, le dijo:

-¿Dormís, señor? Y no sería malo que durmiédeses, porque el apasionado que cuenta sus desdichas a quien no las siente, bien es que causen en quien las escucha más sueño que lástima.

-No duermo -respondió el caballero-; antes, estoy tan despierto y siento tanto vuestra desventura, que no sé si diga que en el mismo grado me aprieta y duele que a vos misma; y por esta causa el consejo que me pedís, no sólo ha de parar en aconsejaros, sino en ayudaros con todo aquello que mis fuerzas alcanzaren; que, puesto que en el modo que habéis tenido en contarme vuestro suceso se ha mostrado el raro entendimiento de que sois dotada, y que conforme a esto os debió de engañar más vuestra voluntad rendida que las persuaciones de Marco Antonio, todavía quiero tomar por disculpa de vuestro yerro vuestros pocos años, en los cuales no cabe tener experiencia de los muchos engaños de los hombres. Sosegad, señora, y dormid, si podéis, lo poco que debe de quedar de la noche; que, en viniendo el día, nos aconsejaremos los dos y veremos qué salida se podrá dar a vuestro remedio.

Agradecióselo Teodosia lo mejor que supo, y procuró reposar un rato por dar lugar a que el caballero durmiese, el cual no fue posible sosegar un punto; antes, comenzó a volcarse por la cama y a suspirar de manera que le fue forzoso a Teodosia preguntarle qué era lo que sentía, que si era alguna pasión a quien ella pudiese remediar, lo haría con la voluntad misma que él a ella se le había ofrecido. A esto respondió el caballero:

-Puesto que sois vos, señora, la que causa el desasosiego que en mí habéis sentido, no sois vos la que podáis remedialle; que, a serlo, no tuviera yo pena alguna.

No pudo entender Teodosia adónde se encaminaban aquellas confusas razones; pero todavía sospechó que alguna pasión amorosa le fatigaba, y aun pensó ser ella la causa; y era de sospechar y de pensar, pues la comodidad del aposento, la soledad y la escuridad, y el saber que era mujer, no fuera mucho haber despertado en él algún mal pensamiento. Y, temerosa desto, se vistió con grande priesa y con mucho silencio, y se ciñó su espada y daga; y, de aquella manera, sentada sobre la cama, estuvo esperando el día, que de allí a poco espacio dio señal de su venida, con la luz que entraba por los muchos lugares y entradas que tienen los aposentos de los mesones y ventas. Y lo mismo que Teodosia había hecho el caballero; y, apenas vio estrellado el aposento con la luz del día, cuando se levantó de la cama diciendo:

-Levantaos, señora Teodosia, que yo quiero acompañaros en esta jornada, y no dejaros de mi lado hasta que como legítimo esposo tengáis en el vuestro a Marco Antonio, o que él o yo perdamos las vidas; y aquí veréis la obligación y voluntad en que me ha puesto vuestra desgracia.

Y, diciendo esto, abrió las ventanas y puertas del aposento.

Estaba Teodosia deseando ver la claridad, para ver con la luz qué talle y parecer tenía aquel con quien había estado hablando toda la noche. Mas, cuando le miró y le conoció, quisiera que jamás hubiera amanecido, sino que allí en perpetua noche se le hubieran cerrado los ojos; porque, apenas hubo el caballero vuelto los ojos a mirarla (que también deseaba verla), cuando ella conoció que era su hermano, de quien tanto se temía, a cuya vista casi perdió la de sus ojos, y quedó suspensa y muda y sin color en el rostro; pero, sacando del temor esfuerzo y del peligro discreción, echando mano a la daga, la tomó por la punta y se fue a hincar de rodillas delante de su hermano, diciendo con voz turbada y temerosa:

-Toma, señor y querido hermano mío, y haz con este hierro el castigo del que he cometido, satisfaciendo tu enojo, que para tan grande culpa como la mía no es bien que ninguna misericordia me valga. Yo confieso mi pecado, y no quiero que me sirva de disculpa mi arrepentimiento: sólo te suplico que la pena sea de suerte que se estienda a quitarme la vida y no la honra; que, puesto que yo la he puesto en manifiesto peligro, ausentándome de casa de mis padres, todavía quedará en opinión si el castigo que me dieres fuere secreto.

Mirábala su hermano, y, aunque la soltura de su atrevimiento le incitaba a la venganza, las palabras tan tiernas y tan eficaces con que manifestaba su culpa le ablandaron de tal suerte las entrañas, que, con rostro agradable y semblante pacífico, la levantó del suelo y la consoló lo mejor que pudo y supo, diciéndole, entre otras razones, que por no hallar castigo igual a su locura le suspendía por entonces; y, así por esto como por parecerle que aún no había cerrado la fortuna de todo en todo las puertas a su remedio, quería antes procurársele por todas las vías posibles, que no tomar venganza del agravio que de su mucha liviandad en él redundaba.

Con estas razones volvió Teodosia a cobrar los perdidos espíritus; tornó la color a su rostro y revivieron sus casi muertas esperanzas. No quiso más don Rafael (que así se llamaba su hermano) tratarle de su suceso: sólo le dijo que mudase el nombre de Teodosia en Teodoro y que diesen luego la vuelta a Salamanca los dos juntos a buscar a Marco Antonio, puesto que él imaginaba que no estaba en ella, porque siendo su camarada le hubiera hablado; aunque podía ser que el agravio que le había hecho le enmudeciese y le quitase la gana de verle. Remitióse el nuevo Teodoro a lo que su hermano quiso. Entró en esto el huésped, al cual ordenaron que les diese algo de almorzar, porque querían partirse luego.

Entre tanto que el mozo de mulas ensillaba y el almuerzo venía, entró en el mesón un hidalgo que venía de camino, que de don Rafael fue conocido luego. Conocióale también Teodoro, y no osó salir del aposento por no ser visto. Abrazáronse los dos, y preguntó don Rafael al recién venido qué nuevas había en su lugar. A lo cual respondió que él venía del Puerto de Santa María, adonde dejaba cuatro galeras de partida para Nápoles, y que en ellas había visto embarcado a Marco Antonio Adorno, el hijo de don Leonardo Adorno; con las cuales nuevas se holgó don Rafael, pareciéndole que, pues tan sin pensar había sabido nuevas de lo que tanto le importaba, era señal que tendría buen fin su suceso. Rogóle a su amigo que trocase con el cuartago de su padre (que él muy bien conocía) la mula que él traía, no diciéndole que venía, sino que iba a Salamanca, y que no quería llevar tan buen cuartago en tan largo camino. El otro, que era comedido y amigo suyo, se contentó del trueco y se encargó de dar el cuartago a su padre. Almorzaron juntos, y Teodoro solo; y, llegado el punto de partirse, el amigo tomó el camino de Cazalla, donde tenía una rica heredad.

No partió don Rafael con él, que por hurtarle el cuerpo le dijo que le convenía volver aquel día a Sevilla; y, así como le vio ido, estando en orden las cabalgaduras, hecha la cuenta y pagado al huésped, diciendo adiós, se salieron de la posada, dejando admirados a cuantos en ella quedaban de su hermosura y gentil disposición, que no tenía para hombre menor gracia, brío y compostura don Rafael que su hermana belleza y donaire.

Luego en saliendo, contó don Rafael a su hermana las nuevas que de Marco Antonio le habían dado, y que le parecía que con la diligencia posible caminasen la vuelta de Barcelona, donde de ordinario suelen parar algún día las galeras que pasan a Italia o vienen a España, y que si no hubiesen llegado, podían esperarlas, y allí sin duda hallarían a Marco Antonio. Su hermana le dijo que hiciese todo aquello que mejor le pareciese, porque ella no tenía más voluntad que la suya.

Dijo don Rafael al mozo de mulas que consigo llevaba que tuviese paciencia, porque le convenía pasar a Barcelona, asegurándole la paga a todo su contento del tiempo que con él anduviese. El mozo, que era de los alegres del oficio y que conocía que don Rafael era liberal, respondió que hasta el cabo del mundo le acompañaría y serviría. Preguntó don Rafael a su hermana qué dineros llevaba. Respondió que no los tenía contados, y que no sabía más de que en el escritorio de su padre había metido la mano siete o ocho veces y sacádola llena de escudos de oro; y, según aquello, imaginó don Rafael que podía llevar hasta quinientos escudos, que con otros docientos que él tenía y una cadena de oro que llevaba, le pareció no ir muy desacomodado; y más, persuadiéndose que había de hallar en Barcelona a Marco Antonio.

Con esto, se dieron prisa a caminar sin perder jornada, y, sin acaescerles desmán o impedimento alguno, llegaron a dos leguas de un lugar que está nueve de Barcelona, que se llama Igualada. Habían sabido en el camino cómo un caballero, que pasaba por embajador a Roma, estaba en Barcelona esperando las galeras, que aún no habían llegado, nueva que les dio mucho contento. Con este gusto caminaron hasta entrar en un bosquecillo que en el camino estaba, del cual vieron salir un hombre corriendo y mirando atrás, como espantado. Púsosele don Rafael delante, diciéndole:

-¿Por qué huís, buen hombre, o qué cosa os ha acontecido, que con muestras de tanto miedo os hace parecer tan ligero?

-¿No queréis que corra apriesa y con miedo -respondió el hombre-, si por milagro me he escapado de una compañía de bandoleros que queda en ese bosque?

-¡Malo! -dijo el mozo de mulas-. ¡Malo, vive Dios! ¿Bandoleritos a estas horas? Para mi santiguada, que ellos nos pongan como nuevos.

-No os congojéis, hermano -replicó el del bosque-, que ya los bandoleros se han ido y han dejado atados a los árboles deste bosque más de treinta pasajeros, dejándolos en camisa; a sólo un hombre dejaron libre para que desatase a los demás después que ellos hubiesen traspuesto una montañuela que le dieron por señal.

-Si eso es -dijo Calvete, que así se llamaba el mozo de mulas-, seguros podemos pasar, a causa que al lugar donde los bandoleros hacen el salto no vuelven por algunos días, y puedo asegurar esto como aquel que ha dado dos veces en sus manos y sabe de molde su usanza y costumbres.

-Así es -dijo el hombre.

Lo cual oído por don Rafael, determinó pasar adelante; y no anduvieron mucho cuando dieron en los atados, que pasaban de cuarenta, que los estaba desatando el que dejaron suelto. Era extraño espectáculo el verlos: unos desnudos del todo, otros vestidos con los vestidos astrosos de los bandoleros; unos llorando de verse robados, otros riendo de ver los extraños trajes de los otros; éste contaba por menudo lo que le llevaban, aquél decía que le pesaba más de una caja de agnus que de Roma traía que de otras infinitas cosas que llevaban. En fin, todo cuanto allí pasaba eran llantos y gemidos de los miserables despojados. Todo lo cual miraban, no sin mucho dolor, los dos hermanos, dando gracias al cielo que de tan grande y tan cercano peligro los había librado. Pero lo que más compasión les puso, especialmente a Teodoro, fue ver al tronco de una encina atado un muchacho de edad al parecer de diez y seis años, con sola la camisa y unos calzones de lienzo, pero tan hermoso de rostro que forzaba y movía a todos que le mirasen.

Apeóse Teodoro a desatarle, y él le agradeció con muy corteses razones el beneficio; y, por hacérsele mayor, pidió a Calvete, el mozo de mulas, le prestase su capa hasta que en el primer lugar comprasen otra para aquel gentil mancebo. Diola Calvete, y Teodoro cubrió con ella al mozo, preguntándole de dónde era, de dónde venía y adónde caminaba.

A todo esto estaba presente don Rafael, y el mozo respondió que era del Andalucía y de un lugar que, en nombrándole, vieron que no distaba del suyo sino dos leguas. Dijo que venía de Sevilla, y que su designio era pasar a Italia a probar ventura en el ejercicio de las armas, como otros muchos españoles acostumbraban; pero que la suerte suya había salido azar con el mal encuentro de los bandoleros, que le llevaban una buena cantidad de dineros, y tales vestidos, que no se compraran tan buenos con trecientos escudos; pero que, con todo eso, pensaba proseguir su camino, porque no venía de casta que se le había de helar al primer mal suceso el calor de su fervoroso deseo.

Las buenas razones del mozo, junto con haber oído que era tan cerca de su lugar, y más con la carta de recomendación que en su hermosura traía, pusieron voluntad en los dos hermanos de favorecerle en cuanto pudiesen. Y, repartiendo entre los que más necesidad, a su parecer, tenían algunos dineros, especialmente entre frailes y clérigos, que había más de ocho, hicieron que subiese el mancebo en la mula de Calvete; y, sin detenerse más, en poco espacio se pusieron en Igualada, donde supieron que las galeras el día antes habían llegado a Barcelona, y que de allí a dos días se partirían, si antes no les forzaba la poca seguridad de la playa.

Estas nuevas hicieron que la mañana siguiente madrugasen antes que el sol, puesto que aquella noche no la durmieron toda, sino con más sobresalto de los dos hermanos que ellos se pensaron, causado de que, estando a la mesa, y con ellos el mancebo que habían desatado, Teodoro puso ahincadamente los ojos en su rostro, y, mirándole algo curiosamente, le pareció que tenía las orejas horadadas; y, en esto y en un mirar vergonzoso que tenía, sospechó que debía de ser mujer, y deseaba acabar de cenar para certificarse a solas de su sospecha. Y entre la cena le preguntó don Rafael que cuyo hijo era, porque él conocía toda la gente principal de su lugar, si era aquel que había dicho. A lo cual respondió el mancebo que era hijo de don Enrique de Cárdenas, caballero bien conocido. A esto dijo don Rafael que él conocía bien a don Enrique de Cárdenas, pero que sabía y tenía por cierto que no tenía hijo alguno; mas que si lo había dicho por no descubrir sus padres, que no importaba y que nunca más se lo preguntaría.

-Verdad es -replicó el mozo-que don Enrique no tiene hijos, pero tiénelos un hermano suyo que se llama don Sancho.

-Ése tampoco -respondió don Rafael-tiene hijos, sino una hija sola, y aun dicen que es de las más hermosas doncellas que hay en la Andalucía, y esto no lo sé más de por fama; que, aunque muchas veces he estado en su lugar, jamás la he visto.

-Todo lo que, señor, decís es verdad -respondió el mancebo-, que don Sancho no tiene más de una hija, pero no tan hermosa como su fama dice; y si yo dije que era hijo de don Enrique, fue porque me tuviédeses, señores, en algo, pues no lo soy sino de un mayordomo de don Sancho, que ha muchos años que le sirve, y yo nací en su casa; y, por cierto enojo que di a mi padre, habiéndole tomado buena cantidad de dineros, quise venirme a Italia, como os he dicho, y seguir el camino de la guerra, por quien vienen, según he visto, a hacerse ilustres aun los de oscuro linaje.

Todas estas razones y el modo con que las decía notaba atentamente Teodoro, y siempre se iba confirmando en su sospecha.

Acabóse la cena, alzaron los manteles; y, en tanto que don Rafael se desnudaba, habiéndole dicho lo que del mancebo sospechaba, con su parecer y licencia se apartó con el mancebo a un balcón de una ancha ventana que a la calle salía, y, en él puestos los dos de pechos, Teodoro así comenzó a hablar con el mozo:

-Quisiera, señor Francisco -que así había dicho él que se llamaba-, haberos hecho tantas buenas obras, que os obligaran a no negarme cualquiera cosa que pudiera o quisiera pedir; pero el poco tiempo que ha que os conozco no ha dado lugar a ello. Podría ser que en el que está por venir conociédeses lo que merece mi deseo, y si al que ahora tengo no gustáredes de satisfacer, no por eso dejaré de ser vuestro servidor, como lo soy también, que antes que os le descubra sepáis que, aunque tengo tan pocos años como los vuestros, tengo más experiencia de las cosas del mundo que ellos prometen, pues con ella he venido a sospechar que vos no sois varón, como vuestro traje lo muestra, sino mujer, y tan bien nacida como vuestra hermosura publica, y quizá tan desdichada como lo da a entender la mudanza del traje, pues jamás tales mudanzas son por bien de quien las hace. Si es verdad lo que sospecho, decídmelo, que os juro, por la fe de caballero que profeso, de ayudaros y serviros en todo aquello que pudiere. De que no seáis mujer no me lo podéis negar, pues por las ventanas de vuestras orejas se ve esta verdad bien clara; y habéis andado descuidada en no cerrar y disimular esos agujeros con alguna cera encarnada, que pudiera ser que otro tan curioso como yo, y no tan honrado, sacara a luz lo que vos tan mal habéis sabido encubrir. Digo que no dudéis de decirme quién sois, con presupuesto que os ofrezco mi ayuda; yo os aseguro el secreto que quisiéredes que tenga.

Con grande atención estaba el mancebo escuchando lo que Teodoro le decía; y, viendo que ya callaba, antes que le respondiese palabra, le tomó las manos y, llegándoselas a la boca, se las besó por fuerza, y aun se las bañó con gran cantidad de lágrimas que de sus hermosos ojos derramaba; cuyo extraño sentimiento le causó en Teodoro de manera que no pudo dejar de acompañarle en ellas (propia y natural condición de mujeres principales, enternecerse de los sentimientos y trabajos ajenos); pero, después que con dificultad retiró sus manos de la boca del mancebo, estuvo atenta a ver lo que le respondía; el cual, dando un profundo gemido, acompañado de muchos suspiros, dijo:

-No quiero ni puedo negaros, señor, que vuestra sospecha no haya sido verdadera: mujer soy, y la más desdichada que echaron al mundo las mujeres, y, pues las obras que me habéis hecho y los ofrecimientos que me hacéis me obligan a obedeceros en cuanto me mandáredes, escuchad, que yo os diré quién soy, si ya no os cansa oír ajenas desventuras.

-En ellas viva yo siempre -replicó Teodoro-si no llegue el gusto de saberlas a la pena que me darán el ser vuestras, que ya las voy sintiendo como propias mías.

Y, tornándole a abrazar y a hacer nuevos y verdaderos ofrecimientos, el mancebo, algo más sosegado, comenzó a decir estas razones:

-«En lo que toca a mi patria, la verdad he dicho; en lo que toca a mis padres, no la dije, porque don Enrique no lo es, sino mi tío, y su hermano don Sancho mi padre: que yo soy la hija desventurada que vuestro hermano dice que don Sancho tiene tan celebrada de hermosa, cuyo engaño y desengaño se echa de ver en la ninguna hermosura que tengo. Mi nombre es Leocadia; la ocasión de la mudanza de mi traje oiréis ahora.

»Dos leguas de mi lugar está otro de los más ricos y nobles de la Andalucía, en el cual vive un principal caballero que trae su origen de los nobles y antiguos Adornos de Génova. Éste tiene un hijo que, si no es que la fama se adelanta en sus alabanzas, como en las mías, es de los gentiles hombres que desearse pueden. Éste, pues, así por la vecindad de los lugares como por ser aficionado al ejercicio de la caza, como mi padre, algunas veces venía a mi casa y en ella se estaba cinco o seis días; que todos, y aun parte de las noches, él y mi padre las pasaban en el campo. Desta ocasión tomó la fortuna, o el amor, o mi poca advertencia, la que fue bastante para derribarme de la alteza de mis buenos pensamientos a la bajeza del estado en que me veo, pues, habiendo mirado, más de aquello que fuera lícito a una recatada doncella, la gentileza y discreción de Marco Antonio, y considerado la calidad de su linaje y la mucha cantidad de los bienes que llaman de fortuna que su padre tenía, me pareció que si le alcanzaba por esposo, era toda la felicidad que podía caber en mi deseo. Con este pensamiento le comencé a mirar con más cuidado, y debió de ser sin duda con más descuido, pues él vino a caer en que yo le miraba, y no quiso ni le fue menester al traidor otra entrada para entrarse en el secreto de mi pecho y robarme las mejores prendas de mi alma.

Hasta este punto había estado callando Teodoro, teniendo pendiente el alma de las palabras de Leocadia, que con cada una dellas le traspasaba el alma, especialmente cuando oyó el nombre de Marco Antonio y vio la peregrina hermosura de Leocadia, y consideró la grandeza de su valor con la de su rara discreción: que bien lo mostraba en el modo de contar su historia. Mas, cuando llegó a decir: «Llegó la noche por mí deseada», estuvo por perder la paciencia, y, sin poder hacer otra cosa, le saltó la razón, diciendo:

-Y bien; así como llegó esa felicísima noche, ¿qué hizo? ¿Entró, por dicha? ¿Gozástele? ¿Confirmó de nuevo la cédula? ¿Quedó contento en haber alcanzado de vos lo que decís que era suyo? ¿Súpolo vuestro padre, o en qué pararon tan honestos y sabios principios?

-Pararon -dijo Leocadia-en ponerme de la manera que veis, porque no le gocé, ni me gozó, ni vino al concierto señalado.

Respiró con estas razones Teodosia y detuvo los espíritus, que poco a poco la iban dejando, estimulados y apretados de la rabiosa pestilencia de los celos, que a más andar se le iban entrando por los huesos y médulas, para tomar entera posesión de su paciencia; mas no la dejó tan libre que no volviese a escuchar con sobresalto lo que Leocadia prosiguió diciendo:

-«No solamente no vino, pero de allí a ocho días supe por nueva cierta que se había ausentado de su pueblo y llevado de casa de sus padres a una doncella de su lugar, hija de un principal caballero, llamada Teodosia: doncella de estremada hermosura y de rara discreción; y por ser de tan nobles padres se supo en mi pueblo el robo, y luego llegó a mis oídos, y con él la fría y temida lanza de los celos, que me pasó el corazón y me abrasó el alma en fuego tal, que en él se hizo ceniza mi honra y se consumió mi crédito, se secó mi paciencia y se acabó mi cordura. ¡Ay de mí, desdichada!, que luego se me figuró en la imaginación Teodosia más hermosa que el sol y más discreta que la discreción misma, y, sobre todo, más venturosa que yo, sin ventura. Leí luego las razones de la cédula, vilas firmes y valederas y que no podían faltar en la fe que publicaban; y, aunque a ellas, como a cosa sagrada, se acogiera mi esperanza, en cayendo en la cuenta de la sospechosa compañía que Marco Antonio llevaba consigo, daba con todas ellas en el suelo. Maltraté mi rostro, arranqué mis cabellos, maldije mi suerte; y lo que más sentía era no poder hacer estos sacrificios a todas horas, por la forzosa presencia de mi padre.

»En fin, por acabar de quejarme sin impedimento, o por acabar la vida, que es lo más cierto, determiné dejar la casa de mi padre. Y, como para poner por obra un mal pensamiento parece que la ocasión facilita y allana todos los inconvenientes, sin temer alguno, hurté a un paje de mi padre sus vestidos y a mi padre mucha cantidad de dineros; y una noche, cubierta con su negra capa, salí de casa y a pie caminé algunas leguas y llegué a un lugar que se llama Osuna, y, acomodándome en un carro, de allí a dos días entré en Sevilla: que fue haber entrado en la seguridad posible para no ser hallada, aunque me buscasen. Allí compré otros vestidos y una mula, y, con unos caballeros que venían a Barcelona con priesa, por no perder la comodidad de unas galeras que pasaban a Italia, caminé hasta ayer, que me sucedió lo que ya habréis sabido de los bandoleros, que me quitaron cuanto traía, y entre otras cosas la joya que sustentaba mi salud y aliviaba la carga de mis trabajos, que fue la cédula de Marco Antonio, que pensaba con ella pasar a Italia, y, hallando a Marco Antonio, presentársela por testigo de su poca fe, y a mí por abono de mi mucha firmeza, y hacer de suerte que me cumpliese la promesa. Pero, juntamente con esto, he considerado que con facilidad negará las palabras que en un papel están escritas el que niega las obligaciones que debían estar grabadas en el alma, que claro está que si él tiene en su compañía a la sin par Teodosia, no ha de querer mirar a la desdichada Leocadia; aunque con todo esto pienso morir, o ponerme en la presencia de los dos, para que mi vista les turbe su sosiego. No piense aquella enemiga de mi descanso gozar tan a poca costa lo que es mío; yo la buscaré, yo la hallaré, y yo la quitaré la vida si puedo.»

-Pues ¿qué culpa tiene Teodosia -dijo Teodoro-, si ella quizá también fue engañada de Marco Antonio, como vos, señora Leocadia, lo habéis sido?

-¿Puede ser eso así -dijo Leocadia-, si se la llevó consigo? Y, estando juntos los que bien se quieren, ¿qué engaño puede haber? Ninguno, por cierto: ellos están contentos, pues están juntos, ora estén, como suele decirse, en los remotos y abrasados desiertos de Libia o en los solos y apartados de la helada Scitia. Ella le goza, sin duda, sea donde fuere, y ella sola ha de pagar lo que he sentido hasta que le halle.

-Podía ser que os engañásedes -replico Teodosia-; que yo conozco muy bien a esa enemiga vuestra que decís y sé de su condición y recogimiento: que nunca ella se aventuraría a dejar la casa de sus padres, ni acudir a la voluntad de Marco Antonio; y, cuando lo hubiese hecho, no conociéndoo ni sabiendo cosa alguna de lo que con él teníades, no os agravió en nada, y donde no hay agravio no viene bien la venganza.

-Del recogimiento -dijo Leocadia-no hay que tratarme; que tan recogida y tan honesta era yo como cuantas doncellas hallarse pudieran, y con todo eso hice lo que habéis oído. De que él la llevase no hay duda, y de que ella no me haya agraviado, mirándolo sin pasión, yo lo confieso. Mas el dolor que siento de los celos me la representa en la memoria bien así como espada que atravesada tengo por mitad de las entrañas, y no es mucho que, como a instrumento que tanto me lastima, le procure arrancar dellas y hacerle pedazos; cuanto más, que prudencia es apartar de nosotros las cosas que nos dañan, y es natural cosa aborrecer las que nos hacen mal y aquellas que nos estorban el bien.

-Sea como vos decís, señora Leocadia -respondió Teodosia-; que, así como veo que la pasión que sentís no os deja hacer más acertados discursos, veo que no estáis en tiempo de admitir consejos saludables. De mí os sé decir lo que ya os he dicho, que os he de ayudar y favorecer en todo aquello que fuere justo y yo pudiere; y lo mismo os prometo de mi hermano, que su natural condición y nobleza no le dejarán hacer otra cosa. Nuestro camino es a Italia; si gustáredes venir con nosotros, ya poco más a menos sabéis el trato de nuestra compañía. Lo que os ruego es me deis licencia que diga a mi hermano lo que sé de vuestra hacienda, para que os trate con el comedimiento y respecto que se os debe, y para que se obligue a mirar por vos como es razón. Junto con esto, me parece no ser bien que mudéis de traje; y si en este pueblo hay comodidad de vestiros, por la mañana os compraré los vestidos mejores que hubiere y que más os convengan, y, en lo demás de vuestras pretensiones, dejad el cuidado al tiempo, que es gran maestro de dar y hallar remedio a los casos más desesperados.

Agradeció Leocadia a Teodosia, que ella pensaba ser Teodoro, sus muchos ofrecimientos, y dióle licencia de decir a su hermano todo lo que quisiese, suplicándole que no la desamparase, pues veía a cuántos peligros estaba puesta si por mujer fuese conocida. Con esto, se despidieron y se fueron a acostar: Teodosia al aposento de su hermano y Leocadia a otro que junto dél estaba.

No se había aún dormido don Rafael, esperando a su hermana, por saber lo que le había pasado con el que pensaba ser mujer; y, en entrando, antes que se acostase, se lo preguntó; la cual, punto por punto, le contó todo cuanto Leocadia le había dicho: cuya hija era, sus amores, la cédula de Marco Antonio y la intención que llevaba. Admiróse don Rafael y dijo a su hermana:

-Si ella es la que dice, séos decir, hermana, que es de las más principales de su lugar, y una de las más nobles señoras de toda la Andalucía. Su padre es bien conocido del nuestro, y la fama que ella tenía de hermosa corresponde muy bien a lo que ahora vemos en su rostro. Y lo que desto me parece es que debemos andar con recato, de manera que ella no hable primero con Marco Antonio que nosotros; que me da algún cuidado la cédula que dice que le hizo, puesto que la haya perdido; pero sosegaos y acostaos, hermana, que para todo se buscará remedio.

Hizo Teodosia lo que su hermano la mandaba en cuanto al acostarse, mas en lo de sosegar no fue en su mano, que ya tenía tomada posesión de su alma la rabiosa enfermedad de los celos. ¡Oh, cuánto más de lo que ella era se le representaba en la imaginación la hermosura de Leocadia y la deslealtad de Marco Antonio! ¡Oh, cuántas veces leía o fingía leer la cédula que la había dado! ¡Qué de palabras y razones la añadía, que la hacían cierta y de mucho efecto! ¡Cuántas veces no creyó que se le había perdido, y cuántas imaginó que sin ella Marco Antonio no dejara de cumplir su promesa, sin acordarse de lo que a ella estaba obligado!

Pasósele en esto la mayor parte de la noche sin dormir sueño. Y no la pasó con más descanso don Rafael, su hermano; porque, así como oyó decir quién era Leocadia, así se le abrasó el corazón en su amor, como si de mucho antes para el mismo efecto la hubiera comunicado; que esta fuerza tiene la hermosura, que en un punto, en un momento, lleva tras sí el deseo de quien la mira y la conoce; y, cuando descubre o promete alguna vía de alcanzarse y gozarse, enciende con poderosa vehemencia el alma de quien la contempla: bien así del modo y facilidad con que se enciende la seca y dispuesta pólvora con cualquiera centella que la toca.

No la imaginaba atada al árbol, ni vestida en el roto traje de varón, sino en el suyo de mujer y en casa de sus padres, ricos y de tan principal y rico linaje como ellos eran. No detenía ni quería detener el pensamiento en la causa que la había traído a que la conociese. Deseaba que el día llegase para proseguir su jornada y buscar a Marco Antonio, no tanto para hacerle su cuñado como para estorbar que no fuese marido de Leocadia; y ya le tenían el amor y el celo de manera que tomara por buen partido ver a su hermana sin el remedio que le procuraba, y a Marco Antonio sin vida, a trueco de no verse sin esperanza de alcanzar a Leocadia; la cual esperanza ya le iba prometiendo felice suceso en su deseo, o ya por el camino de la fuerza, o por el de los regalos y buenas obras, pues para todo le daba lugar el tiempo y la ocasión.

Con esto que él a sí mismo se prometía, se sosegó algún tanto; y de allí a poco se dejó venir el día, y ellos dejaron las camas; y, llamando don Rafael al huésped, le preguntó si había comodidad en aquel pueblo para vestir a un paje a quien los bandoleros habían desnudado. El huésped dijo que él tenía un vestido razonable que vender; trújole y vínole bien a Leocadia; pagóle don Rafael, y ella se le vistió y se ciñó una espada y una daga, con tanto donaire y brío que, en aquel mismo traje, suspendió los sentidos de don Rafael y dobló los celos en Teodosia. Ensilló Calvete, y a las ocho del día partieron para Barcelona, sin querer subir por entonces al famoso monasterio de Monserrat, dejándolo para cuando Dios fuese servido de volverlos con más sosiego a su patria.

No se podrá contar buenamente los pensamientos que los dos hermanos llevaban, ni con cuán diferentes ánimos los dos iban mirando a Leocadia, deseándola Teodosia la muerte y don Rafael la vida, entrambos celosos y apasionados. Teodosia buscando tachas que ponerla, por no desmayar en su esperanza; don Rafael hallándole perfecciones, que de punto en punto le obligaban a más amarla. Con todo esto, no se descuidaron de darse prisa, de modo que llegaron a Barcelona poco antes que el sol se pusiese.

Admiróles el hermoso sitio de la ciudad y la estimaron por flor de las bellas ciudades del mundo, honra de España, temor y espanto de los circunvecinos y apartados enemigos, regalo y delicia de sus moradores, amparo de los extranjeros, escuela de la caballería, ejemplo de lealtad y satisfacción de todo aquello que de una grande, famosa, rica y bien fundada ciudad puede pedir un discreto y curioso deseo.

En entrando en ella, oyeron grandísimo ruido, y vieron correr gran tropel de gente con grande alboroto; y, preguntando la causa de aquel ruido y movimiento, les respondieron que la gente de las galeras que estaban en la playa se había revuelto y trabado con la de la ciudad. Oyendo lo cual, don Rafael quiso ir a ver lo que pasaba, aunque Calvete le dijo que no lo hiciese, por no ser cordura irse a meter en un manifiesto peligro; que él sabía bien cuán mal libraban los que en tales pependencias se metían, que eran ordinarias en aquella ciudad cuando a ella llegaban galeras. No fue bastante el buen consejo de Calvete para estorbar a don Rafael la ida; y así, le siguieron todos. Y, en llegando a la marina, vieron muchas espadas fuera de las vainas y mucha gente acuchillándose sin piedad alguna. Con todo esto, sin apearse, llegaron tan cerca, que distintamente veían los rostros de los que peleaban, porque aún no era puesto el sol.

Era infinita la gente que de la ciudad acudía, y mucha la que de las galeras se desembarcaba, puesto que el que las traía a cargo, que era un caballero valenciano llamado don Pedro Viqué, desde la popa de la galera capitana amenazaba a los que se habían embarcado en los esquifes para ir a socorrer a los suyos. Mas, viendo que no aprovechaban sus voces ni sus amenazas, hizo volver las proas de las galeras a la ciudad y disparar una pieza sin bala (señal de que si no se apartasen, otra no iría sin ella).

En esto, estaba don Rafael atentamente mirando la cruel y bien trabada riña, y vio y notó que de parte de los que más se señalaban de las galeras lo hacía gallardamente un mancebo de hasta veinte y dos o pocos más años, vestido de verde, con un sombrero de la misma color adornado con un rico trencillo, al parecer de diamantes; la destreza con que el mozo se combatía y la bizarría del vestido hacía que volviesen a mirarle todos cuantos la pendencia miraban; y de tal manera le miraron los ojos de Teodosia y de Leocadia, que ambas a un mismo punto y tiempo dijeron:

-¡Válame Dios: o yo no tengo ojos, o aquel de lo verde es Marco Antonio!

Y, en diciendo esto, con gran ligereza saltaron de las mulas, y, poniendo mano a sus dagas y espadas, sin temor alguno se entraron por mitad de la turba y se pusieron la una a un lado y la otra al otro de Marco Antonio (que él era el mancebo de lo verde que se ha dicho).

-No temáis -dijo así como llegó Leocadia-, señor Marco Antonio, que a vuestro lado tenéis quien os hará escudo con su propia vida por defender la vuestra.

-¿Quién lo duda? -replicó Teodosia-, estando yo aquí?

Don Rafael, que vio y oyó lo que pasaba, las siguió asimismo y se puso de su parte. Marco Antonio, ocupado en ofender y defenderse, no advirtió en las razones que las dos le dijeron; antes, cebado en la pelea, hacía cosas al parecer increíbles. Pero, como la gente de la ciudad por momentos crecía, fueles forzoso a los de las galeras retirarse hasta meterse en el agua. Retirábase Marco Antonio de mala gana, y a su mismo compás se iban retirando a sus lados las dos valientes y nuevas Bradamante y Marfisa, o Hipólita y Pantasilea.

En esto, vino un caballero catalán de la famosa familia de los Cardonas, sobre un poderoso caballo, y, poniéndose en medio de las dos partes, hacía retirar los de la ciudad, los cuales le tuvieron respecto en conociéndole. Pero algunos desde lejos tiraban piedras a los que ya se iban acogiendo al agua; y quiso la mala suerte que una acertase en la sien a Marco Antonio, con tanta furia que dio con él en el agua, que ya le daba a la rodilla; y, apenas Leocadia le vio caído, cuando se abrazó con él y le sostuvo en sus brazos, y lo mismo hizo Teodosia. Estaba don Rafael un poco desviado, defendiéndose de las infinitas piedras que sobre él llovían, y, queriendo acudir al remedio de su alma y al de su hermana y cuñado, el caballero catalán se le puso delante, diciéndole:

-Sosegaos, señor, por lo que debéis a buen soldado, y hacedme merced de poneros a mi lado, que yo os libraré de la insolencia y demasía deste desmandado vulgo.

-¡Ah, señor! -respondió don Rafael-; ¡dejadme pasar, que veo en gran peligro puestas las cosas que en esta vida más quiero!

Dejóle pasar el caballero, mas no llegó tan a tiempo que ya no hubiesen recogido en el esquife de la galera capitana a Marco Antonio y a Leocadia, que jamás le dejó de los brazos; y, queriéndose embarcar con ellos Teodosia, o ya fuese por estar cansada, o por la pena de haber visto herido a Marco Antonio, o por ver que se iba con él su mayor enemiga, no tuvo fuerzas para subir en el esquife; y sin duda cayera desmayada en el agua si su hermano no llegara a tiempo de socorrerla, el cual no sintió menor pena, de ver que con Marco Antonio se iba Leocadia, que su hermana había sentido (que ya también él había conocido a Marco Antonio). El caballero catalán, aficionado de la gentil presencia de don Rafael y de su hermana (que por hombre tenía), los llamó desde la orilla y les rogó que con él se viniesen; y ellos, forzados de la necesidad y temerosos de que la gente, que aún no estaba pacífica, les hiciese algún agravio, hubieron de aceptar la oferta que se les hacía.

El caballero se apeó, y, tomándolos a su lado, con la espada desnuda pasó por medio de la turba alborotada, rogándoles que se retirasen; y así lo hicieron. Miró don Rafael a todas partes por ver si vería a Calvete con las mulas y no le vio, a causa que él, así como ellos se apearon, las antecogió y se fue a un mesón donde solía posar otras veces.

Llegó el caballero a su casa, que era una de las principales de la ciudad, y preguntando a don Rafael en cuál galera venía, le respondió que en ninguna, pues había llegado a la ciudad al mismo punto que se comenzaba la pendencia, y que, por haber conocido en ella al caballero que llevaron herido de la pedrada en el esquife, se había puesto en aquel peligro, y que le suplicaba diese orden como sacasen a tierra al herido, que en ello le importaba el contento y la vida.

-Eso haré yo de buena gana -dijo el caballero-, y sé que me le dará seguramente el general, que es principal caballero y pariente mío.

Y, sin detenerse más, volvió a la galera y halló que estaban curando a Marco Antonio, y la herida que tenía era peligrosa, por ser en la sien izquierda y decir el cirujano ser de peligro; alcanzó con el general se le diese para curarle en tierra, y, puesto con gran tiento en el esquife, le sacaron, sin quererle dejar Leocadia, que se embarcó con él como en seguimiento del norte de su esperanza. En llegando a tierra, hizo el caballero traer de su casa una silla de manos donde le llevasen. En tanto que esto pasaba, había enviado don Rafael a buscar a Calvete, que en el mesón estaba con cuidado de saber lo que la suerte había hecho de sus amos; y cuando supo que estaban buenos, se alegró en extremo y vino adonde don Rafael estaba.

En esto, llegaron el señor de la casa, Marco Antonio y Leocadia, y a todos alojó en ella con mucho amor y magnificencia. Ordenó luego como se llamase un cirujano famoso de la ciudad para que de nuevo curase a Marco Antonio. Vino, pero no quiso curarle hasta otro día, diciendo que siempre los cirujanos de los ejércitos y armadas eran muy experimentados, por los muchos heridos que a cada paso tenían entre las manos, y así, no convenía curarle hasta otro día. Lo que ordenó fue le pusiesen en un aposento abrigado, donde le dejasen sosegar.

Llegó en aquel instante el cirujano de las galeras y dio cuenta al de la ciudad de la herida, y de cómo la había curado y del peligro que de la vida, a su parecer, tenía el herido, con lo cual se acabó de enterar el de la ciudad que estaba bien curado; y ansimismo, según la relación que se le había hecho, exageró el peligro de Marco Antonio.

Oyeron esto Leocadia y Teodosia con aquel sentimiento que si oyeran la sentencia de su muerte; mas, por no dar muestras de su dolor, le reprimieron y callaron, y Leocadia determinó de hacer lo que le pareció convenir para satisfacción de su honra. Y fue que, así como se fueron los cirujanos, se entró en el aposento de Marco Antonio, y, delante del señor de la casa, de don Rafael, Teodosia y de otras personas, se llegó a la cabecera del herido, y, asiéndole de la mano, le dijo estas razones:

-No estáis en tiempo, señor Marco Antonio Adorno, en que se puedan ni deban gastar con vos muchas palabras; y así, sólo querría que me oyédes algunas que convienen, si no para la salud de vuestro cuerpo, convendrán para la de vuestra alma; y para decíros las es menester que me deis licencia y me advirtáis si estáis con sujeto de escucharme; que no sería razón que, habiendo yo procurado desde el punto que os conocí no salir de vuestro gusto, en este instante, que le tengo por el postrero, seros causa de pesadumbre.

A estas razones abrió Marco Antonio los ojos y los puso atentamente en el rostro de Leocadia, y, habiéndola casi conocido, más por el órgano de la voz que por la vista, con voz debilitada y doliente le dijo:

-Decid, señor, lo que quisiéredes, que no estoy tan al cabo que no pueda escucharos, ni esa voz me es tan desagradable que me cause fastidio el oírla.

Atentísima estaba a todo este coloquio Teodosia, y cada palabra que Leocadia decía era una aguda saeta que le atravesaba el corazón, y aun el alma de don Rafael, que asimismo la escuchaba. Y, prosiguiendo Leocadia, dijo:

-Si el golpe de la cabeza, o, por mejor decir, el que a mí me han dado en el alma, no os ha llevado, señor Marco Antonio, de la memoria la imagen de aquella que poco tiempo ha que vos decíades ser vuestra gloria y vuestro cielo, bien os debéis acordar quién fue Leocadia, y cuál fue la palabra que le distes firmada en una cédula de vuestra mano y letra; ni se os habrá olvidado el valor de sus padres, la entereza de su recato y honestidad y la obligación en que le estáis, por haber acudido a vuestro gusto en todo lo que quisistes. Si esto no se os ha olvidado, aunque me veáis en este traje tan diferente, conoceréis con facilidad que yo soy Leocadia, que, temerosa que nuevos accidentes y nuevas ocasiones no me quitasen lo que tan justamente es mío, así como supe que de vuestro lugar os habíades partido, atropellando por infinitos inconvenientes, determiné seguiros en este hábito, con intención de buscaros por todas las partes de la tierra hasta hallaros. De lo cual no os debéis maravillar, si es que alguna vez habéis sentido hasta dónde llegan las fuerzas de un amor verdadero y la rabia de una mujer engañada. Algunos trabajos he pasado en esta mi demanda, todos los cuales los juzgo y tengo por descanso, con el descuento que han traído de veros; que, puesto que estéis de la manera que estáis, si fuere Dios servido de llevaros ésta a mejor vida, con hacer lo que debéis a quien sois antes de la partida, me juzgaré por más que dichosa, prometiéndoo, como os prometo, de darme tal vida después de vuestra muerte, que bien poco tiempo se pase sin que os siga en esta última y forzosa jornada. Y así, os ruego primeramente por Dios, a quien mis deseos y intentos van encaminados, luego por vos, que debéis mucho a ser quien sois, últimamente por mí, a quien debéis más que a otra persona del mundo, que aquí luego me recibáis por vuestra legítima esposa, no permitiendo haga la justicia lo que con tantas veras y obligaciones la razón os persuade.

No dijo más Leocadia, y todos los que en la sala estaban guardaron un maravilloso silencio en tanto que estuvo hablando, y con el mismo silencio esperaban la respuesta de Marco Antonio, que fue ésta:

-No puedo negar, señora, el conoceros, que vuestra voz y vuestro rostro no consentirán que lo niegue. Tampoco puedo negar lo mucho que os debo ni el gran valor de vuestros padres, junto con vuestra incomparable honestidad y recogimiento. Ni os tengo ni os tendré en menos por lo que habéis hecho en venirme a buscar en traje tan diferente del vuestro; antes, por esto os estimo y estimaré en el mayor grado que ser pueda; pero, pues mi corta suerte me ha traído a término, como vos decís, que creo que será el postrero de mi vida, y son los semejantes trances los apurados de las verdades, quiero deciros una verdad que, si no os fuere ahora de gusto, podría ser que después os fuese de provecho. Confieso, hermosa Leocadia, que os quise bien y me quisistes, y juntamente con esto confieso que la cédula que os hice fue más por cumplir con vuestro deseo que con el mío; porque, antes que la firmase, con muchos días, tenía entregada mi voluntad y mi alma a otra doncella de mi mismo lugar, que vos bien conocéis, llamada Teodosia, hija de tan nobles padres como los vuestros; y si a vos os di cédula firmada de mi mano, a ella le di la mano firmada y acreditada con tales obras y testigos, que quedé imposibilitado de dar mi libertad a otra persona en el mundo. Los amores que con vos tuve fueron de pasatiempo, sin que dellos alcanzase otra cosa sino las flores que vos sabéis, las cuales no os ofendieron ni pueden ofender en cosa alguna. Lo que con Teodosia me pasó fue alcanzar el fruto que ella pudo darme y yo quise que me diese, con fe y seguro de ser su esposo, como lo soy. Y si a ella y a vos os dejé en un mismo tiempo, a vos suspensa y engañada, y a ella temerosa y, a su parecer, sin honra, hícelo con poco discurso y con juicio de mozo, como lo soy, creyendo que todas aquellas cosas eran de poca importancia, y que las podía hacer sin escrúpulo alguno, con otros pensamientos que entonces me vinieron y solicitaron lo que quería hacer, que fue venirme a Italia y emplear en ella algunos de los años de mi juventud, y después volver a ver lo que Dios había hecho de vos y de mi verdadera esposa. Mas, doliéndose de mí el cielo, sin duda creo que ha permitido ponerme de la manera que me veis, para que, confesando estas verdades, nacidas de mis muchas culpas, pague en esta vida lo que debo, y vos quedéis desengañada y libre para hacer lo que mejor os pareciere. Y si en algún tiempo Teodosia supiere mi muerte, sabrá de vos y de los que están presentes cómo en la muerte le cumplí la palabra que le di en la vida. Y si en el poco tiempo que de ella me queda, señora Leocadia, os puedo servir en algo, decídmelo; que, como no sea recebiros por esposa, pues no puedo, ninguna otra cosa dejaré de hacer que a mí sea posible por daros gusto.

En tanto que Marco Antonio decía estas razones, tenía la cabeza sobre el codo, y en acabándolas dejó caer el brazo, dando muestras que se desmayaba. Acudió luego don Rafael y, abrazándole estrechamente, le dijo:

-Volved en vos, señor mío, y abrazad a vuestro amigo y a vuestro hermano, pues vos queréis que lo sea. Conoced a don Rafael, vuestro camarada, que será el verdadero testigo de vuestra voluntad y de la merced que a su hermana queréis hacer con admitirla por vuestra.

Volvió en sí Marco Antonio y al momento conoció a don Rafael, y, abrazándole estrechamente y besándole en el rostro, le dijo:

-Ahora digo, hermano y señor mío, que la suma alegría que he recibido en veros no puede traer menos descuento que un pesar grandísimo; pues se dice que tras el gusto se sigue la tristeza; pero yo daré por bien empleada cualquiera que me viniere, a trueco de haber gustado del contento de veros.

-Pues yo os le quiero hacer más cumplido -replicó don Rafael-con presentaros esta joya, que es vuestra amada esposa.

Y, buscando a Teodosia, la halló llorando detrás de toda la gente, suspensa y atónita entre el pesar y la alegría por lo que veía y por lo que había oído decir. Asíóla su hermano de la mano, y ella, sin hacer resistencia, se dejó llevar donde él quiso; que fue ante Marco Antonio, que la conoció y se abrazó con ella, llorando los dos tiernas y amorosas lágrimas.

Admirados quedaron cuantos en la sala estaban, viendo tan extraño acontecimiento. Mirábanse unos a otros sin hablar palabra, esperando en qué habrían de parar aquellas cosas. Mas la desengañada y sin ventura Leocadia, que vio por sus ojos lo que Marco Antonio hacía, y vio al que pensaba ser hermano de don Rafael en brazos del que tenía por su esposo, viendo junto con esto burlados sus deseos y perdidas sus esperanzas, se hurtó de los ojos de todos (que atentos estaban mirando lo que el enfermo hacía con el paje que abrazado tenía) y se salió de la sala o aposento, y en un instante se puso en la calle, con intención de irse desesperada por el mundo o adonde gentes no la vieses; mas, apenas había llegado a la calle, cuando don Rafael la echó menos, y, como si le faltara el alma, preguntó por ella, y nadie le supo dar razón dónde se había ido. Y así, sin esperar más, desesperado salió a buscarla, y acudió adonde le dijeron que posaba Calvete, por si había ido allá a procurar alguna cabalgadura en que irse; y, no hallándola allí, andaba como loco por las calles buscándola y de unas partes a otras; y, pensando si por ventura se había vuelto a las galeras, llegó a la marina, y un poco antes que llegase oyó que a grandes voces llamaban desde tierra el esquife de la capitana, y conoció que quien las daba era la hermosa Leocadia, la cual, recelosa de algún desmán, sintiendo pasos a sus espaldas, empuñó la espada y esperó apercebida que llegase don Rafael, a quien ella luego conoció, y le pesó de que la hubiese hallado, y más en parte tan sola; que ya ella había entendido, por más de una muestra que don Rafael le había dado, que no la quería mal, sino tan bien que tomara por buen partido que Marco Antonio la quisiera otro tanto.

¿Con qué razones podré yo decir ahora las que don Rafael dijo a Leocadia, declarándole su alma, que fueron tantas y tales que no me atrevo a escribirlas? Mas, pues es forzoso decir algunas, las que entre otras le dijo fueron éstas:

-Si con la ventura que me falta me faltase ahora, ¡oh hermosa Leocadia!, el atrevimiento de descubriros los secretos de mi alma, quedaría enterrada en los senos del perpetuo olvido la más enamorada y honesta voluntad que ha nacido ni puede nacer en un enamorado pecho. Pero, por no hacer este agravio a mi justo deseo (véngame lo que viniere), quiero, señora, que advirtáis, si es que os da lugar vuestro arrebatado pensamiento, que en ninguna cosa se me aventaja Marco Antonio, si no es en el bien de ser de vos querido. Mi linaje es tan bueno como el suyo, y en los bienes que llaman de fortuna no me hace mucha ventaja; en los de naturaleza no conviene que me alabe, y más si a los ojos vuestros no son de estima. Todo esto digo, apasionada señora, porque toméis el remedio y el medio que la suerte os ofrece en el extremo de vuestra desgracia. Ya veis que Marco Antonio no puede ser vuestro porque el cielo le hizo de mi hermana, y el mismo cielo, que hoy os ha quitado a Marco Antonio, os quiere hacer recompensa conmigo, que no deseo otro bien en esta vida que entregarme por esposo vuestro. Mirad que el buen suceso está llamando a las puertas del malo que hasta ahora habéis tenido, y no penséis que el atrevimiento que habéis mostrado en buscar a Marco Antonio ha de ser parte para que no os estime y tenga en lo que mereciéades, si nunca le hubiérades tenido, que en la hora que quiero y determino igualarme con vos, eligiéndoo por perpetua señora mía, en aquella misma se me ha de olvidar, y ya se me ha olvidado, todo cuanto en esto he sabido y visto; que bien sé que las fuerzas que a mí me han forzado a que tan de rondón y a rienda suelta me disponga a adoraros y a entregarme por vuestro, esas mismas os han traído a vos al estado en que estáis, y así no habrá necesidad de buscar disculpa donde no ha habido yerro alguno.

Callando estuvo Leocadia a todo cuanto don Rafael le dijo, sino que de cuando en cuando daba unos profundos suspiros, salidos de lo íntimo de sus entrañas. Tuvo atrevimiento don Rafael de tomarle una mano, y ella no tuvo esfuerzo para estorbárselo; y así, besándosela muchas veces, le decía:

-Acabad, señora de mi alma, de serlo del todo a vista destos estrellados cielos que nos cubren, y deste sosegado mar que nos escucha, y destas bañadas arenas que nos sustentan. Dadme ya el sí, que sin duda conviene tanto a vuestra honra como a mi contento. Vuélvoos a decir que soy caballero, como vos sabéis, y rico, y que os quiero bien (que es lo que más habéis de estimar), y que en cambio de hallaros sola y en traje que desdice mucho del de vuestra honra, lejos de la casa de vuestros padres y parientes, sin persona que os acuda a lo que menester hubiéredes y sin esperanza de alcanzar lo que buscábades, podéis volver a vuestra patria en vuestro propio, honrado y verdadero traje, acompañada de tan buen esposo como el que vos supistes escogeros; rica, contenta, estimada y servida, y aun loada de todos aquellos a cuya noticia llegaren los sucesos de vuestra historia. Si esto es así, como lo es, no sé en qué estáis dudando; acabad (que otra vez os lo digo) de levantarme del suelo de mi miseria al cielo de mereceros, que en ello haréis por vos misma, y cumpliréis con las leyes de la cortesía y del buen conocimiento, mostrándoos en un mismo punto agradecida y discreta.

-Ea, pues -dijo a esta sazón la dudosa Leocadia-, pues así lo ha ordenado el cielo, y no es en mi mano ni en la de viviente alguno oponerse a lo que Él determinado tiene, hágase lo que Él quiere y vos queréis, señor mío; y sabe el mismo cielo con la vergüenza que vengo a condescender con vuestra voluntad, no porque no entienda lo mucho que en obedeceros gano, sino porque temo que, en cumpliendo vuestro gusto, me habéis de mirar con otros ojos de los que quizá hasta agora, mirándome, os han engañado. Mas sea como fuere, que, en fin, el nombre de ser mujer legítima de don Rafael de Villavicencio no se podía perder, y con este título solo viviré contenta. Y si las costumbres que en mí viéredes, después de ser vuestra, fueren parte para que me estiméis en algo, daré al cielo las gracias de haberme traído por tan estraños rodeos y por tantos males a los bienes de ser vuestra. Dadme, señor don Rafael, la mano de ser mío, y veis aquí os la doy de ser vuestra, y sirvan de testigos los que vos decís: el cielo, la mar, las arenas y este silencio, sólo interrumpido de mis suspiros y de vuestros ruegos.

Diciendo esto, se dejó abrazar y le dio la mano, y don Rafael le dio la suya, celebrando el noturno y nuevo desposorio solas las lágrimas que el contento, a pesar de la pasada tristeza, sacaba de sus ojos. Luego se volvieron a casa del caballero, que estaba con grandísima pena de su falta; y lo mismo tenían Marco Antonio y Teodosia, los cuales ya por mano de clérigo estaban desposados, que a persuasión de Teodosia (temerosa que algún contrario accidente no le turbase el bien que había hallado), el caballero envió luego por quien los desposase; de modo que, cuando don Rafael y Leocadia entraron y don Rafael contó lo que con Leocadia le había sucedido, así les aumentó el gozo como si ellos fueran sus cercanos parientes, que es condición natural y propia de la nobleza catalana saber ser amigos y favorecer a los extranjeros que dellos tienen necesidad alguna.

El sacerdote, que presente estaba, ordenó que Leocadia mudase el hábito y se vistiese en el suyo; y el caballero acudió a ello con presteza, vistiendo a las dos de dos ricos vestidos de su mujer, que era una principal señora, del linaje de los Granolleques, famoso y antiguo en aquel reino. Avisó al cirujano, quien por caridad se dolía del herido, como hablaba mucho y no le dejaban solo, el cual vino y ordenó lo que primero: que fue que le dejasen en silencio. Pero Dios, que así lo tenía ordenado, tomando por medio e instrumento de sus obras (cuando a nuestros ojos quiere hacer alguna maravilla) lo que la misma naturaleza no alcanza, ordenó que el alegría y poco silencio que Marco Antonio había guardado fuese parte para mejorarle, de manera que otro día, cuando le curaron, le hallaron fuera de peligro; y de allí a catorce se levantó tan sano que, sin temor alguno, se pudo poner en camino.

Es de saber que en el tiempo que Marco Antonio estuvo en el lecho hizo voto, si Dios le sanase, de ir en romería a pie a Santiago de Galicia, en cuya promesa le acompañaron don Rafael, Leocadia y Teodosia, y aun Calvete, el mozo de mulas (obra pocas veces usada de los de oficios semejantes). Pero la bondad y llaneza que había conocido en don Rafael le obligó a no dejarle hasta que volviese a su tierra; y, viendo que habían de ir a pie como peregrinos, envió las mulas a Salamanca, con la que era de don Rafael, que no faltó con quien enviarlas.

Llegóse, pues, el día de la partida, y, acomodados de sus esclavinas y de todo lo necesario, se despidieron del liberal caballero que tanto les había favorecido y agasajado, cuyo nombre era don Sancho de Cardona, ilustrísimo por sangre y famoso por su persona. Ofreciéronsele todos de guardar perpetuamente ellos y sus decendientes (a quien se lo dejarían mandado), la memoria de las mercedes tan singulares dél recibidas, para agradecerles siquiera, ya que no pudiesen servirlos. Don Sancho los abrazó a todos, diciéndoles que de su natural condición nacía hacer aquellas obras, o otras que fuesen buenas, a todos los que conocía o imaginaba ser hidalgos castellanos.

Reiteráronse dos veces los abrazos, y con alegría mezclada con algún sentimiento triste se despidieron; y, caminando con la comodidad que permitía la delicadeza de las dos nuevas peregrinas, en tres días llegaron a Monserrat; y, estando allí otros tantos, haciendo lo que a buenos y católicos cristianos debían, con el mismo espacio volvieron a su camino, y sin sucederles revés ni desmán alguno llegaron a Santiago. Y, después de cumplir su voto con la mayor devoción que pudieron, no quisieron dejar el hábito de peregrinos hasta entrar en sus casas, a las cuales llegaron poco a poco, descansados y contentos; mas, antes que llegasen, estando a vista del lugar de Leocadia (que, como se ha dicho, era una legua del de Teodosia), desde encima de un recuesto los descubrieron a entrambos, sin poder encubrir las lágrimas que el contento de verlos les trujo a los ojos, a lo menos a las dos desposadas, que con su vista renovaron la memoria de los pasados sucesos.

Descubríase desde la parte donde estaban un ancho valle que los dos pueblos dividía, en el cual vieron, a la sombra de un olivo, un dispuesto caballero sobre un poderoso caballo, con una blanquísima adarga en el brazo izquierdo y una gruesa y larga lanza terciada en el derecho; y, mirándole con atención, vieron que asimismo por entre unos olivares venían otros dos caballeros con las mismas armas y con el mismo donaire y apostura, y de allí a poco vieron que se juntaron todos tres; y, habiendo estado un pequeño espacio juntos, se apartaron, y uno de los que a lo último habían venido, se apartó con el que estaba primero debajo del olivo; los cuales, poniendo las espuelas a los caballos, arremetieron el uno al otro con muestras de ser mortales enemigos, comenzando a tirarse bravos y diestros botes de lanza, ya hurtando los golpes, ya recogiénolos en las adargas con tanta destreza que daban bien a entender ser maestros en aquel ejercicio. El tercero los estaba mirando sin moverse de un lugar; mas, no pudiendo don Rafael sufrir estar tan lejos, mirando aquella tan reñida y singular batalla, a todo correr bajó del recuesto, siguiéndole su hermana y su esposa, y en poco espacio se puso junto a los dos combatientes, a tiempo que ya los dos caballeros andaban algo heridos; y, habiéndosele caído al uno el sombrero y con él un casco de acero, al volver el rostro conoció don Rafael ser su padre, y Marco Antonio conoció que el otro era el suyo. Leocadia, que con atención había mirado al que no se combatía, conoció que era el padre que la había engendrado, de cuya vista todos cuatro suspensos, atónitos y fuera de sí quedaron; pero, dando el sobresalto lugar al discurso de la razón, los dos cuñados, sin detenerse, se pusieron en medio de los que peleaban, diciendo a voces:

-No más, caballeros, no más, que los que esto os piden y suplican son vuestros propios hijos. Yo soy Marco Antonio, padre y señor mío -decía Marco Antonio-; yo soy aquel por quien, a lo que imagino, están vuestras canas venerables puestas en este riguroso trance. Templad la furia y arrojad la lanza, o volvedla contra otro enemigo, que el que tenéis delante ya de hoy más ha de ser vuestro hermano.

Casi estas mismas razones decía don Rafael a su padre, a las cuales se detuvieron los caballeros, y atentamente se pusieron a mirar a los que se las decían; y volviendo la cabeza vieron que don Enrique, el padre de Leocadia, se había apeado y estaba abrazado con el que pensaban ser peregrino; y era que Leocadia se había llegado a él, y, dándosele a conocer, le rogó que pusiese en paz a los que se combatían, contándole en breves razones cómo don Rafael era su esposo y Marco Antonio lo era de Teodosia.

Oyendo esto su padre, se apeó, y la tenía abrazada, como se ha dicho; pero, dejándola, acudió a ponerlos en paz, aunque no fue menester, pues ya los dos habían conocido a sus hijos y estaban en el suelo,teniéndolos abrazados, llorando todos lágrimas de amor y de contento nacidas. Juntáronse todos y volvieron a mirar a sus hijos, y no sabían qué decirse. Atentábanles los cuerpos, por ver si eran fantásticos, que su improvisa llegada esta y otras sospechas engendraba; pero, desengañados algún tanto, volvieron a las lágrimas y a los abrazos.

Y en esto, asomó por el mismo valle gran cantidad de gente armada, de a pie y de a caballo, los cuales venían a defender al caballero de su lugar; pero, como llegaron y los vieron abrazados de aquellos peregrinos, y preñados los ojos de lágrimas, se apearon y admiraron, estando suspensos, hasta tanto que don Enrique les dijo brevemente lo que Leocadia su hija le había contado.

Todos fueron a abrazar a los peregrinos, con muestras de contento tales que no se pueden encarecer. Don Rafael de nuevo contó a todos, con la brevedad que el tiempo requería, todo el suceso de sus amores, y de cómo venía casado con Leocadia, y su hermana Teodosia con Marco Antonio: nuevas que de nuevo causaron nueva alegría. Luego, de los mismos caballos de la gente que llegó al socorro tomaron los que hubieron menester para los cinco peregrinos, y acordaron de irse al lugar de Marco Antonio, ofreciéndoles su padre de hacer allí las bodas de todos; y con este parecer se partieron, y algunos de los que se habían hallado presentes se adelantaron a pedir albricias a los parientes y amigos de los desposados.

En el camino supieron don Rafael y Marco Antonio la causa de aquella pendencia, que fue que el padre de Teodosia y el de Leocadia habían desafiado al padre de Marco Antonio, en razón de que él había sido sabidor de los engaños de su hijo; y, habiendo venido los dos y hallándole solo, no quisieron combatirse con alguna ventaja, sino uno a uno, como caballeros, cuya pendencia parara en la muerte de uno o en la de entrambos si ellos no hubieran llegado.

Dieron gracias a Dios los cuatro peregrinos del suceso felice. Y otro día después que llegaron, con real y espléndida magnificencia y sumptuoso gasto, hizo celebrar el padre de Marco Antonio las bodas de su hijo y Teodosia y las de don Rafael y de Leocadia. Los cuales luengos y felices años vivieron en compañía de sus esposas, dejando de sí ilustre generación y decendencia, que hasta hoy dura en estos dos lugares, que son de los mejores de la Andalucía, y si no se nombran es por guardar el decoro a las dos doncellas, a quien quizá las lenguas maldicientes, o neciamente escrupulosas, les harán cargo de la ligereza de sus deseos y del súbito mudar de trajes; a los cuales ruego que no se arrojen a vituperar semejantes libertades, hasta que miren en sí, si alguna vez han sido tocados destas que llaman flechas de Cupido; que en efeto es una fuerza, si así se puede llamar, incontrastable, que hace el apetito a la razón.

Calvete, el mozo de mulas, se quedó con la que don Rafael había enviado a Salamanca, y con otras muchas dádivas que los dos desposados le dieron; y los poetas de aquel tiempo tuvieron ocasión donde emplear sus plumas, exagerando la hermosura y los sucesos de las dos tan atrevidas cuanto honestas doncellas, sujeto principal deste extraño suceso.

La señora Cornelia

DON ANTONIO de Isunza y don Juan de Gamboa, caballeros principales, de una edad, muy discretos y grandes amigos, siendo estudiantes en Salamanca, determinaron de dejar sus estudios por irse a Flandes, llevados del hervor de la sangre moza y del deseo, como decirse suele, de ver mundo, y por parecerles que el ejercicio de las armas, aunque arma y dice bien a todos, principalmente asienta y dice mejor en los bien nacidos y de ilustre sangre.

Llegaron, pues, a Flandes a tiempo que estaban las cosas en paz, o en conciertos y tratos de tenerla presto. Recibieron en Amberes cartas de sus padres, donde les escribieron el grande enojo que habían recebido por haber dejado sus estudios sin avisárselo, para que hubieran venido con la comodidad que pedía el ser quien eran. Finalmente, conociendo la pesadumbre de sus padres, acordaron de volverse a España, pues no había qué hacer en Flandes; pero, antes de volverse, quisieron ver todas las más famosas ciudades de Italia; y, habiéndolas visto todas, pararon en Bolonia, y, admirados de los estudios de aquella insigne universidad, quisieron en ella proseguir los suyos. Dieron noticia de su intento a sus padres, de que se holgaron infinito, y lo mostraron con proveerles magníficamente y de modo que mostrasen en su tratamiento quién eran y qué padres tenían; y, desde el primero día que salieron a las escuelas, fueron conocidos de todos por caballeros, galanes, discretos y bien criados.

Tendría don Antonio hasta veinte y cuatro años, y don Juan no pasaba de veinte y seis. Y adornaban esta buena edad con ser muy gentiles hombres, músicos, poetas, diestros y valientes: partes que los hacían amables y bien queridos de cuantos los comunicaban.

Tuvieron luego muchos amigos, así estudiantes españoles, de los muchos que en aquella universidad cursaban, como de los mismos de la ciudad y de los extranjeros. Mostrábanse con todos liberales y comedidos, y muy ajenos de la arrogancia que dicen que suelen tener los españoles. Y, como eran mozos y alegres, no se desgustaban de tener noticia de las hermosas de la ciudad; y, aunque había muchas señoras, doncellas y casadas, con gran fama de ser honestas y hermosas, a todas se aventajaba la señora Cornelia Bentibolli, de la antigua y generosa familia de los Bentibollis, que un tiempo fueron señores de Bolonia.

Era Cornelia hermosísima en extremo, y estaba debajo de la guarda y amparo de Lorenzo Bentibolli, su hermano, honradísimo y valiente caballero, huérfanos de padre y madre; que, aunque los dejaron solos, los dejaron ricos, y la riqueza es grande alivio de orfanidad.

Era el recato de Cornelia tanto, y la solicitud de su hermano tanta en guardarla, que ni ella se dejaba ver ni su hermano consentía que la vieses. Esta fama traían deseosos a don Juan y a don Antonio de verla, aunque fuera en la iglesia; pero el trabajo que en ello pusieron fue en balde, y el deseo, por la imposibilidad, cuchillo de la esperanza, fue menguando. Y así, con sólo el amor de sus estudios y el entretenimiento de algunas honestas mocedades, pasaban una vida tan alegre como honrada. Pocas veces salían de noche, y si salían, iban juntos y bien armados.

Sucedió, pues, que, habiendo de salir una noche, dijo don Antonio a don Juan que él se quería quedar a rezar ciertas devociones; que se fuese, que luego le seguiría.

-No hay para qué -dijo don Juan-, que yo os aguardaré, y si no saliéremos esta noche, importa poco.

-No, por vida vuestra -replicó don Antonio-: salid a coger el aire, que yo seré luego con vos, si es que vais por donde solemos ir.

-Haced vuestro gusto -dijo don Juan-: quedaos en buena hora; y si saliéredes, las mismas estaciones andaré esta noche que las pasadas.

Fuese don Juan y quedóse don Antonio. Era la noche entre oscura, y la hora, las once; y, habiendo andado dos o tres calles, y viéndose solo y que no tenía con quién hablar, determinó volverse a casa; y, poniéndolo en efeto, al pasar por una calle que tenía portales sustentados en mármoles oyó que de una puerta le ceceaban. La escuridad de la noche y la que causaban los portales no le dejaban atinar al ceceo. Detúvose un poco, estuvo atento, y vio entreabrir una puerta; llegóse a ella y oyó una voz baja que dijo:

-¿Sois por ventura Fabio?

Don Juan, por sí o por no, respondió:

-Sí.

-Pues tomad -respondieron de dentro-; y ponedlo en cobro y volved luego, que importa.

Alargó la mano don Juan y topó un bulto, y, queriéndolo tomar, vio que eran menester las dos manos, y así le hubo de asir con entrambas; y, apenas se le dejaron en ellas, cuando le cerraron la puerta, y él se halló cargado en la calle y sin saber de qué. Pero casi luego comenzó a llorar una criatura, al parecer recién nacida, a cuyo lloro quedó don Juan confuso y suspenso, sin saber qué hacerse ni qué corte dar en aquel caso; porque, en volver a llamar a la puerta, le pareció que podía correr algún peligro cuya era la criatura, y, en dejarla allí, la criatura misma; pues el llevarla a su casa, no tenía en ella quién la remediase, ni él conocía en toda la ciudad persona adonde poder llevarla. Pero, viendo que le habían dicho que la pusiese en cobro y que volviese luego, determinó de traerla a su casa y dejarla en poder de una ama que los servía, y volver luego a ver si era menester su favor en alguna cosa, puesto que bien había visto que le habían tenido por otro y que había sido error darle a él la criatura.

Finalmente, sin hacer más discursos, se vino a casa con ella, a tiempo que ya don Antonio no estaba en ella. Entróse en un aposento y llamó al ama, descubrió la criatura y vio que era la más hermosa que jamás hubiese visto. Los paños en que venía envuelta mostraban ser de ricos padres nacida. Desenvolvióla el ama y hallaron que era varón.

-Menester es -dijo don Juan-dar de mamar a este niño, y ha de ser desta manera: que vos, ama, le habéis de quitar estas ricas mantillas y ponerle otras más humildes, y, sin decir que yo le he traído, la habéis de llevar en casa de una partera, que las tales siempre suelen dar recado y remedio a semejantes necesidades. Llevaréis dineros con que la dejéis satisfecha y daréisle los padres que quisiéredes, para encubrir la verdad de haberlo yo traído.

Respondió el ama que así lo haría, y don Juan, con la priesa que pudo, volvió a ver si le ceceaban otra vez; pero, un poco antes que llegase a la casa adonde le habían llamado, oyó gran ruido de espadas, como de mucha gente que se acuchillaba. Estuvo atento y no sintió palabra alguna; la herrería era a la sorda, y, a la luz de las centellas que las piedras heridas de las espadas levantaban, casi pudo ver que eran muchos los que a uno solo acometían, y confirmóse en esta verdad oyendo decir:

-¡Ah traidores, que sois muchos, y yo solo! Pero con todo eso no os ha de valer vuestra superchería.

Oyendo y viendo lo cual don Juan, llevado de su valeroso corazón, en dos brincos se puso al lado, y, metiendo mano a la espada y a un broquel que llevaba, dijo al que defendía, en lengua italiana, por no ser conocido por español:

-No temáis, que socorro os ha venido que no os faltará hasta perder la vida; menead los puños, que traidores pueden poco, aunque sean muchos.

A estas razones respondió uno de los contrarios:

-Mientes, que aquí no hay ningún traidor; que el querer cobrar la honra perdida, a toda demasía da licencia.

No le habló más palabras, porque no les daba lugar a ello la priesa que se daban a herirse los enemigos, que al parecer de don Juan debían de ser seis. Apretaron tanto a su compañero, que de dos estocadas que le dieron a un tiempo en los pechos dieron con él en tierra. Don Juan creyó que le habían muerto, y, con ligereza y valor extraño, se puso delante de todos y los hizo arredrar a fuerza de una lluvia de cuchilladas y estocadas. Pero no fuera bastante su diligencia para ofender y defenderse, si no le ayudara la buena suerte con hacer que los vecinos de la calle sacasen lumbres a las ventanas y a grandes voces llamasen a la justicia: lo cual visto por los contrarios, dejaron la calle, y, a espaldas vueltas, se ausentaron.

Ya en esto, se había levantado el caído, porque las estocadas hallaron un peto como de diamante en que toparon. Habíasele caído a don Juan el sombrero en la refriega, y buscándole, halló otro que se puso acaso, sin mirar si era el suyo o no. El caído se llegó a él y le dijo:

-Señor caballero, quienquiera que seáis, yo confieso que os debo la vida que tengo, la cual, con lo que valgo y puedo, gastaré a vuestro servicio. Hacedme merced de decirme quién sois y vuestro nombre, para que yo sepa a quién tengo de mostrarme agradecido.

A lo cual respondió don Juan:

-No quiero ser descortés, ya que soy desinteresado. Por hacer, señor, lo que me pedís, y por daros gusto solamente, os digo que soy un caballero español y estudiante en esta ciudad; si el nombre os importara saberlo, os le dijera; mas, por si acaso os quisiéredes servir de mí en otra cosa, sabed que me llamo don Juan de Gamboa.

-Mucha merced me habéis hecho -respondió el caído-; pero yo, señor don Juan de Gamboa, no quiero deciros quién soy ni mi nombre, porque he de gustar mucho de que lo sepáis de otro que de mí, y yo tendré cuidado de que os hagan sabidor dello.

Habíale preguntado primero don Juan si estaba herido, porque le había visto dar dos grandes estocadas, y habíale respondido que un famoso peto que traía puesto, después de Dios, le había defendido; pero que, con todo eso, sus enemigos le acabaran si él no se hallara a su lado. En esto, vieron venir hacia ellos un bulto de gente, y don Juan dijo:

-Si éstos son los enemigos que vuelven, apercebíos, señor, y haced como quien sois.

-A lo que yo creo, no son enemigos, sino amigos los que aquí vienen.

Y así fue la verdad, porque los que llegaron, que fueron ocho hombres, rodearon al caído y hablaron con él pocas palabras, pero tan calladas y secretas que don Juan no las pudo oír. Volvió luego el defendido a don Juan y díjole:

-A no haber venido estos amigos, en ninguna manera, señor don Juan, os dejara hasta que acabárades de ponerme en salvo; pero ahora os suplico con todo encarecimiento que os vais y me dejéis, que me importa.

Hablando esto, se tentó la cabeza y vio que estaba sin sombrero, y, volviéndose a los que habían venido, pidió que le diesen un sombrero, que se le había caído el suyo. Apenas lo hubo dicho, cuando don Juan le puso el que había hallado en la cabeza. Tentóle el caído y, volviéndosele a don Juan, dijo:

-Este sombrero no es mío; por vida del señor don Juan, que se le lleve por trofeo desta refriega; y guárdele, que creo que es conocido.

Diéronle otro sombrero al defendido, y don Juan, por cumplir lo que le había pedido, pasando otros algunos, aunque breves, comedimientos, le dejó sin saber quién era, y se vino a su casa, sin querer llegar a la puerta donde le habían dado la criatura, por parecerle que todo el barrio estaba despierto y alborotado con la pendencia.

Sucedió, pues, que, volviéndose a su posada, en la mitad del camino encontró con don Antonio de Isunza, su camarada; y, conociéndose, dijo don Antonio:

-Volved conmigo, don Juan, hasta aquí arriba, y en el camino os contaré un extraño cuento que me ha sucedido, que no le habréis oído tal en toda vuestra vida.

-Como esos cuentos os podré contar yo -respondió don Juan-; pero vamos donde queréis y contadme el vuestro.

Guió don Antonio y dijo:

-«Habéis de saber que, poco más de una hora después que salistes de casa, salí a buscaros, y no treinta pasos de aquí vi venir, casi a encontrarme, un bulto negro de persona, que venía muy aguijando; y, llegándose cerca, conocí ser mujer en el hábito largo, la cual, con voz interrumpida de sollozos y de suspiros, me dijo: "¿Por ventura, señor, sois extranjero o de la ciudad?" "Estranjero soy y español", respondí yo. Y ella: "Gracias al cielo, que no quiere que muera sin sacramentos". "¿Venís herida, señora -reliqué yo-, o traéis algún mal de muerte?". "Podría ser que el que traigo lo fuese, si presto no se me da remedio; por la cortesía que siempre suele reinar en los de vuestra nación, os suplico, señor español, que me saquéis destas calles y me llevéis a vuestra posada con la mayor priesa que pudiéredes; que allá, si gustáredes dello, sabréis el mal que llevo y quién soy, aunque sea a costa de mi crédito". Oyendo lo cual, pareciéndome que tenía necesidad de lo que pedía, sin replicarla más, la así de la mano y por calles desviadas la llevé a la posada. Abrióme Santisteban el paje, hícele que se retirase, y sin que él la viese la llevé a mi estancia, y ella en entrando se arrojó encima de mi lecho desmayada. Lleguéme a ella y descubríla el rostro, que con el manto traía cubierto, y descubrí en él la mayor belleza que humanos ojos han visto; será a mi parecer de edad de diez y ocho años, antes menos que más. Quedé suspenso de ver tal extremo de belleza; acudí a echarle un poco de agua en el rostro, con que volvió en sí suspirando tiernamente, y lo primero que me dijo fue: "¿Conocéisme, señor?" "No -respondí yo-, ni es bien que yo haya tenido ventura de haber conocido tanta hermosura". "Desdichada de aquella -respondió ella-a quien se la da el cielo para mayor desgracia suya; pero, señor, no es tiempo éste de alabar hermosuras, sino de remediar desdichas. Por quien sois, que me dejéis aquí encerrada y no permitáis que ninguno me vea, y volved luego al mismo lugar que me topastes y mirad si riñe alguna gente, y no favorezcáis a ninguno de los que riñeren, sino poned paz, que cualquier daño de las partes ha de resultar en acrecentar el mío". Déjola encerrada y vengo a poner en paz esta pendencia.»

-¿Tenéis más que decir, don Antonio? -preguntó don Juan.

-¿Pues no os parece que he dicho hartó? -respondió don Antonio-. Pues he dicho que tengo debajo de llave y en mi aposento la mayor belleza que humanos ojos han visto.

-El caso es extraño, sin duda -dijo don Juan-, pero oíd el mío.

Y luego le contó todo lo que le había sucedido, y cómo la criatura que le habían dado estaba en casa en poder de su ama, y la orden que le había dejado de mudarle las ricas mantillas en pobres y de llevarle adonde le criasen o a lo menos socorriesen la presente necesidad. Y dijo más: que la pendencia que él venía a buscar ya era acabada y puesta en paz, que él se había hallado en ella; y que, a lo que él imaginaba, todos los de la riña debían de ser gentes de prendas y de gran valor.

Quedaron entrambos admirados del suceso de cada uno y con priesa se volvieron a la posada, por ver lo que había menester la encerrada. En el camino dijo don Antonio a don Juan que él había prometido a aquella señora que no la dejaría ver de nadie, ni entraría en aquel aposento sino él solo, en tanto que ella no gustase de otra cosa.

-No importa nada -respondió don Juan-, que no faltará orden para verla, que ya lo deseo en extremo, según me la habéis alabado de hermosa.

Llegaron en esto, y, a la luz que sacó uno de tres pajes que tenían, alzó los ojos don Antonio al sombrero que don Juan traía, y viole resplandeciente de diamantes; quitósele, y vio que las luces salían de muchos que en un cintillo riquísimo traía. Miráronle y remiráronle entrambos, y concluyeron que, si todos eran finos, como parecían, valía más de doce mil ducados. Aquí acabaron de conocer ser gente principal la de la pendencia, especialmente el socorrido de don Juan, de quien se acordó haberle dicho que trujese el sombrero y le guardase, porque era conocido. Mandaron retirar los pajes y don Antonio abrió su aposento, y halló a la señora sentada en la cama, con la mano en la mejilla, derramando tiernas lágrimas. Don Juan, con el deseo que tenía de verla, se asomó a la puerta tanto cuanto pudo entrar la cabeza, y al punto la lumbre de los diamantes dio en los ojos de la que lloraba, y, alzándolos, dijo:

-Entrad, señor duque, entrad; ¿para qué me queréis dar con tanta escaseza el bien de vuestra vista?

A esto dijo don Antonio:

-Aquí, señora, no hay ningún duque que se escuse de veros.

-¿Cómo no? -replicó ella-. El que allí se asomó ahora es el duque de Ferrara, que mal le puede encubrir la riqueza de su sombrero.

-En verdad, señora, que el sombrero que vistes no le trae ningún duque; y si queréis desengañaros con ver quién le trae, dadle licencia que entre.

-Entre enhorabuena -dijo ella-, aunque si no fuese el duque, mis desdichas serían mayores.

Todas estas razones había oído don Juan, y, viendo que tenía licencia de entrar, con el sombrero en la mano entró en el aposento, y, así como se le puso delante y ella conoció no ser quien decía el del rico sombrero, con voz turbada y lengua presurosa, dijo:

-¡Ay, desdichada de mí! Señor mío, decidme luego, sin tenerme más suspensa: ¿conocéis el dueño dese sombrero? ¿Dónde le dejastes o cómo vino a vuestro poder? ¿Es vivo por ventura, o son éstas las nuevas que me envía de su muerte? ¡Ay, bien mío!, ¿qué sucesos son éstos? ¡Aquí veo tus prendas, aquí me veo sin ti encerrada y en poder que, a no saber que es de gentiles hombres españoles, el temor de perder mi honestidad me hubiera quitado la vida!

-Sosegaos señora -dijo don Juan-, que ni el dueño deste sombrero es muerto ni estáis en parte donde se os ha de hacer agravio alguno, sino serviros con cuanto las fuerzas nuestras alcanzaren, hasta poner las vidas por defenderos y ampararos; que no es bien que os salga vana la fe que tenéis de la bondad de los españoles; y, pues nosotros lo somos y principales (que aquí viene bien ésta que parece arrogancia), estad segura que se os guardará el decoro que vuestra presencia merece.

-Así lo creo yo -respondió ella-; pero con todo eso, decidme, señor: ¿cómo vino a vuestro poder ese rico sombrero, o adónde está su dueño, que, por lo menos, es Alfonso de Este, duque de Ferrara?

Entonces don Juan, por no tenerla más suspensa, le contó cómo le había hallado en una pendencia, y en ella había favorecido y ayudado a un caballero que, por lo que ella decía, sin duda debía de ser el duque de Ferrara, y que en la pendencia había perdido el sombrero y hallado aquél, y que aquel caballero le había dicho que le guardase, que era conocido, y que la refriega se había concluido sin quedar herido el caballero ni él tampoco; y que, después de acabada, había llegado gente que al parecer debían de ser criados o amigos del que él pensaba ser el duque, el cual le había pedido le dejase y se viniese, «mostrándose muy agradecido al favor que yo le había dado».

-De manera, señora mía, que este rico sombrero vino a mi poder por la manera que os he dicho, y su dueño, si es el duque, como vos decís, no ha una hora que le dejé bueno, sano y salvo; sea esta verdad parte para vuestro consuelo, si es que le tendréis con saber del buen estado del duque.

-Para que sepáis, señores, si tengo razón y causa para preguntar por él, estadme atentos y escuchad la, no sé si diga, mi desdichada historia.

Todo el tiempo en que esto pasó le entretuvo el ama en paladear al niño con miel y en mudarle las mantillas de ricas en pobres; y, ya que lo tuvo todo aderezado, quiso llevarla en casa de una partera, como don Juan se lo dejó ordenado, y, al pasar con ella por junto a la estancia donde estaba la que quería comenzar su historia, lloró la criatura de modo que lo sintió la señora; y, levantándose en pie, púsose atentamente a escuchar, y oyó más distintamente el llanto de la criatura y dijo:

-Señores míos, ¿qué criatura es aquella, que parece recién nacida?

Don Juan respondió:

-Es un niño que esta noche nos han echado a la puerta de casa y va el ama a buscar quién le dé de mamar.

-Traíganmele aquí, por amor de Dios -dijo la señora-, que yo haré esa caridad a los hijos ajenos, pues no quiere el cielo que la haga con los propios.

Llamó don Juan al ama y tomóle el niño, y entrósele a la que le pedía y púsosele en los brazos, diciendo:

-Veis aquí, señora, el presente que nos han hecho esta noche; y no ha sido éste el primero, que pocos meses se pasan que no hallamos a los quicios de nuestras puertas semejantes hallazgos.

Tomóle ella en los brazos y miróle atentamente, así el rostro como los pobres aunque limpios paños en que venía envuelto, y luego, sin poder tener las lágrimas, se echó la toca de la cabeza encima de los pechos, para poder dar con honestidad de mamar a la criatura, y, aplicándosela a ellos, juntó su rostro con el suyo, y con la leche le sustentaba y con las lágrimas le bañaba el rostro; y desta manera estuvo sin levantar el suyo tanto espacio cuanto el niño no quiso dejar el pecho. En este espacio guardaban todos cuatro silencio; el niño mamaba, pero no era así, porque las recién paridas no pueden dar el pecho; y así, cayendo en la cuenta la que se lo daba, se le volvió a don Juan, diciendo:

-En balde me he mostrado caritativa: bien parezco nueva en estos casos. Haced, señor, que a este niño le paladeen con un poco de miel, y no consintáis que a estas horas le lleven por las calles. Dejad llegar el día, y antes que le lleven vuélvanmele a traer, que me consuelo en verle.

Volvió el niño don Juan al ama y ordenóle le entretuviese hasta el día, y que le pusiese las ricas mantillas con que le había traído, y que no le llevase sin primero decírselo. Y volviendo a entrar, y estando los tres solos, la hermosa dijo:

-Si queréis que hable, dadme primero algo que coma, que me desmayo, y tengo bastante ocasión para ello.

Acudió prestamente don Antonio a un escritorio y sacó dél muchas conservas, y de algunas comió la desmayada, y bebió un vidrio de agua fría, con que volvió en sí; y, algo sosegada, dijo:

-Sentaos, señores, y escuchadme.

Hiciéronlo ansí, y ella, recogiéndose encima del lecho y abrigándose bien con las faldas del vestido, dejó descolgar por las espaldas un velo que en la cabeza traía, dejando el rostro esento y descubierto, mostrando en él el mismo de la luna, o, por mejor decir, del mismo sol, cuando más hermoso y más claro se muestra. Llovíanle líquidas perlas de los ojos, y limpiábaselas con un lienzo blanquísimo y con unas manos tales, que entre ellas y el lienzo fuera de buen juicio el que supiera diferenciar la blancura. Finalmente, después de haber dado muchos suspiros y después de haber procurado sosegar algún tanto el pecho, con voz algo doliente y turbada, dijo:

-«Yo, señores, soy aquella que muchas veces habréis, sin duda alguna, oído nombrar por ahí, porque la fama de mi belleza, tal cual ella es, pocas lenguas hay que no la publiquen. Soy, en efeto, Cornelia Bentibolli, hermana de Lorenzo Bentibolli, que con deciros esto quizá habré dicho dos verdades: la una, de mi nobleza; la otra, de mi hermosura. De pequeña edad quedé huérfana de padre y madre, en poder de mi hermano, el cual desde niña puso en mi guarda al recato mismo, puesto que más confiaba de mi honrada condición que de la solicitud que ponía en guardarme.

»Finalmente, entre paredes y entre soledades, acompañadas no más que de mis criadas, fui creciendo, y juntamente conmigo crecía la fama de mi gentileza, sacada en público de los criados y de aquellos que en secreto me trataban y de un retrato que mi hermano mandó hacer a un famoso pintor, para que, como él decía, no quedase sin mí el mundo, ya que el cielo a mejor vida me llevase. Pero todo esto fuera poca parte para apresurar mi perdición si no sucediera venir el duque de Ferrara a ser padrino de unas bodas de una prima mía, donde me llevó mi hermano con sana intención y por honra de mi parienta. Allí miré y fui vista; allí, según creo, rendí corazones, avasallé voluntades: allí sentí que daban gusto las alabanzas, aunque fuesen dadas por lisonjeras lenguas; allí, finalmente, vi al duque y él me vio a mí, de cuya vista ha resultado verme ahora como me veo. No os quiero decir, señores, porque sería proceder en infinito, los términos, las trazas, y los modos por donde el duque y yo venimos a conseguir, al cabo de dos años, los deseos que en aquellas bodas nacieron, porque ni guardas, ni recatos, ni honrosas amonestaciones, ni otra humana diligencia fue bastante para estorbar el juntarnos: que en fin hubo de ser debajo de la palabra que él me dio de ser mi esposo, porque sin ella fuera imposible rendir la roca de la valerosa y honrada presunción mía. Mil veces le dije que públicamente me pidiese a mi hermano, pues no era posible que me negase; y que no había que dar disculpas al vulgo de la culpa que le pondrían de la desigualdad de nuestro casamiento, pues no desmentía en nada la nobleza del linaje Bentibolli a la suya Estense. A esto me respondió con escusas, que yo las tuve por bastantes y necesarias, y, confiada como rendida, creí como enamorada y entreguéme de toda mi voluntad a la suya por intercesión de una criada mía, más blanda a las dádivas y promesas del duque que lo que debía a la confianza que de su fidelidad mi hermano hacía.

»En resolución, a cabo de pocos días, me sentí preñada; y, antes que mis vestidos manifestasen mis libertades, por no darles otro nombre, me fingí enferma y malencólica, y hice con mi hermano me trujese en casa de aquella mi prima de quien había sido padrino el duque. Allí le hice saber en el término en que estaba, y el peligro que me amenazaba y la poca seguridad que tenía de mi vida, por tener barruntos de que mi hermano sospechaba mi desenvoltura. Quedó de acuerdo entre los dos que en entrando en el mes mayor se lo avisase: que él vendría por mí con otros amigos suyos y me llevaría a Ferrara, donde en la sazón que esperaba se casaría públicamente conmigo.

»Esta noche en que estamos fue la del concierto de su venida, y esta misma noche, estándole esperando, sentí pasar a mi hermano con otros muchos hombres, al parecer armados, según les crujían las armas, de cuyo sobresalto de imprevisto me sobrevino el parto, y en un instante parí un hermoso niño. Aquella criada mía, sabidora y medianera de mis hechos, que estaba ya prevenida para el caso, envolvió la criatura en otros paños que no los que tiene la que a vuestra puerta echaron; y, saliendo a la puerta de la calle, la dio, a lo que ella dijo, a un criado del duque. Yo, desde allí a un poco, acomodándome lo mejor que pude, según la presente necesidad, salí de la casa, creyendo que estaba en la calle el duque, y no lo debiera hacer hasta que él llegara a la puerta; mas el miedo que me había puesto la cuadrilla armada de mi hermano, creyendo que ya esgrimía su espada sobre mi cuello, no me dejó hacer otro mejor discurso; y así, desatentada y loca, salí donde me sucedió lo que habéis visto; y, aunque me veo sin hijo y sin esposo y con temor de peores sucesos, doy gracias al cielo, que me ha traído a vuestro poder, de quien me prometo todo aquello que de la cortesía española puedo prometerme, y más de la vuestra, que la sabréis realzar por ser tan nobles como parecéis.»

Diciendo esto, se dejó caer del todo encima del lecho, y, acudiendo los dos a ver si se desmayaba, vieron que no, sino que amargamente lloraba, y díjole don Juan:

-Si hasta aquí, hermosa señora, yo y don Antonio, mi camarada, os teníamos compasión y lástima por ser mujer, ahora, que sabemos vuestra calidad, la lástima y compasión pasa a ser obligación precisa de serviros. Cobrad ánimo y no desmayéis; y, aunque no acostumbrada a semejantes casos, tanto más mostraréis quién sois cuanto más con paciencia supiéredes llevarlos. Creed, señora, que imagino que estos tan estraños sucesos han de tener un felice fin: que no han de permitir los cielos que tanta belleza se goce mal y tan honestos pensamientos se malogren. Acostaos, señora, y curad de vuestra persona, que lo habéis menester; que aquí entrará una criada nuestra que os sirva, de quien podéis hacer la misma confianza que de nuestras personas: tan bien sabrá tener en silencio vuestras desgracias como acudir a vuestras necesidades.

-Tal es la que tengo, que a cosas más dificultosas me obliga -respondió ella-. Entre, señor, quien vos quisiéredes, que, encaminada por vuestra parte, no puedo dejar de tenerla muy buena en la que menester hubiere; pero, con todo eso, os suplico que no me vean más que vuestra criada.

-Así será -respondió don Antonio.

Y dejándola sola se salieron, y don Juan dijo al ama que entrase dentro y llevase la criatura con los ricos paños, si se los había puesto. El ama dijo que sí, y que ya estaba de la misma manera que él la había traído. Entró el ama, advertida de lo que había de responder a lo que acerca de aquella criatura la señora que hallaría allí dentro le preguntase.

En viéndola Cornelia, le dijo:

-Vengáis en buen hora, amiga mía; dadme esa criatura y llegadme aquí esa vela.

Hízolo así el ama, y, tomando el niño Cornelia en sus brazos, se turbó toda y le miró ahincadamente, y dijo al ama:

-Decidme, señora, ¿este niño y el que me trajistes o me trujeron poco ha es todo uno?

-Sí señora -respondió el ama.

-Pues ¿cómo trae tan trocadas las mantillas? -replicó Cornelia-. En verdad, amiga, que me parece o que éstas son otras mantillas, o que ésta no es la misma criatura.

-Todo podía ser -respondió el ama.

-Pecadora de mí -dijo Cornelia-, ¿cómo todo podía ser? ¿Cómo es esto, ama mía?; que el corazón me revienta en el pecho hasta saber este truco. Decídmelo, amiga, por todo aquello que bien queréis. Digo que me digáis de dónde habéis habido estas tan ricas mantillas, porque os hago saber que son mías, si la vista no me miente o la memoria no se acuerda. Con estas mismas o otras semejantes entregué yo a mi doncella la prenda querida de mi alma: ¿quién se las quitó? ¡Ay, desdichada! Y ¿quién las trujo aquí? ¡Ay, sin ventura!

Don Juan y don Antonio, que todas estas quejas escuchaban, no quisieron que más adelante pasase en ellas, ni permitieron que el engaño de las trocadas mantillas más la tuviese en pena; y así, entraron, y don Juan le dijo:

-Esas mantillas y ese niño son cosa vuestra, señora Cornelia.

Y luego le contó punto por punto cómo él había sido la persona a quien su doncella había dado el niño, y de cómo le había traído a casa, con la orden que había dado al ama del truco de las mantillas y la ocasión por que lo había hecho; aunque, después que le contó su parto, siempre tuvo por cierto que aquél era su hijo, y que si no se lo había dicho, había sido porque, tras el sobresalto del estar en duda de conocerle, sobreviniese la alegría de haberle conocido.

Allí fueron infinitas las lágrimas de alegría de Cornelia, infinitos los besos que dio a su hijo, infinitas las gracias que rindió a sus favorecedores, llamándolos ángeles humanos de su guarda y otros títulos que de su agradecimiento daban notoria muestra. Dejéronla con el ama, encomendándola mirase por ella y la sirviese cuanto fuese posible, advirtiéndola en el término en que estaba, para que acudiese a su remedio, pues ella, por ser mujer, sabía más de aquel menester que no ellos.

Con esto, se fueron a reposar lo que faltaba de la noche, con intención de no entrar en el aposento de Cornelia si no fuese o que ella los llamase o a necesidad precisa. Vino el día y el ama trujo a quien secretamente y a escuras diese de mamar al niño, y ellos preguntaron por Cornelia. Dijo el ama que reposaba un poco. Fuéronse a las escuelas, y pasaron por la calle de la pendencia y por la casa de donde había salido Cornelia, por ver si era ya pública su falta o si se hacían corrillos della; pero en ningún modo sintieron ni oyeron cosa ni de la riña ni de la ausencia de Cornelia. Con esto, oídas sus lecciones, se volvieron a su posada.

Llamólos Cornelia con el ama, a quien respondieron que tenían determinado de no poner los pies en su aposento, para que con más decoro se guardase el que a su honestidad se debía; pero ella replicó con lágrimas y con ruegos que entrasen a verla, que aquél era el decoro más conveniente, si no para su remedio, a lo menos para su consuelo. Hiciéronlo así, y ella los recibió con rostro alegre y con mucha cortesía; pidióles le hiciesen merced de salir por la ciudad y ver si oían algunas nuevas de su atrevimiento. Respondiéronle que ya estaba hecha aquella diligencia con toda curiosidad, pero que no se decía nada.

En esto, llegó un paje, de tres que tenían, a la puerta del aposento, y desde fuera dijo:

-A la puerta está un caballero con dos criados que dice se llama Lorenzo Bentibolli, y busca a mi señor don Juan de Gamboa.

A este recado cerró Cornelia ambos puños y se los puso en la boca, y por entre ellos salió la voz baja y temerosa, y dijo:

-¡Mi hermano, señores; mi hermano es ése! Sin duda debe de haber sabido que estoy aquí, y viene a quitarme la vida. ¡Socorro, señores, y amparo!

-Sosegaos, señora -le dijo don Antonio-, que en parte estáis y en poder de quien no os dejará hacer el menor agravio del mundo. Acudid vos, señor don Juan, y mirad lo que quiere ese caballero, y yo me quedaré aquí a defender, si menester fuere, a Cornelia.

Don Juan, sin mudar semblante, bajó abajo, y luego don Antonio hizo traer dos pistoletas armadas, y mandó a los pajes que tomasen sus espadas y estuviesen apercebidos.

El ama, viendo aquellas prevenciones, temblaba; Cornelia, temerosa de algún mal suceso, tremía; solos don Antonio y don Juan estaban en sí y muy bien puestos en lo que habían de hacer. En la puerta de la calle halló don Juan a don Lorenzo, el cual, en viendo a don Juan, le dijo:

-Suplico a V. S. -que ésta es la merced de Italia-me haga merced de venirse conmigo a aquella iglesia que está allí frontero, que tengo un negocio que comunicar con V. S. en que me va la vida y la honra.

-De muy buena gana -respondió don Juan-vamos, señor, donde quisiéredes.

Dicho esto, mano a mano se fueron a la iglesia; y, sentándose en un escaño y en parte donde no pudiesen ser oídos, Lorenzo habló primero y dijo:

-«Yo, señor español, soy Lorenzo Bentibolli, si no de los más ricos, de los más principales desta ciudad. Ser esta verdad tan notoria servirá de disculpa del alabarme yo propio. Quedé huérfano algunos años ha, y quedó en mi poder una mi hermana: tan hermosa, que a no tocarme tanto quizá os la alabara de manera que me faltaran encarecimientos por no poder ningunos corresponder del todo a su belleza. Ser yo honrado y ella muchacha y hermosa me hacían andar solícito en guardarla; pero todas mis prevenciones y diligencias las ha defraudado la voluntad arrojada de mi hermana Cornelia, que éste es su nombre.

»Finalmente, por acortar, por no cansaros, éste que pudiera ser cuento largo, digo que el duque de Ferrara, Alfonso de Este, con ojos de lince venció a los de Argos, derribó y triunfo de mi industria venciendo a mi hermana, y anoche me la llevó y sacó de casa de una parienta nuestra, y aun dicen que recién parida. Anoche lo supe y anoche le salí a buscar, y creo que le hallé y acuchillé; pero fue socorrido de algún ángel, que no consintió que con su sangre sacase la mancha de mi agravio. Hame dicho mi parienta, que es la que todo esto me ha dicho, que el duque engañó a mi hermana, debajo de palabra de recibirla por mujer. Esto yo no lo creo, por ser desigual el matrimonio en cuanto a los bienes de fortuna, que en los de naturaleza el mundo sabe la calidad de los Bentibollis de Bolonia. Lo que creo es que él se atuvo a lo que se atienen los poderosos que quieren atropellar una doncella temerosa y recatada, poniéndole a la vista el dulce nombre de esposo, haciéndola creer que por ciertos respectos no se desposa luego: mentiras aparentes de verdades, pero falsas y malintencionadas.» Pero sea lo que fuere, yo me veo sin hermana y sin honra, puesto que todo esto hasta agora por mi parte lo tengo puesto debajo de la llave del silencio, y no he querido contar a nadie este agravio hasta ver si le puedo remediar y satisfacer en alguna manera; que las infamias mejor es que se presuman y sospechen que no que se sepan de cierto y distintamente, que entre el sí y el no de la duda, cada uno puede inclinarse a la parte que más quisiere, y cada una tendrá sus valedores. Finalmente, yo tengo determinado de ir a Ferrara y pedir al mismo duque la satisfacción de mi ofensa, y si la negare, desafiarle sobre el caso; y esto no ha de ser con escuadrones de gente, pues no los puedo ni formar ni sustentar, sino de persona a persona, para lo cual querría el ayuda de la vuestra y que me acompañásedes en este camino, confiado en que lo haréis por ser español y caballero, como ya estoy informado; y por no dar cuenta a ningún pariente ni amigo mío, de quien no espero sino consejos y disuasiones, y de vos puedo esperar los que sean buenos y honrosos, aunque rompan por cualquier peligro. Vos, señor, me habéis de hacer merced de venir conmigo, que, llevando un español a mi lado, y tal como vos me parecéis, haré cuenta que llevo en mi guarda los ejércitos de Jerjes. Mucho os pido, pero a más obliga la deuda de responder a lo que la fama de vuestra nación pregona.

-No más, señor Lorenzo -dijo a esta sazón don Juan (que hasta allí, sin interrumpirle palabra, le había estado escuchando)-, no más, que desde aquí me constituyo por vuestro defensor y consejero, y tomo a mi cargo la satisfacción o venganza de vuestro agravio; y esto no sólo por ser español, sino por ser caballero y serlo vos tan principal como habéis dicho, y como yo sé y como todo el mundo sabe. Mirad cuándo queréis que sea nuestra partida; y sería mejor que fuese luego, porque el hierro se ha de labrar mientras estuviere encendido, y el ardor de la cólera acrecienta el ánimo, y la injuria reciente despierta la venganza.

Levantóse Lorenzo y abrazó apretadamente a don Juan, y dijo:

-A tan generoso pecho como el vuestro, señor don Juan, no es menester moverle con ponerle otro interés delante que el de la honra que ha de ganar en este hecho, la cual desde aquí os la doy si salimos felicemente deste caso, y por añadidura os ofrezco cuanto tengo, puedo y valgo. La ida quiero que sea mañana, porque hoy pueda prevenir lo necesario para ella.

-Bien me parece -dijo don Juan-; y dadme licencia, señor Lorenzo, que yo pueda dar cuenta deste hecho a un caballero, camarada mía, de cuyo valor y silencio os podéis prometer harto más que del mío.

-Pues vos, señor don Juan, según decís, habéis tomado mi honra a vuestro cargo, disponed della como quisiéredes, y decid della lo que quisiéredes y a quien quisiéredes, cuanto más que camarada vuestra, ¿quién puede ser que muy bueno no sea?

Con esto se abrazaron y despidieron, quedando que otro día por la mañana le enviaría a llamar para que fuera de la ciudad se pusiesen a caballo y siguiesen disfrazados su jornada.

Volvió don Juan, y dio cuenta a don Antonio y a Cornelia de lo que con Lorenzo había pasado y el concierto que quedaba hecho.

-¡Válame Dios! -dijo Cornelia-; grande es, señor, vuestra cortesía y grande vuestra confianza. ¿Cómo, y tan presto os habéis arrojado a emprender una hazaña llena de inconvenientes? ¿Y qué sabéis vos, señor, si os lleva mi hermano a Ferrara o a otra parte? Pero dondequiera que os llevare, bien podéis hacer cuenta que va con vos la fidelidad misma, aunque yo, como desdichada, en los átomos del sol tropiezo, de cualquier sombra temo; y ¿no queréis que tema, si está puesta en la respuesta del duque mi vida o mi muerte, y qué sé yo si responderá tan atentadamente que la cólera de mi hermano se contenga en los límites de su discreción? Y, cuando salga, ¿paréceos que tiene flaco enemigo? Y ¿no os parece que los días que tardáredes he de quedar colgada, temerosa y suspensa, esperando las dulces o amargas nuevas del suceso? ¿Quiero yo tan poco al duque o a mi hermano que de cualquiera de los dos no tema las desgracias y las sienta en el alma?

-Mucho discurrís y mucho teméis, señora Cornelia -dijo don Juan-; pero dad lugar entre tantos miedos a la esperanza y fiad en Dios, en mi industria y buen deseo, que habéis de ver con toda felicidad cumplido el vuestro. La ida de Ferrara no se escusa, ni el dejar de ayudar yo a vuestro hermano tampoco. Hasta agora no sabemos la intención del duque, ni tampoco si él sabe vuestra falta; y todo esto se ha de saber de su boca, y nadie se lo podrá preguntar como yo. Y entended, señora Cornelia, que la salud y contento de vuestro hermano y el del duque llevo puestos en las niñas de mis ojos; yo miraré por ellos como por ellas.

-Si así os da el cielo, señor don Juan -respondió Cornelia-, poder para remediar como gracia para consolar, en medio destos mis trabajos me cuento por bien afortunada. Ya querría veros ir y volver, por más que el temor me aflija en vuestra ausencia o la esperanza me suspenda.

Don Antonio aprobó la determinación de don Juan y le alabó la buena correspondencia que en él había hallado la confianza de Lorenzo Bentibolli. Díjole más: que él quería ir a acompañarlos, por lo que podía suceder.

-Eso no -dijo don Juan-: así porque no será bien que la señora Cornelia quede sola, como porque no piense el señor Lorenzo que me quiero valer de esfuerzos ajenos.

-El mío es el vuestro mismo -replicó don Antonio-; y así, aunque sea desconocido y desde lejos, os tengo de seguir, que la señora Cornelia sé que gustará dello, y no queda tan sola que le falte quien la sirva, la guarde y acompañe.

A lo cual Cornelia dijo:

-Gran consuelo será para mí, señores, si sé que vais juntos, o a lo menos de modo que os favorezcáis el uno al otro si el caso lo pidiere; y, pues al que vais a mí se me semeja ser de peligro, hacedme merced, señores, de llevar estas reliquias con vosotros.

Y, diciendo esto, sacó del seno una cruz de diamantes de inestimable valor y un agnus de oro tan rico como la cruz. Miraron los dos las ricas joyas, y apreciáronlas aún más que lo que habían apreciado el cintillo; pero volviéronselas, no queriendo tomarlas en ninguna manera, diciendo que ellos llevarían reliquias consigo, si no tan bien adornadas, a lo menos en su calidad tan buenas. Pesóle a Cornelia el no aceptarlas, pero al fin hubo de estar a lo que ellos querían.

El ama tenía gran cuidado de regalar a Cornelia, y, sabiendo la partida de sus amos (de que le dieron cuenta, pero no a lo que iban ni adónde iban), se encargó de mirar por la señora, cuyo nombre aún no sabía, de manera que sus mercedes no hiciesen falta. Otro día, bien de mañana, ya estaba Lorenzo a la puerta, y don Juan de camino con el sombrero del cintillo, a quien adornó de plumas negras y amarillas, y cubrió el cintillo con una toquilla negra. Despidióse de Cornelia, la cual, imaginando que tenía a su hermano tan cerca, estaba tan temerosa que no acertó a decir palabra a los dos, que della se despidieron.

Salió primero don Juan, y con Lorenzo se fue fuera de la ciudad, y en una huerta algo desviada hallaron dos muy buenos caballos, con dos mozos que de diestro los tenían. Subieron en ellos y, los mozos delante, por sendas y caminos desusados caminaron a Ferrara. Don Antonio sobre un cuartago suyo, y otro vestido y disimulado, los seguía, pero parecióle que se recataban dél, especialmente Lorenzo; y así, acordó de seguir el camino derecho de Ferrara, con seguridad que allí los encontraría.

Apenas hubieron salido de la ciudad, cuando Cornelia dio cuenta al ama de todos sus sucesos, y de cómo aquel niño era suyo y del duque de Ferrara, con todos los puntos que hasta aquí se han contado tocantes a su historia, no encubriéndole cómo el viaje que llevaban sus señores era a Ferrara, acompañando a su hermano, que iba a desafiar al duque Alfonso. Oyendo lo cual el ama (como si el demonio se lo mandara, para intricar, estorbar o dilatar el remedio de Cornelia), dijo:

-¡Ay señora de mi alma! ¿Y todas esas cosas han pasado por vos y estáis os aquí descuidada y a pierna tendida? O no tenéis alma, o tenéisla tan desmazalada que no siente. ¿Cómo, y pensáis vos por ventura que vuestro hermano va a Ferrara? No lo penséis, sino pensad y creed que ha querido llevar a mis amos de aquí y ausentarlos desta casa para volver a ella y quitaros la vida, que lo podrá hacer como quien bebe un jarro de agua. Mirá debajo de qué guarda y amparo quedamos, sino en la de tres pajes, que harto tienen ellos que hacer en rascarse la sarna de que están llenos que en meterse en dibujos; a lo menos, de mí sé decir que no tendré ánimo para esperar el suceso y ruina que a esta casa amenaza. ¡El señor Lorenzo, italiano, y que se fíe de españoles, y les pida favor y ayuda; para mi ojo si tal crea! -y diose ella misma una higa-; si vos, hija mía, quisiédeses tomar mi consejo, yo os le daría tal que os luciese.

Pasmada, atónita y confusa estaba Cornelia oyendo las razones del ama, que las decía con tanto ahínco y con tantas muestras de temor, que le pareció ser todo verdad lo que le decía, y quizá estaban muertos don Juan y don Antonio, y que su hermano entraba por aquellas puertas y la cosía a puñaladas; y así, le dijo:

-¿Y qué consejo me daríades vos, amiga, que fuese saludable y que previniese la sobrestante desventura?

-Y cómo que le daré, tal y tan bueno que no pueda mejorarse -dijo el ama-. Yo, señora, he servido a un piovano; a un cura, digo, de una aldea que está dos millas de Ferrara; es una persona santa y buena, y que hará por mí todo lo que yo le pidiere, porque me tiene obligación más que de amo. Vámonos allá, que yo buscaré quien nos lleve luego, y la que viene a dar de mamar al niño es mujer pobre y se irá con nosotras al cabo del mundo. Y ya, señora, que presupongamos que has de ser hallada, mejor será que te hallen en casa de un sacerdote de misa, viejo y honrado, que en poder de dos estudiantes, mozos y españoles; que los tales, como yo soy buen testigo, no desechan ripio. Y agora, señora, como estás mala, te han guardado respecto; pero si sanas y convaleces en su poder, Dios lo podrá remediar, porque en verdad que si a mí no me hubieran guardado mis repulsas, desdenes y enterezas, ya hubieran dado conmigo y con mi honra al traste; porque no es todo oro lo que en ellos reluce: uno dicen y otro piensan; pero hanlo habido conmigo, que soy taimada y sé dó me aprieta el zapato; y sobre todo soy bien nacida, que soy de los Cribelos de Milán, y tengo el punto de la honra diez millas más allá de las nubes. Y en esto se podrá echar de ver, señora mía, las calamidades que por mí han pasado, pues con ser quien soy, he venido a ser masara de españoles, a quien ellos llaman ama; aunque a la verdad no tengo de qué quejarme de mis amos, porque son unos benditos, como no estén enojados, y en esto parecen vizcaínos, como ellos dicen que lo son. Pero quizá para consigo serán gallegos, que es otra nación, según es fama, algo menos puntual y bien mirada que la vizcaína.

En efeto, tantas y tales razones le dijo, que la pobre Cornelia se dispuso a seguir su parecer; y así, en menos de cuatro horas, disponiéndolo el ama y consintiéndolo ella, se vieron dentro de una carroza las dos y la ama del niño, y, sin ser sentidas de los pajes, se pusieron en camino para la aldea del cura; y todo esto se hizo a persuasión del ama y con sus dineros, porque había poco que la habían pagado sus señores un año de su sueldo, y así no fue menester empeñar una joya que Cornelia le daba. Y, como habían oído decir a don Juan que él y su hermano no habían de seguir el camino derecho de Ferrara, sino por sendas apartadas, quisieron ellas seguir el derecho, y poco a poco, por no encontrarse con ellos; y el dueño de la carroza se acomodó al paso de la voluntad de ellas porque le pagaron al gusto de la suya.

Dejémoslas ir, que ellas van tan atrevidas como bien encaminadas, y sepamos qué les sucedió a don Juan de Gamboa y al señor Lorenzo Bentibolli; de los cuales se dice que en el camino supieron que el duque no estaba en Ferrara, sino en Bolonia. Y así, dejando el rodeo que llevaban, se vinieron al camino real, o a la estrada maestra, como allá se dice, considerando que aquélla había de traer el duque cuando de Bolonia volviese. Y, a poco espacio que en ella habían entrado, habiendo tendido la vista hacia Bolonia por ver si por él alguno venía, vieron un tropel de gente de a caballo; y entonces dijo don Juan a Lorenzo que se desviase del camino, porque si acaso entre aquella gente viniese el duque, le quería hablar allí antes que se encerrase en Ferrara, que estaba poco distante. Hízolo así Lorenzo, y aprobó el parecer de don Juan.

Así como se apartó Lorenzo, quitó don Juan la toquilla que encubría el rico cintillo, y esto no sin falta de discreto discurso, como él después lo dijo. En esto, llegó la tropa de los caminantes, y entre ellos venía una mujer sobre una pía, vestida de camino y el rostro cubierto con una mascarilla, o por mejor encubrirse, o por guardarse del sol y del aire. Paró el caballo don Juan en medio del camino, y estuvo con el rostro descubierto a que llegasen los caminantes; y, en llegando cerca, el talle, el brío, el poderoso caballo, la bizarría del vestido y las luces de los diamantes llevaron tras sí los ojos de cuantos allí venían: especialmente los del duque de Ferrara, que era uno dellos, el cual, como puso los ojos en el cintillo, luego se dio a entender que el que le traía era don Juan de Gamboa, el que le había librado en la pendencia; y tan de veras aprehendió esta verdad que, sin hacer otro discurso, arremetió su caballo hacia don Juan diciendo:

-No creo que me engañaré en nada, señor caballero, si os llamo don Juan de Gamboa, que vuestra gallarda disposición y el adorno dese capelo me lo están diciendo.

-Así es la verdad -respondió don Juan-, porque jamás supe ni quise encubrir mi nombre; pero decidme, señor, quién sois, por que yo no caiga en alguna descortesía.

-Eso será imposible -respondió el duque-, que para mí tengo que no podéis ser descortés en ningún caso. Con todo eso os digo, señor don Juan, que yo soy el duque de Ferrara y el que está obligado a serviros todos los días de su vida, pues no ha cuatro noches que vos se la distes.

No acabó de decir esto el duque cuando don Juan, con estraña ligereza, saltó del caballo y acudió a besar los pies del duque; pero, por presto que llegó, ya el duque estaba fuera de la silla, de modo que le acabó de apearse en brazos don Juan. El señor Lorenzo, que desde algo lejos miraba estas ceremonias, no pensando que lo eran de cortesía, sino de cólera, arremetió su caballo; pero en la mitad del repelón le detuvo, porque vio abrazados muy estrechamente al duque y a don Juan, que ya había conocido al duque. El duque, por cima de los hombros de don Juan, miró a Lorenzo y conociólo, de cuyo conocimiento algún tanto se sobresaltó, y así como estaba abrazado preguntó a don Juan si Lorenzo Bentibolli, que allí estaba, venía con él o no. A lo cual don Juan respondió:

-Apartémonos algo de aquí y contaréle a Vuestra Excelencia grandes cosas.

Hízolo así el duque y don Juan le dijo:

-Señor, Lorenzo Bentibolli, que allí veis, tiene una queja de vos no pequeña: dice que habrá cuatro noches que le sacastes a su hermana, la señora Cornelia, de casa de una prima suya, y que la habéis engañado y deshonorado, y quiere saber de vos qué satisfacción le pensáis hacer, para que él vea lo que le conviene. Pidióme que fuese su valedor y medianero; yo se lo ofrecí, porque, por los barruntos que él me dio de la pendencia, conocí que vos, señor, érades el dueño deste cintillo, que por liberalidad y cortesía vuestra quisistes que fuese mío; y, viendo que ninguno podía hacer vuestras partes mejor que yo, como ya he dicho, le ofrecí mi ayuda. Querría yo agora, señor, me dijédes lo que sabéis acerca deste caso y si es verdad lo que Lorenzo dice.

-¡Ay amigo! -respondió el duque-, es tan verdad que no me atrevería a negarla aunque quisiese; yo no he engañado ni sacado a Cornelia, aunque sé que falta de la casa que dice; no la he engañado, porque la tengo por mi esposa; no la he sacado, porque no sé della; si públicamente no celebré mis desposorios, fue porque aguardaba que mi madre (que está ya en lo último) pasase ésta a mejor vida, que tiene deseo que sea mi esposa la señora Livia, hija del duque de Mantua, y por otros inconvenientes quizá más eficaces que los dichos, y no conviene que ahora se digan. Lo que pasa es que la noche que me socorristes la había de traer a Ferrara, porque estaba ya en el mes de dar a luz la prenda que ordenó el cielo que en ella depositase; o ya fuese por la riña, o ya por mi descuido, cuando llegué a su casa hallé que salía della la secretaria de nuestros conciertos. Preguntéle por Cornelia, díjome que ya había salido, y que aquella noche había parido un niño, el más bello del mundo, y que se le había dado a un Fabio, mi criado. La doncella es aquella que allí viene; el Fabio está aquí, y el niño y Cornelia no parecen. Yo he estado estos dos días en Bolonia, esperando y escudriñando oír algunas nuevas de Cornelia, pero no he sentido nada.

-Dese modo, señor -dijo don Juan-, cuando Cornelia y vuestro hijo pareciesen, ¿no negaréis ser vuestra esposa y él vuestro hijo?

-No, por cierto; porque, aunque me precio de caballero, más me precio de cristiano; y más, que Cornelia es tal que merece ser señora de un reino. Pareciese ella, y viva o muera mi madre, que el mundo sabrá que si supe ser amante, supe la fe que di en secreto guardarla en público.

-Luego, ¿bien diréis -dijo don Juan- lo que a mí me habéis dicho a vuestro hermano el señor Lorenzo?

-Antes me pesa -respondió el duque- de que tarde tanto en saberlo.

Al instante hizo don Juan de señas a Lorenzo, que se apease y viniese donde ellos estaban, como lo hizo, bien ajeno de pensar la buena nueva que le esperaba. Adelantóse el duque a recibirle con los brazos abiertos, y la primera palabra que le dijo fue llamarle hermano.

Apenas supo Lorenzo responder a salutación tan amorosa ni a tan cortés recibimiento; y, estando así suspenso, antes que hablase palabra, don Juan le dijo:

-El duque, señor Lorenzo, confiesa la conversación secreta que ha tenido con vuestra hermana, la señora Cornelia. Confiesa asimismo que es su legítima esposa, y que, como lo dice aquí, lo dirá públicamente cuando se ofreciere. Concede, asimismo, que fue ha cuatro noches a sacarla de casa de su prima para traerla a Ferrara y aguardar coyuntura de celebrar sus bodas, que las ha dilatado por justísimas causas que me ha dicho. Dice, asimismo, la pendencia que con vos tuvo, y que cuando fue por Cornelia encontró con Sulpicia, su doncella, que es aquella mujer que allí viene, de quien supo que Cornelia no había una hora que había parido, y que ella dio la criatura a un criado del duque, y que luego Cornelia, creyendo que estaba allí el duque, había salido de casa medrosa, porque imaginaba que ya vos, señor Lorenzo, sabíades sus tratos. Sulpicia no dio el niño al criado del duque, sino a otro en su cambio. Cornelia no parece, él se culpa de todo, y dice que, cada y cuando que la señora Cornelia parezca, la recibirá como a su verdadera esposa. Mirad, señor Lorenzo, si hay más que decir ni más que desear si no es el hallazgo de las dos tan ricas como desgraciadas prendas.

A esto respondió el señor Lorenzo, arrojándose a los pies del duque, que porfiaba por levantarlo:

-De vuestra cristiandad y grandeza, serenísimo señor y hermano mío, no podíamos mi hermana y yo esperar menor bien del que a entrambos nos hacéis: a ella, en igualarla con vos, y a mí, en ponerme en el número de vuestro.

Ya en esto se le arrasaban los ojos de lágrimas, y al duque lo mismo, enternecidos, el uno, con la pérdida de su esposa, y el otro, con el hallazgo de tan buen cuñado; pero consideraron que parecía flaqueza dar muestras con lágrimas de tanto sentimiento, las reprimieron y volvieron a encerrar en los ojos, y los de don Juan, alegres, casi les pedían las albricias de haber parecido Cornelia y su hijo, pues los dejaba en su misma casa.

En esto estaban, cuando se descubrió don Antonio de Isunza, que fue conocido de don Juan en el cuartago desde algo lejos; pero cuando llegó cerca se paró y vio los caballos de don Juan y de Lorenzo, que los mozos tenían de diestro y acullá desviados. Conoció a don Juan y a Lorenzo, pero no al duque, y no sabía qué hacerse, si llegaría o no adonde don Juan estaba. Llegándose a los criados del duque, les preguntó si conocían aquel caballero que con los otros dos estaba, señalando al duque. Fuele respondido ser el duque de Ferrara, con que quedó más confuso y menos sin saber qué hacerse, pero sacóle de su perplejidad don Juan, llamándole por su nombre. Apeóse don Antonio, viendo que todos estaban a pie, y llegóse a ellos; recibióle el duque con mucha cortesía, porque don Juan le dijo que era su camarada. Finalmente, don Juan contó a don Antonio todo lo que con el duque le había sucedido hasta que él llegó. Alegróse en extremo don Antonio, y dijo a don Juan:

-¿Por qué, señor don Juan, no acabáis de poner la alegría y el contento destos señores en su punto, pidiendo las albricias del hallazgo de la señora Cornelia y de su hijo?

-Si vos no llegarades, señor don Antonio, yo las pidiera; pero pedidlas vos, que yo seguro que os las den de muy buena gana.

Como el duque y Lorenzo oyeron tratar del hallazgo de Cornelia y de albricias, preguntaron qué era aquello.

-¿Qué ha de ser -respondió don Antonio-sino que yo quiero hacer un personaje en esta trágica comedia, y ha de ser el que pide las albricias del hallazgo de la señora Cornelia y de su hijo, que quedan en mi casa?

Y luego les contó punto por punto todo lo que hasta aquí se ha dicho, de lo cual el duque y el señor Lorenzo recibieron tanto placer y gusto, que don Lorenzo se abrazó con don Juan y el duque con don Antonio. El duque prometió todo su estado en albricias, y el señor Lorenzo su hacienda, su vida y su alma. Llamaron a la doncella que entregó a don Juan la criatura, la cual, habiendo conocido a Lorenzo, estaba temblando. Preguntáronle si conocería al hombre a quien había dado el niño; dijo que no, sino que ella le había preguntado si era

Fabio, y él había respondido que sí, y con esta buena fe se le había entregado.

-Así es la verdad -respondió don Juan-; y vos, señora, cerrastes la puerta luego, y me dijistes que la pusiese en cobro y diese luego la vuelta.

-Así es, señor -respondió la doncella llorando.

Y el duque dijo:

-Ya no son menester lágrimas aquí, sino júbilos y fiestas. El caso es que yo no tengo de entrar en Ferrara, sino dar la vuelta luego a Bolonia, porque todos estos contentos son en sombra hasta que los haga verdaderos la vista de Cornelia.

Y sin más decir, de común consentimiento, dieron la vuelta a Bolonia.

Adelantóse don Antonio para apercebir a Cornelia, por no sobresaltarla con la improvisa llegada del duque y de su hermano; pero, como no la halló ni los pajes le supieron decir nuevas della, quedó el más triste y confuso hombre del mundo; y, como vio que faltaba el ama, imaginó que por su industria faltaba Cornelia. Los pajes le dijeron que faltó el ama el mismo día que ellos habían faltado, y que la Cornelia por quien preguntaba nunca ellos la vieron. Fuera de sí quedó don Antonio con el no pensado caso, temiendo que quizá el duque los tendría por mentirosos o embusteros, o quizá imaginaría otras peores cosas que redundasen en perjuicio de su honra y del buen crédito de Cornelia. En esta imaginación estaba, cuando entraron el duque, y don Juan y Lorenzo, que por calles desusadas y encubiertas, dejando la demás gente fuera de la ciudad, llegaron a la casa de don Juan, y hallaron a don Antonio sentado en una silla, con la mano en la mejilla y con una color de muerto.

Preguntóle don Juan qué mal tenía y adónde estaba Cornelia.

Respondió don Antonio:

-¿Qué mal queréis que no tenga? Pues Cornelia no parece, que con el ama que le dejamos para su compañía, el mismo día que de aquí faltamos, faltó ella.

Poco le faltó al duque para espirar, y a Lorenzo para desesperarse, oyendo tales nuevas. Finalmente, todos quedaron turbados, suspensos e imaginativos. En esto, se llegó un paje a don Antonio y al oído le dijo:

-Señor, Santisteban, el paje del señor don Juan, desde el día que vuesas mercedes se fueron, tiene una mujer muy bonita encerrada en su aposento, y yo creo que se llama Cornelia, que así la he oído llamar.

Alborotóse de nuevo don Antonio, y más quisiera que no hubiera parecido Cornelia, que sin duda pensó que era la que el paje tenía escondida, que no que la hallaran en tal lugar. Con todo eso no dijo nada, sino callando se fue al aposento del paje, y halló cerrada la puerta y que el paje no estaba en casa. Llegóse a la puerta y dijo con voz baja:

-Abrid, señora Cornelia, y salid a recibir a vuestro hermano y al duque vuestro esposo, que vienen a buscaros.

Respondiéronle de dentro:

-¿Hacen burla de mí? Pues en verdad que no soy tan fea ni tan desechada que no podían buscarme duques y condes, y eso se merece la presona que trata con pajes.

Por las cuales palabra entendió don Antonio que no era Cornelia la que respondía. Estando en esto, vino Santisteban el paje, y acudió luego a su aposento, y, hallando allí a don Antonio, que pedía que le trujesen las llaves que había en casa, por ver si alguna hacía a la puerta, el paje, hincado de rodillas y con la llave en la mano, le dijo:

-El ausencia de vuestas mercedes, y mi bellaquería, por mejor decir, me hizo traer una mujer estas tres noches a estar conmigo. Suplico a vuesa merced, señor don Antonio de Isunza, así oiga buenas nuevas de España, que si no lo sabe mi señor don Juan de Gamboa que no se lo diga, que yo la echaré al momento.

-Y ¿cómo se llama la tal mujer? -preguntó don Antonio.

-Llámase Cornelia -respondió el paje.

El paje que había descubierto la celada, que no era muy amigo de Santisteban, ni se sabe si simplemente o con malicia, bajó donde estaban el duque, don Juan y Lorenzo, diciendo:

-Tómame el paje, por Dios, que le han hecho gormar a la señora Cornelia; escondidita la tenía; a buen seguro que no quisiera él que hubieran venido los señores para alargar más el gaudeamus tres o cuatro días más.

Oyó esto Lorenzo y preguntóle:

-¿Qué es lo que decís, gentilhombre? ¿Dónde está Cornelia?

-Arriba -respondió el paje.

Apenas oyó esto el duque, cuando como un rayo subió la escalera arriba a ver a Cornelia, que imaginó que había parecido, y dio luego con el aposento donde estaba don Antonio, y, entrando, dijo:

-¿Dónde está Cornelia, adónde está la vida de la vida mía?

-Aquí está Cornelia -respondió una mujer que estaba envuelta en una sábana de la cama y cubierto el rostro, y prosiguió diciendo:- ¡Váلامos Dios! ¿Es éste algún buey de hurto? ¿Es cosa nueva dormir una mujer con un paje, para hacer tantos milagrones?

Lorenzo, que estaba presente, con despecho y cólera tiró de un cabo de la sábana y descubrió una mujer moza y no de mal parecer, la cual, de vergüenza, se puso las manos delante del rostro y acudió a tomar sus vestidos, que le servían de almohada, porque la cama no la tenía, y en ellos vieron que debía de ser alguna pícara de las perdidas del mundo.

Preguntóle el duque que si era verdad que se llamaba Cornelia; respondió que sí y que tenía muy honrados parientes en la ciudad, y que nadie dijese «desta agua no beberé». Quedó tan corrido el duque, que casi estuvo por pensar si hacían los españoles burla dél; pero, por no dar lugar a tan mala sospecha, volvió las espaldas, y, sin hablar palabra, siguiéndole Lorenzo, subieron en sus caballos y se fueron, dejando a don Juan y a don Antonio hartos más corridos que ellos iban; y determinaron de hacer las diligencias posibles y aun imposibles en buscar a Cornelia, y satisfacer al duque de su verdad y buen deseo. Despidieron a Santisteban por atrevido, y echaron a la pícara Cornelia, y en aquel punto se les vino a la memoria que se les había olvidado de decir al duque las joyas del agnus y la cruz de diamantes que Cornelia les había ofrecido, pues con estas señas creería que Cornelia había estado en su poder y que si faltaba, no había estado en su mano. Salieron a decirle esto, pero no le hallaron en casa de Lorenzo, donde creyeron que estaría. A Lorenzo sí, el cual les dijo que, sin detenerse un punto, se había vuelto a Ferrara, dejándole orden de buscar a su hermana.

Dijéronle lo que iban a decirle, pero Lorenzo les dijo que el duque iba muy satisfecho de su buen proceder, y que entrambos habían echado la falta de Cornelia a su mucho miedo, y que Dios sería servido de que pareciese, pues no había de haber tragado la tierra al niño y al ama y a ella. Con esto se consolaron todos y no quisieron hacer la inquisición de buscalla por bandos públicos, sino por diligencias secretas, pues de nadie sino de su prima se sabía su falta; y entre los que no sabían la intención del duque correría riesgo el crédito de su hermana si la pregonasen, y ser gran trabajo andar satisfaciendo a cada uno de las sospechas que una vehemente presunción les infunde.

Siguió su viaje el duque, y la buena suerte, que iba disponiendo su ventura, hizo que llegase a la aldea del cura, donde ya estaban Cornelia, el niño y su ama y la consejera; y ellas le habían dado cuenta de su vida y pedídole consejo de lo que harían.

Era el cura grande amigo del duque, en cuya casa, acomodada a lo de clérigo rico y curioso, solía el duque venirse desde Ferrara muchas veces, y desde allí salía a caza, porque gustaba mucho, así de la curiosidad del cura como de su donaire, que le tenía en cuanto decía y hacía. No se alborotó por ver al duque en su casa, porque, como se ha dicho, no era la vez primera; pero descontentóle verle venir triste, porque luego echó de ver que con alguna pasión traía ocupado el ánimo.

Entreoyó Cornelia que el duque de Ferrara estaba allí y turbóse en extremo, por no saber con qué intención venía; torcíase las manos y andaba de una parte a otra, como persona fuera de sentido. Quisiera hablar Cornelia al cura, pero estaba entreteniendo al duque y no tenía lugar de hablarle.

El duque le dijo:

-Yo vengo, padre mío, tristísimo, y no quiero hoy entrar en Ferrara, sino ser vuestro huésped; decid a los que vienen conmigo que pasen a Ferrara y que sólo se quede Fabio.

Hízolo así el buen cura, y luego fue a dar orden cómo regalar y servir al duque; y con esta ocasión le pudo hablar Cornelia, la cual, tomándole de las manos, le dijo:

-¡Ay, padre y señor mío! Y ¿qué es lo que quiere el duque? Por amor de Dios, señor, que le dé algún toque en mi negocio, y procure descubrir y tomar algún indicio de su intención; en efeto, guíelo como mejor le pareciere y su mucha discreción le aconsejare.

A esto le respondió el cura:

-El duque viene triste; hasta agora no me ha dicha la causa. Lo que se ha de hacer es que luego se aderece ese niño muy bien, y ponedle, señora, las joyas todas que tuviéredes, principalmente las que os hubiere dado el duque, y dejadme hacer, que yo espero en el cielo que hemos de tener hoy un buen día.

Abrázole Cornelia y besóle la mano, y retiróse a aderezar y componer el niño. El cura salió a entretener al duque en tanto que se hacía hora de comer, y en el discurso de su plática preguntó el cura al duque si era posible saberse la causa de su melancolía, porque sin duda de una legua se echaba de ver que estaba triste.

-Padre -respondió el duque-, claro está que las tristezas del corazón salen al rostro; en los ojos se lee la relación de lo que está en el alma, y lo que peor es, que por ahora no puedo comunicar mi tristeza con nadie.

-Pues en verdad, señor -respondió el cura-, que si estuviérades para ver cosas de gusto, que os enseñara yo una, que tengo para mí que os le causara y grande.

-Simple sería -respondió el duque-aquél que, ofreciéndole el alivio de su mal, no quisiese recibirle. Por vida mía, padre, que me mostréis eso que decís, que debe de ser alguna de vuestras curiosidades, que para mí son todas de grandísimo gusto.

Levantóse el cura y fue donde estaba Cornelia, que ya tenía adornado a su hijo y puéstole las ricas joyas de la cruz y del agnus, con otras tres piezas preciosísimas, todas dadas del duque a Cornelia; y, tomando al niño entre sus brazos, salió adonde el duque estaba, y, diciéndole que se levantara y se llegase a la claridad de una ventana, quitó al niño de sus brazos y le puso en los del duque, el cual, cuando miró y reconoció las joyas y vio que eran las mismas que él había dado a Cornelia, quedó atónito; y, mirando ahincadamente al niño, le pareció que miraba su mismo retrato, y lleno de admiración preguntó al cura cuya era aquella criatura, que en su adorno y aderezo parecía hijo de algún príncipe.

-No sé -respondió el cura-; sólo sé que habrá no sé cuántas noches que aquí me le trujo un caballero de Bolonia, y me encargó mirase por él y le criase, que era hijo de un valeroso padre y de una principal y hermosísima madre. También vino con el caballero una mujer para dar leche al niño, a quien he yo preguntado si sabe algo de los padres desta criatura, y responde que no sabe palabra; y en verdad que si la madre es tan hermosa como el ama, que debe de ser la más hermosa mujer de Italia.

-¿No la veríamos? -preguntó el duque.

-Sí, por cierto -respondió el cura-; veníos, señor, conmigo, que si os suspende el adorno y la belleza desa criatura, como creo que os ha suspendido, el mismo efeto entiendo que ha de hacer la vista de su ama.

Quísole tomar la criatura el cura al duque, pero él no la quiso dejar, antes la apretó en sus brazos y le dio muchos besos. Adelantóse el cura un poco, y dijo a Cornelia que saliese sin turbación alguna a recebir al duque. Hízolo así Cornelia, y con el sobresalto le salieron tales colores al rostro, que sobre el modo mortal la hermosearon. Pasmóse el duque cuando la vio, y ella, arrojándose a sus pies, se los quiso besar. El duque, sin hablar palabra, dio el niño al cura, y, volviendo las espaldas, se salió con gran priesa del aposento. Lo cual visto por Cornelia, volviéndose al cura, dijo:

-¡Ay señor mío! ¿Si se ha espantado el duque de verme? ¿Si me tiene aborrecida? ¿Si le he parecido fea? ¿Si se le han olvidado las obligaciones que me tiene? ¿No me hablará siquiera una palabra? ¿Tanto le cansaba ya su hijo que así le arrojó de sus brazos?

A todo lo cual no respondía palabra el cura, admirado de la huida del duque, que así le pareció, que fuese huida antes que otra cosa; y no fue sino que salió a llamar a Fabio y decirle:

-Corre, Fabio amigo, y a toda diligencia vuelve a Bolonia y di que al momento Lorenzo Bentibolli y los dos caballeros españoles, don Juan de Gamboa y don Antonio de Isunza, sin poner escusa alguna, vengan luego a esta aldea. Mira, amigo, que vuelas y no te vengas sin ellos, que me importa la vida el verlos.

No fue perezoso Fabio, que luego puso en efeto el mandamiento de su señor.

El duque volvió luego a donde Cornelia estaba derramando hermosas lágrimas. Cogióla el duque en sus brazos, y, añadiendo lágrimas a lágrimas, mil veces le bebió el aliento de la boca, teniéndoles el contento atadas las lenguas. Y así, en silencio honesto y amoroso, se gozaban los dos felices amantes y esposos verdaderos.

El ama del niño y la Cribela, por lo menos como ella decía, que por entre las puertas de otro aposento habían estado mirando lo que entre el duque y Cornelia pasaba, de gozo se daban de calabazadas por las paredes, que no parecía sino que habían perdido el juicio. El cura daba mil besos al niño, que tenía en sus brazos, y, con la mano derecha, que desocupó, no se hartaba de echar bendiciones a los dos abrazados señores. El ama del cura, que no se había hallado presente al grave caso por estar ocupada aderezando la comida, cuando la tuvo en su punto, entró a llamarlos que se sentasen a la mesa. Esto apartó los estrechos abrazos, y el duque desembarazó al cura del niño y le tomó en sus brazos, y en ellos le tuvo todo el tiempo que duró la limpia y bien sazónada, más que sumptuosa comida; y, en tanto que comían, dio cuenta Cornelia de todo lo que le había sucedido hasta venir a aquella casa por consejo de la ama de los dos caballeros españoles, que la habían servido, amparado y guardado con el más honesto y puntual decoro que pudiera imaginarse. El duque le contó asimismo a ella todo lo que por él había pasado hasta aquel punto. Halláronse presentes las dos amas, y hallaron en el duque grandes ofrecimientos y promesas. En todos se renovó el gusto con el felice fin del suceso, y sólo esperaban a colmarle y a ponerle en el estado mejor que acertara a desearse con la venida de Lorenzo, de don Juan y don Antonio, los cuales de allí a tres días vinieron desalados y deseosos por saber si alguna nueva sabía el duque de Cornelia; que Fabio, que los fue a llamar, no les pudo decir ninguna cosa de su hallazgo, pues no la sabía.

Saliólos a recibir el duque una sala antes de donde estaba Cornelia, y esto sin muestras de contento alguno, de que los recién venidos se entristecieron. Hízolos sentar el duque, y él se sentó con ellos, y, encaminando su plática a Lorenzo, le dijo:

-Bien sabéis, señor Lorenzo Bentibolli, que yo jamás engañé a vuestra hermana, de lo que es buen testigo el cielo y mi conciencia. Sabéis asimismo la diligencia con que la he buscado y el deseo que he tenido de hallarla para casarme con ella, como se lo tengo prometido. Ella no parece y mi palabra no ha de ser eterna. Yo soy mozo, y no tan experto en las cosas del mundo, que no me deje llevar de las que me ofrece el deleite a cada paso. La misma afición que me hizo prometer ser esposo de Cornelia me llevó también a dar antes que a ella palabra de matrimonio a una labradora desta aldea, a quien pensaba dejar burlada por acudir al valor de Cornelia, aunque no acudiera a lo que la conciencia me pedía, que no fuera pequeña muestra de amor. Pero, pues nadie se casa con mujer que no parece, ni es cosa puesta en razón que nadie busque la mujer que le deja, por no hallar la prenda que le aborrece, digo que veáis, señor Lorenzo, qué satisfacción puedo daros del agravio que no os hice, pues jamás tuve intención de hacérosle, y luego quiero que me deis licencia para cumplir mi primera palabra y desposarme con la labradora, que ya está dentro desta casa.

En tanto que el duque esto decía, el rostro de Lorenzo se iba mudando de mil colores, y no acertaba a estar sentado de una manera en la silla: señales claras que la cólera le iba tomando posesión de todos sus sentidos. Lo mismo pasaba por don Juan y por don Antonio, que luego propusieron de no dejar salir al duque con su intención aunque le quitasen la vida. Leyendo, pues, el duque en sus rostros sus intenciones, dijo:

-Sosegaos, señor Lorenzo, que, antes que me respondáis palabra, quiero que la hermosura que veréis en la que quiero recibir por mi esposa os obligue a darme la licencia que os pido; porque es tal y tan estremada, que de mayores yerros será disculpa.

Esto dicho, se levantó y entró donde Cornelia estaba riquísimamente adornada, con todas la joyas que el niño tenía y muchas más. Cuando el duque volvió las espaldas, se levantó don Juan, y, puestas ambas manos en los dos brazos de la silla donde estaba sentado Lorenzo, al oído le dijo:

-Por Santiago de Galicia, señor Lorenzo, y por la fe de cristiano y de caballero que tengo, que así deje yo salir con su intención al duque como volverme moro. ¡Aquí, aquí y en mis manos ha de dejar la vida, o ha de cumplir la palabra que a la señora Cornelia, vuestra hermana, tiene dada, o a lo menos nos ha de dar tiempo de buscarla, y hasta que de cierto se sepa que es muerta, él no ha de casarse!

-Yo estoy dese parecer mismo -respondió Lorenzo.

-Pues del mismo estará mi camarada don Antonio -replicó don Juan.

En esto, entró por la sala adelante Cornelia, en medio del cura y del duque, que la traía de la mano, detrás de los cuales venían Sulpicia, la doncella de Cornelia, que el duque había enviado por ella a Ferrara, y las dos amas, del niño y la de los caballeros.

Cuando Lorenzo vio a su hermana, y la acabó de rafigurar y conocer, que al principio la imposibilidad, a su parecer, de tal suceso no le dejaba enterar en la verdad, tropezando en sus mismos pies, fue a arrojarle a los brazos del duque, que le levantó y le puso en los brazos de su hermana; quiero decir que su hermana le abrazó con las muestras de alegría posibles. Don Juan y don Antonio dijeron al duque que había sido la más discreta y más sabrosa burla del mundo. El duque tomó al niño, que Sulpicia traía, y dándosele a Lorenzo le dijo:

-Recebid, señor hermano, a vuestro sobrino y mi hijo, y ved si queréis darme licencia que me case con esta labradora, que es la primera a quien he dado palabra de casamiento.

Sería nunca acabar contar lo que respondió Lorenzo, lo que preguntó don Juan, lo que sintió don Antonio, el regocijo del cura, la alegría de Sulpicia, el contento de la consejera, el júbilo del ama, la admiración de Fabio y, finalmente, el general contento de todos.

Luego el cura los desposó, siendo su padrino don Juan de Gamboa; y entre todos se dio traza que aquellos desposorios estuviesen secretos, hasta ver en qué paraba la enfermedad que tenía muy al cabo a la duquesa su madre, y que en tanto la señora Cornelia se volviese a Bolonia con su hermano. Todo se hizo así; la duquesa murió, Cornelia entró en Ferrara, alegrando al mundo con su vista, los lutos se volvieron en galas, las amas quedaron ricas, Sulpicia por mujer de Fabio, don Antonio y don Juan contentísimos de haber servido en algo al duque, el cual les ofreció dos primas suyas por mujeres con riquísima dote. Ellos dijeron que los caballeros de la nación vizcaína por la mayor parte se casaban en su patria; y que no por menosprecio, pues no era posible, sino por cumplir su loable costumbre y la voluntad de sus padres, que ya los debían de tener casados, no aceptaban tan ilustre ofrecimiento.

El duque admitió su disculpa, y, por modos honestos y honrosos, y buscando ocasiones lícitas, les envió muchos presentes a Bolonia, y algunos tan ricos y enviados a tan buena sazón y coyuntura, que, aunque pudieran no admitirse, por no parecer que recibían paga, el tiempo en que llegaban lo facilitaba todo: especialmente los que les envió al tiempo de su partida para España, y los que les dio cuando fueron a Ferrara a despedirse dél; ya hallaron a Cornelia con otras dos criaturas hembras, y al duque más enamorado que nunca. La duquesa dio la cruz de diamantes a don Juan y el agnus a don Antonio, que, sin ser poderosos a hacer otra cosa, las recibieron.

Llegaron a España y a su tierra, adonde se casaron con ricas, principales y hermosas mujeres, y siempre tuvieron correspondencia con el duque y la duquesa y con el señor Lorenzo Bentibolli, con grandísimo gusto de todos.

El casamiento engañoso

SALÍA del Hospital de la Resurrección, que está en Valladolid, fuera de la Puerta del Campo, un soldado que, por servirle su espada de báculo y por la flaqueza de sus piernas y amarillez de su rostro, mostraba bien claro que, aunque no era el tiempo muy caluroso, debía de haber sudado en veinte días todo el humor que quizá granjeó en una hora. Iba haciendo pinitos y dando traspiés, como convaleciente; y, al entrar por la puerta de la ciudad, vio que hacia él venía un su amigo, a quien no había visto en más de seis meses; el cual, santiguándose como si viera alguna mala visión, llegándose a él, le dijo:

-¿Qué es esto, señor alférez Campuzano? ¿Es posible que está vuesa merced en esta tierra? ¡Como quien soy que le hacía en Flandes, antes terciando allá la pica que arrastrando aquí la espada! ¿Qué color, qué flaqueza es ésta?

A lo cual respondió Campuzano:

-A lo si estoy en esta tierra o no, señor licenciado Peralta, el verme en ella le responde; a las demás preguntas no tengo qué decir, sino que salgo de aquel hospital de sudar catorce cargas de bubas que me echó a cuestras una mujer que escogí por mía, que non debiera.

-¿Luego casóse vuesa merced? -replicó Peralta.

-Sí, señor -respondió Campuzano.

-Sería por amores -dijo Peralta-, y tales casamientos traen consigo aparejada la ejecución del arrepentimiento.

-No sabré decir si fue por amores -respondió el alférez-, aunque sabré afirmar que fue por dolores, pues de mi casamiento, o cansamiento, saqué tantos en el cuerpo y en el alma, que los del cuerpo, para entretenerlos, me cuestan cuarenta sudores, y los del alma no hallo remedio para aliviarlos siquiera. Pero, porque no estoy para tener largas pláticas en la calle, vuesa merced me perdone; que otro día con más comodidad le daré cuenta de mis sucesos, que son los más nuevos y peregrinos que vuesa merced habrá oído en todos los días de su vida.

-No ha de ser así -dijo el licenciado-, sino que quiero que venga conmigo a mi posada, y allí haremos penitencia juntos; que la olla es muy de enfermo, y, aunque está tasada para dos, un pastel suplirá con mi criado; y si la convalecencia lo sufre, unas lonjas de jamón de Rute nos harán la salva, y, sobre todo, la buena voluntad con que lo ofrezco, no sólo esta vez, sino todas las que vuesa merced quisiere.

Agradecióselo Campuzano y aceptó el convite y los ofrecimientos.

Fueron a San Llorente, oyeron misa, llevóle Peralta a su casa, dióle lo prometido y ofrecióselo de nuevo, y pidióle, en acabando de comer, le contase los sucesos que tanto le había encarecido. No se hizo de rogar Campuzano; antes, comenzó a decir desta manera:

-«Bien se acordará vuesa merced, señor licenciado Peralta, como yo hacía en esta ciudad camarada con el capitán Pedro de Herrera, que ahora está en Flandes.»

-Bien me acuerdo -respondió Peralta.

-«Pues un día -prosiguió Campuzano-que acabábamos de comer en aquella posada de la Solana, donde vivíamos, entraron dos mujeres de gentil parecer con dos criadas: la una se puso a hablar con el capitán en pie, arrimados a una ventana; y la otra se sentó en una silla junto a mí, derribado el manto hasta la barba, sin dejar ver el rostro más de aquello que concedía la raridad del manto; y, aunque le supliqué que por cortesía me hiciese merced de descubrirse, no fue posible acabarlo con ella, cosa que me encendió más el deseo de verla. Y, para acrecentarle más, o ya fuese de industria o acaso, sacó la señora una muy blanca mano con muy buenas sortijas. Estaba yo entonces bizarrísimo, con aquella gran cadena que vuesa merced debió de conocerme, el sombrero con plumas y cintillo, el vestido de colores, a fuer de soldado, y tan gallardo, a los ojos de mi locura, que me daba a entender que las podía matar en el aire. Con todo esto, le rogué que se descubriese, a lo que ella me respondió: "No seáis importuno: casa tengo, haced a un paje que me siga; que, aunque yo soy más honrada de lo que prometo esta respuesta, todavía, a trueco de ver si responde vuestra discreción a vuestra gallardía, holgaré de que me veáis". Beséle las manos por la grande merced que me hacía, en pago de la cual le prometí montes de oro. Acabó el capitán su plática; ellas se fueron, siguiólas un criado mío. Díjome el capitán que lo que la dama le quería era que le llevase unas cartas a Flandes a otro capitán, que decía ser su primo, aunque él sabía que no era sino su galán.

»Yo quedé abrasado con las manos de nieve que había visto, y muerto por el rostro que deseaba ver; y así, otro día, guiándome mi criado, dióseme libre entrada. Hallé una casa muy bien aderezada y una mujer de hasta treinta años, a quien conocí por las manos. No era hermosa en extremo, pero éralo de suerte que podía enamorar comunicada, porque tenía un tono de habla tan suave que se entraba por los oídos en el alma. Pasé con ella luengos y amorosos coloquios, blasoné, hendí, rajé, ofrecí, prometí y hice todas las demostraciones que me pareció ser necesarias para hacerme bienquisto con ella. Pero, como ella estaba hecha a oír semejantes o mayores ofrecimientos y razones, parecía que les daba atento oído antes que crédito alguno. Finalmente, nuestra plática se pasó en flores cuatro días que continué en visitalla, sin que llegase a coger el fruto que deseaba.

»En el tiempo que la visité, siempre hallé la casa desembarazada, sin que viese visiones en ella de parientes fingidos ni de amigos verdaderos; servíala una moza más taimada que simple. Finalmente, tratando mis amores como soldado que está en víspera de mudar, apuré a mi señora doña Estefanía de Caicedo (que éste es el nombre de la que así me tiene) y respondíome: "Señor alférez Campuzano, simplicidad sería si yo quisiese venderme a vuesa merced por santa: pecadora he sido, y aún ahora lo soy, pero no de manera que los vecinos me murmuren ni los apartados me noten. Ni de mis padres ni de otro pariente heredé hacienda alguna, y con todo esto vale el menaje de mi casa, bien validos, dos mil y quinientos escudos; y éstos en cosas que, puestas en almoneda, lo que se tardare en ponellas se tardará en convertirse en dineros. Con esta hacienda busco marido a quien entregarme y a quien tener obediencia; a quien, juntamente con la enmienda de mi vida, le entregaré una increíble solicitud de regalarle y servirle; porque no tiene príncipe cocinero más goloso ni que mejor sepa dar el punto a los guisados que le sé dar yo, cuando, mostrando ser casera, me quiero poner a ello. Sé ser mayordomo en casa, moza en la cocina y señora en la sala; en efeto, sé mandar y sé hacer que me obedezcan. No desperdicio nada y allego mucho; mi real no vale menos, sino mucho más cuando se gasta por mi orden. La ropa blanca que tengo, que es mucha y muy buena, no se sacó de tiendas ni lenceros; estos pulgares y los de mis criadas la hilaron; y si pudiera tejerse en casa, se tejiera. Digo estas alabanzas mías porque no acarrear vituperio cuando es forzosa la necesidad de decirlas. Finalmente, quiero decir que yo busco marido que me ampare, me mande y me honre, y no galán que me sirva y me vitupere. Si vuesa merced gustare de aceptar la prenda que se le ofrece, aquí estoy moliente y corriente, sujeta a todo aquello que vuesa merced ordenare, sin andar en venta, que es lo mismo andar en lenguas de casamenteros, y no hay ninguno tan bueno para concertar el todo como las mismas partes".

»Yo, que tenía entonces el juicio, no en la cabeza, sino en los carcañares, haciéndoseme el deleite en aquel punto mayor de lo que en la imaginación le pintaba, y ofreciéndoseme tan a la vista la cantidad de hacienda, que ya la contemplaba en dineros convertida, sin hacer otros discursos de aquellos a que daba lugar el gusto, que me tenía echados grillos al entendimiento, le dije que yo era el venturoso y bien afortunado en haberme dado el cielo, casi por milagro, tal compañera, para hacerla señora de mi voluntad y de mi hacienda, que no era tan poca que no valiese, con aquella cadena que traía al cuello y con otras joyuelas que tenía en casa, y con deshacerme de algunas galas de soldado, más de dos mil ducados, que juntos con los dos mil y quinientos suyos, era suficiente cantidad para retirarnos a vivir a una aldea de donde yo era natural y adonde tenía algunas raíces; hacienda tal que, sobrellevada con el dinero, vendiendo los frutos a su tiempo, nos podía dar una vida alegre y descansada.

»En resolución, aquella vez se concertó nuestro desposorio, y se dio traza cómo los dos hiciésemos información de solteros, y en los tres días de fiesta que vinieron luego juntos en una Pascua se hicieron las amonestaciones, y al cuarto día nos desposamos, hallándose presentes al desposorio dos amigos míos y un mancebo que ella dijo ser primo suyo, a quien yo me ofrecí por pariente con palabras de mucho comedimiento, como lo habían sido todas las que hasta entonces a mi nueva esposa había dado, con intención tan torcida y traidora que la quiero callar; porque, aunque estoy diciendo verdades, no son verdades de confesión, que no pueden dejar de decirse.

»Mudó mi criado el baúl de la posada a casa de mi mujer; encerré en él, delante della, mi magnífica cadena; mostréle otras tres o cuatro, si no tan grandes, de mejor hechura, con otros tres o cuatro cintillos de diversas suertes; hícele patentes mis galas y mis plumas, y entreguéle para el gasto de casa hasta cuatrocientos reales que tenía. Seis días gocé del pan de la boda, espaciándome en casa como el yerno ruin en la del suegro rico. Pisé ricas alhombros, ahajé sábanas de holanda, alumbréme con candeleros de plata; almorzaba en la cama, levantábame a las once, comía a las doce y a las dos sesteaba en el estrado; bailábanme doña Estefanía y la moza el agua delante. Mi mozo, que hasta allí le había conocido perezoso y lerdo, se había vuelto un corzo. El rato que doña Estefanía faltaba de mi lado, la habían de hallar en la cocina, toda solícita en ordenar guisados que me despertasen el gusto y me avivasen el apetito. Mis camisas, cuellos y pañuelos eran un nuevo Aranjuez de flores, según olían, bañados en la agua de ángeles y de azahar que sobre ellos se derramaba.

»Pasáronse estos días volando, como se pasan los años, que están debajo de la jurisdicción del tiempo; en los cuales días, por verme tan regalado y tan bien servido, iba mudando en buena la mala intención con que aquel negocio había comenzado. Al cabo de los cuales, una mañana, que aún estaba con doña Estefanía en la cama, llamaron con grandes golpes a la puerta de la calle. Asomóse la moza a la ventana y, quitándose al momento, dijo: "¡Oh, que sea ella la bien venida! ¿Han visto, y cómo ha venido más presto de lo que escribió el otro día?" "¿Quién es la que ha venido, moza?", le pregunté. "¿Quién?", respondió ella. "Es mi señora doña Clementa Bueso, y viene con ella el señor don Lope Meléndez de Almendárez, con otros dos criados, y Hortigosa, la dueña que llevó consigo". "¡Corre, moza, bien haya yo, y ábrelos!", dijo a este punto doña Estefanía; "y vos, señor, por mi amor que no os alborotéis ni respondáis por mí a ninguna cosa que contra mí oyéredes". "Pues ¿quién ha de deciros cosa que os ofenda, y más estando yo delante? Decidme: ¿qué gente es ésta?, que me parece que os ha alborotado su venida". "No tengo lugar de responderos", dijo doña Estefanía: "sólo sabed que todo lo que aquí pasare es fingido y que tira a cierto designio y efeto que después sabréis".

»Y, aunque quisiera replicarle a esto, no me dio lugar la señora doña Clementa Bueso, que se entró en la sala, vestida de raso verde prensado, con muchos pasamanos de oro, capotillo de lo mismo y con la misma guarnición, sombrero con plumas verdes, blancas y encarnadas, y con rico cintillo de oro, y con un delgado velo cubierta la mitad del rostro. Entró con ella el señor don Lope Meléndez de Almendárez, no menos bizarro que ricamente vestido de camino. La dueña Hortigosa fue la primera que habló, diciendo: "¡Jesús! ¿Qué es esto? ¿Ocupado el lecho de mi señora doña Clementa, y más con ocupación de hombre? ¡Milagros veo hoy en esta casa! ¡A fe que se ha ido bien del pie a la mano la señora doña Estefanía, fiada en la amistad de mi señora!" "Yo te lo prometo, Hortigosa", replicó doña Clementa; "pero yo me tengo la culpa. ¡Que jamás escarmiente yo en tomar amigas que no lo saben ser si no es cuando les viene a cuento!" A todo lo cual respondió doña Estefanía: "No reciba vuesa merced pesadumbre, mi señora doña Clementa Bueso, y entienda que no sin misterio vee lo que vee en esta su casa: que, cuando lo sepa, yo sé que quedará desculpada y vuesa merced sin ninguna queja".

»En esto, ya me había puesto yo en calzas y en jubón; y, tomándome doña Estefanía por la mano, me llevó a otro aposento, y allí me dijo que aquella su amiga quería hacer una burla a aquel don Lope que venía con ella, con quien pretendía casarse; y que la burla era darle a entender que aquella casa y cuanto estaba en ella era todo suyo, de lo cual pensaba hacerle carta de dote; y que hecho el casamiento se le daba poco que se descubriese el engaño, fiada en el grande amor que el don Lope la tenía. "Y luego se me volverá lo que es mío, y no se le tendrá a mal a ella, ni a otra mujer alguna, de que procure buscar marido honrado, aunque sea por medio de cualquier embuste".

»Yo le respondí que era grande extremo de amistad el que quería hacer, y que primero se mirase bien en ello, porque después podría ser tener necesidad de valerse de la justicia para cobrar su hacienda. Pero ella me respondió con tantas razones, representando tantas obligaciones que la obligaban a servir a doña Clementa, aun en cosas de más importancia, que, mal de mi grado y con remordimiento de mi juicio, hube de condecender con el gusto de doña Estefanía, asegurándome ella que solos ocho días podía durar el embuste, los cuales estaríamos en casa de otra amiga suya. Acabámonos de vestir ella y yo, y luego, entrándose a despedir de la señora doña Clementa Bueso y del señor don Lope Meléndez de Almendárez, hizo a mi criado que se cargase el baúl y que la

»Paró doña Estefanía en casa de una amiga suya, y, antes que entrásemos dentro, estuvo un buen espacio hablando con ella, al cabo del cual salió una moza y dijo que entrásemos yo y mi criado. Llevónos a un aposento estrecho, en el cual había dos camas tan juntas que parecían una, a causa que no había espacio que las dividiese, y las sábanas de entrambas se besaban. En efeto, allí estuvimos seis días, y en todos ellos no se pasó hora que no tuviésemos pendencia, diciéndole la necedad que había hecho en haber dejado su casa y su hacienda, aunque fuera a su misma madre.

»En esto, iba yo y venía por momentos; tanto, que la huésped de casa, un día que doña Estefanía dijo que iba a ver en qué término estaba su negocio, quiso saber de mí qué era la causa que me movía a reñir tanto con ella, y qué cosa había hecho que tanto se la afeaba, diciéndole que había sido necedad notoria más que amistad perfeta. Contéle todo el cuento, y cuando llegué a decir que me había casado con doña Estefanía, y la dote que trujo y la simplicidad que había hecho en dejar su casa y hacienda a doña Clementa, aunque fuese con tan sana intención como era alcanzar tan principal marido como don Lope, se comenzó a santiguar y a hacerse cruces con tanta priesa, y con tanto "¡Jesús, Jesús, de la mala hembra!", que me puso en gran turbación; y al fin me dijo: "Señor alférez, no sé si voy contra mi conciencia en descubriros lo que me parece que también la cargaría si lo callase; pero, a Dios y a ventura, sea lo que fuere, ¡viva la verdad y muera la mentira! La verdad es que doña Clementa Bueso es la verdadera señora de la casa y de la hacienda de que os hicieron la dote; la mentira es todo cuanto os ha dicho doña Estefanía: que ni ella tiene casa, ni hacienda, ni otro vestido del que trae puesto. Y el haber tenido lugar y espacio para hacer este embuste fue que doña Clementa fue a visitar unos parientes suyos a la ciudad de Plasencia, y de allí fue a tener novenas en Nuestra Señora de Guadalupe, y en este entretanto dejó en su casa a doña Estefanía, que mirase por ella, porque, en efeto, son grandes amigas; aunque, bien mirado, no hay que culpar a la pobre señora, pues ha sabido granjear a una tal persona como la del señor alférez por marido".

»Aquí dio fin a su plática y yo di principio a desesperarme, y sin duda lo hiciera si tantico se descuidara el ángel de mi guarda en socorrerme, acudiendo a decirme en el corazón que mirase que era cristiano y que el mayor pecado de los hombres era el de la desesperación, por ser pecado de demonios. Esta consideración o buena inspiración me conhortó algo; pero no tanto que dejase de tomar mi capa y espada y salir a buscar a doña Estefanía, con prosupuesto de hacer en ella un ejemplar castigo; pero la suerte, que no sabré decir si mis cosas empeoraba o mejoraba, ordenó que en ninguna parte donde pensé hallar a doña

Estefanía la hallase. Fuime a San Llorente, encomendéme a Nuestra Señora, sentéme sobre un escaño, y con la pesadumbre me tomó un sueño tan pesado, que no despertara tan presto si no me despertaran.

»Fui lleno de pensamientos y congojas a casa de doña Clementa, y halléla con tanto reposo como señora de su casa; no le osé decir nada, porque estaba el señor don Lope delante. Volví en casa de mi huéspeda, que me dijo haber contado a doña Estefanía como yo sabía toda su maraña y embuste; y que ella le preguntó qué semblante había yo mostrado con tal nueva, y que le había respondido que muy malo, y que, a su parecer, había salido yo con mala intención y con peor determinación a buscarla. Díjome, finalmente, que doña Estefanía se había llevado cuanto en el baúl tenía, sin dejarme en él sino un solo vestido de camino. ¡Aquí fue ello! ¡Aquí me tuvo de nuevo Dios de su mano! Fui a ver mi baúl, y halléle abierto y como sepultura que esperaba cuerpo difunto, y a buena razón había de ser el mío, si yo tuviera entendimiento para saber sentir y ponderar tamaña desgracia.»

-Bien grande fue -dijo a esta sazón el licenciado Peralta-haberse llevado doña Estefanía tanta cadena y tanto cintillo; que, como suele decirse, todos los duelos..., etc.

-Ninguna pena me dio esa falta -respondió el alférez-, pues también podré decir: «Pensóse don Simueque que me engañaba con su hija la tuerta, y por el Dío, contrechó soy de un lado».

-No sé a qué propósito puede vuesa merced decir eso -respondió Peralta.

-El propósito es -respondió el alférez-de que toda aquella balumba y aparato de cadenas, cintillos y brincos podía valer hasta diez o doce escudos.

-Eso no es posible -replicó el licenciado-; porque la que el señor alférez traía al cuello mostraba pesar más de docientos ducados.

-Así fuera -respondió el alférez-si la verdad respondiera al parecer; pero como no es todo oro lo que reluce, las cadenas, cintillos, joyas y brincos, con sólo ser de alquimia se contentaron; pero estaban tan bien hechas, que sólo el toque o el fuego podía descubrir su malicia.

-Desa manera -dijo el licenciado-, entre vuesa merced y la señora doña Estefanía, pata es la traviesa.

-Y tan pata -respondió el alférez-, que podemos volver a barajar; pero el daño está, señor licenciado, en que ella se podrá deshacer de mis cadenas y yo no de la falsía de su término; y en efeto, mal que me pese, es prenda mía.

-Dad gracias a Dios, señor Campuzano -dijo Peralta-, que fue prenda con pies, y que se os ha ido, y que no estáis obligado a buscarla.

-Así es -respondió el alférez-; pero, con todo eso, sin que la busque, la hallo siempre en la imaginación, y, adondequiera que estoy, tengo mi afrenta presente.

-No sé qué responderos -dijo Peralta-, si no es traeros a la memoria dos versos de Petrarca, que dicen:

*Ché, qui prende diclete di far fiode;
Non si de lamentar si altri l'ingana.*

Que responden en nuestro castellano: «Que el que tiene costumbre y gusto de engañar a otro no se debe quejar cuando es engañado».

-Yo no me quejo -respondió el alférez-, sino lastímome: que el culpado no por conocer su culpa deja de sentir la pena del castigo. Bien veo que quise engañar y fui engañado, porque me hirieron por mis propios filos; pero no puedo tener tan a raya el sentimiento que no me queje de mí mismo. «Finalmente, por venir a lo que hace más al caso a mi historia (que este nombre se le puede dar al cuento de mis sucesos), digo que supe que se había llevado a doña Estefanía el primo que dije que se halló a nuestros desposorios, el cual de luengos tiempos atrás era su amigo a todo ruego. No quise buscarla, por no hallar el mal que me faltaba. Mudé posada y mudé el pelo dentro de pocos días, porque comenzaron a pelárseme las cejas y las pestañas, y poco a poco me dejaron los cabellos, y antes de edad me hice calvo, dándome una enfermedad que llaman lupicia, y por otro nombre más claro, la pelarela. Halléme verdaderamente hecho pelón, porque ni tenía barbas que peinar ni dineros que gastar. Fue la enfermedad caminando al paso de mi necesidad, y, como la pobreza atropella a la honra, y a unos lleva a la horca y a otros al hospital, y a otros les hace entrar por las puertas de sus enemigos con ruegos y sumisiones (que es una de las mayores miserias que puede suceder a un desdichado), por no gastar en curarme los vestidos que me habían de cubrir y honrar en salud, llegado el tiempo en que se dan los sudores en el Hospital de la Resurrección, me entré en él, donde he tomado cuarenta sudores. Dicen que quedaré sano si me guardo: espada tengo, lo demás Dios lo remedie.»

Ofreciósele de nuevo el licenciado, admirándose de las cosas que le había contado.

-Pues de poco se maravilla vuesa merced, señor Peralta -dijo el alférez-; que otros sucesos me quedan por decir que exceden a toda imaginación, pues van fuera de todos los términos de naturaleza: no quiera vuesa merced saber más, sino que son de suerte que doy por bien empleadas todas mis desgracias, por haber sido parte de haberme puesto en el hospital, donde vi lo que ahora diré, que es lo que ahora ni nunca vuesa merced podrá creer, ni habrá persona en el mundo que lo crea.

Todos estos preámbulos y encarecimientos que el alférez hacía, antes de contar lo que había visto, encendían el deseo de Peralta de manera que, con no menores encarecimientos, le pidió que luego luego le dijese las maravillas que le quedaban por decir.

-Ya vuesa merced habrá visto -dijo el alférez-dos perros que con dos lanternas andan de noche con los hermanos de la Capacha, alumbrándoles cuando piden limosna.

-Sí he visto -respondió Peralta.

-También habrá visto o oído vuesa merced -dijo el alférez-lo que dellos se cuenta: que si acaso echan limosna de las ventanas y se cae en el suelo, ellos acuden luego a alumbrar y a buscar lo que se cae, y se paran delante de las ventanas donde saben que tienen costumbre de darles limosna; y, con ir allí con tanta mansedumbre que más parecen corderos que perros, en el hospital son unos leones, guardando la casa con grande cuidado y vigilancia.

-Yo he oído decir -dijo Peralta-que todo es así, pero eso no me puede ni debe causar maravilla.

-Pues lo que ahora diré dellos es razón que la cause, y que, sin hacerse cruces, ni alegar imposibles ni dificultades, vuesa merced se acomode a creerlo; y es que yo oí y casi vi con mis ojos a estos dos perros, que el uno se llama Cipión y el otro Berganza, estar una noche, que fue la penúltima que acabé de sudar, echados detrás de mi cama en unas esteras viejas; y, a la mitad de aquella noche, estando a oscuras y desvelado, pensando en mis pasados sucesos y presentes desgracias, oí hablar allí junto, y estuve con atento oído escuchando, por ver si podía venir en conocimiento de los que hablaban y de lo que hablaban; y a poco rato vine a conocer, por lo que hablaban, los que hablaban, y eran los dos perros, Cipión y Berganza.

Apenas acabó de decir esto Campuzano, cuando, levantándose el licenciado, dijo:

-Vuesa merced quede mucho en buen hora, señor Campuzano, que hasta aquí estaba en duda si creería o no lo que de su casamiento me había contado; y esto que ahora me cuenta de que oyó hablar los perros me ha hecho declarar por la parte de no creelle ninguna cosa. Por amor de Dios, señor alférez, que no cuente estos disparates a persona alguna, si ya no fuere a quien sea tan su amigo como yo.

-No me tenga vuesa merced por tan ignorante -replicó Campuzano-que no entienda que, si no es por milagro, no pueden hablar los animales; que bien sé que si los tordos, picazas y papagayos hablan, no son sino las palabras que aprenden y toman de memoria, y por tener la lengua estos animales cómoda para poder pronunciarlas; mas no por esto pueden hablar y responder con discurso concertado, como estos perros hablaron; y así, muchas veces, después que los oí, yo mismo no he querido dar crédito a mí mismo, y he querido tener por cosa soñada lo que realmente estando despierto, con todos mis cinco sentidos, tales cuales nuestro Señor fue servido dármelos, oí, escuché, noté y, finalmente, escribí, sin faltar palabra, por su concierto; de donde se puede tomar indicio bastante que mueva y persuada a creer esta verdad que digo. Las cosas de que trataron fueron grandes y diferentes, y más para ser tratadas por varones sabios que para ser dichas por bocas de perros. Así que, pues yo no las pude inventar de mí, a mi pesar y contra mi opinión, vengo a creer que no soñaba y que los perros hablaban.

-¡Cuerpo de mí! -replicó el licenciado-. ¡Si se nos ha vuelto el tiempo de Maricastaña, cuando hablaban las calabazas, o el de Isopo, cuando departía el gallo con la zorra y unos animales con otros!

-Uno dellos sería yo, y el mayor -replicó el alférez-, si creyese que ese tiempo ha vuelto; y aun también lo sería si dejase de creer lo que oí y lo que vi, y lo que me atreveré a jurar con juramento que obligue y aun fuerce, a que lo crea la misma incredulidad. Pero, puesto caso que me haya engañado, y que mi verdad sea sueño, y el porfiarla disparate, ¿no se holgará vuesa merced, señor Peralta, de ver escritas en un coloquio las cosas que estos perros, o sean quien fueren, hablaron?

-Como vuesa merced -replicó el licenciado- no se canse más en persuadirme que oyó hablar a los perros, de muy buena gana oiré ese coloquio, que por ser escrito y notado del buen ingenio del señor alférez, ya le juzgo por bueno.

-Pues hay en esto otra cosa -dijo el alférez-: que, como yo estaba tan atento y tenía delicado el juicio, delicada, sutil y desocupada la memoria (merced a las muchas pasas y almendras que había comido), todo lo tomé de coro; y, casi por las mismas palabras que había oído, lo escribí otro día, sin buscar colores retóricas para adornarlo, ni qué añadir ni quitar para hacerle gustoso. No fue una noche sola la plática, que fueron dos consecutivamente, aunque yo no tengo escrita más de una, que es la vida de Berganza; y la del compañero Cipión pienso escribir (que fue la que se contó la noche segunda) cuando viere, o que ésta se crea, o, a lo menos, no se desprecie. El coloquio traigo en el seno; púselo en forma de coloquio por ahorrar de dijo Cipión, respondió Berganza, que suele alargar la escritura.

Y, en diciendo esto, sacó del pecho un cartapacio y le puso en las manos del licenciado, el cual le tomó riyéndose, y como haciendo burla de todo lo que había oído y de lo que pensaba leer.

-Yo me recuesto -dijo el alférez- en esta silla en tanto que vuesa merced lee, si quiere, esos sueños o disparates, que no tienen otra cosa de bueno si no es el poderlos dejar cuando enfaden.

-Haga vuesa merced su gusto -dijo Peralta-, que yo con brevedad me despediré desta letura.

Recostóse el alférez, abrió el licenciado el cartapacio, y en el principio vio que estaba puesto este título:

Novela del coloquio de los perros

El acabar el Coloquio el licenciado y el despertar el alférez fue todo a un tiempo; y el licenciado dijo:

-Aunque este coloquio sea fingido y nunca haya pasado, paréceme que está tan bien compuesto que puede el señor alférez pasar adelante con el segundo.

-Con ese parecer -respondió el alférez-me animaré y disporné a escribirle, sin ponerme más en disputas con vuesa merced si hablaron los perros o no.

A lo que dijo el licenciado:

-Señor alférez, no volvamos más a esa disputa. Yo alcanzo el artificio del Coloquio y la invención, y basta. Vámonos al Espolón a recrear los ojos del cuerpo, pues ya he recreado los del entendimiento.

-Vamos -dijo el alférez.

Y, con esto, se fueron.

El coloquio de los perros

NOVELA Y COLOQUIO QUE PASÓ ENTRE CIPIÓN Y BERGANZA, PERROS DEL HOSPITAL DE LA RESURECCIÓN, QUE ESTÁ EN LA CIUDAD DE VALLADOLID, FUERA DE LA PUERTA DEL CAMPO, A QUIEN COMÚNMENTE LLAMAN «LOS PERROS DE MAHUDES»

CIPIÓN.- Berganza amigo, dejemos esta noche el Hospital en guarda de la confianza y retirémonos a esta soledad y entre estas esteras, donde podremos gozar sin ser sentidos desta no vista merced que el cielo en un mismo punto a los dos nos ha hecho.

BERGANZA.- Cipión hermano, óyote hablar y sé que te hablo, y no puedo creerlo, por parecerme que el hablar nosotros pasa de los términos de naturaleza.

CIPIÓN.- Así es la verdad, Berganza; y viene a ser mayor este milagro en que no solamente hablamos, sino en que hablamos con discurso, como si fuéramos capaces de razón, estando tan sin ella que la diferencia que hay del animal bruto al hombre es ser el hombre animal racional, y el bruto, irracional.

BERGANZA.- Todo lo que dices, Cipión, entiendo, y el decirlo tú y entenderlo yo me causa nueva admiración y nueva maravilla. Bien es verdad que, en el discurso de mi vida, diversas y muchas veces he oído decir grandes prerrogativas nuestras: tanto, que parece que algunos han querido sentir que tenemos un natural distinto, tan vivo y tan agudo en muchas cosas, que da indicios y señales de faltar poco para mostrar que tenemos un no sé qué de entendimiento capaz de discurso.

CIPIÓN.- Lo que yo he oído alabar y encarecer es nuestra mucha memoria, el agradecimiento y gran fidelidad nuestra; tanto, que nos suelen pintar por símbolo de la amistad; y así, habrás visto (si has mirado en ello) que en las sepulturas de alabastro, donde suelen estar las figuras de los que allí están enterrados, cuando son marido y mujer, ponen entre los dos, a los pies, una figura de perro, en señal que se guardaron en la vida amistad y fidelidad inviolable.

BERGANZA.- Bien sé que ha habido perros tan agradecidos que se han arrojado con los cuerpos difuntos de sus amos en la misma sepultura. Otros han estado sobre las sepulturas donde estaban enterrados sus señores sin apartarse dellas, sin comer, hasta que se les acababa la vida. Sé también que, después del elefante, el perro tiene el primer lugar de parecer que tiene entendimiento; luego, el caballo, y el último, la jimia.

CIPIÓN.- Ansí es, pero bien confesarás que ni has visto ni oído decir jamás que haya hablado ningún elefante, perro, caballo o mona; por donde me doy a entender que este nuestro hablar tan de improviso cae debajo del número de aquellas cosas que llaman portentos, las cuales, cuando se muestran y parecen, tiene averiguado la experiencia que alguna calamidad grande amenaza a las gentes.

BERGANZA.- Desdicha manera, no haré yo mucho en tener por señal portentosa lo que oí decir los días pasados a un estudiante, pasando por Alcalá de Henares.

CIPIÓN.- ¿Qué le oíste decir?

BERGANZA.- Que de cinco mil estudiantes que cursaban aquel año en la Universidad, los dos mil oían Medicina.

CIPIÓN.- Pues, ¿qué vienes a inferir deso?

BERGANZA.- Infiero, o que estos dos mil médicos han de tener enfermos que curar (que sería harta plaga y mala ventura), o ellos se han de morir de hambre.

CIPIÓN.- Pero, sea lo que fuere, nosotros hablamos, sea portento o no; que lo que el cielo tiene ordenado que suceda, no hay diligencia ni sabiduría humana que lo pueda prevenir; y así, no hay para qué ponernos a disputar nosotros cómo o por qué hablamos; mejor será que este buen día, o buena noche, la metamos en nuestra casa; y, pues la tenemos tan buena en estas esteras y no sabemos cuánto durará esta nuestra ventura, sepamos aprovecharnos della y hablemos toda esta noche, sin dar lugar al sueño que nos impida este gusto, de mí por largos tiempos deseado.

BERGANZA.- Y aun de mí, que desde que tuve fuerzas para roer un hueso tuve deseo de hablar, para decir cosas que depositaba en la memoria; y allí, de antiguas y muchas, o se enmohecían o se me olvidaban. Empero, ahora, que tan sin pensarlo me veo enriquecido deste divino don de la habla, pienso gozarle y aprovecharme dél lo más que pudiere, dándome prisa a decir todo aquello que se me acordare, aunque sea atropellada y confusamente, porque no sé cuándo me volverán a pedir este bien, que por prestado tengo.

CIPIÓN.- Sea ésta la manera, Berganza amigo: que esta noche me cuentes tu vida y los trances por donde has venido al punto en que ahora te hallas, y si mañana en la noche estuviéremos con habla, yo te contaré la mía; porque mejor será gastar el tiempo en contar las propias que en procurar saber las ajenas vidas.

BERGANZA.- Siempre, Cipión, te he tenido por discreto y por amigo; y ahora más que nunca, pues como amigo quieres decirme tus sucesos y saber los míos, y como discreto has repartido el tiempo donde podamos manifestarlos. Pero advierte primero si nos oye alguno.

CIPIÓN.- Ninguno, a lo que creo, puesto que aquí cerca está un soldado tomando sudores; pero en esta sazón más estará para dormir que para ponerse a escuchar a nadie.

BERGANZA.- Pues si puedo hablar con ese seguro, escucha; y si te cansare lo que te fuere diciendo, o me reprehende o manda que calle.

CIPIÓN.- Habla hasta que amanezca, o hasta que seamos sentidos; que yo te escucharé de muy buena gana, sin impedirte sino cuando viere ser necesario.

BERGANZA.- «Paréceme que la primera vez que vi el sol fue en Sevilla y en su Matadero, que está fuera de la Puerta de la Carne; por donde imaginara (si no fuera por lo que después te diré) que mis padres debieron de ser alanos de aquellos que crían los ministros de aquella confusión, a quien llaman jiferos. El primero que conocí por amo fue uno llamado Nicolás el Romo, mozo robusto, doblado y colérico, como lo son todos aquellos que ejercitan la jifería. Este tal Nicolás me enseñaba a mí y a otros cachorros a que, en compañía de alanos viejos, arremetiésemos a los toros y les hiciésemos presa de las orejas. Con mucha facilidad salí un águila en esto.»

CIPIÓN.- No me maravillo, Berganza; que, como el hacer mal viene de natural cosecha, fácilmente se aprende el hacerle.

BERGANZA.- ¿Qué te diría, Cipión hermano, de lo que vi en aquel Matadero y de las cosas exorbitantes que en él pasan? Primero, has de presuponer que todos cuantos en él trabajan, desde el menor hasta el mayor, es gente ancha de conciencia, desalmada, sin temer al Rey ni a su justicia; los más, amancebados; son aves de rapiña carniceras: mantiéñense ellos y sus amigas de lo que hurtan. Todas las mañanas que son días de carne, antes que amanezca, están en el Matadero gran cantidad de mujercillas y muchachos, todos con talegas, que, viniendo vacías, vuelven llenas de pedazos de carne, y las criadas con criadillas y lomos medio enteros. No hay res alguna que se mate de quien no lleve esta gente diezmos y primicias de lo más sabroso y bien parado. Y, como en Sevilla no hay obligado de la carne, cada uno puede traer la que quisiere; y la que primero se mata, o es la mejor, o la de más baja postura, y con este concierto hay siempre mucha abundancia. Los dueños se encomiendan a esta buena gente que he dicho, no para que no les hurten (que esto es imposible), sino para que se moderen en las tajadas y socaliñas que hacen en las reses muertas, que las escamondan y podan como si fuesen sauces o parras. Pero ninguna cosa me admiraba más ni me parecía peor que el ver que estos jiferos con la misma facilidad matan a un hombre que a una vaca; por quítame allá esa paja, a dos por tres meten un cuchillo de cachas amarillas por la barriga de una persona, como si acocotasen un toro. Por maravilla se pasa día sin pendencias y sin heridas, y a veces sin muertes; todos se pican de valientes, y aun tienen sus puntas de rufianes; no hay ninguno que no tenga su ángel de guarda en la plaza de San Francisco, granjeado con lomos y lenguas de vaca. Finalmente, oí decir a un hombre discreto que tres cosas tenía el Rey por ganar en Sevilla: la calle de la Caza, la Costanilla y el Matadero.

CIPIÓN.- Si en contar las condiciones de los amos que has tenido y las faltas de sus oficios te has de estar, amigo Berganza, tanto como esta vez, menester será pedir al cielo nos conceda la habla siquiera por un año, y aun temo que, al paso que llevas, no llegarás a la mitad de tu historia. Y quírote advertir de una cosa, de la cual verás la experiencia cuando te cuente los sucesos de mi vida; y es que los cuentos unos encierran y tienen la gracia en ellos mismos, otros en el modo de contarlos (quiero decir que algunos hay que, aunque se cuenten sin preámbulos y ornamentos de palabras, dan contento); otros hay que es menester vestirlos de palabras, y con demostraciones del rostro y de las manos, y con mudar la voz, se hacen algo de nonada, y de flojos y desmayados se vuelven agudos y gustosos; y no se te olvide este advertimiento, para aprovecharte dél en lo que te queda por decir.

BERGANZA.- Yo lo haré así, si pudiere y si me da lugar la grande tentación que tengo de hablar; aunque me parece que con grandísima dificultad me podré ir a la mano.

CIPIÓN.- Vete a la lengua, que en ella consisten los mayores daños de la humana vida.

BERGANZA.- «Digo, pues, que mi amo me enseñó a llevar una espuerta en la boca y a defenderla de quien quitármela quisiese. Enseñóme también la casa de su amiga, y con esto se escusó la venida de su criada al Matadero, porque yo le llevaba las madrugadas lo que él había hurtado las noches. Y un día que, entre dos luces, iba yo diligente a llevarle la porción, oí que me llamaban por mi nombre desde una ventana; alcé los ojos y vi una moza hermosa en extremo; detúveme un poco, y ella bajó a la puerta de la calle, y me tornó a llamar. Lleguéme a ella, como si fuera a ver lo que me quería, que no fue otra cosa que quitarme lo que llevaba en la cesta y ponerme en su lugar un chapín viejo. Entonces dije entre mí: "La carne se ha ido a la carne". Díjome la moza, en habiéndome quitado la carne: "Andad Gavilán, o como os llamáis, y decid a Nicolás el Romo, vuestro amo, que no se fíe de animales, y que del lobo un pelo, y ése de la espuerta". Bien pudiera yo volver a quitar lo que me quitó, pero no quise, por no poner mi boca jifera y sucia en aquellas manos limpias y blancas.»

CIPIÓN.- Hiciste muy bien, por ser prerrogativa de la hermosura que siempre se le tenga respeto.

BERGANZA.- «Así lo hice yo; y así, me volví a mi amo sin la porción y con el chapín. Parecióle que volví presto, vio el chapín, imaginó la burla, sacó uno de cachas y tiróme una puñalada que, a no desviarme, nunca tú oyeras ahora este cuento, ni aun otros muchos que pienso contarte. Puse pies en polvorosa, y, tomando el camino en las manos y en los pies, por detrás de San Bernardo, me fui por aquellos campos de Dios adonde la fortuna quisiese llevarme.

»Aquella noche dormí al cielo abierto, y otro día me deparó la suerte un hato o rebaño de ovejas y carneros. Así como le vi, creí que había hallado en él el centro de mi reposo, pareciéndome ser propio y natural oficio de los perros guardar ganado, que es obra donde se encierra una virtud grande, como es amparar y defender de los poderosos y soberbios los humildes y los que poco pueden. Apenas me hubo visto uno de tres pastores que el ganado guardaban, cuando diciendo "¡To, to!" me llamó; y yo, que otra cosa no deseaba, me llegué a él bajando la cabeza y meneando la cola. Trújome la mano por el lomo, abríome la boca, escupióme en ella, miróme las presas, conoció mi edad, y dijo a otros pastores que yo tenía todas las señales de ser perro de casta. Llegó a este instante el señor del ganado sobre una yegua rucia a la jineta, con lanza y adarga: que más parecía atajador de la costa que señor de ganado. Preguntó el pastor: "¿Qué perro es éste, que tiene señales de ser bueno?" "Bien lo puede vuesa merced creer -respondió el pastor-, que yo le he cotejado bien y no hay señal en él que no muestre y prometa que ha de ser un gran perro. Ahora se llegó aquí y no sé cuyo sea, aunque sé que no es de los rebaños de la redonda". "Pues así es -respondió el señor-, ponle luego el collar de Leoncillo, el perro que se murió, y denle la ración que a los demás, y acarícialo, porque tome cariño al hato y se quede en él". En diciendo esto, se fue; y el pastor me puso luego al cuello unas carlancas llenas de puntas de acero, habiéndome dado primero en un dornajo gran cantidad de sopas en leche. Y, asimismo, me puso nombre, y me llamó Barcino.

CIPIÓN.- Por haber oído decir que dijo un gran poeta de los antiguos que era difícil cosa el no escribir sátiras, consentiré que murmures un poco de luz y no de sangre; quiero decir que señales y no hieras ni des mate a ninguno en cosa señalada: que no es buena la murmuración, aunque haga reír a muchos, si mata a uno; y si puedes agradar sin ella, te tendré por muy discreto.

BERGANZA.- Yo tomaré tu consejo, y esperaré con gran deseo que llegue el tiempo en que me cuentes tus sucesos; que de quien tan bien sabe conocer y enmendar los defetos que tengo en contar los míos, bien se puede esperar que contará los suyos de manera que enseñen y deleiten a un mismo punto.

«Pero, anudando el roto hilo de mi cuento, digo que en aquel silencio y soledad de mis siestas, entre otras cosas, consideraba que no debía de ser verdad lo que había oído contar de la vida de los pastores; a lo menos, de aquellos que la dama de mi amo leía en unos libros cuando yo iba a su casa, que todos trataban de pastores y pastoras, diciendo que se les pasaba toda la vida cantando y tañendo con gaitas, zampoñas, rabeles y chirumbelas, y con otros instrumentos extraordinarios. Deteníame a oírla leer, y leía cómo el pastor de Anfriso cantaba estremada y divinamente, alabando a la sin par Belisarda, sin haber en todos los montes de Arcadia árbol en cuyo tronco no se hubiese sentado a cantar, desde que salía el sol en los brazos de la Aurora hasta que se ponía en los de Tetis; y aun después de haber tendido la negra noche por la faz de la tierra sus negras y oscuras alas, él no cesaba de sus bien cantadas y mejor lloradas quejas. No se le quedaba entre renglones el pastor Elicio, más enamorado que atrevido, de quien decía que, sin atender a sus amores ni a su ganado, se entraba en los cuidados ajenos. Decía también que el gran pastor de Fílida, único pintor de un retrato, había sido más confiado que dichoso. De los desmayos de Sireno y arrepentimiento de Diana decía que daba gracias a Dios y a la sabia Felicia, que con su agua encantada deshizo aquella máquina de enredos y aclaró aquel laberinto de dificultades. Acordábame de otros muchos libros que deste jaez la había oído leer, pero no eran dignos de traerlos a la memoria.»

CIPIÓN.- Aprovechándote vas, Berganza, de mi aviso: murmura, pica y pasa, y sea tu intención limpia, aunque la lengua no lo parezca.

BERGANZA.- En estas materias nunca tropieza la lengua si no cae primero la intención; pero si acaso por descuido o por malicia murmurare, responderé a quien me reprehendiere lo que respondió Mauleón, poeta tonto y académico de burla de la Academia de los Imitadores, a uno que le preguntó que qué quería decir Deum de Deo; y respondió que «dé donde diere».

CIPIÓN.- Esa fue respuesta de un simple; pero tú, si eres discreto o lo quieres ser, nunca has de decir cosa de que debas dar disculpa. Di adelante.

BERGANZA.- «Digo que todos los pensamientos que he dicho, y muchos más, me causaron ver los diferentes tratos y ejercicios que mis pastores, y todos los demás de aquella marina, tenían de aquellos que había oído leer que tenían los pastores de los libros; porque si los míos cantaban, no eran canciones acordadas y bien compuestas, sino un "Cata el lobo dó va, Juanica" y otras cosas semejantes; y esto no al son de chirumbelas, rabeles o gaitas, sino al que hacía el dar un cayado con otro o al de algunas tejuelas puestas entre los dedos; y no con voces delicadas, sonoras y admirables, sino con voces roncadas, que, solas o juntas, parecía, no que cantaban, sino que gritaban o gruñían. Lo más del día se les pasaba espulgándose o remendando sus abarcas; ni entre ellos se nombraban Amarilis, Fíldas, Galateas y Dianas, ni había Lisardos, Lausos, Jacintos ni Riselos; todos eran Antones, Domingos, Pablos o Llorentes; por donde vine a entender lo que pienso que deben de creer todos: que todos aquellos libros son cosas soñadas y bien escritas para entretenimiento de los ociosos, y no verdad alguna; que, a serlo, entre mis pastores hubiera alguna reliquia de aquella felicísima vida, y de aquellos amenos prados, espaciosas selvas, sagrados montes, hermosos jardines, arroyos claros y cristalinas fuentes, y de aquellos tan honestos cuanto bien declarados requiebros, y de aquel desmayarse aquí el pastor, allí la pastora, acullá resonar la zampoña del uno, acá el caramillo del otro.»

CIPIÓN.- Basta, Berganza; vuelve a tu senda y camina.

BERGANZA.- Agradézcotelo, Cipión amigo; porque si no me avisaras, de manera se me iba calentando la boca, que no parara hasta pintarte un libro entero destos que me tenían engañado; pero tiempo vendrá en que lo diga todo con mejores razones y con mejor discurso que ahora.

CIPIÓN.- Mírate a los pies y desharás la rueda, Berganza; quiero decir que mires que eres un animal que carece de razón, y si ahora muestras tener alguna, ya hemos averiguado entre los dos ser cosa sobrenatural y jamás vista.

BERGANZA.- Eso fuera ansí si yo estuviera en mi primera ignorancia; mas ahora que me ha venido a la memoria lo que te había de haber dicho al principio de nuestra plática, no sólo no me maravillo de lo que hablo, pero espántome de lo que dejo de hablar.

CIPIÓN.- Pues ¿ahora no puedes decir lo que ahora se te acuerda?

BERGANZA.- Es una cierta historia que me pasó con una grande hechicera, discípula de la Camacha de Montilla.

CIPIÓN.- Digo que me la cuentes antes que pases más adelante en el cuento de tu vida.

BERGANZA.- Eso no haré yo, por cierto, hasta su tiempo: ten paciencia y escucha por su orden mis sucesos, que así te darán más gusto, si ya no te fatiga querer saber los medios antes de los principios.

CIPIÓN.- Sé breve, y cuenta lo que quisieres y como quisieres.

BERGANZA.- «Digo, pues, que yo me hallaba bien con el oficio de guardar ganado, por parecerme que comía el pan de mi sudor y trabajo, y que la ociosidad, raíz y madre de todos los vicios, no tenía que ver conmigo, a causa que si los días holgaba, las noches no dormía, dándonos asaltos a menudo y tocándonos a arma los lobos; y, apenas me habían dicho los pastores "¡al lobo, Barcino!", cuando acudía, primero que los otros perros, a la parte que me señalaban que estaba el lobo: corría los valles, escudriñaba los montes, desentrañaba las selvas, saltaba barrancos, cruzaba caminos, y a la mañana volvía al hato, sin haber hallado lobo ni rastro dél, anhelando, cansado, hecho pedazos y los pies abiertos de los garranchos; y hallaba en el hato, o ya una oveja muerta, o un carnero degollado y medio comido del lobo. Desesperábame de ver de cuán poco servía mi mucho cuidado y diligencia. Venía el señor del ganado; salían los pastores a recibirle con las pieles de la res muerta; culpaba a los pastores por negligentes, y mandaba castigar a los perros por perezosos: llovían sobre nosotros palos, y sobre ellos reprehensiones; y así, viéndome un día castigado sin culpa, y que mi cuidado, ligereza y braveza no eran de provecho para coger el lobo, determiné de mudar estilo, no desviándome a buscarle, como tenía de costumbre, lejos del rebaño, sino estarme junto a él; que, pues el lobo allí venía, allí sería más cierta la presa.

CIPIÓN.- Y decías muy bien, Berganza, porque no hay mayor ni más sutil ladrón que el doméstico, y así, mueren muchos más de los confiados que de los recatados; pero el daño está en que es imposible que puedan pasar bien las gentes en el mundo si no se fía y se confía. Mas quédese aquí esto, que no quiero que parezcamos predicadores. Pasa adelante.

BERGANZA.- «Paso adelante, y digo que determiné dejar aquel oficio, aunque parecía tan bueno, y escoger otro donde por hacerle bien, ya que no fuese remunerado, no fuese castigado. Volvíme a Sevilla, y entré a servir a un mercader muy rico.»

CIPIÓN.- ¿Qué modo tenías para entrar con amo? Porque, según lo que se usa, con gran dificultad el día de hoy halla un hombre de bien señor a quien servir. Muy diferentes son los señores de la tierra del Señor del cielo: aquéllos, para recibir un criado, primero le espulgan el linaje, examinan la habilidad, le marcan la apostura, y aun quieren saber los vestidos que tiene; pero, para entrar a servir a Dios, el más pobre es más rico; el más humilde, de mejor linaje; y, con sólo que se disponga con limpieza de corazón a querer servirle, luego le manda poner en el libro de sus gajes, señalándoselos tan aventajados que, de muchos y de grandes, apenas pueden caber en su deseo.

BERGANZA.- Todo eso es predicar, Cipión amigo.

CIPIÓN.- Así me lo parece a mí; y así, callo.

BERGANZA.- A lo que me preguntaste del orden que tenía para entrar con amo, digo que ya tú sabes que la humildad es la basa y fundamento de todas virtudes, y que sin ella no hay alguna que lo sea. Ella allana inconvenientes, vence dificultades, y es un medio que siempre a gloriosos fines nos conduce; de los enemigos hace amigos, templada la cólera de los airados y menoscaba la arrogancia de los soberbios; es madre de la modestia y hermana de la templanza; en fin, con ella no pueden atravesar triunfo que les sea de provecho los vicios, porque en su blandura y mansedumbre se embotan y despuntan las flechas de los pecados.

«Désta, pues, me aprovechaba yo cuando quería entrar a servir en alguna casa, habiendo primero considerado y mirado muy bien ser casa que pudiese mantener y donde pudiese entrar un perro grande. Luego arrimábame a la puerta, y cuando, a mi parecer, entraba algún forastero, le ladraba, y cuando venía el señor bajaba la cabeza y, moviendo la cola, me iba a él, y con la lengua le limpiaba los zapatos. Si me echaban a palos, sufríalos, y con la misma mansedumbre volvía a hacer halagos al que me apaleaba, que ninguno secundaba, viendo mi porfía y mi noble término. Desta manera, a dos porfías me quedaba en casa: servía bien, queríanme luego bien, y nadie me despidió, si no era que yo me despidiese, o, por mejor decir, me fuese; y tal vez hallé amo que éste fuera el día que yo estuviera en su casa, si la contraria suerte no me hubiera perseguido.»

CIPIÓN.- De la misma manera que has contado entraba yo con los amos que tuve, y parece que nos leímos los pensamientos.

BERGANZA.- Como en esas cosas nos hemos encontrado, si no me engaño, y yo te las diré a su tiempo, como tengo prometido; y ahora escucha lo que me sucedió después que dejé el ganado en poder de aquellos perdidos.

«Volvíme a Sevilla, como dije, que es amparo de pobres y refugio de desechados, que en su grandeza no sólo caben los pequeños, pero no se echan de ver los grandes. Arriméme a la puerta de una gran casa de un mercader, hice mis acostumbradas diligencias, y a pocos lances me quedé en ella. Recibiéronme para tenerme atado detrás de la puerta de día y suelto de noche; servía con gran cuidado y diligencia; ladraba a los forasteros y gruñía a los que no eran muy conocidos; no dormía de noche, visitando los corrales, subiendo a los terrados, hecho universal centinela de la mía y de las casas ajenas. Agradóse tanto mi amo de mi buen servicio, que mandó que me tratasen bien y me diesen ración de pan y los huesos que se levantasen o arrojasen de su mesa, con las sobras de la cocina, a lo que yo me mostraba agradecido, dando infinitos saltos cuando veía a mi amo, especialmente cuando venía de fuera; que eran tantas las muestras de regocijo que daba y tantos los saltos, que mi amo ordenó que me desatasen y me dejasen andar suelto de día y de noche. Como me vi suelto, corrí a él, rodeéle todo, sin osar llegarle con las manos, acordándome de la fábula de Isopo, cuando aquel asno, tan asno que quiso hacer a su señor las mismas caricias que le hacía una perrilla regalada suya, que le granjearon ser molido a palos. Parecióme que en esta fábula se nos dio a entender que las gracias y donaires de algunos no están bien en otros.»

Apode el truhán, juegue de manos y voltee el histrión, rebuzne el pícaro, imite el canto de los pájaros y los diversos gestos y acciones de los animales y los hombres el hombre bajo que se hubiere dado a ello, y no lo quiera hacer el hombre principal, a quien ninguna habilidad destas le puede dar crédito ni nombre honroso.

CIPIÓN.- Basta; adelante, Berganza, que ya estás entendido.

BERGANZA.- ¡Ojalá que como tú me entiendes me entendiesen aquellos por quien lo digo; que no sé qué tengo de buen natural, que me pesa infinito cuando veo que un caballero se hace chocarrero y se precia que sabe jugar los cubiletes y las agallas, y que no hay quien como él sepa bailar la chacona! Un caballero conozco yo que se alababa que, a ruegos de un sacristán, había cortado de papel treinta y dos florones para poner en un monumento sobre paños negros, y destas cortaduras hizo tanto caudal, que así llevaba a sus amigos a verlas como si los llevara a ver las banderas y despojos de enemigos que sobre la sepultura de sus padres y abuelos estaban puestas.

«Este mercader, pues, tenía dos hijos, el uno de doce y el otro de hasta catorce años, los cuales estudiaban gramática en el estudio de la Compañía de Jesús; iban con autoridad, con ayo y con pajes, que les llevaban los libros y aquel que llaman vademécum. El verlos ir con tanto aparato, en sillas si hacía sol, en coche si llovía, me hizo considerar y reparar en la mucha llaneza con que su padre iba a la Lonja a negociar sus negocios, porque no llevaba otro criado que un negro, y algunas veces se desmandaba a ir en un machuelo aun no bien aderezado.»

CIPIÓN.- Has de saber, Berganza, que es costumbre y condición de los mercaderes de Sevilla, y aun de las otras ciudades, mostrar su autoridad y riqueza, no en sus personas, sino en las de sus hijos; porque los mercaderes son mayores en su sombra que en sí mismos. Y, como ellos por maravilla atienden a otra cosa que a sus tratos y contratos, trátanse modestamente; y, como la ambición y la riqueza muere por manifestarse, revienta por sus hijos, y así los tratan y autorizan como si fuesen hijos de algún príncipe; y algunos hay que les procuran títulos, y ponerles en el pecho la marca que tanto distingue la gente principal de la plebeya.

BERGANZA.- Ambición es, pero ambición generosa, la de aquel que pretende mejorar su estado sin perjuicio de tercero.

CIPIÓN.- Pocas o ninguna vez se cumple con la ambición que no sea con daño de tercero.

BERGANZA.- Ya hemos dicho que no hemos de murmurar.

CIPIÓN.- Sí, que yo no murmuro de nadie.

BERGANZA.- Ahora acabo de confirmar por verdad lo que muchas veces he oído decir. Acaba un maldiciente murmurador de echar a perder diez linajes y de caluniar veinte buenos, y si alguno le reprehende por lo que ha dicho, responde que él no ha dicho nada, y que si ha dicho algo, no lo ha dicho por tanto, y que si pensara que alguno se había de agraviar, no lo dijera. A la fe, Cipión, mucho ha de saber, y muy sobre los estribos ha de andar el que quisiere sustentar dos horas de conversación sin tocar los límites de la murmuración; porque yo veo en mí que, con ser un animal, como soy, a cuatro razones que digo, me acuden palabras a la lengua como mosquitos al vino, y todas maliciosas y murmurantes; por lo cual vuelvo a decir lo que otra vez he dicho: que el hacer y decir mal lo heredamos de nuestros primeros padres y lo mamamos en la leche. Vese claro en que, apenas ha sacado el niño el brazo de las fajas, cuando levanta la mano con muestras de querer vengarse de quien, a su parecer, le ofende; y casi la primera palabra articulada que habla es llamar puta a su ama o a su madre.

CIPIÓN.- Así es verdad, y yo confieso mi yerro y quiero que me le perdonen, pues te he perdonado tantos. Echemos pelillos a la mar, como dicen los muchachos, y no murmuremos de aquí adelante; y sigue tu cuento, que le dejaste en la autoridad con que los hijos del mercader tu amo iban al estudio de la Compañía de Jesús.

BERGANZA.- A Él me encomiendo en todo acontecimiento; y, aunque el dejar de murmurar lo tengo por dificultoso, pienso usar de un remedio que oí decir que usaba un gran jurador, el cual, arrepentido de su mala costumbre, cada vez que después de su arrepentimiento juraba, se daba un pellizco en el brazo, o besaba la tierra, en pena de su culpa; pero, con todo esto, juraba. Así yo, cada vez que fuere contra el precepto que me has dado de que no murmure y contra la intención que tengo de no murmurar, me morderé el pico de la lengua de modo que me duela y me acuerde de mi culpa para no volver a ella.

CIPIÓN.- Tal es ese remedio, que si usas dél espero que te has de morder tantas veces que has de quedar sin lengua, y así, quedarás imposibilitado de murmurar.

BERGANZA.- A lo menos, yo haré de mi parte mis diligencias, y supla las faltas el cielo.

«Y así, digo que los hijos de mi amo se dejaron un día un cartapacio en el patio, donde yo a la sazón estaba; y, como estaba enseñado a llevar la esportilla del jifero mi amo, así del vademécum y fuime tras ellos, con intención de no soltalle hasta el estudio. Sucedióme todo como lo deseaba: que mis amos, que me vieron venir con el vademécum en la boca, asido sotilmente de las cintas, mandaron a un paje me le quitase; mas yo no lo consentí ni le solté hasta que entré en el aula con él, cosa que causó risa a todos los estudiantes. Lleguéme al mayor de mis amos, y, a mi parecer, con mucha crianza se le puse en las manos, y quedéme sentado en cuclillas a la puerta del aula, mirando de hito en hito al maestro que en la cátedra leía. No sé qué tiene la virtud, que, con alcanzárseme a mí tan poco o nada della, luego recibí gusto de ver el amor, el término, la solicitud y la industria con que aquellos benditos padres y maestros enseñaban a aquellos niños, enderezando las tiernas varas de su juventud, porque no torciesen ni tomasen mal siniestro en el camino de la virtud, que juntamente con las letras les mostraban. Consideraba cómo los reñían con suavidad, los castigaban con misericordia, los animaban con ejemplos, los incitaban con premios y los sobrellevaban con cordura; y, finalmente, cómo les pintaban la fealdad y horror de los vicios y les dibujaban la hermosura de las virtudes, para que, aborrecidos ellos y amadas ellas, consiguiesen el fin para que fueron criados.»

CIPIÓN.- Muy bien dices, Berganza; porque yo he oído decir desa bendita gente que para repúblicos del mundo no los hay tan prudentes en todo él, y para guidores y adalides del camino del cielo, pocos les llegan. Son espejos donde se mira la honestidad, la católica dotrina, la singular prudencia, y, finalmente, la humildad profunda, basa sobre quien se levanta todo el edificio de la bienaventuranza.

BERGANZA.- Todo es así como lo dices.

«Y, siguiendo mi historia, digo que mis amos gustaron de que les llevase siempre el vademécum, lo que hice de muy buena voluntad; con lo cual tenía una vida de rey, y aun mejor, porque era descansada, a causa que los estudiantes dieron en burlarse conmigo, y domesticquéme con ellos de tal manera, que me metían la mano en la boca y los más chiquillos subían sobre mí. Arrojan los bonetes o sombreros, y yo se los volvía a la mano limpiamente y con muestras de grande regocijo. Dieron en darme de comer cuanto ellos podían, y gustaban de ver que, cuando me daban nueces o avellanas, las partía como mona, dejando las cáscaras y comiendo lo tierno. Tal hubo que, por hacer prueba de mi habilidad, me trujo en un pañuelo gran cantidad de ensalada, la cual comí como si fuera persona. Era tiempo de invierno, cuando campean en Sevilla los molletes y mantequillas, de quien era tan bien servido, que más de dos Antonios se empeñaron o vendieron para que yo almorzase. Finalmente, yo pasaba una vida de estudiante sin hambre y sin sarna, que es lo más que se puede encarecer para decir que era buena; porque si la sarna y la hambre no fuesen tan unas con los estudiantes, en las vidas no habría otra de más gusto y pasatiempo, porque corren parejas en ella la virtud y el gusto, y se pasa la mocedad aprendiendo y holgándose.

»Desta gloria y desta quietud me vino a quitar una señora que, a mi parecer, llaman por ahí razón de estado; que, cuando con ella se cumple, se ha de descumplir con otras razones muchas. Es el caso que aquellos señores maestros les pareció que la media hora que hay de lición a lición la ocupaban los estudiantes, no en repasar las liciones, sino en holgarse conmigo; y así, ordenaron a mis amos que no me llevasen más al estudio. Obedecieron, volviéronme a casa y a la antigua guarda de la puerta, y, sin acordarse señor el viejo de la merced que me había hecho de que de día y de noche anduviese suelto, volví a entregar el cuello a la cadena y el cuerpo a una esterilla que detrás de la puerta me pusieron.»

Cipión hermano, así el cielo te conceda el bien que desees, que, sin que te enfades, me dejes ahora filosofar un poco; porque si dejase de decir las cosas que en este instante me han venido a la memoria de aquellas que entonces me ocurrieron, me parece que no sería mi historia cabal ni de fruto alguno.

CIPIÓN.- Advierte, Berganza, no sea tentación del demonio esa gana de filosofar que dices te ha venido, porque no tiene la murmuración mejor velo para paliar y encubrir su maldad disoluta que darse a entender el murmurador que todo cuanto dice son sentencias de filósofos, y que el decir mal es reprehensión y el descubrir los defetos ajenos buen celo. Y no hay vida de ningún murmurante que, si la consideras y escudriñas, no la halles llena de vicios y de insolencias. Y debajo de saber esto, filosofea ahora cuanto quisieres.

BERGANZA.- Seguro puedes estar, Cipión, de que más murmure, porque así lo tengo prosupuesto.

«Es, pues, el caso, que como me estaba todo el día ocioso y la ociosidad sea madre de los pensamientos, di en repasar por la memoria algunos latines que me quedaron en ella de muchos que oí cuando fui con mis amos al estudio, con que, a mi parecer, me hallé algo más mejorado de entendimiento, y determiné, como si hablar supiera, aprovecharme dellos en las ocasiones que se me ofreciesen; pero en manera diferente de la que se suelen aprovechar algunos ignorantes.»

Hay algunos romancistas que en las conversaciones disparan de cuando en cuando con algún latín breve y compendioso, dando a entender a los que no lo entienden que son grandes latinos, y apenas saben declinar un nombre ni conjugar un verbo.

CIPIÓN.- Por menor daño tengo ése que el que hacen los que verdaderamente saben latín, de los cuales hay algunos tan imprudentes que, hablando con un zapatero o con un sastre, arrojan latines como agua.

BERGANZA.- Deso podremos inferir que tanto peca el que dice latines delante de quien los ignora, como el que los dice ignorándolos.

CIPIÓN.- Pues otra cosa puedes advertir, y es que hay algunos que no les escusa el ser latinos de ser asnos.

BERGANZA.- Pues ¿quién lo duda? La razón está clara, pues cuando en tiempo de los romanos hablaban todos latín, como lengua materna suya, algún majadero habría entre ellos, a quien no escusaría el hablar latín dejar de ser necio.

CIPIÓN.- Para saber callar en romance y hablar en latín, discreción es menester, hermano Berganza.

BERGANZA.- Así es, porque también se puede decir una necedad en latín como en romance, y yo he visto letrados tontos, y gramáticos pesados, y romancistas vareteados con sus listas de latín, que con mucha facilidad pueden enfadar al mundo, no una sino muchas veces.

CIPIÓN.- Dejemos esto, y comienza a decir tus filosofías.

BERGANZA.- Ya las he dicho: éstas son que acabo de decir.

CIPIÓN.- ¿Cuáles?

BERGANZA.- Estas de los latines y romances, que yo comencé y tú acabaste.

CIPIÓN.- ¿Al murmurar llamas filosofar? ¡Así va ello! Canoniza, canoniza, Berganza, a la maldita plaga de la murmuración, y dale el nombre que quisieres, que ella dará a nosotros el de cínicos, que quiere decir perros murmuradores; y por tu vida que calles ya y sigas tu historia.

BERGANZA.- ¿Cómo la tengo de seguir si callo?

CIPIÓN.- Quiero decir que la sigas de golpe, sin que la hagas que parezca pulpo, según la vas añadiendo colas.

BERGANZA.- Habla con propiedad: que no se llaman colas las del pulpo.

CIPIÓN.- Ése es el error que tuvo el que dijo que no era torpeza ni vicio nombrar las cosas por sus propios nombres, como si no fuese mejor, ya que sea forzoso nombrarlas, decirlas por circunloquios y rodeos que templen la asquerosidad que causa el oírlos por sus mismos nombres. Las honestas palabras dan indicio de la honestidad del que las pronuncia o las escribe.

BERGANZA.- Quiero creerte; «y digo que, no contenta mi fortuna de haberme quitado de mis estudios y de la vida que en ellos pasaba, tan regocijada y compuesta, y haberme puesto atraillado tras de una puerta, y de haber trocado la liberalidad de los estudiantes en la mezquinidad de la negra, ordenó de sobresaltarme en lo que ya por quietud y descanso tenía.»

Mira, Cipión, ten por cierto y averiguado, como yo lo tengo, que al desdichado las desdichas le buscan y le hallan, aunque se esconda en los últimos rincones de la tierra.

«Dígoles porque la negra de casa estaba enamorada de un negro, asimismo esclavo de casa, el cual negro dormía en el zaguán, que es entre la puerta de la calle y la de en medio, detrás de la cual yo estaba; y no se podían juntar sino de noche, y para esto habían hurtado o contrahecho las llaves; y así, las más de las noches bajaba la negra, y, tapándome la boca con algún pedazo de carne o queso, abría al negro, con quien se daba buen tiempo, facilitándole mi silencio, y a costa de muchas cosas que la negra hurtaba. Algunos días me estragaron la conciencia las dádivas de la negra, pareciéndome que sin ellas se me apretarían las ijadas y daría de mastín en galgo. Pero, en efeto, llevado de mi buen natural, quise responder a lo que a mi amo debía, pues tiraba sus gajes y comía su pan, como lo deben hacer no sólo los perros honrados, a quien se les da renombre de agradecidos, sino todos aquellos que sirven.»

CIPIÓN.- Esto sí, Berganza, quiero que pase por filosofía, porque son razones que consisten en buena verdad y en buen entendimiento; y adelante y no hagas sogas, por no decir cola, de tu historia.

BERGANZA.- Primero te quiero rogar me digas, si es que lo sabes, qué quiere decir filosofía; que, aunque yo la nombro, no sé lo que es; sólo me doy a entender que es cosa buena.

CIPIÓN.- Con brevedad te la diré. Este nombre se compone de dos nombres griegos, que son filos y sofía; filos quiere decir amor, y sofía, la ciencia; así que filosofía significa «amor de la ciencia», y filósofo, «amador de la ciencia».

BERGANZA.- Mucho sabes, Cipión. ¿Quién diablos te enseñó a ti nombres griegos?

CIPIÓN.- Verdaderamente, Berganza, que eres simple, pues desto haces caso; porque éstas son cosas que las saben los niños de la escuela, y también hay quien presume saber la lengua griega sin saberla, como la latina ignorándola.

BERGANZA.- Eso es lo que yo digo, y quisiera que a estos tales los pusieran en una prensa, y a fuerza de vueltas les sacaran el jugo de lo que saben, porque no anduviesen engañando el mundo con el oropel de sus gregüescos rotos y sus latines falsos, como hacen los portugueses con los negros de Guinea.

CIPIÓN.- Ahora sí, Berganza, que te puedes morder la lengua, y tarazármela yo, porque todo cuanto decimos es murmurar.

BERGANZA.- Sí, que no estoy obligado a hacer lo que he oído decir que hizo uno llamado Corondas, tirio, el cual puso ley que ninguno entrase en el ayuntamiento de su ciudad con armas, so pena de la vida. Descuidóse desto, y otro día entró en el cabildo ceñida la espada; advirtiéronselo y, acordándose de la pena por él puesta, al momento desenvainó su espada y se pasó con ella el pecho, y fue el primero que puso y quebrantó la ley y pagó la pena. Lo que yo dije no fue poner ley, sino prometer que me mordería la lengua cuando murmurase; pero ahora no van las cosas por el tenor y rigor de las antiguas: hoy se hace una ley y mañana se rompe, y quizá conviene que así sea. Ahora promete uno de enmendarse de sus vicios, y de allí a un momento cae en otros mayores. Una cosa es alabar la disciplina y otra el darse con ella, y, en efeto, del dicho al hecho hay gran trecho. Muérdase el diablo, que yo no quiero morderme ni hacer finezas detrás de una estera, donde de nadie soy visto que pueda alabar mi honrosa determinación.

CIPIÓN.- Según eso, Berganza, si tú fueras persona, fueras hipócrita, y todas las obras que hicieras fueran aparentes, fingidas y falsas, cubiertas con la capa de la virtud, sólo porque te alabaran, como todos los hipócritas hacen.

BERGANZA.- No sé lo que entonces hiciera; esto sé que quiero hacer ahora: que es no morderme, quedándome tantas cosas por decir que no sé cómo ni cuándo podré acabarlas; y más, estando temeroso que al salir del sol nos hemos de quedar a oscuras, faltándonos la habla.

CIPIÓN.- Mejor lo hará el cielo. Sigue tu historia y no te desvíes del camino carretero con impertinentes digresiones; y así, por larga que sea, la acabarás presto.

BERGANZA.- «Digo, pues, que, habiendo visto la insolencia, ladronicio y deshonestidad de los negros, determiné, como buen criado, estorbarlo, por los mejores medios que pudiese; y pude tan bien, que salí con mi intento. Bajaba la negra, como has oído, a refocilarse con el negro, fiada en que me enmudecían los pedazos de carne, pan o queso que me arrojaba...»

CIPIÓN.- Mucho. No te diviertas, pasa adelante.

BERGANZA.- Acuérdomme que cuando estudiaba oí decir al preceptor un refrán latino, que ellos llaman adagio, que decía: Habet bovem in lingua.

CIPIÓN.- ¡Oh, que en hora mala hayáis encajado vuestro latín! ¿Tan presto se te ha olvidado lo que poco ha dijimos contra los que entremeten latines en las conversaciones de romance?

BERGANZA.- Este latín viene aquí de molde; que has de saber que los atenienses usaban, entre otras, de una moneda sellada con la figura de un buey, y cuando algún juez dejaba de decir o hacer lo que era razón y justicia, por estar cohechado, decían: «Este tiene el buey en la lengua».

CIPIÓN.- La aplicación falta.

BERGANZA.- ¿No está bien clara, si las dádivas de la negra me tuvieron muchos días mudo, que ni quería ni osaba ladrarla cuando bajaba a verse con su negro enamorado? Por lo que vuelvo a decir que pueden mucho las dádivas.

CIPIÓN.- Ya te he respondido que pueden mucho, y si no fuera por no hacer ahora una larga digresión, con mil ejemplos probara lo mucho que las dádivas pueden; mas quizá lo diré, si el cielo me concede tiempo, lugar y habla para contarte mi vida.

BERGANZA.- Dios te dé lo que desees, y escucha.

«Finalmente, mi buena intención rompió por las malas dádivas de la negra; a la cual, bajando una noche muy oscura a su acostumbrado pasatiempo, arremetí sin ladrar, porque no se alborotasen los de casa, y en un instante le hice pedazos toda la camisa y le arranqué un pedazo de muslo: burla que fue bastante a tenerla de veras más de ocho días en la cama, fingiendo para con sus amos no sé qué enfermedad. Sanó, volvió otra noche, y yo volví a la pelea con mi perra, y, sin morderla, la arañé todo el cuerpo como si la hubiera cardado como manta. Nuestras batallas eran a la sorda, de las cuales salía siempre vencedor, y la negra, malparada y peor contenta. Pero sus enojos se parecían bien en mi pelo y en mi salud: alzóseme con la ración y los huesos, y los míos poco a poco iban señalando los nudos del espinazo. Con todo esto, aunque me quitaron el comer, no me pudieron quitar el ladrar. Pero la negra, por acabarme de una vez, me trujo una esponja frita con manteca; conocí la maldad; vi que era peor que comer zarazas, porque a quien la come se le hincha el estómago y no sale dél sin llevarse tras sí la vida. Y, pareciéndome ser imposible guardarme de las asechanzas de tan indignados enemigos, acordé de poner tierra en medio, quitándomeles delante de los ojos.

Holgáronse los corchetes, y dijeron que si era de ayuda a todos sería de provecho. Quisieron asirme para llevarme, y mi amo dijo que no era menester asirme, que yo me iría, porque le conocía.

»Háseme olvidado decirte que las carlanças con puntas de acero que saqué cuando me desgarré y ausenté del ganado me las quitó un gitano en una venta, y ya en Sevilla andaba sin ellas; pero el alguacil me puso un collar tachonado todo de latón morisco.»

Considera, Cipión, ahora esta rueda variable de la fortuna mía: ayer me vi estudiante y hoy me vees corchete.

CIPIÓN.- Así va el mundo, y no hay para qué te pongas ahora a esagerar los vaivenes de fortuna, como si hubiera mucha diferencia de ser mozo de un jifero a serlo de un corchete. No puedo sufrir ni llevar en paciencia oír las quejas que dan de la fortuna algunos hombres que la mayor que tuvieron fue tener premisas y esperanzas de llegar a ser escuderos. ¡Con qué maldiciones la maldicen! ¡Con cuántos improperios la deshonran! Y no por más de que porque piense el que los oye que de alta, próspera y buena ventura han venido a la desdichada y baja en que los miran.

BERGANZA.- Tienes razón; «y has de saber que este alguacil tenía amistad con un escribano, con quien se acompañaba; estaban los dos amancebados con dos mujercillas, no de poco más a menos, sino de menos en todo; verdad es que tenían algo de buenas caras, pero mucho de desenfado y de taimería putesca. Éstas les servían de red y de anzuelo para pescar en seco, en esta forma: vestíanse de suerte que por la pinta descubrían la figura, y a tiro de arcabuz mostraban ser damas de la vida libre; andaban siempre a caza de extranjeros, y, cuando llegaba la vendeja a Cádiz y a Sevilla, llegaba la huella de su ganancia, no quedando bretón con quien no embistiesen; y, en cayendo el grasiento con alguna destas limpias, avisaban al alguacil y al escribano adónde y a qué posada iban, y, en estando juntos, les daban asalto y los prendían por amancebados; pero nunca los llevaban a la cárcel, a causa que los extranjeros siempre redimían la vejación con dineros.

camuza que había puesto en una silla a los pies de la cama, donde tenía dineros para pagar su libertad, y no parecieron los follados, ni podían parecer; porque, así como yo entré en el aposento, llegó a mis narices un olor de tocino que me consoló todo; descubríle con el olfato, y halléle en una faldriquera de los follados. Digo que hallé en ella un pedazo de jamón famoso, y, por gozarle y poderle sacar sin rumor, saqué los follados a la calle, y allí me entregué en el jamón a toda mi voluntad, y cuando volví al aposento hallé que el bretón daba voces diciendo en lenguaje adúltero y bastardo, aunque se entendía, que le volviesen sus calzas, que en ellas tenía cincuenta escuti d'oro in oro. Imaginó el escribano o que la Colindres o los corchetes se los habían robado; el alguacil pensó lo mismo; llamólos aparte, no confesó ninguno, y diéronse al diablo todos. Viendo yo lo que pasaba, volví a la calle donde había dejado los follados, para volverlos, pues a mí no me aprovechaba nada el dinero; no los hallé, porque ya algún venturoso que pasó se los había llevado. Como el alguacil vio que el bretón no tenía dinero para el cohecho, se desesperaba, y pensó sacar de la huéspeda de casa lo que el bretón no tenía; llamóla, y vino medio desnuda, y como oyó las voces y quejas del bretón, y a la Colindres desnuda y llorando, al alguacil en cólera y al escribano enojado y a los corchetes despabilando lo que hallaban en el aposento, no le plugo mucho. Mandó el alguacil que se cubriese y se viniese con él a la cárcel, porque consentía en su casa hombres y mujeres de mal vivir. ¡Aquí fue ello! Aquí sí que fue cuando se aumentaron las voces y creció la confusión; porque dijo la huéspeda: "Señor alguacil y señor escribano, no conmigo tretas, que entrevo toda costura; no conmigo dijes ni poleos: callen la boca y váyanse con Dios; si no, por mi santiguada que arroje el bodegón por la ventana y que saque a plaza toda la chirinola desta historia; que bien conozco a la señora Colindres y sé que ha muchos meses que es su cobertor el señor alguacil; y no hagan que me aclare más, sino vuélvase el dinero a este señor, y quedemos todos por buenos; porque yo soy mujer honrada y tengo un marido con su carta de ejecutoria, y con a perpenan rei de memoria, con sus colgaderos de plomo, Dios sea loado, y hago este oficio muy limpiamente y sin daño de barras. El arancel tengo clavado donde todo el mundo le vea; y no conmigo cuentos, que, por Dios, que sé despolvorearme. ¡Bonita soy yo para que por mi orden entren mujeres con los huéspedes! Ellos tienen las llaves de sus aposentos, y yo no soy quince, que tengo de ver tras siete paredes".

»Pasmados quedaron mis amos de haber oído la arenga de la huéspeda y de ver cómo les leía la historia de sus vidas; pero, como vieron que no tenían de quién sacar dinero si della no, porfiaban en llevarla a la cárcel. Quejábase ella al cielo de la sinrazón y justicia que la hacían, estando su marido ausente y siendo tan principal hidalgo. El bretón bramaba por sus cincuenta escuti. Los corchetes porfiaban que ellos no habían visto los follados, ni Dios permitiese lo tal. El escribano, por lo callado, insistía al alguacil que mirase los vestidos de la Colindres, que le daba sospecha que ella debía de tener los cincuenta escuti, por tener de costumbre visitar los escondrijos y faldriqueras de aquellos que con ella se envolvían. Ella decía que el bretón estaba borracho y que debía de mentir en lo del dinero. En efeto, todo era confusión, gritos y juramentos, sin llevar modo de apaciguarse, ni se apaciguaran si al instante no entrara en el aposento el teniente de asistente, que, viniendo a visitar aquella posada, las voces le llevaron adonde era la grita. Preguntó la causa de aquellas voces; la huéspeda se la dio muy por menudo: dijo quién era la ninfa Colindres, que ya estaba vestida; publicó la pública amistad suya y del alguacil; echó en la calle sus tretas y modo de robar; disculpóse a sí misma de que con su consentimiento jamás había entrado en su casa mujer de mala sospecha; canonizóse por santa y a su marido por un bendito, y dio voces a una moza que fuese corriendo y trujese de un cofre la carta ejecutoria de su marido, para que la viese el señor tiniente, diciéndole que por ella echaría de ver que mujer de tan honrado marido no podía hacer cosa mala; y que si tenía aquel oficio de casa de camas, era a no poder más: que Dios sabía lo que le pesaba, y si quisiera ella tener alguna renta y pan cotidiano para pasar la vida, que tener aquel ejercicio. El teniente, enfadado de su mucho hablar y presumir de ejecutoria, le dijo: "Hermana camera, yo quiero creer que vuestro marido tiene carta de hidalguía con que vos me confeséis que es hidalgo mesonero". "Y con mucha honra -respondió la huéspeda-. Y ¿qué linaje hay en el mundo, por bueno que sea, que no tenga algún dime y direte?" "Lo que yo os digo, hermana, es que os cubráis, que habéis de venir a la cárcel". La cual nueva dio con ella en el suelo; arañóse el rostro; alzó el grito; pero, con todo eso, el teniente, demasiadamente severo, los llevó a todos a la cárcel; conviene a saber: al bretón, a la Colindres y a la huéspeda. Después supe que el bretón perdió sus cincuenta escuti, y más diez, en que le condenaron en las costas; la huéspeda pagó otro tanto, y la Colindres salió libre por la puerta afuera. Y el mismo día que la soltaron pescó a un marinero, que pagó por el bretón, con el mismo embuste del soplo; porque veas, Cipión, cuántos y cuán grandes inconvenientes nacieron de mi golosina.»

CIPIÓN.- Mejor dijeras de la bellaquería de tu amo.

BERGANZA.- Pues escucha, que aún más adelante tiraban la barra, puesto que me pesa de decir mal de alguaciles y de escribanos.

CIPIÓN.- Sí, que decir mal de uno no es decirlo de todos; sí, que muchos y muy muchos escribanos hay buenos, fieles y legales, y amigos de hacer placer sin daño de tercero; sí, que no todos entretienen los pleitos, ni avisan a las partes, ni todos llevan más de sus derechos, ni todos van buscando e inquiriendo las vidas ajenas para ponerlas en tela de juicio, ni todos se aúnan con el juez para «háceme la barba y hacerte he el copete», ni todos los alguaciles se conciertan con los vagamundos y fulleros, ni tienen todos las amigas de tu amo para sus embustes. Muchos y muy muchos hay hidalgos por naturaleza y de hidalgas condiciones; muchos no son arrojados, insolentes, ni mal criados, ni rateros, como los que andan por los mesones midiendo las espadas a los extranjeros, y, hallándolas un pelo más de la marca, destruyen a sus dueños. Sí, que no todos como prenden sueltan, y son jueces y abogados cuando quieren.

BERGANZA.- «Más alto picaba mi amo; otro camino era el suyo; presumía de valiente y de hacer prisiones famosas; sustentaba la valentía sin peligro de su persona, pero a costa de su bolsa. Un día acometió en la Puerta de Jerez él solo a seis famosos rufianes, sin que yo le pudiese ayudar en nada, porque llevaba con un freno de cordel impedida la boca (que así me traía de día, y de noche me le quitaba). Quedé maravillado de ver su atrevimiento, su brío y su desnudo; así se entraba y salía por las seis espadas de los rufos como si fueran varas de mimbre; era cosa maravillosa ver la ligereza con que acometía, las estocadas que tiraba, los reparos, la cuenta, el ojo alerta porque no le tomasen las espaldas. Finalmente, él quedó en mi opinión y en la de todos cuantos la pendencia miraron y supieron por un nuevo Rodamonte, habiendo llevado a sus enemigos desde la Puerta de Jerez hasta los mármoles del Colegio de Mase Rodrigo, que hay más de cien pasos. Dejólos encerrados, y volvió a coger los trofeos de la batalla, que fueron tres vainas, y luego se las fue a mostrar al asistente, que, si mal no me acuerdo, lo era entonces el licenciado Sarmiento de Valladares, famoso por la destrucción de La Saucedá. Miraban a mi amo por las calles do pasaba, señalándole con el dedo, como si dijeran: "Aquél es el valiente que se atrevió a reñir solo con la flor de los bravos de la Andalucía". En dar vueltas a la ciudad, para dejarse ver, se pasó lo que quedaba del día, y la noche nos halló en Triana, en una calle junto al Molino de la Pólvora; y, habiendo mi amo avizorado (como en la jácara se dice) si alguien le veía, se entró en una casa, y yo tras él, y hallamos en un patio a todos los jayanes de la pendencia, sin capas ni espadas, y todos desabrochados; y uno, que debía de ser el huésped, tenía un gran jarro de vino en la una mano y en la otra una copa grande de taberna, la cual, colmándola de vino generoso y espumante, brindaba a toda la compañía. Apenas hubieron visto a mi amo, cuando todos se fueron a él con los brazos abiertos, y todos le brindaron, y él hizo la razón a todos, y aun la hiciera a otros tantos si le fuera algo en ello, por ser de condición afable y amigo de no enfadar a nadie por pocas cosas.

»Quererte yo contar ahora lo que allí se trató, la cena que cenaron, las peleas que se contaron, los hurtos que se refirieron, las damas que de su trato se calificaron y las que se reprobaron, las alabanzas que los unos a los otros se dieron, los bravos ausentes que se nombraron, la destreza que allí se puso en su punto, levantándose en mitad de la cena a poner en práctica las tretas que se les ofrecían, esgrimiendo con las manos, los vocablos tan exquisitos de que usaban; y, finalmente, el talle de la persona del huésped, a quien todos respetaban como a señor y padre, sería meterme en un laberinto donde no me fuese posible salir cuando quisiese.

»Finalmente, vine a entender con toda certeza que el dueño de la casa, a quien llamaban Monipodio, era encubridor de ladrones y pala de rufianes, y que la gran pendencia de mi amo había sido primero concertada con ellos, con las circunstancias del retirarse y de dejar las vainas, las cuales pagó mi amo allí, luego, de contado, con todo cuanto Monipodio dijo que había costado la cena, que se concluyó casi al amanecer, con mucho gusto de todos. Y fue su postre dar soplo a mi amo de un rufián forastero que, nuevo y flamante, había llegado a la ciudad; debía de ser más valiente que ellos, y de envidia le soplaron. Prendióle mi amo la siguiente noche, desnudo en la cama: que si vestido estuviera, yo vi en su talle que no se dejara prender tan a mansalva. Con esta prisión que sobrevino sobre la pendencia, creció la fama de mi cobarde, que lo era mi amo más que una liebre, y a fuerza de meriendas y tragos sustentaba la fama de ser valiente, y todo cuanto con su oficio y con sus inteligencias granjeaba se le iba y desaguaba por la canal de la valentía.

»Pero ten paciencia, y escucha ahora un cuento que le sucedió, sin añadir ni quitar de la verdad una tilde. Dos ladrones hurtaron en Antequera un caballo muy bueno; trujéronle a Sevilla, y para venderle sin peligro usaron de un ardid que, a mi parecer, tiene del agudo y del discreto. Fuéronse a posar a posadas diferentes, y el uno se fue a la justicia y pidió por una petición que Pedro de Losada le debía cuatrocientos reales prestados, como parecía por una cédula firmada de su nombre, de la cual hacía presentación. Mandó el tiniente que el tal Losada reconociese la cédula, y que si la reconociese, le sacasen prendas de la cantidad o le pusiesen en la cárcel; tocó hacer esta diligencia a mi amo y al escribano su amigo; llevóles el ladrón a la posada del otro, y al punto reconoció su firma y confesó la deuda, y señaló por prenda de la ejecución el caballo, el cual visto por mi amo, le creció el ojo; y le marcó por suyo si acaso se vendiese. Dio el ladrón por pasados los términos de la ley, y el caballo se puso en venta y se remató en quinientos reales en un tercero que mi amo echó de manga para que se le comprase. Valía el caballo tanto y medio más de lo que dieron por él. Pero, como el bien del vendedor estaba en la brevedad de la venta, a la primer postura remató su mercaduría. Cobró el un ladrón la deuda que no le debían, y el otro la carta de pago que no había menester, y mi amo se quedó con el caballo, que para él fue peor que el Seyano lo fue para sus dueños. Mondaron luego la haza los ladrones, y, de allí a dos días, después de haber trastejado mi amo las guarniciones y otras faltas del caballo, pareció sobre él en la plaza de San Francisco, más hueco y pomposo que aldeano vestido de fiesta. Diéronle mil parabienes de la buena compra, afirmándole que valía ciento y cincuenta ducados como un huevo un maravedí; y él, volteando y revolviendo el caballo, representaba su tragedia en el teatro de la referida plaza. Y, estando en sus caracoles y rodeos, llegaron dos hombres de buen talle y de mejor ropaje, y el uno dijo: "¡Vive Dios, que éste es Piedehierro, mi caballo, que ha pocos días que me le hurtaron en Antequera!". Todos los que venían con él, que eran cuatro criados, dijeron que así era la verdad: que aquél era Piedehierro, el caballo que le habían hurtado. Pasmóse mi amo, querellóse el dueño, hubo pruebas, y fueron las que hizo el dueño tan buenas, que salió la sentencia en su favor y mi amo fue desposeído del caballo. Súpose la burla y la industria de los ladrones, que por manos e intervención de la misma justicia vendieron lo que habían hurtado, y casi todos se holgaban de que la codicia de mi amo le hubiese rompido el saco.

el atambor, y así, determiné de acomodarme con él, si él quisiese, y seguir aquella jornada, aunque me llevase a Italia o a Flandes; porque me parece a mí, y aun a ti te debe parecer lo mismo, que, puesto que dice el refrán "quien necio es en su villa, necio es en Castilla", el andar tierras y comunicar con diversas gentes hace a los hombres discretos.»

CIPIÓN.- Es eso tan verdad, que me acuerdo haber oído decir a un amo que tuve de bonísimo ingenio que al famoso griego llamado Ulises le dieron renombre de prudente por sólo haber andado muchas tierras y comunicado con diversas gentes y varias naciones; y así, alabo la intención que tuviste de irte donde te llevasen.

BERGANZA.- «Es, pues, el caso que el atambor, por tener con qué mostrar más sus chacorrerías, comenzó a enseñarme a bailar al son del atambor y a hacer otras monerías, tan ajenas de poder aprenderlas otro perro que no fuera yo como las oirás cuando te las diga.

»Por acabarse el distrito de la comisión, se marchaba poco a poco; no había comisario que nos limitase; el capitán era mozo, pero muy buen caballero y gran cristiano; el alférez no hacía muchos meses que había dejado la Corte y el tinelo; el sargento era matrero y sagaz y grande arriero de compañías, desde donde se levantan hasta el embarcadero. Iba la compañía llena de rufianes churrulleros, los cuales hacían algunas insolencias por los lugares do pasábamos, que redundaban en maldecir a quien no lo merecía. Infelicidad es del buen príncipe ser culpado de sus súbditos por la culpa de sus súbditos, a causa que los unos son verdugos de los otros, sin culpa del señor; pues, aunque quiera y lo procure no puede remediar estos daños, porque todas o las más cosas de la guerra traen consigo aspereza, riguridad y desconveniencia.

»En fin, en menos de quince días, con mi buen ingenio y con la diligencia que puso el que había escogido por patrón, supe saltar por el Rey de Francia y a no saltar por la mala tabernera. Enseñóme a hacer corvetas como caballo napolitano y a andar a la redonda como mula de atahona, con otras cosas que, si yo no tuviera cuenta en no adelantarme a mostrarlas, pusiera en duda si era algún demonio en figura de perro el que las hacía. Púsome nombre del "perro sabio", y no habíamos llegado al alojamiento cuando, tocando su atambor, andaba por todo el lugar pregonando que todas las personas que quisiesen venir a ver las maravillosas gracias y habilidades del perro sabio en tal casa o en tal hospital las mostraban, a ocho o a cuatro maravedís, según era el pueblo grande o chico. Con estos encarecimientos no quedaba persona en todo el lugar que no me fuese a ver, y ninguno había que no saliese admirado y contento de haberme visto.

Triunfaba mi amo con la mucha ganancia, y sustentaba seis camaradas como unos reyes. La codicia y la envidia despertó en los rufianes voluntad de hurtarme, y andaban buscando ocasión para ello: que esto del ganar de comer holgando tiene muchos aficionados y golosos; por esto hay tantos titereros en España, tantos que muestran retablos, tantos que venden alfileres y coplas, que todo su caudal, aunque le vendiesen todo, no llega a poderse sustentar un día; y, con esto, los unos y los otros no salen de los bodegones y tabernas en todo el año; por do me doy a entender que de otra parte que de la de sus oficios sale la corriente de sus borracheras. Toda esta gente es vagamunda, inútil y sin provecho; esponjas del vino y gorgojos del pan.»

CIPIÓN.- No más, Berganza; no volvamos a lo pasado: sigue, que se va la noche, y no querría que al salir del sol quedásemos a la sombra del silencio.

BERGANZA.- Tenle y escucha.

«Como sea cosa fácil añadir a lo ya inventado, viendo mi amo cuán bien sabía imitar el corcel napolitano, hízome unas cubiertas de guadamacé y una silla pequeña, que me acomodó en las espaldas, y sobre ella puso una figura liviana de un hombre con una lancilla de correr sortija, y enseñóme a correr derechamente a una sortija que entre dos palos ponía; y el día que había de correrla pregonaba que aquel día corría sortija el perro sabio y hacía otras nuevas y nunca vistas galanterías, las cuales de mi santiscario, como dicen, las hacía por no sacar mentiroso a mi amo.

»Llegamos, pues, por nuestras jornadas contadas a Montilla, villa del famoso y gran cristiano Marqués de Priego, señor de la casa de Aguilar y de Montilla. Alojaron a mi amo, porque él lo procuró, en un hospital; echó luego el ordinario bando, y, como ya la fama se había adelantado a llevar las nuevas de las habilidades y gracias del perro sabio, en menos de una hora se llenó el patio de gente. Alegróse mi amo viendo que la cosecha iba de guilla, y mostróse aquel día chacorrero en demasía. Lo primero en que comenzaba la fiesta era en los saltos que yo daba por un aro de cedazo, que parecía de cuba: conjurábame por las ordinarias preguntas, y cuando él bajaba una varilla de membrillo que en la mano tenía, era señal del salto; y cuando la tenía alta, de que me estuviese quedo. El primer conjuro deste día (memorable entre todos los de mi vida) fue decirme: "Ea, Gavilán amigo, salta por aquel viejo verde que tú conoces que se escabecha las barbas; y si no quieres, salta por la pompa y el aparato de doña Pimpinela de Plafagonia, que fue compañera de la moza gallega que servía en Valdeastillas. ¿No te cuadra el conjuro, hijo Gavilán? Pues salta por el bachiller Pasillas, que se firma licenciado sin tener grado alguno. ¡Oh, perezoso estás!

¿Por qué no saltas? Pero ya entiendo y alcanzo tus marrullerías: ahora salta por el licor de Esquivias, famoso al par del de Ciudad Real, San Martín y Ribadavia". Bajó la varilla y salté yo, y noté sus malicias y malas entrañas.

»Volvióse luego al pueblo y en voz alta dijo: "No piense vuesa merced, senado valeroso, que es cosa de burla lo que este perro sabe: veinte y cuatro piezas le tengo enseñadas que por la menor dellas volaría un gavilán; quiero decir que por ver la menor se pueden caminar treinta leguas. Sabe bailar la zarabanda y chacona mejor que su inventora misma; bébese una azumbre de vino sin dejar gota; entona un sol fa mi retan bien como un sacristán; todas estas cosas, y otras muchas que me quedan por decir, las irán viendo vuestas mercedes en los días que estuviere aquí la compañía; y por ahora dé otro salto nuestro sabio, y luego entraremos en lo grueso". Con esto suspendió el auditorio, que había llamado senado, y les encendió el deseo de no dejar de ver todo lo que yo sabía.

»Volvióse a mí mi amo y dijo: "Volved, hijo Gavilán, y con gentil agilidad y destreza deshaced los saltos que habéis hecho; pero ha de ser a devoción de la famosa hechicera que dicen que hubo en este lugar". Apenas hubo dicho esto, cuando alzó la voz la hospitalera, que era una vieja, al parecer, de más de sesenta años, diciendo: "¡Bellaco, charlatán, embaidor y hijo de puta, aquí no hay hechicera alguna! Si lo decís por la Camacha, ya ella pagó su pecado, y está donde Dios se sabe; si lo decís por mí, chacorrero, ni yo soy ni he sido hechicera en mi vida; y si he tenido fama de haberlo sido, merced a los testigos falsos, y a la ley del encaje, y al juez arrojadizo y mal informado, ya sabe todo el mundo la vida que hago en penitencia, no de los hechizos que no hice, sino de otros muchos pecados: otros que como pecadora he cometido. Así que, socarrón tamborilero, salid del hospital: si no, por vida de mi santiguada que os haga salir más que de paso". Y, con esto, comenzó a dar tantos gritos y a decir tantas y tan atropelladas injurias a mi amo, que le puso en confusión y sobresalto; finalmente, no dejó que pasase adelante la fiesta en ningún modo. No le pesó a mi amo del alboroto, porque se quedó con los dineros y aplazó para otro día y en otro hospital lo que en aquél había faltado. Fuese la gente maldiciendo a la vieja, añadiendo al nombre de hechicera el de bruja, y el de barbuda sobre vieja. Con todo esto, nos quedamos en el hospital aquella noche; y, encontrándome la vieja en el corral solo, me dijo: "¿Eres tú, hijo Montiel? ¿Eres tú, por ventura, hijo?". Alcé la cabeza y miréla muy de espacio; lo cual visto por ella, con lágrimas en los ojos se vino a mí y me echó los brazos al cuello, y si la dejara me besara en la boca; pero tuve asco y no lo consentí.»

besarse de una vieja.

BERGANZA.- Esto que ahora te quiero contar te lo había de haber dicho al principio de mi cuento, y así escusáramos la admiración que nos causó el vernos con habla.

«Porque has de saber que la vieja me dijo: "Hijo Montiel, vente tras mí y sabrás mi aposento, y procura que esta noche nos veamos a solas en él, que yo dejaré abierta la puerta; y sabe que tengo muchas cosas que decirte de tu vida y para tu provecho". Bajé yo la cabeza en señal de obedecerla, por lo cual ella se acabó de enterar en que yo era el perro Montiel que buscaba, según después me lo dijo. Quedé atónito y confuso, esperando la noche, por ver en lo que paraba aquel misterio, o prodigio, de haberme hablado la vieja; y, como había oído llamarla de hechicera, esperaba de su vista y habla grandes cosas. Llegóse, en fin, el punto de verme con ella en su aposento, que era oscuro, estrecho y bajo, y solamente claro con la débil luz de un candil de barro que en él estaba; atizóle la vieja, y sentóse sobre una arquilla, y llegóme junto a sí, y, sin hablar palabra, me volvió a abrazar, y yo volví a tener cuenta con que no me besase. Lo primero que me dijo fue: »"Bien esperaba yo en el cielo que, antes que estos mis ojos se cerrasen con el último sueño, te había de ver, hijo mío; y, ya que te he visto, venga la muerte y lléveme desta cansada vida. Has de saber, hijo, que en esta villa vivió la más famosa hechicera que hubo en el mundo, a quien llamaron la Camacha de Montilla; fue tan única en su oficio, que las Eritos, las Circes, las Medeias, de quien he oído decir que están las historias llenas, no la igualaron. Ella congelaba las nubes cuando quería, cubriendo con ellas la faz del sol, y cuando se le antojaba volvía sereno el más turbado cielo; traía los hombres en un instante de lejos tierras, remediaba maravillosamente las doncellas que habían tenido algún descuido en guardar su entereza, cubría a las viudas de modo que con honestidad fuesen deshonestas, descasaba las casadas y casaba las que ella quería. Por diciembre tenía rosas frescas en su jardín y por enero segaba trigo. Esto de hacer nacer berros en una artesa era lo menos que ella hacía, ni el hacer ver en un espejo, o en la uña de una criatura, los vivos o los muertos que le pedían que mostrase. Tuvo fama que convertía los hombres en animales, y que se había servido de un sacristán seis años, en forma de asno, real y verdaderamente, lo que yo nunca he podido alcanzar cómo se haga, porque lo que se dice de aquellas antiguas magas, que convertían los hombres en bestias, dicen los que más saben que no era otra cosa sino que ellas, con su mucha hermosura y con sus halagos, atraían los hombres de manera a que las quisiesen bien, y los sujetaban de suerte, sirviéndose dellos en todo cuanto querían, que parecían bestias. Pero en ti, hijo mío, la experiencia me muestra lo contrario: que sé que eres persona racional y te veo en semejanza de perro, si ya no es que esto se hace con aquella ciencia que llaman tropelía, que hace parecer una cosa por otra. Sea lo que fuere, lo que me pesa es que yo ni tu madre, que fuimos discípulas de la buena Camacha, nunca llegamos a saber tanto como ella; y no por falta de ingenio, ni de habilidad, ni de ánimo, que antes nos sobraba que faltaba, sino por sobra de su malicia, que nunca quiso enseñarnos las cosas mayores, porque las reservaba para ella.

»"Tu madre, hijo, se llamó la Montiela, que después de la Camacha fue famosa; yo me llamo la Cañizares, si ya no tan sabia como las dos, a lo menos de tan buenos deseos como cualquiera dellas. Verdad es que el ánimo que tu madre tenía de hacer y entrar en un cerco y encerrarse en él con una legión de demonios, no le hacía ventaja la misma Camacha. Yo fui siempre algo medrosilla; con conjurar media legión me contentaba, pero, con paz sea dicho de entrambas, en esto de conficionar las unturas con que las brujas nos untamos, a ninguna de las dos diera ventaja, ni la daré a cuantas hoy siguen y guardan nuestras reglas. Que has de saber, hijo, que como yo he visto y veo que la vida, que corre sobre las ligeras alas del tiempo, se acaba, he querido dejar todos los vicios de la hechicería, en que estaba engolfada muchos años había, y sólo me he quedado con la curiosidad de ser bruja, que es un vicio dificultosísimo de dejar. Tu madre hizo lo mismo: de muchos vicios se apartó, muchas buenas obras hizo en esta vida, pero al fin murió bruja; y no murió de enfermedad alguna, sino de dolor de que supo que la Camacha, su maestra, de envidia que la tuvo porque se le iba subiendo a las barbas en saber tanto como ella (o por otra pendenzuela de celos, que nunca pude averiguar), estando tu madre preñada y llegándose la hora del parto, fue su comadre la Camacha, la cual recibió en sus manos lo que tu madre parió, y mostróle que había parido dos perritos; y, así como los vio, dijo: '¡Aquí hay maldad, aquí hay bellaquería!'. 'Pero, hermana Montiela, tu amiga soy; yo encubriré este parto, y atiende tú a estar sana, y haz cuenta que esta tu desgracia queda sepultada en el mismo silencio; no te dé pena alguna este suceso, que ya sabes tú que puedo yo saber que si no es con Rodríguez, el ganapán tu amigo, días ha que no tratas con otro; así que, este perruno parto de otra parte viene y algún misterio contiene'. Admiradas quedamos tu madre y yo, que me hallé presente a todo, del extraño suceso. La Camacha se fue y se llevó los cachorros; yo me quedé con tu madre para asistir a su regalo, la cual no podía creer lo que le había sucedido.

»"Llegóse el fin de la Camacha, y, estando en la última hora de su vida, llamó a tu madre y le dijo como ella había convertido a sus hijos en perros por cierto enojo que con ella tuvo; pero que no tuviese pena, que ellos volverían a su ser cuando menos lo pensasen; mas que no podía ser primero que ellos por sus mismos ojos viesen lo siguiente:

Volverán en su forma verdadera cuando vieren con presta diligencia

derribar los soberbios levantados,
y alzar a los humildes abatidos,
con poderosa mano para hacello.

»"Esto dijo la Camacha a tu madre al tiempo de su muerte, como ya te he dicho. Tomólo tu madre por escrito y de memoria, y yo lo fijé en la mía para si sucediese tiempo de poderlo decir a alguno de vosotros; y, para poder conoceros, a todos los perros que veo de tu color los llamo con el nombre de tu madre, no por pensar que los perros han de saber el nombre, sino por ver si respondían a ser llamados tan diferentemente como se llaman los otros perros. Y esta tarde, como te vi hacer tantas cosas y que te llaman el perro sabio, y también como alzaste la cabeza a mirarme cuando te llamé en el corral, he creído que tú eres hijo de la Montiel, a quien con grandísimo gusto doy noticia de tus sucesos y del modo con que has de cobrar tu forma primera; el cual modo quisiera yo que fuera tan fácil como el que se dice de Apuleyo en El asno de oro, que consistía en sólo comer una rosa. Pero este tuyo va fundado en acciones ajenas y no en tu diligencia. Lo que has de hacer, hijo, es encomendarte a Dios allá en tu corazón, y espera que éstas, que no quiero llamarlas profecías, sino adivinanzas, han de suceder presto y prósperamente; que, pues la buena de la Camacha las dijo, sucederán sin duda alguna, y tú y tu hermano, si es vivo, os veréis como deseáis.

»"De lo que a mí me pesa es que estoy tan cerca de mi acabamiento que no tendré lugar de verlo. Muchas veces he querido preguntar a mi cabrón qué fin tendrá vuestro suceso, pero no me he atrevido, porque nunca a lo que le preguntamos responde a derechas, sino con razones torcidas y de muchos sentidos. Así que, a este nuestro amo y señor no hay que preguntarle nada, porque con una verdad mezcla mil mentiras; y, a lo que yo he colegido de sus respuestas, él no sabe nada de lo por venir ciertamente, sino por conjeturas. Con todo esto, nos trae tan engañadas a las que somos brujas, que, con hacernos mil burlas, no le podemos dejar. Vamos a verle muy lejos de aquí, a un gran campo, donde nos juntamos infinidad de gente, brujos y brujas, y allí nos da de comer desabridamente, y pasan otras cosas que en verdad y en Dios y en mi ánima que no me atrevo a contarlas, según son sucias y asquerosas, y no quiero ofender tus castas orejas. Hay opinión que no vamos a estos convites sino con la fantasía, en la cual nos representa el demonio las imágenes de todas aquellas cosas que después contamos que nos han sucedido. Otros dicen que no, sino que verdaderamente vamos en cuerpo y en ánima; y entrambas opiniones tengo para mí que son verdaderas, puesto que nosotras no sabemos cuándo vamos de una o de otra manera, porque todo lo que nos pasa en la fantasía es tan intensamente que no hay diferenciarlo de cuando vamos real y verdaderamente. Algunas experiencias desto han hecho los señores inquisidores con algunas de nosotras que han tenido presas, y pienso que han hallado ser verdad lo que digo.

»"Quisiera yo, hijo, apartarme deste pecado, y para ello he hecho mis diligencias: heme acogido a ser hospitalera; curo a los pobres, y algunos se mueren que me dan a mí la vida con lo que me mandan o con lo que se les queda entre los remiendos, por el cuidado que yo tengo de espulgarlos los vestidos. Rezo poco y en público, murmuro mucho y en secreto. Vame mejor con ser hipócrita que con ser pecadora declarada: las apariencias de mis buenas obras presentes van borrando en la memoria de los que me conocen las malas obras pasadas. En efeto, la santidad fingida no hace daño a ningún tercero, sino al que la usa. Mira, hijo Montiel, este consejo te doy: que seas bueno en todo cuanto pudieres; y si has de ser malo, procura no parecerlo en todo cuanto pudieres. Bruja soy, no te lo niego; bruja y hechicera fue tu madre, que tampoco te lo puedo negar; pero las buenas apariencias de las dos podían acreditarlos en todo el mundo. Tres días antes que muriese habíamos estado las dos en un valle de los Montes Perineos en una gran gira, y, con todo eso, cuando murió fue con tal sosiego y reposo, que si no fueron algunos visajes que hizo un cuarto de hora antes que rindiese el alma, no parecía sino que estaba en aquélla como en un tálamo de flores. Llevaba atravesados en el corazón sus dos hijos, y nunca quiso, aun en el artículo de la muerte, perdonar a la Camacha: tal era ella de entera y firme en sus cosas. Yo le cerré los ojos y fui con ella hasta la sepultura; allí la dejé para no verla más, aunque no tengo perdida la esperanza de verla antes que me muera, porque se ha dicho por el lugar que la han visto algunas personas andar por los cimiterios y encrucijadas en diferentes figuras, y quizá alguna vez la toparé yo, y le preguntaré si manda que haga alguna cosa en descargo de su conciencia".

los niños que ahogamos. Aquí pudieras también preguntarme qué gusto o provecho saca el demonio de hacernos matar las criaturas tiernas, pues sabe que, estando bautizadas, como inocentes y sin pecado, se van al cielo, y él recibe pena particular con cada alma cristiana que se le escapa; a lo que no te sabré responder otra cosa sino lo que dice el refrán: 'que tal hay que se quiebra dos ojos porque su enemigo se quiebre uno'; y por la pesadumbre que da a sus padres matándoles los hijos, que es la mayor que se puede imaginar. Y lo que más le importa es hacer que nosotras cometamos a cada paso tan cruel y perverso pecado; y todo esto lo permite Dios por nuestros pecados, que sin su permisión yo he visto por experiencia que no puede ofender el diablo a una hormiga; y es tan verdad esto que, rogándole yo una vez que destruyese una viña de un mi enemigo, me respondió que ni aun tocar a una hoja della no podía, porque Dios no quería; por lo cual podrás venir a entender, cuando seas hombre, que todas las desgracias que vienen a las gentes, a los reinos, a las ciudades y a los pueblos: las muertes repentinas, los naufragios, las caídas, en fin, todos los males que llaman de daño, vienen de la mano del Altísimo y de su voluntad permitente; y los daños y males que llaman de culpa vienen y se causan por nosotros mismos. Dios es impecable, de do se infiere que nosotros somos autores del pecado, formándole en la intención, en la palabra y en la obra; todo permitiéndolo Dios, por nuestros pecados, como ya he dicho.

»"Dirás tú ahora, hijo, si es que acaso me entiendes, que quién me hizo a mí teóloga, y aun quizá dirás entre ti: '¡Cuerpo de tal con la puta vieja! ¿Por qué no deja de ser bruja, pues sabe tanto, y se vuelve a Dios, pues sabe que está más prompto a perdonar pecados que a permitirlos?' A esto te respondo, como si me lo preguntaras, que la costumbre del vicio se vuelve en naturaleza; y éste de ser brujas se convierte en sangre y carne, y en medio de su ardor, que es mucho, trae un frío que pone en el alma tal, que la resfría y entorpece aun en la fe, de donde nace un olvido de sí misma, y ni se acuerda de los temores con que Dios la amenaza ni de la gloria con que la convida; y, en efeto, como es pecado de carne y de deleites, es fuerza que amortigüe todos los sentidos, y los embelese y absorte, sin dejarlos usar sus oficios como deben; y así, quedando el alma inútil, floja y desmazalada, no puede levantar la consideración siquiera a tener algún buen pensamiento; y así, dejándose estar sumida en la profunda sima de su miseria, no quiere alzar la mano a la de Dios, que se la está dando, por sola su misericordia, para que se levante. Yo tengo una destas almas que te he pintado: todo lo veo y todo lo entiendo, y como el deleite me tiene echados grillos a la voluntad, siempre he sido y seré mala.

»"Pero dejemos esto y volvamos a lo de las unturas; y digo que son tan frías, que nos privan de todos los sentidos en untándonos con ellas, y quedamos

tendidas y desnudas en el suelo, y entonces dicen que en la fantasía pasamos todo aquello que nos parece pasar verdaderamente. Otras veces, acabadas de untar, a nuestro parecer, mudamos forma, y convertidas en gallos, lechuzas o cuervos, vamos al lugar donde nuestro dueño nos espera, y allí cobramos nuestra primera forma y gozamos de los deleites que te dejo de decir, por ser tales, que la memoria se escandaliza en acordarse dellos, y así, la lengua huye de contarlos; y, con todo esto, soy bruja, y cubro con la capa de la hipocresía todas mis muchas faltas. Verdad es que si algunos me estiman y honran por buena, no faltan muchos que me dicen, no dos dedos del oído, el nombre de las fiestas, que es el que les imprimió la furia de un juez colérico que en los tiempos pasados tuvo que ver conmigo y con tu madre, depositando su ira en las manos de un verdugo que, por no estar sobornado, usó de toda su plena potestad y rigor con nuestras espaldas. Pero esto ya pasó, y todas las cosas se pasan; las memorias se acaban, las vidas no vuelven, las lenguas se cansan, los sucesos nuevos hacen olvidar los pasados. Hospitalera soy, buenas muestras doy de mi proceder, buenos ratos me dan mis unturas, no soy tan vieja que no pueda vivir un año, puesto que tengo setenta y cinco; y, ya que no puedo ayunar, por la edad, ni rezar, por los vaguidos, ni andar romerías, por la flaqueza de mis piernas, ni dar limosna, porque soy pobre, ni pensar en bien, porque soy amiga de murmurar, y para haberlo de hacer es forzoso pensarlo primero, así que siempre mis pensamientos han de ser malos, con todo esto, sé que Dios es bueno y misericordioso y que Él sabe lo que ha de ser de mí, y basta; y quédese aquí esta plática, que verdaderamente me entristece. Ven, hijo, y verásme untar, que todos los duelos con pan son buenos, el buen día, meterle en casa, pues mientras se ríe no se llora; quiero decir que, aunque los gustos que nos da el demonio son aparentes y falsos, todavía nos parecen gustos, y el deleite mucho mayor es imaginado que gozado, aunque en los verdaderos gustos debe de ser al contrario".

»Levantóse, en diciendo esta larga arenga, y, tomando el candil, se entró en otro aposentillo más estrecho; seguía, combatido de mil varios pensamientos y admirado de lo que había oído y de lo que esperaba ver. Colgó la Cañizares el candil de la pared y con mucha priesa se desnudó hasta la camisa; y, sacando de un rincón una olla vidriada, metió en ella la mano, y, murmurando entre dientes, se untó desde los pies a la cabeza, que tenía sin toca. Antes que se acabase de untar me dijo que, ora se quedase su cuerpo en aquel aposento sin sentido, ora desapareciese dél, que no me espantase, ni dejase de aguardar allí hasta la mañana, porque sabría las nuevas de lo que me quedaba por pasar hasta ser hombre. Díjele bajando la cabeza que sí haría, y con esto acabó su untura y se tendió en el suelo como muerta. Llegué mi boca a la suya y vi que no respiraba

Una verdad te quiero confesar, Cipión amigo: que me dio gran temor verme encerrado en aquel estrecho aposento con aquella figura delante, la cual te la pintaré como mejor supiere.

«Ella era larga de más de siete pies; toda era notomía de huesos, cubiertos con una piel negra, vellosa y curtida; con la barriga, que era de badana, se cubría las partes deshonestas, y aun le colgaba hasta la mitad de los muslos; las tetas semejaban dos vejigas de vaca secas y arrugadas; denegridos los labios, traspillados los dientes, la nariz corva y entablada, desencasados los ojos, la cabeza desgredada, la mejillas chupadas, angosta la garganta y los pechos sumidos; finalmente, toda era flaca y endemoniada. Púseme de espacio a mirarla y apriesa comenzó a apoderarse de mí el miedo, considerando la mala visión de su cuerpo y la peor ocupación de su alma. Quise morderla, por ver si volvía en sí, y no hallé parte en toda ella que el asco no me lo estorbase; pero, con todo esto, la así de un carcaño y la saqué arrastrando al patio; mas ni por esto dio muestras de tener sentido. Allí, con mirar el cielo y verme en parte ancha, se me quitó el temor; a lo menos, se templó de manera que tuve ánimo de esperar a ver en lo que paraba la ida y vuelta de aquella mala hembra, y lo que me contaba de mis sucesos. En esto me preguntaba yo a mí mismo: "¿quién hizo a esta mala vieja tan discreta y tan mala? ¿De dónde sabe ella cuáles son males de daño y cuáles de culpa? ¿Cómo entiende y habla tanto de Dios, y obra tanto del diablo? ¿Cómo peca tan de malicia, no escusándose con ignorancia?"

»En estas consideraciones se pasó la noche y se vino el día, que nos halló a los dos en mitad del patio: ella no vuelta en sí y a mí junto a ella, en cuclillas, atento, mirando su espantosa y fea catadura. Acudió la gente del hospital, y, viendo aquel retablo, unos decían: "Ya la bendita Cañizares es muerta; mirad cuán disfigurada y flaca la tenía la penitencia"; otros, más considerados, la tomaron el pulso, y vieron que le tenía, y que no era muerta, por do se dieron a entender que estaba en éxtasis y arrobada, de puro buena. Otros hubo que dijeron: "Esta puta vieja sin duda debe de ser bruja, y debe de estar untada; que nunca los santos hacen tan deshonestos arrobos, y hasta ahora, entre los que la conocemos, más fama tiene de bruja que de santa". Curiosos hubo que se llegaron a hincarle alfileres por las carnes, desde la punta hasta la cabeza: ni por eso recordaba la dormilona, ni volvió en sí hasta las siete del día; y, como se sintió acribada de los alfileres, y mordida de los carcañares, y magullada del arrastramiento fuera de su aposento, y a vista de tantos ojos que la estaban mirando, creyó, y creyó la verdad, que yo había sido el autor de su deshonra; y así, arremetió a mí, y, echándome ambas manos a la garganta, procuraba ahogarme diciendo: "¡Oh bellaco, desagradecido, ignorante y malicioso! ¿Y es éste el pago que merecen las buenas obras que a tu madre hice y de las que te pensaba hacer a ti?" Yo, que me vi en peligro de perder la vida entre las uñas de aquella fiera arpía, sacudíme, y, asiéndole de las luengas faldas de su vientre, la zamarreé y arrastré por todo el patio; ella daba voces que la librasen de los dientes de aquel maligno espíritu.

»Con estas razones de la mala vieja, creyeron los más que yo debía de ser algún demonio de los que tienen ojeriza continua con los buenos cristianos, y unos acudieron a echarme agua bendita, otros no osaban llegar a quitarme, otros daban voces que me conjurasen; la vieja gruñía, yo apretaba los dientes, crecía la confusión, y mi amo, que ya había llegado al ruido, se desesperaba oyendo decir que yo era demonio. Otros, que no sabían de exorcismos, acudieron a tres o cuatro garrotes, con los cuales comenzaron a santiguarme los lomos; escocióme la burla, solté la vieja, y en tres saltos me puse en la calle, y en pocos más salí de la villa, perseguido de una infinidad de muchachos, que iban a grandes voces diciendo: "¡Apártense que rabia el perro sabio!"; otros decían: "¡No rabia, sino que es demonio en figura de perro!" Con este molimiento, a campana herida salí del pueblo, siguiéndome muchos que indubitavelmente creyeron que era demonio, así por las cosas que me habían visto hacer como por las palabras que la vieja dijo cuando despertó de su maldito sueño.

»Dime tanta priesa a huir y a quitarme delante de sus ojos, que creyeron que me había desaparecido como demonio: en seis horas anduve doce leguas, y llegué a un rancho de gitanos que estaba en un campo junto a Granada. Allí me reparé un poco, porque algunos de los gitanos me conocieron por el perro sabio, y con no pequeño gozo me acogieron y escondieron en una cueva, porque no me hallasen si fuese buscado; con intención, a lo que después entendí, de ganar conmigo como lo hacía el atambor mi amo. Veinte días estuve con ellos, en los cuales supe y noté su vida y costumbres, que por ser notables es forzoso que te las cuente.»

CIPIÓN.- Antes, Berganza, que pases adelante, es bien que reparemos en lo que te dijo la bruja, y averigüemos si puede ser verdad la grande mentira a quien das crédito. Mira, Berganza, grandísimo disparate sería creer que la Camacha mudase los hombres en bestias y que el sacristán en forma de jumento la serviese los años que dicen que la sirvió. Todas estas cosas y las semejantes son embelecos, mentiras o apariencias del demonio; y si a nosotros nos parece ahora que tenemos algún entendimiento y razón, pues hablamos siendo verdaderamente perros, o estando en su figura, ya hemos dicho que éste es caso portentoso y jamás visto, y que, aunque le tocamos con las manos, no le tenemos de dar crédito hasta tanto que el suceso dél nos muestre lo que conviene que creamos. ¿Quiéreslo ver más claro? Considera en cuán vanas cosas y en cuán tontos puntos dijo la Camacha que consistía nuestra restauración; y aquellas que a ti te deben parecer profecías no son sino palabras de consejas o cuentos de viejas, como aquellos del caballo sin cabeza y de la varilla de virtudes, con que se entretienen al fuego las dilatadas noches del invierno; porque, a ser otra cosa, ya estaban cumplidas, si no es que sus palabras se han de tomar en un sentido que he oído decir se llama alegórico, el cual sentido no quiere decir lo que la letra suena, sino otra cosa que, aunque diferente, le haga semejanza; y así, decir:

Volverán a su forma verdadera

cuando vieren con presta diligencia
derribar los soberbios levantados,
y alzar a los humildes abatidos,
por mano poderosa para hacello, tomándolo en el sentido que he dicho, paréceme que quiere decir que cobraremos nuestra forma cuando viéremos que los que ayer estaban en la cumbre de la rueda de la fortuna, hoy están hollados y abatidos a los pies de la desgracia, y tenidos en poco de aquellos que más los estimaban. Y, asimismo, cuando viéremos que otros que no ha dos horas que no tenían deste mundo otra parte que servir en él de número que acrecentase el de las gentes, y ahora están tan encumbrados sobre la buena dicha que los perdemos de vista; y si primero no parecían por pequeños y encogidos, ahora no los podemos alcanzar por grandes y levantados. Y si en esto consistiera volver nosotros a la forma que dices, ya lo hemos visto y lo vemos a cada paso; por do me doy a entender que no en el sentido alegórico, sino en el literal, se han de tomar los versos de la Camacha; ni tampoco en éste consiste nuestro remedio, pues muchas veces hemos visto lo que dicen y nos estamos tan perros como vees; así que, la Camacha fue burladora falsa, y la Cañizares embustera, y la Montiel tonta, maliciosa y bellaca, con perdón sea dicho, si acaso es nuestra madre de entrambos, o tuya, que yo no la quiero tener por madre. Digo, pues, que el verdadero sentido es un juego de bolos, donde con presta diligencia derriban los que están en pie y vuelven a alzar los caídos, y esto por la mano de quien lo puede hacer. Mira, pues, si en el discurso de nuestra vida habremos visto jugar a los bolos, y si hemos visto por esto haber vuelto a ser hombres, si es que lo somos.

BERGANZA.- Digo que tienes razón, Cipión hermano, y que eres más discreto de lo que pensaba; y de lo que has dicho vengo a pensar y creer que todo lo que hasta aquí hemos pasado y lo que estamos pasando es sueño, y que somos perros; pero no por esto dejemos de gozar deste bien de la habla que tenemos y de la excelencia tan grande de tener discurso humano todo el tiempo que pudiéremos; y así, no te canse el oírme contar lo que me pasó con los gitanos que me escondieron en la cueva.

CIPIÓN.- De buena gana te escucho, por obligarte a que me escuches cuando te cuente, si el cielo fuere servido, los sucesos de mi vida.

BERGANZA.- «La que tuve con los gitanos fue considerar en aquel tiempo sus muchas malicias, sus embaimientos y embustes, los hurtos en que se ejercitan, así gitanas como gitanos, desde el punto casi que salen de las mantillas y saben andar. ¿Vees la multitud que hay dellos esparcida por España? Pues todos se conocen y tienen noticia los unos de los otros, y trasiegan y trasponen los hurtos éstos en aquéllos y los de aquéllos en éstos. Dan la obediencia, mejor que a su rey, a uno que llaman Conde, al cual, y a todos los que dél suceden, tienen el sobrenombre de Maldonado; y no porque vengan del apellido deste noble linaje, sino porque un paje de un caballero deste nombre se enamoró de una gitana, la cual no le quiso conceder su amor si no se hacía gitano y la tomaba por mujer. Hízolo así el paje, y agradó tanto a los demás gitanos, que le alzaron por señor y le dieron la obediencia; y, como en señal de vasallaje, le acuden con parte de los hurtos que hacen, como sean de importancia.

»Ocúpanse, por dar color a su ociosidad, en labrar cosas de hierro, haciendo instrumentos con que facilitan sus hurtos; y así, los verás siempre traer a vender por las calles tenazas, barrenas, martillos; y ellas, trébedes y badiles. Todas ellas son parteras, y en esto llevan ventaja a las nuestras, porque sin costa ni adherentes sacan sus partos a luz, y lavan las criaturas con agua fría en naciendo; y, desde que nacen hasta que mueren, se curten y muestran a sufrir las inclemencias y rigores del cielo; y así, verás que todos son alentados, volteadores, corredores y bailadores. Cásanse siempre entre ellos, porque no salgan sus malas costumbres a ser conocidas de otros; ellas guardan el decoro a sus maridos, y pocas hay que les ofendan con otros que no sean de su generación. Cuando piden limosna, más la sacan con invenciones y chocarrerías que con devociones; y, a título que no hay quien se fíe dellas, no sirven y dan en ser holgazanas. Y pocas o ninguna vez he visto, si mal no me acuerdo, ninguna gitana a pie de altar comulgando, puesto que muchas veces he entrado en las iglesias.

asno que le había vendido, y al mismo instante le quitó la cola postiza y quedó con la suya pelada. Mudóle la albarda y jáquima, y atrevióse a ir a buscar al labrador para que se le comprase, y hallóle antes que hubiese echado menos el asno primero, y a pocos lances compró el segundo. Fuésele a pagar a la posada, donde halló menos la bestia a la bestia; y, aunque lo era mucho, sospechó que el gitano se le había hurtado, y no quería pagarle. Acudió el gitano por testigos, y trujo a los que habían cobrado la alcabala del primer jumento, y juraron que el gitano había vendido al labrador un asno con una cola muy larga y muy diferente del asno segundo que vendía. A todo esto se halló presente un alguacil, que hizo las partes del gitano con tantas veras que el labrador hubo de pagar el asno dos veces. Otros muchos hurtos contaron, y todos, o los más, de bestias, en quien son ellos graduados y en lo que más se ejercitan. Finalmente, ella es mala gente, y, aunque muchos y muy prudentes jueces han salido contra ellos, no por eso se enmiendan.

»A cabo de veinte días, me quisieron llevar a Murcia; pasé por Granada, donde ya estaba el capitán, cuyo atambor era mi amo. Como los gitanos lo supieron, me encerraron en un aposento del mesón donde vivían; oíles decir la causa, no me pareció bien el viaje que llevaban, y así, determiné soltarme, como lo hice; y, saliéndome de Granada, di en una huerta de un morisco, que me acogió de buena voluntad, y yo quedé con mejor, pareciéndome que no me querría para más de para guardarle la huerta: oficio, a mi cuenta, de menos trabajo que el de guardar ganado. Y, como no había allí altercar sobre tanto más cuanto al salario, fue cosa fácil hallar el morisco criado a quien mandar y yo amo a quien servir. Estuve con él más de un mes, no por el gusto de la vida que tenía, sino por el que me daba saber la de mi amo, y por ella la de todos cuantos moriscos viven en España.»

Por maravilla se hallará entre tantos uno que crea derechamente en la sagrada ley cristiana; todo su intento es acuñar y guardar dinero acuñado, y para conseguirle trabajan y no comen; en entrando el real en su poder, como no sea sencillo, le condenan a cárcel perpetua y a escuridad eterna; de modo que, ganando siempre y gastando nunca, llegan y amontonan la mayor cantidad de dinero que hay en España. Ellos son su hucha, su polilla, sus picazas y sus comadreas; todo lo llegan, todo lo esconden y todo lo tragan. Considérese que ellos son muchos y que cada día ganan y esconden, poco o mucho, y que una calentura lenta acaba la vida como la de un tabardillo; y, como van creciendo, se van aumentando los escondedores, que crecen y han de crecer en infinito, como la experiencia lo muestra. Entre ellos no hay castidad, ni entran en religión ellos ni ellas: todos se casan, todos multiplican, porque el vivir sobriamente aumenta las causas de la generación. No los consume la guerra, ni ejercicio que demasiadamente los trabaje; róbannos a pie quedo, y con los frutos de nuestras heredades, que nos revenden, se hacen ricos. No tienen criados, porque todos lo son de sí mismos; no gastan con sus hijos en los estudios, porque su ciencia no es otra que la del robarnos. De los doce hijos de Jacob que he oído decir que entraron en Egipto, cuando los sacó Moisés de aquel cautiverio, salieron seiscientos mil varones, sin niños y mujeres. De aquí se podrá inferir lo que multiplicarán las déstos, que, sin comparación, son en mayor número.

CIPIÓN.- Buscado se ha remedio para todos los daños que has apuntado y bosquejado en sombra: que bien sé que son más y mayores los que callas que los que cuentas, y hasta ahora no se ha dado con el que conviene; pero celadores prudentísimos tiene nuestra república que, considerando que España cría y tiene en su seno tantas víboras como moriscos, ayudados de Dios, hallarán a tanto daño cierta, presta y segura salida. Di adelante.

BERGANZA.- «Como mi amo era mezquino, como lo son todos los de su casta, sustentábame con pan de mijo y con algunas sobras de zahínas, común sustento suyo; pero esta miseria me ayudó a llevar el cielo por un modo tan extraño como el que ahora oirás.

»Cada mañana, juntamente con el alba, amanecía sentado al pie de un granado, de muchos que en la huerta había, un mancebo, al parecer estudiante, vestido de bayeta, no tan negra ni tan peluda que no pareciese parda y tundida. Ocupábase en escribir en un cartapacio y de cuando en cuando se daba palmadas en la frente y se mordía las uñas, estando mirando al cielo; y otras veces se ponía tan imaginativo, que no movía pie ni mano, ni aun las pestañas: tal era su embelesamiento. Una vez me llegué junto a él, sin que me echase de ver; oíle murmurar entre dientes, y al cabo de un buen espacio dio una gran voz, diciendo: "¡Vive el Señor, que es la mejor octava que he hecho en todos los días de mi vida!" Y, escribiendo apriesa en su cartapacio, daba muestras de gran contento; todo lo cual me dio a entender que el desdichado era poeta. Hícele mis acostumbradas caricias, por asegurarle de mi mansedumbre; echéme a sus pies, y él, con esta seguridad, prosiguió en sus pensamientos y tornó a rascarse la cabeza y a sus arrobos, y a volver a escribir lo que había pensado. Estando en esto, entró en la huerta otro mancebo, galán y bien aderezado, con unos papeles en la mano, en los cuales de cuando en cuando leía. Llegó donde estaba el primero y díjole: "¿Habéis acabado la primera jornada?" "Ahora le di fin -respondió el poeta-, la más gallardamente que imaginarse puede". "¿De qué manera?", preguntó el segundo. "Désta -respondió el primero-: Sale Su Santidad del Papa vestido de pontifical, con doce cardenales, todos vestidos de morado, porque cuando sucedió el caso que cuenta la historia de mi comedia era tiempo de mutatio caparum, en el cual los cardenales no se visten de rojo, sino de morado; y así, en todas maneras conviene, para guardar la propiedad, que estos mis cardenales salgan de morado; y éste es un punto que hace mucho al caso para la comedia; y a buen seguro dieran en él, y así hacen a cada paso mil impertinencias y disparates. Yo no he podido errar en esto, porque he leído todo el ceremonial romano, por sólo acertar en estos vestidos". "Pues ¿de dónde queréis vos -replicó el otro-que tenga mi autor vestidos morados para doce cardenales?" "Pues si me quita uno tan sólo -respondió el poeta-, así le daré yo mi comedia como volar. ¡Cuerpo de tal! ¿Esta apariencia tan grandiosa se ha de perder? Imaginad vos desde aquí lo que parecerá en un teatro un Sumo Pontífice con doce graves cardenales y con otros ministros de acompañamiento que forzosamente han de traer consigo. ¡Vive el cielo, que sea uno de los mayores y más altos espectáculos que se haya visto en comedia, aunque sea la del Ramillete de Daraja!"

»Aquí acabé de entender que el uno era poeta y el otro comediante. El comediante aconsejó al poeta que cercenase algo de los cardenales, si no quería imposibilitar al autor el hacer la comedia. A lo que dijo el poeta que le agradeciesen que no había puesto todo el cónclave que se halló junto al acto memorable que pretendía traer a la memoria de las gentes en su felicísima comedia. Rióse el recitante y dejóle en su ocupación por irse a la suya, que era estudiar un papel de una comedia nueva. El poeta, después de haber escrito algunas coplas de su magnífica comedia, con mucho sosiego y espacio sacó de la faldriquera algunos mendrugos de pan y obra de veinte pasas, que, a mi parecer, entiendo que se las conté, y aun estoy en duda si eran tantas, porque juntamente con ellas hacían bulto ciertas migajas de pan que las acompañaban. Sopló y apartó las migajas, y una a una se comió las pasas y los palillos, porque no le vi arrojar ninguno, ayudándolas con los mendrugos, que morados con la borra de la faldriquera, parecían mohosos, y eran tan duros de condición que, aunque él procuró enternecerlos, paseándolos por la boca una y muchas veces, no fue posible moverlos de su terquedad; todo lo cual redundó en mi provecho, porque me los arrojó, diciendo: "¡To, to! Toma, que buen provecho te hagan". "¡Mirad -dije entre mí-qué néctar o ambrosía me da este poeta, de los que ellos dicen que se mantienen los dioses y su Apolo allá en el cielo!" En fin, por la mayor parte, grande es la miseria de los poetas, pero mayor era mi necesidad, pues me obligó

a comer lo que él desechaba. En tanto que duró la composición de su comedia, no dejó de venir a la huerta ni a mí me faltaron mendrugos, porque los repartía conmigo con mucha liberalidad, y luego nos íbamos a la noria, donde, yo de bruces y él con un cangilón, satisfacíamos la sed como unos monarcas. Pero faltó el poeta y sobró en mí la hambre tanto, que determiné dejar al morisco y entrarme en la ciudad a buscar ventura, que la halla el que se muda.

»Al entrar de la ciudad vi que salía del famoso monasterio de San Jerónimo mi poeta, que como me vio se vino a mí con los brazos abiertos, y yo me fui a él con nuevas muestras de regocijo por haberle hallado. Luego, al instante comenzó a desembaular pedazos de pan, más tiernos de los que solía llevar a la huerta, y a entregarlos a mis dientes sin repasarlos por los suyos: merced que con nuevo gusto satisfizo mi hambre. Los tiernos mendrugos, y el haber visto salir a mi poeta del monasterio dicho, me pusieron en sospecha de que tenía las musas vergonzantes, como otros muchos las tienen.

»Encaminóse a la ciudad, y yo le seguí con determinación de tenerle por amo si él quisiese, imaginando que de las sobras de su castillo se podía mantener mi real; porque no hay mayor ni mejor bolsa que la de la caridad, cuyas liberales manos jamás están pobres; y así, no estoy bien con aquel refrán que dice: "Más da el duro que el desnudo", como si el duro y avaro diese algo, como lo da el liberal desnudo, que, en efeto, da el buen deseo cuando más no tiene. De lance en lance, paramos en la casa de un autor de comedias que, a lo que me acuerdo, se llamaba Angulo el Malo, ... de otro Angulo, no autor, sino representante, el más gracioso que entonces tuvieron y ahora tienen las comedias. Juntóse toda la compañía a oír la comedia de mi amo, que ya por tal le tenía; y, a la mitad de la jornada primera, uno a uno y dos a dos, se fueron saliendo todos, excepto el autor y yo, que servíamos de oyentes. La comedia era tal, que, con ser yo un asno en esto de la poesía, me pareció que la había compuesto el mismo Satanás, para total ruina y perdición del mismo poeta, que ya iba tragando saliva, viendo la soledad en que el auditorio le había dejado; y no era mucho, si el alma, présaga, le decía allá dentro la desgracia que le estaba amenazando, que fue volver todos los recitantes, que pasaban de doce, y, sin hablar palabra, asieron de mi poeta, y si no fuera porque la autoridad del autor, llena de ruegos y voces, se puso de por medio, sin duda le mantearan. Quedé yo del caso pasmado; el autor, desabrido; los farsantes, alegres, y el poeta, mohíno; el cual, con mucha paciencia, aunque algo torcido el rostro, tomó su comedia, y, encerrándosela en el seno, medio murmurando, dijo: "No es bien echar las margaritas a los puercos". Y con esto se fue con mucho sosiego.

»Yo, de corrido, ni pude ni quise seguirle; y acertélo, a causa que el autor me hizo tantas caricias que me obligaron a que con él me quedase, y en menos de un mes salí grande entremesista y gran farsante de figuras mudas. Pusiéronme un freno de orillos y enseñáronme a que arremetiese en el teatro a quien ellos querían; de modo que, como los entremeses solían acabar por la mayor parte en palos, en la compañía de mi amo acababan en zuzarme, y yo derribaba y atropellaba a todos, con que daba que reír a los ignorantes y mucha ganancia a mi dueño.»

¡Oh Cipión, quién te pudiera contar lo que vi en ésta y en otras dos compañías de comediantes en que anduve! Mas, por no ser posible reducirlo a narración sucinta y breve, lo habré de dejar para otro día, si es que ha de haber otro día en que nos comuniquemos ¿Vees cuán larga ha sido mi plática? ¿Vees mis muchos y diversos sucesos? ¿Consideras mis caminos y mis amos tantos? Pues todo lo que has oído es nada, comparado a lo que te pudiera contar de lo que noté, averigüé y vi desta gente: su proceder, su vida, sus costumbres, sus ejercicios, su trabajo, su ociosidad, su ignorancia y su agudeza, con otras infinitas cosas: unas para decirse al oído y otras para aclamallas en público, y todas para hacer memoria dellas y para desengaño de muchos que idolatran en figuras fingidas y en bellezas de artificio y de transformación.

CIPIÓN.- Bien se me trasluce, Berganza, el largo campo que se te descubría para dilatar tu plática, y soy de parecer que la dejes para cuento particular y para sosiego no sobresaltado.

BERGANZA.- Sea así, y escucha.

«Con una compañía llegué a esta ciudad de Valladolid, donde en un entremés me dieron una herida que me llegó casi al fin de la vida; no pude vengarme, por estar enfrenado entonces, y después, a sangre fría, no quise: que la venganza pensada arguye crueldad y mal ánimo. Cansóme aquel ejercicio, no por ser trabajo, sino porque veía en él cosas que juntamente pedían enmienda y castigo; y, como a mí estaba más el sentillo que el remediallo, acordé de no verlo; y así, me acogí a sagrado, como hacen aquellos que dejan los vicios cuando no pueden ejercitallos, aunque más vale tarde que nunca. Digo, pues, que, viéndote una noche llevar la linterna con el buen cristiano Mahudes, te consideré contento y justa y santamente ocupado; y lleno de buena envidia quise seguir tus pasos, y con esta loable intención me puse delante de Mahudes, que luego me eligió para tu compañero y me trujo a este hospital. Lo que en él me ha sucedido no es tan poco que no haya menester espacio para contallo, especialmente lo que oí a cuatro enfermos que la suerte y la necesidad trujo a este hospital, y a estar todos cuatro juntos en cuatro camas apareadas.»

Perdóname, porque el cuento es breve, y no sufre dilación, y viene aquí de molde.

CIPIÓN.- Sí perdono. Concluye, que, a lo que creo, no debe de estar lejos el día.

BERGANZA.- «Digo que en las cuatro camas que están al cabo desta enfermería, en la una estaba un alquimista, en la otra un poeta, en la otra un matemático y en la otra uno de los que llaman arbitristas.»

CIPIÓN.- Ya me acuerdo haber visto a esa buena gente.

BERGANZA.- «Digo, pues, que una siesta de las del verano pasado, estando cerradas las ventanas y yo cogiendo el aire debajo de la cama del uno dellos, el poeta se comenzó a quejar lastimosamente de su fortuna, y, preguntándole el matemático de qué se quejaba, respondió que de su corta suerte. "¿Cómo, y no será razón que me queje -prosiguió-, que, habiendo yo guardado lo que Horacio manda en su Poética, que no salga a luz la obra que, después de compuesta, no hayan pasado diez años por ella, y que tenga yo una de veinte años de ocupación y doce de pasante, grande en el sujeto, admirable y nueva en la invención, grave en el verso, entretenida en los episodios, maravillosa en la división, porque el principio responde al medio y al fin, de manera que constituyen el poema alto, sonoro, heroico, deleitable y sustancioso; y que, con todo esto, no hallo un príncipe a quien dirigirle? Príncipe, digo, que sea inteligente, liberal y magnánimo. ¡Mísera edad y depravado siglo nuestro!" "¿De qué trata el libro?", preguntó el alquimista. Respondió el poeta: "Trata de lo que dejó de escribir el Arzobispo Turpín del Rey Artús de Inglaterra, con otro suplemento de la Historia de la demanda del Santo Brial, y todo en verso heroico, parte en octavas y parte en verso suelto; pero todo esdrújulamente, digo en esdrújulos de nombres sustantivos, sin admitir verbo alguno". "A mí -respondió el alquimista- poco se me entiende de poesía; y así, no sabré poner en su punto la desgracia de que vuesa merced se queja, puesto que, aunque fuera mayor, no se igualaba a la mía, que es que, por faltarme instrumento, o un príncipe que me apoye y me dé a la mano los requisitos que la ciencia de la alquimia pide, no estoy ahora manando en oro y con más riquezas que los Midas, que los Crasos y Cresos". "¿Ha hecho vuesa merced -dijo a esta sazón el matemático-, señor alquimista, la experiencia de sacar plata de otros metales?" "Yo -respondió el alquimista- no la he sacado hasta agora, pero realmente sé que se saca, y a mí no me faltan dos meses para acabar la piedra filosofal, con que se puede hacer plata y oro de las mismas piedras". "Bien han exagerado vuesas mercedes sus desgracias -dijo a esta sazón el matemático-; pero, al fin, el uno tiene libro que dirigir y el otro está en potencia propincua de sacar la piedra filosofal; más, ¿qué diré yo de la mía, que es tan sola que no tiene dónde arrimarse? Veinte y dos años ha que ando tras hallar el punto fijo, y aquí lo dejo y allí lo tomo; y, pareciéndome que ya lo he hallado y que no se me puede escapar en ninguna manera, cuando no me cato, me hallo tan lejos dél, que me admiro. Lo mismo me acaece con la cuadratura del círculo: que he llegado tan al remate de hallarla, que no sé ni puedo pensar cómo no la tengo ya en la faldriquera; y así, es mi pena semejable a las de Tántalo, que está cerca del fruto y muere de hambre, y propincuo al agua y perece de sed. Por momentos pienso dar en la coyuntura de la verdad, y por minutos me hallo tan lejos della, que vuelvo a subir el monte que acabé de bajar, con el canto de mi trabajo auestas, como otro nuevo Sísifo".

»Había hasta este punto guardado silencio el arbitrista, y aquí le rompió diciendo: "Cuatro quejosos tales que lo pueden ser del Gran Turco ha juntado en este hospital la pobreza, y reniego yo de oficios y ejercicios que ni entretienen ni dan de comer a sus dueños. Yo, señores, soy arbitrista, y he dado a Su Majestad en diferentes tiempos muchos y diferentes arbitrios, todos en provecho suyo y sin daño del reino; y ahora tengo hecho un memorial donde le suplico me señale persona con quien comunique un nuevo arbitrio que tengo: tal, que ha de ser la total restauración de sus empeños; pero, por lo que me ha sucedido con otros memoriales, entiendo que éste también ha de parar en el carnero. Mas, porque vuesas mercedes no me tengan por mentecapto, aunque mi arbitrio quede desde este punto público, le quiero decir, que es éste: Hase de pedir en Cortes que todos los vasallos de Su Majestad, desde edad de catorce a sesenta años, sean obligados a ayunar una vez en el mes a pan y agua, y esto ha de ser el día que se escogiere y señalare, y que todo el gasto que en otros condumios de fruta, carne y pescado, vino, huevos y legumbres que han de gastar aquel día, se reduzga a dinero, y se dé a Su Majestad, sin defraudalle un ardite, so cargo de juramento; y con esto, en veinte años queda libre de socaliñas y desempeñado. Porque si se hace la cuenta, como yo la tengo hecha, bien hay en España más de tres millones de personas de la dicha edad, fuera de los enfermos, más viejos o más muchachos, y ninguno déstos dejará de gastar, y esto contado al menorete, cada día real y medio; y yo quiero que sea no más de un real, que no puede ser menos, aunque coma alholvas. Pues ¿paréceles a vuesas mercedes que sería barro tener cada mes tres millones de reales como ahechados? Y esto antes sería provecho que daño a los ayunantes, porque con el ayuno agradarían al cielo y servirían a su Rey; y tal podría ayunar que le fuese conveniente para su salud. Este es arbitrio limpio de polvo y de paja, y podría coger por parroquias, sin costa de comisarios, que destruyen la república". Ríyéronse todos del arbitrio y del arbitrante, y él también se riyó de sus disparates; y yo quedé admirado de haberlos oído y de ver que, por la mayor parte, los de semejantes humores venían a morir en los hospitales.»

CIPIÓN.- Tienes razón, Berganza. Mira si te queda más que decir.

BERGANZA.- Dos cosas no más, con que daré fin a mi plática, que ya me parece que viene el día.

«Yendo una noche mi mayor a pedir limosna en casa del corregidor desta ciudad, que es un gran caballero y muy gran cristiano, hallámosle solo; y parecióme a mí tomar ocasión de aquella soledad para decirle ciertos advertimientos que había oído decir a un viejo enfermo deste hospital, acerca de cómo se podía remediar la perdición tan notoria de las mozas vagamundas, que por no servir dan en malas, y tan malas, que pueblan los veranos todos los hospitales de los perdidos que las siguen: plaga intolerable y que pedía presto y eficaz remedio. Digo que, queriendo decírselo, alcé la voz, pensando que tenía habla, y en lugar de pronunciar razones concertadas ladré con tanta priesa y con tan levantado tono que, enfadado el corregidor, dio voces a sus criados que me echasen de la sala a palos; y un lacayo que acudió a la voz de su señor, que fuera mejor que por entonces estuviera sordo, asió de una cantimplora de cobre que le vino a la mano, y diómela tal en mis costillas, que hasta ahora guardo las reliquias de aquellos golpes.»

CIPIÓN.- Y ¿quéjaste deso, Berganza?

BERGANZA.- Pues ¿no me tengo de quejar, si hasta ahora me duele, como he dicho, y si me parece que no merecía tal castigo mi buena intención?

CIPIÓN.- Mira, Berganza, nadie se ha de meter donde no le llaman, ni ha de querer usar del oficio que por ningún caso le toca. Y has de considerar que nunca el consejo del pobre, por bueno que sea, fue admitido, ni el pobre humilde ha de tener presunción de aconsejar a los grandes y a los que piensan que se lo saben todo. La sabiduría en el pobre está asombrada; que la necesidad y miseria son las sombras y nubes que la escurecen, y si acaso se descubre, la juzgan por tontedad y la tratan con menosprecio.

BERGANZA.- Tienes razón, y, escarmentando en mi cabeza, de aquí adelante seguiré tus consejos.

«Entré asimismo otra noche en casa de una señora principal, la cual tenía en los brazos una perrilla destas que llaman de falda, tan pequeña que la pudiera esconder en el seno; la cual, cuando me vio, saltó de los brazos de su señora y arremetió a mí ladrando, y con tan gran denuedo, que no paró hasta morderme de una pierna. Volvíla a mirar con respecto y con enojo, y dije entre mí: "Si yo os cogiera, animalejo ruin, en la calle, o no hiciera caso de vos o os hiciera pedazos entre los dientes". Consideré en ella que hasta los cobardes y de poco ánimo son atrevidos e insolentes cuando son favorecidos, y se adelantan a ofender a los que valen más que ellos.»

CIPIÓN.- Una muestra y señal desa verdad que dices nos dan algunos hombrecillos que a la sombra de sus amos se atreven a ser insolentes; y si acaso la muerte o otro accidente de fortuna derriba el árbol donde se arriman, luego se descubre y manifiesta su poco valor; porque, en efeto, no son de más quilates sus prendas que los que les dan sus dueños y valedores. La virtud y el buen entendimiento siempre es una y siempre es uno: desnudo o vestido, solo o acompañado. Bien es verdad que puede padecer acerca de la estimación de las gentes, mas no en la realidad verdadera de lo que merece y vale. Y, con esto, pongamos fin a esta plática, que la luz que entra por estos resquicios muestra que es muy entrado el día, y esta noche que viene, si no nos ha dejado este grande beneficio de la habla, será la mía, para contarte mi vida.

BERGANZA.- Sea ansí, y mira que acudas a este mismo puesto.

Jornada primera

Interlocutores:

AURELIO.

FÁTIMA, criada de Zahara.

ZAHARA, ama de Aurelio.

YZUF, amo de Aurelio.

AURELIO ¡Triste y miserable estado!

¡Triste esclavitud amarga, donde es la pena tan larga cuan corto el bien y abreviado!

¡Oh purgatorio en la vida, 5 infierno puesto en el mundo, mal que no tiene segundo, estrecho do no hay salida!

¡Cifra de cuanto dolor
se reparte en los dolores, 10 daño que entre los mayores se ha de tener por mayor!

¡Necesidad increíble, muerte creíble y palpable, trato mísero intratable, 15 mal visible e invisible!

¡Toque que nuestra paciencia descubre si es valerosa;
pobre vida trabajosa,
retrato de penitencia! 20

Cállese aquí este tormento, que, según me es enemigo, no llegará cuanto digo
a un punto de lo que siento.

Pondérase mi dolor 25
con decir, bañado en lloros, que mi cuerpo está entre moros
y el alma en poder de Amor.

Del cuerpo y alma es mi pena:
el cuerpo ya veis cual va, 30 mi alma rendida está
a la amorosa cadena.

Pensé yo que no tenía Amor poder entre esclavos, pero en mí sus recios clavos 35 muestran más su gallardía.

¿Qué buscas en la miseria, Amor, de gente cautiva?
Déjala que muera o viva con su pobreza y laceria. 40

¿No ves que el hilo se corta desa tu amorosa estambre, aquí con sed o con hambre,
a la larga o a la corta?

Mas creo que no has querido 45
olvidarme en este estrecho, que has visto sano mi pecho, aunque tan roto el vestido.

Desde agora claro entiendo que el poder que en ti se encierra 50 abrazo el cielo y la tierra,
y más que no comprendo.

Una cosa te pidiera, si en esa tu condición
una sombra de razón 55
por entre mil sombras viera;
y es que, pues fuiste la causa de acabarme y destruirme, que en el contino herirme hagas un momento pausa. 60

Yo no te pido que salgas de mi pecho, pues no puedes;
antes, te pido que quedes,
y en este trance me valgas.

Mira que se me apareja 65
una muy fiera batalla,
y que no he de atropellalla si tu consejo me deja.

Del lugar do me pusiste, me procuran derribar; 70
pero, ¿quién podrá bajar lo que tú una vez subiste?

Ya viene Zahara y su arenga; ¡ay, enfadosa porfía;
cómo que me falta el día 75
antes que la noche venga!

¡Valedme, Silvia, bien mío, que, si vos me dais ayuda, de guerra más ardua y cruda llevar la palma confío! 80

(Entra agora ZAHARA, ama de AURELIO, y FÁTIMA, criada de ZAHARA.)

ZAHARA ¡Aurelio!

AURELIO Señora mía...

ZAHARA Si tú por tal me tuvieras, a fe que luego hicieras lo que ruega mi porfía.

AURELIO Lo que tú quieres yo quiero, 85
porque al fin te soy esclavo.

ZAHARA Esas palabras alabo, mas tus obras vitupero.

AURELIO ¿Cuál ha sido por mí hecha que en ella no te complaces? 90

ZAHARA Aquellas que no me haces me tienen mal satisfecha.

AURELIO Señora, no puedo más;
por agua me parto luego.

ZAHARA Otra agua pide mi fuego, 95 que no la que tú traerás.
No te vayas; está quedo.

AURELIO De leña hay falta en la casa.

ZAHARA Basta la que a mí me abrasa.

AURELIO Mi amo...

ZAHARA No tengas miedo. 100

AURELIO Déjame, señora, ir, no venga Yzuf, mi señor.

ZAHARA Quien queda con tanto amor, mal te dejará partir.

AURELIO No hay para qué más porfíes, 105
señora: déjame ya.

ZAHARA Aurelio, llégate acá.

AURELIO Mejor es que te desvíes.

ZAHARA ¿Ansí, Aurelio, me despides?

AURELIO Antes te hago favor, 110 si con el compás de honor lo compasas y lo mides.
¿No miras que soy cristiano con suerte y desdicha mala?

ZAHARA El amor todo lo iguala: 115 dame por señor la mano.

FÁTIMA Zahara, señora mía, dígate que me ha admirado mirar en lo que ha parado tu altivez y fantasía. 120 Ver, por cierto, es gentil cosa, y digna de ser notada,
de un cristiano enamorada
una mora tan hermosa.
Y lo que más llega al cabo 125 tu afición tan sin medida, es mirarte estar rendida
a un cristiano que es tu esclavo.
¡Y monta que corresponde el perro a lo que le quieres! 130
Perdóname; frágil eres.

ZAHARA ¿Dónde vas?

FÁTIMA Bien sé yo adonde.

ZAHARA Dulce amiga verdadera, lo que dices no lo niego;
mas ¿qué haré?, que amor es fuego 135
y mi voluntad es cera.

Y, puesto que el daño veo
y el fin do habré de parar, imposible es contrastar las fuerzas de mi deseo. 140

Vuelve tu lengua e intento a combatir esta roca, que no será gloria poca
gozar de su vencimiento.

FÁTIMA Quiero en esto complacerte, 145 pues al fin puedes mandarme.
Cristiano, vuelve a mirarme, que no es mi rostro de muerte.

AURELIO Más que muerte me causáis con vuestros inducimientos. 150 Dejadme con mis tormentos, porque en vano trabajáis.

FÁTIMA ¿No ves cómo se retira el perro en su pundo nor?
Así entiende él del amor 155
como el asno de la lira.

AURELIO ¿Cómo queréis que yo entienda de amor en esta cadena?

ZAHARA Eso no te cause pena, que luego se hará la enmienda: 160
las dos te la quitaremos.

AURELIO Muy mejor será dejalla; que no quiero con quitalla, pasar de un extremo a extremos.

ZAHARA ¿A qué extremos pasarás? 165

AURELIO Quitando al cuerpo este hierro, cairé en otro mayor hierro, que al alma fatigue más.

FÁTIMA ¿Almas tenéis los cristianos?

AURELIO Sí, y tan ricas y estremadas 170
cuanto por Dios rescatadas.

FÁTIMA ¡Que son pensamientos vanos!

Pero si almas tenéis,
de diamante es su valor, pues en la fragua de amor 175
muy más os endurecéis.

Aurelio, ¡resolución!
Ten cuenta en lo que te digo:
no quieras ser tan amigo de tu obstinada opinión. 180

Ya te ves sin libertad, entre hierros apretado,
pobre, desnudo, cansado,

lleno de necesidad,
    subjeto a mil desventuras, 185
a palos, a bofetones,
a mazmorras, a prisiones,
donde estás contino a oscuras.

    Libertad se te promete;
los hierros se quitarán, 190
y después te vestirán.
No hay temor de oscuro brete.

    Cuzcuz, pan blanco a comer, gallinas en abundancia,
y aun habrá vino de Francia 195 si vino quieres beber.

    No te pido lo imposible,
ni trabajos demasiados,
sino blandos, regalados, dulces lo más que es posible. 200

    Goza de la coyuntura que se te ríe delante;
no hagas del ignorante,
pues muestras tener cordura.

    Mira tu señora Zahara 205 y lo mucho que merece:
mira que al sol escurece
la luz de su rostro clara.

    Contempla su juventud, su riqueza, nombre y fama; 210
mira bien que agora llama a tu puerta la salud.

    Considera el interés
que en hacer esto te toca, que hay mil que pondrían la boca 215 donde tú pondrás los pies.

AURELIO   ¿Has dicho, Fátima?

FÁTIMA Sí.

AURELIO¿Quieres que responda yo?

FÁTIMAResponde.

AURELIODigo que no.

ZAHARA¡Ay, Alá! ¿Qué es lo que oí? 220

AURELIO Yo digo que no conviene pedirme lo que pedís, porque muy poco advertís
el peligro que contiene.

FÁTIMA ¿Qué peligro puede haber, 225 quiriéndolo tu señora?

AURELIOLa ofensa que, siendo mora,
a Mahoma viene a hacer.

ZAHARA ¡Déjame a mí con Mahoma, que agora no es mi señor, 230
porque soy sierva de Amor, que el alma subjeta y doma!
¡Echa ya el pecho por tierra y levantarte he a mi cielo!

AURELIOSeñora, tengo un recelo 235 que me consume y atierra.

FÁTIMA ¿De qué te recelas? Di.

AURELIO Señora, de que no veo ningún camino o rodeo como complacerte a ti. 240

En mi ley no se recibe hacer yo lo que me ordenas;
antes, con muy graves penas
y amenazas lo prohíbe;
y aun si bautismo tuvieras, 245
siendo, como eres, casada, fuera cosa harto escusada si tal cosa me pidieras.

Por eso yo determino
antes morir que hacer 250
lo que pide tu querer,
y en esto estaré contino.

ZAHARA Aurelio, ¿estás en tu seso?

AURELIO Y aun por estar tan en él soy para vos tan cruel. 255

ZAHARA ¡Ay, desdichado suceso!
¿Que es posible que tan poco valgan mis ruegos contigo?

FÁTIMA Sin duda que este enemigo es muy cuerdo, o es muy loco. 260 ¡Perro! ¿Tanta fantasía?
¿Pensáis que hablamos de veras?
¡Antes de mal rayo mueras primero que pase el día!
¡Ruín sin razón ni compás, 265

nacido de vil canalla!
¿Pensábades ya triunfalla, perrazo, sin más ni más?

Comigo las has de haber,
y de modo que te aviso 270 que dirá el que nunca quiso: «¡Más le valiera querer!»

No estés, Zahara, descontenta, deja el remedio en mi mano, que a este perro cristiano 275 yo le haré que se arrepienta.

ZAHARA No es bien que por mal se lleve.

FÁTIMANi aun bien llevado por bien.

ZAHARACese, Aurelio, tu desdén.

FÁTIMACon eso el perro se atreve. 280

Ven, señora, al aposento;
que, en esta pena crecida,
o yo perderé la vida,
o tú ternás tu contento.

(Sálense las dos y queda AURELIO solo.)

AURELIO ¡Padre del cielo, en cuya fuerte diestra 285 está el gobierno de la tierra y cielo, cuyo poder acá y allá se muestra con amoroso, justo y sancto celo, Si tu luz, si tu mano no me adiestra a salir deste caos, temo y recelo 290 que, como el cuerpo está en prisión esquiva, también el alma ha de quedar cautiva!

En Vos, Virgen Santísima María,
entre Dios y los hombres medianera, de mi mar incierto cierta guía, 295
virgen entre las vírgenes primera;
en Vos, Virgen y Madre, en Vos confía
mi alma, que sin Vos en nadie espera, que la habéis de guiar con vuestra lumbre deste hondo valle a la más alta cumbre. 300

Bien sé que no merezco que se acuerde vuestra eterna memoria de mi daño, porque tengo en el alma fresco y verde el dulce fructo del amor extraño; mas vuestra alta clemencia, que no pierde 305 oportunidad de hacer bien, mi mal tamaño remedie, que ya estoy casi perdido, de Scila y de Caribdis combatido.

Si el cuerpo esclavo está, está libre el alma, puesto que Silvia tiene parte en ella, 310
y la amorosa trunfadora palma ha de llevar sola mi Silvia della.
Ponga Zahara su amor, póngale en calma, que mi firmeza no hay pensar rompella, y aquello que a mi Dios y a Silvia debo, 315 me hace que aun mirarla no me atrevo.

¿Dó estás, Silvia hermosa? ¿Qué destino, qué fuerza insana de implacable hado el curso de aquel próspero camino tan sin causa y razón nos ha cortado? 320 ¡Oh estrella, oh suerte, oh fortuna, oh signo!, si alguno de vosotros ha causado tanta perdición, desde aquí digo que mil cuentos de veces le maldigo.

Yo moriré por lo que al alma toca, 325
antes que hacer lo que mi ama quiere;
firme he de estar cual bien fundada roca que en torno el viento, el mar combate y hiere.
Que sea mi vida mucha, o que sea poca,
importa poco; sólo el que bien muere 330

puede decir que tiene larga vida, y el que mal, una muerte sin medida.

(Éntrase AURELIO, y sale SAYAVEDRA, soldado cativo; LEONARDO, cativo, y SEBASTIÁN, muchacho cativo, a su tiempo.)

SAYAVEDRA En la veloz carrera, apresuradas las horas del ligero tiempo veo, contra mí con el cielo conjuradas. 335

Queda atrás la esperanza, y no el deseo, y así la vida dél, la muerte della, el daño, el mal aunmentan que poseo.

¡Ay dura, inicua, inexorable estrella, cómo de los cabellos me has traído 340 al terrible dolor que me atropella!

LEONARDO El llanto en tales tiempos es perdido, pues si llorando el cielo se ablandara, ya le hubieran mis lágrimas movido.

A la triste fortuna alegre cara 345 debe mostrar el pecho generoso:
que a cualquier mal, buen ánimo repara.

SAYAVEDRA El cuello enflaquecido al trabajoso yugo de esclavitud amarga puesto, bien ves que a cuerpo y alma es peligroso; 350
y más aquel que tiene prosupuesto de dejarse morir antes que pase un punto el modo del vivir honesto.

LEONARDO Si acaso yo tus obras imitase, forzoso me sería que al momento 355 en brazos de la hambre me entregase.

Bien sé que en el cativo no hay contento;

mas no quiero crecer yo mi fatiga, tiniendo en ella siempre el pensamiento.

A mi patrona tengo por amiga; 360 trátame cual me ves: huelgo y paseo; «cautivo soy», el que quisiere diga.

SAYAVEDRA Triunfa, Leonardo, y goza ese trofeo; que, si por ser cautivo le hermoseas, yo sé que es torpe, desgraciado y feo. 365

LEONARDO Amigo Sayavedra, si te arreas de ser predicador, ésta no es tierra do alcanzarás el fructo que desees.

Déjate deso y escucha de la guerra que el gran Filipo hace nueva cierta, 370 y un poco la pasión de ti destierra.

Dicen que una fragata de Biserta llegó esta noche allí con un cativo que ha dado vida a mi esperanza muerta.

Quitóle libertad el hado esquivo, 375 de Málaga pasando a Barcelona;
cativóle Mamí, cosario esquivo.

En su manera muestra ser persona de calidad, y que es ejercitado en el duro ejercicio de Belona. 380

Dice el número cierto que ha pasado de soldados a España forasteros, sin los tres tercios nuestros que han bajado;

los príncipes, señores, caballeros, que a servir a Filipo van de gana; 385 los naturales y los extranjeros,

y la muestra hermosísima lozana que en Badajoz hacer el rey pretende de la pujanza de la Unión Cristiana.

Dice con esto que ninguno entiende 390 el disinio del rey, y el hablar desto, al grande y al pequeño se defiende.

SAYAVEDRA Rompeos ya, cielos, y llovednos presto el librador de nuestra amarga guerra si ya en el suelo no le tenéis puesto. 395

Cuando llegué cativo y vi esta tierra tan nombrada en el mundo, que en su seno tantos piratas cubre, acoge y cierra,
no pude al llanto detener el freno, que, a pesar mío, sin saber lo que era, 400
me vi el marchito rostro de agua lleno.

Ofrecióse a mis ojos la ribera
y el monte donde el grande Carlo tuvo
levantada en el aire su bandera,
y el mar que tanto esfuerzo no sostuvo, 405
pues, movido de envidia de su gloria,
airado entonces más que nunca estuvo.

Estas cosas volviendo en mi memoria,
las lágrimas trujeran a los ojos, forzados de desgracia tan notoria. 410

Pero si el alto Cielo en darme enojos
no está con mi ventura conjurado,
y aquí no lleva muerte mis despojos,
cuando me vea en más seguro estado,
o si la suerte o si el favor me ayuda 415
a verme ante Filipo arrodillado,

mi lengua balbuciente y casi muda pienso mover en la real presencia,
de adulación y de mentir desnuda,
diciendo: «Alto señor, cuya potencia 420
sujetas trae las bárbaras naciones
al desabrido yugo de obediencia:

a quien los negros indios con sus dones
reconocen honesto vasallaje,
trayendo el oro acá de sus rincones; 425
despierte en tu real pecho coraje la desvergüenza con que una bicoca aspira de contino a hacerte ultraje.

Su gente es mucha, mas su fuerza es poca,

desnuda, mal armada, que no tiene 430
en su defensa fuerte muro o roca.

Cada uno mira si tu Armada viene, para dar a los pies el cargo y cura
de conservar la vida que sostiene.

De la esquiva prisión, amarga y dura, 435 adonde mueren quince mil cristianos, tienes la llave de su cerradura.

Todos, cual yo, de allá, puestas las manos,
las rodillas por tierra, sollozando, cerrados de tormentos inhumanos, 440 poderoso señor, t'están rogando vuelvas los ojos de misericordia

a los suyos, que están siempre llorando;

y, pues te deja agora la discordia que tanto te ha oprimido y fatigado, 445 y Amor en darte sigue la concordia,

haz, ¡oh buen rey!, que sea por ti acabado
lo que con tanta audacia y valor tanto
fue por tu amado padre comenzado.

El sólo ver que vas pondrá un espanto 450 en la bárbara gente, que adivino ya desde aquí su pérdida y quebranto».

¿Quién duda que el real pecho benigno no se muestre, oyendo la tristeza donde están estos míseros contino? 455

Mas, ¡ay, cómo se muestra la bajeza de mi tan rudo ingenio, pues pretende hablar tan bajo ante tan alta alteza!

Mas la ocasión es tal, que me defiende.
Pero a todo silencio poner quiero, 460 que creo que mi plática te ofende, y al trabajo he de ir adonde muero.

(Aquí entra SEBASTIÁN, muchacho, en hábito de esclavo.)

SEBASTIÁN ¿Hase visto tal maldad?

¿Hay tierra tan sin concordia, do falta misericordia 465
y sobra la crueldad?

¿Dónde se hallará disculpa de maldad tan insolente:
que pague el que es inocente por el que tiene la culpa? 470

¡Oh cielos! ¿Qué es lo que he visto?
¡Éste sí que es pueblo injusto, donde se tiene por gusto
matar los siervos de Cristo!

¡Oh España, patria querida!, 475 mira cuál es nuestra suerte, que si allá das justa muerte, quitas acá justa vida.

LEONARDO Sebastián, dinos qué tienes, que hablas razones tales. 480

SEBASTIÁN Una infinidad de males
y una penuria de bienes.

LEONARDO En ser, como eres, esclavo se encierra todo dolor.

SEBASTIÁN Otra pena muy mayor 485 me tiene a mí tan al cabo.

SAYAVEDRA ¿De dónde puede causarse la pena que dices brava?

SEBASTIÁN De una vida que hoy se acaba para jamás acabarse. 490

«Ya sabés que aquí en Argel se supo cómo en Valencia murió por justa sentencia un morisco de Sargel;
digo que en Sargel vivía, 495
puesto que era de Aragón, y, al olor de su nación, pasó el perro en Berbería;
y aquí cosario se hizo, con tan prestas crueles manos, 500 que con sangre de cristianos la suya bien satisfizo.

Andando en corso fue preso,
y, como fue conocido, fue en la Inquisición metido, 505
do le formaron proceso;
y allí se le averiguó
cómo, siendo batizado,
de Cristo había renegado
y en África se pasó, 510
y que, por su industria y manos, traidores tratos esquivos, habían sido cautivos
más de seiscientos cristianos;
y, como se le probaron 515
tantas maldades y errores, los justos inquisidores al fuego le condenaron.

Súpose del moro acá,
y la muerte que le dieron, 520 porque luego la escribieron los moriscos que hay allá.

La triste nueva sabida
de los parientes del muerto, juran y hacen concierto 525
de dar al fuego otra vida.

Buscaron luego un cristiano para pagar este escote,
y halláronle sacerdote,

y de nación valenciano. 530

Prendieron éste a gran priesa para ejecutar su hecho, porque vieron que en el pecho traía la cruz de Montesa, y esta señal de victoria 535 que le cupo en buena suerte, si le dio en el suelo muerte, en el cielo le dio gloria;

porque estos ciegos sin luz, que en él tal señal han visto, 540
pensando matar a Cristo, matan al que trae su cruz.

De su amo lo compraron,
y, aunque eran pobres, a un punto el dinero todo junto 545 de limosna lo allegaron.

En nuestro pueblo cristiano, por Dios se pide a la gente, para sanar al doliente, no para matar al sano; 550 mas entre esta descreída gente y maldito lugar,
no piden para sanar,
mas para quitar la vida.

Hoy en poder de sayones 555
he visto al siervo de Dios, no sólo puesto entre dos, sino entre dos mil sayones.

Iba el sacerdote justo entre injusta gente puesto, 560 marchito y humilde el gesto, a morir por Dios con gusto.

En darle penas dobladas todo el pueblo se desvela:
cual sus blancas canas pela, 565
cual le da mil bofetadas.

Las manos que a Dios tuvieron mil veces, hoy son tenidas de dos sogas retorcidas con que atrás se las asieron; 570 al yugo de otro cordel, puesto el cuello humilde lleva, haciendo seis moros prueba cuánto pueden tirar dél.

A ningún lado miraba 575 que descubra un solo amigo:
que todo el pueblo enemigo en torno le rodeaba.

Con voluntad tan dañada procuran su pena y lloro, 580 que se tuvo por mal moro quien no le dio bofetada.

A la marina llegaron
con la víctima inocente, do con barbaria insolente 585
a un áncora le ligaron.

Dos áncoras a una mano
vi yo allí en contrario celo:
una, de hierro, en el suelo;
otra, de fe, en el cristiano. 590

Y, la una a la otra asida, la de hierro se convierte
a dar cruda y presta muerte;
la de fe, a dar larga vida.

Ved si es bien contrario el celo 595 de las dos en esta guerra:
la una en el suelo afierra;
la otra se ase del cielo;

y, aunque corra tal fortuna que espante al cuerpo y al alma, 600 como si estuviera en calma, no hay desasirse la una.

Sin hierro al hierro ligado, el siervo de Dios se hallaba, y en su cuerpo atado estaba 605 espíritu desatado.

El cuerpo no se rodea,

que le ata más de un cordel;
mas el espíritu dél
todos los cielos pasea. 610

La canalla, que se enseña
a hacer nueva crueldad, trujo luego cantidad
de seca y humosa leña,
y una espaciosa corona 615
hicieron luego con ella, dejando encerrada en ella la sancta humilde persona;
y, aunque no tienen sosiego hasta verle ya espirar, 620 para más le atormentar, encienden lejos el fuego.

Quieren, como el cocinero que a su oficio más mirase, que se ase y no se abrase 625
la carne de aquel cordero.

Sube el humo al aire vano,
y a veces le da en los ojos;
quema el fuego los despojos que le vienen más a mano; 630 vase arrugando el vestido con el calor violento,
y el fuego, poco contento,
busca lo más escondido.

Esperad, simple cordero, 635 que esta ardiente llama insana, si os ha quemado la lana, os quiere abrasar el cuero.

Combátenle fuegos dos:
el uno, humano y visible; 640
el otro, sancto invisible, que es fuego de amor de Dios.

Yo no sé a cuál más debía, puesto que a los dos pagaba:
al que el cuerpo le abrasaba 645
o al que el alma le encendía.

Los que estaban a miralle, la ira así les pervierte, que mueren por darle muerte
y entretiénense en matalle. 650

Y, en medio deste tormento, no movió el sancto varón la lengua a formar razón que fuese de sentimiento;
antes dicen, y yo he visto, 655 que, si alguna vez hablaba, en el aire resonaba
el eco o nombre de Cristo;
y cuando en el agonía última el triste se vio, 660 cinco o seis veces llamó la Virgen Sancta María.

Al fuego el aire le atiza, y con tal ardor revuelve, que poco a poco resuelve 665
el sancto cuerpo en ceniza.

Mas, ya que morir le vieron, tantas piedras le tiraron, que las piedras acabaron lo que las llamas no hicieron. 670

¡Oh Santisteban segundo, que me asegura tu celo que miraste abierto el cielo
en tu muerte desde el mundo!

Queda el cuerpo en la marina, 675 quemado y apedreado;
el alma el vuelo ha tomado hacia la región divina.

Queda el moro muy gozoso del injusto y crudo hecho; 680 el turco está satisfecho;
el cristiano, temeroso.»

Yo he venido a referiros lo que no pudistes ver, si os lo ha dejado entender 685 mis lágrimas y suspiros.

SAYAVEDRA Deja el llanto, amigo, ya; que no es bien que se haga duelo por los que se van al cielo, sino por quien queda acá: 690 que, aunque parece ofendida a humanos ojos su suerte, el acabar con tal muerte es comenzar mejor vida.

Mide por otro nivel 695 tu llanto, que no hay paciencia que las muertes de Valencia se venguen acá en Argel.

Muéstrase allá la justicia en castigar la maldad; 700 muestra acá la crueldad cuánto puede la injusticia.

SEBASTIÁN En tan amarga querella, ¿quién detendrá los gemidos?
Ellos con culpa punidos; 705 nosotros, muertos sin ella.

LEONARDO Bastábanos ser cautivos, sin temer más desconciertos, pues si allá queman los muertos, abrasan acá los vivos. 710

Usa Valencia otros modos en castigar renegados,
no en público sentenciados:
¡mueran a tósico todos!

Mas un moro viene acá: 715
no estemos juntos aquí; Sayavedra, por allí,

tú, Sebastián, por allá.

Segunda jornada

YZUF y AURELIO.

YZUF Trecientos escudos di,
Aurelio, por la doncella.
Esto di al turco, que a ella alma y vida le rendí;
y es poco, según es bella. 5

Vendiómela de aburrido, que dice que no ha podido, mientras la tuvo en poder, en ningún modo atraer
al amoroso partido. 10

Púsela en casa de un moro, sin osarla traer acá,
y allí está donde ella está todo mi bien y tesoro,
y la gloria que amor da. 15

Allí se ve la bondad
junto con la crueldad
mayor que se vio en la tierra;
y juntas, sin hacer guerra, belleza y honestidad. 20

No pueden prometimientos ablandar su duro pecho.
Veme en lágrimas deshecho,
y ofrece siempre a los vientos cuantos servicios la he hecho. 25

No echa de ver su ventura, ni cómo el dolor me apura poco a poco suspirando;
antes, cuando yo más blando, entonces ella más dura. 30

A casa quiero traella

y reclinar en tu mano
mi gozo más soberano:
quizá tú podrás movella, siendo, como ella, cristiano; 35
y desde aquí te prometo que, si conduces a efecto mi amorosa voluntad, de darte la libertad
y serte amigo perfecto. 40

AURELIO En todo lo que quisieres, he, señor, de complacerte, por ser tu esclavo y por verte que melindres de mujeres te tengan de aquesa suerte. 45 ¿De qué nación es la dama que te enciende en esa llama sin mirar a su interés?

YZUFEspañola dicen que es.

AURELIO¿Y el nombre?

YZUFSilvia se llama. 50

AURELIO ¿Silvia? Una Silvia venía adonde yo cautivé,
y, según que la miré,
no en tanto allá se tenía.

YZUFÉsa es: yo la compré. 55

AURELIO Si ella es, yo sé decir que es hermosa sin mentir, y que no es tan cruda altiva, que su condición esquivada a ninguno hace morir. 60

Traéla a casa, señor, luego,
y ten las riendas al miedo;
y tú verás, si yo puedo, cómo a mis manos y ruego amaina el casto desnudo. 65

YZUF Yo voy; y, mientras se ordena su venida, por estrena
del contento que me has dado, yo diré a mi renegado que te quite esa cadena. 70

(Vase YZUF y queda AURELIO solo.)

AURELIO ¿Qué es esto, cielos? ¿Qué he oído?
¿Es mi Silvia? Silvia es, cierto.
¿Es posible, oh hado incierto, que he de ver quien me ha tenido vivo en muerte, en vida muerto? 75

Ésta es mi Silvia, a quien llamo, a quien quiero y a quien amo más que a todo lo del suelo.
¡Gracias hago y doy al cielo, que a los dos ha dado un amo! 80

Tregua tendrán mis enojos entre tanta desventura, pues, por estraña ventura, vendrán a mirar mis ojos tu sin igual hermosura. 85

Y si della está rendido mi amo, está conocido que quien la supo mirar

es imposible escapar
de preso o de malherido. 90

Y, pues que con tales bríos él descubre sus amores, si nos vemos, sus dolores se callarán y los míos te diré, que son mayores. 95

Y, mientras pudiere ver tu hermosura y gentil ser, templaré mi desconsuelo, hasta que disponga el cielo
de entrambos lo que ha de ser. 100

(Vase AURELIO, y entran mercaderes moros, primero y segundo; y padre y madre y dos hijos cautivos. Un pregonero; MAMÍ, soldado cosario.)

MERCADER En fin, Aydar, ¿que en Cerdeña habéis hecho la galima?

MAMÍSÍ; y aun no de poca estima, según se vio en la reseña.

MERCADER 2.º Dícenos que os dieron caza 105
de Nápoles las galeras.

MAMÍSÍ dieron, mas no de veras, que el peso las embaraza.

El ladrón que va a hurtar, para no dar en el lazo, 110 ha de ir muy sin embarazo para huir, para alcanzar.

Las galeras de cristianos, sabad, si no lo sabéis, que tienen falta de pies 115

y que no les sobran manos;
y esto lo causa que van tan llenas de mercancías, que, si bogasen dos días, un pontón no tomarán. 120

Nosotros, a la ligera, listos, vivos como el fuego, y, en dándonos caza, luego
pico al viento y ropa fuera, las obras muertas abajo, 125
árbol y entena en crujía, y así hacemos nuestra vía contra el viento sin trabajo;
y el soldado más lucido, el más flaco y más membrudo, 130 luego se muestra desnudo
y del bogavante asido.

Pero allá tiene la honra el cristiano en tal extremo, que asir en un trance el remo 135
le parece que es deshonra;
y, mientras ellos allá
en sus trece están honrados, nosotros, dellos cargados, venimos sin honra acá. 140

MERCADER 1.º Esa honra y ese engaño nunca salga de su pecho, pues nuestro mayor provecho
nace de su propio daño.

Un mozo de poca edad 145 destos sardos comprar quiero.

MAMÍYa los trae el pregonero vendiendo por la ciudad.

MERCADER 2.º ¿Hay españoles entre ellos?

MAMÍ Sí hay; que también tomamos 150 una nave, y allí hallamos hasta viente y cuatro dellos.

(Entra el pregonero, con el padre y la madre y los dos muchachos y un niño de teta a los pechos.)

PREGONERO ¿Hay quien compre los perritos, y el viejo, que es el perrazo,
y la vieja y su embarazo? 155
Pues, ¡a fe que son bonitos!
Déste me dan ciento y dos;
déste docientos me dan;
pero no los llevarán.
¡Pasá acá, perrazo, vos! 160

HIJO ¿Qué es esto, madre? ¿Por dicha véndennos aquestos moros?

MADRE Sí, hijo; que sus tesoros los crece nuestra desdicha.

PREGONERO ¿Hay quien a comprar acierte 165 el niño y la madre junto?

MADRE ¡Oh amargo y terrible punto, más terrible que la muerte!

PADRE ¡Sosegad, señora, el pecho; que si mi Dios ha ordenado 170

ponernos en este estado, Él sabe por qué lo ha hecho!

MADRE Destos hijos tengo pena, que no sé por dónde han de ir.

PADREDejad, señora, cumplir 175 lo que el alto cielo ordena.

MERCADER 1.º ¿Qué han de dar déste, decí?

PREGONEROCiento y dos escudos dan.

MERCADER ¿Por ciento y diez darlo han?

PREGONERONo, si no pasáis de ahí. 180

MERCADER ¿Está sano?

PREGONEROSano está.

MERCADER Ábrele la boca.

Abre; no tengas temor.

HIJO¡No me la saque, señor;
que ella misma se cairá!

MERCADER ¿Piensa que sacalle quiero 185 el rapaz alguna muela?

HIJO ¡Paso, señor, no me duela;
tenga, quedo, que me muero!

MERCADER 2.º Destotro, ¿cuánto dan dél?

PREGONERO Docientos escudos dan. 190

MERCADER 2.º ¿Y por cuánto le darán?

PREGONERO Trecientos piden por él.

MERCADER 1.º Si te compro, ¿serás bueno?

HIJO Aunque vos no me compréis, seré bueno.

MERCADER 2.º ¿Serlo heis? 195

HIJO Ya lo soy, sin ser ajeno.

MERCADER 1.º Por éste doy ciento y treinta.

PREGONERO Vuestro es: venga el dinero.

MERCADER 1.º En casa dároslo quiero.

MADRE El corazón me revienta. 200

MERCADER 1.º Comprad, compañero, esotro.
Ven, niño, vente a holgar.

HIJO No, señor; no he de dejar mi madre por ir con otro.

MADRE Ve, hijo, que ya no eres 205 sino del que te ha comprado.

HIJO ¡Ay, madre! ¿Habéisme dejado?

MADRE ¡Ay, cielo, cuán crudo eres!

MORO Anda, rapaz, ven conmigo.

HIJO Vámonos juntos, hermano. 210

HERMANO No puedo, ni está en mi mano.

PADRE El cielo vaya contigo.

MADRE ¡Oh, mi bien y mi alegría, no se olvide de ti Dios!

HIJO ¿Dónde me llevan sin vos, 215

padre mío y madre mía?

MADRE ¿Quieres que hable, señor, a mi hijo aun no un momento?
Dame este breve contento, pues es eterno el dolor. 220

MORO Cuanto quisieres le di, pues será la vez postrera.

MADRESÍ, pues ésta es la primera que en este trance me vi.

HIJO Tenedme con vos aquí, 225 madre, que voy no sé dónde.

MADRELa ventura se te asconde, hijo, pues yo te parí.

Hase escurecido el cielo, turbado los elementos, 230 conjurado mar y vientos todos en tu desconsuelo

No conoces tu desdicha, aunque estás bien dentro della, puesto que el no conocella 235 lo puedes tener a dicha.

Lo que te ruego, alma mía, pues el verte se me impide, es que nunca se te olvide rezar el Avemaría; 240

que esta reina de bondad, de virtud y gracia llena, ha de limar tu cadena
y volver tu libertad.

MORO ¡Mirad la perra cristiana 245
qué consejo da al muchacho!
¡Sí que no estaba él borracho como tú, sin seso, vana!

HIJO Madre, al fin, ¿que no me quedo?
¿Que me llevan estos moros? 250

MADRE Contigo van mis tesoros.

HIJO A fe que me ponen miedo.

MADRE Más miedo me queda a mí de verte ir donde vas, que nunca te acordarás 255
de Dios, de ti, ni de mí; porque esos tus tiernos años, ¿qué prometen sino aquesto, entre inicua gente puesto, fabricadora de engaños? 260

PREGONERO ¡Calla, vieja y mala pieza, si no quieres, por más mengua, que lo que dice tu lengua que lo pague la cabeza!
¿Destro hay quien me dé mas? 265 Que es mas bello y más lozano que no es el otro su hermano.

MERCADER 2.º ¡Sus!, ¿en cuánto le darás?

PREGONERO ¿No os he dicho que trecientos escudos de oro por cuenta? 270

MERCADER 2.º ¿Quies docientos y cincuenta?

PREGONERO Es dar voces a los vientos.

MERCADER 2.º Enamorado me ha el donaire del garzón;
yo los doy en conclusión. 275

PREGONERO Dinero o señal me da.

MERCADER 2.º Cómo te llamas me di.

HIJO Señor, Francisco me llamo.

MERCADER 2.º Pues que has mudado de amo, muda el Francisco en Mamí. 280

HIJO ¿Para qué es mudar el nombre, si no ha de mudar la fe?

MERCADER 2.º Eso agora no lo sé.

HIJO No hay castigo que me asombre.

MERCADER 2.º Alto, venidos tras mí. 285

HIJO ¡Amados padres, adiós!

PADRE ¡El mismo vaya con vos!

MADRE ¡Francisco!

MERCADER 2.º No, no: Mamí.

HIJO Eso no, señor patrón:
Francisco me has de llamar. 290

MERCADER 2.º El palo os hará trocar el nombre y aun la intención.

HIJO Pues me aparta el hado insano de vos, señor, ¿qué mandáis?

PADRESólo, hijo, que viváis 295 como bueno y fiel cristiano.

MADRE Hijo, no las amenazas, no los gustos y regalos,
no los azotes y palos,
no los conciertos y trazas, 300
no todo cuanto tesoro
cubre el suelo, el cielo visto, te mueva a dejar a Cristo por seguir al pueblo moro.

HIJO En mí se verá, si puedo, 305

y mi buen Jesús me ayuda, cómo en mi alma no muda
la fe, la promesa o miedo.

PREGONERO ¡Oh, qué cristiano se muestra el rapaz! Pues ¡yo os prometo 310 que alcéis con sancto aprieto la flecha y la mano diestra!

Estos rapaces cristianos, al principio muchos lloros,
y luego se hacen moros 315
mejor que los más ancianos.

(Sálense, y entran YZUF y SILVIA.)

YZUF Dejad, Silvia, el llanto agora; poned tregua al ansia brava, que no os compré para esclava, sino para ser señora. 320

Mirad que imagino y creo que vuestra gran desventura, para daros más ventura
ha traído este rodeo.

Con vos Fortuna en su ley 325
no usa de nuevas leyes:
que esclavos se han visto reyes, aunque vos sois más que rey.

Limpiad los húmedos ojos, que sujetan cuanto miran, 330
y, al tiempo que se retiran, llevan de almas los despojos;

y no cubra el blanco velo esa divina hermosura, que es como la nieve pura, 335 que impide la luz del cielo.

SILVIA Esme ya tan natural, señor, el llanto y tormento, que, si me deja un momento, lo tengo por mayor mal; 340
y, aunque así estoy, estaré alegre al obedeceros, pues distes tantos dineros
por mí sin saber por qué; que, si acaso lo habéis hecho 345 pensando sacar de mí gran rescate, desde aquí se apoca vuestro provecho;
porque os prometo, señor, que de miseria y pobreza 350
tengo cuanto de riqueza, si la riqueza es dolor;
y de dolor soy tan rica,
cuanto, por darme pasión, este caudal la ocasión 355
por puntos le multiplica.

YZUF Silvia, vives engañada: que yo no quiero de ti sino que quieras de mí ser servida y respectada; 360 que el provecho que yo espero, Silvia, de haberte comprado, es ver tu rostro estremado
y no doblar el dinero;
que el Amor, que se mejora 365
en mostrar su fuerza brava, me ha hecho esclavo de mi esclava, esclava que es mi señora;
y quedo tan satisfecho
de perder la libertad, 370 que alabo la crueldad
deste crudo y nuevo hecho.
Y, porque lo que aquí digo lo entiendas, Silvia, mejor, nunca me llames señor, 375 sino siervo o caro amigo.

SILVIA Aunque tamaña mudanza hace fortuna en mi estado, no creo se me ha olvidado
el término de crianza. 380

Bien sé cómo he de llamarte, y sé que es de obligación que en lo que fuera razón procure de contentarte.

YZUF Tu habla tan comedida, 385 tu donaire, gracia y ser, claro me dan a entender que eres, Silvia, bien nacida;
y, aunque pudiera esperar de ti un rescate crecido, 390
a tal término he venido, que tú me has de rescatar.

Mas, en tanto que a la clara veas cuanto hago por ti, ven, Silvia, vente tras mí: 395
verás a tu ama Zahara.

SILVIA Vamos, señor, en buen hora.

YZUF Silvia, no tanto «señor», pues mi ventura y amor
os ha hecho a vos mi señora. 400

(Sale ZAHARA.)

ZAHARA Seáis, Yzuf, bien llegado.
¿Cúya es la esclava rumía?

SILVIAVuestra soy, señora mía.

YZUFVerdad es: yo la he comprado.

ZAHARA Por cierto, la compra es bella 405 si cual hermosa es honesta.
Decid, señor, ¿cuánto os cuesta?

YZUFDado he mil doblas por ella.

ZAHARA ¿Espera ser rescatada?

YZUFDe muy rica tiene fama. 410

ZAHARA¿Su nombre?

YZUFSilvia se llama.

ZAHARA¿Es doncella o es casada?

SILVIA Casada soy y doncella.

ZAHARA¿Cómo es eso, Silvia? Di.

SILVIA Señora, ello es así, 415 que así lo quiso mi estrella.

El cielo me dio marido, no para que le gozase,
sino para que quedase
yo perdida y él perdido. 420

(Aquí entra un moro diciendo:)

MORO Yzuf, a llamarte envía apriesa el rey nuestro, Azán.

YZUF ¿Dónde está agora?

MORO En Duán,
metido en grande agonía.

Amet, jenízar agá, 425
y los bolucos bajíes,
y también los debajíes
y oldajes están allá.

Hanse juntado a consejo sobre que es averiguado 430 que el rey de España ha juntado de guerra grande aparejo.

Dicen que va a Portugal,
mas ténese no sea maña;
y es bien que tema su saña 435
Argel, que le hace más mal.

En la guerra hay mil ensayos de fraude y de astucia llenos:
acullá suenan los truenos
y acá disparan los rayos. 440

YZUF Vamos: quel cielo, que toma

por suya nuestra defensa, a España hará, con su ofensa, sujeta y sierva a Mahoma.

Y vos, señora, ordenad 445
a Silvia lo que ha de hacer;
y vos, Silvia, a su querer sujetad la voluntad.

(Vanse los dos, y quedan SILVIA y ZAHARA solas.)

ZAHARA Cristiana, di: ¿de adónde eres?
¿Eres pobre, o eres rica? 450
¿De suerte ensalzada, o chica?
No me lo niegues, si quieres, porque soy, cual tú, mujer,
y no de entrañas tan duras que tus tristes desventuras 455 no me hayan de enternecer.

SILVIA Señora, soy de Granada, y de suerte así abatida, cual lo muestra el ser vendida a cada paso y comprada. 460 Dicen que fui rica un tiempo, pero toda mi riqueza se ha vuelto en mayor pobreza
y ha pasado con el tiempo.

ZAHARA ¿Has algún tiempo tenido 465 enamorado deseo?

SILVIA Al estado en que me veo, el crudo Amor me ha traído.

ZAHARA ¿Fuiste acaso bien querida?

SILVIAFuilo; y quise con ventaja 470 tal, que apenas la mortaja borrará fe tan subida.

ZAHARA ¿Fuiste querida primero,
o empezó el amor de ti?

SILVIAPrimero querida fui 475
del que quise, querré y quiero.

ZAHARA ¿Es mozo?

SILVIAY aun gentilhombre.

ZAHARA¿Es cristiano?

SILVIA Pues ¡qué!, ¿moro?
¡No sale de su decoro quien ha de cristiano el nombre! 480

ZAHARA ¿Y es pecado querer bien a un moro?

SILVIA Yo no sé nada;
sé que es cosa reprobada,
y a cristianas no está bien.

ZAHARA ¿Y querer mora a cristiano? 485

SILVIA Eso tú mejor lo entiendes.

ZAHARA ¡Ay, Silvia, cómo me ofendes y me lastimas temprano!

SILVIA ¿Yo, mi señora? ¿En qué suerte?

ZAHARA Escucha y te lo diré; 490 que, en oyéndome, bien sé que vendrás de mí a dolerte.

«Has de saber, ¡oh Silvia!, que estos días partieron deste puerto con buen tiempo doce bajeles, de cosarios todos, 495 y con próspero viento caminaron la vuelta de las islas de Cerdeña;
y allí, en las calas, vueltas y revueltas,
y puntas que la mar hace y la tierra, se fueron a esconder, estando alerta 500
si algún bajel de Génova o de España, o de otra nación, con que no fuese francesa, por el mar se descubría.
En esto, un bravo viento se levanta, que maestral se llama, cuya furia 505 dicen los marineros que es tan fuerte, que las tupidas velas y las jarcias del más recio navío y más armado no pueden resistirla, y es forzoso acudir al abrigo más cercano, 510 si su rigor acaso lo concede.
Las levantadas ondas, el ruido del atrevido viento detenía los cosarios bajeles en las calas, sin dejarles salir al mar abierto; 515
y en otra parte, con furor insano, mostrando su braveza fatigaba una galera de cristiana gente y de riquezas llena, que, corriendo por el hinchado mar sin remo alguno, 520 venía a su albedrío, temerosa de ser sorbida de las bravas ondas;

pero después, a cabo de tres días, del recio mar y viento contrastada, descubrió tierra, y fue el descubrimiento 525 de su mayor dolor y desventura, porque a la misma isla de San Pedro vino a parar, adonde recogidos estaban los bajeles enemigos, los cuales, de la presa cudiciosos, 530 salen, y de furor bélico armados, la galera acometen destrozada
y de solos deseos defendida.
Una pelota pasa en el momento al capitán el pecho, y a su lado 535 del lusitano fuerte, muerto cae un caballero ilustre valenciano.
El robo, las riquezas, los cativos que los turcos hallaron en el seno de la triste galera me ha contado 540 un cristiano que allí perdió la dulce y amada libertad, para quitarla a quien quiere rendirse a su rendido.» Este cristiano, Silvia, este cristiano; este cristiano es, Silvia, quien me tiene 545
fuera del ser que a moras es debido, fuera de mi contento y alegría, fuera de todo gusto, y estoy fuera, que es lo peor, de todo mi sentido.
Compróme mi marido, y está en casa; 550
y, puesto que con lágrimas y ruegos, con sospiros, ternezas y con dádivas, procuro de ablandar su duro pecho, al mío, que contino es blanda cera, el suyo se me muestra de diamante; 555 ansí que, Silvia, hermana, como has dicho que al cristiano no es lícito dé gusto en cosas del amor a mora alguna, tus razones me tienen ofendida,

y con aquesas mesmas se defiende 560 Aurelio, a quien ha hecho tan cristiano el cielo para darme a mí la muerte.

SILVIA¿Aurelio dices que por nombre tiene, señora, ese cristiano?

ZAHARAAnsí se llama.

SILVIALa galera que dices, según creo, 565 se llamaba San Pablo, y era nueva y de la sacra religión de Malta.
Yo en ella me perdí, y aun imagino que conozco a ese Aurelio, y es un mozo de rostro hermoso y de nación hispana. 570

ZAHARASin duda has acertado, ¡ay, Silvia mía!
¿Quién es este enemigo de mi gloria?
¿Es caballero, o rústico villano?
Que todo lo parece en su apostura y dura condición: el talle ilustre, 575 de la ciudad; la condición, del monte.

SILVIAA mí, pobre escudero me parece, según en la galera se trataba;
que de su hacienda no sé más, señora.

ZAHARANi yo sé qué te diga, ¡oh Silvia, Silvia!, 580 sino que a tal extremo soy venida, que le tengo de amar, sea quien se fuere.

Sólo te ruego que procures, Silvia, de ablandar esta tigre y fiera hircana, y atraerla con dulces sentimientos 585 a que sienta la pena que padece esta mísera esclava de su esclavo;
y si esto, Silvia, haces, yo te juro por todo el Alcorán de buscar modo cómo con brevedad alegre vuelvas 590 al patrio dulce suelo deseado.

SILVIA Deja, señora, al cargo a Silvia dello, que tu verás lo que mi industria hace por gusto tuyo y por provecho mío.

(AURELIO, solo.)

AURELIO ¡Oh sancta edad, por nuestro mal pasada, 595 a quien nuestros antiguos le pusieron el dulce nombre de la Edad dorada!
¡Cuán seguros y libres discurrieron la redondez del suelo los que en ella la caduca mortal vida vivieron! 600
No sonaba en los aires la querella del mísero cautivo, cuando alzaba la voz a maldecir su dura estrella.
Entonces libertad dulce reinaba y el nombre odioso de la servidumbre 605 en ningunos oídos resonaba.
Pero, después que sin razón, sin lumbre, ciegos de la avaricia, los mortales, cargados de terrena pesadumbre, descubrieron los rubios minerales 610 del oro que en la tierra se escondía, ocasión principal de nuestros males,
este que menos oro poseía, envidioso de aquel que, con más maña, más riquezas en uno recogía, 615 sembró la cruda y la mortal cizaña del robo, de la fraude y del engaño, del cambio injusto y trato con maraña.

Mas con ninguno hizo mayor daño que con la hambrienta, despiadada guerra, 620 que al natural destruye y al estraño.

Ésta consume, abrasa, y echa por tierra, los reinos, los imperios populosos,
y la paz hermosísima destierra, y sus fieros ministros, codiciosos 625 más del rubio metal que de otra cosa, turban nuestros contentos y reposos.

Y, en la sangrienta guerra peligrosa, pudiendo con el filo de la espada acabar nuestra vida temerosa, 630

la guardan de prisiones rodeada, por ver si prometemos por librilla nuestra pobre riqueza mal lograda.

Y así, puede el que es pobre y que se halla puesto entre esta canalla al daño cierto 635 su libertad a Dios encomendalla,

o contarse, viviendo, ya por muerto, como el que en rota nave y mar airado se halla solo, sin saber dó hay puerto.

Y no tengo por menos desdichado 640 al que tiene con qué y el modo ignora cómo llegar al punto deseado, porque esta gente, do bondad no mora,

no dio jamás palabra que cumpliese, como falsa, sin ley, sin fe y traidora. 645

Guardará por su dios al interese, y do éste no interviene, no se espere que por sola virtud bondad hiciese.

Aquí en diverso traje veo que muere el ministro de Dios, y por su oficio 650 más abatido es, peor se quiere, y el mancebo cristiano al torpe vicio es dedicado desta gente perra, do consiste su gloria y ejercicio.

¡Oh cielo santo! ¡Oh dulce, amada tierra! 655 ¡Oh Silvia! ¡Oh gloria de mi pensamiento!
¿Quién de tu alegre vista me destierra?
Pero, si no me engaño, pasos siento.
Yzuf, mi amo, es éste que aquí viene.
¡Cuán ajeno de sí le trae el tormento! 660

YZUF Quien con amor amargo se entretiene, y al duro yugo de su servidumbre el flaco cuello ya inclinado tiene, si del cielo no viene nueva lumbre que aquella ceguedad de los sentidos 665 con claros rayos de razón alumbre, todos estos remedios son perdidos;
que al fin irán por tierra derribados los amigos consejos más sabidos.
Más viejos y más pláticos soldados 670 tiene el rey a su mando y su servicio;
déjeme a mí, que tengo otros cuidados;
mejor será que el trabajoso oficio de reparar los fosos y muralla entregue al que de Amor aún es novicio; 675 que yo más cruda y más fiera batalla espero a cada paso, ¡ay suerte dura!, que teme el alma y ha de atropellalla.
¡Oh Silvia, reina de la hermosura!, por vos a los oficios doy de mano 680 que pudieran honrarme y dar ventura.
Pero, ¿qué es lo que he dicho? ¡Oh ciego insano!
¿No vale más gozar de aquellos ojos, que ser señor del áureo suelo hispano?
Tu beldad, Silvia, adoro aquí de hinojos. 685

(AURELIO vuelve y, hallándole de rodillas, le dice:)

AURELIO ¿Son éstos los despojos, señor mío, que el gran cuidado mío te procura?
Por cierto que es locura averiguada mostrar tan derribada la esperanza.
Ten, señor, confianza; espera un poco, 690 que das muestras de loco en lo que haces.

YZUF Poco me satisfaces y contentas, si consolarme tientes con razones.
¿Has visto las faciones de mi diosa?

AURELIO Señor, no he visto cosa. ¿Es ya venida? 695
Si lo es, retraída está allá dentro.

YZUF Sí está, y aun en el centro de mi pecho.

AURELIO Ten cierto tu provecho desde hoy más.

YZUF Vamos, y verla has, y ten cuidado de lo que te he rogado, Aurelio amigo. 700

AURELIO El cielo será dello buen testigo.

(Vanse, y sale FÁTIMA sola.)

FÁTIMA El esperado punto es ya llegado que pide la no vista hechicería para poder domar el no domado pecho, que domará la ciencia mía. 705 Por la región del cielo, el estrellado carro lleva la noche obscura y fría, y la ocasión me llama do haré cosas horrendas, estupendas, espantosas.

El cabello dorado al aire suelto 710 tiene de estar, y el cuerpo desceñido, descalzo el pie derecho, el rostro vuelto al mar adonde el sol se ha zabullido; al brazo este sartal será revuelto de las piedras preñadas que en el nido 715 del águila se hallan, y esta cuerda con mi intención la virtud suya acuerda.

Aquestas cinco cañas, que cortadas fueron en luna llena por mi mano, en esta misma forma acomodadas, 720 lo que quiero harán fácil y llano; también estas cabezas, arrancadas del jáculo, serpiente, en el verano ardiente allá en la Libia, me aprovechan, y aun estos granos si en el suelo se echan. 725

Esta carne, quitada de la frente del ternecillo potro cuando nace, cuya virtud rarísima, excelente,
en todo a mi deseo satisface, envuelta en esta yerba, a quien el diente 730 tocó del corderillo cuando pace, hará que Aurelio venga cual cordero mansísimo y humilde a lo que quiero.

Esta figura, que de cera es hecha, en el nombre de Aurelio fabricada, 735 será con blanda mano y dura flecha, por medio el corazón atravesada.
Quedará luego Zahara satisfecha de aquella voluntad desordenada, y el helado cristiano vendrá luego 740 ardiendo en amoroso y dulce fuego.

A vosotros, ¡oh justos Radamanto y Minos!, que con leyes inmutables en los oscuros reinos del espanto regís las almas tristes miserables; 745 si acaso tiene fuerza el ronco canto o mormurio de versos detestables, por ellos os conjuro, ruego y pido ablandéis este pecho endurecido.

¡Rápida, Ronca, Run, Raspe, Riforme, 750 Gandulandín, Clifet, Pantasilonte, ladrante tragador, falso triforme, herbárico pastífero del monte, Herebo, engendrador del rostro enorme de todo fiero dios, a punto ponte 755 y ven sin detenerte a mi presencia, si no desprecias la zoroastra ciencia!

(Sale un DEMONIO y dice:)

DEMONIO La fuerza incontrastable de tus versos y mormurios perversos me han traído del reino del olvido a obedecerte; 760 mas, ¡oh mora!, quel verte en esta empresa infinito me pesa, porque entiendo que es ir tiempo perdiendo.

FÁTIMA¿Por qué causa?

DEMONIOPon al conjuro pausa, y al momento satisfaré tu intento en lo que pides, 765 si acaso tú te mides y acomodas a mis palabras todas y consejos.
Todos tus aparejos son en vano, porque un pecho cristiano, que se arrima a Cristo, en poco estima hechicerías. 770 Por muy diversas vías te conviene atraerle a que pene por tu amiga.

FÁTIMA¿Ansí questa fatiga no aprovecha?

DEMONIO En balde ha sido hecha. Mas escucha, que con presteza mucha y sin rodeo 775 cumplirás tu deseo en este modo:
en el infierno todo no hay quien haga más cruda y fiera plaga entre cristianos, aunque muestren más sanos corazones y limpias intenciones, que es la dura 780 necesidad que apura la paciencia;
no tiene resistencia esta pasión;
la otra es la ocasión. Si estas dos vienen y con Aurelio tienen estrechez, verás a su braveza derribada 785
y en blandura tornada, y con sosiego, regalarse en el fuego de Cupido.

FÁTIMA Pues esas dos te pido que me invíes, y que no te desvíes desta empresa.

DEMONIO Tu mandado se hará con toda priesa. 790

(Vanse.)

Tercera jornada

Salen dos esclavos y dos muchachillos moros, que les salen diciendo estas palabras, que se usan decir en Argel: «Joan, o Juan, non rescatar, non fugir. Don Juan no venir; acá morir, perro, acá morir; don Juan no venir; acá, morir».

ESCLAVO 1.º ¡Bien decís, perros; bien decís, traidores!
Que si don Juan el valeroso de Austria gozara del vital amado aliento, a sólo él, a sola su ventura, la destrucción de vuestra infame tierra 5 guardara el justo y piadoso cielo.
Mas no le mereció gozar el mundo;
antes, en pena de tan graves culpas como en él se comenten, quiso el hado cortar el hilo de su dulce vida 10 y arrebatár el alma el alto cielo.

MUCHACHOS; Don Juan no venir; acá morir!

ESCLAVO 2.º; Si él acaso viniera, yo sé cierto que huyérades vosotros, gente infame!

MUCHACHOS; Don Juan no venir; acá morir! 15

ESCLAVO 1.º; Tú morirás, y no podrás huirte del duro cativeño del infierno!

MUCHACHOS; Don Juan no venir; acá morir!

ESCLAVO 2.ºVendrá su hermano, el ínclito Filipo, el cual, sin duda, ya venido hubiera 20 si la cerviz indómita y erguida del luterano Flandes no ofendiese tan sin vergüenza a su real corona.

MUCHACHOS¡Acá morir!

ESCLAVO 1.ºPrimero espero ver puestas por tierra 25 estas flacas murallas, y este nido y cueva de ladrones abrasado, pena que justamente le es debida
a sus continos y nefandos vicios.

ESCLAVO 2.ºSerá nunca acabar si respondemos; 30 déjalos ya, Pedro Álvarez, amigo, que ellos se cansarán, y dime agora si todavía piensas de huirte.

ESCLAVO 1.º¡Y cómo!

ESCLAVO 2.º¿En qué manera?

ESCLAVO 1.º¿En qué manera?
Por tierra, pues no puedo de otra suerte. 35

ESCLAVO 2.º¡Difícultosa empresa, cierto, emprendes!

ESCLAVO 1.ºPues, ¿qué quieres que haga? Dime, hermano; que mis ancianos padres, que son muertos, y un hermano que tengo se ha entregado en la hacienda y bienes que dejaron, 40 el cual es tan avaro, que, aunque sabe la esclavitud amarga que padezco, no quiere dar, para librarme della, un real de mi mismo patrimonio.

Como esto considero, y veo que tengo 45 un amo tan cruel como tú sabes, y que piensa que yo soy caballero, y que no hay modo que limosna alguna llegue a dar el dinero que él me pide, y la insufrible vida que padezco, 50 de hambre, desnudez, cansancio y frío, determino morir antes huyendo, que vivir una vida tan mezquina.

ESCLAVO 2.º ¿Has hecho la mochila?

ESCLAVO 1.º Sí, ya tengo casi diez libras de bizcocho bueno. 55

ESCLAVO 2.º ¿Pues hay desde aquí a Orán sesenta leguas y no piensas llevar más de diez libras?

ESCLAVO 1.º No, porque tengo hecha ya una pasta de harina y huevos, y con miel mezclada, y cocida muy bien, la cual me dicen 60 que da muy poco della gran sustento;
y si esto me faltare, algunas yerbas pienso comer con sal, que también llevo.

ESCLAVO 2.º ¿Zapatos llevas?

ESCLAVO 1.º Sí, tres pares buenos.

ESCLAVO 2.º ¿Sabes bien el camino?

ESCLAVO 1.º ¡Ni por pienso! 65

ESCLAVO 2.º Pues, ¿cómo piensas ir?

ESCLAVO 1.º Por la marina; que agora, como es tiempo de verano, los alárabes todos a la sierra se retiran, buscando el fresco viento.

ESCLAVO 2.º ¿Llevas algunas señas por do entiendas 70
cuál es de Orán la deseada tierra?

ESCLAVO 1.º Sí llevo, y sé que he de pasar primero dos ríos: uno del Bates nombrado, río del azafrán, que está aquí junto;
otro, el de Hiqueznaque, que es más lejos. 75 Cerca de Mostagán, y a man derecha, está una levantada y grande cuesta, que dicen que se llama el Cerro Gordo, y puesto encima della se descubre frente por frente un monte, que es la Silla, 80 que sobre Orán levanta la cabeza.

ESCLAVO 2.º ¿Caminarás de noche?

ESCLAVO 1.º ¿Quién lo duda?

ESCLAVO 2.º ¿Por montañas, por riscos, por honduras te atreves a pasar, en las tinieblas de la cerrada noche, sin camino 85 ni senda que te guíe adonde quieres?
¡Oh libertad, y cuánto eres amada!
Amigo dulce, el cielo sancto haga salir con buen suceso tu trabajo.
Dios te acompañe.

ESCLAVO 1.º Y Él vaya contigo. 90

(AURELIO y SILVIA.)

AURELIO Dádome ha la Fortuna por descuento de todo mi trabajo, Silvia mía, la gloria de mirarte y el contento.
Mi pena será vuelta en alegría de hoy más, pues que te veo, Silvia amada, 95
y mi cerrada noche en claro día.

SILVIA Yo soy, mi bien, la bien afortunada, pues que torno a gozar de tu presencia, de lo que estaba ya desconfiada.

AURELIO ¿Cómo os ha ido, esposa, en esta ausencia, 100 en poder desta gente que no alcanza razón, virtud, valor, almas, conciencia?

SILVIA Como he tenido y tengo la esperanza puesta en el Hacedor de tierra y cielo con cristiana y segura confianza, 105 por su bondad, aun tengo el casto velo guardado, y con su ayuda sancta espero no tener de mancharle algún recelo.

AURELIO   Sabrás, esposa dulce, que el artero y vengativo Amor ha salteado   110 con áspero rigor, airado y fiero, el pecho de mi ama, y le ha llagado de una llaga incurable, pues le tiene deste pecho, que es tuyo, enamorado, y a doquiera que voy conmigo viene;   115
y, según que la mora me declara, con el solo mirarme se entretiene.

SILVIA   Todo ese cuento ya me ha dicho Zahara, y me ha pedido que yo a ti te pida no quieras desdeñarla así a la clara.   120 También no pasa menos triste vida Yzuf, nuestro amo, que también me adora, con fe que, a lo que creo, no es fingida.

AURELIO   ¡Oh pobre moro!

SILVIA; Oh desdichada mora!

AURELIO; Cómo enviáis en vano al vano viento   125 vuestros vanos suspiros de hora en hora!
    También me ha dicho Yzuf todo su intento y me ha rogado que yo a vos os ruegue algún alivio deis a su tormento.
    Mas antes con airada furia llegue   130 una saeta que me pase el pecho, y esta alma de las carnes se despegue, que tan a costa mía su provecho
y tan en daño vuestro procurase, aunque él quede de mí mal satisfecho.   135

SILVIA Si en este caso, Aurelio, nos bastase mostrar a éstos voluntad trocada, sin que el daño adelante más pasase, tendríalo por cosa yo acertada, porque deste fingir se granjearía 140 el no estorbarnos nuestra vista amada.

Dirás a Zahara que por causa mía no te muestras tan áspero, y yo al moro diré que mucho puede tu porfía;
y, guardando los dos este decoro 145 con discreción podremos fácilmente apacar con el vernos nuestro lloro.

AURELIO El parecer que has dado es excelente, y haráse cual lo ordenas, y entre tanto, quizá se aplacará el hado inclemente. 150

Yo escribiré a mi padre en el quebranto en que estamos los dos; tú, Silvia, puedes escribir a los tuyos otro tanto.

Y, porque a veces tienen las paredes, según se dice, oídos, Silvia mía, 155 agradeciendo al cielo estas mercedes, pasemos esta plática a otro día.

(OCASIÓN, NECESIDAD, AURELIO, ZAHARA y FÁTIMA. Sale primero la OCASIÓN y la NECESIDAD.)

OCASIÓN Necesidad, fiel ejecutora de cualquiera delicto que te ofrece la pública ocasión o la secreta, 160 ya ves cuán apremiadas y forzadas del Herebo infernal habemos sido, para venir a combatir la roca del pecho encastillado de un cristiano, que está rebelde y muestra que no teme 165 del niño y ciego dios la grande fuerza.

Es menester que tú le solicites y te le muestres, siempre a todas horas, en el comer, y en el vestir y en todas las cosas que pensare o pretendiere. 170 Yo, por mi parte, de continuo pienso ponérmele delante y la melena de mis pocos cabellos ofrecerle, y detenerme un rato, porque pueda asirme della, cosa poco usada 175 de mi ligera condición y presta.

NECESIDAD Bien puedes, Ocasión, estar segura que yo haré por mi parte maravillas si tu favor y ayuda no me falta.
Pero ves, aquí viene el indomable; 180 aprecíbete, hermana, y derribemos la vana presunción deste cristiano.

(Sale AURELIO.)

AURELIO ¿Que no ha de ser posible, pobre Aurelio, el defenderte desta mora infame, que por tantos caminos te persigue? 185 Sí será, sí, si no me niega el cielo
el favor que hasta aquí no me ha negado.
De mil astucias usa y de mil mañas para traerme a su lascivo intento:
ya me regala, ya me vitupera, 190 ya me da de comer en abundancia, ya me mata de hambre y de miseria.

NECESIDAD Grande es, por cierto, Aurelio, la que tienes.

AURELIO Grande necesidad, cierto, padezco.

NECESIDAD Rotos traes los zapatos y vestido. 195

AURELIO Zapatos y vestidos tengo rotos.

NECESIDAD En un pellejo duermes, y en el suelo.

AURELIO En el suelo me acuesto en un pellejo.

NECESIDAD Corta traes la camisa, sucia y rota.

AURELIO Sucia, corta camisa y rota traigo. 200

OCASIÓN Pues yo sé, si quisieses, que hallarías ocasión de salir dese trabajo.

AURELIO Pues yo sé, si quisiese, que podría salir desta miseria a poca costa.

OCASIÓN Con no más de querer a tu ama Zahara, 205
o con dar muestras sólo de quererla.

AURELIO Con no más de querer bien a mi ama, o fingir que la quiero, me bastaba.
Mas, ¿quién podrá fingir lo que no quiere?

NECESIDAD Necesidad te fuerza a que lo hagas. 210

AURELIO Necesidad me fuerza a que lo haga.

OCASIÓN ¡Oh, cuán rica que es Zahara y cuán hermosa!

AURELIO ¡Cuán hermosa y cuán rica que es mi ama!

NECESIDAD Y liberal, que hace mucho al caso, que te dará a montón lo que quisieres. 215

AURELIO Y, siendo liberal y enamorada, daráme todo cuanto le pidiere.

OCASIÓN Extraña es la ocasión que se te ofrece.

AURELIO Extraña es la ocasión que se me ofrece, mas no podrá torcer mi hidalga sangre 220 de lo que es justo y a sí misma debe.

OCASIÓN ¿Quién tiene de saber lo que tú haces?
Y un pecado secreto, aunque sea grave, cerca tiene el remedio y la disculpa.

AURELIO ¿Quién tiene de saber lo que yo hago? 225
Y una secreta culpa no merece la pena que a la pública le es dada.

OCASIÓN Y más, que la ocasión mil ocasiones te ofrecerá secretas y escondidas.

AURELIOY más, que a cada paso se me ofrecen 230 secretas ocasiones infinitas.
¡Cerrar quiero con una! ¡Aurelio, paso, que no es de caballero lo que piensas, sino de mal cristiano, descuidado de lo que a Cristo y a su sangre debe! 235

NECESIDADMisericordia tuvo y tiene Cristo con que perdona siempre las ofensas que por necesidad pura le hacen.

AURELIOPero bien sabe Dios que aquí me fuerza pura necesidad, y esto reciba 240 el cielo por disculpa de mi culpa.

OCASIÓNAgora es tiempo, Aurelio; agora puedes asir a la ocasión por los cabellos.
¡Mira cuán linda, dulce y amorosa la mora hermosa viene a tu mandado! 245

(Sale ZAHARA.)

ZAHARAAurelio, ¿solo estás?

AURELIO¡Y acompañado!

ZAHARA¿De quién?

AURELIODe un amoroso pensamiento.

ZAHARA¿Quién es la causa? Di.

AURELIO Si te la digo, podría ser que ya no me llamasen riguroso, cruel, desamorado. 250

NECESIDAD ¡Obrando va tu fuerza, compañera!

OCASIÓN ¿Pues no ha de obrar? Escucha en lo que para.

ZAHARA Si eso así fuese, Aurelio, dichosísima sería mi ventura, y tú serías no menos venturoso, dulce Aurelio. 255 Y, porque más de espacio y más a solas me puedas descubrir tu pensamiento, sígueme, Aurelio, agora que se ofrece la ocasión de no estar Yzuf en casa.

AURELIO Sí seguiré, señora; que ya es tiempo 260 de obedecerte, pues que soy tu esclavo.

NECESIDAD Por tierra va, Ocasión, el fundamento del bizarro cristiano. ¡Ya se rinde!

OCASIÓN ¡Tales combates juntas le hemos dado!
Entrémonos con Zahara en su aposento, 265
y allí de nuevo, cuando Aurelio entrare, tornaremos a darle tientos nuevos.

(Éntranse, y queda AURELIO solo.)

AURELIO Aurelio, ¿dónde vas? ¿Para dó mueves el vagaroso paso? ¿Quién te guía?

¿Con tan poco temor de Dios te atreves 270 a contentar tu loca fantasía?
Las ocasiones fáciles y leves que el lascivo regalo al alma envía tienen de persuadirte y derribarte y al vano y torpe amor blando entregarte. 275 ¿Es éste el levantado pensamiento y el propósito firme que tenías de no ofender a Dios, aunque en tormento acabases tus cortos, tristes días?
¿Tan presto has ofrecido y dado al viento 280 las justas, amorosas fantasías, y ocupas la memoria de otras vanas, inhonestas, infames y livianas?
¡Vaya lejos de mí el intento vano!
¡Afuera, pensamiento malnacido! 285 ¡Que el lazo enredador de amor insano, de otro más limpio amor será rompido!
¡Cristiano soy, y he de vivir cristiano;
y, aunque a términos tristes conducido, dádivas o promesa, astucia o arte, 290
no harán que un punto de mi Dios me aparte!

(Sale FRANCISCO, el muchacho hermano del niño que vendieron en la segunda jornada, y dice:)

FRANCISCO ¿Has visto, Aurelio, a mi hermano?

AURELIO ¿Dices a Juanico?

FRANCISCO Sí.

AURELIO Poquito habrá que le vi.

FRANCISCO ¡Oh sancto Dios soberano! 295

AURELIO ¿Padeces algún tormento, Francisco?

FRANCISCO Sí; una fatiga que no sé como la diga, aunque sé cómo la siento;
y no quieras saber más, 300
para entender mi cuidado, sino que mi hermano ha dado el ánima a Satanás.

AURELIO ¿Ha renegado, por dicha?

FRANCISCO ¿Dicha llamas renegar? 305 Si él lo viene a efectuar, ello será por desdicha.
Ha dado ya la palabra
de ser moro, y este intento en su tierno pensamiento 310 con regalos siempre labra.

AURELIO Vesle, Francisco, a do asoma.
¡Bizarro viene, por cierto!

FRANCISCO Estos vestidos le han muerto: que él ¿qué sabe qué es Mahoma? 315

AURELIO Vengáis norabuena, Juan.

JUAN¿No saben ya que me llamo...

AURELIO¿Cómo?

JUAN...así como mi amo?

FRANCISCO¿En qué modo?

JUANSolimán.

FRANCISCO ¡Tósigo fuera mejor, 320 que envenenara aquel hombre que así te ha mudado el nombre!
¿Qué es lo que dices, traidor?

JUAN Perro, poquito de aqueso, que se lo diré a mi amo. 325 ¿Porque Solimán me llamo, me amenaza? ¡Bueno es eso!

FRANCISCO ¡Abrázame, dulce hermano!

JUAN¿Hermano? ¿De cuándo acá?
¡Apártase el perro allá; 330
no me toque con la mano!

FRANCISCO¿Por qué conviertes en lloro mi contento, hermano mío?

JUANÉse es grande desvarío.
¿Hay más gusto que ser moro? 335

Mira este galán vestido, que mi amo me le ha dado,
y otro tengo de brocado,
más bizarro y más polido.

Alcuzcuz como sabroso, 340
sorbeta de azúcar bebo,
y el corde, que es dulce, pruebo,
y pilao, que es provechoso.

Y en vano trabajarás de aplacarme con tu lloro; 345 mas, si tú quieres ser moro, a fe que lo acertarás.

Toma mis consejos sanos,
y veráste mejorado.
Adiós, porque es gran pecado 350
hablar tanto con cristianos.

(Vase.)

FRANCISCO ¿Hay desventura igual en todo el suelo?
¿Qué red tiene el demonio aquí tendida con que estorba el camino de ir al cielo?

¡Oh tierna edad, cuán presto eres vencida, 355 siendo en esta Sodoma recuestada y con falsos regalos combatida!

AURELIO ¡Oh, cuán bien la limosna es empleada en rescatar muchachos, que en sus pechos no está la santa fe bien arraigada! 360

¡Oh, si de hoy más, en caridad deshechos se viesen los cristianos corazones, y fuesen en el dar no tan estrechos, para sacar de grillos y prisiones al cristiano cativo, especialmente 365

a los niños de flacas intenciones!

En esta sancta obra ansí excelente, que en ella sola están todas las obras que a cuerpo y alma tocan juntamente.

Al que rescatas, de perdido cobras, 370 reduces a su patria el peregrino, quítasle de cien mil y más zozobras:

de hambre, que le aflige de contino;
de la sed insufrible, y de consejos que procuran cerrarle el buen camino; 375 de muchos y continos aparejos que aquí el demonio tiende, con que toma a muchachos cristianos y aun a viejos.

¡Oh secta fermentada de Mahoma;
ancha casaca poco escrupulosa, 380 con qué facilidad los simples doma!

FRANCISCO ¡Mándasme, buen Aurelio, alguna cosa?

AURELIO Dios te guíe, Francisco, y ten paciencia; que la mano bendita poderosa curará de tu hermano la dolencia. 385

(Vase FRANCISCO, y, yéndose a salir AURELIO, sale SILVIA y dice:)

SILVIA ¿Dó vas, Aurelio, dulce amado esposo?

AURELIO A verte, Silvia, pues tu vista sola es el perfecto alivio a mis trabajos.

SILVIA También el verte yo, mi caro Aurelio, es el remedio de mis graves daños. 390

(Abrazanse, y estánlo mirando sus amos; y ZAHARA va a dar a SILVIA, YZUF a AURELIO.)

ZAHARA ¡Perra! ¿Y esto se sufre ante mis ojos?

YZUF Perro, traidor esclavo! ¿Con la esclava?

ZAHARA No, no señor; no tiene culpa Aurelio, que al fin es hombre, sino esta perra esclava.

YZUF ¿La esclava? No señora. ¡Este maldito, 395 forjador e inventor de mil embustes, tiene la culpa destas desvergüenzas!

ZAHARA Si esta lamida, si esta descarada no le diera ocasión, no se atreviera Aurelio así abrazarla estrechamente. 400

AURELIO No, por cierto, señores; no ha nacido nuestra desenvoltura de ocasiones lascivas, según da las muestras dello, sino que a Silvia le rogaba agora me hiciese una merced que ha muchos días 405 que se la pido, y no por mi interesse;
y ella también a mí me ha persuadido un servicio le hiciese que conviene para mejor servir la casa vuestra.
Y, por habernos concedido entrambos 410 aquello que pedía el uno al otro, en señal de contento nos hallastes de aquel modo que vistes abrazados, sin manchar los honestos pensamientos.

YZUF¿Es verdad esto, Silvia?

SILVIAVerdad dice. 415

YZUF¿Qué pediste tú a él?

SILVIAPoco te importa
saber lo que yo a Aurelio le pedía.

ZAHARA¿Concediótelo, en fin?

SILVIAComo yo quise.

YZUFEntraos adentro, que por fuerza os creo; porque, si no os creyese, convendría 420 castigar vuestro exceso con mil penas.

(Éntranse AURELIO y SILVIA.)

Sabréis, señora, que en este mismo punto, viniendo por el Zoco, me fue dicho cómo el rey me mandaba que llevase a Silvia con Aurelio a su presencia; 425 y tengo para mí que algún tresleño y mal cristiano, que a los dos conoce, al rey debe de haber significado cómo son de rescate estos cativos;
y, como el rey está tan mal conmigo, 430 porque acetar no quise el cargo y honra de reparar los fosos y murallas, quíeremelos quitar, sin duda alguna.

ZAHARA El remedio que en esto se me ofrece es advertir a Aurelio que no diga 435 al rey que es caballero, sino un pobre soldado que iba a Italia, y que esta Silvia es su mujer; y si esto el rey creyese, no querrá por el tanto que costaron quitártelos, que el precio es muy subido. 440

YZUF Muy bien dices, señora; ven, entremos y demos este aviso a los dos juntos.

(Vanse.)

Jornada cuarta

Entra el cautivo que se huyó, descalzo, roto el vestido, y las piernas señaladas como que trae muchos rasgones de las espinas y zarzas por do ha pasado.

CAUTIVO Este largo camino, tanto pasar de breñas y montañas, y el bramido contino
de fieras alimañas
me tiene de tal suerte, 5 que pienso de acabarle con mi muerte.

El pan se me ha acabado,
y roto entre jarales el vestido;
los zapatos, rasgado;
el brío, consumido; 10
de modo que no puedo
un pie del otro pie pasar un dedo.

Ya la hambre me aqueja,
y la sed insufrible me atormenta;
ya la fuerza me deja; 15
ya espero desta afrenta salir con entregarme
a quien de nuevo quiera cautivarme.

He ya perdido el tino;
no sé cuál es de Orán la cierta vía, 20 ni senda ni camino
la triste suerte mía
me ofrece; mas, ¡ay laso!, que, aunque la hallase, no hay mover el paso,

¡Virgen bendita y bella, 25 remediadora del linaje humano, sed Vos aquí la estrella que en este mar insano mi pobre barca guíe

y de tantos peligros me desvíe! 30 ¡Virgen de Monserrate, que esas ásperas sierras hacéis cielo,
enviadme rescate,
sacadme deste duelo,
pues es hazaña vuestra 35
al mísero caído dar la diestra!

Entre estas matas quiero asconderme, porque es entrado el día;
aquí morir espero.
Santísima María, 40
en este trance amargo,
el cuerpo y alma dejo a vuestro cargo.

(Échase a dormir entre unas matas, y sale un león y échase junto a él muy manso, y luego sale otro cristiano, que también se ha huido de Argel, y dice:)

CRISTIANO Estas pisadas no son, por cierto, de moro, no;
cristiano las estampó, 45 que con la misma intención debe de ir que llevo yo.

De alárabes las pisadas son anchas y mal formadas, porque es ancho su calzado; 50
el nuestro más escotado,
y así son diferenciadas.

Yo seguro que no está
muy lejos de aquí escondido, porque el rastro he ya perdido; 55
mas el sol alto está ya, y yo mal apercebido.

Aquí me quiero esconder hasta que al anochecer torne a seguir mi viaje; 60 que en este mismo paraje Mostagán viene a caer.

Pues el sol sale de allí,
el norte hacia aquí se inclina:
no está lejos la marina. 65
¡Oh, qué mal que estoy aquí!
¡Buen Jesús, tú me encamina, que mucho alárabe pasa
por esta campaña rasa!
Si hoy me he acertado a esconder, 70
no me despido de ver,
mis hijos, mujer y casa.

(Escóndese, y luego sale un morillo, como que va buscando yerbas, y ve escondido a este segundo cristiano, y comienza a dar voces: «¡Nizara, nizara!», a las cuales acuden otros moros y cogen al cristiano, y dándole de mojicones se entran.)

(En entrando, despierta el primer cristiano, que está junto al león, y viéndole, se espanta y dice:)

CRISTIANO ¡Sancto Dios! ¿Qué es lo que veo?
¡Qué manso y fiero león!
Saltos me da el corazón; 75
cumplido se ha mi deseo;
libre soy ya de pasión,
pues lo quiere mi ventura.
Éste, con su fuerza dura, mis días acabará, 80
y su vientre servirá
al cuerpo de sepultura.
Pero tanta mansedumbre
no se ve así fácilmente en animal tan valiente, 85 aunque su fiera costumbre, muestra a las veces clemente.
Mas, ¿quién sabe si movido el cielo de mi gemido,

este león me ha enviado 90 para ser por él tornado al camino que he perdido?
Sin duda es divina cosa,
y asegúrame este intento que en mis espíritus siento, 95 con fuerza maravillosa, un nuevo crecido aliento;
y ya es caso averiguado que otro león ha llevado a la Goleta a un cativo 100 que le halló en un monte esquivo, huido y descaminado.
¡Obra es ésta, Virgen pía,
de vuestra divina mano, porque ya está claro y llano 105 que el hombre que en vos confía no espera y confía en vano!
Espérame, compañero,
que yo determino y quiero seguirte doquier que fueres; 110 que ya me parece que eres, no león, sino cordero.

(Éntrase y vuelve a salir en la cuarta jornada con el león que le guía. Dice:)

Nunca con menos afán
he caminado camino;
y, aquello que yo imagino, 115
no está muy lejos Orán.
¡Gracias te doy, Rey divino!
¡Virgen pura, a Vos alabo!
Yo ruego llevéis al cabo tan estraña caridad; 120 que, si me dais libertad, prometo seros esclavo.

(Vase, y en la cuarta jornada salen dos cautivos: PEDRO y SAYAVEDRA.)

PEDRO Siete escudos de oro he granjeado con mi solicitud, industria y maña, y aun son pocos, según he trabajado. 125

Nunca tuve otros tantos en España, cuando anduve en la guerra de Granada, armado nueve meses en campaña.

SAYAVEDRA ¿Cómo cayeron, Pedro en la celada los siete escudos hoy, por vida mía, 130 cualque nueva campaña fabricada?

PEDRO Muy mal se negará a tu cortesía cualquier secreto mío. Escucha agora, y verás lo que he hecho en este día.

En esta casa grande do Yzuf mora, 135 renegado español que está casado con Zahara, la ilustre hermosa mora, está un cativo nuevo, que es llamado Aurelio, y una Silvia, hermosa dama, de quién está el Aurelio enamorado. 140

Los dos de principales tienen fama,
y helo dicho yo al rey, y mandó darme los tres escudos déstos.

SAYAVEDRA ¡Gentil trama!

PEDRO Gentil o no gentil, si remediarme no puedo de otra suerte, y cada día 145 he de dar mi jornal y sustentarme, ¿quieres que cate y guarde cortesía a quien puede pagar bien su rescate?
¡No reza esa oración mi ledanía!

SAYAVEDRA ¿Los otros cuatro?

PEDRO Son de un jaque y mate 150 que he dado en una bolsa de un cristiano con un muy concertado disparate.

Hele hecho tocar casi con mano que tengo ya una barca medio hecha, debajo de la tierra, allá en un llano. 155

Queda desta verdad bien satisfecha, su voluntad, y, cierto, el bobo piensa alcanzar libertad ya desta hecha;

y para ayuda, el gasto y la despensa de tablas, vela, pez, clavos y estopa, 160 los cuatro dio con que compró su ofensa.

SAYAVEDRA ¡Desdichado de aquel que acaso topa contigo, Pedro, y tú más desdichado, que así cudicias la cristiana ropa!

¡En peligroso golfo has engolfado 165 tu barca, de mentiras fabricada, y en ella tú serás sólo anegado!

PEDRO La de Noé, que está bien ancorada en las sierras de Armeña, sería buena, si no vale la mía acaso nada. 170

Quizá nos llevará a Sierra Morena, pero, por cuatro escudos, buena es ésta, si acuden otros cuatro a caer carena.

Ajenos pies han de subir la cuesta agria de mi trabajo, y yo, holgando, 175 haré agasajo, regocijo y fiesta.

¿Qué piensas, Sayavedra?

SAYAVEDRA Estoy pensando cómo se echa a perder aquí un cristiano, y más, mientras más va, va peorando.
Cautivo he visto yo que da de mano 180
a todo aquello que su ley le obliga,
y vive a veces vida de pagano.
A otro le avasalla su fatiga,
y en Dios y en ella ocupa el pensamiento;
la abraza y la quiere como amiga. 185 Y de ti sé que tienes el intento holgazán, embaidor y cudicioso, fundado sobre embustes sin cimientto.
Tarde habrá libertad...

PEDRO ¡Estás donoso!
Antes la tengo ya cierta y segura, 190 sino que estoy un poco vergonzoso.
Pienso mudar de nombre y vestidura, y llamarme Mamí.

SAYAVEDRA ¿Renegar quieres?

PEDRO Sí quiero, mas entiende de qué hechura.

SAYAVEDRA Reniega tú del modo que quisieres, 195 que ello es muy gran maldad y horrible culpa, y correspondes mal a ser quien eres.

PEDRO Bien sé que la conciencia ya me culpa, pero tanto el salir de aquí deseo, que esta razón daré por mi disculpa. 200 Ni niego a Cristo ni en Mahoma creo:
con la voz y el vestido seré moro, por alcanzar el bien que no poseo.

Si voy en corso, séme yo de coro que, en tocando en la tierra de cristianos, 205 me huiré, y aun no vacío de tesoro.

SAYAVEDRA Lazos son éstos cudiciosos, vanos, con que el demonio tienta fácilmente con el alma ligarte pies y manos.

Un falso bien se muestra aquí aparente, 210 que es tener libertad, y, en renegando, se te irá el procurarla de la mente, que siempre esperarás el cómo y cuándo: «Este año, no; el otro será cierto»;
y así lo irás por años dilatando. 215

Tiéneme en estos casos bien esperto muchos que he visto con tu mismo intento, y a ninguno llegar nunca a buen puerto.

Y, puesto que llegases, ¿es buen cuento poner un tan inorme y falso medio 220 para alcanzar el fin de tu contento?
Daño puedes llamarle a tal remedio.

PEDRO Si no puede esperarse, ni es posible de mi necesidad otra salida para alcanzar la libertad gozosa, 225 ¿es mucho aventurarse algunos días a ser moro no más de en la apariencia, si con esta cautela se granjea la amada libertad que se va huyendo?

SAYAVEDRA Si tú supieses, Pedro, a dó se estiende 230 la perfección de nuestra ley cristiana, verías cómo en ella se nos manda que un pecado mortal no se cometa, aunque se interesase en cometerle la universal salud de todo el mundo. 235 Pues, ¿cómo quieres tú, por verte libre de libertad del cuerpo, echar mil hierros al alma miserable, desdichada, cometiendo un pecado tan enorme como es negar a Cristo y a su Iglesia? 240

PEDRO¿Dónde se niega Cristo ni su Iglesia?
¿Hay más de retajarse y decir ciertas palabras de Mahoma, y no otra cosa, sin que se miente a Cristo ni a sus santos, ni yo le negaré por todo el mundo, 245 que acá en mi corazón estará siempre y Él sólo el corazón quiere del hombre?

SAYAVEDRA¿Quieres ver si lo niegas? Está atento.
Fíngete ya vestido a la turquesca, y que vas por la calle y que yo llego 250 delante de otros turcos y te digo: «Sea loado Cristo, amigo Pedro.
¿No sabéis cómo el martes es vigilia y que manda la Iglesia que ayunemos?»
A esto, dime: ¿qué responderías? 255 Sin duda que me dices mil puñadas, y dijese que a Cristo no conoces, ni tienes con su Iglesia cuenta alguna, porque eres muy buen moro, y que te llamas, no Pedro, sino Aydar o Mahometo. 260

PEDROEso haríalo yo, mas no con saña, sino porque los turcos que lo oyesen pensasen que, pues dello me pesaba, que era perfecto moro y no cristiano;
pero acá, en mi intención, cristiano siempre. 265

SAYAVEDRA¿No sabes tú que el mismo Cristo dice: «Aquel que me negare ante los hombres, de Mí será negado ante mi Padre;

y el que ante ellos a Mí me confesare, será de Mí ayudado ante el Eterno 270 Padre mío?» ¿Es prueba ésta bastante que te convenza y desengañe, amigo, del engaño en que estás en ser cristiano con sólo el corazón, como tú dices?
¿Y no sabes también que aquel arrimo 275 con que el cristiano se levanta al cielo es la cruz y pasión de Jesucristo, en cuya muerte nuestra vida vive, y que el remedio, para que aproveche a nuestras almas el tesoro inmenso 280 de su vertida sangre por bien nuestro, depositado está en la penitencia, la cual tiene tres partes esenciales, que la hacen perfecta y acabada:
contrición de corazón la una, 285 confesión de la boca la segunda, satisfacción de obras la tercera?
Y aquel que contrición dice que tiene, como algunos cristianos renegados, y con la boca y con las obras niegan 290 a Cristo y a sus sanctos, no la llames aquella contrición, sino un deseo de salir del pecado; y es tan flojo, que respectos humanos le detienen de ejecutar lo que razón le dice; 295 y así, con esta sombra y apariencia deste vano deseo, se les pasa un año y otro, y llega al fin la muerte a ponerle en perpetua servidumbre por aquel mismo modo que él pensaba 300 alcanzar libertad en esta vida.
¡Oh cuántas cosas puras, excelentes, verdaderas, sin réplica, sencillas, te pudiera decir que hacen al caso, para poder borrar de tu sentido 305 esta falsa opinión que en él se imprime!
Mas el tiempo y lugar no lo permite.

PEDRO Bastan las que me has dicho, amigo; bastan, y bastarán de modo que te juro, por todo lo que es lícito jurarse, 310 de seguir tu consejo y no apartarme del santísimo gremio de la Iglesia, aunque en la dura esclavitud amarga acabe mis amargos tristes días.

SAYAVEDRA Si a ese parecer llegas las obras, 315 el día llegará, sabroso y dulce, do tengas libertad; que el cielo sabe darnos gusto y placer por cien mil vías ocultas al humano entendimiento;
y así, no es bien ponerse en contingencia 320 que por sola una senda y un camino tan áspero, tan malo y trabajoso nos venga el bien de muchos procurado, y hasta aquí conseguido de muy pocos.

PEDRO ¡Mis obras te darán señales ciertas 325 de mi arrepentimiento y mi mudanza!

SAYAVEDRA ¡El cielo te dé fuerzas y te quite las ocasiones malas que te incitan a tener tan malvado y ruin propósito!

PEDRO El mismo a ti te ayude, cual merece 330 la sana voluntad con que me enseñas.
Adiós, que es tarde.

SAYAVEDRA ¡Adiós, amigo!

(Sale el REY con cuatro turcos.)

REY De ira y de dolor hablar no puedo;
y es la ocasión de mi pesar insano el ver que don Antonio de Toledo 335 ansí se me ha escapado de la mano.
Los arraces, sus amos, con el miedo que yo no les tomase su cristiano, a Tetuán con priesa le enviaron,
y en cinco mil ducados le tallaron. 340

¿Un tan ilustre y rico caballero por tan vil precio distes, vil canalla?
¿Tanto os acudiciastes al dinero, tan grande os pareció que era la talla que le añedistes otro compañero, 345 el cual solo pudiera bien pagalla?
¿Francisco de Valencia no podía pagar solo por sí mayor cuantía?

En fin, favorecióles la ventura, que pudo más que no mi diligencia; 350 que ésta es la que conierta y asegura lo que no puede hacer humana ciencia.
Conocieron el tiempo y coyuntura, y huyeron de no verse en mi presencia:
que si yo a don Antonio aquí hallara, 355 cincuenta mil ducados me pagara.

Es hermano de un conde y es sobrino de una principalísima duquesa, y en perderse, perdió en este camino ser coronel en una ilustre empresa. 360 Airado el cielo se mostró y benigno en hacerle cautivo y darse priesa a darle libertad por tal rodeo, que no pudo pedir más el deseo.

Pero, pues ya no puede remediarse, 365 el tratar más en ello es escusado.
Mirad si viene alguno a querellarse.

MORO Señor, aquí está Yzuf, el renegado.

REY Entre con intención de aparejarse a obedecer en todo mi mandado; 370 si no, a fe que le trate en mi presencia cual merece su necia inobidencia.

(Entra YZUF.)

¿Dónde están tus cristianos?

YZUF Allí fuera.

REY ¿Cuánto diste por ellos?

YZUF Mil ducados.

REY Yo los daré por ellos.

YZUF No se espera, 375
de tu bondad agravios tan sobrados.

REY ¿En esto me replicas?

YZUF Da siquiera
algún alivio en parte a mis cuidados.
Al esclavo te doy, rey, sin dinero,
y déjame la esclava, por quien muero. 380

REY ¿Tal osaste decir, oh moro infame?
Llevalde abajo, y dalde tanto palo, hasta que con su sangre se derrame el deseo que tiene torpe y malo.

YZUF Dame, señor, mi esclava, y luego dame 385 la muerte en fuego, a hierro, a gancho, en palo.

REY ¡Quitádmelo delante! ¡Acabad presto!

YZUF ¿Por pedirte mi hacienda soy molesto?

(Sacan fuera a YZUF a empujones, y entran luego dos alárabes con el cristiano que se huyó, que asieron en el campo, y estos dos moros dicen al REY: «Alicun çalema çultam adareimi guanaran çal çul».)

REY ¿Adónde ibas, cristiano?

CRISTIANO Procuraba
llegarme a Orán, si el cielo lo quisiera. 390

REY ¿Adónde cautivaste?

CRISTIANO En la almadraba.

REY ¿Tu amo?

CRISTIANO Ya murió; que no debiera, pues me dejó en poder de una tan brava mujer, que no la iguala alguna fiera.

REY ¿Español eres?

CRISTIANO En Málaga nacido. 395

REY Bien lo muestras en ser ansí atrevido.

¡Oh yuraja caur! Dalde seiscientos palos en las espaldas muy bien dados, y luego le daréis otros quinientos en la barriga y en los pies cansados. 400

CRISTIANO ¿Tan sin razón ni ley tantos tormentos tienes para el que huye aparejados?

REY ¡Cito cifuti breguedi! ¡Atalde, abrilde, desollalde y aun matalde!

(Átanle con cuatro cordeles de pies y de manos, y tiran cada uno de su parte, y dos le están dando; y, de cuando en cuando, el cristiano se encomienda a Nuestra Señora, y el REY se enoja y dice en turquesco, con cólera: «Laguedi denicara, bacinaf; ¡a la testa, a la testa!», y está diciendo, mientras le están dando:)

¡No sé qué raza es ésta destos perros 405 cautivos españoles! ¿Quién se huye?
Español. ¿Quién no cura de los hierros?
Español. ¿Quién hurtando nos destruye?
Español. ¿Quién comete otros mil hierros?
Español, que en su pecho el cielo influye 410 un ánimo indomable, acelerado, al bien y al mal contino aparejado.

Una virtud en ellos he notado:
que guardan su palabra sin reveses, y en esta mi opinión me han confirmado 415 dos caballeros Sosas portugueses.

Don Francisco también la ha sigurado, que tiene el sobrenombre de Meneses, los cuales sobre su palabra han sido enviados a España, y la han cumplido. 420

Don Fernando de Ormaza también fuese sobre su fe y palabra, y ansí ha hecho, un mes antes que el término cumpliera, la paga, con que bien me ha satisfecho.
De darles libertad, un interese 425 se sigue tal, que dobla mi provecho:
que, como van sobre su fe prendados, les pido los rescates tresdoblados.

Y éste dalde a su amo, y llamad luego un cristiano de Yzuf, que está allí fuera, 430 que quiero que granjee su sosiego por ver si mi opinión es verdadera.
De pérdida y ganancia es este juego.

MORO Señor, del bien hacer siempre se espera galardón, y si falta deste suelo, 435 la paga se dilata para el cielo.

(Entra AURELIO y dícele el REY:)

REY Ya sé quién eres, cristiano;
tu virtud, valor y suerte,
y sé que presto has de verte en el patrio suelo hispano. 440

Esta Silvia, ¿es tu mujer?

AURELIO Sí, señor.

REY ¿adónde ibas cuando en las ondas esquivas perdiste todo el placer?

AURELIO Yo se lo diré, señor, 445 en verdaderas razones.

De otro rey y otras prisiones fui yo esclavo, que es Amor.

Desta Silvia enamorado anduve un tiempo en mi tierra, 450 y la fuerza desta guerra me ha traído en este estado.

A su padre la pedí
muchas veces por mujer, pero nunca a mi querer 455
sólo un punto le rendí;

y, viendo que no podía
por aquel modo alcanzalla, determiné de roballa,
que era la más fácil vía. 460

Cumplí en esto mi deseo, y, pensando ir a Milán, trújome el hado al afán
y esclavitud do me veo.

REY No pierdas la confianza 465 en esta vida importuna, pues sabes que de Fortuna la condición es mudanza.

Yo te daré libertad
a ti y a Silvia al momento, 470 si tienes conocimiento
de pagar tal voluntad.

Mil ducados he de dar
por los dos, y sólo quiero que me deis dos mil; empero, 475 habéismelo de jurar,

y así, sobre vuestra fe,
os partiréis luego a España.

AURELIO Señor, a merced tamaña, ¿qué gracias te rendiré? 480

Yo prometo de enviallos dentro de un mes, sin mentir, aunque los sepa pedir
por Dios, y si no, hurtallos.

REY Pues, luego os aparejad, 485 y en la primera saetía
tomad de España la vía, que a los dos doy libertad.

AURELIO El suelo y cielo te trate cual merece tu bondad, 490 y tomá mi voluntad
por prenda deste rescate;
que yo perderé la vida
o cumpliré mi palabra:
que este bien ya escarba y labra 495
en mi sangre bien nacida.

MORO Señor, un navío viene.

REY ¿De qué parte?

MORO De Occidente.

REY Mejor es que no de Oriente.
¿Es de gavia?

MORO Gavia tiene. 500

REY Debe ser de mercancía.

MORO Podría ser, aunque se suena que la mercancía es buena si es limosna.

REY Sí sería.

Vamos. Tú, Aurelio, procura 505 tu partida, y ten cuidado de aquello que me has jurado.

AURELIO Crezca el cielo tu ventura.

(Éntrase el REY y queda AURELIO.)

¡Gracias te doy, eterno Rey del cielo, que tan sin merecerlo has permitido 510 que, por la mano de quien más temía, tanto bien, tanta gloria me viniese!

(Entra FRANCISCO y dice:)

FRANCISCO ¡Albricias, caro Aurelio!, que es llegado un navío de España, y todos dicen que es de limosna cierto, y que en él viene 515 un fraile trinitario cristianísimo, amigo de hacer bien, y conocido, porque ha estado otra vez en esta tierra rescatando cristianos, y da ejemplo de mucha cristiandad y gran prudencia. 520

Su nombre es fray Juan Gil.

AURELIO Mira no sea,
fray Jorge de Olivar, que es de la Orden de la Merced, que aquí también ha estado, de no menos bondad y humano pecho;
tanto, que ya después que hubo espendido 525 bien veinte mil ducados que traía, en otros siete mil quedó empeñado.
¡Oh caridad estraña! ¡Oh sancto pecho!

(Entran tres esclavos, asidos en sus cadenas.)

ESCLAVO 1.º ¡Qué buen día, compañeros!
La limosna está en el puerto. 530
Mi remedio tengo cierto, porque aquí me traen dineros.

ESCLAVO 2.º No tengo bien, ni le espero, ni siento en mi tierra quien me pueda hacer algún bien. 535

ESCLAVO 3.º Pues yo no me desespero

FRANCISCO Dios nos ha de remediar, hermanos: mostrad buen pecho, que el Señor que nos ha hecho, no nos tiene de olvidar. 540 Roguémosle, como a Padre, nos vuelva a nuestra mejora, pues es nuestra intercesora su Madre, que es nuestra Madre; porque, con tan sancto medio, 545
nuestro bien está seguro:
que ella es nuestra fuerza y muro, nuestra luz, nuestro remedio.

(Echan todos las cadenas al suelo y híncanse de rodillas, y dice el uno:)

UNO ¡Vuelve, Virgen Santísima María, tus ojos que dan luz y gloria al cielo, 550
a los tristes que lloran noche y día y riegan con sus lágrimas el suelo!
Socórrenos, bendita Virgen pía, antes que este mortal corpóreo velo quede sin alma en esta tierra dura 555 y carezca de usada sepultura.

OTRO Reina de las alturas celestiales, Madre y Madre de Dios, Virgen y Madre, espanto de las furias infernales, Madre y Esposa de tu mismo Padre, 560 remedio universal de nuestros males:
si con tu condición es bien que cuadre usar misericordia, úsala ahora, y sácame de entre esta gente mora.

OTRO En Vos, Virgen dulcísima María, 565
entre Dios y los hombres medianera,
de nuestro mar incierto cierta guía, Virgen entre las vírgenes primera;
en vos, Virgen y Madre; en Vos confía
mi alma, que sin Vos en nadie espera, 570 que me habréis de sacar con vuestras manos de dura servidumbre de paganos.

AURELIO Si yo, Virgen bendita, he conseguido de tu misericordia un bien tan alto, ¿cuándo podré mostrarme agradecido, 575

tanto que, al fin, no quede corto y falto?
Recibe mi deseo, que, subido sobre un cristiano obrar, dará tal salto, que toque ya, olvidado deste suelo, el alto trono del impereo cielo. 580

Y, en tanto que se llega el tiempo y punto de poner en efecto mi deseo, al ilustre auditorio que está junto, en quien tanta bondad discierno y veo, si ha estado mal sacado este trasunto 585 de la vida de Argel y trato feo, pues es bueno el deseo que ha tenido, en nombre del autor, perdón les pido.

Jornada I

Scena I

Salen primero CIPIÓN y JUGURTA.

CIPIÓN Esta difícil y pesada carga, que el Senado romano me ha encargado, tanto me aprieta, me fatiga y carga, que ya sale de quicio mi cuidado.
Guerra de curso tan extraño y larga, 5
y que tantos romanos ha costado, ¿quién no estará suspenso al acabarla,
o quién no temerá de renovarla?

JUGURTA ¿Quién, Cipión? Quien tiene la ventura y el valor nunca visto que en ti encierras, 10 pues con ella y con él está segura la victoria y el triunfo destas guerras.

CIPIÓN El esfuerzo regido con cordura allana al suelo las más altas sierras, y la fuerza feroz de loca mano 15 áspero vuelve lo que está más llano.
Mas no hay que reprimir, a lo que veo, la furia del ejército presente, que, olvidado de gloria y de trofeo, yace embebido en la lascivia ardiente. 20 Esto sólo pretendo, esto deseo:
volver a nuevo trato a nuestra gente;
que, enmendado primero el que es amigo, sujetaré más presto al enemigo.

¡Mario!

(Sale GAYO MARIO.)

GAYO MARIO¿Señor?

CIPIÓN Haz que a noticia venga 25 de todo nuestro ejército, en un punto, que, sin que estorbo alguno le detenga, parezca en este sitio todo junto, porque una breve plática o arenga les quiero hacer.

GAYO MARIO Harélo en este punto. 30

CIPIÓN Camina, porque es bien que sepan todos mis nuevas trazas y sus viejos modos.

(Vase GAYO MARIO.)

JUGURTA Séte decir, señor, que no hay soldado que no te tema juntamente y te ame;
y, porque ese valor tuyo extremado 35
de Antártico a Calisto se derrame, cada cual con feroz ánimo osado, cuando la trompa a la ocasión le llame, piensa de hacer en tu servicio cosas que pasen las hazañas fabulosas. 40

CIPIÓN Primero es menester que se refrene el vicio que entre todos se derrama; que si éste no se quita, en nada tiene con ellos que hacer la buena fama.

Si este daño común no se previene, 45
y se deja arraigar su ardiente llama, el vicio solo puede hacernos guerra más que los enemigos desta tierra.

(Dentro se echa este bando, habiendo primero tocado a recoger el atambor:)

Manda nuestro general que se recojan, armados, 50 luego todos los soldados en la plaza principal;
y que ninguno no quede
de parecer a esta vista, so pena que de la lista 55
al punto borrado quede.

JUGURTA No dudo yo, señor, sino que importa regir con duro freno la milicia, y que se dé al soldado rienda corta cuando él se precipita en la injusticia: 60 la fuerza del ejército se acorta cuando va sin arrimo de justicia, aunque más le acompañen a montones mil pintadas banderas y escuadrones.

(A este punto han de entrar los más soldados que pudieren, y GAYO MARIO, armados a la antigua, sin arcabuces; y CIPIÓN se sube sobre una peñuela que está en el tablado, y, mirando a los soldados, dice:)

CIPIÓN En el fiero ademán, en los lozanos 65 marciales aderezos y vistosos, bien os conozco, amigos, por romanos:
romanos, digo, fuertes y animosos;

mas, en las blancas delicadas manos y en las teces de rostros tan lustrosos, 70 allá en Bretaña parecéis criados
y de padres flamencos engendrados.

El general descuido vuestro, amigos, el no mirar por lo que tanto os toca, levanta los caídos enemigos 75
y vuestro esfuerzo y opinión apoca;
desta ciudad los muros son testigos, que aún hoy están cual bien fundada roca, de vuestras perezosas fuerzas vanas, que sólo el nombre tienen de romanas. 80

¿Paréceos, hijos, que es gentil hazaña que tiemble del romano nombre el mundo, y que vosotros solos en España le aniquiléis y echéis en el profundo?
¿Qué flojedad es esta tan extraña? 85 ¿Qué flojedad? Si mal yo no me fundo, es flojedad nacida de pereza, enemiga mortal de fortaleza.

La blanda Venus con el duro Marte jamás hacen durable ayuntamiento: 90 ella regalos sigue; él sigue el arte que incita a daños y a furor sangriento.
La cipria diosa estése agora aparte;
deje su hijo nuestro alojamiento;
que mal se aloja en las marciales tiendas 95
quien gusta de banquetes y meriendas.

¿Pensáis que sólo atierra la muralla el ariete de ferrada punta, y que sólo atropella la batalla la multitud de gente y armas junta? 100 Si el esfuerzo y cordura no se halla, que todo lo previene y lo barrunta, poco aprovechan muchos escuadrones,
y menos, infinitas municiones.

Si a militar concierto se reduce 105 cualquier pequeño ejército que sea, veréis que como sol claro reluce,

y alcanza las victorias que desea;
pero si a flojedad él se conduce, aunque abreviado el mundo en él se vea, 110 en un momento quedará deshecho por más reglada mano y fuerte pecho.

Averguénceos, varones esforzados, ver que, a nuestro pesar, con arrogancia, tan pocos españoles, y encerrados, 115 defiendan este nido de Numancia.

Diez y seis años son, y más, pasados, que mantienen la guerra y la jactancia de haber vencido con feroces manos millares de millares de romanos. 120

Vosotros os vencéis; que estáis vencidos del bajo antojo femenil liviano, con Venus y con Baco entretenidos, sin que a las armas extendáis la mano.
Correos agora, si no estáis corridos, 125 de ver que este pequeño pueblo hispano contra el poder romano se defienda, y cuando más rendido, más ofenda.

De nuestro campo quiero, en todo caso, que salgan las infames meretrices; 130 que de ser reducidos a este paso ellas solas han sido las raíces.

Para beber no quede más de un vaso,
y los lechos, un tiempo ya felices, llenos de concubinas, se deshagan 135
y de fajina y en el suelo se hagan.

No me hüela el soldado a otros olores que al olor de la pez y de resina, ni por gulosidad de los sabores traiga aparato alguno de cocina, 140 que el que busca en la guerra estos primores, muy mal podrá sufrir la coracina;
no quiero otro primor ni otra fragancia, en tanto que español viva en Numancia.

No os parezca, varones, escabroso 145 ni duro este mi justo mandamiento:

que, al fin, conoceréis ser provechoso, cuando aquel consigáis de vuestro intento.
Bien sé se os ha de hacer dificultoso dar a vuestras costumbres nuevo asiento; 150 mas, si no las mudáis, estará firme la guerra, que esta afrenta más confirme.

En blandas camas, entre juego y vino, hállase mal el trabajoso Marte;
otro aparejo busca, otro camino; 155 otros brazos levantan su estandarte;
cada cual se fabrica su destino, no tiene aquí Fortuna alguna parte:
la pereza fortuna baja cría;
la diligencia, imperio y monarquía. 160

Estoy, con todo esto, tan seguro de que al fin mostraréis que sois romanos, que tengo en nada el defendido muro destos rebeldes bárbaros hispanos;
y así, os prometo por mi diestra y juro 165 que si igualáis al ánimo las manos, que las mías se alarguen en pagaros,
y mi lengua también en alabaros.

(Míranse los soldados unos a otros, y hacen señas a uno de ellos, GAYO MARIO, que responda por todos, y así dice:)

GAYO MARIO Si con atentos ojos has mirado, ínclito general, en los semblantes 170 que a tus breves razones han mostrado los que tienes agora circunstantes, cual habrás visto sin color, turbado, y cual con ella: indicios bien bastantes de que el temor y la vergüenza, a una, 175 los aflige, molesta e importuna.

Vergüenza de mirarse reducidos a términos tan bajos por su culpa; que, viendo ser por ti reprehendidos, no saben a su falta hallar disculpa; 180 temor de tantos yerros cometidos, y la torpe pereza, que los culpa, los tiene de tal modo, que se holgaran antes morir que en esto se hallaran.

Pero el lugar y tiempo que les queda 185 para mostrar alguna recompensa, es causa que con menos fuerza pueda fatigar el rigor de tal ofensa:
de hoy más, con presta voluntad y leda, el más mínimo de estos cuida y piensa 190 de ofrecer sin revés a tu servicio la hacienda, vida y honra en sacrificio.

Admite, pues, de sus intentos sanos el justo ofrecimiento, señor mío, y considera, al fin, que son romanos, 195 en quien nunca faltó del todo el brío.
Vosotros, levantad las diestras manos en señas que aprobáis el voto mío.

SOLDADO 1.º Todo lo que aquí has dicho confirmamos.

SOLDADO 2.º Y lo juramos todos.

TODOS; Sí juramos! 200

CIPIÓN Pues, arrimada a tal ofrecimiento, crecerá desde hoy más mi confianza, creciendo en vuestros pechos ardimiento y del viejo vivir nueva mudanza.
Vuestras promesas no se lleve el viento; 205 hacedlas verdaderas con la lanza, que las mías saldrán tan verdaderas, cuanto fuere el valor de vuestras veras.

SOLDADO Dos numantinos con seguro vienen a darte, Cipión, una embajada. 210

CIPIÓN ¿Por qué no llegan ya? ¿En qué se detienen?

SOLDADO Esperan que licencia les sea dada.

CIPIÓN Si son embajadores, ya la tienen.

SOLDADO Embajadores son.

CIPIÓN Dales entrada;
que, aunque descubra cierto o falso pecho 215
el enemigo, siempre es de provecho.

Jamás la falsedad vino cubierta tanto con la verdad, que no mostrase algún pequeño indicio, alguna puerta por donde su maldad se investigase; 220 oír al enemigo es cosa cierta que siempre aprovechó antes que dañase, y en las cosas de guerra, la experiencia muestra que lo que digo es cierta ciencia.

(Entran dos embajadores numantinos: PRIMERO y SEGUNDO.)

PRIMERO Si nos das, buen señor, grata licencia 225 de decir la embajada que traemos, do estamos, o ante sola tu presencia, todo a lo que venimos te diremos.

CIPIÓN Decid, que adondequiera doy audiencia.

PRIMEROPues con ese seguro que tenemos 230 de tu real grandeza concedido, daré principio a lo que soy venido.

Numancia, de quien yo soy ciudadano, ínclito general, a ti me envía, como al más fuerte capitán romano 235 que ha cubierto la noche o visto el día, a pedirte, señor, la amiga mano, en señal de que cesa la porfía tan trabada y cruel de tantos años, que ha causado sus propios y tus daños. 240

Dice que nunca de la ley y fueros del romano Senado se apartara, si el insufrible mando y desafueros de un cónsul y otro no la fatigara:
ellos, con duros estatutos fieros 245
y con su estrecha condición avara, pusieron tan gran yugo a nuestros cuellos, que forzados salimos dél y de ellos;
y, en todo el largo tiempo que ha durado entre ambas partes la contienda, es cierto 250 que ningún general hemos hallado con quien poder tratar de algún concierto.
Empero agora, que ha querido el hado reducir nuestra nave a tan buen puerto, las velas de la guerra recogemos, 255
y a cualquiera partido nos ponemos.

Y no imagines que temor nos lleva a pedirte las paces con instancia, pues la larga experiencia ha dado prueba del poder valeroso de Numancia. 260 Tu virtud y valor es quien nos ceba, y nos declara que será ganancia mayor de cuantas desear podremos, si por señor y amigo te tenemos.

A esto ha sido la venida nuestra: 265 respóndenos, señor, lo que te place.

CIPIÓN Tarde de arrepentidos dais la muestra; poco vuestra amistad me satisface.
De nuevo ejercitad la fuerte diestra, que quiero ver lo que la mía hace, 270 ya que ha puesto en ella la ventura la gloria mía y vuestra desventura.
A desvergüenza de tan largos años,
es poca recompensa pedir paces:
seguid la guerra, renovad los daños, 275 salgan de nuevo las valientes haces.

SEGUNDO La falsa confianza mil engaños consigo trae; advierte lo que haces, señor, que esa arrogancia que nos muestras renovará el valor en nuestras diestras. 280 Y, pues niegas la paz que con buen celo te ha sido por nosotros demandada, de hoy más la causa nuestra con el cielo quedará por mejor calificada;
y, antes que pises de Numancia el suelo, 285 probarás dó se extiende la indignada furia de aquel que, siéndote enemigo, quiere ser vasallo y fiel amigo.

CIPIÓN ¿Tenéis más que decir?

PRIMERO No; más tenemos que hacer, pues tú, señor, así lo quieres, 290 sin querer la amistad que te ofrecemos, correspondiendo mal a ser quien eres.
Pero entonces verás lo que podemos, cuando nos muestres tú lo que pudieres;
que es una cosa razonar de paces, 295
y otra romper por las armadas haces.

CIPIÓN Verdad dices; y ansí, para mostraros si sé tratar en paz y obrar en guerra, no quiero por amigos aceptaros, ni lo seré jamás de vuestra tierra. 300
Y, con esto, podéis luego tornaros.

SEGUNDO ¿Que en esto tu querer, señor, se encierra?

CIPIÓN Ya he dicho que sí.

SEGUNDO Pues, ¡sus, al hecho, que guerras ama el numantino pecho!

(Sálense los embajadores, y QUINTO FABIO, hermano de CIPIÓN, dice:)

QUINTO FABIO El descuido pasado nuestro ha sido 305 el que os hace hablar de aquea suerte, mas ya ha llegado el tiempo, ya es venido,
do veréis nuestra gloria y vuestra muerte.

CIPIÓN El vano blasonar no es admitido de pecho valeroso, honrado y fuerte: 310 templa las amenazas, Fabio, y calla, y tu valor descubre en la batalla.

Aunque yo pienso hacer que el numantino nunca a las manos con nosotros venga, buscando de vencerle tal camino, 315 que más a mi provecho le convenga; yo haré que abaje el brío y pierda el tino,
y que en sí mismo su furor detenga:
pienso de un hondo foso rodeallos,

y por hambre insufrible sujetallos. 320

No quiero ya que sangre de romanos colore más el suelo desta tierra:
basta la que han vertido estos hispanos en tan larga, reñida y cruda guerra; ejercítense agora vuestras manos 325 en romper y cavar la dura tierra, y cúbranse de polvo los amigos que no lo están de sangre de enemigos.

No quede de este oficio reservado ninguno que le tenga preminente: 330 trabaje el decurión como el soldado, y no se muestre en esto diferente.
Yo mismo tomaré el hierro pesado,
y romperé la tierra fácilmente.
Haced todos cual yo, y veréis que hago 335 tal obra con que a todos satisfago.

QUINTO FABIO Valeroso señor y hermano mío, bien nos muestras en esto tu cordura, pues fuera conocido desvarío y temeraria muestra de locura 340 pelear contra el loco airado brío destos desesperados sin ventura.
Mejor será encerrallos, como dices,
y quitarles al brío las raíces.

Bien puede la ciudad toda cercarse, 345 si no es la parte por do el río la baña.

CIPIÓN Vamos, y venga luego a efectuarse esta mi nueva poco usada hazaña;
y si en nuestro favor quiere mostrarse el cielo, quedará subjeta España 350 al Senado romano, solamente con vencer la soberbia de esta gente.

Vanse.

Scena II

Sale una doncella coronada con unas torres y trae un castillo en la mano, la cual significa ESPAÑA, y dice:

ESPAÑA ¡Alto, sereno y espacioso cielo, que con tus influencias enriqueces la parte que es mayor deste mi suelo, 355 y sobre muchos otros le engrandeces, muévate a compasión mi amargo duelo;
y, pues al afligido favoreces, favoréceme a mí en ansia tamaña, que soy la sola desdichada España! 360

Bástete ya que un tiempo me tuviste todos mis flacos miembros abrasados, y al sol por mis entrañas descubriste el reino oscuro de los condenados.
A mil tiranos, mil riquezas diste; 365 a fenices y griegos entregados mis reinos fueron, porque tú has querido, o porque mi maldad lo ha merecido.

¿Será posible que contino sea esclava de naciones extranjeras, 370 y que un pequeño tiempo yo no vea de libertad tendidas mis banderas?
Con justísimo título se emplea en mí el rigor de tantas penas fieras, pues mis famosos hijos y valientes 375
andan entre sí mismos diferentes.

Jamás en su provecho concertaron los divididos ánimos briosos;
antes, entonces más los apartaron cuando se vieron más menesterosos; 380 y ansí, con sus discordias convidaron los bárbaros de pechos codiciosos

a venir y entregarse en mis riquezas, usando en mí y en ellos mil crüezas.

Sola Numancia es la que sola ha sido 385 quien la luciente espada sacó fuera, y a costa de su sangre ha mantenido la amada libertad suya primera.

Mas, ¡ay!, que veo el término cumplido, y llegada la hora postrimera, 390
do acabará su vida y no su fama, cual Fénix renovándose en la llama.

Estos tan muchos temidos romanos que buscan de vencer cien mil caminos, rehuyen de venir más a las manos 395 con los pocos valientes numantinos.
¡Oh, si saliesen sus intentos vanos,
y fuesen sus quimeras desatinos, y esta pequeña tierra de Numancia sacase de su pérdida ganancia! 400

Mas, ¡ay!, que el enemigo la ha cercado, no sólo con las armas contrapuestas al flaco muro suyo, mas ha obrado con diligencia estraña y manos prestas, que un foso, por la margen trincheado, 405 rodea la ciudad por llano y cuestras; sola la parte por do el río se extiende de este ardid nunca visto se defiende.

Ansí, están encogidos y encerrados los tristes numantinos en sus muros: 410 ni ellos pueden salir, ni ser entrados, y están de los asaltos bien seguros; pero, en sólo mirar que están privados de ejercitar sus fuertes brazos duros, con horrendos acentos y feroces 415 la guerra piden, o la muerte a voces.

Y, pues sola la parte por do corre
y toca a la ciudad el ancho Duero, es aquella que ayuda y que socorre en algo al numantino prisionero, 420 antes que alguna máquina o gran torre en sus aguas se funde, rogar quiero al caudaloso conocido río, en lo que puede ayude el pueblo mío.

Duero gentil, que con torcidas vueltas 425 humedeces gran parte de mi seno, ansí en tus aguas siempre veas envueltas arenas de oro, cual el Tajo ameno, y ansí las ninfas fugitivas sueltas, de que está el verde prado y bosque lleno, 430 vengan humildes a tus aguas claras, y en prestarte favor no sean avaras, que prestes a mis ásperos lamentos atento oído, o que a escucharlos vengas;
y, aunque dejes un rato tus contentos, 435 suplícote que en nada te detengas.
Si tú con tus continos crecimientos, destos fieros romanos no me vengas, cerrado veo ya cualquier camino
a la salud del pueblo numantino. 440

(Sale el río DUERO, con otros muchachos vestidos de río como él, que son tres riachuelos que entran en DUERO.)

DUERO Madre y querida España, rato había que hirieron mis oídos tus querellas;
y si en salir acá me detenía, fue por no poder dar remedio a ellas.
El fatal, miserable y triste día, 445
según el disponer de las estrellas, se llega de Numancia, y cierto temo que no hay dar medio a su dolor extremo.

Con Orvión, Minuesa y también Tera, cuyas aguas las mías acrecientan, 450
he llenado mi seno en tal manera, que los usados márgenes revientan;
mas, sin temor de mi veloz carrera, cual si fuera un arroyo, veo que intentan de hacer lo que tú, España, nunca veas: 455 sobre mis aguas, torres y trincheas.

Mas, ya que el revolver del duro hado tenga el último fin estatuido deste tu pueblo numantino amado, pues a términos tales ha venido, 460 un consuelo le queda en este estado:
que no podrán las sombras del olvido oscurecer el sol de sus hazañas, en toda edad tenidas por estrañas.

Y, puesto que el feroz romano tiende 465 el paso agora por tu fértil suelo, y que te oprime aquí, y allí te ofende, con arrogante y ambicioso celo, tiempo vendrá, según que ansí lo entiende el saber que a Proteo ha dado el cielo, 470 que esos romanos sean oprimidos por los que agora tienen abatidos.

De remotas naciones venir veo gentes que habitarán tu dulce seno, después que, como quiere tu deseo, 475 habrán a los romanos puesto freno;
godos serán, que, con vistoso arreo, dejando de su fama al mundo lleno, vendrán a recogerse en tus entrañas, dando de nuevo vida a sus hazañas. 480

Estas injurias vengará la mano del fiero Atila en tiempos venideros, poniendo al pueblo tan feroz romano sujeto a obedecer todos sus fueros;
y, portillos abriendo en Vaticano, 485 tus bravos hijos y otros extranjeros harán que para huir vuelva la planta el gran Piloto de la nave santa.

Y también vendrá tiempo en que se mire estar blandiendo el español cuchillo 490 sobre el cuello romano, y que respire sólo por la bondad de su caudillo.
El grande Albano hará que se retire el español ejército, sencillo, no de valor sino de poca gente, 495 que iguala al mayor número en valiente.

Y cuando fuere ya más conocido el propio Hacedor de tierra y cielo, aquél que ha de quedar estatuido por visorrey de Dios en todo el suelo, 500 a tus reyes dará tal apellido, cual viere que más cuadra con su celo:
católicos serán llamados todos,
sucesión digna de los fuertes godos.

Pero el que más levantará la mano 505 en honra tuya y general contento, haciendo que el valor del nombre hispano tenga entre todos el mejor asiento, un rey será, de cuyo intento sano grandes cosas me muestra el pensamiento: 510 será llamado, siendo suyo el mundo, el Segundo Filipo, sin segundo.

Debajo deste imperio tan dichoso, serán a una corona reducidos, por bien universal y tu reposo, 515 tus reinos hasta entonces divididos;
el jirón lusitano tan famoso, que un tiempo se cortó de los vestidos de la ilustre Castilla, ha de zurcirse de nuevo y a su estado antiguo unirse. 520

¡Qué envidia y qué temor, España amada, te tendrán las naciones extranjeras, en quién tu teñirás tu aguda espada
y tenderás, triunfando, tus banderas!
Sírvate esto de alivio en la pesada 525 ocasión por quien lloras tan de veras, pues no puede faltar lo que ordenado ya tiene de Numancia el duro hado.

ESPAÑA Tus razones alivio han dado en parte, famoso Duero, a las pasiones mías, 530

sólo porque imagino que no hay parte de engaño alguno en estas profecías.

DUERO Bien puedes de eso, España, asegurarte, puesto que tarden tan dichosos días.
Y adiós, porque me esperan ya mis ninfas. 535

ESPAÑA ¡El cielo aumente tus sabrosas linfas!

Jornada II

Scena I

Interlocutores: TEÓGENES y CORABINO, con otros cuatro numantinos, gobernadores de Numancia, y MARQUINO, hechicero, y un cuerpo muerto, que saldrá a su tiempo. Siéntanse a consejo, y los cuatro numantinos que no tienen nombres se señalan así: PRIMERO, SEGUNDO, TERCERO, CUARTO.

TEÓGENES Paréceme, varones esforzados, que en nuestros daños con rigor influyen los tristes signos y contrarios hados, pues nuestra fuerza y maña desminuyen.
Tiénnenos los romanos encerrados, 5
y con cobardes mañas nos destruyen;
ni con matar muriendo no hay vengarnos, ni podemos sin alas escaparnos.

Y no sólo a vencernos se despiertan los que habemos vencido veces tantas, 10 que también españoles se conciertan con ellos a segar nuestras gargantas;
tan gran maldad los cielos no consientan:
con rayos hieran las ligeras plantas que se mueven en daño del amigo, 15 favoreciendo al pérfido enemigo.

Mirad si imagináis algún remedio para salir de tanta desventura, porque este largo y trabajoso asedio sólo promete presta sepultura; 20 el ancho foso nos estorba el medio de probar con las armas la ventura, aunque a veces valientes, fuertes brazos, rompen mil contrapuestos embarazos.

CORABINO    ¡A Júpiter pluguiera soberano 25 que nuestra juventud sola se viera con todo el bravo ejército romano, adonde el brazo rodear pudiera!

Que allí al valor de la española mano la misma muerte poco estorbo fuera, 30 para dejar de abrir ancho camino
a la salud del pueblo numantino.

Mas, pues en tales términos nos vemos, que estamos como damas encerrados, hagamos todo cuanto hacer podremos 35 para mostrar los ánimos osados:
a nuestros enemigos convidemos a singular batalla; que, cansados de este cerco tan largo, ser podría quisiesen acabarle por tal vía. 40

Y, cuando este remedio no suceda
a la justa medida del deseo, otro camino de intentar nos queda,
aunque más trabajoso, a lo que creo:
este foso y muralla que nos veda 45 el paso al enemigo que allí veo, en un tropel de noche le rompamos,
y por ayuda a los amigos vamos.

NUMANTINO PRIMERO    O sea por el foso o por la muerte, de abrir tenemos paso a nuestra vida; 50 que es dolor insufrible el de la muerte, si llega cuando más vive la vida;
remedio a las miserias es la muerte, si se acrecientan ellas con la vida, y suele tanto más ser excelente, 55 cuanto se muere más honradamente.

SEGUNDO    ¿Con qué más honra pueden apartarse de nuestros cuerpos estas almas nuestras, que en las romanas armas arrojarse

y en su daño mover las fuertes diestras? 60 En la ciudad podrá muy bien quedarse quien gusta de cobarde dar las muestras; que yo mi gusto pongo en quedar muerto en el cerrado foso o campo abierto.

TERCERO Esta insufrible hambre macilenta, 65 que tanto nos persigue y nos rodea, hace que en vuestro parecer consienta, puesto que temerario y duro sea.
Muriendo escusaremos tanta afrenta;
mas quien morir de hambre no desea, 70 arrójese conmigo al foso, y haga camino a su remedio con la daga.

CUARTO Primero que vengáis al trance duro desta resolución que habéis tomado, paréceme ser bien que desde el muro 75 nuestro fiero enemigo sea avisado, diciéndole que dé campo seguro
a un numantino y otro su soldado, y que la muerte de uno sea sentencia que acabe nuestra antigua diferencia. 80

Son los romanos tan soberbia gente, que luego aceptarán este partido;
y si lo aceptan, creo firmemente que nuestro amargo daño ha fenecido, pues está Corabino aquí presente, 85 cuyo valor me tiene persuadido que él solo contra tres bravos romanos quitará la victoria de las manos.

También será acertado que Marquino, pues es un agorero tan famoso, 90 mire qué estrella, qué planeta o signo nos amenaza muerte o fin honroso, y si puede hallar algún camino que nos pueda mostrar si del dudoso cerco cruel do estamos oprimidos 95 saldremos vencedores o vencidos.

También primero encargo que se haga a Júpiter solene sacrificio, de quien podremos esperar la paga harto mayor que nuestro beneficio; 100 cúrese luego la profunda llaga del arraigado acostumbrado vicio:
quizá con esto mudará de intento el hado esquivo y nos dará contento.

Para morir, jamás le falta tiempo 105 al que quiere morir desesperado:
siempre seremos a sazón y a tiempo para mostrar, muriendo, el pecho osado;
mas, porque no se pase en balde el tiempo, mirad si os cuadra lo que aquí he ordenado; 110
y si no os pareciere, dad un modo que mejor venga y que convenga a todo.

MARQUINO Esa razón que muestran tus razones es aprobada del intento mío.
Háganse sacrificios y oblaciones 115
y póngase en efeto el desafío; que yo no perderé las ocasiones de mostrar de mi ciencia el poderío:
yo sacaré del hondo centro oscuro quien nos declare el bien o el mal futuro. 120

TEÓGENES Yo desde aquí me ofrezco, si os parece que puede de mi esfuerzo algo fiarse, de salir a este duelo que se ofrece, si por ventura viene a efectuarse.

CORABINOMás honra tu valor raro merece: 125 bien pueden de tu esfuerzo confiarse más difíciles cosas y mayores, por ser el que es mejor de los mejores.

Y, pues tú ocupas el lugar primero de la honra y valor con causa justa, 130 yo, que en todo me cuento por postrero, quiero ser el haraldo desta justa.

PRIMERO Pues yo, con todo el pueblo, me prefiero hacer de lo que Júpiter más gusta, que son los sacrificios y oraciones, 135 si van con enmendados corazones.

SEGUNDO Vámonos, y con presta diligencia hagamos cuanto aquí propuesto habemos, antes que la pestífera dolencia de la hambre nos ponga en los extremos. 140

TERCERO Si tiene el Cielo dada la sentencia de que en este rigor fiero acabemos, revóquela, si acaso lo merece la justa enmienda que Numancia ofrece.

Vanse.

Scena II

Salen primero dos soldados numantinos: MORANDRO y LEONCIO.

LEONCIO Morandro, amigo, ¿a dó vas, 145
o hacia dó mueves el pie?

MORANDRO Si yo mismo no lo sé, tampoco tú lo sabrás.

LEONCIO ¡Cómo te saca de seso tu amoroso pensamiento! 150

MORANDRO Antes, después que le siento tengo más razón y peso.

LEONCIO Eso ya está averiguado: que el que sirviere al Amor ha de ser, por su dolor, 155 con razón muy más pesado.

MORANDRO De malicia o de agudeza no escapa lo que dijiste.

LEONCIO Tú mi agudeza entendiste, mas yo entiendo tu simpleza. 160

MORANDRO ¿Que soy simple en querer bien?

LEONCIO Sí, si al querer no se mide, como la razón lo pide,
con cuándo, cómo y a quién.

MORANDRO ¿Reglas quiés poner a amor? 165

LEONCIO La razón puede ponellas.

MORANDRO Razonables serán ellas, mas no de mucho primor.

LEONCIO En la amorosa porfía, a razón no hay conocella. 170

MORANDRO Amor no va contra ella, aunque de ella se desvía.

LEONCIO ¿No es ya contra la razón, siendo tú tan buen soldado, andar tan enamorado 175
en esta estrecha ocasión?

¿Al tiempo que del dios Marte has de pedir el furor, te entretienes con Amor, que mil blanduras reparte? 180

¿Ves la patria consumida
y de enemigos cercada,
y tu memoria, turbada
por amor, de ella se olvida?

MORANDRO En ira mi pecho se arde 185 por verte hablar sin cordura: ¿hizo el amor, por ventura,

a ningún pecho cobarde?

¿Dejo yo la centinela por ir dónde está mi dama, 190 o estoy durmiendo en la cama cuando mi capitán vela?

¿Hasme tú visto faltar
de lo que debo a mi oficio por algún regalo o vicio, 195 ni menos por bien amar?

Y si nada me has hallado
de que deba dar disculpa, ¿por qué me das tanta culpa de que sea enamorado? 200

Y si de conversación
me ves que ando siempre ajeno, mete la mano en tu seno, verás si tengo razón.

¿No sabes los muchos años 205 que tras Lira ando perdido?

¿No sabes que era venido el fin de mis tristes daños, porque su padre ordenaba de dármela por mujer, 210 y que Lira su querer
con el mío concertaba?

También sabes que llegó en tan dulce coyuntura esta fuerte guerra dura, 215 por quien mi gloria cesó.

Dilatóse el casamiento
hasta acabar esta guerra, porque no está nuestra tierra para fiestas y contento. 220

Mira cuán poca esperanza puedo tener de mi gloria, pues está nuestra victoria toda en la enemiga lanza.

De la hambre fatigados, 225 sin medio de algún remedio, tal muralla y foso en medio, pocos, y esos encerrados.

Pues, como veo llevar mis esperanzas del viento, 230 ando triste y descontento, así cual me ves andar.

LEONCIO Sosiega, Morandro, el pecho; vuelve al brío que tenías:
quizá por ocultas vías 235
se ordena nuestro provecho;
que Júpiter soberano
nos descubrirá camino,
por do el pueblo numantino quede libre del romano; 240
y, en dulce paz y sosiego, de tu esposa gozarás,
y las llamas templarás
deste tu amoroso fuego; que, para tener propicio 245
al gran Júpiter Tonante, hoy Numancia, en este instante, le quiere hacer sacrificio.

Ya el pueblo viene y se muestra con las víctimas e incienso. 250 ¡Oh Júpiter, padre imenso, mira la miseria nuestra!

Apártanse a un lado.

(Han de salir agora dos numantinos, vestidos como sacerdotes antiguos, y traen asido de los cuernos en medio de entrambos un carnero grande, coronado de oliva o yedra y otras flores, y un PAJE con una fuente de plata y una toalla al hombro; otro, con un jarro de plata lleno de agua; otro, con otro lleno de vino; otro, con otro plato de plata con un poco de incienso; otro, con fuego y leña; otro que ponga una mesa con un tapete, donde se ponga todo esto; y salgan en esta scena todos los que hubiere en la comedia, en hábito de numantinos, y luego los sacerdotes, y dejando el uno el carnero de la mano, diga:)

SACERDOTE PRIMERO Señales ciertas de dolores ciertos se me han representado en el camino, y los canos cabellos tengo yertos. 255

SACERDOTE SEGUNDO Si acaso yo no soy mal adevino, nunca con bien saldremos desta impresa.
¡Ay, desdichado pueblo numantino!

PRIMERO Hagamos nuestro oficio con la priesa que nos incitan los agüeros tristes. 260

SEGUNDO Poned, amigos, hacia aquí esa mesa:
el vino, encienso y agua que trujistes, poneldo encima y apartaos afuera,
y arrepentíos de cuanto mal hicistes;
que la oblación mejor y la primera 265 que se debe ofrecer al alto cielo, es alma limpia y voluntad sincera.

PRIMERO El fuego no le hagáis vos en el suelo, que aquí viene brasero para ello;
que así lo pide el religioso celo. 270

SEGUNDO Lavaos las manos y limpiaos el cuello.

PRIMERO Dad acá el agua... ¿El fuego no se enciende?

UNO ¡No hay quien pueda, señores, encendello!

SEGUNDO ¡Oh Júpiter! ¿Qué es esto que pretende de hacer en nuestro daño el hado esquivo? 275 ¿Cómo el fuego en la tea no se emprende?

UNO Ya parece, señor, que está algo vivo.

PRIMERO ¡Quítate afuera, oh flaca llama oscura, que dolor en mirarte así recibo!
¿No miras cómo el humo se apresura 280
a caminar al lado del poniente, y la amarilla llama mal sigura sus puntas encamina hacia el oriente?
¡Desdichada señal! ¡Señal notoria que nuestro mal y daño está presente! 285

SEGUNDO Aunque lleven romanos la victoria de nuestra muerte, en humo ha de tornarse y en llamas vivas nuestra muerte y gloria.

PRIMERO Pues debe con el vino rociarse el sacro fuego, dad acá ese vino, 290 y el incienso también, que ha de quemarse.

(Rocían el fuego, y a la redonda, con el vino, y luego ponen el incienso en el fuego y dice el)

SEGUNDO Al bien del triste pueblo numantino endereza, ¡oh gran Júpiter!, la fuerza propicia del contrario amargo signo.

PRIMERO   Ansí como este ardiente fuego fuerza   295
a que en humo se vaya el sacro incienso, ansí se haga al enemigo fuerza, para que en humo eterno, padre inmenso, todo su bien, toda su gloria vaya, ansí como tú puedes y yo pienso.   300

SEGUNDO   Tengan los cielos su poder a raya, ansí como esta víctima tenemos,
y lo que ella ha de haber, él también haya.

PRIMERO   ¡Mal responde el agüero: mal podremos ofrecer esperanza al pueblo triste,   305 para salir del mal que poseemos!

(Hágase ruido debajo del tablado con un barril lleno de piedras, y dispárese un cohete volador.)

SEGUNDO   ¿No oyes un ruido, amigo? Di, ¿no viste el rayo ardiente que pasó volando?
Présago verdadero desto fuiste.

PRIMERO   Turbado estoy; de miedo estoy temblando.   310 ¡Oh, qué señales en el aire veo, qué amargo fin nos van pronosticando!
    ¿No ves un escuadrón airado y feo de unas águilas fieras, que pelean con otras aves en marcial rodeo?   315

SEGUNDO   Sólo su esfuerzo y su rigor emplean en encerrar las aves en un cabo, y con astucia y arte las rodean.

PRIMERO Tal señal vitupero, y no la alabo:
¡Águilas imperiales vencedoras! 320
¡Tú verás de Numancia presto el cabo!

SEGUNDO ¡Águilas, de gran mal anunciadoras, partíos, que ya el agüero vuestro entiendo;
ya el efecto: contadas son las horas!

PRIMERO Con todo, el sacrificio hacer pretendo 325 desta inocente víctima, guardada para aplacar el dios del rostro horrendo.

¡Oh gran Plutón, a quien por suerte dada le fue la habitación del reino oscuro, y el mando en la infernal triste morada, 330

ansí vivas en paz, cierto y seguro de que la hija de la sacra Ceres corresponde a tu amor con amor puro, que todo aquello que en provecho vieres venir del pueblo triste que te invoca, 335 lo allegues cual se espera de quien eres.

Atapa la profunda oscura boca por do salen las tres fieras hermanas a hacernos el daño que nos toca;
y sean de dañarnos tan livianas 340

(Quite algunos pelos al carnero y échelos al aire.)

sus intenciones, que las lleve el viento, como se lleva el pelo de estas lanas.

Y, ansí como yo baño y ensangriento este cuchillo en esta sangre pura, con alma limpia y limpio pensamiento, 345

ansí la tierra de Numancia dura se bañe con la sangre de romanos, y aun les sirva también de sepultura.

(Aquí ha de salir por los huecos del tablado un DEMONIO hasta el medio cuerpo, y ha de arrebatarse el carnero, y meterle dentro, y tornar luego a salir, y derramar y esparcir el fuego y todos los sacrificios.)

Mas, ¿quién me ha arrebatado de las manos la víctima? ¿Qué es esto, dioses santos? 350 ¿Qué prodigios son esos tan insanos?
¿No os han enternecido ya los llantos de este pueblo lloroso y afligido, ni la sagrada voz de nuestros cantos?

SEGUNDO Antes creo que se han endurecido, 355 cual se puede inferir de las señales tan fieras como aquí han acontecido.

Nuestros vivos remedios son mortales:
toda es pereza nuestra diligencia,
y los bienes ajenos, nuestros males. 360

UNO DEL PUEBLO En fin, dado han los cielos la sentencia de nuestro fin amargo y miserable;
no nos quiere valer ya su clemencia.

OTRO Lloremos, pues, en son tan lamentable nuestra desdicha, que en la edad postrera 365 dél y de nuestro esfuerzo siempre se hable.

Marquino haga la experiencia entera de todo su saber, y sepa cuanto nos promete de mal la lastimera suerte, que ha vuelto nuestra risa en llanto. 370

(Sálense todos, y quedan solos MORANDRO y LEONCIO.)

MORANDRO Leoncio, ¿qué te parece?
¿Tendrán remedio mis males con estas buenas señales que aquí el cielo nos ofrece?

¿Tendrá fin mi desventura 375 cuando se acabe la guerra, que será cuando la tierra me sirva de sepultura?

LEONCIO Morandro, al que es buen soldado agüeros no le dan pena, 380 que pone la suerte buena en el ánimo esforzado;
y esas vanas apariencias
nunca le turban el tino:
su brazo es su estrella y signo; 385 su valor, sus influencias.

Pero si quieres creer
en este notorio engaño, aún quedan, si no me engaño, experiencias más que hacer; 390 que Marquino las hará, las mejores de su ciencia,
y el fin de nuestra dolencia ser bueno o malo sabrá.

Paréceme que le veo: 395
¡en qué extraño traje viene!

MORANDRO Quien con feos se entretiene, no es mucho que venga feo.
¿Será acertado seguirle?

LEONCIO Acertado me parece, 400 por si acaso se le ofrece algo en que poder servirle.

(Aquí sale MARQUINO con una ropa negra de bocací ancha, y una cabellera negra, y los pies descalzos; y en la cinta traerá, de modo que se le vean, tres redomillas llenas de agua: la una negra, la otra teñida con azafrán y la otra clara; y en la una mano, una lanza barnizada de negro, y en la otra, un libro; y viene MILVIO con él, y, así como entran, se ponen a un lado LEONCIO y MORANDRO.)

MARQUINO ¿Dó dices, Milvio, que está el joven triste?

MILVIO En esta sepultura está enterrado.

MARQUINO No yerres el lugar do le pusiste. 405

MILVIO No, que con esta piedra señalado dejé el lugar adonde el mozo tierno fue con lágrimas tiernas sepultado.

MARQUINO ¿De qué murió?

MILVIO Murió de mal gobierno:
la flaca hambre le acabó la vida, 410 peste cruel salida del infierno.

MARQUINO En fin, ¿que dices que ninguna herida le cortó el hilo del vital aliento, ni fue cáncer ni llaga su homicida?

Esto te digo, porque hace al cuento 415 de mi saber que esté este cuerpo entero, organizado todo y en su asiento.

MILVIO Habrá tres horas que le di el postrero reposo, y le entregué a la sepultura, y de hambre murió, como refiero. 420

MARQUINO Está muy bien, y es buena coyuntura la que me ofrecen los propicios signos para invocar de la región oscura los feroces espíritus malignos.

Presta atentos oídos a mis versos, 425 fiero Plutón, que en la región oscura, entre ministros de ánimos perversos, te cupo de reinar suerte y ventura;
haz, aunque sean de tu gusto adversos, cumplidos mis deseos, y en la dura 430 ocasión que te invoco no te tardes, ni a ser más oprimido de mí aguardes.

Quiero que al cuerpo que aquí está enterrado vuelvas el alma que le daba vida, aunque el fiero Carón del otro lado 435 la tenga en la ribera denegrida;
y, aunque en las tres gargantas del airado Cerbera esté penada y escondida, salga, y torne a la luz del mundo nuestro;
que luego tornará al oscuro vuestro. 440

Y, pues ha de salir, salga informada del fin que ha de tener guerra tan cruda, y desto no me encubra o calle nada, ni me deje confuso y con más duda:
la plática desta alma desdichada, 445 de toda ambigüidad libre y desnuda tiene de ser. ¡Invíala...! ¿Qué esperas?
¿Esperas a que hable con más veras?

¿No revolvéis la piedra, desleales?
Decid, ministros falsos, ¿qué os detiene? 450 ¿Cómo no me habéis dado ya señales de que hacéis lo que digo y me conviene?
¿Buscáis, con deteneros, vuestros males, o gustáis de que yo al momento ordene de poner en efecto los conjuros 455 que ablandan vuestros fieros pechos duros?

Ea, pues, vil canalla mentirosa, aparejaos a duro sentimiento, pues sabéis que mi voz es poderosa de doblaros la rabia y el tormento. 460 Dime, traidor esposo de la esposa que seis meses del año, a su contento, está sin ti, haciéndote cornudo:

¿por qué a mis peticiones estás mudo?

Este hierro, bañado en agua clara 465 que al suelo no tocó en el mes de mayo, herirá en esta piedra y hará clara
y patente la fuerza deste ensayo.

(Con el agua de la redoma clara baña el hierro de la lanza, y luego hiere en la tabla; y debajo, o suéltense cohetes o hágase el rumor con el barril de piedras.)

Ya parece, canalla, que a la clara dais muestras de que os toma cruel desmayo. 470 ¿Qué rumores son estos? ¡Ea, malvados, que al fin venís, aunque venís forzados!

Levantad esta piedra, fementidos, y descubridme el cuerpo que aquí yace.
¿Qué es esto? ¿Qué tardáis? ¿A dó sois idos? 475 ¿Cómo mi mandado al punto no se hace?
¿No os curáis de amenazas, descreídos?
Pues no esperéis que más os amenace:
esta agua negra del Estigio lago dará a vuestra tardanza presto el pago. 480

Agua de la fatal negra laguna, cogida en triste noche, oscura y negra, por el poder que en ti junto se aúna,
a quien otro poder ninguno quiebra, a la banda diabólica importuna, 485 y a quien la primer forma de culebra tomó, conjuro, apremio, pido y mando que venga a obedecerme aquí volando.
(Rocía con el agua la sepultura y ábrese.)

¡Oh mal logrado mozo!, sal ya fuera y vuelve a ver el sol claro y sereno; 490 deja aquella región do no se espera en ella un día sosegado y bueno.
Dame, pues puedes, relación entera de lo que has visto en el profundo seno; digo, de aquello a que mandado eres, 495
y más, si al caso toca y tú pudieres.

(Sale EL CUERPO amortajado, con un rostro de máscara descolorido, como de muerto, y va saliendo poco a poco, y, en saliendo, déjase caer en el teatro, sin mover pie ni mano hasta su tiempo.)

¿Qué es esto? ¿No respondes? ¿No revives?
¿Otra vez has gustado de la muerte?
Pues yo haré que con tu pena avives
y tengas el hablarme a buena suerte. 500 Pues eres de los nuestros, no te esquives de hablarme y responderme: mira, advierte que si callas, haré que, con tu mengua, sueltes la atada y encogida lengua.

(Rocía EL CUERPO con el agua amarilla, y luego le azota con un azote.)

Espíritus malignos, ¿no aprovecha? 505
Pues esperad: saldrá el agua encantada, que hará mi voluntad tan satisfecha cuanto es la vuestra pérvida y dañada;
y, aunque esta carne fuera polvos hecha, siendo con este azote castigada, 510 cobrará nueva, aunque ligera vida, del áspero rigor suyo oprimida.

(Menéase y estremécese EL CUERPO a este punto.)

Alma rebelde, vuelve al aposento que pocas horas ha desocupaste.
Ya vuelves, ya lo muestras, ya te siento; 515 que, al fin, a tu pesar, en él te entraste.

EL CUERPO Cese la furia del rigor violento tuyo, Marquino; baste, triste, baste la que yo paso en la región oscura, sin que tú crezcas más mi desventura. 520

Engañaste si piensas que recibo contento de volver a esta penosa, miserable y corta vida que ahora vivo, que ya me va faltando presurosa;
antes me causas un dolor esquivo, 525 pues otra vez la muerte rigurosa triunfará de mi vida y de mi alma;
mi enemigo tendrá doblada palma.

El cual, con otros del oscuro bando, de los que son sujetos a aguardarte, 530 está con rabia en torno, aquí esperando a que acabe, Marquino, de informarte del lamentable fin, del mal nefando que de Numancia puedo asegurarte; la cual acabará a las mismas manos 535 de los que son a ella más cercanos.

No llevarán romanos la victoria de la fuerte Numancia, ni ella menos tendrá del enemigo triunfo o gloria, amigos y enemigos siendo buenos; 540 no entiendas que de paz habrá memoria, que rabia alberga en sus contrarios senos:
el amigo cuchillo, el homicida de Numancia será, y será su vida.
(Arrójase en la sepultura y dice:)

Y quédate, Marquino, que los hados 545 no me conceden más hablar contigo;
y, aunque mis dichos tengas por trocados,
al fin saldrá verdad lo que te digo.

MARQUINO; Oh tristes signos; signos desdichados!
Si esto ha de suceder del pueblo amigo, 550 primero que mirar tal desventura, mi vida acabe en esta sepultura.
(Arrójase MARQUINO en la sepultura.)

MORANDRO Mira, Leoncio, si ves por dó yo pueda decir que no me haya de salir 555 todo mi gusto al revés.

De toda nuestra ventura cerrado está ya el camino;
si no, dígalo Marquino, el muerto y la sepultura. 560

LEONCIO Que todas son ilusiones, quimeras y fantasías,
agüeros y hechicerías,
diabólicas invenciones.

No muestres que tienes poca 565 ciencia en creer desconciertos; que poco cuidan los muertos de lo que a los vivos toca.

MILVIO Nunca Marquino hiciera desatino tan extraño, 570 si nuestro futuro daño
como presente no viera.

Avisemos este caso
al pueblo, que está mortal;
mas, para dar nueva tal, 575 ¿quién podrá mover el paso?

Jornada III

Scena I

Interlocutores: CIPIÓN, JUGURTA y GAYO MARIO.

CIPIÓN En forma estoy contento en mirar cómo corresponde a mi gusto la ventura, y esta libre nación soberbia domo sin fuerzas, solamente con cordura.
En viendo la ocasión, luego la tomo, 5 porque sé cuánto corre y se apresura;
y si se pasa, en cosas de la guerra, el crédito consume y vida atierra.

¿Juzgábades a loco desvarío tener los enemigos encerrados, 10 y que era mengua del romano brío no vencellos con modos más usados?
Bien sé que lo habrán dicho; mas yo fío que los que fueren prácticos soldados dirán que es de tener en mayor cuenta 15 la victoria que menos es sangrienta.

¿Qué gloria puede haber más levantada en las cosas de guerra que aquí digo, que, sin quitar de su lugar la espada, vencer y sujetar al enemigo? 20 Que, cuando la victoria es granjeada con la sangre vertida del amigo, el gusto mengua que causar pudiera la que sin sangre tal ganada fuera.

(Aquí ha de sonar una trompeta desde el muro de Numancia.)

QUINTO FABIO Oye, señor, que de Numancia suena 25 el son de una trompeta, y me asiguro que decirte algo desde allá se ordena, pues el salir de acá lo estorba el muro.
Corabino se ha puesto en una almena, y una señal ha hecho de seguro; 30 lleguémonos más cerca.

CIPIÓNSea, lleguemos.

GAYO MARIONo más, que dende aquí le entenderemos.

(Pónese CORABINO encima de la muralla con bandera blanca puesta en una lanza.)

CORABINO ¡Romanos! ¡Ah, romanos! ¿Puede acaso ser de vosotros esta voz oída?

GAYOMARIOPuesto que más la bajes y hables paso, 35 cualquiera tu razón será entendida.

CORABINODecid al general que acerque el paso al foso, porque viene dirigida a él una embajada.

CIPIÓN Dila presto,
que yo soy Cipión.

CORABINO Escucha el resto. 40 Dice Numancia, general prudente, que consideres bien que ha muchos años que entre la nuestra y tu romana gente duran los males de la guerra estraños;

y que, por evitar que no se aumente 45 la dura pestilencia destos daños, quiere, si tú quisieres, acaballa con una breve y singular batalla.

Un soldado se ofrece de los nuestros a combatir, cerrado en estacada, 50 con cualquiera esforzado de los vuestros, por acabar contienda tan pesada;
y si los hados fueren tan siniestros, que el uno quede sin la vida amada, si fuere el nuestro, darse ha la tierra; 55
si el tuyo fuere, acábese la guerra.

Y, por seguridad deste concierto,
daremos a tu gusto los rehenes.
Bien sé que en él vendrás, porque estás cierto de los soldados que a tu cargo tienes, 60
y sabes que el menor, en campo abierto, hará sudar el pecho, el rostro y sienes al más aventajado de Numancia:
ansí que, está sigura tu ganancia.

Porque a la ejecución se venga luego, 65 respóndeme, señor, si estás en ello.

CIPIÓN Donaire es lo que dices, risa, juego, y loco el que pensase de hacello.
Usad el medio del humilde ruego, si queréis que se escape vuestro cuello 70 de probar el rigor y filos diestros del romano cuchillo y brazos nuestros.

La fiera que en la jaula está encerrada por su selvaticuez y fuerza dura, si puede allí con maña ser domada 75
y con el tiempo y medios de cordura, quien la dejase ir libre y desatada daría grandes muestras de locura.

Bestias sois, y por tales, encerrados os tengo donde habéis de ser domados. 80

Mía será Numancia, a pesar vuestro, sin que me cueste un mínimo soldado, y el que tenéis vosotros por más diestro rompa por ese foso trincheado;
y si en esto os parece que yo muestro 85 un poco mi valor acobardado, el viento lleve agora esta vergüenza,
y vuélvale la fama cuando os venza.

(Vanse CIPIÓN y los suyos.)

CORABINO ¿No escuchas más, cobarde? ¿Ya te escondes?
¿Enfádate la igual justa batalla? 90
Mal con tu nombradía correspondes, mal podrás deste modo sustentalla;
en fin, como cobarde me respondes.
¡Cobardes sois, romanos, vil canalla, en vuestra muchedumbre confiados, 95
y no en los diestros brazos levantados!

¡Pérfidos, desleales, fementidos, cruelles, revoltosos y tiranos;
ingratos, codiciosos, malnacidos, pertinaces, feroces y villanos; 100 adúlteros, infames, conocidos por de industriosas, mas cobardes manos!, ¿qué gloria alcanzaréis en darnos muerte teniéndonos atados desta suerte?

En cerrado escuadrón, o manga suelta, 105 en la campaña rasa, do no pueda estorbar la mortal fiera revuelta el ancho foso y muro que la veda, fuere bien que, sin dar el pie la vuelta y sin tener jamás la espada queda, 110 ese ejército mucho, bravo, vuestro se viera con el poco, flaco, nuestro.

Mas, como siempre estáis acostumbrados a vencer con ventajas y con mañas, estos conciertos, en valor fundados, 115
no los admiten bien vuestras marañas.
¡Liebres en pieles fieras disfrazados, load y engrandeced vuestras hazañas;
que espero en el gran Júpiter de veros sujetos a Numancia y a sus fueros! 120

(Bájase, y torna a salir luego con todos los numantinos que salieron en el principio de la segunda jornada, excepto MARQUINO, que se arrojó en la sepultura, y sale también MORANDRO.)

TEÓGENES En términos nos tiene nuestra suerte, dulces amigos, que será ventura acabar nuestros daños con la muerte.

Por nuestro mal, por nuestra desventura, vistes del sacrificio el triste agüero, 125
y a Marquino tragar la sepultura.

El desafío no ha importado un cero;
de intentar qué nos queda no lo siento, si no es acelerar el fin postrero.

Esta noche se muestre el ardimiento 130 del numantino acelerado pecho, y póngase por obra nuestro intento:
el enemigo muro sea deshecho;
salgamos a morir a la campaña,
y no, como cobardes, en estrecho. 135

Bien sé que sólo sirve esta hazaña de que a nuestro morir se mude el modo; que con ella la muerte se acompaña.

CORABINO Con ese parecer yo me acomodo:
morir quiero rompiendo el fuerte muro, 140
y deshacelle por mi mano todo;
mas tiéneme una cosa mal seguro:

que si nuestras mujeres saben esto,
de que no haremos nada os aseguro.

Cuando otra vez tuvimos presupuesto 145 de salir y dejallas, cada uno fiado en su caballo y brazo diestro, ellas, que el trato a ellas importuno supieron, al momento nos robaron los frenos, sin dejarnos sólo uno. 150

Entonces el salir nos estorbaron, y así lo harán agora fácilmente si las lágrimas muestran que mostraron.

MORANDRO Nuestro designio a todas es patente; todas lo saben; ya no queda alguna 155 que no se queja dello amargamente, y dicen que en la buena o ruin fortuna quieren, en vida y muerte, acompañarnos, aunque su compañía es importuna.

(Aquí entran cuatro o más mujeres de Numancia, y con ellas LIRA. Las mujeres traen unas figuras de niños en los brazos, y otros de las manos, excepto LIRA, que no trae ninguno.)

Veislas aquí do vienen a rogaros, 160 no la dejéis en tantos embarazos;
aunque seáis de acero, han de ablandaros.

Los tiernos hijos vuestros en los brazos las tristes traen; ¿no veis con qué señales de amor les dan los últimos abrazos? 165

PRIMERO Dulces señores nuestros, si en los males hasta aquí de Numancia padecidos, que son menores los que son mortales,
y en los bienes también, que ya son idos, siempre mostramos ser mujeres vuestras, 170

y vosotros también nuestros maridos, ¿por qué en las ocasiones tan siniestras que el cielo airado agora nos ofrece, nos dais de aquel amor tan cortas muestras?

Hemos sabido, y claro se parece, 175 que en las romanas armas arrojaros queréis, pues su rigor menos empece que no la hambre de que veis cercaros, de cuyas flacas manos desabridas por imposible tengo el escaparos. 180

Peleando queréis dejar las vidas, y dejarnos también desamparadas,
a deshonoras y muertes ofrecidas.

Nuestro cuello ofreced a las espadas vuestras primero; que es mejor partido 185 que vernos de enemigos deshonoradas.

Yo tengo en mi intención estatuido que, si puedo, haré cuanto en mí fuere por morir do muere mi marido.

Y esto mesmo hará la que quisiere 190 mostrar que no los miedos de la muerte le estorban de querer a quien bien quiere, en buena o mala, en dulce o amarga suerte.

OTRA ¿Qué pensáis, varones claros?

¿Revolvéis aun todavía 195 en la triste fantasía de dejarnos y ausentaros?

¿Queréis dejar por ventura a la romana arrogancia las vírgenes de Numancia 200 para mayor desventura?

Y a los libres hijos nuestros ¿queréis esclavos dejallos?
¿No será mejor ahogallos con los propios brazos vuestros? 205

¿Queréis hartar el deseo de la romana codicia,

y que triunfe su injusticia de nuestro justo trofeo?

¿Serán por ajenas manos 210
nuestras casas derribadas?

Y las bodas esperadas, ¿hanlas de gozar romanos?

En salir hacéis error, que acarrea cien mil yerros, 215 porque dejáis sin los perros el ganado, y sin señor.

Si al foso queréis salir, llevadnos en tal salida, porque tendremos por vida 220
a vuestros lados morir.

No apresuréis el camino al morir, porque su estambre cuidado tiene la hambre de cercenarla contino. 225

OTRAS Hijos destas tristes madres, ¿qué es esto? ¿Cómo no habláis, y con lágrimas rogáis que no os dejen vuestros padres?

Basta que la hambre insana 230 os acabe con dolor,
sin esperar el rigor
de la aspereza romana.

Decidles que os engendraron libres, y libres nacisteis, 235 y que vuestras madres tristes también libres os criaron.

Decidles que, pues la suerte nuestra va tan de caída, que, como os dieron la vida, 240 ansimismo os den la muerte.

¡Oh muros desta ciudad!, si podéis, hablad; decid,
y mil veces repetid:

«¡Numantinos, libertad!» 245
Los templos, las casas nuestras, levantadas en concordia;
os piden misericordia,
hijos y mujeres vuestras.
Ablandad, claros varones, 250
esos pechos diamantinos,
y mostrad, cual numantinos, amorosos corazones;
que no por romper el muro remediáis un mal tamaño; 255 antes en ello está el daño más propincuo y más seguro.

LIRA También las tiernas doncellas ponen en vuestra defensa el remedio de su ofensa 260
y el alivio a sus querellas;
no dejéis tan ricos robos
a las codiciosas manos:
mirad que son los romanos hambrientos y fieros lobos. 265 Desesperación notoria es esta que hacer queréis, adonde sólo hallaréis breve muerte y larga gloria.
Mas, ya que salga mejor 270 que yo pienso esta hazaña, ¿qué ciudad hay en España que quiera daros favor?
Mi pobre ingenio os advierte que si hacéis esta salida, 275 al enemigo dais vida
y a toda Numancia muerte.
De vuestro acuerdo gentil los romanos burlarán;
porque, decidme: ¿qué harán 280

tres mil contra ochenta mil?

Aunque estuviesen abiertos los muros y sin defensa, seríades con ofensa mal vengados y bien muertos. 285

Mejor es que la ventura
o el daño que el cielo ordene, o nos salve o nos condene,
dé la vida o sepultura.

TEÓGENES Limpiad los ojos húmidos del llanto, 290 mujeres tiernas, y tené entendido que vuestra angustia la sentimos tanto, que responde al amor nuestro subido;
ora crezca el dolor, ora el quebranto sea, por nuestro bien, disminuido, 295 jamás en vida o muerte os dejaremos;
antes, en muerte y vida os serviremos.

Pensábamos salir al foso, ciertos antes de allí morir que de escaparnos, pues fuera quedar vivos, aunque muertos, 300 si muriendo pudiéramos vengarnos;
mas, pues nuestros disignios descubiertos han sido, y es locura aventurarnos, amados hijos y mujeres nuestras, nuestras vidas serán, de hoy más, las vuestras. 305

Sólo se ha de mirar que el enemigo no alcance de nosotros triunfo y gloria:
antes ha de servir él de testigo que apruebe y eternice nuestra historia;
y si todos venís en lo que digo, 310 mil siglos durará nuestra memoria:
y es que no quede cosa aquí en Numancia de do el contrario pueda haber ganancia.

En medio de la plaza se haga un fuego, en cuya ardiente llama licenciosa 315 nuestras riquezas todas se echen luego, desde la pobre a la más rica cosa;

y esto podéis tener a dulce juego, cuando os declare la intención honrosa que se ha de efectuar, después que sea 320 abrasada cualquier rica presea.

Y, para entretener por alguna hora la hambre, que ya roe nuestros huesos, haréis descuartizar luego a la hora esos tristes romanos que están presos, 325 y, sin del chico al grande hacer mejora, repártanse entre todos; que con esos será nuestra comida celebrada por estraña, cruel, necesitada.

Amigos, ¿qué os parece? ¿Estáis en esto? 330

CORABINODigo que a mí me tiene satisfecho, y que a la ejecución se venga presto de tan estraño y tan honroso hecho.

TEÓGENESPues yo de mi intención os diré el resto:
después que sea lo que digo hecho, 335 vamos a ser ministros todos luego de encender el ardiente y rico fuego.

MUJER PRIMERA Nosotras desde aquí ya comenzamos a dar con voluntad nuestros arreos, y a las vuestras las vidas entregamos, 340 como se han entregado los deseos.

LIRAEa, pues, caminemos; vamos, vamos,
y abrásenle en un punto los trofeos que pudieran hacer ricas las manos, y aun hartar la codicia de romanos. 345

(Vanse todos, y al salir MORANDRO, ase a LIRA por el brazo y detiéndela.)

MORANDRO No vayas tan de corrida, Lira; déjame gozar
del bien que me puede dar en la muerte alegre vida; deja que miren mis ojos 350
un rato tu hermosura,
pues tanto mi desventura se entretiene en mis enojos.
    ¡Oh dulce Lira, que sueñas contino en mi fantasía 355 con tan süave armonía que vuelve en gloria mis penas!
    ¿Qué tienes? ¿Qué estás pensando, gloria de mi pensamiento?

LIRAPienso cómo mi contento 360
y el tuyo se va acabando.
    Y no será su homicida
el cerco de nuestra tierra; que primero que la guerra se me acabará la vida. 365

MORANDRO ¿Qué dices, bien de mi alma?

LIRAQue me tiene tal la hambre, que de mi vital estambre llevará presto la palma.
    ¿Qué tálamo has de esperar 370 de quien está en tal extremo, que te aseguro que temo
antes de una hora espirar?
    Mi hermano ayer espiró, de la hambre fatigado, 375
y mi madre ya ha acabado, que la hambre la acabó.

Y si la hambre y su fuerza
no ha rendido mi salud, es porque la juventud 380 contra su rigor se esfuerza; pero, como ha tantos días que no le hago defensa, no pueden contra su ofensa las débiles fuerzas mías. 385

MORANDRO Enjuga, Lira, los ojos; deja que los tristes míos se vuelvan corrientes ríos nacidos de tus enojos;
y, aunque la hambre ofendida 390
te tenga tan sin compás, de hambre no morirás
mientras yo tuviere vida.

Yo me ofrezco de saltar el foso y el muro fuerte, 395
y entrar por la misma muerte, para la tuya escusar.

El pan que el romano toca, sin que el temor me destruya, lo quitaré de la suya 400
para ponerlo en tu boca.

Con mi brazo haré carrera
a tu vida y a mi muerte, porque más me mata el verte, señora, de esa manera. 405

Yo te traeré de comer
a pesar de los romanos, si ya son estas mis manos las mismas que solían ser.

LIRA Hablas como enamorado, 410 Morandro; pero no es justo que ya tome gusto el gusto

con tu peligro comprado.

Poco podrá sustentarme cualquier robo que harás, 415 aunque más cierto hallarás el perderte que ganarme.

Goza de tu mocedad
en fresca edad y crecida, que más importa tu vida 420 que la mía a la ciudad.

Tú podrás bien defendella de la enemiga asechanza, que no la flaca pujanza desta tan triste doncella. 425

Ansí que, mi dulce amor, despide ese pensamiento, que yo no quiero sustento ganado con tu sudor;

que, aunque puedas alargar 430
mi muerte por algún día, esta hambre que porfía
en fin nos ha de acabar.

MORANDRO En vano trabajas, Lira, de impedirme este camino, 435 do mi voluntad y signo allá me convida y tira.

Tú rogarás entretanto
a los dioses que me vuelvan con despojos que resuelvan 440 tu miseria y mi quebranto.

LIRA Morandro, mi dulce amigo, no vayas; que se me antoja que de tu sangre veo roja la espada del enemigo. 445

No hagas esta jornada, Morandro, bien de mi vida;

que si es mala la salida, es muy peor la tornada.

Si quiero aplacar tu brío, 450 por testigo pongo al cielo;
que de tu daño recelo,
y no del provecho mío;
mas si acaso, amado amigo, prosigues esta contienda, 455 lleva este abrazo por prenda de que me llevas contigo.

MORANDRO Lira, el cielo te acompañe.
Vete, que a Leoncio veo.

LIRAY a ti te cumpla el deseo 460
y en ninguna parte dañe.

(LEONCIO ha de estar escuchando todo lo que ha pasado entre su amigo MORANDRO y LIRA.)

LEONCIO Terrible ofrecimiento es el que has hecho, y en él, Morandro, se nos muestra claro que no hay cobarde enamorado pecho, aunque de tu virtud y valor raro 465 debe más esperarse; mas yo temo que el hado infeliz se nos muestre avaro.

He estado atento al miserable extremo en que te ha dicho Lira que se halla, indigno, cierto, a su valor supremo, 470 y que tú has prometido de libralla deste presente daño, y arrojarte en las armas romanas a batalla.

Yo quiero, buen amigo, acompañarte, y en empresa tan justa y tan forzosa 475 con mis pequeñas fuerzas ayudarte.

MORANDRO ¡Oh mitad de mi alma! ¡Oh venturosa amistad, no en trabajos dividida, ni en la ocasión más próspera y dichosa!

Goza, Leoncio, de la dulce vida; 480 quédate en la ciudad, que yo no quiero ser de tus verdes años homicida.

Yo solo tengo de ir; yo solo espero volver con los despojos merecidos a mi inviolable fe y amor sincero. 485

LEONCIO Pues ya tienes, Morandro, conocidos mis deseos, que en buena o mala suerte al sabor de los tuyos van medidos;

sabrás que no los miedos de la muerte de ti me apartarán un solo punto, 490 ni otra cosa, si la hay, que sea mas fuerte.

Contigo tengo de ir; contigo junto he de volver, si ya el cielo no ordena que quede en tu defensa allá difunto.

MORANDRO Quédate, amigo; queda en hora buena, 495 porque si yo acabare aquí la vida en esta empresa de peligro llena, tú puedas a mi madre dolorida consolar en el trance riguroso, y a la esposa de mí tanto querida. 500

LEONCIO Cierto que estás, amigo, muy donoso en pensar que, tú muerto, quedaría yo con tal quietud y tal reposo, que de consuelo alguno serviría a la doliente madre y triste esposa. 505 Pues en la tuya está la muerte mía, seguirte tengo en la ocasión dudosa:
mira cómo ha de ser, Morandro amigo,

y en el quedarme no me hables cosa.

MORANDRO Pues no puedo estorbarte el ir conmigo, 510 en el silencio de la noche oscura tenemos de asaltar al enemigo.

Lleva ligeras armas; que ventura es la que ha de ayudar al alto intento, que no la malla entretejida y dura. 515

Lleva así mismo puesto el pensamiento en robar y traer a buen recado lo que pudieres más de bastimento.

LEONCIOVamos, que no saldré de tu mandado.

Vanse.

Scena II

Dos numantinos.

PRIMERO ¡Derrama, oh dulce hermano, por los ojos 520 el alma en llanto amargo convertida!
Venga la muerte y lleve los despojos de nuestra miserable y triste vida.

SEGUNDO Bien poco durarán estos enojos; que ya la muerte viene apercibida 525 para llevar en presto y breve vuelo a cuantos pisan de Numancia el suelo.

Principios veo que prometen presto amargo fin a nuestra dulce tierra, sin que tengan cuidado de hacer esto 530 los contrarios ministros de la guerra:
nosotros mismos, a quien ya es molesto y enfadoso el vivir que nos atierra, hemos dado sentencia irrevocable de nuestra muerte, aunque cruel, loable. 535

En la plaza mayor ya levantada queda una ardiente cudiciosa hoguera, que, de nuestras riquezas ministrada, sus llamas sube hasta la cuarta esfera.
Allí con triste priesa acelerada 540
y con mortal y tímida carrera acuden todos, como a santa ofrenda, a sustentar sus llamas con su hacienda.

Allí la perla del rosado oriente, y el oro en mil vasijas fabricado, 545
y el diamante y rubí más excelente, y la extremada púrpura y brocado, en medio del rigor fogoso ardiente de la encendida llama es arrojado:

despojos do pudieran los romanos 550 henchir los senos y ocupar las manos.

(Aquí salen algunos cargados de ropa, y entran por una puerta y salen por otra.)

Vuelve al triste espectáculo la vista:
verás con cuánta priesa y cuánta gana toda Numancia en numerosa lista aguija a sustentar la llama insana; 555 y no con verde leño y seca arista, no con materia al consumir liviana, sino con sus haciendas mal gozadas, pues se ganaron para ser quemadas.

PRIMERO Si con esto acabara nuestro daño, 560 pudiéramos llevallo con paciencia;
mas, ¡ay!, que se ha de dar, si no me engaño, de que muramos todos cruel sentencia.
Primero que el rigor bárbaro extraño muestre en nuestras gargantas su inclemencia, 565 verdugos de nosotros nuestras manos serán, y no los pérfidos romanos.

Han acordado que no quede alguna mujer, niño ni viejo con la vida, pues, al fin, la cruel hambre importuna 570 con más fiero rigor es su homicida.
Mas ves allí do asoma, hermano, una que, como sabes, fue de mí querida un tiempo, con extremo tal de amores, cual es el que ella tiene de dolores. 575

(Sale una mujer con una criatura en los brazos y otra de la mano.)

MADRE ¡Oh duro vivir molesto, terrible y triste agonía!

HIJOMadre, ¿por ventura, habría quien nos diese pan por esto?

MADRE ¿Pan, hijo? Ni aun otra cosa 580 que semeje de comer.

HIJOPues, ¿tengo de perecer de dura hambre rabiosa?

Con poco pan que me deis, madre, no os pediré más. 585

MADREHijo, ¡qué pena me das!

HIJO¿Pues qué, madre, no queréis?

MADRE Sí quiero; mas, ¿qué haré, que no sé dónde buscallo?

HIJOBien podéis, madre, comprallo; 590
si no, yo lo compraré;
mas, por quitarme de afán,
si alguno conmigo topa, le daré toda esta ropa
por un mendrugo de pan. 595

MADRE ¿Qué mamas, triste criatura?
¿No sientes que a mi despecho sacas ya del flaco pecho, por leche, la sangre pura?

Lleva la carne a pedazos 600
y procura de hartarte, que no pueden más llevarte mis flojos, cansados brazos.

Hijos del ánimo mía, ¿con qué os podré sustentar, 605 si apenas tengo qué os dar de la propia carne mía?

¡Oh hambre terrible y fuerte, cómo me acabas la vida!
¡Oh guerra, sólo venida 610 para causarme la muerte!

HIJO ¡Madre mía, que me fino!
Aguijemos a do vamos,
que parece que alargamos la hambre con el camino. 615

MADRE Hijo, cerca está la plaza adonde echaremos luego
en mitad del vivo fuego el peso que te embaraza.

(Éntranse.)

Jornada IV

Scena I

Tócase al arma con gran priesa, y a este rumor salen CIPIÓN con JUGURTA y GAYO MARIO, alborotados.

CIPIÓN ¿Qué es esto, capitanes? ¿Quién nos toca al arma en tal sazón? ¿Es por ventura alguna gente desmandada y loca, que viene a procurar su sepultura?
O no sea algún motín el que provoca 5 tocar al arma en recia coyuntura:
que tan seguro estoy del enemigo, que tengo más temor al que es amigo.

(Sale QUINTO FABIO, con la espada desnuda, y dice:)

QUINTO FABIO Sosiega el pecho, general prudente, que ya desta arma la ocasión se sabe, 10 puesto que ha sido a costa de tu gente:
de aquella en quien más brío y fuerza cabe.
Dos numantinos, con soberbia fuerte, cuyo valor será razón se alabe, saltando el ancho foso y la muralla, 15 han movido a tu campo cruel batalla.

A las primeras guardias imbistieron,
y en medio de mil lanzas se arrojaron,
y con tal furia y rabia arremetieron, que libre paso al campo les dejaron; 20
las tiendas de Fabricio acometieron, y allí su fuerza y su valor mostraron, de modo que en un punto seis soldados fueron de agudas puntas traspasados.

No con tanta presteza el rayo ardiente 25
pasa rompiendo el aire en presto vuelo, ni tanto la cometa reluciente, se muestra ir presurosa por el cielo, como estos dos por medio de tu gente pasaron, colorando el duro suelo 30 con la sangre romana que sacaban sus espadas doquiera que llegaban.

Queda Fabricio traspasado el pecho;
abierta la cabeza tiene Horacio; Olmida ya perdió el brazo derecho 35
y de vivir le queda poco espacio.
Fuele así mismo poco de provecho
la ligereza al valeroso Estacio, pues el correr al numantino fuerte fue abreviar el camino de su muerte. 40

Con presta ligereza discurriendo iban de tienda en tienda, hasta que hallaron un poco de bizcocho, el cual cogieron;
el paso, y no el furor, atrás volvieron:
el uno dellos se escapó huyendo, 45 al otro mil espadas le acabaron;
por donde infiero que la hambre ha sido quien les dio atrevimiento tan subido.

CIPIÓN Si estando deshambridos y encerrados muestran tan demasiado atrevimiento, 50 ¿qué hicieran siendo libres y enterados en sus fuerzas primeras y ardimiento?
¡Indómitos, al fin seréis domados, porque contra el furor vuestro violento se tiene de poner la industria nuestra, 55 que de domar soberbios es maestra!

(Éntrase CIPIÓN y los suyos, y luego tócase al arma en la ciudad, y al rumor sale MORANDRO, herido y lleno de sangre, con una cestilla blanca en el brazo izquierdo con algún poco de bizcocho ensangrentado, y dice:)

MORANDRO ¿No vienes, Leoncio? Di:

¿qué es esto, mi dulce amigo?

Si tú no vienes conmigo,

¿cómo vengo yo sin ti? 60

Amigo, ¿que te has quedado?

Amigo, ¿que te quedaste?

¡No eres tú el que me dejaste, sino yo el que te he dejado!

¿Que es posible que ya dan 65

tus carnes despedazadas señales averiguadas

de lo que cuesta este pan?

¿Y es posible que la herida que a ti te dejó difunto, 70 en aquel instante y punto

no me quitó a mí la vida?

No quiso el hado cruel

acabarme en paso tal,

por hacerme a mí más mal 75

y hacerte a ti más fiel.

Tú, en fin, llevarás la palma de más verdadero amigo;

yo a desculparme contigo enviaré bien presto el alma; 80

y tan presto, que el afán

a morir me llama y tira, en dando a mi dulce Lira este tan amargo pan.

Pan ganado de enemigos; 85 pero no ha sido ganado,

sino con sangre comprado

de dos sin ventura amigos.

(Sale LIRA con alguna ropa, como que la lleva a quemar, y dice:)

LIRA    ¿Qué es esto que ven mis ojos?

MORANDROLo que presto no verán, 90 según la priesa se dan
de acabarme mis enojos.

Ves aquí, Lira, cumplida mi palabra y mis porfías de que tú no morirías 95 mientras yo tuviese vida.

Y aun podré mejor decir que presto vendrás a ver que a ti sobraré el comer y a mí faltará el vivir. 100

LIRA    ¿Qué dices, Morandro amado?

MORANDROLira, que acortes la hambre, entre tanto que la estambre
de mi vida corta el hado;

pero mi sangre vertida, 105
y con este pan mezclada, te ha de dar, mi dulce amada, triste y amarga comida.

Ves aquí el pan que guardaban ochenta mil enemigos, 110 que cuesta de dos amigos las vidas que más amaban.

Y, porque lo entiendas cierto
y cuánto tu amor merezco, ya yo, señora, perezco, 115
y Leoncio ya está muerto.

Mi voluntad sana y justa recíbela con amor,
que es la comida mejor
y de que el alma más gusta. 120

Y, pues en tormenta y calma siempre has sido mi señora, recibe este cuerpo agora,

como recibiste el alma.

(Cáese muerto y cógele en las faldas LIRA.)

LIRA Morandro, dulce bien mío, 125 ¿qué sentís, o qué tenéis?
¿Cómo tan presto perdéis vuestro acostumbrado brío?

Mas, ¡ay, triste sin ventura, que ya está muerto mi esposo! 130 ¡Oh caso, el más lastimoso que se vio en la desventura!

¿Quién os hizo, dulce amado, con valor tan excelente, enamorado valiente 135
y soldado desdichado?

¡Hicistes una salida
esposo mío, de suerte,
que por escusar mi muerte, me habéis quitado la vida! 140

¡Oh pan de la sangre lleno que por mí se derramó, no te tengo en cuenta yo de pan, sino de veneno;

¡No te llegaré a mi boca 145
por poderme sustentar, si ya no es para besar
esta sangre que te toca!

(A este punto ha de entrar un muchacho hablando desmayadamente, el cual es HERMANO de LIRA.)

HERMANO Lira, hermana, ya expiró mi padre, y mi madre está 150

en términos que ya ya morirá cual muero yo:
la hambre los ha acabado.
Hermana mía, ¿pan tienes?
¡Oh pan, y cuán tarde vienes, 155 que ya no hay pasar bocado!
Tiene la hambre apretada mi garganta en tal manera, que, aunque este pan agua fuera, no pudiera pasar nada. 160 Tómalo, hermana querida;
que, por más crecer mi afán, veo que me sobra el pan cuando me falta la vida.
(Cáese muerto.)

LIRA ¿Espiraste, hermano amado? 165
Ni aliento ni vida tiene: ¡bien es el mal cuando viene sin venir acompañado!
Fortuna, ¿por qué me aquejas con un daño y otro junto, 170 y por qué en un solo punto huérfana y viuda me dejas?
¡Oh duro escuadrón romano, cómo me tiene tu espada de dos muertos rodeada: 175 uno esposo y otro hermano!
¿A cuál volveré la cara en este trance importuno, si en la vida cada uno
fue prenda del alma cara? 180 ¡Dulce esposo, hermano tierno, yo os igualaré en quereros, porque pienso presto veros en el cielo o el infierno!
En el modo de morir 185
a entrambos he de imitar, porque el hierro ha de acabar,

y la hambre, mi vivir.

Primero daré a mi pecho una daga que este pan: 190 que a quien vive con afán, es la muerte de provecho.

¿Qué aguardo? ¡Cobarde estoy!
Brazo, ¿ya os habéis turbado?
¡Dulce esposo, hermano amado, 195
esperadme, que ya voy!

(A este punto, sale una MUJER huyendo, y tras ella un SOLDADO numantino con una daga en la mano para matarla.)

MUJER ¡Eterno padre, Júpiter piadoso, favorecedme en tan adversa suerte!

SOLDADO; Aunque más lleves vuelo presuroso, mi dura mano te ha de dar la muerte! 200

(Éntrese la MUJER adentro y dice LIRA:)

LIRA El hierro agudo, el brazo belicoso, contra mí, buen soldado, le convierte:
deja vivir a quien la vida agrada,
y quítame la mía, que me enfada.

SOLDADO Puesto que es el decreto del Senado 205 que ninguna mujer quede con vida, ¿cuál será el bravo pecho acelerado que en ese hermoso vuestro dé herida?
Yo, señora, no soy tan mal mirado, que me precie de ser vuestro homicida: 210 otra mano, otro hierro ha de acabaros, que yo sólo nací para adoraros.

LIRA Esa piedad que quíes usar conmigo, valeroso soldado, yo te juro, y al alto Cielo pongo por testigo, 215 que yo la estimo por rigor muy duro; tuviérate yo entonces por amigo cuando, con pecho y ánimo seguro, este mío afligido traspasaras
y de la amarga vida me privaras. 220

Pero, pues quíes mostrarte piadoso, tan en daño, señor, de mi contento, muéstralo agora en que a mi triste esposo demos el funeral último asiento; también a este mi hermano, que en reposo 225 yace, ya libre del vital aliento:
mi esposo feneció por darme vida;
de mi hermano, la hambre fue homicida.

SOLDADO Hacer lo que me mandas está llano, con condición que en el camino cuentes 230 quién a tu amado esposo y caro hermano trujo a los postrimeros accidentes.

LIRAAmigo, ya el hablar no está en mi mano.

SOLDADO¿Que tan al cabo estás? ¿Que tal te sientes?
Lleva a tu hermano, pues que es menor carga, 235
y yo a tu esposo, que más pesa y carga.

(Sálense llevando los dos cuerpos.)

Scena II

Sale una mujer armada, con un escudo en el brazo izquierdo y una lancilla en la mano, que significa la GUERRA; trae consigo a la ENFERMEDAD, arrimada a una muleta, y rodeada de paños la cabeza, con una máscara amarilla, y la HAMBRE saldrá vestida con una ropa de bocací amarillo, y una máscara amarilla o descolorida.

Pueden estas figuras hacellas hombres, pues llevan máscaras.

GUERRA Hambre y Enfermedad, ejecutoras de mis terribles mandos y severos, de vidas y salud consumidoras, con quien no vale ruego, mando o fueros, 240 pues ya de mi intención sois sabidoras, no hay para qué de nuevo encareceros de cuánto gusto me será y contento que, luego luego, hagáis mi mandamiento.

La fuerza incontrastable de los hados, 245 cuyos efectos nunca salen vanos, me fuerza a que de mí sean ayudados estos sagaces mílites romanos:
ellos serán un tiempo levantados, y abatidos también estos hispanos; 250 pero tiempo vendrá en que yo me mude y dañe al alto y al pequeño ayude.

Que yo, que soy la poderosa Guerra, de tantas madres detestada en vano, aunque quien me maldice a veces yerra, 255 pues no sabe el valor desta mi mano, sé bien que en todo el orbe de la tierra seré llevada del valor hispano, en la dulce sazón que estén reinando un Carlos, un Filipo y un Fernando. 260

ENFERMEDAD Si ya la Hambre, nuestra amiga fida, no tuviera tomado con instancia a su cargo de ser fiera homicida de todos cuantos viven en Numancia, fuera de mí tu voluntad cumplida, 265 de modo que se viera la ganancia fácil y rica que el romano hubiera harto mejor de aquella que se espera.

Mas ella, en cuanto su poder alcanza, ya tiene tal al pueblo numantino, 270 que de esperar alguna buena andanza le ha tomado las sendas y el camino; mas del furor la rigurosa lanza y la influencia del contrario signo le trata con tan áspera violencia, 275 que no es menester hambre ni dolencia.

El Furor y la Rabia, tus secuaces, han tomado en sus pechos tal asiento, que, cual si fuese de romanas haces, cada cual de su sangre está sediento. 280 Muertes, incendios, iras son sus paces;
en el morir han puesto su contento,
y por quitar el triunfo a los romanos, ellos mismos se matan con sus manos.

HAMBRE Volved los ojos y veréis ardiendo 285 de la ciudad los encumbrados techos;
escuchad los suspiros que saliendo van de mil tristes lastimados pechos; oíd la voz y lamentable estruendo de bellas damas a quien, ya deshechos 290 los tiernos miembros en ceniza y fuego, no valen padre, amigo, amor ni ruego.

Cual suelen las ovejas descuidadas, siendo del fiero lobo acometidas, andar aquí y allí descarriadas, 295

con temor de perder las simples vidas, tal niños y mujeres delicadas, huyendo las espadas homicidas, andan de calle en calle, ¡oh hado insano!, su cierta muerte dilatando en vano. 300

Al pecho de la amada nueva esposa traspasa del esposo el hierro agudo;
contra la madre, ¡oh nunca vista cosa!, se muestra el hijo de piedad desnudo, y contra el hijo el padre, con rabiosa 305 clemencia levantando el brazo crudo, rompe aquellas entrañas que ha engendrado, quedando satisfecho y lastimado.

No hay plaza, no hay rincón, no hay calle o casa, que de sangre y de muertos no esté llena; 310 el hierro mata, el duro fuego abrasa, y el rigor ferocísimo condena.
Presto veréis que por el suelo rasa está la más subida y alta almena, y las casas y templos más crecidos 315 en polvo y en ceniza convertidos.

Venid: veréis que en los amados cuellos de tiernos hijos y mujer querida, Teógenes afila y prueba en ellos de su espada el cruel corte homicida, 320 y como ya, después de muertos ellos, estima en poco la cansada vida, buscando de morir un modo extraño, que causó, con el suyo, más de un daño.

GUERRA Vamos, pues, y ninguno se descuide 325 de ejecutar por eso aquí su fuerza, y a lo que digo sólo atienda y cuide, sin que de mi intención un punto tuerza.

(Vanse.)

Scena III

Sale TEÓGENES, con dos hijos pequeños y una hija y su MUJER.

TEÓGENES Cuando el paterno amor no me detiene de ejecutar la furia de mi intento, 330 considerad, mis hijos, cuál me tiene el celo de mi honroso pensamiento.
Terrible es el dolor que se previene con acabar la vida en fin violento, y más el mío, pues al hado plugo 335 que yo sea de vosotros cruel verdugo.

No quedaréis, ¡oh hijos de mi alma!, esclavos, ni el romano poderío llevará de vosotros triunfo o palma, por más que a sujetarnos alce el brío; 340 el camino, más llano que la palma, de nuestra libertad el cielo pío nos ofrece, nos muestra y nos advierte que sólo está en las manos de la muerte.

Ni vos, dulce consorte, amada mía, 345 os veréis en peligro que romanos pongan en vuestro pecho y gallardía los vanos ojos y las torpes manos.
Mi espada os sacará desta agonía, y hará que sus intentos salgan vanos, 350 pues, por más que codicia los atiza, triunfarán de Numancia en la ceniza.

Yo soy, consorte amada, el que primero di el parecer que todos pereciésemos, antes que al insufrible desafuero 355 del romano poder sujetos fuésemos, y en el morir no pienso ser postrero, ni lo serán mis hijos.

MUJER; Si pudiésemos
escaparnos, señor, por otra vía, el cielo sabe si me holgaría! 360

Mas, pues no puede ser, según yo veo, y está ya mi muerte tan cercana, lleva de nuestras vidas tú el trofeo,
y no la espada pérfida romana.
Mas, pues que he de morir, morir deseo 365 en el sagrado templo de Dïana.
Allá nos lleva, buen señor, y luego entréganos al hierro, al lazo, y fuego.

TEÓGENES Así se haga, y no nos detengamos;
que ya a morir me incita el triste hado. 370

HIJOMadre, ¿por qué lloráis? ¿Adónde vamos?
Teneos, que andar no puedo de cansado.
Mejor será, mi madre, que comamos, que la hambre me tiene fatigado.

MADREVen en mis brazos, hijo de mi vida, 375 do te daré la muerte por comida.

(Vanse luego, y salen dos muchachos huyendo; y el uno de ellos ha de ser el que se arroja de la torre, que se llama VIRIATO, y el otro, SERVIO.)

VIRIATO ¿Por dónde quieres que huyamos, Servio?

SERVIO¿Yo? Por do quisieres.

VIRIATO Camina; ¡qué flojo eres!
¡Tú ordenas que aquí muramos! 380
¿No ves, triste, que nos siguen mil hierros para matarnos?

SERVIO Imposible de escaparnos de aquéllos que nos persiguen.
Mas di: ¿qué piensas hacer, 385
o qué medio hay que nos cuadre?

VIRIATO A una torre de mi padre me pienso ir a esconder.

SERVIO Amigo, bien puedes irte; que yo estoy tan flaco y laso 390 de hambre, que un solo paso no puedo dar, ni seguirte.

VIRIATO ¿Que no quíes venir?

SERVIO ¡No puedo!

VIRIATO Si no puedes caminar, ahí te habrá de acabar 395 la hambre, la espada o miedo.
Y voyme, porque ya temo lo que el vivir desbarata:
o que la espada me mata,
o que en el fuego me quemo. 400

(Vase y sale TEÓGENES con dos espadas desnudas, y ensangrentadas las manos, y como SERVIO le ve venir, húyese y éntrase dentro.)

TEÓGENES Sangre de mis entrañas derramada, pues sois aquella de los hijos míos;
mano contra ti misma acelerada, llena de honrosos y crueles bríos; Fortuna, en daño nuestro conjurada; 405 cielos, de justa piedad vacíos, ofrecedme en tan dura amarga suerte alguna honrosa aunque cercana muerte.

¡Valientes numantinos, haced cuenta que yo soy algún pérfido romano, 410 y vengad en mi pecho vuestra afrenta, ensangrentando en él la espada y mano!
(Arroja la una espada de la mano.)

Una de estas espadas os presenta mi airada furia y mi dolor insano; que muriendo en batalla, no se siente 415 tanto el rigor del último accidente;
y el que privare del vital sosiego al otro, por señal de beneficio, entregue el desdichado cuerpo al fuego;
que éste será bien piadoso oficio. 420 Venid; ¿qué os detenéis? Acudid luego;
haced ya de mi vida sacrificio,
y esa terneza que tenéis de amigos volved en rabia fiera de enemigos.

UN NUMANTINO ¿A quién, fuerte Teógenes, invocas? 425 ¿Qué nuevo modo de morir procuras?
¿Para qué nos incitas y provocas a tantas desiguales desventuras?

TEÓGENES Valiente numantino, si no apocas con el miedo tus bravas fuerzas duras, 430 toma esa espada y mátate conmigo, ansí como si fuese tu enemigo;

que esta manera de morir me aplace en este trance más que no otra alguna.

NUMANTINO También a mí me agrada y satisface, 435 pues que lo quiere ansí nuestra fortuna; mas vamos a la plaza, adonde yace la hoguera a nuestras vidas importuna, porque el que allí venciere, pueda luego entregar el vencido al duro fuego. 440

TEÓGENES Bien dices; y camina, que se tarda el tiempo de morir como deseo, ora me mate el hierro o el fuego me arda,
que gloria nuestra en cualquier muerte veo.

(Éntranse.)

Scena IV

(CIPIÓN, JUGURTA, QUINTO FABIO y GAYO MARIO, y algunos soldados romanos.)

CIPIÓN Si no me engaña el pensamiento mío, 445
o salen mentirosas las señales que habéis visto en Numancia, del estruendo y lamentable son y ardientes llamas, sin duda alguna que recelo y temo que el bárbaro furor del enemigo 450 contra su propio pecho no se vuelva.
Ya no parece gente en la muralla, ni suenan las usadas centinelas:
todo está en calma y en silencio puesto, como si en paz tranquila y sosegada 455 estuviesen los fieros numantinos.

GAYO MARIO Presto podrás salir de aquesa duda; porque, si tú lo quieres, yo me ofrezco de subir sobre el muro, aunque me ponga al riguroso trance que se ofrece, 460 sólo por ver aquello que en Numancia hacen nuestros soberbios enemigos.

CIPIÓN Arrima, pues, ¡oh Mario!, alguna escala a la muralla y haz lo que prometes.

GAYO MARIO Id por la escala luego. Y vos, Ermilio, 465 haced que mi rodela se me traiga y la celada blanca de las plumas; que a fe que tengo de perder la vida

o sacar desta duda al campo todo.

ERMILIO Ves aquí la rodela y la celada; 470 la escala, vesla allí: la trae Olimpio.

GAYO MARIO Encomendadme a Júpiter inmenso, que yo voy a cumplir lo prometido.

CIPIÓN Alza más alta la rodela, Mario,
y encoge el cuerpo y cubre la cabeza. 475 ¡Ánimo, que ya llegas a lo alto!
¿Qué ves?

GAYO MARIO ¡Oh, santos dioses! ¿Y qué es esto?

JUGURTA ¿De qué te admiras?

GAYO MARIO De mirar de sangre un rojo lago, y de ver mil cuerpos tendidos por las calles de Numancia. 480

CIPIÓN ¿Que no hay ninguno vivo?

GAYO MARIO Ni por pienso.
A lo menos, ninguno se me ofrece en todo cuanto alcanzo con la vista.

CIPIÓN Salta, pues, dentro y míralo bien todo.

(Salta GAYO MARIO en la ciudad.)

Síguele tú también, Jugurta amigo. 485
Mas sigámosle todos.

JUGURTA No conviene
al oficio que tienes esta impresa:
sosiega el pecho, buen señor, y espera que Mario vuelva, o yo, con la respuesta de lo que pasa en la ciudad soberbia. 490 Tened bien esa escala... ¡Oh cielos justos, y cuán triste espectáculo y horrendo se me ofrece a la vista! ¡Oh caso extraño!
Caliente sangre baña todo el suelo;
cuerpos muertos ocupan plaza y calles; 495 dentro quiero saltar y verlo todo.

(Salta JUGURTA en la ciudad, y dice QUINTO FABIO.)

QUINTO FABIO Sin duda que los fieros numantinos, del bárbaro furor suyo incitados, viéndose sin remedio de salvarse, antes quisieron entregar las vidas 500 al filo agudo de sus propios hierros, que no a las vencedoras manos nuestras, aborrecidas dellos lo posible.

CIPIÓN Con uno solo que quedase vivo, no se me negaría el triunfo en Roma 505 de haber domado esta nación soberbia, enemiga mortal de nuestro nombre, constante en su opinión, presta, arrojada al peligro mayor y duro trance, de quien jamás se alabará romano 510 que vio la espalda vuelta al numantino, cuyo valor, cuya destreza en armas, me forzó con razón a usar el medio de encerrarlos cual fieras indomables, y triunfar dellos con industria y maña, 515 pues era con las fuerzas imposible.

Pero ya me parece vuelve Mario.

(GAYO MARIO torna a salir por las murallas y dice:)

GAYO MARIO En balde, ilustre general prudente, han sido nuestras fuerzas ocupadas;
en balde te has mostrado diligente, 520 pues en humo y en viento son tornadas las ciertas esperanzas de victoria, de tu industria contino aseguradas.

Del lamentable fin y triste historia de la ciudad invicta de Numancia 525 merece ser eterna la memoria.

Sacado han de su pérdida ganancia;
quitado te han el triunfo de las manos, muriendo con magnánima constancia.

Nuestros disignios han salido vanos, 530 pues ha podido más su honroso intento que toda la potencia de romanos.

El fatigado pueblo en fin violento acabó la miseria de su vida, dando triste remate al largo cuento. 535

Numancia está en un lago convertida de roja sangre, y de mil cuerpos llena, de quien fue su rigor propio homicida;
de la pesada y sin igual cadena dura de esclavitud se han escapado 540 con presta audacia de temor ajena.

En medio de la plaza levantado está un ardiente fuego temeroso, de sus cuerpos y haciendas sustentado.

A tiempo llegué a verle, que el furioso 545 Teógenes, valiente numantino, de fenecer su vida deseoso, maldiciendo su corto amargo signo, en medio se arrojaba de la llama, lleno de temerario desatino; 550
    y, al arrojarse, dijo: «¡Oh clara Fama, ocupa aquí tus lenguas y tus ojos en esta hazaña, que a cantar te llama!
    ¡Venid, romanos, ya por los despojos desta ciudad, en polvo y humo vueltos, 555 y sus flores y frutos en abrojos!» De allí, con pies y pensamientos sueltos, gran parte de la tierra he rodeado, por las calles y pasos mal revueltos, y a un solo numantino no he hallado 560 que poderte traer vivo, siquiera para que fueras dél bien informado por qué ocasión, de qué suerte o manera, cometieron tan grande desvarío, apresurando la mortal carrera. 565

CIPIÓN   ¿Estaba por ventura el pecho mío de bárbara arrogancia y muertes lleno, y de piedad justísima vacío?
    ¿Es de mi condición, por dicha, ajeno usar benignidad con el rendido, 570 como conviene al vencedor que es bueno?
    Mal, por cierto, tenían conocido el valor en Numancia de mi pecho, para vencer y perdonar nacido.

QUINTO FABIO   Jugurta te hará más satisfecho, 575 señor, de aquello que saber deseas; que, vesle, vuelve lleno de despecho.

(Torna JUGURTA por la misma muralla.)

JUGURTA Prudente general, en vano empleas más aquí tu valor: vuelve a otra parte la industria sin igual de que te arreas. 580

No hay en Numancia cosa en que ocuparte:
todos son muertos ya, sólo uno creo que queda vivo, para el triunfo darte.

Allí, en aquella torre, según veo, allí denantes un muchacho estaba, 585 turbado en vista y de gentil arreo.

CIPIÓN Si eso fuese verdad, eso bastaba para triunfar en Roma de Numancia, que es lo que más agora deseaba.

Lleguémonos allá, y haced instancia 590 cómo el muchacho venga a nuestras manos vivo, que es lo que agora es de importancia.

VIRIATO (Desde la torre.)

¿Dónde venís, o qué buscáis, romanos?
Si en Numancia queréis entrar por suerte, haréislo sin contraste, a pasos llanos; 595 pero mi lengua desde aquí os advierte que yo las llaves mal guardadas tengo desta ciudad, de quien triunfó la muerte.

CIPIÓN Por ésas, joven, deseoso vengo, y más de que tú hagas experiencia 600 si en este pecho piedad sostengo.

VIRIATO ¡Tarde, cruel, ofreces tu clemencia, pues no hay en quien usarla; que yo quiero pasar por el rigor de la sentencia que, con suceso amargo, lastimero, 605 de mis padres y patria tan querida, causó el último fin, terrible y fiero!

QUINTO FABIO Dime: ¿tienes, por suerte, aborrecida, ciego de un temerario desvarío, tu floreciente edad, tu tierna vida? 610

CIPIÓN Templa, pequeño joven, templa el brío, y subjeta el valor tuyo y pequeño, al mayor de mi honroso poderío;
que desde aquí te doy mi fe, y empeño mi palabra, que sólo de ti seas 615 tú mismo el propio y conocido dueño, y que de ricas joyas y preseas vivas lo que vivieres abastado, como yo podré darte y tú desees, si a mi te entregas y te das de grado. 620

VIRIATO Todo el furor de cuantos ya son muertos en este pueblo, en polvo reducido;
todo el huir los pactos y conciertos, ni el dar a sujeción jamás oído, sus iras y rencores descubiertos, 625 está en mi pecho, todo junto, unido.
Yo heredé de Numancia todo el brío;
¡ved si pensar vencerme es desvarío!
Patria querida, pueblo desdichado, no temas ni imagines que me admire 630 de lo que debo hacer, en ti engendrado, ni que promesa o miedo me retire, ora me falte el suelo, el cielo, el hado;
ora a vencerme todo el mundo aspire; que imposible será que yo no haga 635
a tu valor la merecida paga.

Que, si a esconderme aquí me trujo el miedo de la cercana y espantosa muerte, ella me sacará con más denuedo, con el deseo de seguir tu suerte: 640 del vil temor pasado, como puedo, haré ahora la enmienda, osado y fuerte,
y el error de mi edad tierna, inocente, pagaré con morir osadamente.

Yo os aseguro, ¡oh fuertes ciudadanos!, 645 que no falte por mí la intención vuestra de que no triunfen pérfidos romanos, si ya no fuere de ceniza nuestra.
Saldrán conmigo sus intentos vanos:
ora levanten contra mí su diestra, 650
o me aseguren con promesa cierta a vida y a regalos ancha puerta.

Teneos, romanos; sosegad el brío, y no os canséis en asaltar el muro;
que, aunque fuera mayor el poderío 655 vuestro, de no vencerme os aseguro.
Pero muéstrese ya el intento mío;
y si ha sido el amor perfecto y puro que yo tuve a mi patria tan querida, asegúrelo luego esta caída. 660

(Aquí se arroja de la torre, y dice CIPIÓN:)

CIPIÓN ¡Oh nunca vista, memorable hazaña!
¡Niño de anciano y valeroso pecho, que no sólo a Numancia, mas a España has adquerido gloria en este hecho!
¡Con tu viva virtud y heroica, estraña, 665 queda muerto y perdido mi derecho!
¡Tú con esta caída levantaste tu fama, y mis victorias derribaste!

Que fuera aún viva y en su ser Numancia, sólo porque vivieras, me holgara, 670 que tú solo has llevado la ganancia desta larga contienda, ilustre y rara.

¡Lleva, pues, niño, lleva la jactancia y la gloria que el cielo te prepara, por haber, derribándote, vencido 675 al que, subiendo, queda más caído!

(Suena una trompeta, y sale la FAMA.)

FAMA Vaya mi clara voz de gente en gente, y en dulce y suavísimo sonido llene las almas de un deseo ardiente de eternizar un hecho tan subido. 680 Alzad, romanos, la inclinada frente; llevad de aquí este cuerpo, que ha podido, en tan pequeña edad, arrebatáros el triunfo que pudiera tanto honraros; que yo, que soy la Fama pregonera, 685 tendré cuidado, en cuanto el alto cielo moviere el paso en la subida esfera, dando fuerza y vigor al bajo suelo, de publicar con lengua verdadera, con justo intento y presuroso vuelo, 690 el valor de Numancia, único y solo, de Batro a Tile y de uno al otro polo.

Indicio ha dado esta no vista hazaña del valor que en los siglos venideros tendrán los hijos de la fuerte España, 695 hijos de tales padres herederos.
No de la muerte la feroz guadaña, ni los cursos de tiempos, tan ligeros, harán que de Numancia yo no cante el fuerte brazo y ánimo constante. 700

Hallo sola en Numancia todo cuanto debe con justo título cantarse, y lo que puede dar materia al canto para poder mil siglos ocuparse:

la fuerza no vencida, el valor tanto, 705 dino de en prosa y verso celebrarse;
mas, pues de esto se encarga mi memoria, dése feliz remate a nuestra historia.

Jornada primera

Hablan en esta primera jornada las personas siguientes:

ARLAXA, mora.

ALIMUZEL, moro.

DON ALONSO DE CÓRDOBA, conde de Alcaudete, general de Orán.

DON FERNANDO DE SAAVEDRA.

GUZMÁN, capitán.

FRATÍN, ingeniero.

UN SOLDADO.

CEBRIÁN, moro, criado de ALIMUZEL.

NACOR, moro.

DON MARTÍN DE CÓRDOBA.

UNO, con una petición.

BUITRAGO, soldado.

UN PAJECILLO.

OROPESA, cautivo.

ROBLEDO, alférez.

Salen ARLAXA, mora, y ALIMUZEL, moro.

ARLAXA Es el caso, Alimuzel, que, a no traerme el cristiano, te será el Amor tirano,
y yo te seré crüel.

Quiérole preso y rendido, 5
aunque sano y sin cautela.

ALIMUZEL ¿Posible es que te desvela deseo tan mal nacido?

Conténtate que le mate, si no pudiere rendille; 10 que detener al herille
el brazo, será dislate.

Partiréme a Orán al punto, y desafiare al cristiano,
y haré por traerle sano, 15
pues no le quieres difunto.

Pero, si acaso el rigor de la cólera me incita
y su muerte solicita, ¿tengo de perder tu amor? 20

¿Está tan puesto en razón Marte, desnuda la espada, que la tenga nivelada
al peso de tu afición?

ARLAXA Alimuzel, yo confieso 25 que tienes razón en parte;
que, en las hazañas de Marte, hay muy pocas sin exceso, el cual se suele templar con la cordura y valor. 30 Yo he puesto precio en mi amor:
mira si le puedes dar.

Quiero ver la bizarría
deste que con miedo nombro, deste espanto, deste asombro 35
de toda la Berbería;
deste Fernando valiente, ensalzador de su crisma
y coco de la morisma, que nombrar su nombre siente; 40
deste Atlante de su España, su nuevo Cid, su Bernardo, su don Manuel el gallardo por una y otra hazaña.

Quiero de cerca miralle, 45
pero rendido a mis pies.

ALIMUZEL Haz cuenta que ya lo ves, puesto que dé en ayudalle todo el cielo.

ARLAXAPues ¿qué esperas?

ALIMUZELEspero a ver si te burlas; 50 aunque para mí tus burlas siempre han sido puras veras.

Comedido, como amante, soy, y sólo sé decirte que el deseo de servirte 55 me hace ser arrogante.

Puedes de mí prometerte imposibles sobrehumanos, mil prisioneros cristianos que vengan a obedecerte. 60

ARLAXA Tráeme solamente al fuerte don Fernando Saavedra, que con él veré que medra
y se mejora mi suerte;

y aun la tuya, pues te doy 65
palabra que he de ser tuya, como el hecho se concluya
a mi gusto.

ALIMUZELQuizá hoy
oirán los muros de Orán mi voz en el desafío, 70
y aun de los cielos confío, que luz y vida nos dan, que han de acudir a mi intento con suceso venturoso.

ARLAXA Parte, Alimuzel famoso. 75

ALIMUZEL Fuerzas de tu mandamiento me llevan tan alentado, que acabaré con valor
el imposible mayor
que se hubiere imaginado. 80

ARLAXA Ve en paz, que de aquesta guerra la vitoria te adivino.

(Éntrase ARLAXA.)

ALIMUZEL ¡Queda en paz, rostro divino, ángel que mora en la tierra, bizarra sobre los hombres 85 que a guerra a Marte provocan, a quien de excelencias tocan mil títulos y renombres;
en extremo poderosa
de dar tormento y placer, 90 yelo que nos hace arder en viva llama amorosa!
Queda en paz, que, sin tu sol,
ya camino en noche oscura;
resucite mi ventura 95
la muerte deste español.
Mas, ¡ay, que no he de matalle, sino prendelle y no más!
¿Quién tal deseo jamás vio, ni pudo imaginalle? 100

(Éntrase ALIMUZEL.)

(Salen DON ALONSO DE CÓRDOBA, conde de Alcaudete, general de Orán; DON FERNANDO DE SAAVEDRA; GUZMÁN, capitán; FRATÍN, ingeniero.)

FRATÍN Hase de alzar, señor, esta cortina a peso de aquel cubo, que responde
a éste que descubre la marina.

De la silla esta parte no se esconde;
mas, ¿qué aprovecha, si no está en defensa, 105 ni Almarza a nuestro intento corresponde?

DON ALONSO El cerco es cierto, y más cierta la ofensa, si ya no son cortinas y muralla de vuestros brazos la virtud inmensa.

Donde el deseo de la fama se halla, 110 las defensas se estiman en un cero, y a campo abierto salta a la batalla.

Venga, pues, la morisma, que yo espero en Dios y en vuestras manos vencedoras que volverá el león manso cordero. 115

Los Argos, centinelas veladoras, miren al mar y miren a la tierra en las del día y las nocturnas horas.

No hay disculpa al descuido que en la guerra se hace, por pequeño que parezca, 120 que pierde mucho quien en poco yerra;

y si aviniere que el cabello ofrezca la ligera ocasión, ha de tomarse, antes que a espaldas vueltas desaparezca:

que, en la guerra, el perderse o el ganarse 125
suele estar en un punto, que, si pasa, vendrá el de estar quejoso y no vengarse.

En su pajiza, pobre y débil casa se defiende el pastor del sol ardiente que el campo agosta y la montaña abrasa. 130

Quiero inferir que puede ser valiente detrás de un muro un corazón medroso, cuando a sus lados que le animan siente.

(Entra un SOLDADO.)

SOLDADO Señor, con ademán bravo y airoso, picando un alazán, un moro viene 135
y a la ciudad se acerca presuroso.

Bien es verdad que a veces se detiene y mira a todas partes, recatado, como quien miedo y osadía tiene.

Adarga blanca trae, y alfanje al lado, 140
lanza con bandereta de seguro, y el bonete con plumas adornado.

Puedes, si gustas, verle desde el muro.

DON ALONSO Bien de aquí se descubre; ya le veo.
Si es embajada, yo le doy seguro. 145

DON FERNANDO Antes es desafío, a lo que creo.

(Entra ALIMUZEL, a caballo, con lanza y adarga.)

ALIMUZEL Escuchadme, los de Orán, caballeros y soldados,
que firmáis con nuestra sangre vuestros hechos señalados. 150

Alimuzel soy, un moro
de aquellos que son llamados galanes de Melïona,
tan valientes como hidalgos.

No me trae aquí Mahoma 155
a averiguar en el campo si su secta es buena o mala, que Él tiene deso cuidado.

Tráeme otro dios más brioso, que es tan soberbio y tan manso, 160 que ya parece cordero,
y ya león irritado.
Y este dios, que así me impele,
es de una mora vasallo, que es reina de la hermosura, 165 de quien soy humilde esclavo.
No quiero decir que hiendo, que destrozo, parto o rajo;
que animoso, y no arrogante, es el buen enamorado. 170 Amo, en fin, y he dicho mucho en sólo decir que amo, para daros a entender
que puedo estimarme en algo.
Pero, sea yo quien fuere, 175 basta que me muestro armado ante estos soberbios muros, de tantos buenos guardados;
que si no es señal de loco, será indicio de que he dado 180 palabra que he de cumplilla o quedar muerto en el campo.
Y así, a ti te desafío, don Fernando el fuerte, el bravo, tan infamia de los moros 185
cuanto prez de los cristianos.
Bien se verá en lo que he dicho que, aunque haya otros Fernandos, es aquel de Saavedra
a quien a batalla llamo. 190 Tu fama, que no se encierra en límites, ha llegado
a los oídos de Arlaxa,
de la belleza milagro.
Quiere verte; mas no muerto, 195 sino preso, y hame dado
el asunto de prenderte:

mira si es pequeño el cargo.
Yo prometí de hacello, porque el que está enamorado, 200 los más arduos imposibles facilita y hace llano.
Y, para darte ocasión
de que salgas mano a mano a verte conmigo agora, 205 destas cosas te hago cargo:
que peleas desde lejos, que el arcabuz es tu amparo, que en comunidad aguijas y a solas te vas de espacio; 210 que eres Ulises nocturno, no Telamón al sol claro;
que nunca mides tu espada con otra, a fuer de hidalgo.
Si no sales, verdad digo; 215 si sales, quedará llano, ya vencido o vencedor,
que tu fama no habla en vano.
Aquí, junto a Canastel, solo te estaré esperando 220 hasta que mañana el sol llegue al Poniente su carro.
Del que fuere vencedor
ha de ser el otro esclavo:
premio rico y premio honesto. 225
Ven, que espero, don Fernando.

(Vase.)

DON ALONSO Don Fernando, ¿qué os parece?

DON FERNANDO Que es el moro comedido y valiente, y que merece ser de Amor favorecido 230 en el trance que se ofrece.

DON ALONSO Luego, ¿pensáis de salir?

DON FERNANDO Bien se puede esto inferir de su demanda y mi celo, pues ya se sabe que suelo 235
a lo que es honra acudir.

Déme vuestra señoría licencia, que es bien que salga antes que se pase el día.

DON ALONSO No es posible que ahora os valga 240
vuestra noble valentía.

No quiero que allá salgáis, porque hallaréis, si miráis
a la soldadesca ley, que obligado a vuestro rey 245 mucho más que a vos estáis.

En la guerra, usanza es vieja, y aun ley casi principal a toda razón aneja, que por causa general 250
la particular se deja.

Porque no es suyo el soldado que está en presidio encerrado sino de aquél que le encierra, y no ha de hacer otra guerra 255 sino a la que se ha obligado.

En ningún modo sois vuestro, sino del rey, y en su nombre sois mío, según lo muestro;
y yo no aventuro un hombre 260 que es de la guerra maestro por la simple niñería

de una amorosa porfía;
don Fernando, esto es verdad.

DON FERNANDO; De estraña reguridad 265 usa vuestra señoría
conmigo! ¿Qué dirá el moro?

DON ALONSO Diga lo que él más quisiere; que yo guardo aquí el decoro que la guerra pide y quiere; 270
y della ninguno ignoro.

DON FERNANDO Respóndasele, a lo menos, y sepa que por tus buenos respetos allá no salgo.

GUZMÁN No os tendrá por esto el galgo, 275
señor don Fernando, en menos.

DON ALONSO Lleve el capitán Guzmán la respuesta.

GUZMÁN Sí haré,
y, ¡voto a tal!, si me dan licencia, que yo le dé 280 al morico ganapán
tal rato, que quede frío de amor con el desafío.

DON ALONSO Respondedle cortésmente con el término prudente 285 que de vuestro ingenio fío.

(Vanse DON ALONSO y FRATÍN.)

GUZMÁN ¿Queréis que, en vez de respuesta, os le dé una mano tal,
que se concluya la fiesta?

DON FERNANDO Que me estará a mí muy mal 290
eso, es cosa manifiesta.

Sólo a mí me desafía,
y gran mengua me sería
que otro por mí pelease.
Mas si el moro me esperase 295
allí siquiera otro día, yo le saldré a responder,
a pesar de todo el mundo que lo quiera defender.

GUZMÁN ¿En qué os fundáis?

DON FERNANDO Yo me fundo 300 en esto que pienso hacer:

el lunes soy yo de ronda,
y, cuando la noche esconda la luz con su manto oscuro, arrojaréme del muro 305
a la cava.

GUZMÁN Está muy honda
y podríais peligrar.

DON FERNANDO Póneme en los pies el brío mil alas para volar.
Todo aquesto de vos fío. 310

GUZMÁN Ya sabéis que sé callar.
Dejadme salir primero,
porque de mi industria espero que saldréis bien deste hecho.

DON FERNANDO Sois amigo de provecho. 315

GUZMÁN Sí, porque soy verdadero.

(Vanse, y salen ALIMUZEL y CEBRIÁN, su criado, que en arábigo quiere decir 'lacayo o mozo de caballos'.)

ALIMUZEL Átale allí, Cebrián, al tronco de aquella palma;
repose el fuerte alazán mientras reposa mi alma 320 los cuidados que le dan.

Aquí a solas daré al llanto las riendas, o al pensar santo en las memorias de Arlaxa, en tanto que al campo baja 325
aquel que se estima en tanto.

(Baja la cabeza CEBRIÁN y vase.)

¡Venturoso tú, cristiano, que puedes a tus despojos añadir el más que humano, que es querer verte los ojos 330 del cielo que adoro en vano!

Y más que pena recibo desto que en el alma escribo con celoso desconcierto:
que a mí me quieren ver muerto 335
y a ti te quieren ver vivo.

Pero yo no haré locura
semejante; que, si venzo,
o por fuerza o por ventura, daré a mis glorias comienzo, 340
dándote aquí sepultura.

Mas, si te hago morir, ¿cómo podré yo cumplir
lo que Arlaxa me ha mandado?
¡Oh triste y dudoso estado, 345 insufrible de sufrir!

Parleras aves, que al viento esparcís quejas de amor, ¿qué haré en el mal que siento?
¿Daré la rienda al rigor, 350
o al cortés comedimiento?

Mas démosla al sueño agora;
perdonadme, hermosa mora, si aplico sin tu licencia este alivio a la dolencia 355 que en mi alma triste mora.

(Échase a dormir, y sale al instante NACOR, moro, con un turbante verde.)

NACOR Mahoma, ya que el Amor en mis dichas no consiente, muéstrame tú tu favor:
mira que soy tu pariente, 360
el infelice Nacor.

Jarife soy de tu casta,
y no me respeta el asta
de Amor que blande en mi pecho, un blanco a sus tiros hecho, 365

do todas sus flechas gasta.

Y más, y no sé qué es esto, que, con ser enamorado,
soy de tan bajo supuesto, que no hay conejo acosado 370
más cobarde ni más presto.

Desto será buen testigo el ver aquí mi enemigo dormido, y no osar tocallo, deseando de matallo 375
por venganza y por castigo.

Que esté celoso y con miedo, por Alá, que es cosa nueva.
¿Llegaré, o estarme he quedo?
¿Cortaré en segura prueba 380
este gordiano enredo?

Que si éste quito delante, podrá ser que vuelva amante el pecho de Arlaxa ingrato.
Muérome porque no mato; 385
oso y tiemblo en un instante.

(Entra el capitán GUZMÁN, con espada y rodela.)

GUZMÁN ¿Eres tú el desafiador de don Fernando, por dicha?

NACORNo tengo yo ese valor; que el corazón con desdicha 390 es morada del temor.

Aquél es que está allí echado;
moro tan afortunado,
que Arlaxa le manda y mira.

GUZMÁN Paréceme que suspira. 395

NACOR Sí hará, que está enamorado.

GUZMÁN ¡Alimuzel!

ALIMUZEL ¿Quién me llama?

GUZMÁN Mal acudirás, durmiendo, al servicio de tu dama.

ALIMUZEL En el sueño va adquiriendo 400 fuerzas la amorosa llama, porque en él se representan visiones que me atormentan, obligaciones que guarde, miedos que me hacen cobarde 405
y celos que más me alientan.

Mirándote estoy, y veo
cuán propio es de la mujer tener extraño deseo.
Cosas hay en ti que ver, 410
no que admirar.

GUZMÁN Yo lo creo;
pero, ¿por qué dices eso?

ALIMUZEL Don Fernando, yo confieso que tu buen talle y buen brío llega y se aventaja al mío, 415 pero no en muy grande exceso;
y si no es por el gran nombre que entre la morisma tienes de ser en las armas hombre, ninguna cosa contienen 420 que enamores ni que asombre;

y yo no sé por qué Arlaxa tanto se angustia y trabaja por verte, y vivo, que es más.

GUZMÁN Engañado, moro, estás: 425 tu vano discurso ataja, que yo no soy don Fernando.

ALIMUZEL Pues, ¿quién eres?

GUZMÁN Un su amigo
y embajador.

ALIMUZEL Dime cuándo
espera verse conmigo, 430
porque le estoy aguardando.

GUZMÁN Has de saber, moro diestro, que el sabio general nuestro que salga no le consiente.

ALIMUZEL Pues, ¿por qué?

GUZMÁN Porque es prudente 435
y en la guerra gran maestro.
Teme el cerco que se espera, y no quiere aventurar
en empresa tan ligera

una espada que en cortar 440 es entre muchas primera.

Pero dice don Fernando que le estés aquí aguardando hasta el lunes, que él te jura salir en la noche oscura, 445 aunque rompa cualquier bando.

Si aquesto no te contenta, y quieres probar la suerte con menos daño y afrenta, tu brazo gallardo y fuerte 450 con éste, que es flaco, tienta, y a tu mora llevarás,
si me vences, quizá más que en llevar a don Fernando.

ALIMUZELNo estoy en eso pensando; 455 muy descaminado vas.

No eres tú por quien me envía Arlaxa, y, aunque te prenda, no saldré con mi porfía.
Haz que don Fernando entienda 460 que le aguardaré ese día que pide, y si le venciere, y entonces tu gusto fuere probarme en el marcial juego, mi voluntad hará luego 465
lo que la tuya quisiere; que ya sabes que no es dado dejar la empresa primera por la segunda al soldado.

GUZMÁNEs verdad.

ALIMUZELDesa manera 470

bien quedará desculpado.

GUZMÁN Dices muy bien.

ALIMUZEL Sí, bien digo.
Vuélvete, y dile a tu amigo que le espero y que no tarde.

GUZMÁN Tu Mahoma, Alí, te guarde. 475

ALIMUZEL Tu Cristo vaya contigo.

(Vase GUZMÁN.)

Nacor, ¿qué es esto? ¿A qué vienes?

NACORA ver cómo en esta empresa tan peligrosa te avienes;
y por Alá que me pesa 480
de ver que en punto la tienes, que el de tu muerte está a punto.

ALIMUZEL ¿En qué modo?

NACOREn que barrunto que, si de noche peleas, sobre ti no es mucho veas 485
todo un ejército junto.

Esto de no estar en mano de don Fernando el salir, tenlo por ligero y vano;

que se suele prevenir 490
con astucias el cristiano.

De noche quieren cogerte, porque al matarte o prenderte, aun el sol no sea testigo.

No creas a tu enemigo; 495

Alí, procura volverte,

que bien disculpado irás con Arlaxa, pues has hecho lo que es posible, y aun más.

ALIMUZELConsejos de sabio pecho 500

son, Nacor, los que me das;

pero no puedo admitillos,

ni menos con gusto oílos;

que tiene el Amor echados

a mis oídos, candados; 505

a los pies y alma, grillos.

NACOR Para mejor ocasión

te guarda, porque es cordura prevenir a la intención del que a su salvo procura 510 su gloria y tu perdición.

Ven, que a Arlaxa daré cuenta de modo que diga y sienta que eres vencedor osado, pues si no sale el llamado, 515

en sí se queda la afrenta.

Cuanto más, que cuando venga el cerco desta ciudad, que ya no hay quien le detenga, podrás, a tu voluntad, 520

hacer lo que más convenga;

que entonces saldrá el cristiano, si es arrogante y lozano,

al campo abierto, sin duda.

ALIMUZEL Bien es, Nacor, que yo acuda 525
a tu consejo, que es sano.

Ven y vamos, pues podré,
en este cerco que dices, cumplir lo que aquí falté;
mas mira que me autorices 530 con Arlaxa.

NACOR Sí haré.
Aparte.

Sentirá Arlaxa la mengua que tanto al cristiano amengua, haciéndole della alarde;
vos quedaréis por cobarde, 535
o mal me andará la lengua.

(Vanse.)

(Salen DON ALONSO DE CÓRDOBA, general de Orán, conde de Alcaudete, y su hermano, DON MARTÍN DE CÓRDOBA, y DON FERNANDO DE SAAVEDRA.)

CONDE Señor don Martín, conviene que vuesa merced acuda
a Mazalquivir, que tiene necesidad de la ayuda 540 que vuestro esfuerzo contiene; que allí acudirá primero
el enemigo ligero.
Mas, que venzáis no lo dudo; que el cobarde está desnudo, 545
aunque se vista de acero.

En su muchedumbre estriba aquesta mora canalla,
que así se nos muestra esquiva;
mas, cuando defensa halla, 550 se humilla, prostra y derriba.

Sus gustos, sus algazaras, si bien en ello reparas,
son el canto del medroso;
calla el león animoso 555
entre las balas y jaras.

DON MARTÍN Por mi caudillo y mi hermano te obedezco, y haré cuanto fuere, señor, en mi mano; que ni de gritos me espanto, 560 ni de tumulto pagano.

Dame, señor, municiones, que en el trance que me pones pienso, si no faltan ellas, poner sobre las estrellas 565
los españoles blasones.

(Entra UNO con una petición.)

UNO Señor, dame licencia que te lea aquesta petición.

CONDE Lee en buen hora.

UNO Doña Isabel de Avellaneda, en nombre de todas las mujeres desta tierra, 570 dice que llegó ayer a su noticia que, por temor del cerco que se espera, quieres que quede la ciudad vacía de gente inútil, enviando a España las mujeres, los viejos y los niños: 575 resolución prudente, aunque medrosa.

Y apelan desto a ti, de ti, diciendo que ellas se ofrecen de acudir al muro, ya con tierra o fajina, o ya con lienzos bañados en vinagre, con que limpien 580 el sudor de los fieros combatientes que asistan al rigor de los asaltos; que tomarán la sangre a los heridos;
que las más pequeñuelas harán hilas, dando la mano al lienzo y voz al cielo; 585 con tiernas virginales rogativas, pidiendo a Dios misericordia, en tanto que los robustos brazos de sus padres defiendan sus murallas y sus vidas; que los niños darán de buena gana 590 para enviar a España con los viejos, pues no pueden servir de cosa alguna;
mas ellas, que por útiles se tienen,
no irán de ningún modo, porque piensan, por Dios, y por su ley y por su patria, 595
morir sirviendo a Dios, y en la muerte, cuando el hado les fuere inexorable, dar el último vale a sus maridos, o ya cerrar los ojos a sus padres con tristes y cristianos sentimientos. 600 En fin, serán, señor, de más provecho que daño, por lo cual te ruegan todas que revoques, señor, lo que ordenaste, en cuanto toca a las mujeres sólo, que en ello harás a Dios servicio grande, 605 merced a ellas y favor inmenso.
Esto la petición, señor, contiene.

CONDENunca tal me pasó por pensamiento;
nunca tanto el temor se ha apoderado de mí, que hiciese prevención tan triste. 610

Por respuesta llevad que yo agradezco y admito su gallardo ofrecimiento, y que de su valor tendrá la fama cuidado de escribirle y de grabarle en láminas de bronce, porque viva 615 siglos eternos. Y esto les respondo, y andad con Dios.

UNOPor cierto que han mostrado de espartanas valor, de argivas brío.

(Entra el capitán GUZMÁN.)

CONDEPues, capitán Guzmán, ¿qué dice el moro?

GUZMÁN Ya se fue malcontento.

DON FERNANDO Aparte.

¿Es ido cierto? 620

GUZMÁN Aparte.

Aguardándote está, porque es valiente
y discreto además en lo que muestra.

DON FERNANDO Aparte.

Saldré, sin duda.

GUZMÁN Aparte.

No sé si lo aciertas,
que está muy cerca el cerco.

DON FERNANDO Aparte.

Si le venzo,
presto me volveré; si soy vencido, 625 poca falta haré, pues poco valgo.

CONDE;Bravo parece el moro!

GUZMÁNBravo, cierto,
y muy enamorado y comedido.

(Entra a esta sazón BUITRAGO, un soldado, con la espada sin vaina, oleada con un orillo, tiros de sogá; finalmente, muy malparado. Trae una tablilla con demanda de las ánimas de purgatorio, y pide para ellas. Y esto de pedir para las ánimas es cuento verdadero, que yo lo vi, y la razón porque pedía se dice adelante.)

BUITRAGODenme para las ánimas, señores, pues saben que me importa.

CONDE;Oh buen Buitrago! 630 ¿Cuánto ha caído hoy?

BUITRAGO Hasta tres cuartos.

DON MARTÍN ¿Dellos, qué habéis comprado?

BUITRAGO Casi nada:
una asadura sola y cien sardinas.

DON MARTÍN Harto habrá para hoy.

BUITRAGO ¡Por Santo Nuflo, que apenas hay para que masque un diente! 635

DON MARTÍN Comeréis hoy conmigo.

BUITRAGO Dese modo,
habrá para almorzar en lo comprado.

DON MARTÍN ¿Y la ración?

BUITRAGO ¿Qué? ¿La ración? Ya asiste a un lado del estómago, y no ocupa cuanto una casa de ajedrez pequeña. 640

DON FERNANDO ¡Gran comedor!

GUZMÁN Tan grande, que le ha dado el conde esta demanda porque pueda sustentarse con ella.

BUITRAGO¿Qué aprovecha?
Que, como saben todos que no hay ánima a quien haga decir sólo un responso, 645 si me dan medio cuarto, es por milagro;
y así, pienso pedir para mi cuerpo,
y no para las ánimas.

DON MARTÍN Sería
gran discreción.

BUITRAGO¡Oh, pese a mi linaje!, ¿No sabe todo el mundo que, si como 650 por seis, que suelo pelear por siete?
¡Cuerpo de Dios conmigo! Denme ripio suficiente a la boca, y denme moros a las manos a pares y a millares:
verán quién es Buitrago y si merece 655
comer por diez, pues que pelea por veinte.

CONDE Tiene razón Buitrago; mas agora, si llega el cerco, mostrará sus bríos, y haré yo que le den siete raciones con tal que cese la demanda.

BUITRAGO Cese, 660
que entonces no habrá lengua, y habrá manos;
no hay pedir, sino dar; no hay sacar almas, del purgatorio entonces, sino espiches, para meter en el infierno muchas de la mora canalla que se espera. 665

(Un PAJECILLO diga:)

PAJECILLO¡Daca el alma, Buitrago, daca el alma!

BUITRAGO;Hijo de puta, y puto; y miente, y calle!
¿No sabe el cornudillo, sea quien fuere, que, aunque tenga cien cuerpos y cien almas para dar por mi rey, no daré una 670 si me la piden dese modo infame?

DON MARTÍN Otra vez, Cereceda.

PAJECILLO;Daca el alma!

BUITRAGO;Por vida de...!

CONDEBuitrigo, con paciencia:
no la deis vos, por más que os la demanden.

BUITRAGO;Que tenga atrevimiento un pajecillo 675 de pedirme a mí el alma! ¡Voto a Cristo, que, a no estar aquí el conde, don hediondo, que os sacara la vuestra a puntillazos, aunque me lo impidiera el mismo diablo por prenda suya!

CONDENo haya más, Buitrigo; 680 guardad vuestra alma, y dadnos vuestras manos, que serán menester, yo os lo prometo.

BUITRAGODenme para las ánimas agora, que todo se andará.

DON MARTÍN Tomad.

BUITRAGO; Oh invicto
don Martín, generoso! Por mi diestra, 685 que he de ser tu soldado, si, por dicha, vas a Mazalquivir, como se ha dicho.

DON MARTÍN Seréis mi camarada y compañero.

BUITRAGO; Vive Dios, que eres bravo caballero!

(Vanse, y sale ARLAXA y OROPESA, su cautivo.)

ARLAXA ¡Mucho tarda Alimuzel! 690
Cristiano, no sé qué sea.

OROPESA Fuiste, señora, con él otra segunda Medea, famosa por ser crüel.
A una empresa le enviaste 695 que parece que mostraste que te era en odio su vida.

ARLAXA Yo fui parte en su partida, tú el todo, pues la causaste.

Las alabanzas estrañas 700 que aplicaste a aquel Fernando, contándome sus hazañas, se me fueron estampando en medio de las entrañas;
y de allí nació un deseo 705
no lascivo, torpe o feo, aunque vano por curioso,

de ver a un hombre famoso más de los que siempre veo.

Más que discreta, curiosa, 710
ordené que Alimuzel fuese a la empresa dudosa;
no por mostrarme con él ingrata ni rigurosa.

Y muéstrame su tardanza 715 que me engañó la esperanza, y que es premio merecido del deseo mal nacido tenelle quien no le alcanza.

Yo tengo un alma bizarra 720
y varonil, de tal suerte, que gusto del que desgarrar y más allá de la muerte tira atrevido la barra.

Huélgome de ver a un hombre 725 de tal valor y tal nombre, que con los dientes tarace, con las manos despedace
y con los ojos asombre.

OROPESA Pues si viene Alimuzel, 730
y a don Fernando trae preso, no verás, señora, en él ninguna cosa en exceso
de las que te he dicho dél.

Tendrásme por hablador, 735
y será más el valor
de Alimuzel conocido, pues la fama del vencido
se pasa en el vencedor.

Pero si acaso da el cielo 740
a don Fernando vitoria, cierto está tu desconsuelo, pues su fama en tu memoria alzará más alto el vuelo, y de no poderle ver, 745 vendrá el deseo a crecer

de velle.

ARLAXATienes razón:
parienta es la confusión del discurso de mujer.

(Entran ALIMUZEL y NACOR.)

ALIMUZEL Dadle la mano, señora, 750
o los pies a aqueste esclavo, que con el alma os adora.

ARLAXA¿Cómo en corazón tan bravo tanta humildad, señor, mora?
Alzaos, no estéis dese modo. 755

ALIMUZELA tu gusto me acomodo.

ARLAXA¿Sois vencido, o vencedor?

ALIMUZELTodo lo dirá Nacor, que se halló presente a todo.

NACOR No quiso el desafiado 760 acudir al desafío,
aunque bien se ha disculpado.

ARLAXA¿Ése es soldado de brío, tan temido y alabado?

¿Cómo pudo dar disculpa 765 buena de tan fea culpa?

NACORSu general le detuvo, que él ninguna culpa tuvo, aunque Alimuzel le culpa;
que él saliera al campo abierto, 770
a esperarle un día más, según quedó en el concierto.

ALIMUZELNacor, endiablado estás;
no sé cómo no te he muerto.

NACOR Mal haces de amenazarme, 775 ni, soberbio, ocasión darme para que contigo rife,
pues sabes que soy jarife,
y que pecas en tocarme.

ARLAXA Paso, mi señor valiente, 780 que entiendo deste contraste, sin que ninguno le cuente, que ni él salió, ni esperaste.

NACOREs así.

ALIMUZEL¡Un jarife miente!
¡Por Alá, que es gran maldad! 785

NACOR¿No se muestra la verdad

en que te vienes sin él?

ALIMUZEL;Pude yo verme con él, encerrado en la ciudad?

¿No sabes lo que pasó, 790
y la embajada que trajo quien por él me respondió?

NACORSé que a esperar se redujo el trance, y más no sé yo.

ALIMUZEL ¿Por consejo no me diste 795 que me volviese?

NACORHiciste
mal; yo bien, porque pensaba que a un cobarde aconsejaba.

ALIMUZEL;El diablo se me reviste!
¡Incita a hacerte pedazos! 800

NACORJarife soy; no me toques con los dientes ni los brazos, ni a que te dé me provoques duros y fuertes abrazos; que ya sabes que Mahoma 805 por suya la causa toma
del jarife, y le defiende, y al soberbio que le ofende
a sus pies le humilla y doma.

(Entran dos moros y traen cautivo a DON FERNANDO, en cuerpo y sin espada.)

ALIMUZEL ¿Qué es aquesto?

PRIMER MOROA este cristiano 810 cautivó tu escuadra ayer junto a Orán.

DON FERNANDO ¡Miente el villano!
Yo me entregué, sin poner pies a huir ni a espada mano.

Si no quisiera entregarme, 815 no pudieran cautivarme
tres escuadras, ni aun trecientas.

ALIMUZEL Estás cautivo y revientas de bravo.

DON FERNANDO Puedo alabarme.

ARLAXA ¿Quién eres?

DON FERNANDO Soy un soldado 820 que me he venido a entregar a vuestra prisión de grado, por no poder tolerar
ser valiente y mal pagado.

ARLAXA Luego, ¿quieres ser cautivo? 825

DON FERNANDO De serlo gusto recibo;
dadme patrón que me mande.

ARLAXA ¡Qué disparate tan grande!

DON FERNANDO Yo de disparates vivo.

OROPESA Éste es don Fernando, cierto, 830 el que yo tanto alabé,
y ni viene preso o muerto,
ni cómo viene no sé,
ni atino su desconcierto.
El callar será acertado, 835 hasta hablalle en apartado, que me admira su venida.

ALIMUZEL ¿Seréis, Arlaxa, servida de que os sirva este soldado?
Que si ayer fue el primer día 840 que salió de Orán, dirá si hice lo que debía;
que yo entiendo que sabrá
mi valor o cobardía.
Dime: ¿oíste un desafío 845 que hizo un moro vacío
de ventura y de fe lleno?

DON FERNANDO Y fue tenido por bueno, bien criado y de gran brío.
El retado no salió, 850 que lo estorbó el general por cierta ley que halló;
pero después, por su mal, que vino al campo sé yo, pensando de hallar allí 855

al valeroso Alí, porque salimos los dos:
él a combatir con vos,
yo para venir aquí,
que ya os conozco en el talle. 860

ALIMUZEL Pues esto es verdad, señora, bien será que Nacor calle.

OROPESA ¡Oh! Si llegase la hora en que pudiese hablalle, ¡qué de cosas le diría! 865

NACOR ¿No se vee tu cobardía, si el cristiano salió a verte, y tú quisiste volverte
sin esperar más de un día?

ALIMUZEL Si tú no hicieras alarde 870 de tu ingenio caviloso, yo volviera nunca o tarde.

NACOR Consejos de religioso presto los toma el cobarde.

ALIMUZEL Arlaxa, yo volveré, 875
y a tu presencia traeré,
o muerto o preso, al cristiano.

NACOR Ya tu vuelta será en vano.

ARLAXA No le quiero, déjale; que, pues a la voz primera 880 no saltó de la muralla
y empuñó la espada fiera, la fama que en él se halla no debe ser verdadera;
y así, ya no quiero velle, 885 aunque, si puedes traelle sin tu daño, darme has gusto.

DON FERNANDO Es don Fernando robusto y habrá que hacer en prendelle.
Conózcole como a mí, 890
y sé que es de condición que sabrá volver por sí, y aun buscará la ocasión para responder a Alí.

ARLAXA ¿Es valiente?

DON FERNANDO Como yo. 895

ARLAXA ¿De buen rostro?

DON FERNANDO A queso no, porque me parece mucho.

ALIMUZEL ¡Todo esto con rabia escucho!

ARLAXA ¿Tiene amor?

DON FERNANDO Ya le dejó.

ARLAXA ¿Luego túvole?

DON FERNANDO Sí creo. 900

ARLAXA ¿Será mudable?

DON FERNANDO No es fuerza que sea eterno un deseo.

ARLAXA ¿Tiene brío?

DON FERNANDO Y tiene fuerza.

ARLAXA ¿Es galán?

DON FERNANDO De buen aseo.

ARLAXA ¿Raja y hiende?

DON FERNANDO Tronca y parte. 905

ARLAXA ¿Es diestro?

DON FERNANDO Como otro Marte.

ARLAXA¿Atrevido?

DON FERNANDOEs un león.

ARLAXAPartes todas éstas son, cristiano, para adorarle,
a ser moro.

ALIMUZELCalla, Arlaxa, 910
pues tienes aquí delante quien por tu gusto trabaja.

ARLAXAGusto yo de un arrogante que bravea, hiende y raja.
Vuelve, Alí, por el cristiano; 915 que te doy mi fe y mi mano, si le traes, de ser tu esposa.

DON FERNANDOTú le mandas una cosa donde ha de sudar en vano.

NACOR ¡Soberbios sois los cristianos! 920

DON FERNANDOEslo, al menos, quien se alaba.

ALIMUZELAquí hay quien con ufanos bríos quitará la clava
a Hércules de las manos;
aquí hay quien, a pesar 925
de quien lo quiera estorbar, Arlaxa, hará lo que mandas.

DON FERNANDO A veces se mandan mandas que nunca se piensan dar, y a las veces las promete 930 quien no las quiere cumplir ni puede.

NACOR ¿Quién te mete
a ti en eso?

DON FERNANDO Sé decir que en parte a mí me compete; que es don Fernando mi amigo, 935
y soy cierto y buen testigo del mucho valor que encierra.

ALIMUZEL Traen los casos de la guerra diversos fines consigo.
El valiente y fanfarrón 940 tal vez se ha visto vencido del flaco de corazón;
que Alá da ayuda al partido que defiende la razón.

DON FERNANDO Pues, ¿qué razón lleva en éste 945 Alí?

OROPESA Tú harás que te cueste la vida tu lengua necia.

ALIMUZEL Si al que ama el Amor precia, su santo favor me preste;

que, sin razón y con él, 950
a don Fernando el valiente vencerá el flaco Muzel.

ARLAXA;Qué plática impertinente!

ALIMUZEL;Qué corazón tan crüel!

ARLAXA Quede el cristiano conmigo; 955 Alá vaya, Alí, contigo
y con Nacor.

NACORÉl te guarde.

ARLAXAVolvedme a ver esta tarde.

(Éntranse todos, sino DON FERNANDO y OROPESA.)

OROPESA;Hola, soldado! ¿A quién digo?
¿Qué noramala, señor, 960 os ha traído a este puesto tan contrario a vuestro honor?

DON FERNANDOEn buena te diré presto
de mi fortuna el rigor:

«No quiso el general mío 965 que saliese al desafío que me hizo aqueste moro.
Yo, por guardar el decoro que corresponde a mi brío, me descolgué por el muro, 970

y, cuando pensé hallar
lo que aun agora procuro, un escuadrón vino a dar conmigo, estando seguro.

Era la noche cerrada, 975
y, como vi defraudada
mi esperanza tan del todo,
con el tiempo me acomodo.
Mentí; rendíles la espada;
díjeles que mi intención 980 era venir a ponerme
de grado en su sujeción, y que quisiesen traerme
a reconocer patrón.

Dijéronme que este Alí 985
era su señor, y así, vine sin fuerza y forzado.» De todo cuenta te he dado;
no hay más que saber de mí.

Calla mi nombre, que veo 990 que aquesta mora hermosa tiene de verme deseo.

OROPESA De tu fama valerosa que está enamorada creo.

No te des a conocer, 995 que deseos de mujer
se mudan a cada paso.

DON FERNANDO Vuelve Muzel; habla paso.

OROPESA No sé qué pueda querer.

(Entra ALIMUZEL.)

ALIMUZEL    Oropesa, escucha y calla, 1000 y guárdame aquel secreto que en tu discreción se halla, que a tu bondad le prometo con la mía de premialla.

Yo te daré libertad, 1005
y a ti, si tu voluntad
fuere de volverte a Orán, mis designios te darán
honrosa comodidad.

Sólo os pido, en cambio desto, 1010 que me descubráis un modo tan honroso y tan compuesto que en las partes y en el todo eche de hidalguía el resto, el cual me vaya mostrando 1015 en qué parte, cómo o cuándo, ya en el campo o estacada, pueda yo medir mi espada con la del bravo Fernando.

Quizá está en su vencimiento, 1020 como Arlaxa significa,
de mi bien el cumplimiento, si ya mi esperanza rica
no la empobrece su intento;

que debe de ser doblado, 1025 pues de lo que me ha mandado todo se puede temer,
y no hay bien que venga a ser seguro en el desdichado.

DON FERNANDO    Yo te daré a tu enemigo 1030
a toda tu voluntad,
como estoy aquí contigo,
sin usar de deslealtad,
que nunca albergó conmigo.

ALIMUZEL No es enemigo el cristiano; 1035 contrario, sí; que el lozano deseo de Arlaxa bella
presta para esta querella la voz, el intento y mano.

DON FERNANDO Presto te pondré con él, 1040 y fía aquesto de mí, comedido Alimuzel;
y aun pienso hacer por ti
lo que un amigo fiel, porque la ley que divide 1045 nuestra amistad no me impide de mostrar hidalgo el pecho; antes, con lo que es bien hecho se acomoda, ajusta y mide.
    Ve en paz, que yo pensaré 1050 el tiempo que más convenga para hacer lo que haré.

ALIMUZEL Mahoma sobre ti venga, y lo que puede te dé.

(Vase.)

DON FERNANDO ¡Gentil carga!

OROPESAY gentil presa. 1055

DON FERNANDO ¿Pesa mucho?

OROPESAY Poco pesa,

que está en fuego convertida.

DON FERNANDO Mira que importa la vida tener secreto, Oropesa.

(Vanse, y salen riñendo el capitán GUZMÁN con el alférez ROBLEDOS.)

GUZMÁN Señor alférez Robledo, 1060 póngase luego entredicho a esa plática.

ROBLEDOS No puedo;
que, lo que sin miedo he dicho,
no lo desdigo por miedo.

O él se fue a renegar, 1065
o hizo mal en dejar
su presidio en tiempos tales.

GUZMÁN De los hombres principales no se debe así hablar.

El renegar no es posible, 1070
y si en ello os afirmáis, mentís.

(Metén mano.)

ROBLEDOS ¡Oh trance terrible!

GUZMÁN Agora sí que os halláis en más dudoso imposible si queréis satisfaceros. 1075

(Entra el CONDE DE ALCAUDETE y DON MARTÍN DE CÓRDOBA, acompañados.)

CONDE; Paso! ¡Teneos, caballeros!
¿Por qué ha sido la pendencia?

GUZMÁN; Más agudo es de conciencia este hidalgo que de aceros!

Ha afirmado que se es ido 1080
a renegar don Fernando, y, ¡vive Dios!, que ha mentido, y mentirá cada y cuando lo diga.

CONDE; Descomedido!
Llévenle luego a una torre. 1085

GUZMÁN; Ni me afrenta ni me corre este agravio, porque nace de la justicia que hace al que su amigo socorre.

CONDE Vaya el alférez, también, 1090 y mientras que el cerco pasa hagan treguas.

ROBLEDO Hazme un bien:
que sea la torre mi casa.

DON MARTÍN; Sí, porque juntos no estén.

(Llevan al alférez.)

UNO Señor, la guarda ha descubierto agora 1095 un bajel por la banda de Poniente.

DON MARTÍN¿Qué vela trae?

UNOEntiendo que latina.

CONDEVamos a recibirle a la marina.

FIN DEL PRIMER ACTO

Segunda jornada

Los que hablan en ella son:

ARLAXA.

DON FERNANDO.

OROPESA.

NACOR.

VOZMEDIANO, anciano.

DOÑA MARGARITA, doncella, en hábito de hombre.

BUITRAGO.

DON MARTÍN.

EL CONDE.

GUZMÁN, el capitán.

ALIMUZEL.

BAIRÁN, renegado.

UN MORO.

Salen ARLAXA, DON FERNANDO y OROPESA.

ARLAXA    ¿Cómo te llamas, cristiano, que tu nombre aún no he sabido?

DON FERNANDO Es mi nombre Juan Lozano; nombre que es bien conocido por el distrito africano. 5

ARLAXA    Nunca le he oído decir.

DON FERNANDO Pues él suele competir con el del bravo Fernando.

ARLAXA ¡Mucho te vas alabando!

DON FERNANDO Alá bome sin mentir. 10

ARLAXA    Pues, ¿qué hazañas has tú hecho?

DON FERNANDO He hecho las mismas que él, con el mismo esfuerzo y pecho, y ya me he visto con él en más de un marcial estrecho. 15

ARLAXA ¿Es tu amigo?

DON FERNANDO Es otro yo.

ARLAXA ¿Por ventura, di, salió
a combatir con mi moro?

DON FERNANDO Siempre de bravo el decoro en todo trance guardó. 20

ARLAXA Dese modo, Alí es cobarde.

DON FERNANDO Eso no; que pudo ser salir don Fernando tarde, cuando no pudiese hacer Alí de su esfuerzo alarde. 25

Y imagino que este moro jarife, no con decoro
de amigo, a Muzel da culpa.

ARLAXA De su esfuerzo y de su culpa toda la verdad ignoro. 30

DON FERNANDO Haz cuenta que te trae preso a Fernando tu Muzel; ¿qué piensas hacer por eso?

ARLAXA Estimaré mucho en él de su esfuerzo el grande exceso. 35 Tendré en menos al cristiano, cuyo nombre sobrehumano me incita y mueve el deseo

de velle.

OROPESA Pues yo le veo
en sólo ver a Lozano. 40

ARLAXA ¿Que tanto se le parece?

OROPESA Yo no sé qué diferencia entre los dos se me ofrece;
ésta es su misma presencia,
y el brazo que le engrandece. 45

ARLAXA ¿Qué hazañas ha hecho ese hombre para alcanzar tan gran nombre como tiene?

OROPESA Escucha una
de su esfuerzo y su fortuna, que podrá ser que te asombre: 50

«Dio fondo en una caleta de Argel una galeota, casi de Orán cinco millas, poblada de turcos toda.

Dieron las guardas aviso 55 al general, y, con tropa de hasta trecientos soldados, se fue a requerir la costa.

Estaba el bajel tan junto de tierra, que se le antoja 60 dar sobre él: ved qué batalla tan nueva y tan peligrosa.

Dispararon los soldados con priesa una vez y otra; tanto, que dejan los turcos 65

casi la cubierta sola.
No hay ganchos para acercar
a tierra la galeota, pero el bravo don Fernando ligero a la mar se arroja. 70 Ase recio de gúmena,
que ya el turco apriesa corta, porque no le dan lugar
de que el áncora recoja.
Tiró hacia sí con tal fuerza, 75 que, cual si fuera una góndola, hizo que el bajel besase el arena con la popa.
Salió a tierra y della un salto dio al bajel, cosa espantosa, 80 que piensa el turco que el cielo cristianos llueve, y se asombra.
Reconocido su miedo,
don Fernando, con voz ronca de la cólera y trabajo, 85 grita: "¡Vitoria, vitoria!" La voz da al viento, y la mano
a la espada vitoriosa, con que matando y hiriendo corrió de la popa a proa.» 90 Él solo rindió el bajel;
mira, Arlaxa, si ésta es obra para que la fama diga los bienes que dél pregona.
Probado han bien sus aceros 95
los lindos de Meliona, los elches de Tremecén
y los leventes de Bona.
Cien moros ha muerto en trances, siete en estacada sola, 100
docientos sirven al remo, ciento tiene en las mazmorras.

Es muy humilde en la paz,
y en la guerra no hay persona que le iguale, ya cristiana, 105
o ya que sirva a Mahoma.

ARLAXA ¡Oh, qué famoso español!

OROPESAHércules, Héctor, Roldán
se hicieron en su crisol.

ARLAXAMEJOR no le ha visto Orán. 110

OROPESANI tal no le ha visto el sol.

(Entra NACOR.)

ARLAXA Aqueste Nacor me enfada;
no me dejéis sola.

OROPESAHonrada
te le muestra y comedida.

DON FERNANDODA a sus razones salida: 115 que espere, y no espere en nada.

NACOR Hermosa Arlaxa, yo estoy resuelto en traerte preso al cristiano: y así, voy a Orán luego.

ARLAXABuen suceso 120
y agüero espero y te doy, porque irás en gracia mía,
y en verte tomó alegría desusada el corazón.

NACORTienes, Arlaxa, razón; 125 que yo la tendré algún día de rogarte que me quieras.

ARLAXADéjate agora de burlas, pues partes a tantas veras.

DON FERNANDOHará Nacor, si no burlas, 130 sus palabras verdaderas;
    que amante favorecido
es un león atrevido,
y romperá, por su dama, por la muerte y por la llama 135
del fuego más encendido.

OROPESA Concluyeras tú esta empresa harto mejor que no él.

DON FERNANDOCalla y escucha, Oropesa.

NACORYa en este caso, Muzel 140
por vencido se confiesa, pues no hace diligencia por traer a tu presencia el que yo te traeré presto.

ARLAXA Pártete, Nacor, con esto, 145 que gusto y te doy licencia.

NACOR Dame las manos, señora, por el favor con que animas al alma que más te adora.

ARLAXA En poco, Nacor, te estimas, 150 pues te humillas tanto agora.
Eres jarife; levanta,
que verte a mis pies me espanta.
¿Qué dirá desto Mahoma?

NACOR Estos rendimientos toma 155 él por cosa buena y santa.
Queda en paz.

(Vase NACOR.)

ARLAXA Vayas con ella, que con el fin deste trance le tendrá el de tu querella.

DON FERNANDO ¡Echado ha el moro buen lance! 160

OROPESA Ella es falsa cuanto es bella.

ARLAXA Venid, que habemos de ir los tres a ver combatir a mis amantes valientes.

OROPESA Si nos vieren ir las gentes, 165 tarde nos verán venir.

(Vanse y sale VOZMEDIANO, anciano, y DOÑA MARGARITA, en hábito de hombre.)

VOZMEDIANO ¿Priesa por llegar a Orán, y priesa por salir dél?
¡Muy bien nuestras cosas van!

MARGARITA Préciase Amor de crüel, 170
y tras uno da otro afán.

VOZMEDIANO Ya os he dicho, Margarita, que su daño solicita
quien camina tras un ciego.

MARGARITA Ayo y señor, yo no niego 175 que esa razón es bendita;
pero, ¿qué puedo hacer,
si he echado la capa al toro
y no la puedo coger?

VOZMEDIANO Menos te la podrá un moro, 180
si bien lo miras, volver.

MARGARITA ¿Que sea moro don Fernando?

VOZMEDIANO Así lo van pregonando los niños por la ciudad.

MARGARITA ¡Que haya hecho tal maldad! 185 ¡De cólera estoy rabiando!
No lo creo, Vozmediano.

VOZMEDIANO Haces bien; pero yo veo que ni moro ni cristiano parece.

MARGARITA Verle deseo. 190

VOZMEDIANO Siempre tu deseo es vano.

MARGARITA Quiérello así mi ventura, pero no será tan dura que no dé fin a mis penas con darme en estas arenas 195 berberisca sepultura.

VOZMEDIANO No dirás, señora, al menos, que no te he dado consejos de bondad y de honor llenos.

MARGARITA Los prudentes y los viejos 200 siempre dan consejos buenos:
pero no vee su bondad
la loca y temprana edad, que en sí misma se embaraza, ni cosa prudente traza 205
fuera de su voluntad.

(Entra BUITRAGO con la demanda.)

BUITRAGO Vuestras mercedes me den para las ánimas luego,
que les estará muy bien.

MARGARITA Si ellas arden en mi fuego. 210

VOZMEDIANO Pasito, Anastasio, ten: no digas alguna cosa
malsonante, aunque curiosa.

MARGARITA Váyase, señor soldado, que no tenemos trocado. 215

BUITRAGO ¡La respuesta está donosa!
Denme, ¡pese a mis pecados!
(Aparte.

¡Siempre yo de aquesta guisa medro con almidonados!) Denme, que vengo deprisa, 220
y ellos están muy pausados.
¡Oh, qué novatos que están de lo que se usa en Orán en esto de las demandas!
Descoja sus manos blandas 225
y dé limosna, galán.
¿Qué me mira? Acabe ya:
eche mano, y no a la espada que su tiempo se vendrá.

VOZMEDIANO La limosna que es rogada 230 más fácilmente se da que la que se pide a fuerza.

BUITRAGO Úsase en aquesta fuerza de Orán pedirse deste arte; que son las almas de Marte, 235
y piden siempre con fuerza.

Nadie muere aquí en el lecho,
a almidones y almendradas,
a pistos y purgas hecho;
aquí se muere a estocadas 240
y a balazos roto el pecho.

Bajan las almas feroces, tan furibundas y atroces, que piden que acá se pida para su pena afligida 245
a cuchilladas y a voces.

En fin: las almas de Orán, que tienen comedimiento,
aunque en purgatorio están, dicen que vuelva en sustento 250
la limosna que me dan.

A la parte voy con ellas, remediando sus querellas
a fuerza de avemarías,
y mis hambrientas porfías 255
con lo que me dan para ellas.

VOZMEDIANO Hermano, yo no os entiendo, y no hay limosna que os dar.

BUITRAGO ¡De gana me voy riendo!
¿Y adónde se vino a hallar 260 el parentesco tremendo?
¿Hace burla en ver el traje, entre pícaro y salvaje?
Pues sepa que este sayal tiene encubierto algún al 265 que puede honrar un linaje.

El conde es éste, ¡qué pieza!; que, cuando me da, le dan
mil vaguidos de cabeza.
Pobretas almas de Orán, 270 que estáis en vuestra estrechez, rogad a Dios que me den,
porque si yo como bien,
rezaré más de un rosario,
y os haré un aniversario 275 por siempre jamás. Amén.

(Entra el CONDE, DON MARTÍN, el capitán GUZMÁN y NACOR.)

NACOR Digo, señor, que entregaré sin duda la presa que he contado fácilmente en el silencio de la noche muda con muy poquito número de gente; 280 y, porque al hecho la verdad acuda, las manos a un cordel daré obediente;
dejaréme llevar, siendo yo guía que os muestre el aduar antes del día.

Y sólo quiero desta rica presa, 285 por quien mi industria y mi traición trabaja, un cuerpo que a mi alma tiene presa:
quiero a la bella sin igual Arlaxa.
Por ella tengo tan infame empresa por ilustre, por grande, y no por baja: 290 que, por reinar y por amor no hay culpa que no tenga perdón y halle disculpa.

No siento ni descubro otro camino, para ser posesor de aquesta mora, que hacer este amoroso desatino, 295 puesto que en él crueldad y traición mora.
Ámola por la fuerza del destino, y, aunque mi alma su beldad adora, quíerola cautivar para soltalla, por si puedo moverla o obligalla. 300

CONDE No estamos en sazón que nos permita sacar de Orán un mínimo soldado; que el cerco que se espera solicita que ponga en otras cosas mi cuidado.

NACOR La vitoria en la palma traigo escrita; 305 en breves horas te daré acabado, sin peligro, el negocio que he propuesto;
si presto vamos, volveremos presto.

CONDE Esta tarde os daré, Nacor, respuesta; esperad hasta entonces.

NACOR Soy contento. 310

(Vase NACOR.)

DON MARTÍN Empresa rica y sin peligro es ésta, si cierta fuese.

GUZMÁN Yo por tal la cuento:
hace la lengua al alma manifiesta.
Declarado ha Nacor su pensamiento con tal demostración, con tal afecto, 315 que, si vamos, el saco me prometo.

DON MARTÍN Cubre el traidor sus malas intenciones con rostro grave y ademán sincero, y adorna su traición con las razones de que se precia un pecho verdadero. 320

De un Sinón aprendieron mil Sinones, y así, el que es general, al blando o fiero razonar del contrario no se rinde, sin que primero la intención deslinde.

CONDE Hermano, así se hará; no tengáis miedo 325 que yo me arroje o precipite en nada.
¿Hicistes ya las treguas con Robledo, y queda ante escribano confirmada?

DON MARTÍN Gran cólera tenéis, Guzmán.

GUZMÁN No puedo
tenerla en la ocasión más enfrenada. 330

CONDE Podréis darle la rienda entre enemigos, y es prudencia cogerla con amigos.
Pues, Buitrago, ¿qué hacemos?

BUITRAGO Aquí asisto, procurando sacar de aqueste esparto jugo de algún plus ultra, y no le he visto 335 siquiera de una tarja ni de un cuarto.
Así guardan la ley de Jesucristo aquéstos como yo cuando estoy harto, que no me acuerdo si hay cielo ni tierra;
sólo a mi vientre acudo y a la guerra. 340

MARGARITA Pide limosna en modo este soldado, que parece que grita o que reniega, y yo estoy en España acostumbrado a darla a quien por Dios la pide y ruega.

BUITRAGO Quiérosela pedir arrodillado; 345
veré si la concede o si la niega.

VOZMEDIANONi tanto, ni tan poco.

BUITRAGO Soy cristiano.

MARGARITA ¿Ya no le han dicho que no hay blanca, hermano?

BUITRAGO ¿Hermano? ¡Lleve el diablo el parentesco
y el ladrón que le halló la vez primera! 350 Descosa, pese al mundo, ese griguesco, desgarre esa olorosa faltriquera.
De aquestas pinturitas a lo fresco, ¿qué se puede esperar?

VOZMEDIANO Ésa es manera de hacer sacar la espada y no el dinero. 355

CONDE ¡Paso, Buitrago!

MARGARITA ¡A fe de caballero!

DON MARTÍN No os enfadéis, galán, que deste modo se pide la limosna en esta tierra; todo es aquí braveza, es aquí todo rigor y duros términos de guerra. 360

BUITRAGO Y yo, que a lo de Marte me acomodo, y a lo de Dios es Cristo, doy por tierra con todo el bodegón, si con floreos responden a mis gustos y deseos.

DON MARTÍN En fin, ¿que aqueste galán 365 es de Jerez?

VOZMEDIANOY de nombre,
de los buenos que allí están, y hijo, señor, de un hombre que en Francia fue capitán.
Quedó rico y con hacienda; 370 dejómele a mí por prenda mi hermana, que fue su madre, y yo quise que del padre siguiese la honrada senda.

Supe el cerco que se espera, 375
y con su gusto le truje, que sin él no le trajera,
y a esta dura le reduje
de su vida placentera;
que, en los grados de alabanza, 380 aunque pervierta la usanza el adulator liviano,
no alcanza un gran cortesano lo que un buen soldado alcanza.

CONDE Así es verdad, y agradezco 385 venida de tales dos,
y a servírosla me ofrezco.

BUITRAGO;Que no me darán por Dios lo que por mí no merezco!
¡Voto a Cristóbal del Pino, 390 que si una vez me amohíno, que han de ver quién es Callejas!

Busquen alivio a sus quejas, almas, por otro camino.

    Buscaréle yo también 395
para mi hambre insolente, o me den, o no me den;
que nunca muere un valiente
de hambre.

DON MARTÍN Dices muy bien.

BUITRAGO No digo sino muy mal. 400 ¿Es eso por escusarse de no sacar un real?

CONDE Vamos, que ya de enojarse Buitrago nos da señal,
y no quiero que lo esté. 405

(Vanse el CONDE y DON MARTÍN.)

BUITRAGO Con aqueso comeré.
¡No fuera yo motilón,
o mozo de bodegón,
y no soldado!

MARGARITA ¿Por qué?

BUITRAGO Yo me entiendo, so galán; 410
vaya y guarde su dinero.
¡Adiós, mi señor Guzmán!

GUZMÁN No, no; convidaros quiero;

¡por vida del capitán!, venid, Buitrago, conmigo. 415

BITRAGOEn seguirte sé que sigo a un Alejandro y a un Marte.

(Vanse el CAPITÁN y BITRAGO.)

MARGARITASEñor, llégate a esta parte, que tengo que hablar contigo.
Resuelta estoy.

VOZMEDIANOEn tu daño. 420

MARGARITANo me atajes; déjame relatar mi mal extraño.

VOZMEDIANO¿Ya no sabes que lo sé, por mi mal más ha de un año?

MARGARITA Dime, señor: ¿tú no sientes 425 que con nuevos accidentes cada día amor me embiste?

VOZMEDIANOY sé que no los resiste tu alma, pues los consientes.

MARGARITA Déjate de aconsejarme, 430
y dame ayuda, si quieres;
que lo demás es matarme.

VOZMEDIANO Por quien soy y por quien eres, siempre te oiré sin cansarme, y siempre te ayudaré, 435 porque a ello me obligué cuando de venir contigo como ayo y como amigo
te di la palabra y fe.
Di, en fin, ¿qué piensas hacer? 440

MARGARITA Yo, por soldado a esta empresa, con extraño parecer,
pues procuraré ser presa,
puesto que vaya a prender.
Procuraré ser cautiva; 445 que de la dura y esquiva tormenta que siente el alma, el sosiego, gusto y palma,
en disparates estriba.
Sabré ser cautiva de quien 450
me cautivó sin sabello, pensando de hacerme bien;
daré al moro perro el cuello porque a mi alma me den.
Que no es posible sea moro 455 quien guardó tanto el decoro de cristiano caballero;
y si fuere esclavo, quiero dar por él mil montes de oro.
De que los halle no dude 460 nadie: que el cielo al deseo del aflicto siempre acude.

VOZMEDIANO El gran Dios dese deseo impertinente te mude.

MARGARITA ¿Habrá más de rescatarme, 465 dando tiempo al informarme de lo que voy a saber?

Que en el mal de irme a perder consiste el bien de ganarme.

Venid, señor Vozmediano; 470 negociaréis mi salida
con el escuadrón cristiano.

VOZMEDIANO¿Dónde quieres ir, perdida?

MARGARITA aconsejarme es en vano.

VOZMEDIANO Yo haré con su señoría 475 que se oponga a tu partida.

MARGARITA Si esto me impedís, señor, haré otro yerro mayor,
con que lloréis más de un día.

Echada está ya la suerte; 480 yo he de seguir mi destino, aunque me lleve a la muerte.

VOZMEDIANO Del amor el desatino cualquier bien en mal convierte.

¡En mal punto me encargué 485 de ti! ¡En mal punto dejé la patria por tus antojos!

MARGARITA Tal vez, tras nubes de enojos, de esperanza el sol se vee.

(Vanse, y salen ARLAXA, ALIMUZEL, OROPESA y DON FERNANDO.)

ARLAXA ¿Adónde está Alimuzel? 490
Oropesa, ¿dó te has ido?
Y mi Lozano, ¿qué es dél?
¡Cielo, escucha mi gemido;
no te me muestres crüel!

ALIMUZEL Bella Arlaxa, aquí me tienes. 495

ARLAXA Amigo, a buen tiempo vienes.

OROPESA ¿Qué es lo que mandas, señora?

ARLAXA Vengas, amigo, en buen hora.
Lozano, ¿en qué te detienes?

DON FERNANDO Aquí estoy, señora mía. 500 ¿Qué me mandas? Dilo, acaba.

ARLAXA ¡Desdichada dicha mía!

ALIMUZEL ¿Qué has, Arlaxa?

ARLAXA Yo soñaba
que esta noche, al alba fría, daban sobre este aduar 505
cristianos, y, a mi pesar, Nacor me llevaba presa,
y desperté con la presa
del asalto y del gritar;

y he venido a socorrerme 510 de vosotros con el miedo que el sueño pudo ponerme, y, aunque os veo, apenas puedo sosegar me ni valerme.

Tengo a Nacor por traidor, 515
y no me deja el temor
fiar de vuestra lealtad.

ALIMUZEL No son los sueños verdad;
no tengas miedo, mi amor;
y si lo son, juzga y piensa 520 que a tu lado hallarás quien no consienta tu ofensa.

ARLAXA Contra el hado es por demás que valga humana defensa.

DON FERNANDO No te congojes, señora, 525 que si llegare la hora de verte en aque se aprieto, librarte dél te prometo por el Dios que mi alma adora.

Si no quedase cristiano 530 en Orán, y aquí viniese tan arrojado y ufano que la vitoria tuviese
tan cierta como en la mano, será esta mía bastante 535 para que el más arrogante vuelva humilde y sin despojos.
Tiemple aquesto tus enojos,
no pase el miedo adelante, que haré más de lo que digo; 540
y de que prometo poco,

mis obras serán testigo.

OROPESAO está don Fernando loco, o es ya de Cristo enemigo.

    Pelear contra cristianos 545
promete. Venid, hermanos, que yo, con mejor conciencia, pasaré la diligencia
a los pies, y no a las manos.

DON FERNANDO   Alí, dame tú una espada 550 y un turbante, con que pueda la cabeza estar guardada.

OROPESASeñora, ¿dónde se queda tu condición arrojada?

    Agora verás hender, 555
herir, matar y romper.
Deja venir al cristiano.

ARLAXAEs accidental y vano tal deseo en la mujer,
    y fácilmente se trueca; 560
y, antes que la espada, agora tomaría ver la rueca.

ALIMUZEEl que te ofende, señora, contra todo el mundo peca.

    Ven, cristiano, a tomar armas. 565

OROPESAMira contra quién te armas, Lozano.

DON FERNANDO;Calla, Oropesa!

OROPESAEn armarte a tal empresa, de tu valor te desarmas.

(Éntranse todos.)

(Salen NACOR, atadas las manos atrás con un cordel, y tráenle BUITRAGO, el capitán GUZMÁN, MARGARITA y otros soldados con sus arcabuces.)

NACOR Valeroso Guzmán, éste es, sin duda, 570 el vendido aduar, el paraíso do está la gloria que mi alma busca.
Con la caballería, como es uso, le puedes coronar a la redonda, porque apenas se escape un solo moro. 575

GUZMÁNNo tengo tanta gente para tanto.

NACORCerca, pues, por lo menos, esta parte, que responde derecha a una montaña que está cerca de aquí, donde, sin duda, harán designio de acogerse cuantos 580 sobresaltados fueren esta noche.

GUZMÁNDices muy bien.

NACORPues manda que me suelten, porque vaya a buscar el grande premio que pide la amorosa traición mía.

BUITRAGO Eso no, ¡vive Dios!, hasta que vea 585 cómo se entabla el juego, ¡so Mahoma!
Estése atraillado como galgo, porque hasta ver las liebres no le suelto.

NACOR Señor Guzmán, agravio se me hace.

GUZMÁN Buitrago, suéltale, y a Dios; y embiste. 590

BUITRAGO Contra mi voluntad le suelto. Vaya.

NACOR Venid, que yo pondré la gente en orden, de modo que no haya algún desorden.

(Vanse, y queda sola MARGARITA.)

MARGARITA ¡Pobre de mí! ¿Dónde quedo?

¿Adónde me trae la suerte, 595 confusa y llena de miedo?

¿Qué cosa haré con que acierte, si ninguna cosa puedo?

¡Oh amoroso desvarío, que ciegas el albedrío 600
y la razón tienes presa!

¿Qué sacaré desta empresa, de quién temo y de quién fío?

Soy mariposa inocente que, despreciando el sosiego, 605 simple y presurosamente me voy entregando al fuego
de la llama más ardiente.

Estos pasos son testigos que huyo de los amigos, 610
y, llena de ceguedad,

de mi propia voluntad
me entrego a los enemigos.

(Suena dentro: «¡Arma, arma! ¡Santiago, cierra, cierra España, España!». Salga al teatro NACOR, abrazado con ARLAXA, y, a su encuentro, BUITRAGO.)

BUITRAGO; Por aqueste portillo se desagua el aduar! ¡Soldados, aquí, amigos! 615 ¡Tente, perro cargado; tente, galgo!

NACOR; Amigo soy, señor.

BUITRAGO; No es éste tiempo para estas amistades! ¡Tente, perro!

NACOR; Muerto soy, por Alá!

BUITRAGO; Por San Benito, que he pasado a Nacor de parte a parte, 620
y que ésta debe ser su amada ingrata!

ARLAXA; Cristiano, yo me rindo; no ensangrientes tu espada en mujeril sangre mezquina.
Llévame do quisieres.

(Sale ALÍ.)

ALIMUZEL; La voz oigo
de Arlaxa bella, que socorro pide. 625 ¡Ah perro, suelta!

BUITRAGO; Suéltala tú, podenco sin provecho!
¿No hay quien me ayude aquí?

ARLAXA Mientras pelean
aquestos dos, podrá ser escaparme, si acaso acierto de tomar la parte 630 que lleva a la montaña.

MARGARITA Si me guías,
seré tu esclavo, tu defensa y guarda hasta ponerte en ella. Ven, señora.

(Vase ARLAXA y MARGARITA. Sale DON FERNANDO y GUZMÁN.)

BUITRAGO ¡Ánimas de purgatorio, favorecedme, señoras, 635
que mi peligro es notorio, si ya no estáis a estas horas durmiendo en el dormitorio!
De vuestro divino aliento con mayor fuerza me siento. 640 ¡Perro, el huir no te cale!
¡Ahora verán si vale
Buitrago por más de ciento!

(Éntrase ALÍ, y BUITRAGO tras él.)

GUZMÁN ¡O eres diablo, o no eres hombre!
¿Quién te dio tal fuerza, perro? 645

DON FERNANDO No os admire ni os asombre,

Guzmán, que haga este yerro quien respeta vuestro nombre.

GUZMÁN ¿Sois, a dicha, don Fernando?

DON FERNANDO El mismo que estáis mirando, 650 aunque no me veis, amigo.

GUZMÁN ¿Sois ya de Cristo enemigo?

DON FERNANDO Ni de veras, ni burlando.

GUZMÁN Pues, ¿cómo sacas la espada contra Él?

DON FERNANDO Vendrá sazón 655
más llana y acomodada, en que te dé relación
de mi pretensión honrada.
Cristiano soy, no lo dudes.

GUZMÁN ¿Por qué a defender acudes 660 este aduar?

DON FERNANDO Porque encierra la paz que causa esta guerra, la salud de mis saludes.
Dos prendas has de dejar, y carga, amigo, con todo 665
cuanto hay en este aduar.

GUZMÁNA tu gusto me acomodo, no quiero más preguntar;
    pero, porque no se diga que tengo contigo liga, 670 tú, pues bastas, lo defiende.

(Vase GUZMÁN, y vuelve BUITRAGO y ALIMUZEL.)

BUITRAGOEn vano, moro, pretende tu miedo que no te siga, que tengo para ofenderte dos manos y dos mil almas, 675 que a mis pies han de ponerte.

DON FERNANDOOtros despojos y palmas puedes, amigo, ofrecerte, que éste no.

ALIMUZELDeja, Lozano, que este valiente cristiano 680 en grande aprieto me ha puesto.

DON FERNANDOVE tú a socorrer el resto, y éste déjale en mi mano, que yo daré cuenta dél.

(ARLAXA, dentro.)

ARLAXA¡Lozano, que voy cautiva! 685 ¡Que voy cautiva, Muzel!

ALIMUZEL;Fortuna, a mi suerte esquivada, cielo envidioso y cruel, ejecutad vuestra rabia
en mi vida, si os agravia; 690 dejad libre la de aquella, que os podéis honrar con ella por hermosa, honesta y sabia!

(Sale ARLAXA, defendiéndola MARGARITA del capitán GUZMÁN y de otros tres soldados.)

DON FERNANDO ¡Todos sois pocos soldados!

GUZMÁNÉsta es la mora en quien tiene 695 don Fernando sus cuidados;
dejársela me conviene.

(Vase.)

BUITRAGOAquí hay moros encantados
o cristianos fementidos, que ha llegado a mis oídos, 700
creo, el nombre de Lozano.

DON FERNANDOVuestro trabajo es en vano, cristianos mal advertidos, que esta mora no ha de ir presa;
entrad en el aduar, 705
y hallaréis más rica presa.

BUITRAGO;Désta irás a señalar, perro, el tanto de tu fuesa!

ALIMUZEL    ¡Muerto soy; Alá me ayude!

ARLAXA ¡Acude, Lozano, acude,    710 que han muerto a tu grande amigo!

(Cae ALÍ dentro, y éntrase ARLAXA tras él.)

DON FERNANDO Vengaréle en su enemigo, aunque de intención me mude.
    ¡No te retires, aguarda!

BUITRAGO ¿Yo retirar? ¡Bueno es eso!    715
Si tuviera una alabarda, le partiera hasta el güeso.
¡Oh, cómo el perro se guarda!

DON FERNANDO    Éste que va a dar el pago de tus bravatas, Buitrago,    720 mejor cristiano es que tú.

BUITRAGO ¡Que te valga Bercebú, y a mí Dios y Santiago!
    Di quién eres, que, sonando el eco, me trae con miedo    725 la habla de don Fernando.

DON FERNANDO El mismo soy.

BUITRAGO ¡Oh Robledo,

verdadero y memorando,
y cuánta verdad dijiste!
Sin razón le desmentiste, 730
Guzmán atrevido y fuerte.
Yo quiero huir de la muerte que en esas manos asiste.

DON FERNANDO ¿Cómo, di, tú no peleas, te retiras o te vas, 735
antes que tu prisión veas?

MARGARITA ¡Estraños consejos das
a quien la muerte deseas!
Mas no puedo retirarme ni pelear, y he de darme 740
de cansado a moras manos, que se van ya los cristianos,
y tú no querrás dejarme.

(Dentro, diga GUZMÁN:)

GUZMÁN ¡Al retirar, cristianos! ¡Toca, Robles!
¡A retirar, a retirar, amigos! 745
No se quede ninguno, y los cansados a las ancas los suban los jinetes, y en la mitad del escuadrón recojan la presa. ¡Al retirar, que viene el día!

DON FERNANDO Yo te pondré en las ancas de un caballo 750 de los tuyos, amigo; no desmayes.

MARGARITA Mayor merced me harás si aquí me dejas.

DON FERNANDO¿Quieres quedar cautivo por tu gusto?

MARGARITAQuizá mi libertad consiste en eso.

DON FERNANDO¿Hay otros don Fernandos en el mundo? 755 Demos lugar que los cristianos pasen;
retiraos a esta parte.

MARGARITAYo no puedo.

DON FERNANDODadme la mano, pues.

MARGARITADe buena gana.

DON FERNANDO¡Jesús, y qué desmayo!

MARGARITAGentilhombre,
¿lleváisme a los cristianos, o a los moros? 760

DON FERNANDO A los moros os llevo.

MARGARITANo querría
que fuésedes cristiano y me engañásedes.

DON FERNANDOCristiano soy; pero, ¡por Dios!, que os llevo
a entregar a los moros.

MARGARITA¡Dios lo haga!

DON FERNANDO De novedades anda el mundo lleno. 765 ¿Estáis herido acaso?

MARGARITA No estoy bueno.

(Vanse.)

(Sale OROPESA, cargado de despojos.)

OROPESA No, sino estaos atendido a los consejos de un loco, enamorado y perdido.

Mucho llevo en esto poco; 770
voy libre y enriquecido.

Ya en mi libertad contemplo un nuevo y extraño ejemplo de los casos de fortuna, y adornarán la columna 775 mis cadenas de algún templo.

(Salen el CONDE y DON MARTÍN y BAIRÁN, el renegado.)

BAIRÁN Digo, señor, que la venida es cierta, y que este mar verás y esta ribera, él de bajeles lleno, ella cubierta de gente innumerable y vocinglera. 780

De Barbarroja el hijo se conierta con Alabez y el Cuco, de manera que en su favor más moros dan y ofrecen que en clara noche estrellas se parecen.

Los turcos son seis mil, y los leventes 785 siete mil, toda gente vencedora;

veinte y seis las galeras, suficientes a traer municiones de hora en hora.
Andan en pareceres diferentes sobre cuál destas plazas se mejora 790 en fortaleza y sitio, y creo se ordena de dar a San Miguel la buena estrena.

Esto es, señor, lo que hay del campo moro,
y en Argel el armada queda a punto, y Azán, el rey, guardando su decoro, 795 que es diligente, la traerá aquí al punto.

CONDEDe sus designios poco o nada ignoro, mas, por tu relación cuerda, barrunto que a San Miguel el bárbaro amenaza, como más flaca, aunque importante plaza. 800

Pero, puesto le tengo en tal reparo, tales soldados dentro dél he puesto, que al bárbaro el ganarle será caro, muy más que en su designio trae propuesto.
Idos a reposar, mi amigo caro, 805
y el agradecimiento y paga desto esperadla de mí, con la ventaja que aquel merece que cual vos trabaja.

(Vase BAIRÁN.)

¿No tarda ya Guzmán?

DON MARTÍNLas centinelas le han descubierto ya.

CONDEVenga en buen hora. 810

DON MARTÍN Su premio habrá Nacor de sus cautelas cobrado, su adorada ingrata mora.

¡Amor, como otro Marte nos desvelas; furia y rigor en tus entrañas mora;
hasta las religiosas almas dañas, 815
y fundas en traiciones tus hazañas!

(Entra el capitán GUZMÁN, OROPESA, BUITRAGO, VOZMEDIANO y otros soldados.)

GUZMÁN Tus manos pido, y de las mías toma, o, por mejor decir, de tus soldados, amorosos despojos de Mahoma.

Volvemos, como fuimos, alentados, 820 mejorados en honra y buena fama,
y en ropa y en esclavos mejorados.

Nacor no trae a su hermosa dama;
que Buitrago apagó con fuerte acero del moro infame la amorosa llama. 825

BUITRAGO Paséle, por la fe de caballero, por entrambas ijadas, ignorando que fuese el que el aviso dio primero;
y si no lo estorbara don Fernando, diera con más de dos patas arriba, 830 que con él se me fueron escapando.

CONDE ¿Que, en fin, se volvió moro?

OROPESA No se escriba, se diga o piense tal de quien su intento en ser honrado y valeroso estriba.

Yo sé de don Fernando el pensamiento, 835
y sé que presto volverá a servirte con las veras que ofrece su ardimiento.

GUZMÁN Que él es cristiano sé, señor, decirte; que él se nombró conmigo combatiendo.

DON MARTÍN ¿Y procuraba, por ventura, herirte? 840

GUZMÁN Con tiento pareció que iba esgrimiendo, y palabras me dijo en el combate por quien fui sus designios conociendo.

DON MARTÍN Deste caso, señores, no se trate; ya, por lo menos, ha caído en culpa, 845
y no hay disculpa a tanto disparate.

CONDE Salió sin mi licencia: ya le culpa, y más el escalar de la muralla, insulto que jamás tendrá disculpa.

GUZMÁN Precipitóle honor: vistió la malla 850 por conservar su crédito famoso;
huyóle el moro; fue a buscar batalla.

DON MARTÍN ¡Por cierto, oh buen Guzmán, que estáis donoso!
Pues, ¿cómo no se ha vuelto, o cómo muestra contra cristianos ánimo brioso? 855

OROPESA Él dará presto de su intento muestra, sacando, en gloria de la ley cristiana,
a luz la fuerza de su honrada diestra.

CONDE Venid; repartiré de buena gana lo que deste despojo a todos toca; 860 que el gusto crece lo que así se gana.

(Vanse, y queda BUITRAGO y VOZMEDIANO.)

VOZMEDIANO ¡Válgame Dios, si se quedó la loca, si se quedó la sin ventura y triste,
que así su suerte y su valor apoca!

Dime, señor, si por ventura viste 865 aquel soldado que partió conmigo cuando a la empresa do has venido fuiste;
aquel bisoño manicorto, digo, que no te quiso dar limosna un día, y habrá hasta seis que vino aquí conmigo. 870

BUITRAGO ¿No es aquel del entono y bazarria, de las plumas volantes y del rizo, que me habló con remoques y acedías?

VOZMEDIANO Aque se mismo.

BUITRAGO No sé qué se hizo.

(Vase.)

VOZMEDIANO ¿Adónde estarás agora, 875 moza por tus pies llevada do toda miseria mora,
de mandar a ser mandada,
esclava de ser señora?

¿Que es posible que un deseo 880 incite a tal devaneo?
Y éste es, en fin, de tal ser, que no lo puedo creer,

y con los ojos lo veo.

Vase.

(Sale ARLAXA, DON FERNANDO y MARGARITA.)

DON FERNANDO    Para ser mozo y galán    885 y al parecer bien nacido, muchos desmayos os dan:
señal de que habéis comido mucho liebre y poco pan.

    Quien se rinde a su enemigo,    890 en sí presenta testigo de que es cobarde.

MARGARITA    Es verdad, pero trae mi poca edad
grande disculpa consigo.

    El que mis cuitas no siente,    895
hará de mi miedo alarde, pero yo sé claramente que hice más en ser cobarde que no hiciera en ser valiente.

    ¡Desdichada de la vida    900
a términos reducida
que busca con ceguedad
en la prisión libertad
y a lo imposible salida!

ARLAXA    ¿Qué sabes si este soldado,    905 cual tú, tiene aquella queja de valiente mal pagado?

DON FERNANDO Fácil conocer se deja que le aflige otro cuidado;

que sus años, cual él muestra, 910
no habrán podido dar muestra, por ser pocos, de los hechos que, por ser mal satisfechos, muestran voluntad siniestra.

Y el ofrecerle caballo 915 para que volviese a Orán, y el no querer acetallo, unas sospechas me dan
que por su honra las callo.

Quizá la vida le enfada 920 soldadesca y desgarrada,
y como el vicio le doma,
viene tras la de Mahoma, que es más ancha y regalada.

MARGARITA En mi edad, aunque está en flor, 925 he alcanzado y conocido que no hay mal de tal rigor que llegue al verse ofendido, el que es honrado, en su honor.

Y más si culpa no tiene; 930 que cuando la infamia viene a quien la busca y procura, es menor la desventura
que la deshonra contiene.

Y así, me será forzoso 935 para huir la infamia y mengua de mal cristiano y medroso, que os descubra aquí mi lengua lo que apenas pensar oso.

Si gustáis de estarme atentos, 940 veréis que paran los vientos su veloz curso a escucharme, y veréis que fue el quedarme honra de mis pensamientos.

(Entra ALIMUZEL.)

ALIMUZEL El remedio que aplicaste, 945
bella Arlaxa, de tu mano, fue tal, que en él te mostraste ser un ángel soberano que a la vida me tornaste.

Conságotela dos veces: 950 una porque la mereces, y la otra te consagro
por el extraño milagro
con que tu fama engrandesces.

ARLAXA Sosiégate y no me alabes, 955 que el médico ha sido Alá de tus heridas tan graves.
Comienza, cristiano, ya la historia que alegre acabes.

MARGARITA Sí haré; más tú verás, 960 en el cuento que me oirás, que no dan los duros hados a principios desdichados alegres fines jamás.

«Nací en un lugar famoso, 965
de los mejores de España, de padres que fueron ricos
y de antigua y noble casta;
los cuales, como prudentes, apenas mi edad temprana 970
dio muestras de entendimiento, cuando me encierran y guardan en un santo monesterio
de la virgen Santa Clara;

¡que soy mujer sin ventura, 975 que soy mujer desdichada!»

ARLAXA¡Santo Alá! ¿Qué es lo que dices?

MARGARITA¿Desto poquito te espantas?

Ten silencio, hermosa mora, hasta el fin de mis desgracias; 980 que, aunque ellas jamás le tengan, yo me animaré a contallas, si es posible, en breve espacio y con sucintas palabras.
«No me encerraron mis padres 985 sino para la crianza,
y fue su intención que fuese,
no monja, sino casada.
Faltáronme antes de tiempo;
que la inexorable Parca 990 cortó el hilo de sus vidas para añadirle a mis ansias.
Quedé con sólo un hermano,
de condición tan bizarra, que parece que en él solo 995
hizo asiento la arrogancia.
Llegó la edad de casarme;
hiciéronle mil demandas
de mí; no acudió a ninguna, fundándose en leves causas; 1000
y, entre los que me pidieron, fue uno que con la espada satisfizo a la respuesta, según se la dieron mala.»

(Suenan dentro atambores.)

ALIMUZELEscucha, que oigo clarines, 1005

oigo trompetas y cajas;
algún escuadrón es éste de turcos que hacia Orán marcha.

(Entra uno.)

MOROSi lo que dejó el cristiano no quieres, hermosa Arlaxa, 1010 no lo acaben de talar
diez escuadrones que pasan, ven, señora, a defenderlo;
que con tu presencia, Arlaxa, pararás al sol su curso 1015
y suspenderás las armas.

ALIMUZELBien dice, señora; vamos, que lugar habrá mañana para oír si aquesta historia en fin triste o alegre acaba. 1020

ARLAXAVamos, pues; y vos, hermosa y lastimada cristiana,
no os pene si a vuestras penas el oíllas se dilata.

(Vanse ARLAXA y ALÍ tras ella, y MARGARITA a lo último, y DON FERNANDO, tras ella, y dicen antes:)

MARGARITAComo no tengo, señora, 1025 ningún alivio en contarlas, tengo a ventura el estorbo que de tal silencio es causa.

DON FERNANDO; Válgame Dios, qué sospechas me van encendiendo el alma! 1030 Muchas cosas imagino,
y todas me sobresaltan.
Desesperado esperando
he de estar hasta mañana, o hasta el punto que el fin sepa 1035
de la historia comenzada.

EL REY DEL CUCO.

EL REY DE ALABEZ.

Y acompañamiento.

Salen los Reyes del CUCO y ALABEZ, DON FERNANDO, de moro; ALIMUZEL, ARLAXA y MARGARITA.

CUCO    Hermosísima Arlaxa: tu belleza puede volver del mismo Marte airado en mansedumbre su mayor braveza, y dar leyes al mundo alborotado.

ALABEZPuedes, con tu estremada gentileza, 5 suspender los extremos del cuidado que amor pone en el alma que cautiva, y hacer que en gloria sosegada viva.

CUCO    Puede la luz desos serenos ojos prestarla al sol, y hacerle más hermoso; 10 puede colmar el carro de despojos del dios antojadizo y riguroso.

ALABEZPuede templar la ira, los enojos del amante olvidado y del celoso; puedes, en fin, parar, sin duda alguna, 15 el curso volador de la Fortuna.

ARLAXA Nace de vuestra rara cortesía la sin par que me dais dulce alabanza, porque no llega la bajeza mía adonde su pequeña parte alcanza. 20 Tendré por felicísimo este día, pues en él toma fuerzas mi esperanza de ver mis aduares mejorados, viendo a sus robadores castigados.

Cien canastos de pan blanco apurado, 25 con treinta orzas de miel aún no tocada, y del menudo y más gordo ganado casi os ofrezco entera una manada;
dulce lebení en zaques encerrado, agrio yagurt. Y todo aquesto es nada 30 si mi deseo no tomáis en cuenta, que en su virtud la dádiva se aumenta.

CUCO Admitimos tu oferta, y prometemos de vengarte de aquel que te ha ofendido; que, en fe de haberte visto, bien podemos 35
mostrar el corazón algo atrevido.

ALABEZ Arlaxa, queda en paz, porque tenemos el tiempo limitado y encogido.

ARLAXA Viváis alegres siglos y infinitos, reyes del Cuco y Alabez invites. 40

(Vanse los Reyes.)

Vuelve a seguir tu comenzada historia, cristiana, sin que dejes cosa alguna que puedas reducir a la memoria de tu adversa o tu próspera fortuna.

MARGARITA Pasadas penas en presente gloria 45

el contarlas la lengua no repugna;
mas si el mal está en ser que se padece, al contarle, la lengua se enmudece.

«Quedé, si mal no me acuerdo, en una mala respuesta 50 que dio mi bizarro hermano a un caballero de prendas, el cual, por satisfacerse, muy malherido le deja.

Ausentóse y fuese a Italia, 55
según después tuve nuevas.

Tardó mi hermano en sanar mucho tiempo, y no se acuerda en mucho más de su hermana, como si ya muerta fuera. 60

Vi que volaban los tiempos, y que encerraban las rejas el cuerpo, mas no el deseo, que es libre y muy mal se encierra.

Vi que mi hermano aspiraba, 65
codicioso de mi hacienda,
a dejarme entre paredes,
medio viva y medio muerta.

Quise casarme yo misma;
mas no supe en qué manera 70 ni con quién; que pocos años
en pocos casos aciertan.

Dejóme un viejo mi padre, hidalgo y de intención buena, con el cual me aconsejase 75 en mis burlas y en mis veras.

Comuniquéle mi intento;
respondióme que él quisiera que el caballero que tuvo con mi hermano la pendencia, 80 fuera aquel que me alcanzara por su legítima prenda, porque eran tales las tuyas, que por extremo se cuentan.

Pintómele tan galán, 85
tan gallardo en paz y en guerra, que en relación vi a un Adonis,
y a otro Marte vi en la Tierra.
Dijo que su discreción igualaba con sus fuerzas, 90 puesto que valiente y sabio pocas veces se conciertan.
Estaba yo a sus loores
tan descuidada y atenta, que tomó el pincel la fama, 95
y en el alma las asienta;
y amor, que por los oídos pocas veces dicen que entra, se entró entonces hasta el alma con blanda y honrada fuerza; 100 y fue de tanta eficacia la relación verdadera, que adoré lo que los ojos
no vieron ni ver esperan; que, rendida a la inclemencia 105 de un antojo honrado y simple, mudé traje y mudé tierra.
A mi sabio consejero
fuerzo a que conmigo venga;
que ánimo determinado, 110 de imposibles no hace cuenta.»

ARLAXA No te suspendas; prosigue tu bien comenzado cuento, que ninguna cosa siento en él que a gusto no obligue, 115 y aun a pesar.

DON FERNANDO Aparte.

Y es de modo,
según que voy discurriendo, que al alma va suspendiendo con la parte y con el todo.

MARGARITA «Enamorada de oídas 120 del caballero que dije, me salí del monesterio,
y en traje de hombre vestíme.
Dejé el hermano y la patria, y, entre alegre y entre triste, 125 con mi consejero anciano a la bella Italia vine.
De la mitad de mi alma,
para que yo más le estime, supe allí que en estacada 130
venció a tres, y quedó libre, y que la parlera fama,
que más de lo que oye dice,
le trujo a encerrar a Orán, que espera el cerco terrible. 135 En alas de mi deseo, desde Nápoles partíme;
llegué a Orán, facilitando cualquier dudoso imposible, y, apenas pisé su arena, 140 cuando alborotada fuime
a saber, sin preguntallo, de quien me tiene tan triste.
Dél supe, y pluguiera al cielo, que consuela a los que aflige, 145 que nunca yo lo supiera.»

DON FERNANDO Di presto lo que supiste.

MARGARITA «Supe que a volverse moro, cosa, a pensarla, imposible, dejó los muros de Orán, 150
y que en vuestra secta vive.
Yo, por no vivir muriendo entre sospechas tan tristes, a trueco de ser cautiva, todo el hecho saber quise; 155
y así, arrojada y ansiosa, entre los cristianos vine,
de quien fue Nacor la guía, que los trujo a lo que vistes.
Ya me quedé, y soy cautiva, 160
y ya os pregunto si vistes
a este cristiano que busco, o a este moro que acogistes.
Llamábase don Fernando de Saavedra, de insignes 165
costumbres y claro nombre, como su fama lo dice.
Por él y por mi rescate, si dél sabéis, se apercibe mi lengua a ofreceros tanto, 170 que pase de lo posible.» Ésta es mi historia, señores;
nunca alegre, siempre triste;
si os he cansado en contalla, lo que me mandastes hice. 175

ARLAXA Cristiana, de tu dolor casi siento la mitad;
que tal vez curiosidad
fatiga como el amor.

Y al que te enciende en la llama 180
de amor con tantos extremos, como tú, le conocemos

solamente por la fama.

ALIMUZEL ¿Debajo de cuál estrella ese cristiano ha nacido, 185 que aun de quien no es conocido los deseos atropella?

Ese amigo por quien lloras,
y en quien pones tus tesoros, las vidas quita a los moros, 190
y las almas a las moras.

DON FERNANDO Que no es moro está en razón;
que no muda un bien nacido, por más que se vea ofendido, por otra su religión. 195

Puede ser que a ese español, que agora tanto se encubre, alguna causa le encubre,
como alguna nube al sol.

Mas dime: ¿quién te asegura 200 que, después de haberle visto, quede en tu pecho bienquisto?
Que engendra amor la hermosura, y si él carece della, como imagino y aun creo, 205 faltando causa, el deseo faltará, faltando en ella.

MARGARITA La fama de su cordura y valor es la que ha hecho la herida dentro del pecho: 210 no del rostro la hermosura; que ésa es prenda que la quita el tiempo breve y ligero, flor que se muestra en enero, que a la sombra se marchita. 215

Ansí que, aunque en él hallase no el rostro y la lozanía que pinté en mi fantasía, no hay pensar que no le amase.

DON FERNANDO Con esa seguridad, 220 presto me ofrezco mostrarte al que puede asegurarte el gusto y la libertad.

Muda ese traje indecente, que en parte tu ser desdora, 225
y vístete en el de mora, que la ocasión lo consiente;

y con Arlaxa y Muzel
los muros de Orán veremos, donde, sin duda, hallaremos 230 tu piadoso o tu crüel;

que no es posible dejar de hallarse en aquesta guerra, si no le ha hundido la tierra
o le ha sorbido la mar. 235

Alimuzel, no te tardes;
ven, y mira que es razón;
que en semejante ocasión
no es bien parecer cobarde.

ALIMUZEL Haz cuenta que a punto estoy. 240

ARLAXAA mí nada me detiene.

MARGARITAYa veis si a mí me conviene seguiros.

DON FERNANDO Pues pase hoy;
y mañana, cuando dan las aves el alborada, 245 demos a nuestra jornada principio y al fin de Orán.
¿Queda así?

ALIMUZEL No hay que dudar.

ARLAXA ¿Cómo te llamas, señora?

MARGARITA Margarita; mar do moran 250
gustos que me han de amargar.

ARLAXA Ven, que el amor favorece siempre a honestos pensamientos.

DON FERNANDO ¿Qué atropellados contentos la ventura aquí me ofrece! 255

(Éntranse todos.)

(Sale BUITRAGO, solo, a la muralla.)

BUITRAGO ¡Arma, arma, señor, con toda priesa!; porque en el charco azul columbro y veo pintados leños de una armada gruesa hacer un medio círculo y rodeo; el viento el remo impele, el lienzo atesa; 260 el mar tranquilo ayuda a su deseo.
Arma, pues, que en un vuelo se avecina,
y viene a tomar tierra a la marina.

(A la muralla, el CONDE y GUZMÁN.)

CONDE Turcos cubren el mar, moros la tierra; don Fernando de Cárcamo al momento 265 a San Miguel defienda, y a la guerra se dé principio con furor sangriento.
Mi hermano, que en Almarza ya se encierra, mostrará de quién es el bravo intento;
que este perro, que nunca otra vez ladre, 270
es el que en Mostagán mordió a su padre.

GUZMÁN Mal puedes defenderle la ribera.

CONDE No hay para qué, si todo el campo cubre del Cuco y Alabez la gente fiera, tanta, que hace horizonte lo que encubre, 275
y los que van poblando la ladera de aquel cerro empinado que descubre y mira esento nuestros prados secos, son los moros de Fez y de Marruecos.

Coronen las murallas los soldados, 280
y reitérese el arma en toda parte;
estén los artilleros alistados,
y usen certeros de su industria y arte;
los a cosas diversas diputados acudan a su oficio, y dese a Marte 285 el que a Venus se daba, y haga cosas que sean increíbles de espantosas.

(Éntrese de la muralla el CONDE y GUZMÁN.)

BUITRAGO Ánimas, si queréis que al ejercicio vuelva de mis plegarias y rosario, pedid que me haga el cielo beneficio 290 que siquiera no falte el ordinario; que, aunque de Marte el trabajoso oficio en mi estómago pide extraordinario, con diez hogazas que me envíe, sienta que a seis bravos soldados alimenta. 295

(Éntranse, y suenan chirimías y cajas.)

(Entra AZÁN BAJÁ y BAIRÁN con el REY DEL CUCO y el ALABEZ.)

BAIRÁN Don Francisco, el hermano del valiente don Juan, que naufragó en la Herradura, apercibe gran número de gente,
y socorrer a esta ciudad procura.
Don Álvaro Bazán, otro excelente 300 caballero famoso y de ventura, tiene cuatro galeras a su cargo,
y éste ha de ser de tu designio embargo.

AZÁN Su arena piso ya; de Orán colijo no aquella lozanía que dijiste: 305 sólo por tocar arma ya me aflijo, y ver quién será aquel que me resiste.

ALABEZ Quien al padre venció vencerá al hijo.
No hay que esperar, ¡oh grande Azán!, embiste; que el tiempo que te tardas, ése quitas 310
a tus vitorias raras e infinitas.

(Entren a esta sazón ARLAXA y MARGARITA, en hábito de moro; DON FERNANDO como moro, y ALIMUZEL.)

CUCO Tienes presente, ¡oh rey Azán!, la gloria de la África y la flor de Berbería;
un ángel es que anuncia tu vitoria, que el cielo, donde él vive, te le envía. 315

AZÁN Tendré yo para siempre en la memoria esta merced, ¡oh gran señora mía!, bella y sin par Arlaxa, en cuanto el cielo
pudo de bien comunicar al suelo.
¿Qué buscas entre el áspero ruido 320 del cóncavo metal, que, el aire hiriendo, no ha de llevar a tu sabroso oído de Apolo el son, mas el de Marte horrendo?

ARLAXA El tantarán del atabal herido, el bullicio de guerra y el estruendo 325 de gruesa y disparada artillería es para mí suave melodía.
Cuanto más, que yo vengo a ser testigo de tus raras hazañas y excelentes, y a servirte estos dos truje conmigo, 330 que cuanto son gallardos son valientes.

AZÁN De agradecer tanta merced me obligo cuando corran los tiempos diferentes de aquéstos, porque el fruto de la guerra en la paz felicísima se encierra. 335

(Entra ROAMA, moro, con un cristiano galán atadas las manos.)

ROAMA El bergantín que de la Vez se llama cautivaron anoche tus fragatas;
y éste, que es un don Juan de Valderrama, venía en él.

AZÁN¿Por qué no le desatas?

(Como entra el cautivo, se cubre MARGARITA el rostro con un velo.)

ALABEZ¿Cómo sabes su nombre tú, Roama? 340

ROAMAÉl me lo ha dicho así.

AZÁN Pues mal le tratas;
si es caballero, suéltale las manos.

DON JUAN¿Qué es lo que veo, cielos soberanos?

(Mira a DON FERNANDO.)

AZÁN ¿De qué tierra eres, cristiano?

DON JUANDe Jerez de la Frontera. 345

AZÁN¿Eres hidalgo o villano?

ALABEZ Vestir de aquella manera los villanos no es muy llano.

DON JUAN Caballero soy.

AZÁN ¿Y rico?

DON JUANEso no; pues que me aplico 350 a ser soldado, señal
que de bienes me va mal;
y esto os juro y certifico.

ALABEZ De cristianos juramentos está preñada la tierra, 355 lleno el mar, densos los vientos.

AZÁN ¿Y venías...?

DON JUANA la guerra.

AZÁN ¡Honrados son tus intentos!

MARGARITA ¡Éste es mi hermano, señora!

ARLAXADisimula como mora, 360
y cúbrete el rostro más.

CUCO ¡Buena guerra agora harás!

DON JUAN ¿Y cómo la hago agora?

AZÁN ¿Qué nuevas hay en España?

DON JUAN No más de la desta guerra, 365
y que ya estás en campaña.

AZÁN Dirán que mi intento yerra en emprender tal hazaña;
el socorro aprestarán,
el mundo amenazarán, 370
y, estándole amenazando, llegarán a tiempo cuando yo esté en sosiego en Orán.

Preséntote este cristiano, Arlaxa, como en indicio 375
de lo que en servirte gano;
y acepta el primer servicio que recibes de mi mano;
que otros pienso de hacerte con que mejores la suerte 380 de tu aduar saqueado.

ARLAXA Tenga el grande Alá cuidado, grande Azán, de engrandecerte.

AZÁN Vamos, que Marte nos llama a ejercitar el rigor 385 que enciende tu ardiente llama.

ARLAXA Mahoma te dé favor que aumente tu buena fama.
Ven, cristiano, y darme has cuenta
de quién eres.

(Éntranse todos, excepto DON JUAN y DON FERNANDO.)

DON JUAN;No consienta 390 el cielo que éste sea aquel que, enamorado y crüel, pudo hacerme honrada afrenta!

DON FERNANDO Escucha, cristiano, espera.

DON JUANYa espero, ya escucho, y veo 395 lo que nunca ver quisiera, si me pinta aquí el deseo esta visión verdadera.

DON FERNANDO ¿Qué murmuras entre dientes?

DON JUAN¿Qué me quieres?

DON FERNANDOQue me cuentes 400
quién eres.

DON JUANPues, ¿qué te importa?

DON FERNANDOHacer tu desgracia corta.

DON JUAN Aparte.

¡Podrá ser que me la aumentes!
Muestran que no es opinión los sobresaltos que paso, 405 mas cosa puesta en razón, que, sin duda, hace caso

tal vez la imaginación, pues pienso que estoy mirando el rostro de don Fernando, 410 su habla, su talle y brío;
pero que esto es desvarío su traje me va mostrando.

DON FERNANDO ¿Todo ha de ser murmurar, cristiano?

DON JUAN Perdon, moro, 415 que no me dejan guardar el cortesano decoro
las ansias de mi pesar.
Y más, que tú me enmudeces;
porque tanto te pareces 420
a un cristiano, que me admiro, que le veo si te miro,
y él mismo en ti mismo ofreces.

DON FERNANDO En Orán hay un cristiano que dicen que me parece 425 como esta mano a esta mano, y que si acaso se ofrece vestir hábito africano, ningún moro hay que le vea que no diga que yo sea, 430 y juzgue con evidencia que sólo nos diferencia su vestido y mi librea.
No le he visto y voy trazando verle, que verle deseo, 435 ya en paz, o ya peleando.

DON JUAN¿Cómo se llama?

DON FERNANDOYo creo que se llama don Fernando, y tiene por sobrenombre Saavedra.

DON JUANÉse es el hombre 440
por quien con mil males lucho.

DON FERNANDODesa manera, no es mucho que mi presencia te asombre.

(Entra ROAMA, el moro.)

ROAMA Arlaxa y Fátima están esperándote, cautivo. 445

DON FERNANDOVE en paz; que, rendido Orán, si el otro yo queda vivo,
tendrá remedio tu afán.

DON JUAN Estimo tu buen deseo; mas, con todo aquesto, creo...; 450 pero no, no creo nada;
que es cosa desvariada
dar crédito a lo que veo.

(Éntrase DON JUAN y ROAMA.)

DON FERNANDOEntre sospechas y antojos, y en gran confusión metido, 455 va don Juan lleno de enojos, pues le estorba este vestido

no dar crédito a sus ojos.

No se puede persuadir que yo pudiese venir 460
a ser moro y renegar;
y así, se deja llevar
de lo que quise fingir.

Su confesión está llana,
y más lo estará si mira 465
y si conoce a su hermana; que entonces no habrá mentira que no se tenga por vana.

Pregunto: ¿en qué ha de parar este mi disimular, 470
y este vestirme de moro?
En que guardaré el decoro con que más me pueda honrar.

(Éntrase.)

(Tócase arma; salen a la muralla el CONDE y GUZMÁN, y al teatro, AZÁN, el CUOCO y ALABEZ.)

CONDE Veinte asaltos creo que son los que han dado a San Miguel, 475 y éste, según es crüel, me muestra su perdición.

No podrá más don Fernando de Cárcamo.

GUZMÁN No, sin duda;
mas, si no se le da ayuda, 480
su fin le está amenazando.

Fuerza que no se socorre, haz cuenta que está rendida.

AZÁN San Miguel va de vencida, que gran morisma allá corre. 485

(Suena mucha vocería de «¡Li, li, li!» y atambores; sale ROAMA.)

ROAMA San Miguel se ha entrado ya, y, sobre el muro español,
son tus medias lunas sol,
el más bello que hizo Alá.
Fuéronse a Mazalquivir 490
algunos que se escaparon.

AZÁN Algún tanto dilataron esos perros el vivir.

ALABEZ Desta huida no se arguye el refrán que el vulgo trata, 495 que es hacer puente de plata al enemigo que huye.

CUCO Hoy de aquel gran capilludo las memorias quedarán enterradas con Orán, 500
pues tú puedes más que él pudo.

AZÁN ¡Valeroso don Martín, que te precias de otro Marte, espera, que voy a darte,
a tu usanza, un San Martín! 505

(Éntranse todos.)

(Salen ARLAXA y MARGARITA, cubierto el rostro con un velo, y DON JUAN, como cautivo.)

DON JUAN Ayer me entró por la vista cruda rabia a los sentidos, y hoy me entra por los oídos, sin haber quien la resista.

Ayer la suerte inhumana, 510
a quien mil veces maldigo, me hizo ver mi enemigo,
y hoy me hace oír mi hermana.

Quítate el velo, señora, y sacarme has de una duda 515
por quien tiembla el alma y suda.

MARGARITA ¿Otra vez? No puedo agora.

DON JUAN ¡Ay Dios, que la voz es ésta de mi buscada enemiga!

MARGARITA Si el oírme te fatiga, 520
jamás te daré respuesta.

DON JUAN No me tengas más suspenso; descúbrete, que me das,
mientras que cubierta estás, un dolor que llega a inmenso. 525

ARLAXA Fátima, por vida mía, que te descubras; veremos por qué hace estos extremos este cristiano.

MARGARITA Sí haría, si no me importase mucho 530
encubrirme desta suerte.

DON JUAN Los ecos son de mi muerte los que en esta voz escucho.

ARLAXA Descúbrete, no te asombres; que has de saber, si lo ignoras, 535 que nunca para las moras los cristianos fueron hombres.
Ya no es nadie el que es esclavo;
no tienes que recelarte.

MARGARITA Yo daré, por contentarte, 540 con mis designios al cabo.

ARLAXA Aparte.

Que te conozca, no importa;
cuanto más, que has de negallo

MARGARITA Aparte.

Dudosa en todo me hallo.

ARLAXA Aparte.

Ten ánimo, no seas corta. 545

MARGARITA Descúbrome; vesme aquí, cristiano; mírame bien.

DON JUAN; Oh, el mismo rostro de quien aquí me tiene sin mí!

¡Oh hembra la más liviana 550 que el sol ha visto jamás!
¡Oh hermana de Satanás primero que no mi hermana!

Por ejemplos más de dos he visto puesto en efeto 555 que, en perdiéndose el respeto al mundo, se pierde a Dios.

ARLAXA ¿Qué dices, perro?

DON JUANQue es ésta
mi hermana.

ARLAXA¿Fátima?

DON JUANSí.

ARLAXA; En mi vida vi ni oí 560 tan linda y graciosa fiesta!
¡Tuya mi hermana! ¿Estás loco?
Mírala bien.

DON JUAN Ya la miro.

ARLAXA ¿Qué dices, pues?

DON JUAN Que me admiro, y en el juicio me apoco. 565 Por dicha, ¿hace Mahoma milagros?

ARLAXA Mil a montones.

DON JUAN ¿Y hace transformaciones?

ARLAXA Cuando voluntad le toma.

DON JUAN ¿Y suele mudar, tal vez, 570 en mora alguna cristiana?

ARLAXA Sí.

DON JUAN Pues aquésta es mi hermana, y la tuya está en Jerez.

ARLAXA ¡Roama, Roama, ven!

(Entra ROAMA.)

ROAMA Señora; ¿qué es lo que mandas? 575

ARLAXA Que pongas las carnes blandas a este perro.

ROAMA Está bien.

(Vuélvese.)

ARLAXA Con un corbacho procura sacarle de la intención una cierta discreción 580 que da indicios de locura.

MARGARITA De cualquiera maleficio, Arlaxa, que al hombre culpa, le viene a sobrar disculpa en la falta del juicio. 585 No le castigues así
por cosa que es tan liviana.

DON JUAN ¡Juro a Dios que eres mi hermana, o el diablo está hablando en ti!

(Suena dentro asalto.)

ARLAXA ¿No oyes, Fátima, que dan 590 asalto a Mazalquivir, que hasta aquí se hace sentir en el conflicto en que están?
Deja a ese perro, y acude, por si lo podremos ver. 595

(Éntranse ARLAXA y MARGARITA.)

MARGARITA Siempre te he de obedecer.

DON JUAN; Y quieren que desto dude!

Por ser grande la distancia que hay de mi hermana a ser mora, imagino que en mí mora 600 gran cantidad de ignorancia.

Estraño es el devaneo con quien vengo a contender, pues no me deja creer lo que con los ojos veo. 605

(Éntrase.)

(Salen a la muralla DON MARTÍN, el capitán GUZMÁN y BUITRAGO con una mochila a las espaldas y una bota de vino, comiendo un pedazo de pan.)

DON MARTÍN ¡Gente soberbia y crüel, a quien ayuda la suerte, no penséis que es éste el fuerte tan flaco de San Miguel!

¡Bravo Guzmán, gran Buitrigo, 610 hoy ha de ser vuestro día!

BUITRAGO (Bebe.)

Déjeme vueseñoría que me esfuerce con un trago.

¡Échenme destos alanos agora de dos en dos, 615 porque yo les juro a Dios que han de ver si tengo manos!

(Salen al teatro AZÁN, el CUCO, el ALABEZ, DON FERNANDO y otros moros con escalas.)

AZÁN Al embestir no se tarde; porque quiero estar presente, para honrar al que es valiente 620
y dar infamia al cobarde.

Muzel, una escala toma,
y muéstranos que te dan,
como a melionés galán,
manos las del gran Mahoma. 625

¡Ea; al embestir, amigos; amigos, al embestir;
que hoy será Mazalquivir sepultura de enemigos!

(Embisten; anda la grita; lleva MUZEL una escala; sube por ella, y otro moro por otra; deciende al moro BUITRAGO, y DON FERNANDO ase a MUZEL y derribale; pelea con otros, y mátalos. Todos han de caer dentro del vestuario. Desde un cabo mira AZÁN, el CUCO y el ALABEZ lo que pasa.)

DON FERNANDO Ya no es tiempo de aguardar 630 a designios prevenidos, viendo que están oprimidos los que yo debo ayudar.
¡Baja, Muzel!

ALIMUZEL ¿Por ventura, quiéresme quitar la gloria 635
desta ganada vitoria?

DON FERNANDO Aún más mi intento procura.

ALIMUZEL ¡Que me derribas! ¡Espera, que ya abajo a castigarte!

DON FERNANDO Aunque bajase el dios Marte 640
acá de su quinta esfera, no le estimaré en un higo.
¡Oh, cómo que trepa el galgo!

(Derriba al otro que sube.)

ALIMUZEL Poco puedo y poco valgo con este amigo enemigo. 645 ¿Por qué contra mí, Lozano, esgrimes el fuerte acero?

(Riñen los dos.)

DON FERNANDO Porque soy cristiano, y quiero mostrarte que soy cristiano.

DON MARTÍN ¡Disparen la artillería! 650 ¡Aquí, Buitrago y Guzmán!
¡Robledo, venga alquitrán!
¡Arrojad esa alcancía!
¡Allí, que se sube aquél!

DON FERNANDO Donde yo estoy, este muro 655 estará siempre seguro;
y, aunque le pese a Muzel, este perro vendrá al suelo.

(Derriba a otro.)

AZÁN¿Quién es aquél que derriba a cuantos suben arriba? 660

CUCOQue es renegado recelo;
pero yo lo veré presto,
y le haré que se arrepienta.

AZÁNA un rey no toca esa afrenta.

(Vase el del CUCO contra DON FERNANDO.)

CUCOMahoma se sirve en esto. 665

GUZMÁN Buitrago, el que nos defiende es, sin duda, don Fernando.

BUITRAGO Aqueso estaba pensando, porque a los moros ofende.

CUCO ¡Renegado, perro, aguarda! 670

DON FERNANDO¡Rey del Cuco, perro, aguardo!

CUCO¿Cómo en tu muerte me tardo?

DON FERNANDOPues la tuya ya se tarda.
Alimuzel, désta vas,
y tú, rey, irás de aquésta. 675

¡Concluyóse ya esta fiesta!

CUCO ¡Muy mal herido me has!

ALIMUZEL ¡Muerto me has, moro fingido y cristiano mal cristiano!

(Caen dentro del vestuario.)

DON FERNANDO Tengo pesada la mano 680
y alborotado el sentido;
Dios sabe si a mí me pesa.
Gran don Martín valeroso, haz que deciendan al foso
y recojan esta presa. 685

GUZMÁN Don Fernando, señor, es, que viene a hacer recompensa de la cometida ofensa:
diez ha herido, y muerto a tres;
y el rey del Cuco es aquél 690 que yace casi difunto.

DON MARTÍN Pues socorrámosle al punto.

GUZMÁN Y el otro es Alimuzel.

DON MARTÍN Vayan por la casamata al foso, y retírenlos. 695

BUITRAGO Vamos por ellos los dos.

(Quítase del muro GUZMÁN y BUITRAGO.)

AZÁNYa no es la empresa barata, pues me cuesta un rey, y tantos que en veinte asaltos han muerto.
¿Alboroto, y en el puerto 700
(¿qué podrá ser?) de los Santos?

(Suenan todo.)

Campanas en la ciudad
suenan, señal de alegrías,
y tocan las chirimías;
aquésta es gran novedad. 705
Vamos a ver lo que es esto, y toquen a recoger.

ALABEZNo sé lo que pueda ser.

AZÁN Pues yo lo sabré bien presto.

(Éntranse.)

(Salen BUITRAGO y GUZMÁN.)

GUZMÁN Al retirar, don Fernando, 710 que en gran peligro estás puesto.

DON FERNANDONo lo pienso hacer tan presto.

BUITRAGO Pues, ¿cuándo?

DON FERNANDO Menos sé cuándo.

Yo, que escalé estas murallas, aunque no para huir dellas, 715
he de morir al pie dellas, y con la vida amparallas.

Conozco lo que me culpa,
y, aunque a la muerte me entregue, haré la disculpa llegue 720
adonde llegó la culpa.

BUITRAGO Yo sé muy poco, y diría,
y está muy puesto en razón,
que la desesperación
no puede ser valentía. 725

GUZMÁN Menos riesgo está en ponerte del conde a la voluntad que hacer la temeridad
donde está cierto el perderte.

Procúrate retirar, 730
pues es cosa conocida que al mal de perder la vida no hay mal que pueda llegar.

En efecto: has de ir por fuerza, si ya no quieres de grado. 735

DON FERNANDO De vuestra fuerza me agrado, pues más obliga que fuerza.

Retirad aquesos dos
del foso, que es gente ilustre.

BUITRAGO Locura fuera de lustre 740 el quedarte, ¡juro a Dios!

(Éntranse todos.)

(Salen AZÁN, ARLAXA, MARGARITA, DON JUAN, ROAMA, que trae preso a VOZMEDIANO.)

ROAMA Éste, pasando de Orán a Mazalquivir, fue preso.

AZÁN Éste nos dirá el suceso
y por qué alegres están. 745

VOZMEDIANO Porque les entró un socorro, que por él, ¡oh gran señor!, a la hambre y al temor
han dado carta de horro.

Un don Álvaro Bazán, 750 terror de naciones fieras, a pesar de tus galeras,
ha dado socorro a Orán.

En la cantidad es poco,
y en el valor sobrehumano. 755

DON JUAN Si aquéste no es Vozmediano, concluyo con que estoy loco.

VOZMEDIANO ¡Suerte airada, por quien vivo en pena casi infinita!
Aquélla, ¿no es Margarita, 760
y su hermano aquel cautivo?

AZÁN ¿Hay nuevas de otro socorro,
cristiano?

VOZMEDIANODicen que sí.

DON JUANDe haber dudado hasta aquí ya me avergüenzo y me corro. 765 ¿No os llamáis vos Vozmediano?

VOZMEDIANONo, señor.

DON JUAN¿Qué me decís?

VOZMEDIANOQue no.

DON JUAN¡Por Dios, que mentís!

VOZMEDIANOEstoy preso y soy cristiano, y así, no os respondo nada. 770

DON JUAN¿Aquella no es Margarita, viejo ruin?

VOZMEDIANOEs infinita vuestra necedad pensada.
Pedro Álvarez es mi nombre:
ved si os habéis engañado. 775

DON JUANEEl seso tengo turbado;
no hay cosa que no me asombre.

Que si éste no es Vozmediano y no es Margarita aquélla, y el que causó mi querella 780
no es el otro mal cristiano, tampoco soy yo don Juan,
sino algún hombre encantado.

(Entra un MORO.)

MORO¿Cómo estás tan sosegado, valeroso y fuerte Azán? 785 Si tardas un momento, no habrá fusta, galera ni bajel de cuantos tienes en este mar que no sea miserable presa del español, que a remo y vela viene a embestirte. Rey Azán, ¿qué aguardas? 790

AZÁNTodo moro se salve, que los turcos solos se han de embarcar. ¡Adiós, amigos!

(Vase.)

ARLAXAFátima, no me dejes; ven conmigo, que tiempo habrá donde a tu gusto acudas.

MARGARITANo te puedo faltar; guía, señora. 795

(Éntranse las dos.)

DON JUANSolos quedamos, hombre, y sólo quiero que me digas quién eres; que yo pienso que eres un Vozmediano de mi tierra.

VOZMEDIANONo es este tiempo para tantas largas; la libertad tenemos en las manos; 800 dejalla de cobrar será locura.
Pedro Álvarez me llamo por agora.

(Éntrase.)

DON JUAN¿Cómo podré dejarte, hermana o mora?

(Éntrase.)

(Salen a la muralla DON MARTÍN, GUZMÁN, DON FERNANDO y BUITRAGO.)

DON MARTÍN¡Oh, que se embarca el perro y que se escapa!
Dobla la punta, general invicto, 805
y embístele.

GUZMÁNPor más que lo procura, no es posible alcanzarle.

DON FERNANDO¡A orza, a orza, con la vela hasta el tope! ¡Oh, que se escapa!
De Canastel el cabo dobla, y vase.

DON MARTÍNLos perros de la tierra, en remolinos 810 confusos, con el miedo a las espaldas, huyen y dejan la campaña libre.

BUITRAGOToda la artillería se han dejado.

GUZMÁN Las proas endereza nuestra Armada al puerto, y ya de Orán el conde insigne 815 ha salido también.

DON MARTÍN la marina, que el bravo don Francisco de Mendoza no tardará en llegar.

(Éntrase DON MARTÍN y BUITRAGO.)

DON FERNANDO Amigo, escucha:
¿no ves aquel montón que va huyendo de moros por la falda del ribazo? 820

GUZMÁN Muy bien. ¿Por qué lo dices?

DON FERNANDO Allí creo que va desta alma la mitad.

GUZMÁN ¿Va Arlaxa?

DON FERNANDO Arlaxa va.

GUZMÁN ¡Mahoma la acompañe!

DON FERNANDO Ven, que con ella va la que me lleva el alma, y me conviene detenellas; 825 sígueme, que has de hacer por mí otras cosas que me importan la honra.

GUZMÁN Yo te sigo;
que hasta la aras he de serte amigo.

(Éntranse.)

(Sale, como que se desembarca, DON FRANCISCO DE MENDOZA; recíbenle el CONDE y DON MARTÍN, BUITRAGO y otros.)

CONDE Sea vuesa señoría bien venido, cuanto ha sido el deseo 830 que de verle estas fuerzas han tenido.

DON FRANCISCO El cielo, a lo que creo, en mi mucha tardanza ha sido parte, porque viese esta tierra más de un Marte;
que de aquestas murallas las ruinas 835 muestran que aquí hubo brazos de fuerzas que llegaron a divinas.

BUITRAGO Rompen por embarazos imposibles los hartos y valientes, y esto saben mis brazos y mis dientes. 840

DON MARTÍN ¡Paso, Buitrago!

BUITRAGO Yo, señor, bien puedo hablar, pues soy soldado tal, que a la hambre sola tengo miedo.
Ya el cerco es acabado.

DON MARTÍN No es para aquí, Buitrago, aqueso. ¡Paso! 845

BUITRAGONadie sabe la hambre que yo paso.

CONDE Cincuenta y siete asaltos reforzados dieron los turcos fieros
a estos terrones por el suelo echados.

BUITRAGOCincuenta y siete aceros 850 tajantes respondieron a sus bríos, todos en peso destos brazos míos.
Corté y tajé más de una turca estambre.

CONDE;Buitrago, basta agora!

BUITRAGOBastará, a no morirme yo de hambre. 855

DON FRANCISCO En vuestro pecho mora, famoso don Martín, la valentía.

BUITRAGOY en el mío la hambre y sed se cría.

(Entra el capitán GUZMÁN y lee un billete a DON FRANCISCO; y, en leyéndole, dice:)

DON FRANCISCO Haráse lo que pide don Fernando; que todo lo merece 860
lo que dél va la fama publicando.
Coyuntura se ofrece
donde alegre y seguro venir puede.

GUZMÁNTu gran valor al que es mayor excede.

(Éntrase GUZMÁN.)

DON FRANCISCO Pido, en albricias deste buen suceso, 865 señor conde, una cosa que por algo atrevida la confieso, mas no dificultosa.

CONDE¿Qué me puede mandar vuesseñoría que no haga por deuda o cortesía? 870

DON FRANCISCO De don Fernando Saavedra pido perdón, porque su culpa con su fogoso corazón la mido, y él dará su disculpa.

CONDEMuuy mal la podrá dar; pero, con todo, 875
señor, a vuestro gusto me acomodo.

(Entran DON FERNANDO y ALIMUZEL, con una banda, como que está herido; ARLAXA, MARGARITA, DON JUAN y VOZMEDIANO.)

DON FERNANDO Si confesar el delito, con claro arrepentimiento, mitiga en parte la ira del juez que es sabio y recto, 880 yo, arrepentido, aunque tarde, el mal que hice confieso, sin dar más disculpa dél que un honrado pensamiento.
A la voz del desafío 885
deste moro corrí ciego, sin echar de ver los bandos, que al más bravo ponen freno.
Pero no es éste lugar

para alargarme en el cuento 890 de mi estraña y rara historia, que dejo para otro tiempo.

CONDEAgradecedlo al padrino que habéis tenido, que creo que allí llegará la pena 895 do llegó el delito vuestro.
Pero, ¿qué moras son éstas?, ¿y qué cautivos? ¿Qué es esto?

DON FERNANDOTodo lo sabrás después, y por agora te ruego 900
que me des, señor, licencia, para hablar sólo un momento y acomodar muchas causas de quien verás los efectos.

CONDEHablad lo que os diere gusto, 905 que del vuestro le tendremos; que siempre vuestras palabras responden a vuestros hechos.

DON FERNANDOYo soy, Arlaxa, el cristiano, y entiende que ya no miento, 910
don Fernando, el de la fama,
que te enamoró el deseo.
La palabra que le diste
a Alimuzel tenga efecto, que él hará entrego de mí, 915 pues yo en sus manos me entrego.
Y vos, don Juan valeroso, cuyo honrado y noble intento os trujo a tal confusión que os turbó el conocimiento, 920

perdonad a vuestra hermana, que el romper del monesterio redundará en su alabanza, señor, si vos gustáis dello.
Sin dote será mi esposa; 925 que nunca falta el dinero donde los gustos se miden
y se estrechan los deseos.
En esta mora en el traje a vuestra hermana os ofrezco, 930 y a mi esposa, si ella quiere.

MARGARITA Yo sí quiero.

DON FERNANDO Yo sí quiero.

DON JUAN ¿No es aquéste Vozmediano?

VOZMEDIANO El mismo.

DON JUAN ¡Gracias al cielo que, tras de tantos nublados, 935 claro el sol y alegre veo!
No es este famoso día
de venganzas, y no tengo corazón a quien no ablande tal sumisión y tal ruego. 940 Yo perdono a Margarita, y por esposa os la entrego, Alejandro de mi hacienda, pues la mitad os ofrezco.

ARLAXAY yo la mano a Muzel; 945 que, aunque mora, valor tengo para cumplir mi palabra;

cuanto más, que lo deseo.

CONDE Tan alegre destas cosas estoy, cuanto estoy suspenso, 950 porque dellas veo el fin,
y no imagino el comienzo.

DON FERNANDO ¿Ya no te he dicho, señor, que te lo diré a su tiempo?

(Entra UNO.)

UNO En este punto espiró 955
el buen alférez Robledo.

GUZMÁN Dios le perdone, y mil gracias doy al piadoso cielo,
que me quitó de los hombros tan pesado sobrehueso. 960 Quien quiere tener la vida rendida a cualquier encuentro, y no tener gusto en ella ni velando ni durmiendo, afrente a algún bien nacido, 965 y verá presente luego
el rostro que el temor tiene, la sospechas y el recelo.

BUITRAGO Quien quisiere se le quite todo temor, todo miedo, 970 tenga hambre, y verá como cesa todo en no comiendo.

DON MARTÍN Yo añadiré las raciones, Buitrago.

BUITRAGO ¡Hágate el cielo vencedor nunca vencido 975 por casi siglos eternos!

CONDE Entremos en la ciudad, señor don Francisco.

DON FRANCISCO Entremos, porque a la vuelta me llaman estos favorables vientos, 980 y quiero deste principio entender estos sucesos, porque, en ser de don Fernando, gustaré de que sean buenos.

BUITRAGO Tóquense las chirimías 985
y serán, si bien comemos, dulces y alegres las fiestas.

GUZMÁN ¿Y si no?

BUITRAGO Renegaremos.

UNO ¡Buitrago, daca el alma!

BUITRAGO;Hijo de puta! ¿Tenemos 990 más almas que dar, bellaco?

UNO;Daca el alma!

BUITRAGO;Por San Pedro, que si os asgo, hi de poltrón, que habéis de saber si tengo alma que daros!

GUZMÁNBuitrigo, 995
no haya más, que llega el tiempo de dar fin a esta comedia, cuyo principal intento
ha sido mezclar verdades con fabulosos intentos. 1000

Jornada primera

Entra REINALDOS y MALGESÍ.

REINALDOS Sin duda que el ser pobre es causa desto;
pues, ¡vive Dios!, que pueden estas manos echar a todas horas todo el resto con bárbaros, franceses y paganos.
¿A mí, Roldán, a mí se ha de hacer esto? 5 Levántate a los cielos soberanos, el confalón que tienes de la Iglesia.
O reniego, o descreo...

MALGESÍ ¡Oh, hermano!

REINALDOS ¡Oh, pesia...!

MALGESÍ Mira que suenan mal esas razones.

REINALDOS Nunca las pasa mi intención del techo. 10

MALGESÍ Pues, ¿por qué a pronunciallas te dispones?

REINALDOS ¡Rabio de enojo y muero de despecho!

MALGESÍ Pónesme en confusión.

REINALDOSY tú me pones...
¡Déjame, que revienta de ira el pecho!

MALGESÍ¡Por Dios!, que has de decirme en este instante 15 con quién las has.

REINALDOSCon el señor de Aglante.
Con aquese bastardo, malnacido, arrogante, hablador, antojadizo, más de soberbia que de honor vestido.

MALGESÍ¿No me dirás, Reinaldos, qué te hizo? 20

REINALDOS¿Que a tanto desprecio he yo venido, que así ose atrevérseme un mestizo?
Pues ¡juro a fe que, aunque le valga Roma, que le mate, y le guise, y me le coma!

En un balcón estaba de palacio, 25
y con él Galalón junto a su lado;
yo entraba por el patio, muy de espacio, cual suelo, de mí mismo acompañado; los dos miraron mi bohemio lacio y no de perlas mi capelo ornado; 30 tomáronse a reír, y a lo que creo, la risa fue de ver mi pobre arreo.

Subí, como con alas, la escalera, de rabia lleno y de temor vacío;
no los hallé donde los vi, y quisiera 35 ejecutar en mí mi furia y brío.
Entráronse allá dentro, y, si no fuera porque debo respeto al señor mío, en su presencia le sacara el alma, pequeña a tanta injuria, y débil palma. 40

De aquel traidor de Galalón no hago cuenta ninguna, que es cobarde y necio;

de Roldán, sí, y en ira me deshago, pues me conoce, y no me tiene en precio.
Pero presto tendrán los dos el pago, 45 pagando con sus vidas mi desprecio, aunque lo estorbe...

MALGESÍ ¿No ves que desatinas?

REINALDOS Con aquesas palabras más me indinas.

MALGESÍ Roldán es éste, vesle aquí que sale,
y con él Galalón.

REINALDOS Hazte a una parte, 50 que quiero ver lo que este infame vale, que es tenido en el mundo por un Marte.

(Entra ROLDÁN y GALALÓN.)

¡Agora, sí, burlón, que no te cale en la estancia de Carlos retirarte, ni a ti forjar traiciones y mentiras 55 para volver pacíficas mis iras!

GALALÓN Vuélvome, porque es éste un atrevido y el decir y hacer pone en un punto.

Vase.

REINALDOS ¡Bien os habéis de mi ademán reído

los dos, a fe!

ROLDÁN; Que está loco barrunto! 60

REINALDOS; ¿Dónde está aquel cobarde?

MALGESÍ Ya se ha ido.

REINALDOS Tuvo temor de no quedar difunto si un soplo le alcanzara de mi boca.

ROLDÁN; A risa su arrogancia me provoca!
¿Con quién las has, Reinaldos?

REINALDOS; ¿Yo? Contigo. 65

ROLDÁN; ¿Conmigo? Pues, ¿por qué?

REINALDOS Ya tú lo sabes.

ROLDÁN No sé más de que siempre fui tu amigo, pues de mi voluntad tienes las llaves.

REINALDOS Tu risa ha sido deso buen testigo;
no hay para qué tan sin porqué te alabes. 70 Dime: ¿puede, por dicha, la pobreza quitar lo que nos da naturaleza?

Que yo trujera con anillos de oro adornadas mis manos y trujera con pompa, a modo de real decoro, 75 mi persona compuesta; ¿adondequiera rindiera yo con esto al fuerte moro o al gallardo español, que nos espera?

No; que no dan costosos atavíos fuerza a los brazos y a los pechos bríos. 80

Mi persona desnuda, y esta espada, y este indomable pecho que conoces, ancha se harán adondequiera entrada, como en la seca mies agudas hoces.
Mi fuerza conocida y estimada 85 está por todo el orbe dando voces, diciendo quién yo soy; y así, tu burla contra toda razón de mí se burla.

Y, porque veas que en razón me fundo, mete mano a la espada y haz la prueba: 90
verás que en nada no te soy segundo, ni es para mí el probarte cosa nueva.
¿Que de nuevo te ríes, pese al mundo?

ROLDÁN ¿Qué endiablado furor, primo, te lleva a romper nuestras paces, o qué risa 95 así el aviso tuyo desavisa?

MALGESÍ Dice que dél hiciste burla cuando entraba por el patio de palacio, su poco fausto y soledad mirando,
y su bohemio, por antiguo, lacio. 100 Pensólo, y, su estrechez contemplando, y creyendo la burla, en poco espacio la escalera subió; y, si allí os hallara, en llanto vuestra risa se tornara.

ROLDÁN Hiciera mal, porque por Dios os juro 105 que no me pasó tal por pensamiento;
y desto puede estar cierto y seguro,

pues yo lo digo y más con juramento.
Al pilar de la Iglesia, al fuerte muro, al amparo de Francia y al aliento 110 de los pechos valientes, ¿quién osara, aunque en ello la vida le importara?

Esta disculpa baste, ¡oh primo amado!, para templar vuestra no vista furia;
que no es costumbre de mi pecho honrado 115 hacer a nadie semejante injuria.

Y más a vos, que solo habéis ganado más oro que tendrá y tiene Liguria, si es que la honra vale más que el oro que en Tíbar cierne el mal vestido moro. 120

Dadme esa mano, ¡oh primo!, porque, en uno estas dos que imagino sin iguales, no siento yo que habrá valor alguno que de su puerta llegue a los umbrales.

(Vuelve GALALÓN con el EMPERADOR CARLOMAGNO.)

EMPERADOR ¿Que así comenzó a hablar el importuno, 125
y descubrió en el modo indicios tales, que presto de la lengua desmandada pasaría la cólera a la espada?

GALALÓN No los pongas en paz, porque es prudencia, y en materia de estado esto se advierte, 130 tener a tales dos en diferencia, que son ministros de tu vida y muerte;
que, habiendo entre dos grandes competencia y entre dos consejeros, de tal suerte el uno y otro a sus contrarios temen, 135 que es fuerza que en virtud ambos se estremen, por temor de las ciertas parlerías que te podrá decir aquél de aquéste;
y no desprecies las razones mías, si no quieres que caro no te cueste. 140

EMPERADOR No están de aquel talante que decías.
Di: ¿Roldán no es aquél? ¿Reinaldos, éste?
En paz están, y asidos de la mano.

GALALÓN Señores, ¿no habéis visto a Carlomano?

ROLDÁN ¡Oh grande emperador!

EMPERADOR ¡Oh amados primos! 145
¿Habéis tenido algún enojo acaso?

ROLDÁN Sin padrinos los dos nos avenimos cuando torcemos de amistad el paso.
Muchas veces confieso que reñimos, mas ninguna de veras.

GALALÓN A hablar paso 150 Reinaldos y sin cólera, no hiciera que nuestro emperador aquí viniera; que yo le truje imaginando, cierto, que estábades los dos ya en gran batalla.

MALGESÍ Holgárate que el uno fuera muerto, 155
y aun los dos; que este intento en ti se halla.

EMPERADOR Tu temor ha salido en todo incierto.
De lo que a mí me place, es que la malla y los aceros destos dos varones requieren más honrosas ocasiones. 160

ROLDÁN Reinaldos, no le tengas ojeriza a Galalón, que a fe que es nuestro amigo.

MALGESÍ; Así le viese yo hecho ceniza, o de la suerte que en mi mente digo!
Éste es el soplo que aquel fuego atiza 165
y enciende, por quien siempre es enemigo nuestro buen rey de nuestro buen linaje.

REINALDOS; Cuán sin aliento viene aqueste paje!

PAJE Señor, si quieres ver una ventura, que en la vida se ha visto semejante, 170 ponte a ese corredor: que te aseguro que es aventicio hermoso y elegante.

REINALDOS; Donoso ha estado el paje!

PAJE Yo lo juro
por vida de mi padre. Trae delante una diosa del cielo dos salvajes 175 que sirven de escuderos y de pajes; una que debe ser su bisabuela viene detrás sobre una mula puesta.
Digo que es cosa de admirar. Mas hela do asoma: ved si viene bien compuesta. 180

MALGESÍ; Si viene con mistura de cautela tan grande novedad?

EMPERADOR Poco te cuesta

saberlo si tu libro traes a mano.

MALGESÍAquí le tengo, y el saberlo es llano.

(Apártase MALGESÍ a un lado del teatro, saca un libro pequeño, pónese a leer en él, y luego sale una figura de demonio por lo hueco del teatro y pónese al lado de MALGESÍ; y han de haber comenzado a entrar por el patio ANGÉLICA la bella, sobre un palafrén, embozada y la más ricamente vestida que ser pudiere; traen la rienda dos salvajes, vestidos de yedra o de cáñamo teñido de verde; detrás viene una dueña sobre una mula con gualdrapa: trae delante de sí un rico cofrecillo y a una perrilla de falda; en dando una vuelta al patio, la apean los salvajes, y va donde está el EMPERADOR, el cual, como la vee, dice:)

EMPERADOR Digo que trae gallarda compostura 185
y que es gallardo el traje y peregrino, y que si llega al brío la hermosura, que pasa de lo humano a lo divino.

MALGESÍ¿Aventura es aquésta? Es desventura.

EMPERADOR¿Qué dices, Malgesí?

MALGESÍNo determino 190
aún bien lo que es.

EMPERADORPues mira más atento.

MALGESÍYa procuro cumplir tu mandamiento.

EMPERADOR Salid a la escalera a recibilla, y traed a la dama a mi presencia.

REINALDOS Cierta que es ésta estraña maravilla. 195

MALGESÍ Cierta que no yerra aquí mi ciencia.

EMPERADOR ¿Qué es eso, Malgesí?

MALGESÍ Darás a oílla gratos oídos, pero no creencia;
que esta dama que ves... Aún no sé el resto; escúchala, que yo lo sabré presto. 200

(Entra en el teatro ANGÉLICA con los salvajes y la DUEÑA, acompañada de REINALDOS, ROLDÁN y GALALÓN; viene ANGÉLICA embozada.)

ANGÉLICA Prospere el alto cielo, poderoso señor, tu real estado,
y seas en el suelo
por uno y otro siglo prolongado de tan rara ventura, 205 que del tiempo mudable esté segura.

Puesto que tu presciencia de un sí cortés me tiene asegurada, no osaré sin licencia decirte, ¡oh gran señor!, una embajada, 210 que aumentará la fama
que a tanto prez y a tanto honor te llama.

EMPERADOR Decid lo que os pluguiere.

ANGÉLICA Hizo verdad tu sí mi pensamiento.

Presta a lo que dijere, 215
sagrado emperador, oído atento, y préstemele aquéllos
a quien la gola señaló sus cuellos.

Soy única heredera
del gran rey Galafrón, cuyo ancho imperio 220
deste mar la ribera,
ni aun casi la mitad del hemisferio, sus límites describe;
que en otros mares y otros cielos vive.

A su grandeza iguala 225 su saber, en el cual tuvo noticia ser mi ventura mala, si así como el estado real codicia,
a varón me entregase que en sangre y en grandeza me igualase. 230

Halló por cierto y llano que el que venciese en singular batalla a un mi pequeño hermano que viste honrosa, aunque temprana malla, éste, cierto, sería 235
bien de su reino y la ventura mía.

Por provincias diversas he venido con él, donde he tenido ya prósperas, ya adversas venturas, y a la fin me he conducido 240
a este reino de Francia, donde tengo por cierta mi ganancia.

De Ardenia en las umbrosas selvas queda mi hermano, allí esperando quien, ya por codiciosas 245 prendas, o esta belleza deseando, (Desembózase.)

su fuerte brazo pruebe;
y es lo que he de decir lo que hacer debe.

Quien fuere derribado
del golpe de la lanza, ha de ser preso, 250

porque le está vedado
poner mano a la espada; y es expreso del rey este mandato,
o, por mejor decir, concierto y pacto.

Y si tocare el suelo 255 mi hermano, quedará quien le venciére levantado a mi cielo,
o noble sea, o sea el que se fuere,
y no de otra manera.

MALGESÍ;Qué bien que lo relata la hechicera! 260

ANGÉLICA ¡Ea, pues, caballeros!, quien reinos apetece y gentileza, aprestad los aceros,
que a poco precio venden la belleza que veis, venid en vuelo. 265

ROLDÁN;Por Dios, que encanta!

REINALDOSAdmira, ¡vive el cielo!

ANGÉLICA Ya te he dicho mi intento.
Conviéneme que dé la vuelta luego.

(Éntrase la SOMBRA.)

EMPERADORDeteneos un momento, si es que puede con vos mi mando o ruego, 270 porque seáis servida
según vuestra grandeza conocida.

ANGÉLICA Lo imposible me pides; dame licencia y queda en paz.

EMPERADOR Pues veo que a tu gusto te mides, 275 en buen hora te vuelve, y el deseo de servirte recibe.

MALGESÍ; El mismo engaño en esta falsa vive!

(Vase ANGÉLICA y su compañía.)

REINALDOS ¿Para qué vas tras ella, Roldán?

ROLDÁN Son escusadas tus demandas. 280

REINALDOS Yo solo he de ir con ella.

ROLDÁN; Qué impertinente y qué soberbio andas!

REINALDOS; Detente, no la sigas!

ROLDÁN Reinaldos, bueno está; no me persigas.

MALGESÍ Deténlos, no los dejes; 285
haz, señor, que se prenda aquella maga.

REINALDOS Como de aquí te alejes, daréte de tu intento justa paga.

EMPERADOR ¿Qué desvergüenza es ésta?

MALGESÍ Manda prender aquella deshonesto, 290 que será, a lo que veo, la ruina de Francia en cierto modo.

ROLDÁN Cumpliré mi deseo
a tu pesar, y aun al del mundo todo.

REINALDOS Camina, pues, y guarte. 295

EMPERADOR Acaba, Malgesí, de declararte.

MALGESÍ Ésta que has visto es hija del Galafrón, cual dijo; mas su intento, que el cielo le corrija, es diferente del fingido cuento, 300 porque su padre ordena tener tus Doce Pares en cadena;
y, si los prende, piensa venir sobre tu reino y conquistalle;
y trázase esta ofensa 305 con enviar su hijo y adornalle con una hermosa lanza,
con que de todos la vitoria alcanza.
La lanza es encantada,
y tiene tal virtud, que, aquel que toca, 310
le atierra, y es dorada;
por eso pide aquella infame y loca que la espada no prueben los que a la empresa con valor se atreven.

Por añagaza pone 315
aquella incomparable hermosura, que el corazón dispone
aun de la más cobarde criatura para que el hecho intente, do, aunque se pierda, nunca se arrepiente. 320

Serán tus Doce Pares
presos si no lo estorbas, señor mío, y otros muchos millares de los tuyos que tienen fuerza y brío para mayores cosas. 325

EMPERADORLas que has contado son bien espantosas;
mas no sé remediallas,
y es porque no las creo. A ti te queda creellas y estorballas.

MALGESÍHaré cuanto mi industria y ciencia pueda. 330

GALALÓNNo son muy verdaderos, a decirte verdad, tus consejeros.

(Éntrase el EMPERADOR y GALALÓN.)

MALGESÍ Mi hermano va enojado con Roldán; estorbar quiero su daño.
En laberinto he entrado 335 que apenas saldré dél. ¡Oh ciego engaño, oh fuerza poderosa
de la mujer que es, sobre falsa, hermosa!

(Éntrase MALGESÍ, y entra BERNARDO DEL CARPIO, armado, y tráele la celada un VIZCAÍNO, su escudero, con botas y fieltro y su espada.)

BERNARDO Aquí, fuera de camino, podré reposar un poco. 340

VIZCAÍNO Señor sabio, que estás loco, tino vuelves desatino.

Vizcaíno que escudero
llevas contigo, te avisa camines no tanta prisa, 345 paso lleves de arriero.

Tierra buscas, tierra dejas, tanta parece hazaña,
pues, metiendo en tierra estraña, por Dios, de propia te alejas. 350

Bien que en España hay que hacer;
moros tienes en fronteras, tambores, pitos, banderas hay allá; ya puedes ver.

BERNARDO ¿Ya no te he dicho el intento 355 que a esta tierra me ha traído?

VIZCAÍNOCurioso mucho atrevido goza nunca pensamiento.

Bien podrás, bien podrás, dejar mala tanto hazaña; 360 a las de guerra y España llama.

BERNARDO Ya te entiendo, Blas.

VIZCAÍNO Bien es que sepas de yo buenos que consejos doy; que, por Juan Gaicoa, soy 365
vizcaíno; burro, no.

Señor, mira, si es que ver poder quieres del francés, camino a queste no es derecho; puedes volver. 370

BERNARDO Dicen que estas selvas son donde se hallan de contino, por cualquier senda o camino,
venturas de admiración,
y que en la mitad o al fin, 375
o al principio, o no sé dónde, entre unos bosques se esconde el gran padrón de Merlín, aquel grande encantador, que fue su padre el demonio. 380

VIZCAÍNO Echado está testimonio, y levántanle, señor.

BERNARDO Hele de buscar y hallar, si mil veces rodease
estas selvas.

VIZCAÍNO Tiempo vase; 385
duerme, o vuelve a caminar.

BERNARDO Vuelve, y ve si Ferraguto viene, que se quedó atrás, y a do quedo le dirás.

VIZCAÍNO Escudero siempre puto. 390

BERNARDO Dura y detestable guerra, por sólo aquesto eres buena:

que en pluma vuelves la arena,
y en blanda cama la tierra.

Tú ofreces, doquier que estás, 395
anchos y estendidos lechos, si no es que hay campos estrechos por donde los pasos das.

Eres un cierto beleño que, entre cuidados y enojos, 400 ofreces siempre a los ojos blando, aunque forzoso sueño.

Eres de su calidad,
según muestra la experiencia, madre de la diligencia, 405
madrastra de ociosidad.

Venid acá vos, cimera,
rica y estremada pieza,
y, pues sois de la cabeza, servidme de cabecera, 410 que ya el sueño de rondón va ocupando mis sentidos.

¡Bien dicen que los dormidos imagen de muerte son!

(Échase a dormir BERNARDO junto al padrón de MERLÍN, que ha de ser un mármol jaspeado, que se pueda abrir y cerrar, y a este instante parece encima de la montaña el mancebo ARGALIA, hermano de ANGÉLICA la bella, armado y con una lanza dorada.)

ARGALIA Mucha tierra se descubre 415 de encima desta montaña:
de aquesta parte es campaña, de estotra el bosque la cubre;
allí el camino blanquea,
y hasta París va derecho. 420 ¡Si mi hermana hubiese hecho el gran caso que desea!

Mas, si no me miente acaso la vista, aquélla es, sin duda, que el camino trueca y muda, 425
y hacia aquí endereza el paso.

Los palafrenes envía
por el camino real.
En cuanto hace, no hace mal;
recebirla es cortesía. 430

(Éntrase ARGALIA y sale ANGÉLICA con los salvajes y la DUEÑA.)

ANGÉLICA Cierta que es ésta la senda, o no acierto bien las señas,
y a la vuelta destas peñas sin duda está nuestra tienda.

DUEÑA ¿Cuándo, señora, veremos 435 el fin de nuestros caminos?

¿Cuándo destos desatinos a buen acuerdo saldremos?

¿Cuándo me veré, ¡ay de mí!, con mi almohadilla, sentada 440
en estrado y descansada, como algún tiempo me vi?

¿Cuándo dejaré de andar, cuando el sol salga o tramonte, deste monte en aquel monte, 445
de un lugar a otro lugar?

¿Cuándo de mis redomillas veré los blancos afeites, las unturas, los aceites, las adobadas pasillas? 450

¿Cuándo me daré un buen rato en reposo y sin sospecha?
Que traigo esta cara hecha una suela de zapato.

Los crudos aires de Francia 455 me tienen de aqueste modo.

ANGÉLICA Calla, que bien se hará todo.

DUEÑA No te arriendo la ganancia; que según yo vi el desnudo de aquellos dos paladines, 460 de tus caminos y fines
esperar buen fin no puedo.

ANGÉLICA No atinas con la verdad;
calla, que mi hermano viene.

(Entra ARGALIA.)

ARGALIA ¡Oh rico archivo, do tiene 465 sus tesoros la beldad!
¿Cómo vienes, y en qué modo has salido con tu intento?

ANGÉLICA Midióse a mi pensamiento la ventura casi en todo. 470 Vámonos al pabellón,
que allí, de espacio y sentada, contaré de mi embajada
el principio y conclusión.

ARGALIA Bien dices, hermana; ven, 475 que bien cerca de aquí está.

DUEÑA La triste que cual yo va, yo sé que no va muy bien;
que de la madre me aprieta un gran dolor en verdad. 480 Todo aquesto es frialdad deste andar a la jineta.

(Éntranse todos, sino es BERNARDO, que aún duerme; suene música de flautas tristes; despierta BERNARDO, ábrese el padrón, pare una figura de muerto, y dice:)

ESPÍRITU Valeroso español, cuyo alto intento de tu patria y amigos te destierra, vuelve a tu amado padre el pensamiento, 485
a quien larga prisión y oscura encierra.
A tal hazaña es gran razón que atento estés, y no en buscar inútil guerra por tan remotas partes y escusadas, adonde son las dichas desdichadas. 490 Tiempo vendrá que del francés valiente, al margen de los montes Pireneos, bajes la altiva y generosa frente
y goces de honrosísimos trofeos.
Sigue de tu ventura la corriente, 495 que iguala al gran valor de tus deseos; verás como te sube tu fortuna sobre la faz convexa de la luna.
Por ti tu patria se verá en sosiego, libre de ajeno mando y señorío; 500 tú serás agua al encendido fuego que arde en el pecho que de casto es frío.
Deja estas selvas, do caminas ciego, llevado de un curioso desvarío.
Vuelve, vuelve, Bernardo, a do te llama 505 un inmortal renombre y clara fama.
De Merlín el espíritu encantado soy, que aquí yago en esta selva oscura, del cielo para bien y mal guardado, aunque en mis males siempre se conjura; 510

y no seré deste lugar llevado a la negra región do el llanto dura, hasta que crucen estas selvas fieras muchas y cristianísimas banderas.

Mil cosas se me quedan por contarte, 515 que otra vez te diré, porque ahora importa detrás de aquestas ramas ocultarte, donde será tu estada breve y corta.
A dos, que cada cual por sí es un Marte, pondrás en paz, o mostrarás que corta 520 tu espada. Y, sin hablar, haz lo que digo, y entiende que te soy y seré amigo.

(Ciérrase el padrón, éntrese en él BERNARDO sin hablar palabra, y luego sale REINALDOS.)

REINALDOS En vano mis pasos muevo pues, entre estas flores tantas no hay señales de las plantas 525 que por guía y norte llevo.

Que si aquí hubieran pisado, claro estaba que este suelo fuera un traslado del cielo, de varias lumbres pintado. 530

¿Qué flor tocará la bella planta, a mí tan dulce y cara, que luego no se tornara,
o ya en sol, o en clara estrella?

Lejos estoy del camino 535 que a do está mi cielo guía, pues este suelo no envía,
o luz clara, o olor divino.

Mas ya no tendré pereza en buscar este sol bello, 540 pues me han de guiar a vello ya su luz, ya su belleza.

Pero, ¿qué es esto, que el sueño así me acosa y aprieta?

¡Oh fuerza libre, sujeta 545
a fuerzas de tan vil dueño!

Aquí me habré de acostar,
al pie deste risco yerto, haciendo imagen de un muerto, pues estoy para espirar. 550

(Recuéstase REINALDOS, pone el escudo por cabecera, y entra luego ROLDÁN embrazado de el suyo.)

ROLDÁN ¡Tantas vueltas sin provecho!
¿Dónde, ¡oh sol!, te tramontaste después que tu luz dejaste en lo mejor de mi pecho?

Descúbrete, sol hermoso, 555 que voy buscando tu lumbre por el llano y por la cumbre, desalentado y ansioso.

¡Oh, Angélica, luz divina de mi humana ceguedad, 560 norte cuya claridad
a nuevo ser me encamina!

¿Cuándo te verán mis ojos, o cuándo, si no he de verte, vendrá la espantosa muerte 565
a triunfar de mis despojos?

Mas, ¿quién es este holgazán que duerme con tal remanso?
No hay quien no viva en descanso sino el mísero Roldán. 570

¿Qué es esto? Reinaldos es el que yace aquí dormido.
¡Oh primo, al mundo nacido para grillos de mis pies, para esposas de mis manos, 575 para infierno de mis glorias, para opuesto a mis vitorias, para hacer mis triunfos vanos, para acíbar de mi gusto!

Mas yo haré que no lo seas: 580 sin que el mundo ni tú veas que paso el término justo, quitarte quiero la vida.
Mas, ¡ay, Roldán! ¿Cómo es esto?
¿Ansí os arrojáis tan presto 585
a ser traidor y homicida?
¿Qué decís, mal pensamiento?
¿Decísme que es mi rival,
y que consiste en su mal todo el bien de mi tormento? 590 Sí decís; mas yo sé, al fin, que el que es buen enamorado tiene más de pecho honrado que de traidor y de ruin.
Yo fui Roldán sin amor, 595
y seré Roldán con él,
en todo tiempo fiel,
pues en todo busco honor.
Duerme, pues, primo, en sazón; que arrimo te sea mi escudo; 600 que, aunque amor vencerme pudo, no me vence la traición.
El tuyo quiero tomar,
porque adviertas, si despiertas, que amistades que son ciertas 605
nadie las puede turbar.

(Échase ROLDÁN junto a REINALDOS y pone a su cabecera el escudo de REINALDOS, y luego despierta REINALDOS.)

REINALDOS ¡Angélica! ¡Oh estraña vista!

¿No es Roldán este que veo, y el que del bien que deseo procura hacer la conquista? 610

Él es; pero, ¿quién me puso su escudo para mi arrimo?
Tu cortés bondad, ¡oh primo!, sin duda que esto dispuso.

Bien me pudieras matar, 615
pues durmiendo me hallaste, por quitar aquel contraste que en mi vida has de hallar;
empero tu cortesía
más que amor pudo en tu pecho, 620 por la costumbre que has hecho de hacer actos de hidalguía.

Mas, ¿si fue por menosprecio el dejarme con la vida?
No, por ser cosa sabida 625 que yo soy hombre de precio;
y tú mismo lo has probado una y otra vez y ciento.

No atino cuál pensamiento tenga por más acertado: 630

si me deja de arrogante, o si fue por amistad;
que tal vez la deslealtad
vive en el celoso amante.

¡Oh! Si aquéste me dejase 635 señero en mi pretensión, con el alma y corazón, ¡vive Dios!, que le adorase;

pero si no, no imagines, primo, que por tu bondad 640 dejará mi voluntad
de seguir sus dulces fines.

Y de aquesta intención mía
no me debes de culpar, porque el amor y el reinar 645
nunca admiten compañía.

Seguramente a mi lado
pudiste echarte a dormir,
pues no se puede herir
un hombre que es encantado; 650

y así, la ocasión quitaste que tu sueño me ofrecía, para usar la cortesía
de que tú conmigo usaste.

Pero, despierto, veremos 655 tu intención a dó se inclina;
y si donde yo camina,
pondré medio en sus extremos.

Irá el parentesco afuera, la cortesía a una parte, 660 si bajase el mismo Marte
a impedirlo de su esfera.

¡Ah, Roldán! ¡Roldán, despierta!, que es gran descuido el que tienes, y más si, por dicha, vienes 665
donde mi sospecha acierta.

Toma tu escudo, y el mío me vuelve. ¡Despierta ahora!

ROLDÁN Soñando.

¡Ay, Angélica, señora
de mi vida y mi albedrío! 670

¿A dó se esconde tu faz que todo mi bien encierra?

REINALDOS Declarada es nuestra guerra, y perdida nuestra paz.

¡Roldán, acaba, levanta; 675 destroquemos los escudos!

ROLDÁN Soñando.

¡Con qué dulces, ciegos nudos me añudaste la garganta;
la voluntad decir quiero,
y el alma que te entregué! 680

REINALDOS; Si no despiertas, a fe que te despierte este acero, y aun te mate, pues me matas, ahora duermas, ahora veles!
Estos intentos crueles 685
nacen de entrañas ingratas.

Estoy por dejar de ser
quien soy. ¡Acudid al punto, respetos, que está difunto mi acertado proceder! 690

¡Ansias que me consumís, sospechas que me cansáis,
recelos que me acabáis,
celos que me pervertís!

(ROLDÁN despierta.)

ROLDÁN Reinaldos, ¿qué quies hacer? 695

REINALDOS; Deshacerme, o deshacerte!

ROLDÁN; Quieres, primo, darme muerte?

REINALDOS Tu vida está en mi querer.

ROLDÁN ¿Cómo en mi querer?

REINALDOSDirélo:
no más de en querer decirme 700 si vienes a perseguirme en la busca de mi cielo;
si es tu venida a buscar
a Angélica. ¿No me entiendes?

ROLDÁN¿De saber lo que pretendes...? 705

REINALDOS¡Acabarte, o acabar!

ROLDÁN ¿Tanto el vivir te embaraza, que tras tu muerte caminas?

REINALDOSProfeta falso, adivinas el mal que así te amenaza. 710

ROLDÁN Contigo las cortesías siempre fueron por demás.

REINALDOSDame mi escudo, y verás como siempre desvarías.
Si a París no te vuelves, 715 verás también en un punto tu culpa y castigo junto.

ROLDÁN¡Fácilmente te resuelves!
Ni a París he de volver, ni a Angélica he de dejar. 720
Mira qué quieres.

REINALDOS Cortar
tu insolente proceder.
¡Desharéte entre mis brazos, aunque seas encantado!

ROLDÁN ¡Eres villano atestado, 725
y quieres luchar a brazos!

REINALDOS ¡Mientes! Y ven con la espada, que, aunque seas de diamante, verás, infame arrogante,
mi verdad averiguada! 730

(Vanse a herir con las espadas; salen del hueco del teatro llamas de fuego, que no los deja llegar.)

ROLDÁN Bien sé que anda por aquí, temeroso de tu muerte,
mas no ha de poder valerte, tu hechicero Malgesí;
que pasaré de Aqueronte 735
la barca por castigarte.

REINALDOS Yo pondré por alcanzarte un monte sobre otro monte;
arrojaréme en el fuego, como ves que aquí lo hago. 740

ROLDÁN No te deja dar tu pago tu hermano.

REINALDOS ¡Pues dél reniego!

(Dice el espíritu de MERLÍN:)

ESPÍRITU Fuerte Bernardo, sal fuera, y a los dos en paz pondrás.

(Sale BERNARDO.)

BERNARDO ¡Caballeros, no haya más! 745 ¡Guerreros fuertes, afuera!

REINALDOS ¿Hate el cielo aquí llovido?
¿Qué quieres, o qué nos mandas?

BERNARDO Son tan justas mis demandas, que he de ser obedecido. 750 Y es que dejéis la dudosa lid de tan esquivo trance.

REINALDO Tú has echado muy buen lance,
y la demanda es donosa.
¿Eres español, a dicha? 755

BERNARDO Por dicha, soy español.

REINALDO Vete, porque sólo el sol ha de ver nuestra desdicha; que no queremos testigos más que el sol en la lid nuestra. 760

BERNARDO No me he de ir sin que la diestra os deis de buenos amigos.

ROLDÁN ¡Pesado estás!

BERNARDO Más pesados
estáis los dos, si advertís.

REINALDO Español, ¿cómo no os is? 765

BERNARDO Por cortesés o rogados, vuestra quistión, por ahora,
no ha de pasar adelante.

ROLDÁN Yo soy el señor de Aglante.

REINALDO Yo, Reinaldos.

BERNARDO Sea en buen hora; 770 que ser quien sois os obliga
a conceder con mi ruego.

ROLDÁN Esa razón no la niego.

REINALDO Este español me atosiga; que siempre aquesta nación 775
fue arrogante y porfiada.

ROLDÁN Señor, pues que no os va nada, no impidáis nuestra quistión;

dejadnos llevar al fin
nuestro deseo, que es justo. 780

BERNARDO Aquése fuera mi gusto, a serlo así el de Merlín.

ROLDÁN ¡Oh cuerpo de San Dionís, con el español marrano!

BERNARDO ¡Mientes, infame villano! 785

REINALDO SA plomo cayó el mentís.
¡Afuera, Roldán, no más!

ROLDÁN ¡Deja, que me abraso en ira!
¿Qué es esto? ¿Quién me retira?
¿El pie de Roldán atrás? 790 ¿Roldán el pie atrás? ¿Qué es esto?
¡Ni huyo, ni me retiro!

REINALDO S De Merlín es este tiro.

BERNARDO Pues yo haré que huyáis presto.

REINALDO S ¡Por cierto, a gentiles manos 795 te ha traído tu fortuna!

BERNARDO Manos, yo no veo ninguna; pies, sí, ligeros y sanos, y que os importa tenellos para huir de mi presencia. 800

REINALDOS ¡Sin igual es tu insolencia!

(Sube BERNARDO por la peña arriba, siguiendo a ROLDÁN, y va tras él REINALDOS. Sale MARFISA, armada ricamente; trae por timbre una ave Fénix y una águila blanca pintada en el escudo, y, mirando subir a los tres de la montaña, con las espadas desnudas y que se acaban de desaparecer, dice:)

MARFISA ¿Si se combaten aquéllos?

Si hacen, ponerlos quiero en paz, si fuere posible.
¡Oh, qué montaña terrible! 805 Subir por ella no espero, ni podré a caballo ir,
aunque le vuelva a tomar; mas, con todo, he de probar el trabajo del subir. 810

Bien se queda en la espesura mi caballo hasta que vuelva; nunca falta en esta selva
o buena o mala ventura.

(Sube MARFISA por la montaña, y vuelven a salir al teatro, riñendo, ROLDÁN, BERNARDO y REINALDOS.)

ROLDÁN No sé yo cómo sea 815 que contra ti no tengo alguna saña, ni puedo en tal pelea
mover la espada. ¡Cosa es ésta estraña!

BERNARDO La razón que me ayuda pone tus fuerzas y tu esfuerzo en duda. 820

REINALDOS De Merlín es el hecho, que no hay razón que valga con su encanto;
que, aunque fuera su pecho león en furia y en dureza un canto, si hechiceros no hubiera, 825
nunca mi primo atrás el pie volviera.

(Entra ANGÉLICA, llorando, y con ella el VIZCAÍNO, escudero de BERNARDO.)

VIZCAÍNO ¡Pardiós, echóte al río!
¡Tienes Granada, bravo Ferraguto!

ANGÉLICA ¡Ay, triste hermano mío!

ROLDÁN ¿Por qué ese cielo al suelo da tributo 830
de lágrimas tan bellas, si el mismo cielo se le debe a ellas?

ANGÉLICA Un español ha muerto a mi querido hermano; y es un moro que no guardó el concierto 835 debido a la milicia y su decoro, y arrojóle en un río.

ROLDÁN ¿Quién es el moro?

BERNARDO Es un amigo mío.

ROLDÁN ¿Amigo tuyo? ¡Oh perro, tú llevarás de su maldad la pena! 840

REINALDOS Roldán, no hagas tal yerro;
deja a mí el castigo.

ANGÉLICA Aquí se ordena mi muerte, y más desdicha si de los dos me coge alguno, a dicha.

A esta selva oscura 845 quiero entregar ya mis ligeras plantas, mi guarda y mi ventura.

BERNARDO ¿Cómo, Reinaldos, di, no te adelantas a herirme con tu primo?
Por la honra, la vida en poco estimo. 850

(Sale MARFISA, poniendo paz y poniendo mano a la espada; éntrase huyendo ANGÉLICA.)

MARFISA ¿Qué es esto? ¡Afuera, afuera; afuera, caballeros!, que os lo pide quien mandarlo pudiera;
que, si no es que mi luz la vista impide, mirando esta divisa, 855
veréis que soy la sin igual Marfisa.

VIZCAÍNO La puta, la doncella, se es ida.

ROLDÁN ¡Oh nunca vista desventura!;

forzoso he de ir tras ella.

REINALDOS Yo sí; tú no.

ROLDÁN ¡Notable es tu locura! 860

REINALDOS No muevas de aquí el paso.

ROLDÁN No hago yo de tus locuras caso.

REINALDOS ¡Por Dios que, si te mueves, que te haga pedazos al instante!

ROLDÁN ¿Que a estorbarme te atreves, 865 fanfarrón, pordiosero y arrogante?
¿Cómo te estás tan quedo?
¡Que no me tenga este cobarde miedo!

(Éntrase ROLDÁN.)

VIZCAÍNO Señor, déjale vaya; que pues no por allí, que por la senda 870 quedan arraz, en playa
poned a la dama.

MARFISA ¿Por qué fue la contienda?

BERNARDO Por celos sé que ha sido.
Dime: ¿Ferraguto quedó herido?

VIZCAÍNO Bueno, puto, y qué sano. 875

BERNARDO ¿Con quién tuvo batalla?

VIZCAÍNO ¿Ya no oíste?

Batalla con hermano
de bella huidora, y pobre, y muerto, y triste, de moro enojo, brío
teniendo, dio con él todo en el río, 880 y queda aquí aguardando espaldas de montaña.

MARFISA Iréte acompañando, que quiero saber más de tu hazaña;
que descubro en ti muestras 885 que muestran que eres más de lo que muestras.

Y advierte que contigo llevas a la sin par sola Marfisa, que, en señas y testigo que es única en el mundo, la divisa 890 trae de aquella ave nueva que en el fuego la vida se renueva.

BERNARDO Haréte compañía subas al cielo o bajes al abismo.

MARFISA Tan grande cortesía 895 no puede parecer sino a ti mismo, y, usando deste gusto,
yo he de seguir el tuyo, que es muy justo.

Jornada segunda

Sale LAUSO, pastor, por una parte de la montaña, con su guitarra, y CORINTO, por la otra, con otra.

LAUSO ¡Ah Corinto, Corinto!

CORINTO¿Quién me llama?

LAUSOLauso, tu amigo.

CORINTO¿Adónde estás?

LAUSO¿No miras?

CORINTOAlgún árbol te encubre, alguna rama, o estás en el lugar donde suspiras cuando Clori te muestra el rostro airado, 5
y en solitaria parte te retiras.

Baja, si quieres, Lauso, al verde prado, en tanto que de Febo la carrera declina desta cumbre al otro lado.

Cantaremos de Clori lisonjera, 10 al pie de un verde sauce o murto umbroso, que pasa el pensamiento en ser ligera.

LAUSO Ya abajo; pero no a buscar reposo, sino a cumplir lo que amistad me obliga

y a pasar a la sombra el sol fogoso; 15 que en tanto que la dulce mi enemiga se esté fortalecida en su dureza no hay mal que huya ni placer que siga.

(Bajan los dos de la montaña.)

CORINTO Pesado contrapeso es la pobreza para volar de amor, ¡oh Lauso!, al cielo, 20 aunque tengas cien alas de firmeza.

No hay amor que se abata ya al señuelo de un ingenio sutil, de un tierno pecho, de un raro proceder, de un casto celo.

Granjería común amor se ha hecho, 25
y dél hay feria franca dondequiera, do cada cual atiende a su provecho.

LAUSO ¡Oh Clori, para mí serpiente fiera por mi estrechez, aunque paloma mansa para un alma de piedra verdadera! 30

¿Que es posible, cruel, que no te cansa de Rústico el ingenio, que es de robre, y que el tuyo estimado en él descansa?

CORINTO Vuélvese el oro más cendrado en cobre, y el ingenio más claro en tonta ciencia, 35 si le toca o le tiene el hombre pobre, y desto es buen testigo la experiencia.
Pero escucha; que cantan en la sierra,
y aun es la voz bien para dalle audiencia.

(Canta CLORI en la montaña, y sale cogiendo flores.)

CLORI Derramastes el agua, la niña, 40

y no dijistes: «¡Agua va!»
La justicia os prenderá.

LAUSO De aquella que el placer de mí destierra es el suave y regalado acento, y aun quien sus gustos el amor encierra. 45

CORINTO Escuchémosla, pues.

LAUSO Ya estoy atento.

CLORI Derramáste la a deshora, y fue con tan poca cuenta, que mojastes con afrenta al que os sirve y os adora. 50 Pero llegada la hora
donde el daño se sabrá,
la justicia os prenderá.

LAUSO Bien es que la ayudemos:
acuerda con el mío tu instrumento. 55

CORINTO Yo creo que está bien; mas, ¿qué diremos?

LAUSO Su mismo villancico, trastrocado, cual tú sabrás hacer.

CORINTO Los dos le haremos.

(Canta CORINTO.)

CORINTO Cautivástesme el alma, la niña, y tenéisla siempre allá; 60
el Amor me vengará.

Vuestros ojos salteadores, sin ser de nadie impedidos, se entraron por mis sentidos, y se hicieron salteadores; 65
lleváronme los mejores,
y tenéislos siempre allá;
el Amor me vengará.

LAUSO Así, Clori gentil, te ofrezca el prado, en mitad del invierno, flores bellas, 70
y cuando el campo esté más agostado;
y que siempre te halles al cogellas con el júbilo alegre que nos muestra la voz con que se ahuyentan mis querellas; que esa rara beldad, que nos adiestra 75
a conocer al Hacedor del cielo,
en este sitio haga alegre muestra.

Volverás paraíso a questo suelo,
y este calor que nos abrasa, ardiente, en aura blanda y regalado yelo. 80

CLORI Porque no es tu demanda impertinente, cual otras veces suele, haré tu gusto,
que es en todo del mío diferente.

CORINTO Dime, Clori gentil, ¿dó está el robusto, el bronce, el roble, el mármol, leño o tronco 85 que así a tu gusto le ha venido al justo?

Por aquel, digo, desarmado y bronco, calzado de la frente y de pies ancho, corto de zancas y de pecho ronco, cuyo dios es el estendido pancho, 90
y a do tiene la crápula su estancia, él tiene siempre su manida y rancho.

CLORI Con él tengo, Corinto, más ganancia que contigo, con Lauso y con Riselo, que vendéis discreción con arrogancia. 95

Rústica el alma, y rústico es el velo que al alma cubre, y Rústico es el nombre del pastor que me tiene por su cielo.

Mas, por rústico que es, en fin es hombre que de sus manos llueve plata y oro, 100 Júpiter nuevo, y con mejor renombre.

Él guarda de mis gustos el decoro, ora le envíe al blanco cita frío
o al tostado, engañoso libio moro.

Tiene por justa ley el gusto mío, 105
y el levantado cuello humilde inclina al yugo que le pone mi albedrío.

No tiene el rico Oriente otra tal mina como es la que yo saco de sus manos, ora cruel me muestre, ora benigna. 110

Quédense los pastores cortesanos con la melifluidad de sus razones y dichos, aunque agudos, siempre vanos.

No se sustenta el cuerpo de intenciones, ni de conceptos trasnochados hace 115 sus muchas y forzosas provisiones.

El rústico, si es rico, satisface aun a los ojos del entendimiento y el más sabio, si es pobre, en nada aplace.

Dirán Corinto y Lauso que yo miento, 120
y muestra la experiencia lo contrario, y Rústico lo sabe, y yo lo siento.

LAUSO Es gusto de mujeres ordinario, en lo que es opinión, tener la parte que más descubra ser su ingenio vario. 125

Quisiera dese error, Clori, sacarte;

mas ya estás pertinaz en tu locura,
y en vano será agora predicarte.

CORINTO Así, pastora, goces tu hermosura, que me dejes hacer una experiencia; 130 quizá te hará volver a tu locura.

Verás, pastora, al vivo la inocencia de Rústico, el pastor, por quien nos dejas.

CLORI ¿Para qué es el pedirme a mí licencia?

LAUSO Paréceme que llega a mis orejas 135 de Rústico la voz.

CORINTO Él es, sin duda, que a sestear recoge sus ovejas.

(RÚSTICO parece por la montaña.)

RÚSTICO Mirad si se cayó en aquella azuda una oveja, pastores; corred luego,
y cada cual a su remedio acuda. 140

Dejad, mal hora, del herrón el juego.

Aguija, Coridón. ¡Oh, cómo corre!

¡Quién quitara a Damón de su sosiego!

Llegó; ya se arrojó; ya la socorre y la saca en los brazos medio muerta, 145 y parece que un río de ambos corre.

Esta noche tú, ¡hola!, está alerta, no venga, como hizo en la pasada, el lobo que la cabra dejó muerta.

Tú acudirás, Cloanto, a la majada 150 del valle de la Enceña, y darás orden que estén todos aquí de madrugada.

¡Oh Compo! Tú harás que se concorden en el pasto Corbato con Francenio; que me da pesadumbre su desorden. 155

CLORI ¡Mirad si tiene Rústico el ingenio para mandar acomodado y presto!

RÚSTICO Tú acude a las colmenas, buen Partenio.
Llévese de las vacas todo el resto al padrón de Merlín, y de las cabras 160 al monte o soto de ciprés funesto.

CLORI ¿Parécenos de pobre las palabras que dice?

CORINTO Pues aquí, en esta espesura, te has de esconder, y mira que no abras la boca, porque importa a la aventura 165 que queremos probar de nuestro intento, por ver si es suya o nuestra la locura.

CLORI Yo enmudezco y me escondo, y vuestro cuento sea, si puede ser, breve y ligero; que, si es pesado y grande, da tormento. 170

(Escóndese CLORI.)

LAUSO Corinto, ¿qué has de hacer?

CORINTO Estáme atento.
Rústico amigo, al llano abaja; aguija, que es cosa que te importa; corre, corre.

RÚSTICO Ya voy, Corinto amigo; espera, espera mientras que cuento un centenar de bueyes, 175 y tres hatos de ovejas, y otros cinco de cabras desde encima deste pico do estoy sentado. ¿No me ves?

CORINTO ¡Acaba!
¿Haces burla de mí?

RÚSTICO Por Dios, no hago;
mas yo lo dejo todo por servirte. 180
Vesme aquí: ¿qué me mandas?

CORINTO Que me ayudes
a alcanzar deste ramo un papagayo que viene del camino de las Indias, y esta noche hizo venta en aquel hueco deste árbol, y alcanzalle me conviene. 185

RÚSTICO ¿Qué llamas papagayo? ¿Es un pintado, que al barquero da voces y a la barca,
y se llama real por fantasía?

CORINTO Desá ralea es éste; pero entiendo que es bachiller y sabe muchas lenguas, 190 principal la que llaman bergamasca.

RÚSTICO ¿Pues qué se ha de hacer para alcanzalle?

CORINTO Conviene que te pongas desta suerte.
Daca este brazo, y lígale tú, Lauso,
y átale bien, que yo le ataré estotro. 195

RÚSTICO ¿Pues yo no estaré quedo sin atarme?

CORINTO Si te meneas, espantarse ha el pájaro;
y así, conviene que aun los pies te atemos.

RÚSTICO Atad cuanto quisiéredes; que, a trueco de tener esta joya entre mis manos, 200 para que luego esté en las de mi Clori, dejaré que me atéis dentro de un saco.
Ya bien atado estoy. ¿Qué falta agora?

CORINTO Que yo me suba encima de tus hombros, y que Lauso, pasito y con silencio, 205 me ayude a levantar las verdes hojas que cubren, según pienso, el dulce nido.

RÚSTICO Sube, pues. ¿A qué esperas?

CORINTO Ten paciencia;
que no soy tan pesado como piensas.

RÚSTICO ¡Vive Dios, que me brumas las costillas! 210 ¿Has llegado a la cumbre?

CORINTO Ya estoy cerca.

RÚSTICO Avisa a Lauso que las ramas mueva pasito, no se vaya el pajarote.

LAUSO No se nos puede ir, que ya le he visto.

RÚSTICO Pregúntale, Corinto, lo que suelen 215 preguntar a los otros papagayos, por ver si entiende bien nuestro lenguaje.

CORINTO ¿Cómo estás, loro, di? «¿Cómo? Cautivo».

RÚSTICO ¡Hi de puta, qué pieza! Di otra cosa.

CORINTO «¡Daca la barca, hao; daca la barca!» 220

RÚSTICO Y aqueso, ¿quién lo dijo?

CORINTO El papagayo.

RÚSTICO ¡Oh Clori, qué presente que te hago!

CORINTO «¡Clori, Clori, Clori, Clori, Clori!»

RÚSTICO ¿Es todavía el papagayo aquése?

CORINTO Pues, ¿quién había de ser?

RÚSTICO ¿Hasle ya asido? 225

CORINTO Dentro en mi caperuza está ya preso.

RÚSTICO Deciendo, pues, y véndemele, amigo, que te daré por él cuatro novillos que aún no ha llegado el yugo a sus cervices, no más de porque dél mi Clori goce. 230

LAUSO No se dará por treinta mil florines.

RÚSTICO; Ah, por amor de Dios, yo daré ciento!
Desatadme de aquí, porque a mi gusto
le vea y le contemple.

CORINTO Es ceremonia que en semejantes cazas suele usarse, 235 que tan sola una mano se desate del que las dos tuviere y pies atados; con ésta suelta, puedes blandamente alzar mi caperuza venturosa, que tal tesoro encubre. Despabila 240 los ojos para ver belleza tanta.
Pasito, no le ahajes. Mas espera, que está la mano sucia; con saliva te la puedes limpiar.

RÚSTICO Ya está bien limpia.

CORINTO Agora sí. ¡Dichoso aquel que llega 245
a descubrir tan codiciosa prenda!

RÚSTICO¿Donosa está la burla! Di, Corinto: ¿es ése el papagayo?

CORINTOÉste es el pico;
las alas, éstas; éstas, las orejas del asno de mi Rústico y amigo. 250

RÚSTICO¿Desátenme, que a fe que yo me vengue!

(Sale CLORI.)

CLORI¿Ah simple, ah simple!

RÚSTICO¿Y haslo visto, Clori?
Por ti la burla siento, y no por otrie.

CLORICalla, que para aquello que me sirves, más sabes que trecientos Salomones. 255 Di que se vista Lauso desta burla, o que compre Corinto algún tributo, o me envíe mañana una patena y unos ricos corales, como espero que podrás y querrás, con tu simpleza, 260 enviármelos luego.

RÚSTICO¿Y cómo, Clori?
Y aun dos sartas de perlas hermosísimas.

CLORI¿Compárase con esto algún soneto, Lauso? Y dime, Corinto: ¿habrá sonada, aunque se cante a tres ni aun a trecientos, 265 que a la patena y sartas se compare?

LAUSO Eres mujer y sigues tu costumbre.

CLORI Sigo lo que es razón.

LAUSO Será milagro
hallarla en las mujeres.

CLORI ¿Qué razones
puede decir la lengua que se mueve 270 guiada del desdén y de los celos?
Tú eres la causa.

(Entra ANGÉLICA, alborotada.)

ANGÉLICA ¡Socorredme, cielos, si en vuestros pechos mora misericordia alguna!
Hermosa y agradable compañía: 275 en mí os ofrece agora
el cielo y la fortuna,
sujeto igual a vuestra cortesía;
que, la desdicha mía sabida, me asegura 280
que podrá enterneceros
y al remedio moveros,
si es que le tiene tanta desventura.

CLORI Señora, di: ¿qué tienes?

ANGÉLICA Sin tasa males, y ningunos bienes. 285

Pero no estoy en tiempo en que pueda contaros
de mi dolor la parte más pequeña;
ni vuestro pasatiempo
será bien estorbaros 290 contando el mal que ablandará esta peña.
¿No hay por aquí una breña donde me esconda, amigos?

LAUSO Luego, ¿quies esconderte?
¿Quién podrá aquí ofenderte? 295

ANGÉLICA Persíguenme dos bravos enemigos.

CORINTO ¿No somos tres nosotros?

ANGÉLICA Ni aun a tres mil no temerán los otros.
Llevadme a vuestras chozas, mudadme este vestido; 300 amigos, escondedme.

LAUSO No te espantes.
¿Para qué te alborozas, si has a parte venido
do se estiman en poco los gigantes? 305 Montalbanes y Aglantes
se tienen aquí en nada;
porque, ¡por Dios!, si quiero, que los compre a dinero.

ANGÉLICA ¡Hoy acaba mi vida su jornada! 310

CORINTO ¿Quieres que te escondamos?

RÚSTICO ¿Dice que sí?

LAUSO Pues, ¡sus!, ¿en qué tardamos?
Ven; mudarás de traje
y de lugar y todo.

ANGÉLICA De mis contrarios casi veo la sombra. 315

CORINTO Parece de linaje, y su habla y su modo
a mí me admira.

RÚSTICO Pues a mí me asombra.

(Éntrase ANGÉLICA y LAUSO.)

¿Sabéis cómo se nombra? 320

CORINTO Pues, ¿cómo he de sabello?

RÚSTICO Busca algún nuevo ensayo.

CORINTO Buscaré un papagayo que me lo diga.

CLORIGanarás en ello.

CORINTO Ganas tú patenas. 325

CLORISiempre tus burlas para mí son buenas.

(Éntranse todos, y sale REINALDOS.)

REINALDOS ¿Eres Dafne, por ventura, que de Apolo va huyendo, o eres Juno, que procura librarse del monstruo horrendo 330 cerrada en la nube oscura?

¡Oh selvas de encantos llenas, do jamás se ha visto apenas cosa en su ser verdadero, contar de vosotras quiero 335
aun las menudas arenas!

Quizá esta fiera homicida, que cual sombra desaparece porque padezca mi vida, adonde menos se ofrece 340
la tendrá amor escondida.

De nuevo vuelvan mis plantas a buscar entre estas plantas a la bella fugitiva.
¡Dura ocasión, que yo viva 345 muriendo de muertes tantas!

(Crujidos de cadenas, ayes y suspiros dentro.)

¡Válgame Dios! ¿Qué ruido es este que suena extraño?
¿Estoy despierto, o dormido?
¿Engañome o no me engaño? 350
Otra vez llega al oído.

De entre estas hojas entiendo que sale el horrible estruendo.

Mas, ¡ay!, ¿qué boca espantosa, terrible y estraña cosa, 355
es aquesta que estoy viendo?

Mientras más vomitas llamas, boca horrenda o cueva oscura, más me incitas y me inflamas.
A ver si en esta aventura 360 para algún buen fin me llamas.

(Descúbrese la boca de la sierpe.)

Acógeme allá en tu centro, porque por tus fuegos entro
a tu estómago de azufre.

(MALGESÍ, vestido como diré; sale por la boca de la sierpe.)

MALGESÍ¿Adónde aquesto se sufre? 365

REINALDOS¡Éste sí que es mal encuentro!
¿Quién eres?

MALGESÍSoy el Horror,
portero de aquesta puerta, adonde vive el temor
y la sospecha más cierta 370 que engendra el cielo de amor.

Soy ministro de los duelos, embajador de los celos,
que habitan en esta cueva.

REINALDOSPues adonde están me lleva. 375

MALGESÍ Espera, y avisarélos.

Mas primero has de mirar las guardas que puestas tiene en este triste lugar,
y esto es lo que te conviene. 380

REINALDOS Comiénzalas a mostrar; que, aunque me muestras cifrados en ellas los condenados rostros que encierra el abismo, seré en este trance el mismo 385 que he sido en los regalados.

(Suena dentro música triste, como la pasada del padrón; sale el TEMOR, vestido como diré: con una tunicela parda, ceñida con culebras.)

MALGESÍ Esta figura que ves es el Temor sospechoso, que engendra ajeno interés, impertinente curioso, 390 que mira siempre al través;
y así, el mezquino se admira de cada cosa que mira,
ora sea mala o buena;
la verdad le causa pena, 395
y tiembla con la mentira.

(Sale la SOSPECHA, con una tunicela de varias colores.)

Ésta es la infame Sospecha, de los Celos muy parienta, toda de contrarios hecha, siempre de saber sedienta 400

lo que menos le aprovecha.

Aquí nace, y muere allí,
y torna a nacer aquí;
tiene mil padres a un punto:
éste, vivo; aquél, difunto, 405
y ella vive y muere así.

(Sale CURIOSIDAD.)

La vana Curiosidad
es ésta que ves presente, hija de la Liviandad,
con cien ojos en la frente, 410
y los más con ceguedad.

Es en todo entremetida, y susténtale la vida
estar contino despierta, y hace la guarda a una puerta 415
de muy difícil salida.

(Con una soga a la garganta y una daga desenvainada en la mano, sale la DESESPERACIÓN, como diré.)

Es la Desesperación
esta espantosa figura,
sobre todas cuantas son,
y, aunque es mala su hechura, 420
es peor su condición.

Ésta sigue las pisadas
de los Celos, desdichadas, y anda tan junto con ellos, que desde aquí puedes vellos 425
si cesan las llamaradas.

(Suena la música triste, y salen los CELOS, como diré, con una tunicela azul, pintada en ella sierpes y lagartos, con una cabellera blanca, negra y azul.)

Mas veslos, salen: advierte que cuanto con ellos miras amenazan triste suerte, ciertos y luengos pesares 430
y, al fin, desdichada muerte.

Todos sus secuaces son, puestos en comparación,
de sus males una sombra que, puesto que nos asombra, 435 no desmaya al corazón.

Toca su mano y verás
en el estado que quedas, diferente del que estás;
y tal quedes, que no puedas 440 ni quieras ya querer más.

(Tocan los CELOS la mano a REINALDOS.)

REINALDOS ¡Celos, que se me abrasa el pecho y se cela! ¡En duro estrecho me pone el señor de Aglante!
¡Celos, quitáosme delante: 445
basta el mal que me habéis hecho!

MALGESÍ ¿Cómo que con la invención de quien yo tanto fié
no se cela el corazón de mi primo? Yo no sé 450 la causa ni la razón.

(Dice de dentro MERLÍN.)

MERLÍN Malgesí, ¡cuán poco sabes!
Mas yo haré que no te alabes de tu invención, aunque estraña.
Pártete desta montaña 455
antes que la vida acabes.

MALGESÍ Ya te conozco, Merlín; pero yo veré si puedo
ver de mi deseo el fin, porque no me pone miedo 460
desa tu voz el retín.

MERLÍN A tu primo entre esa yerba pondrás, que a mí se reserva y a mi fuente su salud; que hasta agora su virtud 465
el cielo en ella conserva.

MALGESÍ Volveos por do venistes, figuras feas y tristes, que mi primo quedará
adonde esperar podrá 470
el remedio que no distes.

(Éntranse las sombras.)

Y yo, en tanto, buscaré medio para remedialle,
y creo que lo hallaré.

(Desvía de allí a REINALDOS.)

MERLÍN Calla y procura dejalle, 475

Malgesí.

MALGESÍ Así lo haré.

(Éntrese MALGESÍ.)

(Parece a este instante el carro de fuego, de los leones de la montaña, y en él la diosa VENUS.)

VENUS De Adonis la compañía dejo casi de mi grado por seguir la fantasía deste espíritu encantado 480 que en apremiarme porfía.

Espérame hasta que vuelva, mi Adonis, y amor resuelva tu brío, que no le alabo; mira que es el puerco bravo 485 de la Calidonia selva.

Pero, ¿qué puedo hacer
sin mi hijo en este trance, donde tanto es menester?
Merlín ha errado este lance; 490 que a veces yerra el saber.

Mas yo le quiero llamar, que a las veces suele estar mezclado entre los pastores, y entonces son los amores 495 para mirar y admirar.

Hijo mío, ¿dónde estáis?
Si acaso la voz oís,
y como a madre me amáis, decid: ¿cómo no venís?, 500 que si venís, ya tardáis.

Mas los músicos acentos que van rompiendo los vientos su venida manifiestan.

¡Oh hijo, y cuánto que cuestan 505 aun tus fingidos contentos!

(Suena música de chirimías; sale la nube, y en ella el dios CUPIDO, vestido y con alas, flecha y arco desarmado.)

AMOR ¿Qué quieres, madre querida, que con tal priesa me llamas?

VENUSEstá en peligro una vida, ardiendo en tus vivas llamas, 510
y en un yelo consumida.

Los celos, que en opinión están que tus hijos son, ciego y simple desvarío, le tienen el pecho frío 515
y abrasado el corazón.

Conviene que te resuelvas en su bien, y que le vuelvas en su antigua libertad.

AMORRemedio a su enfermedad 520 ha de hallar en estas selvas.

Por tiempo hallará una fuente, cuyo corriente templado
apaga mi fuego ardiente, y mi pena enamorada 525
vuelve en desdén insolente.

Beberá Reinaldos della,
y de Angélica la bella,
la hermosura que así quiere, si agora por vella muere, 530
ha de morir por no vella.

Levanta, guerrero invicto, y tiende otra vez el paso cerca de aqueste distrito, que en él hallarás acaso 535
medio a tu mal infinito.

Aunque has de pasar primero trances que callarlos quiero, pues decillos no conviene.

REINALDOS Aquel que celos no tiene, 540 no tiene amor verdadero.

(Éntrase REINALDOS.)

VENUS Ya aqueste negocio es hecho.
¿No me dirás, hijo amado, si es invención de provecho andar en traje no usado 545
y el arco roto y deshecho?

¿Quién te le rompió? ¿Y quién pudo cubrir tu cuerpo desnudo, que su libertad mostraba?
¿Quién te ha quitado el aljaba 550
y la venda? Di; ¿estás mudo?

AMOR Has de saber, madre mía, que en la corte donde he estado no hay amor sin granjería, y el interés se ha usurpado 555 mi reino y mi monarquía.

Yo, viendo que mi poder poco me podía valer,
usé de astucia, y vestíme,
y con él entremetíme, 560
y todo fue menester.

Quité a mis alas el pelo,
y en su lugar me dispuse,
a volar con terciopelo;
y, al instante que lo puse, 565
sentí aligerar mi vuelo.

Del carcaj hice bolsón,
y del dorado arpón
de cada flecha, un escudo, y con esto, y no ir desnudo, 570 alcancé mi pretensión.

Hallé entradas en los pechos que a la vista parecían de acero o de mármol hechos; pero luego se rendían 575
al golpe de mis provechos.

No valen en nuestros días las antiguas bazarías
de Heros ni de Leandros, y valen dos Alejandros 580
más que docientos Macías.

(Entra RÚSTICO.)

RÚSTICO Lauso, acude; y tú, Corinto, acude, que, a lo que creo,
otro papagayo veo,
o si no, pájaro pinto. 585

Acude, Clori, y verás
la verdad de lo que digo;
y trae a esotra contigo,
y más, si quisieres más.

AMOR Yo sé bien que estos pastores 590 nos han de dar un buen rato.

(Entra LAUSO, CORINTO y CLORI, y ANGÉLICA, como pastora.)

LAUSO¿Tú no miras, insensato, que aquél es el dios de amores?

RÚSTICO Como con alas le vi, entendí que era alcotán. 595

CORINTO¡Quítate de aquí, pausán!

RÚSTICO¿Pues yo qué te hago aquí?

CORINTO No te me pongas delante, que quiero hacer reverencia
a este niño.

RÚSTICO¿Qué inocencia! 600 ¿Niño es éste?

CORINTOY es gigante.

RÚSTICO Niñazo le llamo yo, pues ya le apunta el bigote.
No os burléis con el cogote.
¡Mal haya quien me vistió! 605

AMOR No quiero que me hagáis, buena gente, sacrificio,
y téngoos en gran servicio la voluntad que mostráis;
y en pago quiero deciros 610

la ventura que os espera.

VENUS Harás, hijo, de manera que den vado a sus suspiros.

AMOR Tú, Lauso, jamás serás desechado ni admitido; 615 tú, Corinto, da al olvido tu pretensión desde hoy más; Rústico, mientras tuviere riquezas, tendrá contento:
mudará cada momento 620
Clori el bien que poseyere;
la pastora disfrazada
suplicará a quien la ruega.
Y, esto dicho, el fin se llega de dar fin a esta jornada. 625

LAUSO En tanto, Amor, que te vas, porque algún contento goces, de nuestras rústicas voces el rústico acento oirás.
Corinto y Clori, ayudadme; 630 cantaréis lo que diré.

CLORI ¿Qué hemos de cantar?

CORINTO No sé.

LAUSO Diréis después, y escuchadme.
Venga norabuena
Cupido a nuestras selvas, 635
norabuena venga.
Sea bienvenido

médico tan grave,
que así curar sabe
de desdén y olvido; 640
hémosle entendido,
y lo que él ordena
sea norabuena.

Quedan estas peñas
ricas de ventura, 645
pues tanta hermosura
hoy en ella enseñas.
Brotarán sus breñas
néctar dondequiera.
¡Norabuena sea! 650

(Mientras cantan, se va el carro de VENUS, y CUPIDO en él; y suenan las chirimías, y luego dice LAUSO:)

LAUSO Vamos a nuestras cabañas a hacer nuevas alegrías, pues vemos en nuestros días tan ricas estas montañas;
y si aquello que desea 655
cada cual no ha sucedido, pues el Amor lo ha querido, decid: «¡Norabuena sea!»

(Todos: «¡Norabuena sea, sea norabuena!», y éntranse, y sale BERNARDO y su ESCUDERO.)

BERNARDO ¿Cómo no viene Marfisa?

ESCUDERO Detrás quedó de aquel monte. 660

BERNARDO Pues sobre ese risco ponte, y mira si se divisa.

ESCUDERO Ella dijo que al momento tras nosotros se vendría.

BERNARDO ¡Estraña es su bizzaría! 665

ESCUDERO Y su valor, según siento.

BERNARDO A lo menos su arrogancia, pues la lleva sin parar
a sola desafiar
los Doce Pares de Francia; 670
y tengo de acompañalla, que ya se lo he prometido.

ESCUDERO En negocio te has metido harto estraño.

BERNARDO ¡Simple, calla!; que siempre es mi intención 675
buscar y ver aventuras.
En París están seguras, si se traba esta quistión.
Y veré dó llegar puede
el valor de aquesta dama. 680

ESCUDERO Llegará donde su fama que a las mejores excede.

BERNARDO ¿Que se nos fue Ferraguto?

ESCUDERO Siempre, en cuanto hacía aquel moro, le vi guardar un decoro 685
arrojado y resolutivo.

Después que mató a Argalia,
y en el río le arrojó,
al momento se partió.

BERNARDO Tiene loca fantasía. 690

Mas dime: ¿no es el que asoma aquel gallardo francés
de la pendencia?

ESCUDERO Sí es,
y es confalonero de Roma.

BERNARDO ¿No es Roldán?

ESCUDERO Roldán es, cierto. 695

BERNARDO Agora quiero proballo, pues nadie podrá estorballo en este solo desierto.

¡Qué pensativo que viene!
¿No parece que algo busca? 700

ESCUDERO Todo el sentido le ofusca amor que en el pecho tiene.

BERNARDO ¿Cómo lo sabes?

ESCUDERO ¿No viste

que la pendencia dejó,
y tras la dama corrió, 705 que allí se mostró tan triste?

BERNARDO ¡Ah Roldán, Roldán!

ROLDÁN ¿Quién llama?

BERNARDO Deciendo acá y lo verás.

ROLDÁN ¡Oh Angélica!, ¿dónde estás?

ESCUDERO ¿Ves si le abrasa su llama? 710

ROLDÁN ¿Qué me quieres, caballero?

BERNARDO ¿No me conoces?

ROLDÁN No, cierto.

ESCUDERO Bien en lo que digo acierto:
él es de amor prisionero.

Haré yo una buena apuesta 715 que está puesto en tal abismo, que no sabe de sí mismo.

BERNARDO ¿Hay cosa que iguale a ésta?
¿Que no me conoces?

ROLDÁNNo.

BERNARDO Pues yo te conozco a ti. 720 ¿No eres Roldán?

ROLDÁN Creo que sí.

ESCUDERO Mirad si lo digo yo.
En «creo» pone si es él; ¿cuál le tiene Amor esquivo!

BERNARDO El estar tan pensativo 725 nos muestra su mal crüel.
¡Ah, Roldán, señor, señor!

ROLDÁN ¿Habláis conmigo, por dicha?

BERNARDO ¡Ésta si que es gran desdicha!

ESCUDERO Como desdicha de amor. 730 ¡Estraño embelesamiento!

ROLDÁN ¡Oh Angélica dulce y cara!
¿Adónde escondes la cara, que es gloria de mi tormento?
El corazón se me quema, 735 ¡oh Angélica, mi reposo!

ESCUDERO Deste sermón amoroso, esta Angélica es el tema.

Parece que está en ser que puedes desafialle. 740

BERNARDO Quisiera yo remedialle si lo pudiera hacer.

(Parece ANGÉLICA, y va tras ella ROLDÁN; pónese en la tramoya y desaparece, y a la vuelta parece la MALA FAMA, vestida como diré, con una tunicela negra, una trompeta negra en la mano, y alas negras y cabellera negra.)

ROLDÁN ¿No es aquél mi cielo, cielos?
Él es, pero ya se encubre;
pues, cuando él se me descubre 745 es porque me cubran duelos.

Tras ti voy, nueva Atalanta; que, si quiere socorrerme amor, puede aquí ponerme mil alas en cada planta. 750

Mi sol, ¿dó te transmontaste, y qué sombra te sucede?
Mas, bien es que en noche quede el que de tu luz privaste.

BERNARDO De aventuras están llenas 755 estas selvas, según veo.

ESCUDERO Viendo estoy lo que no creo.

BERNARDO ¡Calla!

ESCUDERO No respiro apenas.

MALA FAMA Detén el paso, senador romano, y aun la intención pudieras detenella, 760 si tras sí, en vuelo presuroso y vano, no la llevara Angélica la bella.
¿Mas tu consejo y proceder liviano así la entregas, que cebado en ella quieres que quede, ¡oh grave desventura!, 765 tu clara fama para siempre obscura?

La Mala Fama soy, que tiene cuenta con las torpezas de excelentes hombres para entregallas a perpetua afrenta, y a viva muerte sus subidos nombres. 770 Mi mano en este libro negro asienta, borrando la altivez de sus renombres, los hechos malos que en el tiempo hicieron cuando de amor la vana ley siguieron.

Aquí está el grande Alcides, no cortando 775 de la hidra lerneas las cabezas, sino a los pies de Deyanira hilando, con mujeriles paños y ternezas.
Está el rey Salomón; mas no juzgando las diferencias faltas de certezas, 780 sino dando ocasión por mil razones que esté su salvación en opiniones.

Uno de aquel famoso triunvirato aquí le tengo escrito y señalado, cuando, a su patria y a su honor ingrato, 785 cegó en la luz del rostro delicado.
En mitad de la pompa y aparato del bélico furor, de miedo armado, los ojos vuelve y ánimo a la nueva Angélica egipciana que le lleva. 790

Es infinito el número que encierran aquestas negras hojas de los hechos de aquellos que su nombre y fama atierran, porque amor sujetó sus duros pechos;
y si tú quieres ser de los que yerran, 795

aunque están los renglones tan estrechos, ancho lugar haré para que escriba tu nombre, y en infamia eterna viva.

(Vuélvese la tramoya.)

ROLDÁN Yo mudaré parecer, a pesar de lo que quiero. 800

BERNARDO ¿Conocéisme, caballero?

ROLDÁN Pues, ¿no os he de conocer?
Bien sé que sois español y que Bernardo os llamáis.

BERNARDO ¿Gracias a Dios que miráis 805 ya sin nublados el sol!

ROLDÁN ¿Habéis estado presente al caso de admiración?

BERNARDO Sí he estado.

ROLDÁN ¿Y no es gran razón que yo vuelva diferente, 810 siendo una joya la honra que no se puede estimar?

BERNARDO Verdad es; mas por amar no se adquiere la deshonra.

ROLDÁN No hay amador que no haga 815 mil disparates, si es fino;
mas, ya que he cobrado el tino,
y sanado de mi llaga,
mis pasos caminarán
por diferente sendero. 820

(Entra MARFISA.)

MARFISA Bernardo, ¿no es el guerrero éste a quien llaman Roldán?

BERNARDO Él es. Mas, ¿por qué lo dices?

MARFISA Porque su fama me fuerza a probar con él mi fuerza, 825 porque tú la solenices
y veas qué compañero
te ha dado en mí la fortuna.

ROLDÁN ¡No hay, cual Angélica, alguna en todo nuestro hemisfero! 830

ESCUDERO ¡Por Dios, que se ha vuelto al tema!

ROLDÁN Falsa fue aquella visión, y de nuevo el corazón
parece que se me quema.

(Aparece otra vez ANGÉLICA, y huye a la tramoya, y vuélvese, y parece la BUENA FAMA, vestida de blanco, con una corona en la cabeza, alas pintadas de varios colores y una trompeta.)

¿Has tornado a amanecer, 835 sol mío? Pues ya te sigo.

ESCUDERO Poco ha durado el amigo en su honroso parecer.

MARFISA Bernardo, ¿qué es lo que veo?

BERNARDO Calla y escucha, y verás 840 misterios.

ESCUDERO No digas más, que quiere hablar, según creo.

BUENA FAMA Pues temor de la infamia no ha podido tus deseos volver a mejor parte, vuélvalos el amor de ser tenido, 845 en todo el orbe por segundo Marte.
En este libro de oro está esculpido, como en mármol o en bronce, en esta parte, tu nombre y el de aquellos esforzados que dieron a las armas sus cuidados. 850

Aquí, con inmortal, alto trofeo, notado tengo en la verdad que sigo, aquel gran caballero Macabeo, guía del pueblo que de Dios fue amigo.
Casi a su lado el nombre escrito veo 855 de aquel batallador que fue enemigo de la pereza infame, del que, en suma, puso en igual balanza, lanza y pluma.

Tengo otros mil que no puedo contarte, porque el tiempo y lugar no lo concede, 860
y porque yo le tenga de avisarte lo que mi voz con mis escritos puede.
Della verás, y dellos levantarte sobre el altura que aun al cielo excede, si dejas de seguir del niño ciego 865 la blandura y regalo y dulce fuego.

Huye, Roldán, de Angélica, y advierte que, en seguir la belleza que te inflama, la vida pierdes y granjeas la muerte, perdiendo a mí, que soy la Buena Fama. 870 Deben estas razones convencerte, pues Marte a nombre sin igual te llama, Amor a un abatido. En paz te queda,
y lo que te deseo te suceda.

(Vuélvese la tramoya.)

ROLDÁN Bien sé que de Malgesí 875 son todas estas visiones.

BERNARDO Pues dime: ¿a qué te dispones?

MARFISA De espanto no estoy en mí.

Mal dije; de admiración, que espanto jamás le tuve. 880

ROLDÁN Corto de manos anduve con una y otra visión;
si pedazos las hiciera,
no me dejaran confuso;
mas volverán, que es su uso 885 asaltarme dondequiera.

Respondiendo, pues, Bernardo,
a lo que me preguntaste, digo que no hay mar que baste templar el fuego en que ardo. 890

Y quedaos en paz los dos, porque ir de aquí me conviene.

MARFISA ¡Estremado brío tiene!

BERNARDO Dios vaya, Roldán, con vos.

MARFISA Vilo, y no puedo creello: 895 tal es lo que visto habemos.

BERNARDO Por el camino podremos hacer discurso sobre ello.

ESCUDERO En fin, ¿vamos a París?

BERNARDO ¿Ya no te he dicho que sí? 900

MARFISA Yo, a lo menos.

ESCUDERO Por allí
hay camino, si advertís.

BERNARDO Los caballos, ¿dónde están?

ESCUDERO Aquí junto.

BERNARDO Ve por ellos.

ESCUDERO Allá subiréis en ellos. 905

MARFISA ¡Pensativo iba Roldán!

Jornada tercera

Salen LAUSO y CORINTO, pastores.

LAUSO En el silencio de la noche, cuando ocupa el dulce sueño a los mortales, la pobre cuenta de mis ricos males estoy al cielo y a mi Clori dando.

Y, al tiempo cuando el sol se va mostrando, 5 por las rosadas puertas orientales, con gemidos y acentos desiguales voy la antigua querella renovando.

Y cuando el sol de su estrellado asiento derechos rayos a la tierra envía, 10 el llanto crece, y doblo los gemidos.

Vuelve la noche, y vuelvo al triste cuento, y siempre hallo en mi mortal porfía al cielo sordo, a Clori sin oídos.

CORINTO ¿Para qué tantas endechas? 15 Lauso amigo, déjalas, pues mientras más dices, más siempre menos te aprovechas.

Yo tengo el corazón negro por Clori y por sus desdenes; 20 mas, pues no me vienen bienes, ya con los males me alegro.

Clori y la nueva pastora, ajenas de nuestros males, con voces claras e iguales, 25
venían cantando agora.

Al encuentro les salgamos
y ayudemos su canticio;

que tanto llorar es vicio, si bien lo consideramos. 30

LAUSO ¿Viene Rústico con ellas?

CORINTO No se les quita del lado.

LAUSO ¡Ah pastor afortunado!
Ni quiero oíllas, ni vellas.

CORINTO Eso ya no puede ser, 35 que veslas, vienen allí;
canta por amor de mí.

LAUSO Procúralas de entender.

(Entra CLORI, cantando, y RÚSTICO con ellas, y ANGÉLICA.)

CLORI ¡Bien haya quien hizo cadenitas, cadenas; 40
bien haya quien hizo
cadenas de amor!
¡Bien haya el acero
de que se formaron,
y los que inventaron 45
amor verdadero!
¡Bien haya el dinero
de metal mejor;
bien haya quien hizo
cadenas de amor! 50

LAUSO ¡Bien haya el amante que a tantos vaivenes,

iras y desdenes,
firme está y constante!
Éste se adelante 55
al rico mayor.
¡Bien haya quien hizo
cadenas de amor!

RÚSTICO ¡Oh, quién supiera cantar!

CORINTO¿Que no lo sabes, pastor? 60

RÚSTICONi contralto ni tenor; que estoy para reventar.

CORINTO Mas, ¿va que tienes agallas?
Muestra: abre bien la boca, que esta cura a mí me toca; 65 abre más, si he de curallas.
Ven acá. ¡Mal hayas tú
y el padre que te engendró!

RÚSTICOPues, ¿qué culpa tengo yo?

CORINTO¡Ofrézcote a Bercebú! 70 ¿Y no has caído en la cuenta de que tenías agallas?

RÚSTICOPues, ¿hay más sino sacallas?

CLORIEsta burla me contenta; que, puesto que bien le quiero, 75 que le burlen me da gusto.

CORINTOYo te sacaré, a tu gusto,
o cantor o pregonero.
¿Tienes algún senojil?

RÚSTICOUna ligapierna tengo, 80
y buena.

CORINTOYa me prevengo
a hacerte cantor sutil.
Aquésta poco aprovecha;
que, para este menester, izquierda tiene de ser, 85 que no vale la derecha.
¿Qué me darás, y te haré cantor subido y notable?

RÚSTICOEn la paga no se hable, que un novillo te daré. 90 La liga izquierda es aquésta:
tómala, y pon diligencia en mostrar aquí tu ciencia.

CORINTODios sabe cuánto me cuesta.
Mas con esta liga y lazo 95
saldré muy bien con mi intento.

RÚSTICOHacia esta parte las siento.

CORINTODéjame atar; quita el brazo.

¿Con qué voz quieres quedar:
tiple, contralto o tenor? 100

RÚSTICO Contrabajo es muy mejor.

CORINTO Ese no te ha de faltar mientras trates conmigo.
Ten paciencia, sufre y calla;
ya se ha quebrado una agalla. 105

RÚSTICO ¡Que me ahogas, enemigo!

CORINTO Contralto quedas, sin duda, que la voz lo manifiesta.
... pues aun ahora está en muda;
a otro estirón que le dé, 110
estará como ha de estar.

RÚSTICO Ladrón, ¿quieresme ahogar?

CORINTO No lo sé; mas probaré.

CLORI ¡Acaba; la burla baste!

RÚSTICO ¡A mí semejantes burlas! 115

CORINTO Rústico, ¿de mí te burlas, que no me pagas y vasts?
¡Pues a fee que has de llevar comida y sobrecomida!
Todo, amigo, se comida 120

a ayudarme a este cantar:

*Corrido va el abad,
por el cañaveral.*

Corrido va el abad,
corrido va y muy mohíno, 125
porque, por su desatino, cierto desastre le vino que le hizo caminar
por el cañaveral.

Confiado en que es muy rico, 130 no ha caído en que es borrico;
y por aquesto me aplico
a decirle este cantar:
por el cañaveral...

(Parece REINALDOS por la montaña.)

LAUSO La burla ha estado, a lo menos 135 como al sujeto conviene.

ANGÉLICA; Otra vez mi muerte viene!
¡Abrid, tierra, vuestros senos y encerradme en ellos luego!

LAUSO; De qué, pastora, te espantas? 140

ANGÉLICA; A vosotras, tiernas plantas, mi vida o mi muerte entrego!

(Éntrase ANGÉLICA huyendo.)

CLORI Lauso, vámonos tras ella, a ver qué le ha sucedido.

LAUSOA tu voluntad rendido 145
estoy siempre, ingrata bella.

(Éntranse todos, y quédase CORINTO.)

CORINTO Quedar quiero, a ver quién es este pensativo y bravo.
El ademán yo le alabo;
mas, ¿si es paladín francés? 150

REINALDOS O le falta al Amor conocimiento, o le sobra crueldad, o no es mi pena igual a la ocasión que me condena al género más duro de tormento.

Pero si Amor es dios, es argumento 155 que nada ignora, y es razón muy buena que un dios no sea cruel. Pues, ¿quién ordena el terrible dolor que adoro y siento?

Si digo que es Angélica, no acierto; que tanto mal en tanto bien no cabe, 160 ni me viene del cielo esta rüina.

Presto habré de morir, que es lo más cierto;
que, al mal de quien la causa no se sabe, milagro es acertar la medicina.

CORINTO ¡Ta, ta! De amor viene herido; 165 bien tenemos que hacer.

REINALDOS ¿Que no quieres parecer, oh bien, por mi mal perdido?

¿Has visto, pastor, acaso, por entre aquesta espesura, 170 un milagro de hermosura

por quien yo mil muertes paso?

¿Has visto unos ojos bellos que dos estrellas semejan, y unos cabellos que dejan, 175 por ser oro, ser cabellos?

¿Has visto, a dicha, una frente como espaciosa ribera,
y una hilera y otra hilera de ricas perlas de Oriente? 180

Dime si has visto una boca que respira olor sabeo, y unos labios por quien creo que el fino coral se apoca.

Di si has visto una garganta 185 que es coluna deste cielo,
y un blanco pecho de yelo,
do su fuego Amor quebranta;
y unas manos que son hechas a torno de marfil blanco, 190 y un compuesto que es el blanco do Amor despunta sus flechas.

CORINTO ¿Tiene, por dicha, señor, ombligo aquesa quimera,
o pies de barro, como era 195
la de aquel rey Donosor?

Porque, a decirte verdad, no he visto en estas montañas cosas tan ricas y estrañas y de tanta calidad. 200

Y fuera muy fácil cosa, si ellas por aquí anduvieran, por invisibles que fueran verlas mi vista curiosa.

Que una espaciosa ribera, 205 dos estrellas y un tesoro
de cabellos, que son oro, ¿dónde esconderse pudiera?

Y el sabeo olor que dices,
¿no me llevara tras sí? 210 Porque en mi vida sentí romadizo en mis narices.
Mas, en fin, decirte quiero lo que he hallado, y no ser terco.

REINALDOS ¿Qué son? Habla.

CORINTO Tres pies de puerco 215
y unas manos de carnero.

REINALDOS ¡Oh hi de puta, bellaco!; pues, ¿con Reinaldos de burlas?

CORINTO De mis donaires y burlas siempre tales premios saco. 220

(Éntrase huyendo CORINTO.)

(Suena dentro esta voz de ANGÉLICA.)

ANGÉLICA ¡Socorredme, Reinaldos, que me matan!
¡Mira que soy la sin ventura Angélica!

REINALDOS La voz es ésta de mi amada diosa.
¿Adónde estás, tesoro de mi alma, única al mundo en hermosura y gracia? 225 La triste barca del barquero horrendo pasaré por hallarte, y al abismo, cual nuevo Orfeo, bajaré llorando y romperé las puertas de diamante.

ANGÉLICA; Moriré si te tardas; date prisa! 230

REINALDOS; ¿Qué camino he de hacer, amada mía?
¿Estás en las entrañas de la tierra,
o encierrante estas peñas en su centro?
Doquier que estás te buscaré, viviendo, o ya desnudo espíritu sin carne. 235

(Salen dos SÁTIROS que traen a ANGÉLICA como arrastrando, con un cordel a la garganta.)

ANGÉLICA; Socorredme, Reinaldos, que me matan!

REINALDOS No corráis más; volved, ligeras plantas, que no os va menos que la vida en esto.
¡Miserable de mí! ¿Quién me detiene?
¿Quién mis pies ha clavado con la tierra? 240
¡Verdugos infernales, deteneos!
¡No añudéis el cordel a la garganta, que es basa donde asienta y donde estriba el cielo de hermosura sobrehumana!
¡Miserable de mí cien mil vegadas, 245 que no puedo moverme ni dar paso!
Canalla infame, ¿para qué os dais prisa a acabar esa vida de mi vida, a escurecer el sol que alumbra el mundo?
¡Tate, traidores, que apretáis un cuello 250 adonde el amor forma tales voces, que el mal desmenguan y la gloria aumentan del venturoso que escucharlas puede!
¡Oh, que la ahogan! ¡Socorredla, cielos, pues yo no puedo! ¡Oh sátiros lascivos! 255 ¿Cómo tanta belleza no os ablanda?

(Vanse los SÁTIROS.)

Ya dieron fin a su cruel empresa;
muerta queda mi vida, muerta queda
la esperanza que en pie la sostenía:
ahora os moveré, pues, sin provecho; 260 otra vez y otras mil soy miserable; ahora, pies, me llevaréis do vea la imagen de la muerte más hermosa que vieron ni verán ojos humanos;
¡oh pies, al bien enfermos y al mal sanos! 265

(Llégase REINALDOS a ANGÉLICA.)

¿Es posible que ante mí te mataron, dulce amiga?
¿Y es posible que se diga que yo no te socorrí?
¿Que es posible que la muerte 270 ha sido tan atrevida, que acabó tu dulce vida
con trance amargo y tan fuerte?
¿Y que mi ventura encierra tanta desventura y duelo, 275 que hoy tengo de ver mi cielo puesto debajo la tierra?
¿Qué antropófagos, qué scitas contra ti se conjuraron, y qué manos te acabaron 280
sacrílegas y malditas?
Sin duda, el infierno todo fue en tan desdichada empresa, que así lo afirma y confiesa de tu muerte el triste modo. 285 Mas yo le moveré guerra, si es que me alcanza la vida en tu triste despedida para vivir en la tierra.

¿Yo vivir? Démoste agora 290 sepultura, ¡oh ángel bello!, y después me veré en ello cuando se llegue la hora.

Será de azada esta daga, que abrirá la estrecha fuesa, 295
y daráse en ello priesa, porque ha de hacer otra llaga.

Brazo en valor sin segundo, trabajad con entereza para enterrar la riqueza 300 mayor que ha tenido el mundo.

Vuestro afán, y no mi celo, parece que en esto yerra, si he de sacar tanta tierra que venga a cubrir el cielo. 305

La tierra te sea liviana, estremo de la beldad
que crió en cualquier edad la naturaleza humana.

El tesoro desentierra 310
el que halla algún tesoro;
mas yo sigo otro decoro, que cubro el mío con tierra.

Esta parte es concluida;
otra falta, y concluiráse, 315
si bien el alma costase, como ha de costar la vida.

Otra sepultura esquivá abriréis, daga, en mi pecho, con que daréis fin a un hecho 320 que por luengos siglos viva.

Mi cuerpo, mi dulce y bella, quede en esta tierra dura
cual piedra de sepultura, que dice quién yace en ella. 325

¡Ea, cobarde francés, morid con bríos ufanos, pues no os ataron las manos como os ligaron los pies!

(Vase a dar REINALDOS con la daga; sale MALGESÍ en su misma figura y detiéndole el brazo, diciendo:)

MALGESÍ No hagas tal, hermano amado; 330 porque, en este desconcierto, antes que no verte muerto quiero verte enamorado.

Aquesta enterrada y muerta no es Angélica la bella, 335 sino sombra o imagen della, que su vista desconcierta.

Para volverte en tu ser, hice aquesta semejanza;
que el amor sin esperanza 340
no suele permanecer.

Mas, pues es tal tu locura, que aun sin ella perseveras, mira, para que no mueras, vacía la sepultura. 345

REINALDOS ¿Que estos sobresaltos das al que tienes por hermano?
Hechicero, mal cristiano;
mas tú me lo pagarás.

Pues lo sabes, ¿por qué gustas 350
de tratarme deste modo?

MALGESÍ Porque te estremas en todo, y a ningún medio te ajustas.

Ven, y pondréte en la mano a Angélica, y no fingida. 355

REINALDO Seréte toda mi vida humilde, obediente hermano.

(Éntranse todos.)

(Suena una trompeta bastarda, lejos, y entran en el teatro CARLOMAGNO y GALALÓN.)

CARLOMAGNO ¿Qué trompeta es la que suena?
¿Si es acaso otra aventura que nos ponga en desventura, 360 que la otra no fue buena?

Bien lo dijo Malgesí;
mas yo, incrédulo y cristiano,
tuve su aviso por vano,
y crédito no le di. 365

Otra vez suena. ¿No habrá quien nos avise qué es esto?

GALALÓN Yo te lo diré bien presto.

CARLOMAGNO Mejor éste lo dirá.

(Entra un PAJE.)

PAJE Por San Dionís han entrado 370 dos apuestos caballeros que parecen forasteros, pero de esfuerzo sobrado:
uno mayor y robusto,
otro mancebo y galán. 375

GALALÓN¿Dónde llegan?

PAJELlegarán.

Mas miradlos, si os da gusto,
que veis do asoman allí.

(Entra MARFISA y BERNARDO, a caballo.)

CARLOMAGNO¿Bravo ademán y valiente!

GALALÓN¿Qué gran número de gente 380 que traen los dos tras de sí!

CARLOMAGNO Pondré yo que es desafío.

GALALÓNEl continente así muestra.

CARLOMAGNO¿Dónde está agora la diestra de Roldán?

GALALÓN¿Ah, señor mío! 385 ¿Faltan en tu corte iguales a Roldán?

CARLOMAGNOYo no lo sé.
Calla, que hablan.

GALALÓN Sí haré.

CARLOMAGNO Si dijeras desiguales...

MARFISA Escúchame, Carlomagno, 390 que yo hablaré como alcance mi voz hasta tus orejas, por más que estemos distantes;
y denme también oídos
tus famosos Doce Pares, 395 que yo les daré mis manos cada y cuando que gustaren.
Una mujer soy que encierra deseos en sí tan grandes, que compiten con el cielo, 400 porque en la tierra no caben.
Soy más varón en las obras que mujer en el semblante;
ciño espada y traigo escudo, huigo a Venus, sigo a Marte; 405
poco me curo de Cristo;
de Mahoma no hay hablarme;
es mi dios mi brazo solo,
y mis obras, mis Penates.
Fama quiero y honra busco, 410
no entre bailes ni cantares, sino entre acerados petos, entre lanzas y entre alfanjes.
Y es fama que las que vibran y las que ciñen tus Pares 415 vuelan y cortan más que otras regidas de brazos tales.
Por probar si esto es verdad, vivos deseos me traen,
y a todos los desafío, 420
pero a singular certamen;
y, para que no se afrenten

de una mujer que esto hace, mi nombre quiero decilles:
soy Marfisa, y esto baste. 425

BERNARDO En el padrón de Merlín va Marfisa a aposentarse, donde esperará tres días
el deseado combate;
y si tantos acudieren 430
que no puedan despacharse, ella desde aquí me escoge
y elige por su ayudante.
Soy caballero español de prendas y de linaje, 435 y quizá el mismo deseo
de Marfisa aquí me trae.
Y entended que el desafío ha de ser a todo trance, porque grandes honras deben 440 comprarse a peligros grandes.

MARFISA Decid que deje Roldán amorosos disparates, que con Venus y Cupido se aviene mal el dios Marte. 445 Lo que el español ha dicho lo confirmo; y, porque es tarde y el padrón no está muy cerca, el Dios que adoráis os guarde.

CARLOMAGNO ¿Hay, por dicha, Galalón, 450 en París otros Roldanes?
¿Hay otro alguno que pueda con Reinaldos igualarse?
Si los hay, ¿cómo han callado, oyendo desafiarse? 455

¡Oh, mal hubieses, Angélica, que tantos males me haces!
Colgados de tu hermosura, todos mis valientes traes;
solo han dejado a París, 460 solo, por ir a buscarte.

GALALÓN Mientras vive Galalón, ninguno podrá agraviarte;
y mañana con las obras
haré mis dichos verdades. 465 Dame licencia, señor, porque al punto vaya a armarme.

CARLOMAGNO No hay para qué me la pida quien es de los Doce Pares.

(Éntranse.)

(Entran FERRAGUTO y ROLDÁN, riñendo, con las espadas desnudas.)

ROLDÁN Tú le mataste, y fue alevosamente, 470 moro español, sin fe y sin Dios nacido.

FERRAGUTO Tu falsa lengua, como falso, miente, y mentirá mil veces, y ha mentido.

ROLDÁN ¿No fue maldad echarle en la corriente del río?

FERRAGUTO Muy bien puede del vencido 475

hacer el vencedor lo que quisiere.

ROLDÁN De tu falso argüir eso se infiere.

No te retires, bárbaro arrogante, que quiero castigar tu alevosía.

FERRAGUTO Si me retiro, fanfarrón de Aglante, 480 el paso sí, la voluntad no es mía.
Por Mahoma te juro, y Trivigante, que no sé quién me impele y me desvía de tu presencia, ¡oh paladín gallardo!

ROLDÁN Con ésta acabarás, que ya me tardo. 485

(Retírase FERRAGUTO, y, puesto en la tramoya, al tirarle ROLDÁN una estocada, se vuelva la tramoya, y parece en ella ANGÉLICA, y ROLDÁN, echándose a los pies della; al punto que se inclina, se vuelve la tramoya, y parece uno de los SÁTIROS, y hállase ROLDÁN abrazado con sus pies.)

ROLDÁN ¿Qué milagros son éstos, Dios inmenso?
¿Es piedad del Amor ésta que veo?
Arrójome a tus pies, y en esto pienso que satisfago en todo a mi deseo.
Coge, amada enemiga, el fruto y censo 490 que estos labios te dan, y por trofeo ponga Amor en su templo que un Orlando está tus bellas plantas adorando.

De ámbar pensé, mas no es sino de azufre, el olor que despiden estas plantas. 495 ¿Adónde tanto engaño, Amor, se sufre, o quién puede formar visiones tantas?
Ésta veré si esta estocada sufre.

(Vuélvese la tramoya, y parece MALGESÍ en su forma.)

MALGESÍPrimo, ¿que no te enmiendas ni te espantas?

ROLDÁN;Oh Malgesí! Hazaña ha sido aquésta 500 que mi amor y tu ciencia manifiesta.

Mas, dime: ¿de qué sirven tantas pruebas para ver que estoy loco y que me pierdo, sabiendo que el estilo que tú llevas ni le cree ni le admite el hombre cuerdo? 505

MALGESÍVen conmigo, Roldán; daréte nuevas de tu bien por tu mal.

ROLDÁN;Oh sabio acuerdo!
Llévame, primo, en presuroso vuelo deste infierno de ausencia a ver mi cielo.

MALGESÍ Arrima las espaldas a esa caña, 510
los ojos cierra y de Jesús te olvida.

ROLDÁNGrave cosa me pides.

MALGESÍDate maña,
que importa a tu contento esta venida.

ROLDÁN¿Estoy bien puesto?

MALGESÍBien.

ROLDÁNJesús me valga,

aunque jamás con esta empresa salga. 515

(Vuélvese la tramoya con ROLDÁN; salen BERNARDO y MARFISA, y suena dentro una trompeta.)

BERNARDO Trompeta y caballos sienta, y, según mi parecer,
paladín debe de ser
que viene al padrón contento, y seguro de alcanzar 520
de ti, Marfisa, el trofeo.

MARFISAA pie viene, a lo que veo.

BERNARDOPues, ¿quién le hizo apear?

MARFISA Lo que a nosotros. ¿No ves que aquí caballo no llega? 525

BERNARDOSin duda, es de la refriega; que me parece francés.

(Entra GALALÓN, armado de peto y espaldas.)

GALALÓN Sáveos Dios, copia dichosa, tan bella como valiente.

BERNARDODios te salve y te contente. 530

MARFISA¡Salutación enfadosa!
Sálveme mi brazo a mí,

y conténteme mi fuerza.

GALALÓN Vuestro desafío me fuerza y mueve a venir aquí. 535

MARFISA Dime si eres paladín.

GALALÓN Paladín digo que soy.

BERNARDO ¿Partiste de París hoy?

GALALÓN Anoche.

BERNARDO Pues, ¿a qué fin?

GALALÓN No más de a ver si hay qué ver 540 en ti y la bella Marfisa.

BERNARDO Tú te has dado buena prisa.

GALALÓN Conviene, porque hay que hacer.

MARFISA ¿Qué tienes que hacer?

GALALÓN Venceros
y dar a París la vuelta. 545

BERNARDO Si cual tienes lengua suelta tienes agudos aceros, bien saldrás con tu intención.

Mas, dime: ¿cómo es tu nombre?

GALALÓN Diréoslo, porque os asombre: 550 es mi nombre Galalón, el gran señor de Maganza,
de los Doce el escogido.

BERNARDO Días ha que yo he sabido que eres una buena lanza, 555 un crisol de la verdad, un abismo de elocuencia,
un imposible de ciencia,
un archivo de lealtad.

MARFISA Contra la razón te pones, 560 Bernardo, porque la fama
por todo el mundo derrama que éste es saco de traiciones, y aun enemigo mortal
de todos los paladines, 565
malsín sobre los malsines, mentiroso y desleal,
y, sobre todo, cobarde.

GALALÓN A la prueba me remito, y vengamos al conflicto, 570 que se va haciendo tarde.
Empero, si queréis iros sin comenzar esta empresa, yo os juro y hago promesa de eternamente serviros 575 y de no desenvainar
en contra vuestra mi espada.

BERNARDO Promesa calificada
y muy digna de estimar.

MARFISA Dame la mano, que quiero 580 aceptarte por amigo.

GALALÓN Doyla, porque siempre sigo proceder de caballero.
¡Cuerpo de quien me parió, que los huesos me quebrantas! 585

MARFISA Pues, ¿desto poco te espantas?

GALALÓN De menos me espanto yo.
De modo vas apretando,
que se acerca ya mi fin.

BERNARDO ¿Un famoso paladín 590 así se ha de estar quejando porque le dé una doncella la mano por gran favor?

GALALÓN ¿Ésta es doncella? Es furor, es rayo que me atropella, 595 es de mi vida el contraste, pues que ya me la ha quitado.

MARFISA ¡Por Dios, que se ha desmayado!

BERNARDO¿Cómo, y tanto le apretaste?

MARFISA La mano le hice pedazos. 600

BERNARDO¡Oh desdichado francés!

MARFISAQuitarle quiero el arnés, pues viene sin guardabrazos, y ponerle por trofeo colgado de alguna rama, 605 con un mote que su fama descubra, como deseo.
Pero fálтанme instrumentos con que ponerlo en efecto.

(MALGESÍ dice de dentro:)

MALGESÍNo faltarán, te prometo, 610 pues sé tus buenos intentos.
Esos ministros que envió cumplirán tu voluntad.

BERNARDO¡Oh, qué extraña novedad!

MARFISA¿Quién sabe el intento mío? 615 Los versos dicen lo mismo que imaginé en mi intención.
¿Si llevan a Galalón
estos diablos al abismo?

GALALÓN Ya yo entiendo que aquí andas; 620
a ti digo, Malgesí.

Di: ¿no hallaste para mí otro coche ni otras andas?

(Llévanle los SÁTIROS en brazos a GALALÓN.)

MARFISA Di cómo dice el trofeo; quizá yo no lo he entendido. 625

BERNARDO Agudo está y escogido.

MARFISA Léelo en voz.

BERNARDO En voz lo leo:
Estar tan limpio y terso a queste acero, con la entereza que por todo alcanza, nos dice que es, y es dicho verdadero, 630 del señor de la casa de Maganza.
Estas selvas está cierto
que están llenas de aventuras.

MARFISA Quedado habemos a oscuras, por el sol que se ha encubierto; 635 y, entre tanto que él visita
los antípodas de abajo, demos al sueño el trabajo que el reposo solicita.
A esta parte dormiré; 640
tú, Bernardo, duerme a aquélla, hasta que salga la estrella que a Febo guarda la fe.
Y si en aquestos tres días no vinieren paladines, 645 buscaremos otros fines
de más altas bazarías.

BERNARDO Bien dices, aunque el sosiego pocas veces le procuro, con todo, a este peñón duro 650
el sueño y cabeza entrego.

(Échase a dormir.)

(Sale por lo hueco del teatro CASTILLA, con un león en la una mano, y en la otra un castillo.)

CASTILLA ¿Duermes, Bernardo amigo, y aun de pesado sueño,
como el que de cuidados no procede?
¿Huyes de ser testigo 655 de que un estraño dueño tu amada patria sin razón herede?
¿Esto sufrirse puede?

Advierte que tu tío,
contra todo derecho, 660 forma en el casto pecho una opinión, un miedo, un desvarío que le mueve a hacer cosa ingrata a ti, infame a mí, y dañosa.

Quiere entregarme a Francia, 665 temeroso que, él muerto, en mis despojos no se entregue el moro, y está en esta ignorancia de mi valor incierto
y dese tuyo sin igual que adoro. 670
No mira que el decoro
de animosa y valiente,
sin cansancio o desmayo,
que me infundió Pelayo, he guardado en mi pecho eternamente, 675
y he de guardar contino, sin que pavor le tuerza su camino.

Ven, y con tu presencia infundirás un nuevo corazón en los pechos desmayados; 680 curarás la dolencia
del rey, que, ciego al cebo de pensamientos en temor fundados, sigue vanos cuidados,
tan en deshonra mía, 685 que, si tú no me acorres
y luego me socorres,
huiré la luz del sol, huiré del día,
y en noche eterna obscura lloraré sin cesar mi desventura. 690

Por oculto camino
del centro de la tierra te llevaré, Bernardo, al patrio suelo.
Ven luego, que el destino propicio tuyo encierra 695 tú en tu brazo tu honra y mi consuelo.
Ven, que el benigno Cielo
a tu favor se inclina.

Llevaré a tu escudero
por el mismo sendero. 700 Y tú, sin par, que aspiras a divina, procura otras empresas,
que es poco lo que en éstas interesas.

Nadie en esta querella
batallará contigo, 705
que tras sí se los lleva la hermosura de Angélica la bella, común fiero enemigo
de los que en esto ponen su ventura.
Y está cierta y segura 710 que dentro en pocos años

verás estrañas cosas,
amargas y gustosas,
engaños falsos, ciertos desengaños.
Y, en tanto, en paz te queda, 715

y así cual lo deseo te suceda.

(Éntrase CASTILLA con BERNARDO por lo hueco del teatro.)

MARFISA Selvas de encantos llenas, ¿qué es aquesto que veo?
¿Qué figuras son éstas que se ofrecen?
¿Son malas o son buenas? 720
Entre creo y no creo,
me tienen estas sombras que parecen:
admiraciones crecen
    en mí, no ningún miedo.
Lleváronme a Bernardo, 725
y aquí sin causa aguardo.
Ir quiero a do mostrar mi esfuerzo puedo.
Vuelto me he en un instante;
derecha voy al campo de Agramante.

(CORINTO, pastor, y ANGÉLICA, como pastora.)

CORINTO Digo que te llevaré, 730 si fuese a cabo del mundo.

ANGÉLICA En tu valor, sin segundo, sé bien que bien me fié.

CORINTO Haya güelte, y tú verás si te llevo do quisieres. 735

ANGÉLICA Mira tú cuánto pudieres, que eso mismo gastarás;
    que tengo joyas que son de valor y parecer.

CORINTO ¿adónde se han de vender? 740

ANGÉLICA Ahí está la confusión.

CORINTO No reparar en el precio: que, cuando hay necesidad, es punto de habilidad
dar la cosa a menos precio. 745

Y más, que todo lo allana un buen ingenio cursado.
Y ¿cuándo has determinado que partamos?

ANGÉLICA Yo, mañana.

CORINTO Daremos de aquí en Marsella, 750
y allí nos embarcaremos, y el camino tomaremos
para España, rica y bella.

Y, en saliendo del Estrecho, tomar el rumbo a esta mano 755 por el mar profundo y cano que tantas burlas me ha hecho.

Digo que si naves hay,
y en el viento no hay reveses, en menos de trece meses 760 yo te pondré en el Catay.
¿Quieres más?

ANGÉLICA Eso me basta,
si así lo ordenase el Cielo.

CORINTO Aunque me ves deste pelo, soy marinero de casta, 765
y nado como un atún,
y descubro como un lince,
y trabajo más que quince,
y más que veinte, y aún.

Pues, en el guardar secreto, 770 haz cuenta que mudo soy.
¿Quieres que nos vamos hoy?

(Entra REINALDOS.)

ANGÉLICA ¡Oh nuevo y terrible aprieto!
Si éste me conoce, es cierta mi muerte y mi sepultura. 775

CORINTO Pues encubre tu hermosura, si es que puede estar cubierta.
Pero dime: ¿que éste es el francés del otro día?
¡Adiós, pastora mía, 780 que está mi vida en mis pies!

(Huye CORINTO.)

ANGÉLICA No es acertado esperalle;
muy mejor será huir.

REINALDOS ¿Sabrásme, amiga, decir, de un rostro, donaire y talle 785 que es, más que humano, divino?
Alza el rostro. ¿A qué te encubres, que parece que descubres
un no sé qué peregrino?

Alza a ver. ¡Oh santos cielos! 790 ¿Qué es esto que ven mis ojos?
¡Oh gloria de mis enojos, oh quietud de mis recelos!
¿Quién os puso en este traje?
¿Huísos? Pues, ¡vive Dios!, 795 ingrata, que he de ir tras vos hasta que al infierno baje, o hasta que al cielo me encumbre, si allá os pensáis esconder;
que el tino no he de perder, 800
pues va delante tal lumbre.

(Corre ANGÉLICA y entra por una puerta, y REINALDOS tras ella; y, al salir por otra, haya entrado ROLDÁN, y encuentra con ella.)

ROLDÁN De mi dolor conmovido, te ha puesto el cielo en mis brazos.

REINALDOSuelta, que te haré pedazos, amante descomedido; 805 suelta, digo, y considera la grosería que haces.

ROLDÁN¿Para qué turbas mis paces, sombra despiadada y fiera?
¿No ves que esta prenda es mía 810 de razón y de derecho?

REINALDOS¡Por Dios, que te pase el pecho!

ANGÉLICA¡Suerte airada, estrella impía!

REINALDOS ¿Fíaste en ser encantado, que no quieres defenderte? 815

ROLDÁN No fío sino en tenerte por un simple enamorado.

REINALDOS ¡Mataréte, vive el cielo!

ROLDÁN Si puedes, luego me acaba.

REINALDOS ¿Hay desvergüenza tan brava? 820

ROLDÁN ¿Hay tan necio y simple celo?

ANGÉLICA ¿Hay hembra tan sin ventura como yo? Dúdolo, cierto.
¡Suelta, cruel, que me has muerto a manos de tu locura! 825

REINALDOS ¡Suéltala, digo!

ROLDÁN ¡No quiero!

REINALDOS ¿Defiéndete, pues!

ROLDÁN ¡Ni aquesto!

REINALDOS ¡Loco estás!

ROLDÁN Yo lo confieso, aunque de estar cuerdo espero.

ANGÉLICA Divididme en dos pedazos, 830 y repartid por mitad.

ROLDÁN No parto yo la beldad que tengo puesta en mis brazos.

REINALDOS Dejarla tienes entera,
o la vida en estas manos. 835

ANGÉLICA ¡Oh hambrientos lobos tiranos, cuál tenéis esta cordera!
El cielo se viene abajo,
de mi angustia condolido.

ROLDÁN ¡Oh salteador atrevido, 840 cuán sin fruto es tu trabajo!

(Descuélgase la nube y cubre a todos tres, que se esconden por lo hueco del teatro; y salen luego el EMPERADOR CARLOMAGNO y GALALÓN, la mano en una banda, lastimada cuando se la apretó MARFISA.)

CARLOMAGNO ¿Que vencistes a Marfisa?

GALALÓN Llegué y vencí todo junto, porque yo no pierdo punto si acaso importa la prisa. 845 Maltratóme aquesta mano

de un bravo golpe de espada, de que quedó magullada,
porque fue el golpe de llano.

CARLOMAGNO ¿Qué se hizo el español? 850

GALALÓN Como vio en mí a toda Francia, se deshizo su arrogancia como las nubes al sol.
También le dejé vencido.

CARLOMAGNO ¡Brava hazaña, Galalón! 855

GALALÓN Hazaña de un corazón que es de ti favorecido.

CARLOMAGNO ¿Quién es éste?

GALALÓN Malgesí.

CARLOMAGNO ¡Oh, a qué buen tiempo que viene!
Parece que se detiene. 860 ¿Viene armado?

GALALÓN Creo que sí.

(Entra MALGESÍ con el escudo de GALALÓN, donde vienen escritos los cuatro versos de antes.)

CARLOMAGNO Extraña armadura es ésta,

¡oh Malgesí!, caro amigo.

GALALÓN La ciencia deste enemigo honra y vida y más me cuesta. 865

MALGESÍ Señor, pues sabéis leer, leed aquesta escritura.

GALALÓN Mi cobardía se apura si más quiero aquí atender.
Irme quiero a procurar 870
venganza deste embaidor.

(Entra GALALÓN.)

MALGESÍ Después os diré, señor, cosas que os han de admirar.

CARLOMAGNO ¿Adónde queda Roldán, y adónde queda Reinaldos? 875

MALGESÍ Sacro emperador, miraldos de la manera que están.

(Vuelven a salir ROLDÁN, REINALDOS y ANGÉLICA, de la misma manera como se entraron cuando les cubrió la nube.)

REINALDOS Mi trabajo doy al viento, por más que mi fuerza empleo.

ROLDÁN Reinaldos, no soy Anteo, 880 que me ha de faltar aliento.

ANGÉLICA ¡Cobardes como arrogantes, de tal modo me tratáis, que no es posible seáis ni caballeros ni amantes! 885

MALGESÍ Vuelve la vista, emperador supremo; verás el genio de París rompiendo los aires y las nubes, paraninfo despachado del cielo en favor tuyo.

CARLOMAGNO ¡Hermosa vista y novedad es ésta! 890

(Parece un ÁNGEL en una nube volante.)

ÁNGEL Préstame, Carlo, atento y grato oído, y escucha del divino acuerdo cuanto tiene en tu daño y gusto estatuido allá en las aulas del alcázar santo.
Presto estos campos con marcial rüido 895 retumbarán, y con horror y espanto volverá las espaldas la cristiana a la gente agarena y africana.

En honor de Macón y Trivigante, con torcida y errada fantasía, 900 viste las duras armas Agramante, y deja Ferragut a Andalucía.
Rodamonte feroz viene delante;
sus fuertes moros Zaragoza envía, con Marsilio, su rey, y el rey Sobrino, 905 tan prudente, que casi es adivino.

Queda Libia desierta, sin un moro;
de África quedan solas las mezquitas, y todos a una voz tus lirios de oro afrentan con palabras inauditas. 910 Mas tú, guardando el sin igual decoro que guardas en empresas exquisitas, sal al encuentro luego a esta canalla, puesto que perderás en la batalla.

Pero después la poderosa mano 915 ayudarte de modo determina, que del moro español y el africano seas el miedo y la total rüina.
Vuelvo con esto al trono soberano, a ver si en tu favor se determina 920 de nuevo alguna cosa, y en un punto tendrás mi vista y el aviso junto.

(Vase.)

CARLOMAGNO ¡Gracias te doy, Dios inmenso, por el aviso y merced!

ROLDÁN Pues ella cayó en mi red, 925
gozalla, sin duda, pienso.

REINALDOS ¿Todavía estás en eso?

ROLDÁN ¿Y tú en eso todavía?

CARLOMAGNO De vuestra loca porfía he de sacar buen suceso, 930
y ha de ser desta manera:
aquesta dama llevad,
y al momento la entregad
al gran duque de Baviera, y el que más daño hiciere 935

en el contrario escuadrón, llevará por galardón
la prenda que tanto quiere.

ROLDÁN Soy contento.

REINALDOSoy contento.

ROLDÁN; Morirán luego a mis manos 940 andaluces y africanos!

MALGESÍ; Vano saldrá vuestro intento!

ROLDÁN ; Despedazaré a Agramante
y a su ejército en un punto!
Cuéntenle ya por difunto. 945

MALGESÍ No te alargues, arrogante, que Dios dispone otra cosa, como en efecto verás.

ROLDÁN; Oh Agramante! ¿Dónde estás?

REINALDOS; Por mía cuento esta diosa! 950 Cuando con victoria vuelvas, crecerá tu gusto y fama,
que por ahora nos llama fin suspenso a nuestras selvas.

(Suenan chirimías, y dase fin a la comedia.)

Jornada primera

CAURALÍ, capitán de Argel; YZUF, renegado; otros cuatro moros, que se señalan así: 1, 2, 3, 4.

YSUF De en uno en uno y con silencio vengan, que ésta es la trocha y el lugar es éste,
y a la parte del monte más se atengan.

CAURALÍ Mira, Yzuf, que no yerres, y te cueste la vida el no acertar.

YSUF Pierde cuidado; 5
haz que la gente el hierro y fuego apreste.

CAURALÍ ¿Por dó tienes, Yzuf, determinado que demos el asalto?

YSUF Por la sierra,
lugar que, por ser fuerte, no es guardado.
Nací y crecí, cual dije, en esta tierra, 10
y sé bien sus entradas y salidas y la parte mejor de hacerle guerra.

CAURALÍ Ya vienen las escalas prevenidas, y están las atalayas hasta agora con borrachera y sueño entretenidas. 15

YSUF Conviene que los ojos de la aurora

no nos hallen aquí.

CAURALÍ Tú eres el todo:
guía, y embiste, y vence.

YSUF Sea en buen hora,
y no se rompa en cosa alguna el modo que tengo dado; que con él, sin duda, 20 a daros la victoria me acomodo, primero que socorro alguno acuda.

(Éntranse.)

(Suena dentro vocería de moros; enciéndese hachos, pónese fuego al lugar, sale un VIEJO a la muralla medio desnudo y dice:)

VIEJO ¡Válame Dios! ¿Qué es esto?
¿Moros hay en la tierra?
¡Perdidos somos, triste! 25
¡Vecinos, que os perdéis; al arma, al arma!
De los atajadores
la diligencia ha sido
aquesta vez burlada;
las atalayas duermen, todo es sueño. 30 ¡Oh si mis prendas caras, cual un cristiano Eneas, sobre mis flacos hombros sacase deste incendio a luz segura!
¿Que no hay quien grite al arma? 35
¿No hay quien haga pedazos esas campanas mudas?
¡A socorremos voy, amados hijos!
(Éntrase.)

(Sale el SACRISTÁN a la muralla, con una sotana vieja y un paño de tocar.)

SACRISTÁN Turcos son, en conclusión.

¡Oh torre, defensa mía!, 40

ventaja a la sacristía

hacéis en esta ocasión.

Tocar las campanas quiero,

y gritar apriesa al arma;

(Toca la campana.)

el corazón se desarma 45

de brío, y de miedo muero.

Ningún hacho en la marina ninguna atalaya enciende, señal do se comprehende ser cierta nuestra ruina. 50

Como persona aplicada

a la Iglesia, y no al trabajo, mejor meneo el badajo que desenvaino la espada.

(Torna a tocar y éntrase.)

(Salen al teatro CAURALÍ, YZUF y otros dos moros.)

YSUF Por esta parte acudirán, sin duda, 55

los que del monte quieran ampararse;

sosíégate, y verás medrosa y muda gente que viene por aquí a salvarse;

y, antes que aquella del socorro acuda, conviene que se acuda al retirarse. 60

CAURALÍ¿Los bajeles no están bien a la orilla?

MORO 1Y estibados de gusto y de mancilla.

(Sale el VIEJO que salió a la muralla, con un niño en brazos medio desnudo y otro pequeño de la mano.)

PADRE ¿Adónde os llevaré, pedazos vivos de mis muertas entrañas? Si a ventura tendría, antes que fuédeses cautivos, 65 veros en una estrecha sepultura.

CAURALÍ De aquesos tus discursos pensativos te sacará mi espada, que procura, sin acudir al gusto de tu muerte, darte la vida y ensalzar mi suerte. 70

FRANCISQUITO ¿Para qué me sacó, padre, del lecho?
¡Que me muero de frío! ¿Adónde vamos?
Llégueme a mí, como a mi hermano, al pecho.
¿Cómo tan de mañana madrugamos?

PADRE ¡Oh, deste inútil tronco ya y deshecho, 75 tiernos, amables y hermosos ramos!
No sé dó voy; aunque, si bien se advierte, deste camino el fin será mi muerte.

CAURALÍ Llévalos tú, Bairán, a la marina, y mira bien que esté la armada a punto, 80 porque, según os muestra la bocina, la esposa de Titón ya viene junto.

(Éntrase el VIEJO; sale el SACRISTÁN.)

PADRE Huir el mal que el Cielo determina, es trabajo escusado.

SACRISTÁN Yo barrunto, si el cielo mi agudeza no socorre, 85 que estaba más seguro yo en mi torre.
¿Quién me engañó? Y más si, a dicha, yerro el camino o atajo de la sierra.

CAURALÍ ¡Camina, perro, a la marina!

SACRISTÁN ¿Perro?
Agora sé que fue mi madre perra. 90

CAURALÍ Aguija tú con él, y zarpe el ferro la capitana, y vaya tierra a tierra, hasta la cala donde dimos fondo.

(Éntrase el MORO y el SACRISTÁN.)

YZUF ¿Qué es lo que dices Cauralí?

MORO 2 Yo no respondo.

YSUF Escucha, Cauralí, que me parece 95 que una trompeta a mis oídos suena.

CAURALÍ Sin duda, es el temor el que te ofrece el son que tus bravezas desordena.

YSUF Toca tú a recoger, que ya amanece,

y está tu armada de despojos llena, 100
y creo que el socorro se avecina.
¡A la marina!

CAURALÍ¡Hola, a la marina!

(Éntranse.)

(Suena una trompeta bastarda; salen cuatro moros, uno tras otro, cargados de despojos.)

MORO 1 Aunque la carga es poca, es de provecho.

MORO 2Yo no sé lo que llevo, pero vaya.

MORO 3Lo que hasta aquí está hecho, está bien hecho. 105

MORO 4¡Permita Alá que esté libre la playa!

(Sale un MORO con una doncella, llamada COSTANZA, medio desnuda.)

COSTANZASaltos el corazón me da en el pecho; falta el aliento, el ánimo desmaya.
Llévame más despacio.

MORO¡Aguija, perra,
que el mar te aguarda!

COSTANZA¡Adiós, mi cielo y tierra! 110
(Éntrase COSTANZA.)

(Sale UNO a la muralla.)

UNO ¡A la marina, a la marina, amigos, que los turcos se embarcan muy apriesa!
Si aguijáis, dejarán los enemigos la mal perdida y mal ganada presa.

(Entra un ARCABUCERO CRISTIANO.)

ARCABUCEROSólo habremos llegado a ser testigos 115 de que Troya fue aquí.

OTRO¡Fortuna aviesa,
pon alas en mis pies, fuego en mis manos!

OTRONuestros ahíncos han salido vanos, porque ya los turcos son embarcados y en jolito se están cerca de tierra. 120

(Entra el CAPITÁN CRISTIANO.)

CAPITÁN¡Oh! ¡Mal hayan mis pies, acostumbrados, más que a la arena, a riscos de la sierra!
¿Qué han hecho los jinetes?

UNODesmayados
llegaron los caballos tierra a tierra, a tiempo que zarpaban las galeras, 125
y tras ellos llegaron tres banderas.
Los dos atajadores de la playa muertos hallé de arcabuzazos, creo.

La oscuridad disculpa al atalaya del mísero suceso que aquí veo. 130

OTRO¿Qué habemos de hacer?

CAPITÁNLa gente vaya tomando por el monte algún rodeo, y embósquese en la cala allí vecina, por ver lo que el cosario determina.

UNO ¿Qué ha de determinar, si no es tornarse 135
a Argel, pues que su intento ha conseguido?

CAPITÁN¿Quién puede a tan gran hecho aventurarse?

OTROSi él es Morato Arráez, es atrevido; cuanto más, que bien puede imaginarse que de algún renegado fue traído, 140 plático desta tierra.

CAPITÁNDésta hay uno
que en ser traidor no se le iguala alguno.
¿Adónde está mi hermano?

UNOLlegó apenas,
cuando, despavorido y sin aliento,
se arrojó en el lugar.

CAPITÁNHallará estrenas 145

tristes de su esperado casamiento.

(Parece en la muralla DON FERNANDO.)

DON FERNANDO Puntas de cristal claro, y no de almenas, murallas de bruñido y rico argento que guardastes un tiempo mi esperanza, ¿dónde hallaré, decidme, a mi Costanza? 150

Techos que vomitáis llamas teosas, calles de sangre y lágrimas cubiertas, ¿adónde de mis glorias ya dudosas está la causa, y de mis penas ciertas?
Descubre, ¡oh sol!, tus hebras luminosas; 155 abre ya, aurora, tus rosadas puertas; dejadme ver el mar, donde navega el bien que el cielo por mi mal me niega.

CAPITÁN Vámosle a socorrer, no desespere; que en lo que dice da de loco indicio. 160

UNO Bien dices; vamos, que su mal requiere fuerte y apresurado veneficio.

(Éntranse.)

DON FERNANDO Mas, ¿qué digo, cuitado? Bien se infiere de las reliquias deste maleficio que va cautiva mi querida prenda, 165 y es bien que a dalle libertad atienda.

(Éntrase DON FERNANDO, y parece el CAPITÁN en la muralla con otro soldado.)

Desde aquel risco levantado, quiero hacer señal; quizá querrá el vil moro trocar la hermosura por dinero a quien no pagará ningún tesoro. 170

CAPITÁN Ya no está aquí mi hermano; el dolor fiero temo que no le saque del decoro que debe a ser quien es. ¡Oh caso extraño!

UNO Señor, por allí va, si no me engaño.

(Éntrase el CAPITÁN; sale DON FERNANDO, y va subiendo por un risco.)

DON FERNANDO Subid, ¡oh pies cansados!; 175 llegad a la alta cumbre desta encumbrada y rústica aspereza, si ya de mis cuidados
la inmensa pesadumbre
no os detiene en mitad de su maleza. 180 Ya a descubrir se empieza la máquina terrible que con ligero vuelo
la carga de mi cielo
lleva en su vientre tragador y horrible; 185 ya las alas extiende, ya le ayudan los pies, ya al curso atiende.
No será de provecho
esta señal que nuestro
de rescate, de paz y de alianza; 190 ni la voz de mi pecho, aunque a gritar me adiestro,
ha de alcanzar do mi deseo alcanza.
¿Ah, mi amada Costanza!
¡Ah, dulce, honrada esposa! 195
No apliques los oídos

a ruegos descreídos, ni a la fuerza agarena poderosa
os entreguéis rendida, que aún yo para la vía tengo vida. 200 Volved, volved, tiranos, que de vuestra codicia ofrezco de llenar con gusto y gloria los senos; y las manos, ajenas de avaricia, 205 sin duda aumentarán vuestra victoria.
Volved, que es vil escoria cuanto lleváis robado, si no lleváis los dones que os ofrezco a montones 210 en cambio de mi sol, que va eclipsado entre las pardas nubes que tú del mar, ¡oh blando cierzo!, subes.
De Arabia todo el oro, del Sur todas las perlas, 215
la púrpura de Tiro más preciosa, con liberal decoro
ofrezco, aunque el tenerlas os venga a parecer dificultosa.
Si me volvéis mi esposa, 220
un nuevo mundo ofrezco, con todo cuanto encierra
todo el cielo y la tierra.
Locuras digo; mas, pues no merezco alcanzar esta palma, 225 llevad mi cuerpo, pues lleváis mi alma.
(Arrójase del risco.)

(Sale el GUARDIÁN BAJÍ y un CAUTIVO con papel y tinta.)

GUARDIÁN ¡Hola; al trabajo, cristianos!
No quede ninguno dentro;
así enfermos como sanos,

no os tardéis, que, si allá entro, 230 pies os pondrán estas manos.

Que trabajen todos quiero, ya pápaz, ya caballero.
¡Ea, canalla soez!
¿Heos de llamar otra vez? 235

(Sale un CAUTIVO, y van saliendo de mano en mano los que pudieren.)

UNO Yo quiero ser el primero.

GUARDIÁN Éste a la leña le asienta; éste vaya a la marina;
ten en todo buena cuenta;
treinta aquel burche encamina, 240
y a la muralla sesenta;
veinte al horno, y diez envía
a casa de Cauralí.
Y abrevia, que se va el día.

ESCLAVO Por cuarenta envió el cadí; 245
dárselos es cortesía.

GUARDIÁN Y aun fuerza. En eso no pares; enviarás otros dos pares
a los ladrillos de ayer.

ESCLAVO Para todos hay qué hacer, 250 aunque fueran dos millares.
¿Dónde irán los caballeros?

GUARDIÁN Déjalos hasta mañana, que serán de los primeros.

ESCLAVO¿Y si pagan?

GUARDIÁN Cosa es llana 255 que hay sosiego do hay dineros.

ESCLAVO Yo con ellos me avendré, de modo que se te dé
gusto y honesta pitanza.

GUARDIÁN Despacha a la maestranza. 260

ESCLAVO Ve con Dios, que sí haré.
(Éntrese.)

(Salen DON LOPE y VIVANCO, cautivos, con sus cadenas a los pies.)

DON LOPE Ventura, y no poca, ha sido haber escapado hoy
del trabajo prevenido.

VIVANCO Cuando no trabajo, estoy 265 más cansado y más molido.

Para mí es grave tormento este estrecho encerramiento, y es alivio a mi pesar
ver el campo o ver la mar. 270

DON LOPE Pues yo en verlo me atormento, porque la melanconía

que el no tener libertad encierra en el alma mía, quiere triste soledad 275
más que alegre compañía.

Trabajar y no comer,
bien fácil se echa de ver que son pasos de la muerte.

(Sale un CRISTIANO cautivo, que viene huyendo del GUARDIÁN, que viene tras él dándole de palos.)

GUARDIÁN; Oh chufetre! ¿Desta suerte 280 siempre os habéis de esconder?

Que os criastes en regalo, inútil perro, barrunto.

CRISTIANO; Por Dios, fende, que estoy malo!

GUARDIÁN; Pues yo os curaré en un punto 285 con el sudor deste palo.

CRISTIANO Con calentura continua, que me turba y desatina,
estoy ha más de dos días.

(Éntranse, dándole de palos, estos dos.)

GUARDIÁN; Y por eso te escondías? 290

CRISTIANO Sí, fende.

GUARDIÁN ¡Perro, camina!

DON LOPE ¡Por Dios, que es un buen soldado, y no lo hace de vicio
el mísero apaleado!

VIVANCO Mirad, pues, qué veneficio 295 ha en su enfermedad hallado.

¿No es notable desatino que está un cautivo vecino
a la muerte y no le creen?
Y, cuando muerto le ven, 300 dicen: «¡Gualá, que el mezquino estaba malo, sin duda!»

¡Oh canalla fementida,
de toda piedad desnuda!
¿Quién, al perder de la vida, 305 queréis que al mentir acuda?

De nuestra calamidad
con vuestra incredulidad, la muerte es testigo cierto;
más creéis a un hombre muerto, 310 que al vivo de más verdad.

DON LOPE Alza los ojos y atiende a aquella parte, Vivanco, y mira si comprende
tu vista que un paño blanco 315 de una lengua caña pende.

(Parece una caña, atado un paño blanco en ella, con un bulto.)

VIVANCO Bien dices, y atado está.
Quiérome llegar allá

para ver esta hazaña.
¡Por Dios, que se alza la caña! 320

DON LOPE Ve, quizá se abajará.

VIVANCO No es para mí esta aventura, don Lope; ven tú a proballa, que no sé quién me asegura que han de venir a alcanzalla 325 las manos de tu ventura.

DON LOPE Algún muchacho habrá puesto cebo o lazo allí dispuesto para cazar los vencejos.

VIVANCO No está hondo, ni está lejos; 330 ven, y verémoslo presto.
¿No ves cómo se te inclina la caña? ¡Vive el Señor, que ésta es cosa peregrina!

DON LOPE En el trapo está el favor. 335

VIVANCO Si es favor, desata aína.

DON LOPE Once escudos de oro son; entrellos viene un doblón que parece necesario paternóster del rosario. 340

VIVANCO ¡Bien propia comparación!

DON LOPE La caña se tornó a alzar.
¿Qué maná del cielo es ésta?
¿Qué Abacuc nos vino a dar en nuestra prisión la cesta 345 deste que es más que manjar?

VIVANCO ¿Por qué, don Lope, no acudes a dar gracias y saludes a quien hizo esta hazaña?
¡Oh caña, de hoy más no caña, 350 sino vara de virtudes!

DON LOPE ¿A quién quieres que las dé, si en aquella celosía
estrecha nadie se ve?

VIVANCO Pues alguien a questo envía. 355

DON LOPE Claro está, mas quién, no sé.

Quizá será renegada
cristiana la que se agrada de mostrarse compasiva, o ya cristiana cautiva 360
en esta casa encerrada.

Mas, quienquiera que ella sea, es bien que las apariencias de agradecidos nos vea:
hazle dos mil reverencias, 365 porque nuestro intento crea; yo a lo morisco haré ceremonias, por si fue
mora la que hizo el bien.

(Entra HAZÉN, renegado.)

DON LOPE Calla, porque viene Hazén. 370

VIVANCO ¡Noramala venga el pe...!

Las dos erres y la o me como contra mi gusto.

DON LOPE Creo, por Dios, que te oyó.

VIVANCO Si él me oyó, por Dios, fue justo 375
no acabar su nombre yo.

HAZÉN Con vuestras dos firmas solas pisaré alegre y contento las riberas españolas;
llevaré propicio el viento, 380
manso el mar, blandas sus olas.

A España quiero tomar,
y a quien debo confesar
mi mozo y antiguo yerro;
no como Yzuf, aquel perro 385 que fue a vender su lugar.
(Dales un papel escrito.)

Aquí va cómo es verdad que he tratado a los cristianos con mucha afabilidad, sin tener en lengua o manos 390
la turquesca crüeldad;
cómo he a muchos socorrido;
cómo, niño, fui oprimido
a ser turco; cómo voy en corso, pero que soy 395 buen cristiano en lo escondido,

y quizá hallaré ocasión para quedarme en la tierra, para mí, de promisión.

DON LOPEEs la enmienda en el que yerra 400
arras de su salvación.

Echaremos de buen grado las firmas que nos pedís, que ya está experimentado ser verdad cuanto decís, 405
Hazén, y que sois honrado.

Y quiera el cielo divino que os facilite el camino como vos lo deseáis.

VIVANCOA mucho os determináis. 410

HAZÉNPues a más me determino; que he de procurar alzar
la galeota en que voy.

HAZÉNYa con otros cuatro estoy convenido.

VIVANCOTemo azar, 415
si es que entre muchos se sabe:
que no hay cosa que se acabe aquí en Argel sin afrenta cuando a muchos se da cuenta.

HAZÉNEEn los que digo, más cabe. 420

DON LOPE ¿Sabrías decir, Hazén, quién mora en aquella casa?

HAZÉN¿En aquella?

VIVANCOSÍ.

HAZÉN Muy bien.

Un moro de buena masa, principal y hombre de bien, 425

y rico en extremo grado;
y, sobre todo, le ha dado el cielo una hija tal, que de belleza el caudal todo en ella está cifrado. 430

Muley Maluco apetece
ser su marido.

DON LOPE Y el moro
¿qué dice?

HAZÉN Que la merece,
no por rey, mas por el oro que en la dote el rey ofrece: 435 que en esta nación confusa que dé el marido se usa la dote, y no la mujer.

VIVANCO¿Y ella está del parecer del padre?

HAZÉN No lo rehúsa. 440

DON LOPE ¿Está acaso alguna esclava, ya renegada o cristiana,
en esta casa?

HAZÉN Una estaba
años ha, llamada Juana.
Sí, sí; Juana se llamaba, 445
y el sobrenombre tenía, creo, que de Rentería.

DON LOPE ¿Qué se hizo?

HAZÉN Ya murió,
y a aquesta mora crió que denantes os decía. 450 Ella fue una gran matrona, archivo de cristiandad,
de las cautivas corona;
no quedó en esta ciudad otra tan buena persona. 455 Los tornadizos lloramos su falta, porque quedamos ciegos sin su luz y aviso.
Por cobralla, el cielo quiso que la perdiesen sus amos. 460

DON LOPE Vete en paz, y aquesta tarde ven por tus firmas, Hazén.
(Vase.)

(Éntrese HAZÉN.)

HAZÉN La Trinidad toda os guarde.

VIVANCO Bien podemos deste bien hacer otra vez alarde. 465 ¿Cuántos son?

DON LOPE ¿Once no dije?
Pero lo que aquí me aflige es no ver a quien los dio.

VIVANCO ¿Quién? Para mí tengo yo que fue Aquél que el cielo rige, 470 que por no vistos caminos su pródiga mano acorre
a los míseros mezquinos;
y así, a nosotros socorre, aunque de tal gracia indignos. 475

(Parece la caña otra vez, con otro paño de más bulto.)

Mira que otra vez asoma la caña.

DON LOPE Trabajo toma
de ir a ver si se te inclina.

VIVANCO Aquesta pesca es divina, aunque sea de Mahoma. 480 Mas, apenas muevo el pie hacia allá, cuando levantan la caña, y no sé por qué;
si es que de mí se espantan, díganlo y me volveré. 485 Para ti, amigo, se guarda esta ventura gallarda;

ven y veremos lo que es;
y no empereces los pies, que, si el bien llega, no tarda. 490

(Inclínase la caña a DON LOPE, y desata el paño.)

DON LOPE Más peso tiene, a mi ver, que el de denantes aquéste.

VIVANCO Más numos debe de haber.

DON LOPE ¡Ta, ta, billetico es éste!

VIVANCO ¿Quiéresle agora leer? 495 Mira si es oro o argento, primero, que de contento estoy para reventar.
¿Que no lo queréis mirar?

(Pónese DON LOPE a leer el billete; y, antes que le acabe de leer, dice:)

DON LOPE ¡Por Dios, que pasan de ciento, 500
y son los más de a dos caras!

VIVANCO ¿Para qué a leer te paras?
A contarlos te apresura.

DON LOPE Cierta que es esta aventura rarísima entre las raras. 505

VIVANCO ¿Qué es lo que dice el papel?

DON LOPE En lo poco que he leído, milagros he visto en él.

VIVANCO Oye, que siento ruido.

DON LOPE Gente viene de tropel; 510 en el rancho nos entremos, adonde a solas podremos ver lo que el billete dice.

VIVANCO ¿Despedístete?

DON LOPE Sí hice.

VIVANCO Desorejado tenemos. 515

(Sale el GUARDIÁN BAJÍ y un moro llamado CARAHOJA, y un CRISTIANO atadas las orejas con un paño sangriento, como que las trae cortadas.)

CARAHOJA ¿No os dije, perro insensato, que, si huíades por tierra, que os haría a queste trato?

CRISTIANO Es grande el gusto que encierra voz de libertad.

CARAHOJA ¡Oh ingrato! 520
Por la mar te he aconsejado que huyas; mas tú, malvado, que en los estorbos no miras, siempre a huir por tierra aspiras.

CRISTIANO Hasta quedar enterrado. 525

CARAHOJA Tres veces por tierra ha huido este perro, y treinta doblas di aquellos que le han traído.

CRISTIANO Si las prisiones no doblas, haz cuenta que me has perdido: 530 que, aunque me desmoches todo, y me pongas de otro modo peor que éste en que me veo, tanto el ser libre deseo, que a la fuga me acomodo 535 por la tierra o por el viento, por el agua y por el fuego;
que, a la libertad atento,
a cualquier cosa me entrego que me muestre este contento. 540 Y, aunque más te encolerices, respondo a lo que me dices, que das en mi huida cortes, que no importa el ramo cortes, si no arrancas las raíces. 545 Si no me cortas los pies, al huirme no hay reparo.

GUARDIÁN Carahoja, ¿éste no es español?

CARAHOJA ¿Pues no está claro?

¿En su brío no lo ves? 550

GUARDIÁN Por Alá, que, aunque esté muerto, estás de guardallo incierto.
¡Éstrate, perro, a curar!
Aqueste le habrás de dar
a la limosna.

CARAHOJA Está cierto. 555

(Étrase el CRISTIANO.)

GUARDIÁN Oye, que un tiro han tirado en la mar.

CARAHOJA No le he sentido.

(Entra un CAUTIVO.)

CAUTIVO Fendi, Cauralí es llegado, y viene, según he oído, rico, próspero y honrado; 560
y el rey sale a la marina, que ver allí determina
los cautivos y el despojo.

GUARDIÁN ¿Quieres venir?

CARAHOJA Yo estoy cojo.

GUARDIÁN Pues poco a poco camina. 565

(Éntranse.)

(Vuelven a salir DON LOPE y VIVANCO.)

VIVANCO Léele otra vez, que me admira la sencillez que contiene
y el grande intento a que aspira.

DON LOPE Mira bien si alguno viene, y a esta parte te retira. 570

El billete dice así;
en toda mi vida vi
razones así sencillas.
¡Éstas son tus maravillas, gran Señor!

VIVANCO Acaba, di. 575

DON LOPE (Lee el billete DON LOPE.)

Mi padre, que es muy rico, tuvo por cautiva a una cristiana, que me dio leche y me enseñó todo el cristianesco. Sé las cuatro oraciones, y leer y escribir, que ésta es mi letra. Díjome la cristiana que Lela Marién, a quien vosotros llamáis Santa María, me quería mucho, y que un cristiano me había de llevar a su tierra. Muchos he visto en ese baño por los agujeros desta celosía, y ninguno me ha parecido bien, sino tú. Yo soy hermosa, y tengo en mi poder muchos dineros de mi padre. Si quieres, yo te daré muchos para que te rescates, y mira tú cómo podrás llevarme a tu tierra, donde te has de casar conmigo; y, cuando no quisieres, no se me dará nada: que Lela Marién tendrá cuidado de darme marido. Con la caña me podrás responder cuando esté el baño sin gente. Envíame a decir cómo te llamas, y de qué tierra eres, y si eres casado; y no te fíes de ningún moro ni renegado. Yo me llamo Zara, y Alá te guarde.

¿Qué te parece?

VIVANCO Que el cielo se nos descubre en la tierra en este tan santo celo.

DON LOPE Sin duda, en Zara se encierra toda la bondad del suelo. 580

VIVANCO Quizá nos está mirando.
Vuelve, y haz, de cuando en cuando, señales de agradecido.
Mas, ¿en qué te has suspendido?

DON LOPE La respuesta estoy pensando. 585

VIVANCO ¿Pues hay más que responder, sino que harás todo cuanto fuere al caso menester?

(Entra HAZÉN.)

DON LOPE Hazén vuelve.

HAZÉN Estimo en tanto
el bien que me habéis de hacer, 590 que, hasta tenerle en mi pecho, no puedo tener sosiego.
(Vuélvele el papel.)

DON LOPE Amigo Hazén, ya está hecho;
y, así como yo os lo entrego con gusto, os haga el provecho. 595

VIVANCO ¿Es verdad que ya ha llegado Cauralí?

HAZÉN Ya se ha mostrado al cabo de Metafús.

DON LOPE ¿En qué piensas?

HAZÉN Ahora, ¡sus!, yo he de ver al renegado 600
y decirle de mí a él
quién es.

VIVANCO ¿Por Yzuf dirás?

HAZÉN Por ese perro crüel digo.

DON LOPE Pues muy mal harás en tomarte, Hazén, con él. 605

VIVANCO Déjale, ¡Dios le maldiga!

HAZÉN El alma se me fatiga en ver que este perro infame su sangre venda y derrame como si fuera enemiga. 610 Dios me ayude, a Dios quedad, que jamás no me veréis,

y Dios os dé libertad.

VIVANCO; Mirad, Hazén, lo que hacéis!

(Éntrase HAZÉN.)

HAZÉN; Dios mueve mi voluntad! 615

VIVANCO ¿Apostaréis que se toma, según la ira le doma,
con Yzuf?

DON LOPE Ya le acabase, porque del suelo quitase este rayo de Mahoma. 620 ¿No será bien que escribamos, por si otra vez se aparece esta estrella que miramos?

VIVANCO Así a mí me lo parece, ya, y ahora.

DON LOPE Vamos.

VIVANCO Vamos. 625

(Éntranse.)

(Sale HAZÁN BAJÁ, rey de Argel, y el CADÍ y CARAHOJA, y HAZÉN, el GUARDIÁN BAJÍ y otros moros de acompañamiento; suenan chirimías y grita

de desembarcar.)

BAJÁ ¡Bueno viene Cauralí!
De alegría da gran muestra.
¿Qué dices, guardián Bají?

GUARDIÁN De su industria y de su diestra siempre estos efecto vi; 630 es valiente, y fue guiado por un bravo renegado.

BAJÁ ¿No fue Yzuf?

GUARDIÁN Yzuf se llama,
a quien pregona la fama
por buen moro y buen soldado. 635

(Entran CAURALÍ y YZUF.)

CAURALÍ Dame tus pies, fuerte Hazán, como mi rey y señor.

BAJÁ Mis pies por jamás se dan a labios de tal valor
y a tan bravo capitán. 640
Del suelo os alzá.

YSUFA mí
darás lo que a Cauralí
niegas con justa razón.

BAJÁ De entrambos mis brazos son.

CADÍ Y también los del cadí. 645
En buen hora seas venido.

CAURALÍ En la misma estás.

CADÍ Pues bien:
¿haos España enriquecido?
Porque lo suele hacer bien con el cosario atrevido. 650

YSUF Mi pueblo se saqueó, y, aunque poca, en él se halló ganancia y algún cautivo.

HAZÉN ¡Oh, más que Nerón esquivo, ni al que a Cicilia asoló! 655

BAJÁ Haz venir alguno dellos en mi presencia, y advierte que sean de los más bellos.

CAURALÍ Yo mesmo, por complacerte, quiero ir, señor, a traerlos. 660 (Éntrese CAURALÍ.)

BAJÁ ¿Cuántos serán?

YSUF Ciento y veinte.

BAJÁ ¿Hay entre ellos buena gente para el remo? ¿Hay oficiales?

YSUF Yo creo que vienen tales, que el más ruin más te contente. 665

CADÍ ¿Hay muchachos?

YSUF Dos no más;
pero de belleza estraña,
como presto lo verás.

CADÍ Hermosos los cría España.

YZUF Pues déstos te admirarás. 670
Y son, a lo que imagino, uno y otro mi sobrino.

CADÍ Hasles hecho un gran favor.

HAZÉN ¿Que tal hiciste, traidor, alma fiera de Ezino? 675

(Vuelve CAURALÍ con el PADRE, que trae al niño de la mano y otro chiquito en los brazos, que no ha de hablar; y vienen asimismo el SACRISTÁN, DON FERNANDO y otros dos cautivos.)

CAURALÍ De aquestos dos niños creo que este honrado viejo es padre.

YSUF El mío en su rostro veo.

BAJÁ ¿Viene cautiva su madre?

CAURALÍ No, señor.

CADÍ Éste no es feo. 680

BAJÁ Son muy chiquitos.

CAURALÍ Con todo,
con el tiempo me acomodo,
sin que lo estorbe su Roma, dar dos pajes a Mahoma que le sirvan a su modo. 685

PADRE ¡Cuitado! ¿Qué es lo que escucho?

CADÍ Llegad éste acá.

PADRE Señor,
no nos aparte; ya lucho
con los brazos del temor, y venceránme, que es mucho. 690

CAURALÍ Éste es un desesperado, que él mismo al mar se arrojó ya después de haber zarpado, y un gancho que le eché yo le pescó como pescado. 695

BAJÁ ¿Pues quién le movió a tal hecho?

CAURALÍ Amor que reina en su pecho de un hijo que él se temía que en nuestra armada venía.

BAJÁ Y el muchacho, ¿qué se ha hecho? 700

YSUF No parece.

CADÍ ¿Cómo así?

CAURALÍ Debió de quedarse allá.

DON FERNANDO ¡Ay Costanza! ¿Qué es de ti?

BAJÁ ¿Qué es lo que dices?

DON FERNANDO ¡Quizá
en el lugar le perdí! 705

BAJÁ Cordura fuera buscallo primero, y, al no hallalle, el rescate lo suplía;
y fue mala granjería
el perderte por ganalle. 710 ¿Éste quién es?

CAURALÍ No sé cierto.

CAUTIVO¿Yo, señor? Soy carpintero.

HAZÉN¡Oh cristiano poco experto!
No te sacará el dinero
desta tormenta a buen puerto. 715 El que es oficial, no espere, mientras que vida tuviere,
verse libre destas manos.

CAURALÍ¿Vendrán todos los cristianos?

BAJÁMuestra alguno, y sea quien fuere. 720

(Entra el SACRISTÁN.)

¿Éste es pápaz?

SACRISTÁNNo soy Papa, sino un pobre sacristán que apenas tuvo una capa.

CADÍ¿Cómo te llaman?

SACRISTÁNTristán.

BAJÁ¿Tu tierra?

SACRISTÁNNo está en el mapa. 725 Es mi tierra Mollorido, un lugar muy escondido

allá en Castilla la Vieja.
Aparte.

¡Mucho este perro me aqueja!
¡Guarde el cielo mi sentido! 730

BAJÁ ¿Qué oficio tienes?

SACRISTÁN Tañer,
que soy músico divino,
como lo echaréis de ver.

HAZÉNO este pobre pierde el tino, o él es hombre de placer. 735

BAJÁ ¿Tocas flauta o chirimía, o cantas con melodía?

SACRISTÁN Como yo soy sacristán, toco el din, el don y el dan a cualquiera hora del día. 740

CADÍ ¿Las campanas no son esas que llamáis entre vosotros?

SACRISTÁN Sí, señor.

BAJÁ Bien lo confieras:
música para nosotros
divina es la que profesas. 745 ¿No sabrás tirar un remo?

SACRISTÁN No, mi señor, porque temo reventar: que soy quebrado.

CADÍ Irás a guardar ganado.

SACRISTÁN Soy friolego en extremo 750 en invierno, y en verano no puedo hablar de calor.

BAJÁ Bufón es este cristiano.

SACRISTÁN ¿Yo búfalo? No, señor; antes soy pobre aldeano. 755 En lo que yo tendré mañana será en guardar una puerta o en ser pescador de caña.

CADÍ Bien tus oficios concierta;
no fuérades vos de España. 760

(Entra un MORO.)

MORO Los jenízaros están aguardándote en palacio.

BAJÁ Vamos. ¡Adiós, capitán!, y veámonos despacio.

CAURALÍ Aparte.

¡Oh, qué bien mis cosas van! 765

(Éntranse todos; quedan HAZÉN y YZUF.)

Escapado he la cristiana; ya la fortuna me allana
los caminos de mi bien.

YSUF Agora hablaré yo a Hazén.

HAZÉN De hablarte tengo gana. 770

Deja ir a Cauralí,
porque los cautivos lleve,
y quedémonos aquí.

YSUF En tus razones sé breve, que tengo que hacer.

HAZÉN Sea así. 775

Dejo aparte que no tengas ley con quien tu alma avengas, ni la de gracia ni escrita, ni en iglesia ni en mezquita a encomendarte a Dios vengas. 780

Con todo, de tu fiereza no pudiera imaginar cosa de tanta estrañeza como es venirme a faltar la ley de naturaleza. 785

Con sólo que la tuvieras, fácilmente conocieras

la maldad que cometías cuando a pisar te ofrecías las españolas riberas. 790

¿Qué Falaris agraviado, qué Dionisio embravecido, o qué Catilina airado,
contra su sangre ha querido mostrar su rigor sobrado? 795

¿Contra tu patria levantas la espada? ¿Contra las plantas que con tu sangre crecieron tus hoces agudas fueron?

YSUF; Por Dios, Hazén, que me espantas! 800

HAZÉN ¿No te espanta haber vendido a tu tío y tus sobrinos
y a tu patria, descreído, y espántate...?

YSUF Desatinos
dices, Hazén fementido. 805 Sin duda que eres cristiano.

HAZÉN Bien dices; y aquesta mano confirmará lo que has dicho poniendo eterno entredicho.
a tu proceder tirano. 810
(Da HAZÉN de puñaladas a YZUF.)

YSUF ¡Ay, que me ha muerto! ¡Mahoma, desde luego la venganza,
como es tu costumbre, toma!

HAZÉN;Tu llevas buena esperanza a los lagos de Sodoma! 815

(Vuelve el CADÍ.)

CADÍ ¿Qué es esto? ¿Qué grito oí?

HAZÉN;Por Dios, que vuelve el cadí!

YSUF;Ay, señor! ¡Hazén me ha muerto, y es cristiano!

HAZÉNAqueso es cierto:
cristiano soy, veisme aquí. 820

CADÍ ¿Por qué le mataste, perro?

HAZÉNNo porque éste fue de caza
de la vida le destierro, sino porque fue de raza que siempre cazó por yerro. 825

CADÍ ¿Eres cristiano?

HAZÉNSí soy;
y en serlo tan firme estoy,
que deseo, como has visto, deshacerme y ser con Cristo, si fuese posible, hoy. 830 ¡Buen Dios, perdona el exceso de haber faltado en la fe, pues, al cerrar del proceso,

si en público te negué,
en público te confieso! 835

Bien sé que aqueste conviene que haga a aquel que te tiene ofendido como yo.

CADÍ¿Quién jamás tal cosa vio?
¡Alto, su muerte se ordene! 840 ¡Ponedle luego en un palo!

HAZÉN Mientras yo tuviere aquéste, con quien el alma regalo, lecho será en que me acueste, el tuyo, Sardanapalo. 845

Dame, enemigo, esa cama, que es la que el alma más ama, puesto que al cuerpo sea dura;
dámela, que a gran ventura por ella el cielo me llama. 850 (Saca una cruz de palo HAZÉN.)

No le mudes la intención, buen Jesús; confirma en él su intento y mi petición, que en ser el cadí crüel consiste mi salvación. 855

CADÍ Caminad; llevadle aína, y empalalde en la marina.

HAZÉN Por tal palo, palio espero;
y así, correré ligero.

MORO ¡Camina, perro, camina! 860

HAZÉN    Cristianos, a morir voy, no moro, sino cristiano;
que aqueste descuento doy del vivir torpe y profano en que he vivido hasta hoy. 865

En España lo diréis
a mis padres, si es que os veis fuera de aqueste destierro.

CADÍ;Cortad la lengua a ese perro!
¡Acabad con él! ¿Qué hacéis? 870

Carga tú con éste, y mira si ha acabado de espirar.

MOROParéceme que aún respira.

CADÍTráele a mi casa a curar.
Este suceso me admira: 875 en él se ha visto una prueba tan nueva al mundo, que es nueva aun a los ojos del sol;
mas si el perro es español,
no hay de qué admirarme deba. 880

(Éntranse todos.)

FIN DE LA PRIMERA JORNADA

Jornada segunda

HALIMA, mujer de CAURALÍ, y doña COSTANZA.

HALIMA    ¿Cómo te hallas, cristiana?

COSTANZA Bien, señora; que en ser tuya mucho mi ventura gana.

HALIMA Que gana más la que es suya, bien se ve ser cosa llana.    5

    Al no tener libertad,
no hay mal que tenga igualdad:
sélo yo, sin ser esclava.

COSTANZA Yo, señora, esto pensaba.

HALIMA Piensas contra la verdad.    10

    Sólo por estar sujeta
a mi esposo, estoy de suerte que el corazón se me aprieta.

COSTANZA Blando del marido fuerte hace la mujer discreta.    15

HALIMA    ¿Eres casada?

COSTANZA Pudiera

serlo, si lo permitiera el cielo, que no lo quiso.

HALIMA Tu gentileza y aviso corren igual la carrera. 20

(Entran CAURALÍ y DON FERNANDO como cautivo.)

CAURALÍ Ella es hermosa en extremo; mas llega a su hermosura
su riguridad, que temo.
¡Ya, amor, desta piedra dura saca el fuego en que me quemo! 25

Hete dado cuenta desto, para que en mi gusto el resto eches de tu discreción.

DON FERNANDO Más pide la obligación, buen señor, en que me has puesto. 30

Muéstrame tú la cautiva;
que, aunque más esenta viva del grande poder de amor, la has de ver de tu dolor,
o amorosa, o compasiva. 35

CAURALÍ Vesla allí; y ésta es Halima, mi mujer y tu señora.

DON FERNANDO ¡A fe que es prenda de estima!

HALIMA Pues, amigo, ¿qué hay ahora?

CAURALÍ Más de un ¡ay! que me lastima. 40

HALIMA ¿Álzase el rey con la presa?

CAURALÍ No fuera desdicha aquésa.

HALIMA Pues ¿qué daño puede haber?

CAURALÍ ¿No es mal mandarme volver en corso con toda priesa? 45

Mas Alá lo hará mejor.
Aqueste esclavo os presento, que es cristiano de valor.

DON FERNANDO Aparte.

¿Juzgo, veo, entiendo, siento?
¿Éste es esfuerzo, o temor? 50
¿No están mirando mis ojos los ricos altos despojos por quien al mar me arrojé?
¿No es ésta, que el alma fue, la gloria de sus enojos? 55

CAURALÍ ¿Con quién hablas, di, cristiano?
¿Por qué no te echas por tierra
y Halima besas la mano?

DON FERNANDO Más acierta el que más yerra, viendo un dolor sobrehumano. 60

Dame, señora, los pies, que este que postrado ves ante ellos es tu cautivo.

HALIMA Ahora esclavo recibo que será señor después. 65 ¿Conoces a esta cautiva?

DON FERNANDO No, por cierto.

COSTANZA Bien dijiste;
y si de memoria priva
un dolor, muera ésta triste, porque olvidada no viva. 70 Pero quizá disimulas
y mentiras acumulas
que ser de provecho sientes.

CAURALÍ ¿Por qué, hablando entre los dientes, las razones no articulas? 75

DON FERNANDO ¿Cómo os llamáis?

COSTANZA ¿Yo? Costanza.

DON FERNANDO ¿Sois soltera, o sois casada?

COSTANZA De serlo tuve esperanza.

DON FERNANDO ¿Y estáis ya desesperada?

COSTANZA Aún vive la confianza: 80 que, mientras dura la vida, es necedad conocida
desesperarse del bien.

DON FERNANDO ¿Quién fue vuestro padre?

COSTANZA ¿Quién?
Un Diego de la Bastida. 85

DON FERNANDO ¿No estábades concertada con un cierto don Fernando de sobrenombre de Andrada?

COSTANZA Así es; mas nunca el cuándo llegó desafortunada honrada: 90 que mi señor Cauralí del bien que en fe poseí, merced a Yzuf el traidor, trujo de su borrador
el original aquí. 95

DON FERNANDO Señora, trátala bien, porque es mujer principal.

HALIMA Como ella me sirva bien,
no la trataré yo mal.

(Entra ZAHARA, muy bien aderezada.)

ZAHARA Ya queda empalado Hazén. 100

HALIMA Señora Zara, ¿qué es esto?
No te esperaba tan presto.

ZAHARANo estaba el baño a mi gusto, y víneme con disgusto
de aqueste caso funesto. 105

HALIMA ¿Pues qué caso?

ZAHARAA Yzuf mató
Hazén, y el cadí, al momento, a empalarle sentenció.
Vile morir tan contento, que creo que no murió. 110
Si ella fuera de otra suerte, tuviera envidia a su muerte.

CAURALÍ¿Pues no murió como moro?

ZAHARADicen que guardó un decoro que entre cristianos se advierte, 115 que es el morir confesando al Cristo que ellos adoran.
Y estúvemele mirando,
y, entre otros muchos que lloran, también estuve llorando, 120
porque soy naturalmente de pecho humano y clemente;
en fin, pecho de mujer.

CAURALÍ¿Que tal te paraste a ver?

ZAHARA Soy curiosa impertinente. 125

CAURALÍ ¿Estarás aquí esta tarde, Zahara?

ZAHARA Sí, porque he de hacer con Halima cierto alarde.

CAURALÍ ¿De soldados?

ZAHARA Podrá ser.

CAURALÍ Quedad con Alá.

ZAHARA Él te guarde. 130

(Vase CAURALÍ.)

HALIMA No te vayas tú, cristiano.

CAURALÍ Quédate.

DON FERNANDO Término llano
es éste de Berbería.

COSTANZA ¡Dichosa desdicha mía!

HALIMA ¿Por qué?

COSTANZA Porque en ella gano. 135

ZAHARA ¿Qué ganas?

COSTANZA Un bien perdido que cobré con la paciencia de los males que he sufrido.

ZAHARA ¡Mucho enseña la experiencia!

COSTANZA Mucho he visto, y más sabido. 140

ZAHARA ¿Nuevos son estos cristianos?

HALIMA Sus rostros mira y sus manos, que están limpios y ellas blandas.

DON FERNANDO Saldréme fuera si mandas.

HALIMA No tengas temores vanos, 145 porque no tiene recelo
de ningún cautivo el moro, ni cristiano le dio celo.
Guarda ese honesto decoro para tu tierra.

DON FERNANDO Harélo. 150

HALIMA No hay mora que acá se abaje a hacer algún moro ultraje con el que no es de su ley, aunque supiese que un rey se encubría en ese traje. 155

Por eso nos dan licencia de hablar con nuestros cautivos.

DON FERNANDO; Confiada impertinencia!

ZAHARAMatan los bríos lascivos el trabajo y la dolencia, 160 y el gran temor de la pena de la culpa nos refrena a todos; que, según veo, doquiera nace un deseo que un buen pecho desordena. 165

Ven acá; dime, cristiano:
¿en tu tierra hay quien prometa y no cumpla?

DON FERNANDOAlgún villano.

ZAHARA; Aunque dé en parte secreta su fee, su palabra y mano? 170

DON FERNANDO Aunque sólo sean testigos los cielos, que son amigos de descubrir la verdad.

ZAHARA; Y guardan esa lealtad con los que son enemigos? 175

DON FERNANDO Con todos; que la promesa del hidalgo o caballero es deuda líquida expresa, y ser siempre verdadero el bien nacido profesa. 180

HALIMA ¿Qué te importa a ti saber su buen o mal proceder
de aquéstos, que en fin son galgos?

ZAHARA Haz, ¡oh Alá!, que sean hidalgos los que me diste a escoger. 185

HALIMA ¿Qué dices, Zara?

ZAHARA Nonada;
déjame a solas, si quieres,
con esta tu esclava honrada.

HALIMA ¡Qué amiga de saber eres!

ZAHARA ¿A quién el saber no agrada? 190

HALIMA Habla tú con ella, y yo con mi esclavo.

COSTANZA Al fin salió
verdad lo que yo temía.
¿Si ha de acabar Berbería lo que España comenzó? 195 Allá comencé a perder,
y aquí me he de rematar;

porque bien se echa de ver que este apartarse y hablar se funda en un buen querer. 200

ZAHARA ¿Cómo te llamas, amiga?

COSTANZA Costanza.

ZAHARA ¿Tendrás fatiga
de verte sin libertad?

COSTANZA Más, si va a decir verdad, otra cosa me fatiga. 205

HALIMA La blandura o la aspereza de las manos nos da muestra de la abundancia o pobreza de vosotros. Muestra, muestra:
no las huyas, que es simpleza, 210 porque, si eres de rescate, será ocasión que te trate con proceder justo y blando.

ZAHARA ¿Qué miras?

COSTANZA Estoy mirando
un extraño disparate. 215

DON FERNANDO Señora, a mi amo toca el hacer esa experiencia, aunque a risa me provoca que a tan engañosa ciencia deis creencia mucha o poca; 220 porque hay pobres holgazanes en nuestra tierra galanes y del trabajo enemigos.

HALIMA Estas manos son testigos de quién eres; no te allanes. 225

COSTANZA Aparte.

    ¡Ay, embustera gitana!
En esas rayas que miras está mi desdicha llana.
¡Qué despacio las retiras, enemigo!

ZAHARA ¿Qué has, cristiana? 230

COSTANZA ¿Qué tengo de haber? Nonada.

ZAHARA ¿Fuiste, a dicha, enamorada en tu tierra?

COSTANZA Y aun aquí.

ZAHARA ¿Aquí dices? ¿Cómo así?
¿Luego a moro estás prendada? 235

COSTANZA No, sino de un renegado de fe poca y fe perjura.

DON FERNANDO Harto, señora, has mirado.

ZAHARA Has dado en una locura en que cristiana no ha dado. 240

Amar a cristianos moras, eso vese a todas horas;
mas que ame cristiana a moro,
eso no.

COSTANZA Dese decoro
reniego.

HALIMA ¿De qué te azoras? 245
Además eres esquivo.

DON FERNANDO Rico, pobre, blando o fuerte, señora, soy tu cautivo,
y tengo a dichosa suerte el serlo.

COSTANZA ¡Muriendo vivo! 250

ZAHARA ¿Que tanto le quieres, triste?
¿Hoy quieres, y ayer veniste?
¡Cómo amor tu pecho enciende!
Mas, ¿cómo te reprehende la que tan mal le resiste? 255 Lo que en esto siento, amiga, es que me cansa y afana sentir que tu lengua diga que una tan bella cristiana le causa un moro fatiga. 260

COSTANZA No es sino mora.

ZAHARA Dislates
dices; de aqueso no trates, que es locura y vano error.

COSTANZA Son en los casos de amor extraños los disparates. 265

ZAHARA Bien el que has dicho lo allana.

HALIMA ¿Qué habláis las dos?

ZAHARA ¡Es de precio
y discreta la cristiana!

HALIMA ¡Pues el cristiano no es necio!

COSTANZA Es de fe perjura y vana. 270

HALIMA Entremos, que ya has oído el azar, y el encendido sol de media su jornada.

DON FERNANDO ¡Oh, por mi bien, prenda hallada!

COSTANZA ¡Oh, por mi mal, bien perdido! 275

(Éntranse todos.)

(Sale el VIEJO, padre de los niños, y el SACRISTÁN: el VIEJO con vestido de cautivo, y el SACRISTÁN con su mismo vestido y con un barril de agua.)

SACRISTÁN No hay sino tener paciencia y encomendarnos a Dios;
porque es necia impertinencia dejarse morir.

VIEJO Ya vos
tenéis ancha la conciencia; 280 ya coméis carne en los días vedados.

SACRISTÁN ¡Qué niñerías!
Como aquello que me da
mi amo.

VIEJO Mal os hará.

SACRISTÁN ¡Que no hay aquí teologías! 285

VIEJO ¿No te acuerdas, por ventura, de aquellos niños hebreos que nos cuenta la Escritura?

SACRISTÁN ¿Dirás por los Macabeos, que, por no comer grosura, 290
se dejaron hacer piezas?

VIEJO Por éstos digo.

SACRISTÁN Si empiezas,
en viéndome, a predicarme, por Dios, que he de deslizarme
en viéndote.

VIEJO ¿Ya tropiezas? 295
Que no caigas, plega al cielo.

SACRISTÁN Eso no, porque en la fe soy de bronce.

VIEJO Yo recelo
que si una mora os da el pie, deis vos de mano a ese cielo. 300

SACRISTÁN Luego, ¿no me han dado ya más de dos lo que quizá otro no lo desechara?

VIEJO Dádiva es que cuesta cara a quien la toma y la da. 305 Pero dejémonos desto.
¿Quién es vuestro amo?

SACRISTÁN Mamí,
un jenízaro dispuesto
que es soldado y dabají, turco de nación y honesto. 310 Dabají es cabo de escuadra
o alférez, y bien le cuadra el oficio, que es valiente;

y es perro tan excelente, que ni me muerde ni ladra. 315

Y así, a mi desdicha alabo que, ya que me trujo a ser cautivo, mísero esclavo, vino a traerme a poder
de jenízaro, y que es bravo: 320 que no hay turco, rey ni Roque que le mire ni le toque de jenízaro al cautivo, aunque a furor excesivo su insolencia le provoque. 325

VIEJO Más cautiverio y más duelos cupieron a mis dos niños, por crecer mis desconsuelos.
Conservad a estos armiños en limpieza, ¡oh limpios cielos! 330 Y si veis que se endereza de Mahoma la torpeza
a procurar su caída,
quitadles antes la vida que ellos pierdan su limpieza. 335

(Entran dos o tres muchachos morillos, aunque se tomen de la calle, los cuales han de decir no más que estas palabras:)

MORO ¡Rapaz cristiano,
non rescatar, non fugir;
don Juan no venir;
acá morir,
perro, acá morir! 340

SACRISTÁN ¡Oh hijo de una puta, nieto de un gran cornudo,

sobrino de un bellaco,
hermano de un gran traidor y sodomita!

OTRO MORO    ¡Non rescatar, non fugir; 345
don Juan no venir;
acá morir!

SACRISTÁN    ¡Tú morirás, borracho, bardaja fermentido;
quínola punto menos, 350
anzuelo de Mahoma, el hideputa!

OTRO; Acá morir!

VIEJO    No mientes a Mahoma, ¡mal haya mi linaje!,
que nos quemarán vivos. 355

SACRISTÁN Déjeme, pese a mí, con estos galgos.

OTRO    ¡Don Juan no venir;
acá morir!

VIEJO    Bien de aqueso se infiera que si él venido hubiera, 360 vuestra maldita lengua
no tuviera ocasión de decir esto.

MORO    ¡Don Juan no venir;
acá morir!

SACRISTÁN Escuchadme, perritos; 365
venid, ¡tus, tus!, oídme, que os quiero dar la causa por que don Juan no viene: estadme atentos.

Sin duda que en el cielo debía de haber gran guerra, 370
do el general faltaba,
y a don Juan se llevaron para serlo.

Dejadle que concluya,
y veréis cómo vuelve
y os pone como nuevos. 375

VIEJO;Gracioso disparate! Ya se han ido.

(Entra un JUDÍO.)

¿No es aquéste judío?

SACRISTÁN Su copete lo muestra, sus infames chinelas,
su rostro de mezquino y de pobrete. 380

Trae el turco en la corona una guedeja sola
de peinados cabellos,
y el judío los trae sobre la frente;
el francés, tras la oreja; 385
y el español, acémila,
que es rendajo de todos,
le trae, ¡válame Dios!, en todo el cuerpo.
¡Hola, judío! Escucha.

JUDÍO;Qué me quieres, cristiano? 390

SACRISTÁN Que este barril te cargues, y le lleves en casa de mi amo.

JUDÍO Es sábado, y no puedo hacer alguna cosa que sea de trabajo; 395
no hay pensar que lo lleve, aunque me mates.
Deja venga mañana,
que, aunque domingo sea,
te llevaré docientos.

SACRISTÁN Mañana huelgo yo, perro judío. 400
Cargaos, y no riñamos.

JUDÍO Aunque me mates, digo que no quiero llevallo.

SACRISTÁN ¡Vive Dios, perro, que os arranque el hígado!

JUDÍO ¡Ay, ay, mísero y triste! 405 Por el Dío bendito,
que si hoy no fuera sábado, que lo llevara. ¡Buen cristiano, basta!

VIEJO A compasión me mueve.
¡Oh gente afeminada, 410
infame y para poco!
Por esta vez te ruego que le dejes.

SACRISTÁN Por ti le dejo; vaya el circunciso infame;
mas, si otra vez le encuentro, 415 ha de llevar un monte, si le llevo.

JUDÍO Pies y manos te beso, señor, y el Dío te pague el bien que aquí me has hecho.
(Vase el JUDÍO.)

VIEJO La pena es ésta de aquel gran pecado. 420 Bien se cumple a la letra la maldición eterna
que os echó el ya venido, que vuestro error tan vanamente espera.

SACRISTÁN Adiós, que ha mucho tiempo 425 que estoy contigo hablando, y, aunque mi amo es noble,
temo no le avillane mi pereza.
(Toma su barril y vase.)

(Salen JUANICO y FRANCISCO, que así se han de llamar los hijos del VIEJO; vienen vestidos a la turquesca de garzones, saldrá con ellos la SEÑORA CATALINA, vestida de garzón, y un CRISTIANO, como cautivo, COSTANZA y DON FERNANDO, de cautivo, y JULIO, de cautivo, que traen las tersas y vestidos de los garzones, y las guitarras y el rabel. DON FERNANDO ha de hacer salida.)

VIEJO ¿No son mis prendas aquí estas?
¿Cómo vienen adornadas 430 de regocijo y de fiestas?
Prendas por mi bien halladas, ¿qué bizarrías son éstas?
Harto costoso ropaje es éste. ¿Qué se hizo el traje 435 que mostraba en mil semejas que érades de Cristo ovejas, aunque de pobre linaje?

JUANICO Padre, no le pene el ver que hemos vestido trocado, 440 que no se ha podido hacer otra cosa; y, bien mirado, de aquesto no hay que temer, porque si nuestra intención está con firme afición 445 puesta en Dios, caso es sabido que no deshace el vestido lo que hace el corazón.

FRANCISCO Padre, ¿tiene, por ventura, qué darme de merendar? 450

VIEJO ¿Hay tan simple criatura?

JUANICO ¿Simple? Pues déjenlo estar, que él mostrará su cordura.

JULIO Amigo, no nos detenga;
y, si gusta dello, venga 455 con nosotros.

JUANICO No, señor;
quedarse será mejor.

FRANCISCO Padre mío, tome, tenga:
una cruz que me han quitado me ponga en este rosario. 460

VIEJO Yo os la pondré de buen grado, depósito y relicario

de mi alma.

JUANICO Padre honrado, déjenos ir, que tardamos.

(AMBROSIO, que es la SEÑORA CATALINA.)

AMBROSIO Pues, amigos, ¿Dónde vamos? 465

JULIO Aunque está de aquí un buen rato, al jardín de Agimorato.

DON FERNANDO Pues, ¡sus!, no nos detengamos.

JULIO Allí podremos a solas danzar, cantar y tañer 470
y hacer nuestras cabriolas:
que el mar no suele tener siempre alteradas sus olas.

Demos vado a la pasión, cuanto más, que es la intención 475 del cadí que nos holguemos, y que los viernes tomemos honesta recreación.

DON FERNANDO ¿Quién le dijo que tenía yo buena voz?

JULIO No sé, a fe; 480
algún cautivo sería,
y el cadí me dijo: «Ve,

y dile de parte mía
a Cauralí que me mande
a su cristiano el más grande, 485 de la buena voz». Yo fui, habléle, envióos aquí;
no sé más.

JUANICONo se desmande,
padre, en venirnos a ver, que se enojará nuestramo 490
y nos dará en qué entender.

FRANCISCOPadre, Francisco me llamo, no Azán, Alí ni Jaer;
cristiano soy, y he de sello, aunque me pongan al cuello 495 dos garrotes y un cuchillo.

JUANICO¿Veis cómo sabe decillo?
Pues mejor sabrá hacello.

DON FERNANDO No pasemos adelante, que bien estamos aquí. 500

JULIOSea así, y algo se cante.

(AMBROSIO, que le ha de hacer la SEÑORA CATALINA.)

AMBROSIO¿Qué decís, que no os oí?

JULIOQue cantes, porque me encante.

DON FERNANDO    ¿Es sordo?

JULIO Un poco es teniente de los oídos.

AMBROSIO ¿No hay gente 505 que nos oiga? Bien decís;
y, pues que todos venís, comencemos tristemente.

    Aquel romance diremos, Julio, que tú compusiste, 510
pues de coro le sabemos, y tiene aquel tono triste
con que alegrarnos solemos.
(Cantan este romance:)

A las orillas del mar, que con su lengua y sus aguas, 515 ya manso, ya airado, llega del perro Argel las murallas, con los ojos del deseo
están mirando a su patria cuatro míseros cautivos 520 que del trabajo descansan;
y al son del ir y volver
de las olas en la playa, con desmayados acentos
esto lloran y esto cantan: 525
¡Cuán cara eres de haber, oh dulce España!
Tiene el cielo conjurado con nuestra suerte contraria nuestros cuerpos en cadenas, y en gran peligro las almas. 530 ¡Oh si abriesen ya los cielos sus cerradas cataratas, ya en vez de agua aquí lloviesen pez, resina, azufre y brasas!

¡Oh, si se abriese la tierra, 535 y escondiese en sus entrañas tanto Datán y Virón,
tanto brujo y tanta maga!
¡Cuán cara eres de haber, oh dulce España!

FRANCISCO Padre, hágales cantar 540 aquel cantar que mi madre cantaba en nuestro lugar.
¿Qué dice? ¿No quiere, padre?

VIEJO ¿Cómo decía el cantar?

FRANCISCO Ando enamorado, 545
no diré de quién;
allá miran ojos
donde quieren bien.

VIEJO Bien al propósito fuera, pues que los del alma miran 550 desde esta infame ribera la patria por quien suspiran, que huye y no nos espera.

JULIO ¡Estremado es Francisquito!
Canta tú, Ambrosio, un poquito 555 lo que sueles a tus solas, que te escucharán las olas del mar con gusto infinito.

(AMBROSIO cante solo:)

AMBROSIO Aunque pensáis que me alegro, conmigo traigo el dolor. 560
Aunque mi rostro semeja
que de mi alma se aleja la pena, y libre la deja, sabed que es notorio error:
conmigo traigo el dolor. 565
Cúmpleme disimular
por acabar de acabar,
y porque el mal, con callar,
se hace mucho mayor,
conmigo traigo el dolor. 570

(Entran el CADÍ y CAURALÍ.)

JUANICO No más, que viene el cadí.
Padre, no os halle aquí a vos.

DON FERNANDO Con él viene Cauralí.

VIEJO ¡Queridas prendas, adiós!

CADÍ Perro, ¿vos estáis aquí? 575 ¿No te he dicho yo, malvado, que te quites del cuidado del ver tus hijos?

FRANCISCO ¿Por qué?
¿No es mi padre? ¡A buena fe, que he de verle, mal su grado! 580

JUANICO Calla, Francisquito, hermano, que, en lo que dices, incitas en nuestro daño al tirano.

FRANCISCO¿ Ver nuestro padre nos quitas?
Nunca tú eres buen cristiano. 585 Padre, lléveme consigo, que me dice este enemigo tantas de bellaquerías.

CAURALÍ¿Qué discretas niñerías!
Decid: ¿qué esperáis, amigo? 590

(Vase el VIEJO.)

CADÍ Perro, si otra vez dejáis que los hable aquel perrón, vos veréis lo que lleváis.

JULIOPedazos del alma son.

CADÍPerro, ¿qué me replicáis? 595

CAURALÍ Tente, que no dice nada.

FRANCISCO¿Válame Dios, qué alterada está la mora garrida!

JUANICO¿Calla, hermano, por tu vida!

CAURALÍÉl tiene gracia estremada. 600

CADÍ ¿Veisle? Sabed que le adoro, y que pienso prohijalle después que le vuelva moro.

FRANCISCO Pues sepa que he de burlalle, aunque me dé montes de oro; 605
y, aunque me dé tres reales justos, enteros, cabales, y más dos maravedís.

CADÍ Destas gracias, ¿qué decís?

CAURALÍ Que son sobrenaturales. 610

CADÍ Veníos tras mí a la ciudad.

CAURALÍ Yo quiero hablar con mi esclavo.

CADÍ Pues, ¡sus!, con Alá os quedad.

CAURALÍ Con él vais. Ya estáis al cabo de mi gran necesidad. 615

(Vase el CADÍ y todos, sino DON FERNANDO y CAURALÍ.)

DON FERNANDO Digo que yo la hablaré en yendo a casa, y haré por servirte lo posible, aunque más dura o terrible que un áspid o un monte esté. 620 Dame lugar para hablalla, y déjame hacer, señor.

CAURALÍ Si vienes a conquistalla, llevarás, cual vencedor, el premio de la batalla. 625

DON FERNANDO Yo lo creo.

CAURALÍ Decir quiero que, amén de mucho dinero, te daré la libertad.

DON FERNANDO De tu liberalidad, aun más mercedes espero. 630

(Éntranse.)

(Salen DON LOPE y VIVANCO.)

DON LOPE Veisnos aquí en libertad por el más extraño caso que vio la cautividad.

VIVANCO ¿Pensáis que esto ha sido acaso?
¡Misterio tiene, en verdad! 635

Dios, que quiere que esta mora vaya a tierra do se adora su nombre, movió su intento para ser el instrumento del bien que a los tres mejora. 640

DON LOPE Dijo en su postrer billete que un viernes quizá saldría al campo por Vavalvete, y que se descubriría

con cierta industria promete. 645

También escribió en el fin que sepamos el jardín
de su padre, Agimorato, do a nuestra comedia y trato se ha de dar felice fin. 650

VIVANCO Tres mil escudos han sido los que en veces nos ha dado.

DON LOPE En libertarnos se han ido los dos mil.

VIVANCO Más se ha ganado de lo que habemos perdido. 655

Y más, si acaso se gana esta alma, en obras cristiana, aunque en moro cuerpo mora.
¿Mas, si fuese ésta la mora?

DON LOPE Si es ella, ¡a fe que es lozana! 660

(Entran ZARA y HALIMA, cubiertos los rostros con sus almalafas blancas; y vienen con ellas, vestidas como moras, COSTANZA y la SEÑORA CATALINA, que no ha de hablar sino dos o tres veces.)

Mas, ¿cuál será de las dos?
Que las otras son cautivas.

HALIMA Con todo, yo sé de vos que si le habláis...

COSTANZA No vivas
sin esperanza, por Dios, 665 que yo me ofrezco de hablalle, de inclinalle y de forzalle
a que te venga a adorar;
mas hasme de dar lugar
para que pueda tratalle. 670

HALIMA Cuanto quisieres, amiga, tendrás; por eso no quedas de remediar mi fatiga.

ZAHARA Camina, Alima, si puedes.

COSTANZA A más tu bondad me obliga. 675

ZAHARA Mira, Costanza, y advierte si de aquellos dos, por suerte, es tu conocido alguno.

COSTANZA Yo no conozco ninguno.

VIVANCO Si es ella, es dichosa suerte, 680 porque parece en el brío hermosa sobremanera.

ZAHARA Perritos son de buen brío.
¡Oh, quién hablarlos pudiera!

HALIMA Como allí estuviera el mío, 685 yo me llegara a hablallos.

ZAHARA Costanza, vuelve a mirallos, y dime si echas de ver
que es noble su parecer.

CATALINA ¿Para qué?

ZAHARA Para comprarlos. 690

COSTANZA Éste de la izquierda mano me parece caballero;
y aun el otro no es villano.

ZAHARA Verlos de más cerca quiero.

HALIMA ¡Que no esté aquí mi cristiano! 695

ZAHARA Entrambos me satisfacen.

VIVANCO ¡Qué de represas me hacen!
Lleguémonos hacia allá.

DON LOPE No, que ellas vienen acá.

VIVANCO Su brío y su vista aplacen. 700

ZAHARA ¡Ay, Alá! ¿Quién me picó?

Mira por aquí, Costanza, si es avispa. Amarga yo, que parece que una lanza por el cuello se me entró. 705

Sacude bien esa toca, que casi me vuelvo loca
en ver lo que veo. ¡Ay, triste!
¿Matástela? ¿No la viste?
Sacude más; mira y toca. 710 ¡Si está aquí!

COSTANZA Yo no veo nada.

ZAHARA ¡Llegado me ha al corazón esta no vista picada!

COSTANZA Del avispa el aguijón es cosa muy enconada; 715
mas temo no fuese araña.

ZAHARA Si fue araña, fue de España; que las de Argel no hacen mal.

DON LOPE ¿Hase visto industria tal?
¿Hay tan discreta maraña? 720

HALIMA Zara, no estés descompuesta; torna a ponerte tu toca.

ZAHARA Aun el aire me molesta.

HALIMA Esta desgracia, aunque poca, turbado nos ha la fiesta. 725

VIVANCO ¿Qué os parece?

DON LOPEQue parece que la ventura me ofrece cuanto puedo desear.

VIVANCOVolvióse el sol a eclipsar;
ya su luz desaparece. 730

ZAHARA ¿No sabrás de aquel cautivo, Costanza, si es español?

COSTANZAEn eso, gusto recibo.

DON LOPETorna a descubrirte, ¡oh sol!, en cuyas luces avivo 735
el ser, el entendimiento, la ventura y el contento que en tu posesión se alcanza.

ZAHARAPregúntaselo, Costanza.

HALIMA¿Cómo estás?

ZAHARAMEjor me siento. 740

COSTANZA Gentilhombre, ¿sois de España?

DON LOPE Sí, señora; y de una tierra donde no se cría araña ponzoñosa, ni se encierra fraude, embuste ni maraña, 745 sino un limpio proceder, y el cumplir y el prometer es todo una misma cosa.

ZAHARA Pregúntale si es hermosa, si es casado, su mujer. 750

COSTANZA ¿Sois casado?

DON LOPE No, señora;
pero seré lo bien presto
con una cristiana mora.

COSTANZA ¿Cómo es eso?

DON LOPE ¿Cómo es esto?
Poco sabe quien lo ignora. 755 Mora en la incredulidad, y cristiana en la bondad,
es la que ha de ser mi dueño.

COSTANZA Yo os entiendo como un leño.

ZAHARA ¡Plega Alá digáis verdad! 760

HALIMA Pregúntale si es esclavo, o si es libre.

DON LOPE Ya os entiendo;
de ser cautivo me alabo.

ZAHARA Cuanto dice comprendo,
y de todo estoy al cabo. 765

DON LOPE Presto pisaré de España, con gusto y con gloria estraña, las riberas, y mi fe
firme entonces mostraré.

ZAHARA Gracias a Alá y a una caña. 770

HALIMA Cristianos, quedaos atrás, porque en la ciudad entramos.

(Éntranse las moras.)

VIVANCO Obedecida serás.

DON LOPE En oscuridad quedamos.
Sol bello, ¿cómo te vas? 775

De cautividad sacaste el cuerpo que rescataste con tu liberalidad;
pero más con tu beldad
al alma yerros echaste. 780

En fe de lo que en ti he visto, del deseo que te doma,
de adorarte no resisto,
no por prenda de Mahoma, sino por prenda de Cristo. 785

Yo te llevaré a do seas todo aquello que desees, aunque mil vidas me cueste.

VIVANCOVamos, que el dolor es éste;
no por ahí, que rodeas. 790

(Éntranse.)

(Sale el SACRISTÁN con una cazuela mojí, y tras él el JUDÍO.)

JUDÍO Cristiano honrado, así el Dío te vuelva a tu libre estado, que me vuelvas lo que es mío.

SACRISTÁNNo quiero, judío honrado;
no quiero, honrado judío. 795

JUDÍO Hoy es sábado, y no tengo qué comer, y me mantengo de aqueso que guisé ayer.

SACRISTÁNVuelve a guisar de comer.

JUDÍONo, que a mi ley contravengo. 800

SACRISTÁN Rescátame esta cazuela, y en dártela no haré poco, porque el olor me consuela.

JUDÍONo puedo en mucho ni en poco contratar.

SACRISTÁN Pues llevarála. 805

JUDÍO No la lleves; ves aquí lo que costó.

SACRISTÁN Sea así,
que a los dos es de provecho.
¿Dó el dinero?

JUDÍO Aquí, en el pecho lo tengo, ¡amargo de mí! 810

SACRISTÁN Pues venga.

JUDÍO Sácalo tú, que mi ley no me concede
el sacarlo.

SACRISTÁN ¡Bercebú
así te lleve cual puede, decendiente de Abacú! 815 Aquí tienes quince reales justos de plata y cabales.

JUDÍO No contrates tú conmigo; conciértalo allá contigo.

SACRISTÁN Di, cazuela: ¿cuánto vales? 820

«Paréceme a mí que valgo cinco reales, y no más».
¡Mentís, a fe de hidalgo!

JUDÍO;Qué sobresaltos me das,
cristiano!

SACRISTÁN;Pues hable el galgo. 825 ¿Que no quieres alargarte?
Mas quiero crédito darte: tomadla, y andad con Dios.

JUDÍO;¿Los diez?

SACRISTÁN;Son por otras dos cazuelas que pienso hurtarte. 830

JUDÍO ¿Y pagaste adelantado?

SACRISTÁN;Y, aun si bien hago la cuenta,
creo que voy engañado.

JUDÍO;¿Que hay Cielo que tal consienta?

SACRISTÁN;¿Que hay tan gustoso guisado? 835
No es carne de landrecillas, ni de la que a las costillas se pega el bayo que es trefe.

JUDÍO;Haced, cielos, que me deje este ladrón de cosillas! 840 (Éntrase el JUDÍO.)

SACRISTÁN ¿De cosillas? ¡Vive Dios, que os tengo de hurtar un niño antes de los meses dos;
y aun si las uñas aliño...!
¡Dios me entiende! ¡Vámonos! 845
(Éntrase.)

(Salen DON FERNANDO y COSTANZA.)

DON FERNANDO Subí, cual digo, aquella peña, adonde las fustas vi que ya a la mar se hacían.
Voces comencé a dar; mas no responde ninguno, aunque muy bien todos me oían.
Eco, que en un peñasco allí se esconde, 850
donde las olas su furor rompían, teniendo compasión de mi tormento, respuesta daba a mi postrero acento.
Las voces reforcé; hice las señas que el brazo y un pañuelo me ofrecía; 855 Eco tornaba, y de las mismas peñas los amargos acentos repetía.
Mas, ¿qué remedio, Amor, hay que no enseñas para el dolor que causa tu agonía?
Uno sé me enseñaste, de tal suerte, 860 que hallé la vida do busqué la muerte.

El corazón, que su dolor desagua por los ojos en lágrimas corrientes, humor que hace en la amorosa fragua que las ascuas se muestren más ardientes; 865 el cuerpo hizo que arrojase al agua sin peligros mirar ni inconvenientes, juzgando que alcanzaba honrosa palma si llegaba a juntarse con su alma.

Arrojando las armas, arrojéme 870 al mar, en amoroso fuego ardiendo, y otro Leandro con más luz tornéme, pues iba aquella de tu luz siguiendo.
Cansábanse los brazos, y esforcéme, por medio de la muerte y mar rompiendo, 875 porque vi que una fusta a mí volvía por su interese y por ventura mía.

Un corvo hierro un turco echó, y asíóme, inútil presa, y con muy gran fatiga al bajel enemigo al fin subióme, 880 y de mi historia no sé más qué diga.
Entre los suyos Cauralí contóme;
su mujer me persigue y mi enemiga, él te persigue a ti. ¡Mira si es cuento digno de admiración y sentimiento! 885

COSTANZA Si tú a los ruegos de Halima estás fuerte, cual espero, yo me mostraré a la lima de Cauralí duro acero, impenetrable y de estima. 890

Aunque será menester, para que nos dejen ver,
alivio de nuestro mal,
darles alguna señal
de amoroso proceder. 895

Rogóte a ti Cauralí que me hablastes, y Halima me pidió que hablase a ti.

DON FERNANDO Otra cosa me lastima más que su pena.

COSTANZA Y a mí. 900

DON FERNANDO Pues rompan estos abrazos sus designios en pedazos;
que, mientras esto se alcance,
no hay temer desvelo o trance, pues tengo al cielo en mis brazos. 905

(Entran CAURALÍ y HALIMA, y venlos abrazados.)

Aprieta, querida esposa, que, en tanto que en este cielo
mi afligida alma reposa, no hay mal que me dé en el suelo la Fortuna rigurosa. 910

CAURALÍ ¡Oh perro! ¿Tú con mi esclava?
¿Cómo el cielo no te acaba?

HALIMA ¡Perra! ¿Tú con mi cautivo?
¿Cómo sin matarte vivo?
¡Esto es lo que yo esperaba, 915 perra!

CAURALÍ ¡Perro!

HALIMA ¡Perra!

CAURALÍ ¡Perro!

HALIMA Desta perra es la maldad;
que no nació dél el yerro.

CAURALÍDél nació, y esto es verdad, y sé bien que no me yerro. 920 ¡Yo os sacaré el corazón, perro!

HALIMA¡Perra, esta traición me pagarás con la vida!

DON FERNANDO¡Oh, cuán mal está entendida, señores, nuestra intención! 925
Aquel abrazo que viste,
Costanza a ti le enviaba.

CAURALÍ¿Qué dices?

DON FERNANDOLo que oyes, triste.

COSTANZAEn tu nombre se fraguaba el favor que interrumpiste. 930 ¡Colérica eres, a fe!

DON FERNANDOEsto entiende y esto cree.

HALIMA¿Qué dices, amiga mía?

COSTANZASi éste se perdió, otro día otros cuatro cobraré. 935

CAURALÍ ¿Es lo que has dicho verdad?

DON FERNANDO Pues, ¿a qué te he de mentir?

CAURALÍ Ten cierta tu libertad.

HALIMA Más os pudiera reñir este amor o liviandad; 940 pero déjolo hasta ver
si proseguís en hacer
esto que he visto y no creo.

CAURALÍ Halima, en mil cosas veo que eres prudente mujer, 945 y más en esto; que pienso que éstos, cual nuevos cristianos, dieron a su gusto el censo;
que a cautivos y paisanos, les da el verse gusto inmenso; 950
y, como solos se hallaron, sus penas comunicaron.

HALIMA Y aun las ajenas también.

CAURALÍ Esto no me suena bien.

COSTANZA Entrambos adivinaron. 955

CAURALÍ ¿Por ventura sabe Halima cosa desto?

HALIMA ¿Por ventura
a Cauralí le lastima

tu amor?

COSTANZA ¡Aqueso es locura!

DON FERNANDO Tal sospecha no te oprima, 960 que no ha caído en la cuenta.

COSTANZA Señora, vive contenta
y sin sospecha en tu daño.

CAURALÍ Fácil se cae en un engaño.

COSTANZA Y tarde se alza una afrenta. 965

CAURALÍ Haz cuanto puedes y sabes.

HALIMA No te descuides en nada.

CAURALÍ Bien es tu cólera acabes.

HALIMA Tenla ya por acabada.
Entra y dame aquellas llaves. 970

(Éntrase HALIMA y COSTANZA.)

CAURALÍ Tú vente al Zoco conmigo.

DON FERNANDO ¡Amor, puesto que te sigo con el alma y con los pasos, tus enredos y tus pasos bendigo en parte y maldigo! 975

(Éntranse.)

(JUANICO y FRANCISQUITO, trompando con un trompo.)

FRANCISQUITO Tú, que turbas mi quietud, porque los sollozos rompo que nacen de tu virtud, ¿has visto más lindo trompo, así Dios te dé salud? 980

JUANICO Deja de echar esos lazos, que otros de más embarazos esperan nuestras gargantas.

FRANCISQUITO ¿Pues desto, hermano, te espantas?
Yo los haré mil pedazos. 985
No pienses que he de ser moro, por más que aqueste inhumano me prometa plata y oro, que soy español cristiano.

JUANICO Eso temo y eso lloro. 990

FRANCISQUITO Como tengo pocos días, de mi valor desconfías.

JUANICO Así es.

FRANCISQUITO Pues imagina que tengo fuerza divina contra humanas tiranías. 995

No sé yo quién me aconseja con voz callada en el pecho, que no la siento en la oreja, y de morir satisfecho
y con gran gusto me deja; 1000 dícenme, y yo dello gusto, que he de ser un nuevo Justo
y tú otro nuevo Pastor.

JUANICO Hazlo así, divino amor, que con tu querer me ajusto. 1005 Deja aquesta niñería
del trompo, ¡por vida mía!, y repasemos los dos
las oraciones de Dios.

FRANCISQUITO Bástame el Avemaría. 1010

JUANICO ¿Y el Padrenuestro?

FRANCISQUITO También.

JUANICO ¿Y el Credo?

FRANCISQUITO Séle de coro.

JUANICO ¿Y la Salve?

FRANCISQUITO; Aunque me den dos trompos, no seré moro!

JUANICO; Qué niñería!

FRANCISQUITO Pues bien: 1015 ¿Piensas que me estoy burlando?

JUANICO Estamos cosas tratando como si fuésemos hombres, ¿y es bien que el trompo aquí nombres?

FRANCISQUITO; ¿He de estar siempre llorando? 1020

    Mi fe, hermano, tened cuenta con vos, y mirad no os hunda de Mahoma la tormenta;
que yo encubro en esta funda un alma de Dios sedienta; 1025
    y ni el trompo, ni el cordel, ni las fuentes que en Argel
y en sus contornos están, mi sed divina hartarán, ni se ha de hartar sino en él. 1030

    Y así, os digo, hermano mío;
que, por ver mis niñerías, no penséis que estoy sin brío, porque en las entrañas mías no hay lugar de Dios vacío. 1035

    Tened cuidado de vos,
y encomendaos bien a Dios en la afrenta que amenaza; si no, yo saldré a la plaza
a pelear por los dos. 1040

    Tengo yo el Ave María
clavada en el corazón,

y es la estrella que me guía en este mar de aflicción al puerto del alegría. 1045

JUANICO Dios en tu lengua se mira, y por eso no me admira
el ver que hables tan alto.

FRANCISQUITO No os turbará sobresalto si en ella ponéis la mira. 1050

JUANICO ¡Ay de nosotros, que viene el cadí con su porfía!
Mostrar ánimo conviene.

FRANCISQUITO Acude al Ave María; verás qué fuerzas que tiene. 1055

(Entra el CADÍ y el CARAHOJA, amo del desorejado.)

CADÍ Pues, hijos, ¿en qué entendéis?

JUANICO En trompear, como veis, mi hermano, señor, entiende.

CARAHOJA Es niño y, en fin, atiende a su edad.

CADÍ Y vos, ¿qué hacéis? 1060

JUANICO Rezando estaba.

CADÍ¿Por quién?

JUANICOPor mí, que soy pecador.

CADÍTodo aqueso esta muy bien.
¿Qué rezábades?

JUANICOSeñor,
lo que sé.

FRANCISQUITORespondió bien. 1065
Rezaba el Ave María.
(Trompa FRANCISCO.)

CADÍDejar el trompo podría delante de mí, Bairán.

FRANCISQUITO¡Buen nombre puesto me han!

CARAHOJA Todo aquello es niñería. 1070

CADÍ Este rapaz me da pena.
Deja, Bairán, la porfía, que a gran daño te condena.
¿Qué dices?

FRANCISQUITO Ave María.

CADÍ¿Qué respondes?

FRANCISQUITO Gracia plena. 1075

CARAHOJA Este mayor es maestro del menor.

JUANICO Yo no le muestro:
que él, por sí, habilidad tiene.

FRANCISQUITO ¡Oh, cuán de molde que viene decir aquí el Padrenuestro! 1080

JUANICO Pues faltan los de la tierra, bien es acudir al cielo.
¿Dó nuestro padre se encierra?

FRANCISQUITO A su tiempo llamarélo.

JUANICO Ya se comienza la guerra. 1085

FRANCISQUITO Porque todo al justo cuadre, lo postrero que mi madre
me enseñó quiero decir, que es bueno para el morir.

CADÍ¿Qué has de decir?

FRANCISQUITO Creo en Dios Padre. 1090

CADÍ ¡Por Alá, que a su ruina me dispongo!

FRANCISQUITO ¿Ya os turbáis?
Pues si es que aquesto os indina, ¿qué hará cuando me oyáis decir la Salve Regina? 1095

Para vuestras confusiones, todas las cuatro oraciones sé, y sé bien que son escudos a tus alfanjes agudos
y a tus torpes invenciones. 1100

CARAOJOJA Con no más de alzar el dedo y decir: «Ilá, ilalá»,
te librarás deste miedo.

FRANCISQUITO En la cartilla no está eso, que decir no puedo. 1105

JUANICO Ni quiero, has de añadir.

FRANCISQUITO Ya yo lo iba a decir.

CADÍ ¡Esto es cansarnos en balde!
Éste, a mi instancia llevadle,
y estotro, que han de morir. 1110 (Arroja el trompo y desnúdase.)

FRANCISQUITO ¡Ea!, vaya el trompo afuera, y este vestido grosero, que me vuelve el alma fiera, y es bien que vaya ligero quien se atreve a esta carrera. 1115

¡Ea!, hermano, sed pastor con esfuerzo y con valor, que tras vos irá con gusto
un pecadorcito justo por la gracia del Señor! 1120

¡Ea!, tiranos feroces, mostrad vuestras manos listas,
y bien agudas las hoces, para segar las aristas destas gargantas y voces; 1125 que en esta estraña porfía, adonde la tiranía
toda su rabia convoca, no sacaréis de mi boca
sino...

JUANICO¿Qué?

FRANCISQUITOUn Avemaría. 1130

CARAHOJA Entremos, que ya el regalo les hará mudar de intento más que el azote y el palo.

CADÍPor cien mil señales siento que va mi partido malo; 1135 que el mayor es en extremo callado y sagaz. ¡Blasfemo seré del mismo Mahoma, si estos rapaces no doma!

FRANCISQUITO¿No le temes?

JUANICONo le temo. 1140

FIN DEL ACTO SEGUNDO

Jornada tercera

Salen el GUARDIÁN BAJÍ y otro MORO.

GUARDIÁN Por diez escudos no daré mi parte.
Sentaos y no dejéis entrar alguno, si no pagan dos ásperos muy buenos.

MORO La Pascua de Natal, como ellos llaman, venticinco ducados se llegaron. 5

GUARDIÁN Los españoles, por su parte, hacen una brava comedia.

MORO Son saetanes;
los mismos diablos son; son para todo.
Ya descuelgan cristianos a su misa.

(Entran VIVANCO, DON FERNANDO, DON LOPE, el SACRISTÁN, el PADRE de los niños; trae DON FERNANDO los calzones del SACRISTÁN.)

DON FERNANDO Veislos aquí, que no me los he puesto; 10 antes Costanza les echó un remiendo en parte do importaba, y de su mano.

SACRISTÁN De molde vienen para la comedia;
agora me los chanto. ¡Sus, entremos!

GUARDIÁN¿Adónde vais, cristiano?

PADREYo, a oír misa. 15

MOROPues paga.

PADRE¿Cómo, paga? ¿Aquí se paga?

GUARDIÁN¡Bien parece que es nuevo el padre viejo!

MORODos ásperos, o apártate, camina.

PADRENo los tengo, por Dios.

MOROPues ve y ahórcate.

DON LOPEYo pagaré por él.

MOROEso en buen hora. 20

SACRISTÁNFende, déjeme entrar, y este pañuelo, que no ha media hora que hurté a un judío, tome por prenda, o déme lo que vale, que lo daré no más de por el costo,
o muy poquito más.

GUARDIÁNCon otros cuatro 25
quedas muy bien pagado.

SACRISTÁN Vengan, y entro.

MORO ¡Ea!, acudid a entrar, que se hace tarde.
Con los del rey, yo apostaré que pasen de dos mil los que están en el banasto.
Entremos a mirar desde la puerta 30 cómo dicen su misa, que imagino que tienen grande música y concierto.

GUARDIÁN Poneos tras el postigo, y veréis todo cuanto hacen los cristianos en el patio, porque es cosa de ver.

MORO Ya los he visto. 35
Hoy dicen que tornó a vivir su Cristo.

(Éntranse.)

(Salen al teatro todos los cristianos que haya, y OSORIO entre ellos, y el SACRISTÁN, puestos los calzones que le dio DON FERNANDO.)

OSORIO Misterio es éste no visto.
Veinte religiosos son
los que hoy la Resurrección han celebrado de Cristo 40 con música concertada,
la que llaman contrapunto.
Argel es, según barrunto, arca de Noé abreviada:
aquí están de todas suertes, 45
oficios y habilidades,

disfrazadas calidades.

VIVANCOY aun otra cosa, si adviertes, que es de más admiración,
y es que estos perros sin fe 50
nos dejen, como se ve,
guardar nuestra religión.
Que digamos nuestra misa nos dejan, aunque en secreto.

OSORIO Más de una vez, con aprieto 55 se ha celebrado y con prisa;
que una vez, desde el altar, al sacerdote sacaron
revestido, y le llevaron por las calles del lugar 60 arrastrando; y la crueldad fue tal que con él se usó, que en el camino acabó
la vida y la libertad.
Mas dejémonos de aquesto, 65
y a nuestra holgura atendamos, pues que nos dan nuestros amos hoy lugar para hacer esto.
De nuestras Pascuas tenemos los primeros días por nuestros. 70

DON LOPE ¿Y qué? ¿Hay músicos?

OSORIO Y diestros;
los del cadí llamaremos.

VIVANCO Aquí están.

OSORIOY aquél que ayuda
al coloquio ya está aquí.

DON FERNANDO¿Bien cantan los del cadí! 75

OSORIOAntes que más gente acuda, el coloquio se comience, que es del gran Lope de Rueda, impreso por Timoneda, que en vejez al tiempo vence. 80

No pude hallar otra cosa que poder representar más breve, y sé que ha de dar gusto, por ser muy curiosa su manera de decir 85
en el pastoril lenguaje.

VIVANCO¿Hay pellicos?

OSORIODe ropaje
humilde; y voyme a vestir.

VIVANCO ¿Quién canta?

OSORIOAquí el sacristán, que tiene donaire en todo. 90

VIVANCO¿Hay loa?

OSORIO¿De ningún modo!

(Éntrase OSORIO y el SACRISTÁN.)

VIVANCO; Oh, qué mendigos están!

En fin: comedia cautiva, pobre, hambrienta y desdichada, desnuda y atarantada. 95

DON LOPE La voluntad se reciba.

(Entra CAURALÍ.)

CAURALÍ Sentaos, no os alborotéis, que vengo a ver vuestra fiesta.

DON FERNANDO Quisiera que fuera ésta, fende, cual la merecéis. 100

DON LOPE Aquí os podéis asentar, que yo me quedaré en pie.

CAURALÍ No, no, amigo, siéntate, que salen a comenzar.

DON LOPE Ya salen; sosiego y chite, 105 que cantan.

VIVANCO Mejor sería
que llorasen.

DON FERNANDO Este día

lágrimas no las permite.

(Canten lo que quisieren.)

VIVANCO    La música ha sido hereje; si el coloquio así sucede, 110
antes que la rueda ruede, se rompa el timón y el eje.

(En acabando la música, dice el SACRISTÁN (Todo cuanto dice agora el SACRISTÁN, lo diga mirando al soslayo a CAURALÍ):)

SACRISTÁN    ¿Qué es esto? ¿Qué tierra es ésta?
¿Qué siento? ¿Qué es lo que veo?

De réquiem es esta fiesta 115 para mí, pues un deseo más que mortal me molesta.

¿Dónde se encendió este fuego, que tiene, entre burla y juego, el alma ceniza hecha? 120

De Mahoma es esta flecha, de cuya fuerza reniego.

Como cuando el sol asoma
por una montaña baja,

y de súbito nos toma 125

y con su vista nos doma
nuestra vista y la relaja;

como la piedra balaja,
que no consiente carcoma,
tal es el tu rostro, Aja, 130
dura lanza de Mahoma,
que las mis entrañas raja.

CAURALÍ    ¿Es esto de la comedia, o es bufón este cristiano?

SACRISTÁN Si mi dolor no remedia 135 su bruñida y blanca mano, todo acabará en tragedia.

¡Oh mora la más hermosa, más discreta y más graciosa que la fama nos ofrece, 140 desde do el alba amanece hasta donde el sol reposa!, (Dice esto mirando a CAURALÍ.)

Mahoma en su compañía te tenga siglos sin cuento.

CAURALÍ ¿Este perro desvaría, 145
o entra a questo en el cuento de la fiesta deste día?

DON FERNANDO Calla, Tristán, y ten cuenta, porque ya se representa el coloquio.

SACRISTÁN Sí haré; 150
pero no sé si podré,
según el diablo me tienta.

(Sale GUILLERMO, pastor.)

GUILLERMO «Si el recontento que trayo,
venido tan de rondón,
no me le abraza el zurrón, 155 ¿cuales nesgas pondré al sayo, y qué ensanchas al jubón?»

SACRISTÁN ¡Vive Dios, que se me abraza el hígado, y sufro y callo!

GUILLERMO Si es que esto adelante pasa, 160
muy mejor será dejallo.

SACRISTÁN ¿Quién encendió aquesta brasa?

DON LOPE Tristán, amigo, escuchad, pues sois discreto, y callad, que ésa es grande impertinencia. 165

SACRISTÁN Callaré y tendré paciencia.

GUILLERMO ¿Comienzo?

DON LOPE Sí, comenzad.

GUILLERMO «Si el recontento que trayo,
venido tan de rondón,
no me lo abraza el zurrón, 170 ¿cuales nescas pondré al sayo, o qué ensanchas al jubón?
Y si, al contarlo estremeño,
con un donaire risueño, ayer me miró Costanza, 175 ¿qué turba habrá ya o mudanza que no le pase por sueño?
Esparcíos, las mis corderas, por las dehesas y prados;
mordey sabrosos bocados, 180
no temáis las venideras

noches de nubros airados;
antes os anday esentas,
brincando de recontentas.
No os aflija el ser mordidas 185
de las lobas desambridas, tragantonas, malcontentas;
y, al dar de los vellocinos, venid simpres, no ronceras, rumiando por las laderas, 190
a jornaleros vecinos,
o al corte de sus tijeras;
que el sin medida contento, cual no abarca el pensamiento, os libraré de lesión, 195 si al dar del branco vellón barruntáis el bien que siento.
Mas, ¿quién es este cuitado que asoma acá entellerido, cabizbajo, atordecido, 200
barba y cabello erizado, desairado y mal erguido?»

SACRISTÁN ¿Quién ha de ser? Yo soy, cierto, el triste y desventurado, vivo en un instante y muerto, 205
de Mahoma enamorado.

CAURALÍ ¡Echadle fuera a este loco!

SACRISTÁN; Tu divina boca invoco, Aja, de mil azahares,
boca de quitapesares 210
a quien desde lejos toco!

CAURALÍ ¡Dejádmele!

DON FERNANDO No, señor, que cuanto dice es donaire,
y es bufón el pecador.

SACRISTÁN ¡Dios de los vientos! ¿No hay aire 215 para templar tanto ardor?

GUILLERMO ¡Ya es mucha descortesía y mucha bufonería!
¡Échenle ya, y déjenos!

SACRISTÁN Yo me voy. ¡Quédate a Dios, 220
argelina gloria mía!

GUILLERMO ¿Dónde quedé?

VIVANCO No sé yo.

DON LOPE «Mas, ¿quién es este cuitado...?», fue el verso donde paró.

DON FERNANDO Los calzones han obrado. 225

GUILLERMO ¿Vuelvo a comenzar?

DON FERNANDO No, no;
no nos turben a deshora.
Prosigue el coloquio ahora.

(Un MORO dice desde arriba:)

MORO ¡Cristianos, estad alerta; cerrad del baño la puerta! 230

GUILLERMO ¡Vengas, perrazo, en mal hora!

MORO ¡Abrid aquese cristiano, que va herido, y cerrad presto!

CAURALÍ ¡Válame Alá! ¿Qué es aquesto?

MORO ¡Oh santo Alá soberano! 235
Dos han muerto, y del rey son.
¡Oh crueldad jamás oída!
A todos quitan la vida sin ninguna distinción.

(Entra un CRISTIANO herido, y otro sin herir.)

DON FERNANDO Pasad, hermano, adelante. 240 ¿Quién os ha herido?

CRISTIANO Un archí.

DON FERNANDO ¿La causa?

CRISTIANO Ninguna di.

VIVANCO¿Es la herida penetrante?

CRISTIANO No sé; con manera fue,
y será mortal, sin duda. 245

CRISTIANO 2Otra traigo yo más cruda, y en parte do no se ve.

CAURALÍ ¿No dirás qué es esto, Alí?

MOROGrande armada han descubierto por la mar.

DON FERNANDO¿Y aqueso es cierto? 250 ¿Vaste, fende Cauralí?

(Vase CAURALÍ.)

MORO Y los jenízaros matan si encuentran algún cautivo, o con furor duro esquivo malamente le maltratan; 255 y aquestas voces que oís las dan judíos, de miedo.

GUILLERMO¿Todo el mundo se esté quedo!
Yo creo, Alí, que mentís, pues no ha mucho que en España 260 no había ninguna nueva
de armada.

MOROPues esta prueba
os desmiente y desengaña;
que a fe que dicen que asoman más de trecientas galeras, 265 con flámulas y banderas, y que el rumbo de Argel toman.

GUILLERMO Quizá por encantamento aquesta armada se ha hecho.

(Entra el GUARDIÁN BAJÍ.)

GUARDIÁN¡El corazón en el pecho 270 no cabe, y de ira reviento!

OSORIO Pues, ¿qué hay, fendi?

GUARDIÁNYo me alisto
a contar la crueldad, igual de la necedad
mayor que jamás se ha visto. 275 «Salió el sol esta mañana, y sus rayos imprimieron en las nubes tales formas, que, aunque han mentido, las creo.
Una armada figuraron 280 que venía a vela y remo por el sesgo mar apriesa, a tomar en Argel puerto.
Tan claramente descubren los ojos que la están viendo, 285 de las fingidas galeras
las proas, popas y remos, que hay quien afirme y quien jure que del cómitre y remero vio el mandar y obedecer 290 hacerse todo en un tiempo.

Tal hay que dice haber visto a vuestro profeta muerto en la gavia de una nave, en una bandera puesto. 295 Muestra tan al vivo el humo su vano y oscuro cuerpo, y tan de cerca perciben
los oídos fuego y truenos, que, por temor de las balas, 300 más de cuatro se pusieron
a abrazar la madre tierra:
tal fue el miedo que tuvieron.
Por estas formas que el sol ha con sus rayos impreso 305 en las nubes, ha en nosotros otras mil formado el miedo.
Pensamos que ese don Juan, cuyo valor fue el primero que a la otomana braveza 310 tuvo a raya y puso freno, venía a dar fin honroso al desdichado comienzo que su valeroso padre comenzó en hado siniestro. 315 Los jenízaros archíes, que están siempre zaques hechos, dieron en matar cautivos,
por tener contrarios menos;
y si acaso el sol tardara 320
de borrar sus embelecocos, no estábades bien seguros cuantos estáis aquí dentro.
Veinte y más son los heridos,
y más de treinta los muertos.» 325 Ya el sol deshizo la armada;

volved a hacer vuestros juegos.

OSORIO;Mal podremos proseguir tan sangrientos pasatiempos!

CRISTIANO 2Pues escuchad otra historia 330 más sangrienta y de más peso.

El cadí, como sabéis, tiene en su poder a un niño
de tiernos y pocos años,
el cual se llama Francisco. 335 Ha puesto toda su industria, su autoridad y juicio,
mil promesas y amenazas,
mil contrapuestos partidos, para que de bueno a bueno 340 esta prenda del bautismo se deje circuncidar
por su gusto y su albedrío.
Su industria ha salido vana;
su juicio no ha podido 345 imprimir humanas trazas en este pecho divino.
Por esto, según se entiende, como afrentado y corrido, su luciferina rabia 350
hoy ha esfogado en Francisco.
Atado está a una columna, hecho retrato de Cristo, de la cabeza a los pies en su misma sangre tinto. 355 Témome que habrá espirado, porque tan crüel martirio mayores años y fuerzas
no le hubieran resistido.

PADRE; Dulce mitad de mi alma, 360
ay de mis entrañas hijo, detened la vida en tanto que os va a ver este afligido!
¡En la calle de Amargura, perezosos pies, sed listos; 365 veré en su ser a Pilatos
y en figura veré a Cristo!

(Éntrese el PADRE.)

CRISTIANO 2; ¿Este es su padre, señores?

DON FERNANDO Su padre es este mezquino, hidalgo y muy buen cristiano, 370 y somos de un pueblo mismo.
Acábense nuestras fiestas, cesen nuestros regocijos, que siempre en tragedia acaban las comedias de cautivos. 375

(Éntranse todos.)

(Salen ZARA, HALIMA y COSTANZA.)

HALIMA Tu padre me rogó, amiga, que viniese en un momento
a componerte.

ZAHARA; Su intento
todo el cielo le maldiga!

HALIMA ¿Pues cásaste con un rey 380
y muéstraste desabrida?
Y más, que es cosa sabida que es gentilhombre Muley.
Sin duda que estás prendada en otra parte.

ZAHARANo hay prenda 385 que me halague ni me ofenda, porque de amor no sé nada.

HALIMA Pues esta noche sabrás, en la escuela de tu esposo, que es amor dulce y sabroso. 390

ZAHARA¡Amargas nuevas me das!

HALIMA ¡Qué melindrosa señora!

ZAHARANo es melindre, sino enfado: que había determinado
no casarme por ahora, 395 hasta que el cielo me diese con otro compás mi suerte.

HALIMACalla, que reina has de verte.

ZAHARANo aspiro a tanto interese.
Con otro estado menor, 400 con mayor gusto estaría.

HALIMA Yo juro por vida mía, Zara, que tenéis amor.

Ahora bien, mostrad las perlas que tenéis, que quiero ver 405 cuántos lazos podré hacer.

ZAHARA Allí dentro podrás verlas.

Éntrate, y déjame un poco, que quiero hablar con Costanza.

HALIMA ¡Vos gustaréis de la danza 410 antes de mucho y no poco!
(Éntrase HALIMA.)

COSTANZA Dime, señora, qué es esto.
¿Tanto te enfada el casarte, y con un rey?

ZAHARA No hay contarte
tantas cosas y tan presto. 415

COSTANZA ¿De dónde el enfado mana que muestras tan importuno?

ZAHARA Pasito, no escuche alguno.
¡Soy cristiana, soy cristiana!

COSTANZA ¡Válame Santa María! 420

ZAHARA Esa Señora es aquella que ha de ser mi luz y estrella en el mar de mi agonía.

COSTANZA ¿Quién te enseñó nuestra ley?

ZAHARA No hay lugar en que lo diga. 425

Cristiana soy; mira, amiga, qué me sirve el moro rey.

Di: ¿conoces, por ventura, a un cautivo rescatado que es caballero y soldado? 430

COSTANZA ¿Cómo ha nombre?

ZAHARA Mal segura
estoy aquí, y con temor de algún desgraciado encuentro.

COSTANZA Pues entrémonos adentro.

ZAHARA Sin duda, será mejor. 435

(Éntranse.)

(Salen el REY, el CADÍ, el GUARDIÁN BAJÍ.)

CADÍ ¡Estraño caso ha sido!

REY Y tan estraño
que no sé si jamas le ha visto el mundo.

CADÍYa se han visto en el aire muchas veces formados escuadrones espantables de fantásticas sombras, y encontrarse 440 con todo el artificio y maestría que en la mitad de una campaña rasa se suelen embestir los verdaderos;
las nubes han llovido sangre y malla,
y pedazos de alfanjes y de escudos. 445

REYESos llaman prodigios los cristianos, que suelen parecer algunas veces;
pero que acaso, y sin misterio alguno, del sol los rayos, que en las nubes topan, hayan formado así tan grande armada, 450 nunca lo oí jamás.

GUARDIÁNYo así lo digo;
pues a fe que te cuesta la burleta más de treinta cristianos.

REYNo hace al caso;
mas que pasaran a cuchillo todos.

CADÍQuitóme el sobresalto de las manos 455 el corbacho y la furia.

REY¿Qué hacías?

CADÍAzotaba a un cristiano...

REY¿Por qué causa?

CADÍEs de pequeña edad, y no es posible que regalos, promesas ni amenazas le puedan volver moro.

REY¿Es, por ventura, 460
el muchacho español del otro día?

CADÍAquese mismo es.

REYPues no te canses,
que es español, y no podrán tus mañas, tus iras, tus castigos, tus promesas,
a hacerle torcer de su propósito. 465 ¡Qué mal conoces la canalla terca, porfiada, feroz, fiera, arrogante, pertinaz, indomable y atrevida!
Antes que moro, le verás sin vida.

(Entra un MORO asido de un cautivo.)

¿Que ha hecho este cristiano?

MOROEn este punto, 470
en una estraña y nunca vista barca, casi una legua al mar, en este punto le acabé de coger.

REYPues, ¿de qué modo
era la barca estraña?

MOROEra una balsa

hecha de canalejas, sustentada 475 sobre grandes y muchas calabazas, y él, puesto en medio en pie, de árbol servía, y sus brazos, de entena, en cuyas manos servía de vela una camisa rota.

REY ¿Cuándo entraste en la barca?

CRISTIANO A media noche. 480

REY Pues, ¿cómo en tanto tiempo no pudiste alejarte de tierra más espacio?

CRISTIANO Sultán, no me servía de otra cosa sino de no anegarme, y sólo iba confiado en el cielo y en el viento 485 que, próspero y furioso arrebatado, la mal formada barca la aportase en cualquiera ribera de cristianos; que ningún remo o vela fuera parte a hacerla tomar curso ligero. 490

REY ¡En fin, español eres!

CRISTIANO No lo niego.

REY Pues deso que no niegas yo reniego.

(Entra el SACRISTÁN con un niño en las mantillas, fingido, y tras él el JUDÍO de la cazuela.)

¿Es aquésta otra barca?

JUDÍO Este cristiano me acaba de robar a este mi hijo.

CADÍ ¿Para qué quiere el niño?

SACRISTÁN ¿No está bueno? 495 Para que le rescaten, si no quieren que le críe y enseñe el Padrenuestro.
¿Qué decís vos, Raquel o Sedequías, Fares, Sadoc, o Zabulón o diablo?

JUDÍO Este español, señor, es la ruina 500 de nuestra judería; no hay en ella cosa alguna segura de sus uñas.

REY Di: ¿no eres español?

SACRISTÁN ¿Ya no lo sabes?

REY ¿Quién es tu amo?

SACRISTÁN El dabají Morato.

REY Tocadle, por mi vida.

CADÍ Por la mía, 505

que tienes gran razón en lo que has dicho de la canalla bárbara española.

(Entra otro MORO con otro CRISTIANO, muy roto y llagadas las piernas.)

REY ¿Quién es este?

MORO Español que se ha huido tantas veces por tierra, que con ésta son veinte y una vez las de su fuga. 510

REY Si diésemos audiencia cuatro días, serían de españoles todos cuantos se entrasen a quejar.

CADÍ ¡Estraño caso!

REY Pápaz, vuélvele el niño a este judío, y no le hagan mal a este cristiano, 515 que, pues a tal peligro entregó el cuerpo, en grande cuita debe estar su alma.
Y tú, ¿eres español?

CRISTIANO Y de Valencia.

REY Vuélvete, pues, a huir, que si te vuelven, yo te pondré en un palo.

SACRISTÁN Señor, haga 520 que este puto judío dé siquiera el jornal que he perdido por andarme tras él para robarle este hideputa.

CADÍ Bien dice; desembolse cuarenta ásperos
y délos al pápaz, que los merece. 525

SACRISTÁN ¿Oye, amigo judío?

JUDÍO Muy bien oigo;
mas no los tengo aquí.

SACRISTÁN Vamos a casa.

CADÍ Con españoles, esto y más se pasa.

(Éntranse todos.)

(El PADRE solo.)

PADRE ¿Si osaré entrar allá dentro?
¡Oh temor impertinente! 530 ¡Vamos; que no teme encuentro piedra que naturalmente va presurosa a su centro!

(Córrese una cortina; descúbrese FRANCISQUITO, atado a una coluna en la forma que pueda mover a más piedad.)

FRANCISQUITO ¿No me quieran desatar, para que pueda, siquiera, 535
como es costumbre espirar?

PADRE No, que de aquesa manera más a Cristo has de imitar.

Si vas caminando al cielo, no has de sentarte en el suelo; 540 más ligero vas ansí.

FRANCISQUITO ¡Oh padre, lléguese a mí, que el velle me da consuelo!

¡Ya la muerte helada y fría a dejaros me provoca 545 con su mortal agonía!

PADRE ¡Echa tu alma en mi boca, para que ensarte la mía!

¡Ay, que espira!

FRANCISQUITO ¡Adiós, que espiro!

PADRE ¡Dios, a quien tu intento aspira, 550 nos junte adonde yo aspiro!

¡Qué poco a poco respira, ya dio el último suspiro!

¡Vete en paz, alma hermosa, y al que te hizo dichosa, 555 pues ya le ves, pídele que nos sustente en su fe pura, santa, alegre, honrosa!

¡Quién supiese el muladar adonde te han de enterrar, 560 reliquia pequeña y santa, para que pueda mi planta con mis lágrimas regar!
(Éntrase.)

(Aquí ha de salir la boda desta manera: HALIMA con un velo delante del rostro, en lugar de ZARA; llévanla en unas andas en hombros, con música y hachas encendidas, guitarras y voces y grande regocijo, cantando los cantares que yo daré. Salen detrás de todos VIVANCO y DON LOPE, y entre los moros de la música va OSORIO, el cautivo. Como acaban de pasar, pregunta DON LOPE a OSORIO:)

DON LOPE    ¿Quién es esta novia!

OSORIOZara,
la hija de Agimorato.    565

DON LOPE¡No es posible!

OSORIO¡Cosa es clara!

VIVANCOSu rostro y el aparato de la boda lo declara.

OSORIO    Por Dios, señores, que es ella, y que es la mora más bella    570
y rica de Berbería!

DON LOPEPor el velo que traía
no podimos conocella.

OSORIO    Muley Maluco es su esposo, el que pretende ser rey    575
de Fez, moro muy famoso, y en su secta y mala ley es versado y muy curioso;

sabe la lengua turquesca, la española y la tudesca, 580
italiana y francesa;
duerme en alto, come en mesa,
sentado a la cristianesca;
sobre todo, es gran soldado, liberal, sabio, compuesto, 585
de mil gracias adornado.

DON LOPE¿Qué dices, amigo, desto?

VIVANCOQue habemos bien negociado, pues, siendo una caña vara, y otro nuevo Moisés Zara 590
deste Egipto disoluto, pasamos el mar enjuto
a gozar la patria cara.

OSORIO Gasta en Pascuas el judío su hacienda; en bodas, el moro; 595 el cristiano a su albedrío, sigue en esto otro decoro,
de todo gusto vacío,

(ZARA a la ventana.)

porque en pleitos le da cabo.

ZAHARA¿Ce, hola, cristiano esclavo! 600

OSORIO¿Adiós, señores, que quiero, hasta el término postrero ver esto!

DON LOPE Tu gusto alabo.

ZAHARA ¡Cristiano o moro enemigo!

VIVANCO ¿Quién nos llama?

ZAHARA Quien merece 605 que le oyáis.

DON LOPE ¡Por Dios, amigo, que esta Zara me parece en la voz!

VIVANCO Yo así lo digo.

ZAHARA Decidme qué cosa es ésta deste regocijo y fiesta. 610

DON LOPE Con Zara, la desta casa, Muley Maluco se casa.

ZAHARA Desvariada respuesta.

DON LOPE Y allí va sobre unas andas con música y vocería. 615 Mira si otra cosa mandas.

ZAHARA Ya veo, Lela María, cómo en mis remedios andas.

DON LOPE ¿Eres Zara?

ZAHARA Zara soy.
Tú, ¿quién eres?

DON LOPE ¡Loco estoy! 620

ZAHARA ¿Qué dices?

DON LOPE Que soy, señora, un tu esclavo que te adora.
Soy don Lope.

ZAHARA A abrirte voy.
(Quítase de la ventana y baja a abrir.)

VIVANCO De misterio no carece estar Zara aquí y allí. 625

DON LOPE Este bien su fe merece, y el estar tan sola aquí la admiración en mí crece;
adonde hay tanto criado, tal soledad se ha hallado; 630
todo es milagro y ventura.

VIVANCO El regocijo y holgura

de la boda lo ha causado.

Quien le hace parecer en lugares diferentes 635 muy más que esto puede hacer, por quitar inconvenientes al bien que ha de suceder.

(Sale ZARA.)

¿Vesla, don Lope, a do asoma?
Mira si es bien que a Mahoma 640
este tesoro quitemos.

DON LOPE; Oh extremo de los extremos de amor, que las almas doma!

¡Salud de mi enfermedad, arribo de mi caída, 645
de mi prisión libertad,
de mi muerte alegre vida,
crédito de mi verdad,

archivo donde se encierra toda la paz de mi guerra, 650 sol que alumbra mis sentidos, luz que a míseros perdidos los encamina a su tierra, vesme aquí a tus pies postrado, más tu esclavo y más rendido 655 que cuando estaba aherrojado;

por ti ganado y perdido,
preso y libre en un estado;

dame tus pies sobrehumanos y tus alejandras manos, 660 donde mis labios se pongan!

ZAHARA No es bien que se descompongan con moras labios cristianos.

Por mil señales has visto cómo yo toda soy tuya, 665 no por ti, sino por Cristo, y así, en fe de que soy suya, estas caricias resisto;

para otro tiempo las guarda, que ahora, que se acobarda 670 el alma con mil temores, comedimientos y amores
mal los atiende y aguarda.

¿Cuándo te partes a España, y cuándo piensas volver 675
por quien queda y te acompaña?
¿Cuándo fin has de poner a tan gloriosa hazaña?

¿Cuando volverán tus ojos a ver los moros despojos 680 que ser cristianos desean?
¿Cuándo en verte harás que vean fin mis temores y enojos?

DON LOPE Mañana me partiré; dentro de ocho días, creo, 685
señora, que volveré;
que a la cuenta del deseo,
que han de ser siglos bien sé.

En el jardín estarás del tu padre, a do verás 690
mi fe y palabra cumplida, si me costase la vida
que con tu vista me das.

Y no te asalte el recelo que te he de faltar en esto, 695 pues no ha de querer el cielo,
para caso tan honesto,
negar su ayuda en el suelo.

Cristiano y español soy,

y caballero, y te doy 700 mi fe y palabra de nuevo de hacer lo que en esto debo.

ZAHARAAsaz satisfecha estoy;
pero, si me quieres bien, porque quede más segura, 705
júrame por Marién.

DON LOPE¡Juro por la Virgen pura, y por su Hijo también,
de no olvidarte jamás
y de hacer lo que verás 710 en mi gusto y tu provecho!

ZAHARA¡Grande juramento has hecho!
Basta; no me jures más.

VIVANCO ¿Qué es lo que tu padre dice desto de tu casamiento 715 con Muley Maluco?

ZAHARAHice
esta noche un sentimiento, con que la boda deshice.
Hoy me mandó aderezar para haberme de llevar 720
esta noche a ser esposa;
vino, y hallóme llorosa;
fuese sin quererme hablar, y por toda la ciudad se suena que me desposo 725
esta noche.

VIVANCO Así es verdad.

DON LOPE ¡Éste es caso milagroso!
No la apuréis más; callad.

Dame tus manos, señora, hasta que llegue la hora 730 que con abrazos las des.

ZAHARA No, sino dame tus pies, que eres cristiano y yo mora.

Vete en paz, que yo, entre tanto que vas y vuelves, haré 735 plegarias al cielo santo con las voces de mi fe
y lágrimas de mi llanto, rogándole que tranquile el mar, que viento asutile 740 próspero y largo en tus velas, que te libre de cautelas, que en su fe mi ingenio afile.

Y, adiós, que no puedo más, y mañana iré al jardín, 745
donde te espero.

VIVANCO Verás
deste principio buen fin.

ZAHARA ¿Que me dejas y te vas?

DON LOPE No puedo hacer otra cosa.

ZAHARA¿Llegará la venturosa 750 hora de volver a verte?
(Vase ZARA.)

DON LOPESí llegará, si la muerte no es, cual suele, rigurosa.
No será elirme cordura, hasta ver el fin que tiene 755 aquesta boda en figura.

VIVANCOEl misterio que contiene, mi buen suceso asegura.

(Éntranse.)

(Descúbrese un tálamo donde ha de estar HALIMA, cubierta el rostro con el velo; danzan la danza de la morisca; haya hachas; esténlo mirando DON LOPE y VIVANCO, y, en acabando la danza, entran dos moros.)

MORO 1 La fiesta cese, y a su casa vuelva la bella Zara, que Muley lo ordena, 760 con prudencia admirable, desta suerte.

MORO 2¿Pues no pasa adelante el casamiento?

MORO 1Sí pasa; pero quiere que entre tanto que él va a cobrar su reino de Marruecos, Zara se quede en casa de su padre, 765 entera y sin tocar; que deste modo quedará más segura, y él espera gozarla con sosiego allá en su reino, a cuya empresa aún bien no habrá salido el sol cuando se parta; que esta priesa 770

le dan dos mil jenízaros que lleva en su campo, que ya sabes que marcha.

MORO 2 Si esto pensaba hacer, ¿para qué quiso que el paseo de Zara se hiciese?
¿Qué dirá el pueblo? Pensará, sin duda, 775 que no quiere casarse ya con ella.

MORO 1 Diga lo que dijere, éste es su gusto,
y no hay sino callar y obedecelle;
y más, que Agimorato gusta dello.

MORO 2 ¿Ha de volver con pompa?

MORO 1 ¡Ni por pienso! 780

MORO 2 Vamos, pues, a volvella.

VIVANCO ¡Oh Dios inmenso!

(Éntranse todos y ciérrase la cortina del tálamo; quedan en el teatro DON LOPE y VIVANCO.)

¡Grandes son tus misterios! Ya seguro puedes partir, pues ves cuán fácilmente esta fantasma y sombra se ha deshecho.

DON LOPE Premisas son de nuestro buen suceso. 785 Yo me voy a embarcar; tened cuidado de acudir al lugar donde os he dicho, y de hacer nuevas señas cada noche como pasen seis días, en los cuales pienso poder volver, como deseo; 790 y procurad con maña y con aviso, sin descubrir jamás vuestro designio, que el padre de aquel mártir se recoja en el jardín con otro algún amigo; que si toca a Mallorca este navío 795 en que parto, bien será posible que dentro de seis días vuelva a veros.

VIVANCOPartid con Dios, que yo haré de suerte que más de dos la libertad alcancen.
Las señas no se olviden. Abrazadme, 800
y ánimo, y diligencia, y Dios os guíe.

DON LOPEDe nadie este secreto se confíe.

(Éntranse.)

(Sale OSORIO y el SACRISTÁN.)

OSORIO El cuento es más gracioso que por jamás se ha oído:
que los judíos mismos 805
de su misma hacienda os rescatasen.

SACRISTÁNAsí como os lo cuento ha sucedido el caso:
ellos me han rescatado
y dado libertad graciosamente. 810 Dicen que desta suerte aseguran sus niños,
sus trastos y cazuelas,
y, finalmente, su hacienda toda.

Yo he dado mi palabra 815 de no hurtarles cosa
mientras me fuere a España, y por Dios que no sé si he de cumplirla.

(Entra un CRISTIANO.)

CRISTIANO La limosna ha llegado a Bujía, cristianos. 820

OSORIO ¡Buenas nuevas son éstas!
¿Quién viene?

CRISTIANO La Merced.

OSORIO ¡Dios nos las haga!
¿Y quién la trae a cargo?

CRISTIANO Dícenme que un prudente varón, y que se llama 825 fray Jorge de Olivar.

SACRISTÁN ¡Venga en buen hora!

OSORIO Un fray Rodrigo de Arce ha estado aquí otras veces, y es desa mesma Orden,
de condición real, de ánimo noble. 830

SACRISTÁN Por lo menos, me ahorro reverencias y ruegos,

gracias a Sedequías
y al rabí Netalim, que dio el dinero.
Si la esperanza es buena, 835 la posesión no es mala.
Muy bien está lo hecho;
venga cuando quisiere la limosna.
¡Oh campanas de España!, ¿cuándo entre aquestas manos 840
tendré vuestros badajos?
¿Cuándo haré el tic y toc o el grave empino?
¿Cuándo de los bodigos que por los pobres muertos ofrecen ricas viudas 845
veré mi arcaz colmado? ¿Cuándo, cuándo?

CRISTIANO¿Adónde vais agora?

OSORIOPidíóle Agimorato
al cadí que nos fuésemos a su jardín por tres o cuatro días; 850 que con su hija Zara
y con la bella Halima,
de Cauralí consorte,
piensa pasar allí todo el verano.

CRISTIANOPodrá ser que algún día 855 yo vaya a entretenerme con vosotros un rato.

OSORIOSerás bien recibido.

CRISTIANO¡Adiós, amigos!
(Vase.)

SACRISTÁN También, pues estoy libre, iré yo, Osorio, a veros. 860

OSORIO Pues lleva la guitarra, y, si es posible, vente luego.

SACRISTÁN Harélo.

(Éntranse.)

(Salen HALIMA, ZARA, COSTANZA, y al entrar se le cae a ZARA un rosario, que lo alza HALIMA.)

HALIMA ¿Cómo es esto, Zara amiga?
¿Cruz en tus cuentas?

COSTANZA Mías son.

HALIMA Si aquésta no es devoción, 865 no sé qué piense o qué diga.

ZAHARA ¿Qué cosa es cruz?

HALIMA Este palo
que sobre estotro atraviesa.

ZAHARA Pues bien: ¿qué señal es ésa?

HALIMA ¡No está el disimulo malo! 870 Es la señal que el cristiano reverencia como a Alá.

COSTANZA Señora, déjamela, que es mía.

HALIMA Tu intento es vano, que a Zara se le cayó, 875
y yo lo vi por mis ojos.

ZAHARA Eso no te cause enojos, que Costanza me la dio cuando estaba el otro día en tu casa, y yo no sé 880 lo que es cruz.

COSTANZA Ello así fue,
y fue inadvertencia mía
no quitalle esa señal.
Pero, ¿qué importa al decoro de vuestro rezado moro? 885

ZAHARA Gualá que no dice mal.

HALIMA Con todo, quítala, hermana;
que si algún moro la vee,
dirá que guardas la fe,
en secreto, de cristiana. 890

(Entran VIVANCO y DON FERNANDO.)

VIVANCO He fiado este secreto de vos por ser caballero.

DON FERNANDO Ser agradecido espero al peso de ser secreto.
Éstas son Alima y Zara, 895 que yo las conozco bien.

VIVANCONuestro negocio va bien.

HALIMA Repara, amiga, repara, que viene allí mi cristiano, y en él viene un mi enemigo 900
a quien adoro y maldigo.

ZAHARA ¿Qué dices?

HALIMA No está en mi mano disimular más.

COSTANZA ¡Ay triste!
¿Si se quiere declarar
con él?

HALIMA Quiérole hablar. 905

COSTANZA En vano a amor se resiste.

ZAHARA ¿Quiéresle bien?

HALIMA La vergüenza
me perdone: adórole,
y él lo sabe, y yo no sé
cómo a su dureza venza. 910

ZAHARA ¿Y no se humana contigo?

HALIMA Costanza dice que sí; pero yo siempre en él vi
asperezas de enemigo.
Llégate; dime, cristiano: 915 ¿sabes que eres mi cautivo?

DON FERNANDO Señora, sí, y sé que vivo por ti.

HALIMA ¿Pues cómo, inhumano?
¿Nunca te han dicho mis ojos y la lengua de Costanza 920 que tienes de mi esperanza en tu poder los despojos?
¿Has aguardado a que haga de tanta gente en presencia esta costosa experiencia, 925 descubriéndote mi llaga?
Mira qué fe desdichada, que esto que llaman amor ya es incendio, ya es furor, cuando no repara en nada; 930
mira bien que podría ser, si desprecias lo que digo, hicieses, hombre, enemigo de tan amiga mujer.

DON FERNANDO Tres días pido no más 935 de plazo, señora mía, para dar a tu porfía
el dulce fin que verás.

Vete con Dios al jardín de Zara y allí me espera: 940 verás de tu pena fiera, como he dicho, un dulce fin.

HALIMA ¡Soy contenta!

ZAHARAY yo la mano
doy por él que así lo hará.

COSTANZA ¡Muy bien negociado está! 945

HALIMA Si has de venir, ve temprano.

ZAHARA ¿Qué viento es éste que corre,
cristiano?

VIVANCONorte parece,
y en él la ventura ofrece el que nos guía y socorre. 950

ZAHARA ¿Fuese ya tu compañero a España?

VIVANCO Ya habrá seis días.

ZAHARA ¿Solo sin él quedarías?

VIVANCOSÍ quedé; mas verle espero con brevedad.

ZAHARA¿Qué tan presto? 955

VIVANCOPartiríame mañana, si hubiese bajel.

HALIMACristiana,
alza el rostro. ¿Qué es aquesto?
Muy melancólica estás.
¿Qué tienes? ¿Qué sientes? Di. 960

COSTANZAVámonos, señora, de aquí, aunque he de morir do vas, porque me da el corazón saltos que me rompe el pecho.

ZAHARAEEl madrugar lo habrá hecho. 965

COSTANZAY haber visto una visión que, si no es cosa fingida, y en buen discurso trazada, el fin de aquesta jornada ha de ser el de mi vida. 970

DON FERNANDO Todas son fantasmas vanas; Costanza, no hay qué temer.

COSTANZAPresto lo echaré de ver.

ZAHARA ¡Medrosas son las cristianas!

COSTANZA No mucho, puesto que hay tal 975 que se espanta de los cielos, iba a decir de los celos,
y no dijera muy mal.

HALIMA Queda con Alá, mi Hernando, y mira que vengas luego; 980 que te lo mando y lo ruego.

COSTANZA Basta decir te lo mando.

(Éntranse las tres.)

VIVANCO Vamos; quizá la ventura habrá tan próspera sido, que don Lope sea venido, 985
y no hay perder coyuntura.

(Éntrase VIVANCO y DON FERNANDO.)

(Sale el PADRE con un paño blanco ensangrentado, como que lleva en él los huesos de FRANCISQUITO.)

PADRE Osorio haré que los guarde.
Temo que esta escuridad,
o me turbe, o lleve tarde.
¡Oh, cuán propio es de mi edad 990 ser temeroso y cobarde!

Mas estas reliquias santas encaminarán mis plantas
al jardín de Agimorato.
Menester es gran recato 995
donde hay asechanzas tantas.
(Éntrase.)

(Sale DON FERNANDO y VIVANCO.)

VIVANCO En la mar está, sin duda: que haber a tierra llegado muestra este plato quebrado.
A nuestra señal se acuda: 1000
hiera, amigo, el pedernal, porque saques dél la lumbre que traiga, guíe y alumbre todo el bien de nuestro mal.

DON FERNANDO ¿No ves cómo otras centellas 1005 corresponden a las nuestras?

VIVANCO Llama a tan alegres muestras, no centellas, sino estrellas.
Sosiega y escucha el son manso de los santos remos. 1010

DON FERNANDO Más a la orilla lleguemos.
No hay que dudar, ellos son.

(Entran DON LOPE y el PATRÓN de la barca.)

DON LOPE ¿Es Vivanco?

VIVANCO El mismo soy.

DON LOPE ¿Está Zara en el jardín?

VIVANCO Sí, amigo.

DON LOPE ¡Felice fin 1015
da el cielo a mis males hoy!

VIVANCO ¡Abrazame!

DON LOPE No hay lugar
de cumplimientos ahora.
Ve por ella.

VIVANCO Sea en buen hora.
Poco podrás esperar. 1020

DON FERNANDO ¿Quieres que vaya contigo, amigo?

VIVANCO No hay para qué: que yo solo las traeré
en un instante conmigo; que todos están a punto, 1025 sin dormir, esto esperando.

DON LOPE Pues parte, amigo, volando.

PATRÓN ¿Están lejos?

VIVANCO Aquí junto.
(Éntrese VIVANCO.)

PATRÓN ¡Oh, si no tardasen mucho, que es el viento favorable! 1030

DON LOPE Sosegaos, ninguno hable, que cierto rumor escucho.

PATRÓN A la barca nos volvemos hasta ver lo que es, señor.

DON LOPE Quedito, no hagáis rumor, 1035 que aquí seguros estamos.

(Entran VIVANCO, HALIMA, ZARA, COSTANZA, el PADRE, con un paño blanco, dando muestra que lleva los huesos de FRANCISQUITO; OSORIO, el SACRISTÁN y otros cristianos que pudieren salir.)

VIVANCO Estaban alerta, y vieron las señales en la mar, y, sin poderme esperar,
a la marina corrieron. 1040
Ahorráronme el camino.

OSORIO ¡Ésta es suerte milagrosa!

DON LOPE ¿Dó está mi estrella hermosa?

HALIMA ¿Dó está mi norte divino?

PATRÓN No es tiempo de cumplimientos; 1045 a embarcar, que el viento carga.
¡Oh liviana y santa carga, haced propicios lo vientos!

SACRISTÁN Ya yo estaba rescatado; pero, con todo, me iré. 1050

PATRÓN ¿Hay más cristianos?

DON FERNANDO No sé.

VIVANCO Los que he podido he juntado.

COSTANZA ¡Vamos, no despierte Halima!

DON FERNANDO ¿Quieres que por ella vuelva?

PATRÓN Todo el mundo se resuelva 1055 de embarcarse.

COSTANZA ¿Te lastima
dejar tu ama?

DON FERNANDO Y mi amo
quisiera que aquí se hallara.

DON LOPE Vamos, Zara.

ZAHARA Ya no Zara,
sino María me llamo. 1060

DON LOPE No de la imaginación este trato se sacó, que la verdad lo fraguó
bien lejos de la ficción.

Dura en Argel este cuento 1065
de amor y dulce memoria, y es bien que verdad y historia alegre al entendimiento.

Y aún hoy se hallarán en él la ventana y el jardín. 1070 Y aquí da este trato fin, que no le tiene el de Argel.

Jornada primera

Salen LUGO, envainando una daga de ganchos, y el LOBILLO y GANCHOSO, rufianes. LUGO viene como estudiante, con una media sotana, un broquel en la cinta y una daga de ganchos; que no ha de traer espada.

LOBILLO ¿Por qué fue la quistiión?

LUGO No fue por nada.
No se repita, si es que amigos somos.

GANCHOSO Quiso Lugo empinar-se sobre llombre, y, siendo rufo de primer tonsura, asentarse en la cátre-da de prima, 5 teniendo al lomb-re aquí por espantajo.

LUGO Mis sores, poco a poco. Yo soy mozo y mazo, y tengo hígados y bofes para dar en el trato de la hampa quinao al más pintado de su escuela, 10 en la cual no recibe el grado alguno de valeroso por haber gran tiempo que cura en sus entradas y salidas, sino por las hazañas que ya hecho.
¿No tienen ya sabido que hay cofrades 15 de luz, y otros de sangre?

LOBILLO Aqueso pido.

GANCHOSO;Hola, so Lobo! Si es que pide queso, pídalo en otra parte, que en aquésta no se da. Si no...

LOBILLO;Basta, seor Ganchoso!
O logue lengua, y téngase por dicho, 20 que entrevo toda flor y todo rumbo.

GANCHOSO;Pues nosotros nacimos en Guinea, so Lobo?

LOBILLONo sé nada.

GANCHOSO;Pues apréndalo
con aquesta lección.

LUGO;Fuera, Lobillo!

GANCHOSOEntrambos sois ovejas fanfarrones, 25
y gallinas mojadas, y conejos.

LOBILLO;Menos lengua y más manos, hideputa!

(Entran a esta sazón un ALGUACIL y dos corchetes; huyen GANCHOSO y LOBILLO; queda solo LUGO, envainando.)

CORCHETE ;Téngase a la justicia!

LUGO;Tente, pícaro!

¿Conócesme?

CORCHETE ¡So Lugo!

LUGO ¿Qué so Lugo?

ALGUACIL Bellacos, ¿no le asís?

CORCHETE 2 Señor nuestro amo, 30 ¿sabe lo que nos manda? ¿No conoce que es el señor Cristóbal el delinque?

ALGUACIL ¡Que siempre le he de hallar en estas danzas!
¡Por Dios, que es cosa recia! ¡No hay paciencia que lo pueda llevar!

LUGO Llévelo en cólera, 35 que tanto monta.

ALGUACIL Ahora, yo sé cierto que ha de romper el diablo sus zapatos alguna vez.

LUGO Mas que los rompa ciento;
que él los sabrá comprar donde quisiere.

ALGUACIL El señor Sandoval tiene la culpa. 40

CORCHETE 2 Tello de Sandoval es su amo déste.

CORCHETE 1Y manda la ciudad, y no hay justicia que le ose tocar por su respeto.

LUGOEl señor alguacil haga su oficio,
y déjese de cuentos y preámbulos. 45

ALGUACIL;Cuán mejor pareciera el señor Lugo en su colegio que en la barbacana, el libro en mano, y no el broquel en cinta!

LUGOCrea el so alguacil que no le cuadra ni esquina el predicar; deje ese oficio 50 a quien le toca, y vaya y pique aprisa.

ALGUACILSin picar nos iremos, y agradézcalo a su amo; que, a fe de hijodalgo, que yo sé en qué parará este negocio.

LUGOEn irse y en quedarme.

CORCHETE 1Yo lo creo, 55
porque es un Barrabás este Cristóbal.

CORCHETE 2No hay gamo que le iguale en ligereza.

CORCHETE 1Mejor juega la blanca que la negra,
y en entrambas es águila volante.

ALGUACIL Recójase y procure no encontrarme, 60 que será lo más sano.

LUGO Aunque sea enfermo, haré lo que fuere de mi gusto.

ALGUACIL Venid vosotros.
(Éntrase el ALGUACIL.)

CORCHETE 1 So Cristóbal, ¡vive que no le conocí!; ¡sí, juro cierto!

CORCHETE 2 Señor Cristóbal, yo me recomendo; 65 de mí no hay qué temer; soy ciego y mudo para ver ni hablar cosa que toque a la mínima suela del calcorro que tapa y cubre la coluna y basa que sustentan la máquina hampesca. 70

LUGO ¿Dónde cargaste, Calahorra?

CORCHETE 2 No sé; Dios con la noche me socorra.

(Éntranse los dos corchetes.)

LUGO ¡Que sólo me respeten por mi amo y no por mí, no sé esta maravilla!; mas yo haré que salga de mí un bramo 75 que pase de los muros de Sevilla.
Cuelgue mi padre de su puerta el ramo, despoje de su jugo a Manzanilla;
conténtese en su humilde y bajo oficio, que yo seré famoso en mi ejercicio. 80

(Entra, a este instante, LAGARTIJA, muchacho.)

LAGARTIJA Señor Cristóbal, ¿qué es esto?
¿Has reñido, por ventura, que tienes turbado el gesto?

LUGO Pónele de sepultura el ánimo descompuesto. 85 La de ganchos saqué a luz, porque me hiciese el buz un bravo por mi respeto;
mas huyóse de su aspecto como el diablo de la cruz. 90 ¿Qué me quieres, Lagartija?

LAGARTIJA La Salmerona y la Pava, la Mendoza y la Librija, que es cada cual por sí brava, gananciosa y buena hija, 95
te suplican que esta tarde, allá cuando el sol no arde
y hiera en rayo cencillo, en el famoso Alamillo
hagas de tu vista alarde. 100

LUGO ¿Hay regodeo?

LAGARTIJA Hay merienda, que las más famosas cenas ante ella cogen la rienda:
cazuelas de berenjenas
serán penúltima ofrenda. 105

Hay el conejo empanado, por mil partes traspasado con saetas de tocino;
blanco el pan, aloque el vino,
y hay turrón alicantado. 110

Cada cual para esto roba blancas vistosas y nuevas, una y otra rica coba;
dales limones las Cuevas
y naranjas el Alcoba. 115

Daráles en un instante
el pescador arrogante, más que le hay del norte al sur, el gordo y sabroso albur
y la anguila resbalante. 120

El sábalo vivo, vivo, colear en la caldera,
o saltar en fuego esquivo, verás en mejor manera que te lo pinto y describo. 125

El pintado camarón,
con el partido limón
y bien molida pimienta, verás cómo el gusto aumenta
y le saca de harón. 130

LUGO ¡Lagartija, bien lo pintas!

LAGARTIJA Pues llevan otras mil cosas de comer, varias, distintas, que a voluntades golosas las harán poner en quintas. 135

LUGO ¿Qué es en quintas?

LAGARTIJA En división,

llevándose la afición
aquí y allí y acullá:
que la variedad hará
no atinar con la razón. 140

LUGO ¿Y quién va con ellas?

LAGARTIJA ¿Quién?
El Patojo, y el Mochuelo, y el Tuerto del Almadén.

LUGO Que ha de haber soplo recelo.

LAGARTIJA Ve tú, y se hará todo bien. 145

LUGO Quizá, por tu gusto iré; que tienes un no sé qué de agudeza, que me encanta.

LAGARTIJA Mi boca pongo en la planta de tu valeroso pie. 150

LUGO ¡Alza, rapaz lisonjero, indigno del vil oficio
que tienes!

LAGARTIJA Pues dél espero salir presto a otro ejercicio que muestre ser perulero. 155

LUGO ¿Qué ejercicio?

LAGARTIJA Señor Lugo,
será ejercicio de jugo,
puesto que en él se trabaja, que es jugador de ventaja,
y de las bolsas verdugo. 160

¿No has visto tú por ahí mil con capas guarnecidas, volantes más que un neblí, que en dos barajas bruñidas encierran un Potosí? 165

Cuál destos se finge manco para dar un toque franco al más agudo, y me alegro de ver no usar de su negro hasta que topen un blanco. 170

LUGO ¡Mucho sabes! ¿Qué papel es el que traes en el pecho?

LAGARTIJA ¿Descúbreme algo dél?
Todo el seso sin provecho
de Apolo se encierra en él. 175

Es un romance jácaro, que le igualo y le comparo al mejor que se ha compuesto; echa de la hampa el resto en estilo jaco y raro. 180

Tiene vocablos modernos, de tal manera que encantan;
unos bravos, y otros tiernos;
ya a los cielos se levantan, ya bajan a los infiernos. 185

LUGO Dile, pues.

LAGARTIJA Séle de coro;
que ninguna cosa ignoro
de aquesta que a luz se saque.

LUGO ¿Y de qué trata?

LAGARTIJA De un jaque que se tomó con un toro. 190

LUGO Vaya, Lagartija.

LAGARTIJA Vaya,
y todo el mundo esté atento a mirar cómo se ensaya
a pasar mi entendimiento del que más sube la raya. 195 «Año de mil y quinientos y treinta y cuatro corría,
a veinte y cinco de mayo,
martes, aciago día,
sucedió un caso notable 200
en la ciudad de Sevilla, digno que ciegos le canten
y que poetas le escriban.
Del gran corral de los Olmos, do está la jacarandina, 205
sale Reguilete, el jaque, vestido a las maravillas.
No va la vuelta del Cairo,
del Catay ni de la China, ni de Flandes, ni Alemania, 210 ni menos de Lombardía:
va la vuelta de la plaza
de San Francisco bendita, que corren toros en ella por Santa Justa y Rufina; 215

y, apenas entró en la plaza, cuando se lleva la vista tras sí de todos los ojos, que su buen donaire miran.
Salió en esto un toro hosco, 220 ¡válasme Santa María!, y, arremetiendo con él,
dio con él patas arriba.
Dejóle muerto y mohíno, bañado en su sangre misma; 225
y aquí da fin el romance porque llegó el de su vida.»

LUGO ¿Y éste es el romance bravo que decías?

LAGARTIJASu llaneza
y su buen decir alabo; 230 y más, que muestra agudeza en llegar tan presto al cabo.

LUGO ¿Quién le compuso?

LAGARTIJATristán,
que gobierna en San Román la bendita sacristía, 235 que excede en la poesía a Garcilaso y Boscán.

(Entra, a este instante, una DAMA, con el manto hasta la mitad del rostro.)

DAMA Una palabra, galán.

LUGO Ve con Dios; y quizá iré, si estás cierto que allá van. 240

LAGARTIJA Digo que van, yo lo sé;
y sé que te aguardarán.
(Éntrase LAGARTIJA.)

DAMA Arrastrada de un deseo sin provecho resistido, a hurto de mi marido, 245
delante de vos me veo.

Lo que este manto os encubre, mirad, y después veréis (Mírala por debajo del manto.)

si es razón que remediéis lo que la lengua os descubre. 250 ¿Conocéisme?

LUGO Demasiado.

DAMA En eso veréis la fuerza que me incita, y aun me fuerza, a ponerme en este estado;
mas, porque no estéis en calma 255 pensando a qué es mi venida, digo que a daros mi vida
con la voluntad del alma.

Vuestra rara valentía
y vuestro despejo han hecho 260 tanta impresión en mi pecho, que pienso en vos noche y día.

Quítame este pensamiento pensar en mi calidad,

y al gusto la voluntad 265
da libre consentimiento;
y así, sin guardar decoro
a quien soy en ningún modo, habré de decirlo todo:
sabed, Lugo, que os adoro. 270

No fea, y muy rica soy;
sabré dar, sabré querer,
y esto lo echaréis de ver por este trance en que estoy; que la mujer ya rendida, 275
aunque es toda mezquindad, muestra liberalidad
con el dueño de su vida.

En la tuya o en mi casa, de mí y de mi hacienda puedes 280 prometerte, no mercedes,
sino servicios sin tasa;

y, pues miedo no te alcanza,
no te le dé mi marido, que el engaño siempre ha sido 285
parcial de la confianza.

No llegan de los recelos, porque los tiene discretos,
a hacer los tristes efectos que suelen hacer los celos; 290

y, porque nunca ocasión de tenerlos yo le he dado, le juzgo por engañado
a nuestra satisfacción.

¿Para qué arrugas la frente 295
y alzas las cejas? ¿Qué es esto?

LUGO En admiración me ha puesto tu deseo impertinente.

Pudieras, ya que querías satisfacer tu mal gusto, 300 buscar un sujeto al justo

de tus grandes bazarrias;
pudieras, como entre peras, escoger en la ciudad quien diera a tu voluntad 305 satisfacción con más veras;
y así, tuviera disculpa con la alteza del empleo tu mal nacido deseo, que en mi bajeza te culpa. 310 Yo soy un pobre criado
de un inquisidor, cual sabes, de caudal, que está sin llaves,
entre libros abreviado;
vivo a lo de Dios es Cristo, 315 sin estrechar el deseo, y siempre traigo el baldeo como sacabuche listo;
ocúpome en bajas cosas,
y en todas soy tan terrible, 320 que el acudir no es posible a las que son amorosas:
a lo menos, a las altas, como en las que en ti señalas;
que son de cuervo mis alas. 325

DAMANo te pintes con más faltas, porque en mi imaginación te tiene amor retratado del modo que tú has contado, pero con más perfección. 330 No pido hagas quimeras
de ti mismo; sólo pido, deseo bien comedido,
que, pues te quiero, me quieras.
Pero, ¡ay de mí, desdichada! 335 ¡Mi marido! ¿Qué haré?
Tiemblo y temo, aunque bien sé que vengo bien disfrazada.

(Entra su MARIDO.)

LUGO Sosegaos, no os desviéis, que no os ha de descubrir. 340

DAMAAunque me quisiera ir,
no puedo mover los pies.

MARIDO Señor Lugo, ¿qué hay de nuevo?

LUGOCierta cosa que contaros, que me obligaba a buscaros. 345

DAMAIrme quiero, y no me atrevo.

MARIDO Aquí me tenéis; mirad lo que tenéis que decirme.

DAMAHarto mejor fuera irme.

LUGOLlegaos aquí y escuchad. 350

La hermosura que dar quiso el cielo a vuestra mujer, con que la vino a hacer
en la tierra un paraíso, ha encendido de manera 355
de un mancebo el corazón, que le tiene hecho carbón de la amorosa hoguera.

Es rico y es poderoso,

y atrevido de tal modo, 360 que atropella y rompe todo lo que es más dificultoso.

No quiere usar de los medios de ofrecer ni de rogar, porque, en su mal, quiere usar 365 de otros más breves remedios.

Dice que la honestidad
de vuestra consorte es tanta, que le admira y que le espanta tanto como la beldad. 370

Por jamás le ha descubierto su lascivo pensamiento;
que queda su atrevimiento,
ante su recato, muerto.

MARIDO ¿Es hombre que entra en mi casa? 375

LUGORóndala, mas no entra en ella.

MARIDO Quien casa con mujer bella, de su honra se descasa, si no lo remedia el cielo.

DAMA Aparte.

¿Qué es lo que tratan los dos? 380 ¿Si es de mí? ¡Válgame Dios, de cuántos males recelo!

LUGO Digo, en fin, que es tal el fuego que a este amante abrasa y fuerza, que quiere usar de la fuerza 385 en cambio y lugar del ruego.

Robar quiere a vuestra esposa, ayudado de otra gente
como yo, desta valiente, atrevida y licenciosa. 390

Hame dado cuenta dello, casi como a principal
desta canalla mortal,
que en hacer mal echa el sello.

Yo, aunque soy mozo arriscado, 395
de los de campo través, ni mato por interés,
ni de ruindades me agrado.

De ayudalle he prometido, con intento de avisaros; 400 que es fácil el repararos, estando así prevenido.

MARIDO ¿Soy hombre yo de amenazas?
Tengo valor, ciño espada.

LUGO No hay valor que pueda nada 405 contra las traidoras trazas.

MARIDO En fin: ¿mi consorte ignora todo este cuento?

LUGO Así ella
os ofende, como aquella cubierta y buena señora. 410

Por el cielo santo os juro que no sabe nada desto.

MARIDO De ausentarla estoy dispuesto.

LUGO Eso es lo que yo procuro.

MARIDO Yo la pondré donde el viento 415
apenas pueda tocalla.

LUGO En el recato se halla buen fin del dudoso intento.

Retiradla, que la ausencia hace, pasando los días, 420 volver las entrañas frías que abrasaba la presencia;
y nunca en la poca edad tiene firme asiento amor, y siempre el mozo amador 425
huye la dificultad.

MARIDO El aviso os agradezco, señor Lugo, y algún día sabréis de mi cortesía si vuestra amistad merezco. 430

El nombre saber quisiera dese galán que me acosa.

LUGO Eso es pedirme una cosa que de quien soy no se espera.

Basta que vais avisado 435
de lo que más os conviene, y este negocio no tiene más de lo que os he contado.

Vuestra consorte inocente está de todo este hecho; 440 vos, con esto satisfecho, haced como hombre prudente.

MARIDO Casa fuerte y heredad tengo en no pequeña aldea, y llaves, que harán que sea 445 grande la dificultad que se oponga al mal intento dese atrevido mancebo.
Quedaos, que en el alma llevo más de un vario pensamiento. 450 (Vase el MARIDO.)

DAMA Entre los dientes ya estaba el alma para dejarme;
quise, y no pude mudarme,
aunque más lo procuraba.
¡Mucho esfuerzo ha menester 455 quien, con traidora conciencia, no se alborota en presencia de aquel que quiere ofender!

LUGO Y más si la ofensa es hecha de la mujer al marido. 460

DAMA El nublado ya se ha ido;
hazme agora satisfecha, contándome qué querías
a mi esclavo y mi señor.

LUGO Hanme hecho corredor 465 de no sé qué mercancías.
Díjele, si las quería,
que fuésemos luego a vellas.

DAMA ¿De qué calidad son ellas?

LUGO De la mayor cuantía; 470 que le importa, estoy pensando, comprallas, honor y hacienda.

DAMA ¿Cómo haré yo que él entienda esa importancia?

LUGO Callando.
Calla y vete, y así harás 475
muy segura su ganancia.

DAMA ¿Pues qué traza de importancia en lo de gozarnos das?

LUGO Ninguna que sea de gusto;
por hoy, a lo menos.

DAMA Pues, 480
¿cuándo la darás, si es que gustas de lo que gusto?

LUGO Yo haré por verme contigo.
Vete en paz.

DAMA Con ella queda,
y el amor contigo pueda 485
todo aquello que conmigo.

LUGO Como de rayo del cielo, como en el mar de tormenta, como de improviso afrenta y terremoto del suelo; 490 como de fiera indignada, del vulgo insolente y libre, pediré a Dios que me libre de mujer determinada.

(Éntrase LUGO.)

(Sale el licenciado TELLO DE SANDOVAL, amo de CRISTÓBAL DE LUGO, y el ALGUACIL que salió primero.)

TELLO ¿Pasan de mocedades?

ALGUACIL Es de modo 495 que, si no se remedia, a buen seguro que ha de escandalizar al pueblo todo.
    Como cristiano, a vuesa merced juro que piensa y hace tales travesuras, que nadie dél se tiene por seguro. 500

TELLO ¿Es ladrón?

ALGUACIL No, por cierto.

TELLO ¿Quita a oscuras
las capas en poblado?

ALGUACIL No, tampoco.

TELLO ¿Qué hace, pues?

ALGUACILOtras cien mil diabluras.

Esto de valentón le vuelve loco:
aquí riñe, allí hiere, allí se arroja, 505
y es en el trato airado el rey y el coco;
con una daga que le sirve de hoja,
y un broquel que pendiente tray al lado, sale con lo que quiere o se le antoja.

Es de toda la hampa respetado, 510 averigua pendencias y las hace, estafa, y es señor de lo guisado;
entre rufos, él hace y él deshace, el corral de los Olmos le da parias,
y en el dar cantaletas se complace. 515

Por tres heridas de personas varias, tres mandamientos traigo y no ejecuto,
y otros dos tiene el alguacil Pedro Arias.

Muchas veces he estado resolutivo de aventurallo todo y de prendelle, 520 o ya a la clara, o ya con modo astuto; pero, viendo que da en favorecelle tanto vuesa merced, aun no me atrevo a miralle, tocallo ni ofendelle.

TELLOEsa deuda conozco que la debo, 525

y la pagaré algún día, y procuraré que Lugo
use de más cortesía,
o le seré yo verdugo,
por vida del alma mía. 530

Mas lo mejor es quitalle de aquesta tierra y llevalle a Méjico, donde voy, no obstante que puesto estoy en reñille y castigalle. 535

Vuesa merced en buen hora vaya, que yo le agradezco el aviso, y desde agora todo por suyo me ofrezco.

ALGUACIL Ya adivino su mejora 540
sacándole de Sevilla, que es tierra do la semilla holgazana se levanta
sobre cualquiera otra planta que por virtud maravilla. 545
(Éntrase el ALGUACIL.)

TELLO ¡Que aqueste mozo me engañe, y que tan a suelta rienda
a mi honor y su alma dañe!
Pues yo haré, si no se enmienda, que de mi favor se estrañe: 550 que, viéndose sin ayuda, será posible que acuda
a la enmienda de su error;
que a la sombra del favor crecen los vicios, sin duda. 555 (Éntrase TELLO.)

(Salen dos músicos con guitarras, y CRISTÓBAL con su broquel y daga de ganchos.)

LUGO Toquen, que ésta es la casa, y al seguro que presto llegue el bramo a los oídos de la ninfa, que he dicho, jerezana, cuya vida y milagros en mi lengua viene cifrada en verso correntío. 560
A la jácara toquen, pues comienzo.

MÚSICO 1 ¿Quieres que le rompamos las ventanas antes de comenzar, porque esté atenta?

LUGO Acabada la música, andaremos aquestas estaciones. Vaya agora 565 el guitarresco son, y el aquelindo.

(Tocan.)

Escucha, la que veniste de la jerezana tierra
a hacer a Sevilla guerra en cueros, como valiente; 570 la que llama su pariente al gran Miramamolín;
la que se precia de ruin,
como otras de generosas;
la que tiene cuatro cosas, 575
y aun cuatro mil, que son malas;
la que pasea sin alas
los aires en noche oscura;
la que tiene a gran ventura ser amiga de un lacayo; 580 la que tiene un papagayo que siempre la llama puta;
la que en vieja y en astuta da quinao a Celestina;
la que, como golondrina, 585
muda tierras y sazones;
la que a pares, y aun a nones,
ha ganado lo que tiene;
la que no se desaviene
por poco que se le dé; 590 la que su palabra y fe
que diese jamás guardó;
la que en darse a sí excedió
a las godeñas más francas;

la que echa por cinco blancas 595
las habas y el cedacillo.

(Asómase a la ventana UNO medio desnudo, con un paño de tocar y un candil.)

UNO ¿Están en sí, señores? ¿No dan cata que no los oye nadie en esta casa?

MÚSICO 1 ¿Cómo así, tajamoco?

UNO Porque el dueño
ha que está ya a la sombra cuatro días. 600

MÚSICO 2 Convaleciente, di: ¿cómo, a la sombra?

UNO En la cárcel; ¿no entrevan?

LUGO ¿En la cárcel?
Pues ¿por qué la llevaron?

UNO Por amiga
de aquel Pierres Papín, el de los naipes.

MÚSICO 1 ¿Aquel francés giboso?

UNO A quese mismo, 605
que en la cal de la Sierpe tiene tienda.

LUGO ¡Éstrate, bodegón almidonado!

MÚSICO 2 ¡Zabúllete, fantasma antojadiza!

MÚSICO 1 ¡Escóndete, podenco cuartanario!

UNO Éntrome, ladroncitos en cuadrilla; 610 zabúllome, cernícalos rateros;
escóndome, corchetes a lo Caco.

LUGO ¡Vive Dios, que es de humor el hideputa!

UNO No tire nadie; estén las manos quedas, y anden las lenguas.

MÚSICO 1 ¿Quién te tira, sucio? 615

UNO ¿Hay más? ¡Si no me abajo, cuál me paran!
¡Mancebitos, adiós!; que no soy pera, que me han de derribar a terronazos.
(Éntrase.)

LUGO ¿Han visto los melindres del bellaco?
No le tiran, y quéjase.

MÚSICO 2 Éste es un sastre 620
remendón muy donoso.

MÚSICO 1 ¿Qué haremos?

LUGO Vamos a dar asalto al pastelero que está aquí cerca.

MÚSICO 2 Vamos, que ya es hora que esté haciendo pasteles; que este ciego que viene aquí nos da a entender cuán cerca 625

(Entra un CIEGO.)

viene ya el día.

CIEGO No he madrugado mucho, pues que ya suena gente por la calle.
Hoy quiero comenzar por este sastre.

LUGO ¡Hola, ciego, buen hombre!

CIEGO ¿Quién me llama?

LUGO Tomad aqueste real, y diez y siete 630 oraciones decid, una tras otra, por las almas que están en purgatorio.

CIEGO Que me place, señor, y haré mis fuerzas por decirlas devota y claramente.

LUGO No me las engulláis, ni me echéis sisa 635 en ellas.

CIEGO No, señor; ni por semejás.

A las Gradass me voy, y allí, sentado, las diré poco a poco.

LUGO ¡Dios os gué!

(Vase el CIEGO.)

MÚSICO 1 ¿Quédate para vino, Lugo amigo?

LUGO Ni aun un solo cornado.

MÚSICO 2 ¡Vive Roque, 640 que tienes condición extraordinaria!
Muchas veces te he visto dar limosna al tiempo que la lengua se nos pega al paladar, y sin dejar siquiera para comprar un polvo de Cazalla. 645

LUGO Las ánimas me llevan cuanto tengo; mas yo tengo esperanza que algún día lo tienen de volver ciento por uno.

MÚSICO 2 ¡A la larga lo tomas!

LUGO Y a lo corto;
que al bien hacer jamás le falta premio. 650

(Suena dentro como que hacen pasteles, y canta UNO dentro lo siguiente:)

UNO ¡Afuera, consejos vanos, que despertáis mi dolor!

No me toquen vuestras manos;
que, en los consejos de amor, los que matan son los sanos. 655

MÚSICO 1 ¡Hola! Cantando está el pastelerazo, y, por lo menos, los «consejos vanos».
¿Tienes pasteles, cangilón con tetas?

PASTELERO¡Músico de mohatra sincopado!

LUGOPastelero de riego, ¿no respondes? 660

PASTELEROPasteles tengo, mancebitos hampos;
mas no son para ellos, corchapines.

LUGO¡Abre, socarra, y danos de tu obra!

PASTELERO¡No quiero, socarrones! ¡A otra puerta, que no se abre aquésta por agora! 665

LUGO¡Por Dios, que a puntapiés la haga leña si acaso no nos abres, buenos vinos!

PASTELERO¡Por Dios, que no he de abrir, malos vinagres!

LUGO«¡Agora lo veredes!», dijo Agrajes.

MÚSICO 1¡Paso, no la derribes! ¡Lugo, tente! 670

(Da de coces a la puerta; sale el PASTELERO y sus secuaces con palas y barrederos y asadores.)

PASTELERO¡Bellacos, no hay aquí Agrajes que valgan; que, si tocan historias, tocaremos palas y chuzos!

MÚSICO 2¡Enciérrate, capacho!

LUGO¿Quieres que te derribe aquesas muelas, remero de Carón el chamuscado? 675

PASTELERO¡Cuerpo de mí! ¿Es Cristóbal el de Tello?

MÚSICO 1Él es. ¿Por qué lo dices, zangomango?

PASTELERODígoles porque yo le soy amigo
y muy su servidor, y para cuatro o para seis pasteles no tenía 680 para qué romper puertas ni ventanas, ni darme cantaleas ni matracas.
Entre Cristóbal, sus amigos entren, y allánese la tienda por el suelo.

LUGO¡Vive Dios, que eres príncipe entre príncipes, 685 y que esa sumisión te ha de hacer franco de todo mi rigor y mal talante!
Enváinense la pala y barrederas,
y amigos usque ad mortem.

PASTELEROPor San Pito,

que han de entrar todos, y la buena estrena 690
han de hacer a la hornada, que ya sale;
y más, que tengo de Alanís un cuero que se viene a las barbas y a los ojos.

MÚSICO 1 De miedo hace todo cuanto hace aqueste marión.

LUGO No importa nada. 695 Asgamos la ocasión por el harapo, por el hopo o copete, como dicen, ora la ofrezca el miedo o cortesía.
El señor pastelero es cortesísimo, y yo le soy amigo verdadero, 700
y hacer su gusto por mi gusto quiero.

(Éntranse todos. Sale ANTONIA con su manto, no muy aderezada, sino honesta.)

ANTONIA Si ahora yo le hallase en su aposento, no habría cosa de que más gustase;
quizá a solas le diría 705
alguna que le ablandase.

Atrevimiento es el mío:
pero dame esfuerzo y brío estos celos y este amor, que rinden con su rigor 710
al más esento albedrío.

Ésta es la casa, y la puerta, como pide mi deseo,
parece que está entreabierta;
mas, ¡ay!, que a sus quicios veo 715 yacer mi esperanza muerta.

Apenas puedo moverme;

pero, en fin, he de atreverme,
aunque tan cobarde estoy, porque en el punto de hoy 720 está el ganarme o perderme.

(Sale el inquisidor TELLO DE SANDOVAL, con ropa de levantar, rezando en unas Horas.)

TELLO *Deus in adiutorium meum intende, Domine, ad adiuvandum me festina.
Gloria Patri, et Filio et Spiritui Sancto, Sicut erat, etc.*

¿Quién está ahí? ¿Qué ruido es ése? ¿Quién está ahí?

ANTONIA ¡Ay desdichada de mí!
¿Qué es lo que me ha sucedido? 725

TELLO Pues, señora, ¿qué buscáis tan de mañana en mi casa?
Éste de madrugar pasa.
No os turbéis. ¿De qué os turbáis?

ANTONIA ¡Señor!

TELLO Adelante. ¿Qué es? 730
Proseguid vuestra razón.

ANTONIA Nunca la errada intención supo enderezar los pies.
A Lugo vengo a buscar.

TELLO ¿Mi criado?

ANTONIA Sí, señor. 735

TELLO ¿Tan de mañana?

ANTONIA El amor
tal vez hace madrugar.

TELLO ¿Bien le queréis?

ANTONIA No lo niego;
mas quiérole en parte buena.

TELLO El madrugar os condena. 740

ANTONIA Siempre es solícito el fuego.

TELLO En otra parte buscad materia que le apliquéis, que en mi casa no hallaréis sino toda honestidad; 745 y si el mozo da ocasión que le busquéis, yo haré que desde hoy más no os la dé.

ANTONIA Enójase sin razón vuesa merced; que, en mi alma, 750 que el mancebo es de manera, que puede llevar do quiera entre mil honestos palma.

Verdad es que él es travieso, matante, acuchillador; 755
pero, en cosas del amor, por un leño le confieso.

No me lleva a mí tras él Venus blanda y amorosa, sino su aguda ganchosa 760
y su acerado broquel.

TELLO ¿Es valiente?

ANTONIAMuy bien puedes sin escrúpulo igualalle, y aun quizá será agravialle,
a García de Paredes. 765

Y por esto este mocito
trae a todas las del trato muertas; por ser tan bravato;
que en lo demás es bendito.

TELLO Óigole. Escondeos aquí, 770 porque quiero hablar con él sin que os vea.

ANTONIA;Que no es él!

TELLOEs, sin duda; yo le oí.
Después os daré lugar para hablarle.

ANTONIASea en buen hora. 775

(Escóndese ANTONIA. Entra LUGO en cuerpo, pendiente a las espaldas el broquel y la daga, y trae el rosario en la mano.)

LUGO Mi señor suele a esta hora de ordinario madrugar.

Mirad si lo dije bien;
hele aquí. Yo apostaré que hay sermón do no pensé. 780 Acábase presto. Amén.

TELLO ¿De dónde venís, mancebo?

LUGO ¿De dó tengo de venir?

TELLO De matar y de herir, que esto para vos no es nuevo. 785

LUGO A nadie hiero ni mato.

TELLO Siete veces te he librado de la cárcel.

LUGO Ya es pasado
aquése, y tengo otro trato.

TELLO Más sé que hay de un mandamiento 790 para prenderte en la plaza.

LUGO Sí; mas ninguno amenaza a que dé coces al viento:

que todas son liviandades de mozo las que me culpan, 795
y a mí mismo me disculpan, pues no llegan a maldades.

Ellas son cortar la cara
a un valentón arrogante, una matraca picante, 800
aguda, graciosa y rara;
calcorrear diez pasteles
o cajas de diacitrón;
sustanciar una quistión entre dos jaques noveles; 805 el tener en la dehesa
dos vacas, y a veces tres, pero sin el interés
que en el trato se profesa; procurar que ningún rufo 810
se entone do yo estuviere, y que estime, sea quien fuere,
la suela de mi pantufo.

Estas y otras cosas tales hago por mi pasatiempo, 815 demás que rezo algún tiempo los psalmos penitenciales;
y, aunque peco de ordinario, pienso, y ello será así, dar buena cuenta de mí 820 por las de aqueste rosario.

TELLO Dime, simple: ¿y tú no ves que desa tu plata y cobre, es dar en limosna al pobre del puerco hurtado los pies? 825

Haces a Dios mil ofensas, como dices, de ordinario, ¿y con rezar un rosario, sin más, ir al cielo piensas?

Entra por un libro allí, 830 que está sobre aquella mesa.

Dime: ¿qué manera es ésta de andar, que jamás la vi?
¿Hacia atrás? ¿Eres cangrejo?
Vuélvete. ¿Qué novedad 835 es ésta?

LUGOEs curiosidad
y cortesano consejo que no vuelva el buen criado las espaldas al señor.

TELLOCrianza de tal tenor, 840
en ninguno la he notado.
Vuelve, digo.

LUGOYa me vuelvo:
que por esto el paso atrás daba.

TELLOEn que eres Satanás desde agora me resuelvo. 845 ¿Armado en casa? ¿Por suerte tienes en ella enemigos?
Sí tendrás, cual son testigos los ministros de la muerte que penden de tu pretina, 850 y en ellos has confirmado que el mozo descaminado, como tú, hacia atrás camina.
¡Bien iré a la Nueva España cargado de ti, malino; 855 bien a hacer este camino tu ingenio y virtud se amaña!
Si, en lugar de libros, llevas estas joyas que veo aquí, por cierto que das de ti 860 grandes e ingeniosas pruebas.

¡Bien responde la esperanza en que engañado he vivido al cuidado que he tenido de tu estudio y tu crianza! 865

¡Bien me pagas, bien procuras que tu humilde nacimiento en ti cobre nuevo asiento, menos bríos y venturas!

En balde será avisarte, 870
por ejemplos que te den, que nunca se avienen bien Aristóteles y Marte,

y que está en los aranceles de la discreción mejor 875 que no guardan un tenor las sùmulas y broqueles.

Espera, que quiero darte un testigo de quién eres, si es que hacen las mujeres 880
alguna fe en esta parte.

Salid, señora, y hablad
a vuestro duro diamante, honesto pero matante,
valiente pero rufián. 885

(Sale ANTONIA.)

LUGO Demonio, ¿quién te ha traído aquí? ¿Por qué me persigues, si ningún fruto consigues
de tu intento malnacido?

(Entra LAGARTIJA, asustado.)

TELLO Mancebo, ¿qué buscáis vos? 890 ¡Con sobresalto venís!
¿Qué respondéis? ¿Qué decís?

LAGARTIJA Digo que me valga Dios;
digo que al so Lugo busco.

TELLO Veíсле ahí: dadle el recado. 895

LAGARTIJA De cansado y de turbado, en las palabras me ofusco.

LUGO Sosiégate, Lagartija, y dime lo que me quieres.

LAGARTIJA Considerando quién eres, 900 mi alma se regocija
y espera de tu valor que saldrás con cualquier cosa.

LUGO Bien; ¿qué hay?

LAGARTIJA ¡A Carrascosa le llevan preso, señor! 905

LUGO ¿Al padre?

LAGARTIJA Al mismo.

LUGO¿Por dónde
le llevan? ¡Dímelo, acaba!

LAGARTIJA Poquito habrá que llegaba junto a la puerta del conde del Castellar.

LUGO¿Quién le lleva, 910
y por qué, si lo has sabido?

LAGARTIJA Por pendencia, a lo que he oído;
y el alguacil Villanueva, con dos corchetes, en peso le llevan, como a un ladrón. 915 ¡Quebrárate el corazón si le vieras!

LUGO¡Bueno es eso!
Camina y guía, y espera buen suceso deste caso, si los alcanza mi paso. 920

LAGARTIJA ¡Muera Villanueva!

LUGO¡Muera!

(Vase LAGARTIJA y LUGO, alborotados.)

TELLO ¿Qué padre es éste? ¿Por dicha, llevan a algún fraile preso?

ANTONIA No, señor, no es nada deso: que éste es padre de desdicha, 925 puesto que en su oficio gana más que dos padres, y aun tres.

TELLO Decidme de qué Orden es.

ANTONIA De los de la casa llana.
    Es alcaide, con perdón, 930
señor, de la mancebía,
a quien llaman padre hoy día las de nuestra profesión;
    su tenencia es casa llana, porque se allanan en ella 935
cuantas viven dentro della.

TELLO Bien el nombre se profana en eso de alcaide y padre, nombres honrados y buenos.

ANTONIA Quien vive en ella, a lo menos, 940 no estará sin padre y madre jamás.

TELLO Ahora bien: señora, id con Dios, que a este mancebo yo os le pondré como nuevo.

ANTONIA Tras él voy.

TELLO Id en buen hora. 945

(Sale el ALGUACIL que suele, con dos corchetes, que traen preso a CARRASCOSA, padre de la mancebía.)

PADRE Soy de los Carrascosas de Antequera, y tengo oficio honrado en la república,
y háseme de tratar de otra manera.

Solíanme hablar a mí por súplica, y es mal hecho y mal caso que se atreva 950 hacerme un alguacil afrenta pública.

Si a un personaje como yo se lleva de aqueste modo, ¿qué hará a un mal hombre?
Por Dios, que anda muy mal, sor Villanueva; mire que da ocasión a que se asombre 955 el que viere tratarme desta suerte.

ALGUACIL Calle, y la calle con más prisa escombre, porque le irá mejor, si en ello advierte.

(Entra a este instante LUGO, puesta la mano en la daga y el broquel; viene con él LAGARTIJA y LOBILLO.)

LUGO Todo viviente se tenga, y suelten a Carrascosa 960 para que conmigo venga,
y no se haga otra cosa,
aunque a su oficio convenga.

Ea, señor Villanueva, dé de contentarme prueba, 965
como otras veces lo hace.

ALGUACIL Señor Lugo, que me place.

CORCHETE; Juro a mí que se le lleva!

LUGO Padre Carrascosa, vaya
y éntrese en San Salvador, 970 y a su temor ponga raya.

LAGARTIJA Este Cid Campeador
mil años viva y bien haya.

ALGUACIL Cristóbal, eche de ver que no me quiero perder 975
y que le sirvo.

LUGO Está bien;
yo lo miraré muy bien
cuando fuere menester.

ALGUACIL ¡Agradézcalo al padrino, señor padre!

LOBILLO No haya más, 980
y siga en paz su camino.

CORCHETE ¿Este mozo es Barrabás, o es Orlando el Paladino?
¡No hay hacer baza con él!

(Éntrese el ALGUACIL y los corchetes.)

PADRE Nuevo español bravonel, 985 con tus bravatas bizarras me has librado de las garras de aquel tacaño Luzbel.

Yo me voy a retraer, por sí o por no. ¡Queda en paz, 990 honor de la hampa y ser!

LUGO Dices bien, y aqueso haz, que yo después te iré a ver.
¡Bien se ha negociado!

LOBILLO Bien;
sin sangre, sin hierro o fuego. 995

LUGO De cólera venía ciego, y enfadado.

LOBILLO Y yo también.
Vamos a cortarla aquí
con un polvo de lo caro.

LUGO En otras cosas reparo 1000 que me importan más a mí.
Ir quiero agora a jugar con Gilberto, un estudiante que siempre ha sido mi azar, hombre que ha de ser bastante 1005
a hacerme desesperar.
Cuanto tengo me ha ganado;
solamente me han quedado unas súmulas, y a fe que, si las pierdo, que sé 1010 cómo esquitarme al doblado.

LOBILLO Yo te daré una baraja hecha, con que le despojes sin que le dejes alhaja.

LUGO; Largo medio es el que escoges! 1015
Otro sé por do se ataja.
Juro a Dios omnipotente que, si las pierdo al presente, me he de hacer salteador.

LOBILLO; Resolución de valor 1020 y traza de hombre prudente!
Si pierdes, ¡ojalá pierdas!, yo mostraré en tu ejercicio que estas manos no son lerdas.

LAGARTIJA Siempre fue usado este oficio 1025 de personas que son cuerdas, industriosas y valientes, por los casos diferentes que se ofrecen de contino.

LOBILLO De seguirte determino. 1030

LAGARTIJA Por tuyo es bien que me cuentes.
Ya ves que mi voluntad es de alquimia, que se aplica al bien como a la maldad.

LUGO Esa verdad testifica 1035 tu fácil habilidad.
No te dejaré jamás;
y adiós.

LOBILLO Lugo, ¿qué te vas?

LUGO Luego seré con vosotros.

LAGARTIJA Pues, ¡sus!, vámonos nosotros 1040
a la ermita del Compás.

(Éntranse todos, y sale PERALTA, estudiante, y ANTONIA.)

ANTONIA Si ha de ser hallarle acaso, mis desdichas son mayores.

PERALTA ¿Son celos, o son amores los que aquí os guían el paso, 1045 señora Antonia?

ANTONIA No sé,
si no es rabia, lo que sea.

PERALTA Por cierto, muy mal se emplea en tal sujeto tal fe.

ANTONIA No hay parte tan escondida, 1050
do no se sepa mi historia.

PERALTA Hácela a todos notoria el veros andar perdida buscando siempre a este hombre.

ANTONIA¿Hombre? Si él lo fuera, fuera 1055 descanso mi angustia fiera.
Mas no tiene más del nombre;
    connigo, a lo menos.

PERALTA¿Cómo?

ANTONIAEsto, sin duda, es así; que Amor le hirió para mí 1060
con las saetas de plomo.
    No hay yelo que se le iguale.

PERALTAPues, ¿por qué le queréis tanto?

ANTONIAPorque me alegro y me espanto de lo que con hombres vale. 1065 ¿Hay más que ver que le dan parias los más arrogantes, de la heria los matantes,
los bravos de San Román?
    ¿Y hay más que vivir segura, 1070 la que fuere su respeto, de verse en ningún aprieto de los de nuestra soltura?
    Quien tiene nombre de suya, vive alegre y respetada; 1075
a razón enamorada,
no hay ninguna que la arguya.
(Vase ANTONIA.)

PERALTA Estas señoras del trato precian más, en conclusión, un socarra valentón 1080 que un Medoro gallinato.

En efecto, gran lisi3n
es la desta moza loca.
Ya la campanilla toca;
entr3monos a lici3n. 1085

(Entra PERALTA, y salen GILBERTO, estudiante, y LUGO.)

GILBERTO Ya ir3s contento, y ya puedes dejar de gru3nir un rato, y ya puedes dar barato
tal, que parezcan mercedes.

M3s me has ganado este d3a, 1090 que yo en ciento te he ganado.

LUGOAs3 es verdad.

GILBERTOQue buen grado
le venga a mi cortes3a.

¿Yo tus s3mulas? ¡Estaba loco, sin duda ninguna! 1095

LUGOSucesos son de fortuna.

GILBERTOYa yo los adivinaba; porque al tah3r no le dura mucho tiempo el alegr3a, y el que de naipes se f3a, 1100 tiene al quitar la ventura.

Hoy de cualquiera quisti3n has de salir vitorioso;
y adi3s, se3or ganancioso, que yo me vuelvo a lici3n. 1105

(Éntrase GILBERTO y sale el MARIDO de la MUJER que salió primero.)

MARIDO Señor Lugo, a gran ventura tengo este encuentro.

LUGO Señor,
¿qué hay de nuevo?

MARIDO Aquel temor
de ser ofendido aún dura.

Tengo a mi consorte amada 1110 retirada en una aldea,
y para que el sol la vea,
apenas halla la entrada.

Con aquel recato vivo que me mandasteis tener, 1115 y muérome por saber
de quién tanto mal recibo.

LUGO Ya aquel que pudo ponerlos en cuidado está de suerte que llegará al de la muerte, 1120
y no al punto de ofenderos.

Quietad con este seguro el celoso ansiado pecho.

MARIDO Con eso voy satisfecho, y de serviros lo juro. 1125

Hacer podéis de mi hacienda, Lugo, a vuestra voluntad.

LUGO Pasó mi necesidad,
no hay ninguna que me ofenda;

y así, sólo en recompensa 1130
recibo vuestro deseo.

MARIDONo aquel estilo en vos veo que el vulgo, engañado, piensa.
Adiós, señor Lugo.
(Vase.)

LUGOAdiós.

(Entra LAGARTIJA.)

Pues, Lagartija, ¿a qué vienes? 1135

LAGARTIJA;Qué gentil remanso tienes!
¿No ves que dará las dos, (Reza LUGO.)
y te está esperando toda la chirinola hampesca?
Ven, que la tarde hace fresca 1140
y a los tragos se acomoda.
¿Cuando te están esperando
tus amigos con más gusto, andas, cual si fueras justo, avemarías tragando? 1145
O sé rufián, o sé santo;
mira lo que más te agrada.
Voime, porque ya me enfada tanta Gloria y Patri tanto.
(Vase LAGARTIJA.)

LUGO Solo quedo, y quiero entrar 1150 en cuentas conmigo a solas, aunque lo impidan las olas donde temo naufragar.

Yo hice voto, si hoy perdía, de irme a ser salteador: 1155 claro y manifiesto error
de una ciega fantasía.

Locura y atrevimiento
fue el peor que se pensó, puesto que nunca obligó 1160 mal voto a su cumplimiento.

Pero, ¿dejaré por esto
de haber hecho una maldad, adonde mi voluntad
echó de codicia el resto? 1165

No, por cierto. Mas, pues sé que contrario con contrario se cura muy de ordinario, contrario voto haré,
y así, le hago de ser 1170
religioso. Ea, Señor; veis aquí a este salteador de contrario parecer.

Virgen, que Madre de Dios fuiste por los pecadores, 1175 ya os llaman salteadores;
oídlos, Señora, vos.

Ángel de mi guarda, ahora es menester que acudáis, y el temor fortalezcáis 1180 que en mi alma amarga mora.

Ánimas de purgatorio,
de quien continua memoria
he tenido, séaos notoria mi angustia, y mi mal notorio; 1185 y, pues que la caridad entre esas llamas no os deja, pedid a Dios que su oreja preste a mi necesidad.

Psalmos de David benditos, 1190 cuyos misterios son tantos que sobreceden a cuantos renglones tenéis escritos, vuestrs conceptos me animen, que he advertido veces tantas, 1195

a que yo ponga mis plantas donde al alma no lastimen:
    no en los montes salteando con mal cristiano decoro, sino en los claustros y el coro 1200
desnudas, y yo rezando.
    ¡Ea, demonios: por mil modos a todos os desafío,
y en mi Dios bueno confío que os he de vencer a todos! 1205

(Éntrase, y suenan a este instante las chirimías; descúbrese una gloria o, por lo menos, un ÁNGEL, que, en cesando la música, diga:)

ÁNGEL Cuando un pecador se vuelve a Dios con humilde celo, se hacen fiestas en el cielo.

FIN DEL ACTO PRIMERO

Segunda jornada

Salen dos figuras de ninfas vestidas bizarramente, cada una con su tarjeta en el brazo: en la una viene escrito CURIOSIDAD; en la otra, COMEDIA.

CURIOSIDAD Comedia.

COMEDIA Curiosidad, ¿qué me quieres?

CURIOSIDAD Informarme
qué es la causa por que dejas de usar tus antiguos trajes, del coturno en las tragedias, 5 del zueco en las manuales comedias, y de la toga en las que son principales;
cómo has reducido a tres los cinco actos que sabes 10 que un tiempo te componían ilustre, risueña y grave;
ahora aquí representas,
y al mismo momento en Flandes;
truecas sin discurso alguno 15 tiempos, teatros, lugares.
Véote, y no te conozco;
dame de ti nuevas tales que te vuelva a conocer, pues que soy tu amigo grande. 20

COMEDIA Los tiempos mudan las cosas y perficionan las artes,

y añadir a lo inventado no es dificultad notable.
Buena fui pasados tiempos, 25
y en éstos, si los mirares, no soy mala, aunque desdigo de aquellos preceptos graves que me dieron y dejaron en sus obras admirables 30 Séneca, Terencio y Plauto, y otros griegos que tú sabes.
He dejado parte dellos,
y he también guardado parte, porque lo quiere así el uso, 35 que no se sujeta al arte.
Ya represento mil cosas,
no en relación, como de antes, sino en hecho; y así, es fuerza que haya de mudar lugares; 40 que, como acontecen ellas en muy diferentes partes, voime allí donde acontecen, disculpa del disparate.
Ya la comedia es un mapa, 45 donde no un dedo distante verás a Londres y a Roma, a Valladolid y a Gante.
Muy poco importa al oyente que yo en un punto me pase 50 desde Alemania a Guinea sin del teatro mudarme;
el pensamiento es ligero:
bien pueden acompañarme con él doquiera que fuere, 55 sin perderme ni cansarse.
Yo estaba ahora en Sevilla, representando con arte
la vida de un joven loco, apasionado de Marte, 60
rufián en manos y lengua, pero no que se enfrascase en admitir de perdidas

el trato y ganancia infame.
Fue estudiante y rezador 65 de psalmos penitenciales, y el rosario ningún día se le pasó sin rezalle.
Su conversión fue en Toledo, y no será bien te enfade 70 que, contando la verdad, en Sevilla se relate.
En Toledo se hizo clérigo,
y aquí, en Méjico, fue fraile, adonde el discurso ahora 75 nos trujo aquí por el aire.
El sobrenombre de Lugo
mudó en Cruz, y es bien se llame fray Cristóbal de la Cruz desde este punto adelante. 80 A Méjico y a Sevilla
he juntado en un instante, surciendo con la primera
ésta y la tercera parte:
una de su vida libre, 85
otra de su vida grave,
otra de su santa muerte
y de sus milagros grandes.
Mal pudiera yo traer,
a estar atendida al arte, 90 tanto oyente por las ventas
y por tanto mar sin naves.
Da lugar, Curiosidad, que el bendito fraile sale con fray Antonio, un corista 95 bueno, pero con donaires.
Fue en el siglo Lagartija,
y en la religión es sacre, de cuyo vuelo se espera que ha de dar al cielo alcance. 100

CURIOSIDAD Aunque no lo quedo en todo, quedo satisfecho en parte,
amiga; por esto quiero, sin replicarte, escucharte.

(Éntranse.)

(Sale FRAY CRISTÓBAL, en hábito de Santo Domingo, y FRAY ANTONIO también.)

ANTONIO Sepa su paternidad... 105

CRUZ Entone más bajo el punto de cortesía.

ANTONIO En verdad,
padre mío, que barrunto que tiene su caridad
de bronce el cuerpo, y de suerte, 110 que tarde ha de hallar la muerte entrada para acaballe, según da en ejercitalle
en rigor áspero y fuerte.

CRUZ Es bestia la carne nuestra, 115
y, si rienda se le da,
tan desbocada se muestra, que nadie la volverá
de la siniestra a la diestra.

Obra por nuestros sentidos 120 nuestra alma: así están tapidos y no sutiles; es fuerza que a la carrera se tuerza por donde van los perdidos.

La lujuria está en el vino, 125
y a la crápula y regalo todo vicio le es vecino.

ANTONIO Yo, en ayunando, estoy malo, flojo, indevoto y mohíno.

De un otro talle y manera 130 me hallaba yo cuando era en Sevilla tu mandil;
que hacen ingenio sutil las blancas roscas de Utrera.

¡Oh uvas albarazadas, 135 que en el pago de Triana por la noche sois cortadas, y os halláis a la mañana tan frescas y aljofaradas, que no hay cosa más hermosa, 140 ni fruta que a la golosa voluntad así despierte!
¡No espero verme en la suerte que ya se pasó dichosa!

CRUZ Cierta, fray Antonio amigo, 145 que esa consideración es lazo que el enemigo
le pone a su perdición.
Esté atento a lo que digo.

ANTONIO Consideraba yo agora 150
dónde estará la señora Librija, o la Salmerona,
cada cual, por su persona, buena para pecadora.

¡Quién supiera de Ganchoso, 155

del Lobillo y de Terciado, y del Patojo famoso!
¡Oh feliz siglo dorado, tiempo alegre y venturoso, adonde la libertad 160
brindaba a la voluntad
del gusto más esquisito!

CRUZ;Calle; de Dios sea bendito!

ANTONIO Calle su paternidad y déjeme, que con esto 165 evacuo un pésimo humor que me es amargo y molesto.

CRUZ Ciertó que tengo temor, por verle tan descompuesto, que ha de apostatar un día, 170 que para los dos sería
noche de luto cubierta.

ANTONIO No saldrá por esa puerta jamás mi melencolía;
no me he de estender a más 175 que a quejarme y a sentir el ausencia del Compás.

CRUZ;Que tal te dejas decir, fray Antonio! Loco estás; que en el juicio empeora 180 quien tal acuerdo atesora en su memoria vilmente.

ANTONIO Rufián corriente y moliente fuera yo en Sevilla agora, y tuviera en la dehesa 185 dos yeguas, y aun quizá tres, diestras en el arte aviesa.

CRUZ De que en esas cosas des,
sabe Dios lo que me pesa;
mas yo haré la penitencia 190
de tu rasgada conciencia.
Quédate, Antonio, y advierte que de la vida a la muerte hay muy poca diferencia:
quien vive bien, muere bien, 195
quien mal vive, muere mal.

ANTONIO Digo, padre, que está bien; pero no has de hacer caudal de mí, ni enfado te den mis palabras, que no son 200 nacidas del corazón, que en sola la lengua yacen.

CRUZ Dan las palabras y hacen fee de cuál es la intención.

(Entra un corista llamado FRAY ÁNGEL; señálase con sola la A.)

A Padre maestro, el prior 205 llama a vuestra reverencia, y espera en el corredor.

(Vase luego el PADRE CRUZ.)

ANTONIO Más presto es a la obediencia que el sol a dar resplandor.

Padre fray Ángel, espere. 210

ADiga presto qué me quiere.
(Enséñale hasta una docena de naipes.)

ANTONIO Mire.

A¿Naipes? ¡Perdición!

ANTONIO No se admire, hipocritón, que el caso no lo requiere.

A ¿Quién te los dio, fray Antonio? 215

ANTONIO Una devota que tengo.

A¿Devota? ¡Será el demonio!

ANTONIO Nunca con él bien me avengo; levántasle testimonio.

A ¿Están justos?

ANTONIO Pecadores 220
creo que están los señores, pues, para cumplir cuarenta, entiendo faltan los treinta.

ASi fueran algo mejores, buscáramos un rincón 225
donde podernos holgar.

ANTONIOY halláramosle a sazón:
que nunca suele faltar,
para hacer mal, ocasión.
¡Bien hayan los gariteros 230 magníficos y groseros, que con un ánimo franco tienen patente el tabanco para blancos y fulleros!

Vamos de aquí, que el prior 235 viene allí con el señor que lo fue de nuestro Cruz, gran caballero andaluz, letrado y visitador.

(Éntranse.)

(Salen el PRIOR y TELLO DE SANDOVAL.)

PRIOR Él es un ángel en la tierra, cierto, 240
y vive entre nosotros de manera, como en las soledades del desierto;
no desmaya ni afloja en la carrera del cielo, adonde, por llegar más presto, corre desnudo y pobre, a la ligera; 245 humilde sobremodo, y tan honesto, que admira a quien le vee en edad florida tan recatado en todo y tan compuesto.
En efecto, señor, él hace vida de quien puede esperar muerte dichosa, 250

y gloria que no pueda ser medida.

Su oración es continua y fervorosa;
su ayuno, inimitable, y su obediencia, presta, sencilla, humilde y hacendosa.

Resucitado ha en la penitencia 255 de los antiguos padres, que en Egipto, en ella acrisolaron la conciencia.

TELLO Por millares de lenguas sea bendito el nombre de mi Dios; a este mancebo volvió de do pensé que iba precito. 260

Vuélvome a España, y en el alma llevo tan grande soledad de su persona, que quiero exagerarla, y no me atrevo.

PRIOR Vuesa merced nos deja una corona que ha de honrar este reino mientras ciña 265 el cerco azul el hijo de Latona.

Está entre aquestos bárbaros aún niña la fe cristiana, y faltan los obreros que cultiven aquí de Dios la viña, y la leche mejor, y los aceros, 270 que a entrambas les hará mayor provecho.

Es ejemplo de estos jornaleros, que es menester que tenga sano el pecho el médico que cura a lo divino, para dejar al cielo satisfecho. 275

(Entran el PADRE CRUZ y FRAY ANTONIO.)

Aquesta compostura de continuo trae nuestro padre Cruz, tan mansa y grave, que alegre y triste sigue su camino:
que en él lo triste con lo alegre cabe.

CRUZ Deo gracias.

PRIOR Por siempre, amén, 280 éstas y todas naciones
con viva fe se las den.

CRUZ Suplícote me perdonen, señor, si no he andado bien, faltando a la cortesía 285 que a tu presencia debía.

TELLO Padre fray Cristóbal mío, esto toca en desvarío,
porque toca en demasía:
yo soy el que he de postrarme 290
a sus pies.

CRUZ Por el oficio
que tengo, puedo escusarme de haber dado poco indicio de cortés en no humillarme;
y más a quien debo tanto, 295 que, a poder decir el cuánto, fuera poco.

TELLO Yo confieso
que quedo deudor en eso.

PRIOR Bien cuadra cortés y santo.

TELLO A España parto mañana; 300 si me manda alguna cosa, haréla de buena gana.

CRUZTu jornada sea dichosa:
viento en popa y la mar llana.
Yo, mis pobres oraciones 305
a las celestes regiones enviaré por tu camino, puesto, señor, que imagino que en recio tiempo te pones a navegar.

TELLOLa derrota 310
está de fuerza que siga
de la ya aprestada flota.

CRUZNi el huracán te persiga, ni toques en la derrota Bermuda, ni en la Florida, 315 de mil cuerpos homicida, adonde, contra natura,
es el cuerpo sepultura
viva del cuerpo sin vida.
A Cádiz, como desees, 320 llegues sano, y en San Lúcar desembarques tus preseas, y, en virtudes hecho un Fúcar, presto en Sevilla te veas, donde a mi padre dirás 325 lo que quisieres, y harás por él lo que mereciere.

TELLOHaré lo que me pidiere, y si es poco, haré yo más.

Y ahora, por paga pido 330 de aquella buena intención que en su crianza he tenido, padre, que su bendición me deje aquí enriquecido de esperanzas, con que pueda 335 esperar que me suceda
el viaje tan a cuento, que sople propicio el viento,
y la fortuna esté queda.

CRUZ La de Dios encierre en ésta 340 tanta ventura, que sea
la jornada alegre y presta, sin que en tormenta se vea ni en la calma que molesta.

ANTONIO Si viere allá a la persona... 345

TELLO¿De quién?

ANTONIODe la Salmerona, encájele un besapiés
de mi parte, y dos o tres buces, a modo de mona.

PRIOR Fray Antonio, ¿cómo es esto? 350 ¿Cómo delante de mí
se muestra tan descompuesto?

ANTONIOOcurrióseme esto aquí, y vase el señor tan presto, que temí que me faltara 355

lugar do le encomendara estos y otros besamanos:
que poder ser cortesanos
los frailes es cosa clara.

PRIOR ¡Calle, y a vernos después! 360

TELLO Por cierto, que no merece castigo por ser cortés.

PRIOR Cierta enfermedad padece en la lengua.

ANTONIO Ello así es;
pero nunca hablo cosa 365
que toque en escandalosa;
que hablo a la vizcaína.

PRIOR Yo hablaré a la diciplina, lengua breve y compendiosa.

TELLO Deme su paternidad 370 licencia, y aqueste enojo
no toque en riguridad.

ANTONIO Si conociera al Patojo, hiciérame caridad
de saludalle también 375 de mi parte. Aunque me den diciplina porque calle, no puedo no encomendalle aquello que me está bien.

PRIOR Vuesa merced vaya en paz, 380 que a cólera no me mueve plática que da solaz,
y éste, por mozo, se atreve,
y él de suyo se es locuaz;
y sean estos abrazos 385 muestra de los santos lazos con que caridad nos liga.
(Abraza a los dos.)

TELLOMi amor, padre Cruz, le obliga
a que apriete más los brazos, y veisme que me enternezco. 390

CRUZDios te guíe, señor mío, que a su protección te ofrezco.

TELLOQue me dará yo confío, por vos, más bien que merezco.
(Vase TELLO.)

PRIOR Venga, fray Antonio, venga. 395

CRUZDéjele que se detenga conmigo, padre, aquí un poco.

PRIOREn buen hora; y, si está loco, haga cómo seso tenga.
(Vase el PRIOR.)

CRUZ ¿Que es posible, fray Antonio, 400 que ha de caer en tal mengua, que consienta que su lengua se la gobierne el demonio?

Cierto que pone mancilla ver que el demonio maldito 405 le trae las ollas de Egipto en lo que dejó en Sevilla.

De las cosas ya pasadas, mal hechas, se ha de acordar, no para se deleitar, 410
sino para ser lloradas;

de aquella gente perdida
no debe acordarse más, ni del Compás, si hay compás do se vive sin medida. 415

Sólo dé gracias a Dios, que, por su santa clemencia, nos dio de la penitencia la estrecha tabla a los dos, para que, de la tormenta 420
y naufragar casi cierto,
de la religión el puerto tocásemos sin afrenta.

ANTONIO Yo miraré lo que hablo de aquí adelante más cuerdo, 425 pues conozco lo que pierdo, y sé lo que gana el diablo.

Ruéguele, padre, al prior que en su furia se mitigue, y no al peso me castigue 430 de mi descuidado error.

CRUZ Vamos, que yo le daré bastantísima disculpa de su yerro, y por su culpa y las mías rezaré. 435

(Éntranse todos.)

*(Sale una dama llamada DOÑA ANA TREVIÑO, un MÉDICO y dos criados.
(Todo esto es verdad de la historia).)*

MÉDICO Vuesa merced sepa cierto que aquesta su enfermedad es de muy ruin calidad;
hablo en ella como experto.

    Mi oficio obliga a decillo, 440 cause o no cause pasión:
que entre razón y razón pondrá la Parca el cuchillo.

    Hablando se ha de quedar muerta; y aquesto le digo 445 como médico y amigo
que no la quiere engañar.

DOÑA ANA Pues a mí no me parece que estoy tan mala. ¿Qué es esto?
¿Cómo me anuncia tan presto 450
la muerte?

MÉDICO El pulso me ofrece, los ojos y la color,
esta verdad a la clara.

DOÑA ANA En los ojos de mi cara suele mirarse el Amor. 455

MÉDICO Vuesa merced se confiese, y quédense aparte burlas.

CRIADO 1 Señor, si es que no te burlas, recio mandamiento es ése.

MÉDICO No me suelo yo burlar 460 en casos deste jaez.

DOÑA ANA Podrá su merced esta vez, si quisiere, perdonar,
que ni quiero confesarme, ni hacer cosa que me diga. 465

MÉDICO A más mi oficio me obliga,
y adiós.

DOÑA ANA Él querrá ayudarme.

(Vase el MÉDICO.)

Pesado médico y necio,
siempre cansa y amohína.

CRIADO 2 Crió Dios la medicina, 470
y hase de tener en precio.

DOÑA ANA La medicina yo alabo, pero los médicos no,
porque ninguno llegó
con lo que es la ciencia al cabo. 475 Algo fatigada estoy.

CRIADO 1 Procura desenfadarte, esparcerte y alegrarte.

DOÑA ANA Al campo pienso de ir hoy.

Parece que están templando 480 una guitarra allí fuera.

CRIADO 1 ¿Será Ambrosio?

DOÑA ANA Sea quienquiera; escuchad, que va cantando.

(Cantan dentro.)

Muerte y vida me dan pena;
no sé qué remedio escoja: 485 que si la vida me enoja, tampoco la muerte es buena.

DOÑA ANA Con todo, es mejor vivir: que, en los casos desiguales, el mayor mal de los males 490 se sabe que es el morir.

Calle el que canta, que atierra oír tratar de la muerte:
que no hay tesoro de suerte en tal espacio de tierra. 495

La muerte y la mocedad
hacen dura compañía,
como la noche y el día,
la salud y enfermedad;
y edad poca y maldad mucha, 500
y voz de muerte a deshora, ¡ay del alma pecadora que impenitente la escucha!

CRIADO 1 No me contenta mi ama; nunca la he visto peor: 505 fuego es ya, no es resplandor el que en su vista derrama.

(Éntranse todos.)

(Sale el PADRE FRAY ANTONIO.)

ANTONIO Mientras el fraile no llega a ser sacerdote, pasa vida pobre, estrecha, escasa, 510 de quien a veces reniega.

Tiene allá el predicador sus devotas y sus botas, y el presentado echa gotas y suda con el prior; 515 mas el novicio y corista en el coro y en la escoba sus apetitos adoba,
diciendo con el Salmista:
Et potum meum cum fletu miscebam.

Pero bien será callar, 520 pues sé que muchos convienen en que las paredes tienen oídos para escuchar.

La celda del padre Cruz está abierta, ciertamente; 525 ver quiero este penitente, que está a oscuras y es de luz.

(Abre la celda; parece el PADRE CRUZ, arrobado, hincado de rodillas, con un crucifijo en la mano.)

¡Mirad qué postura aquella del bravo rufián divino, y si hallará camino 530
Satanás para rompella!

Arrobado está, y es cierto que, en tanto que él está así, los sentidos tiene en sí tan muertos como de un muerto. 535

(Suenan desde lejos guitarras y sonajas, y vocería de regocijo. (Todo esto desta máscara y visión fue verdad, que así lo cuenta la historia del santo).)

Pero ¿qué música es ésta?
¿Qué guitarras y sonajas, pues los frailes se hacen rajas?
¿Mañana es alguna fiesta?

Aunque música a tal hora 540 no es decente en el convento.
Miedo de escuchalla siento; ¡válgame Nuestra Señora!

(Suena más cerca.)

¡Padre nuestro, despierte, que se hunde el mundo todo 545 de música! No hallo modo bueno alguno con que acierte.

La música no es divina
porque, según voy notando, al modo vienen cantando 550
rufo y de jacarandina.

(Entran a este instante seis con sus máscaras, vestidos como ninfas, lascivamente, y los que han de cantar y tañer, con máscaras de demonios vestidos a lo antiguo, y hacen su danza. (Todo esto fue así, que no es visión supuesta, apócrifa ni mentirosa).)

(Cantan:)

No hay cosa que sea gustosa sin Venus blanda, amorosa.
No hay comida que así agrade, ni que sea tan sabrosa, 555
como la que guisa Venus, en todos gustos curiosa.
Ella el verde amargo jugo
de la amarga hiel sazona, y de los más tristes tiempos 560 vuelve muy dulces las horas;
quien con ella trata, ríe,
y quien no la trata, llora.
Pasa cual sombra en la vida, sin dejar de sí memoria, 565 ni se eterniza en los hijos, y es como el árbol sin hojas, sin flor ni fruto, que el suelo con ninguna cosa adorna.
Y por esto, en cuanto el sol 570
ciñe y el ancho mar moja,
*no hay cosa que sea gustosa
sin Venus blanda, amorosa.*

(El PADRE CRUZ, sin abrir los ojos, dice:)

CRUZ No hay cosa que sea gustosa sin la dura cruz preciosa. 575
Si por esta senda estrecha que la cruz señala y forma

no pone el pie el que camina a la patria venturosa, cuando menos lo pensare, 580
de improviso y a deshora, cairá de un despeñadero del abismo en las mazmorras.
Torpeza y honestidad nunca las manos se toman, 585 ni pueden caminar juntas por esta senda fragosa.
Y yo sé que en todo el cielo,
ni en la tierra, aunque espaciosa,
no hay cosa que sea gustosa 590
sin la dura cruz preciosa.

MÚSICA ¡Dulces días, dulces ratos los que en Sevilla se gozan;
y dulces comodidades
de aquella ciudad famosa, 595
do la libertad campea, y en sucinta y amorosa manera Venus camina
y a todos se ofrece toda, y risueño el Amor canta 600 con mil pasajes de gloria:
No hay cosa que sea gustosa
sin Venus blanda, amorosa.

CRUZ Vade retro!, Satanás, que para mi gusto ahora 605
no hay cosa que sea gustosa
sin la dura cruz preciosa.

(Vanse los demonios, gritando.)

ANTONIO Hacerme quiero mil cruces;
he visto lo que aún no creo.
Afuera el temor, pues veo 610 que viene gente con luces.

CRUZ ¿Qué hace aquí, fray Antonio?

ANTONIO Estaba mirando atento una danza de quien siento que la guiaba el demonio. 615

CRUZ Debía de estar durmiendo, y soñaba.

ANTONIO No, a fe mía, padre Cruz, yo no dormía.

(Entran, a este punto, dos ciudadanos, con sus lanternas, y el PRIOR.)

CIUDADANO 1 Señor, como voy diciendo, pone gran lástima oílla: 620 que no hay razón de provecho para enternecerle el pecho ni de su error divertilla;
y, pues habemos venido
a tal hora a este convento 625 por remedio, es argumento que es el daño muy crecido.

PRIOR Que diga que Dios no puede perdonalla, caso extraño;
es ése el mayor engaño 630 que al pecador le sucede.

Fray Cristóbal de la Cruz
está en pie, quizá adivino que ha de hacer este camino, y en él dar a este alma luz. 635

Padre, su paternidad
con estos señores vaya, y cuanto pueda la raya
suba de su caridad,
que anda muy listo el demonio 640 con un alma pecadora.
Vaya con el padre.

ANTONIO¿Ahora?

PRIORNo replique, fray Antonio.

ANTONIO Vamos, que a mí se me alcanza poco o nada, o me imagino 645 que he de ver en el camino la no fantástica danza
de denantes.

CRUZCalle un poco,
si puede.

CIUDADANO 2Señor, tardamos,
y será bien que nos vamos. 650

ANTONIOTodos me tienen por loco en aqueste monesterio.

CRUZNo hable entre dientes; camine,

y esas danzas no imagine, que carecen de misterio. 655

PRIOR Vaya con Dios, padre mío.

CIUDADANO 1 Con él vamos muy contentos.

CRUZ; Favorezca mis intentos
Dios, de quien siempre confío!

(Sale un CLÉRIGO y DOÑA ANA DE TREVIÑO, y acompañamiento.)

CLÉRIGO Si así la cama la cansa, 660 puede salir a esta sala.

DOÑA ANA Cualquiera parte halla mala la que en ninguna descansa.

CLÉRIGO Lleguen esas sillas.

DOÑA ANA Cierto,
que me tiene su porfía, 665 padre, helada, yerta y fría, y que ella sola me ha muerto.

No me canse ni se canse en persuadirme otra cosa, que no soy tan amorosa 670 que con lágrimas me amanse.

¡No hay misericordia alguna que me valga en suelo o cielo!

CLÉRIGO Toda la verdad del cielo
a tu mentira repugna. 675

En Dios no hay menoridad de poder, y si la hubiera, su menor parte pudiera
curar la mayor maldad.

Es Dios un bien infinito, 680
y, a respeto de quien es, cuanto imaginas y ves viene a ser punto finito.

DOÑA ANA Los atributos de Dios son iguales; no os entiendo, 685 ni de entenderos pretendo.
Matáisme, y cansáisos vos.

¡Bien fuera que Dios ahora, sin que en nada reparara, sin más ni más, perdonara 690
a tan grande pecadora!

No hace cosa mal hecha,
y así, no ha de hacer aquésta.

CLÉRIGO ¿Hay locura como ésta?

DOÑA ANA No gritéis, que no aprovecha. 695

(Entran, a este instante, el PADRE CRUZ y FRAY ANTONIO, y pónese el PADRE a escuchar lo que está diciendo el CLÉRIGO, el cual prosigue diciendo:)

CLÉRIGO Pues nació para salvarme Dios, y en cruz murió enclavado, perdonará mi pecado,
si está en menos perdonarme.

De su parte has de esperar, 700 que de la tuya no esperes, el gran perdón que no quieres, que Él se extrema en perdonar.

Deus cui proprium est misereri semper, et parcere, et misericordia eius super omnia opera eius.

Y el rey, divino cantor, las alabanzas que escuchas, 705 después que ha dicho otras muchas dice de aqueste tenor:

Misericordias tuas, Domine, in aeternum cantabo.

La mayor ofensa haces
a Dios que puedes hacer:
que, en no esperar y temer, 710
parece que le deshaces,

pues vas contra el atributo que Él tiene de omnipotente, pecado el más insolente, más sin razón y más bruto. 715

En dos pecados se ha visto, que Judas quiso estremarse, y fue el mayor ahorcarse que el haber vendido a Cristo.

Hácesle agravio, señora, 720 grande en no esperar en Él, porque es paloma sin hiel con quien su pecado llora.

Cor contritum et humiliatum, Deus, non despicias.

El corazón humillado, Dios por jamás le desprecia; 725
antes, en tanto le precia que es fee y caso averiguado que se regocija el cielo cuando con nueva conciencia se vuelve a hacer penitencia 730 un pecador en el suelo.

El padre Cruz está aquí, buen suceso en todo espero.

CRUZ Prosiga, padre, que quiero estarle atento.

DOÑA ANA ¡Ay de mí, 735 que otro moledor acude
a acrecentar mi tormento!
¡Pues no ha de mudar mi intento, aunque más trabaje y sude!
¿Qué me queréis, padre, vos, 740 que tan hinchado os llegáis?
¡Bien parece que ignoráis cómo para mí no hay Dios!
No hay Dios, digo, y mi malicia hace, con mortal discordia, 745 que esconda misericordia el rostro, y no la justicia.

CRUZ Dixit insipiens in corde suo: non est Deus.
Vuestra humildad, señor, sea servida de encomendarme a Dios, que quiero mostrarme 750 sucesor en su pelea.

(Híncanse de rodillas el CLÉRIGO, FRAY ANTONIO y el PADRE CRUZ, y los circustantes todos.)

¡Dichosa del cielo puerta, que levantó la caída
y resucitó la vida
de nuestra esperanza muerta! 755 ¡Pide a tu parto dichoso que ablande aquí estas entrañas, y muestre aquí las hazañas de su corazón piadoso!
Et docebo iniquos vias tuas, et impii ad te convertentur.

Mi señora doña Ana de Treviño, 760 estando ya tan cerca la partida del otro mundo, pobre es el aliño que veo en esta amarga despedida.
Blancas las almas como blanco armiño han de entrar en la patria de la vida, 765 que ha de durar por infinitos siglos, y negras donde habitan los vestiglos.
Mirad dónde queréis vuestra alma vaya:
escogedle la patria a vuestro gusto.

DOÑA ANA La justicia de Dios me tiene a raya: 770 no me ha de perdonar, por ser tan justo;
al malo la justicia le desmaya;
no habita la esperanza en el injusto pecho del pecador, ni es bien que habite.

CRUZ Tal error de tu pecho Dios le quite. 775 En la hora que la muerte
a la pobre vida alcanza, se ha de asir de la esperanza el alma que en ello advierte; que, en término tan estrecho, 780
y de tan fuerte rigor, no es posible que el temor sea al alma de provecho.
El esperar y el temer en la vida han de andar juntos; 785 pero en la muerte otros puntos han de guardar y tener.
El que, en el palenque puesto, teme a su contrario, yerra;
y está, el que animoso cierra, 790
a la vitoria dispuesto.
En el campo estáis, señora;
la guerra será esta tarde;
mirad que no os acobarde

el enemigo en tal hora. 795

DOÑA ANA Sin armas, ¿cómo he de entrar en el trance riguroso, siendo el contrario mañoso
y duro de contrastar?

CRUZ Confiad en el padrino 800
y en el juez, que es mi Dios.

DOÑA ANA Parece que dais los dos en un mismo desatino.

Dejadme, que, en conclusión, tengo el alma de manera 805 que no quiero, aunque Dios quiera, gozar de indulto y perdón.

¡Ay, que se me arranca el alma!
¡Desesperada me muero!

CRUZ Demonio, en Jesús espero 810 que no has de llevar la palma desta empresa. ¡Oh Virgen pura!
¿Cómo vuestro auxilio tarda?
¡Ángel bueno de su guarda, ved que el malo se apresura! 815

Padre mío, no desista
de la oración, rece más, que es arma que a Satanás le vence en cualquier conquista.

ANTONIO Cuerpo ayuno y desvelado 820 fácilmente se empereza,
y, más que reza, bosteza,
indevoto y desmayado.

DOÑA ANA    ¡Que tan sin obras se halle mi alma!

CRUZ Si fee recobras, 825 yo haré que te sobren obras.

DOÑA ANA ¿Hállanse, a dicha, en la calle?
¿Y las que he hecho hasta aquí han sido sino de muerte?

CRUZ Escucha un poco, y advierte 830 lo que ahora diré.

DOÑA ANA Di.

CRUZ    Un religioso que ha estado gran tiempo en su religión, y con limpio corazón siempre su regla ha guardado, 835 haciendo tal penitencia que mil veces el prior le manda tiemple el rigor en virtud de la obediencia;
    y él, con ayunos continuos, 840
con oración y humildad, busca de riguridad
los más ásperos caminos:
    el duro suelo es su cama;
sus lágrimas, su bebida, 845
y sazona su comida
de Dios la amorosa llama;
    un canto aplica a su pecho

con golpes, de tal manera, que, aunque de diamante fuera, 850
le tuviera ya deshecho;
por huir del torpe vicio
de la carne y su regalo, su camisa, aunque esté malo, es de un áspero silicio; 855
descalzo siempre los pies,
de toda malicia ajeno,
amando a Dios por ser bueno, sin mirar otro interés.

DOÑA ANA ¿Qué quieres deso inferir, 860
padre?

CRUZQue digáis, señora, si este tal podrá, en la hora angustiada del morir, tener alguna esperanza
de salvarse.

DOÑA ANA¿Por qué no? 865 ¡Ojalá tuviera yo la menor parte que alcanza de tales obras tal padre!
Pero no tengo ni aun una que en esta angustia importuna 870
a mis esperanzas cuadre.

CRUZ Yo os daré todas las mías, y tomaré el grave cargo de las vuestras a mi cargo.

DOÑA ANAPadre, dime: ¿desvarías? 875

¿Cómo se puede hacer eso?

CRUZ Si te quieres confesar, los montes puede allanar
de caridad el exceso.

Pon tú el arrepentimiento 880 de tu parte, y verás luego
cómo en tus obras me entrego, y tú en aquellas que cuento.

DOÑA ANA ¿Dónde están los fiadores que aseguren el concierto? 885

CRUZ Yo estoy bien seguro y cierto que nadie los dio mejores, ni tan grandes, ni tan buenos,
ni tan ricos, ni tan llanos, puesto que son soberanos, 890
y de inmensa alteza llenos.

DOÑA ANA ¿A quién me dais?

CRUZ A la pura,
sacrosanta, rica y bella que fue madre y fue doncella, crisol de nuestra ventura. 895

A Cristo crucificado os doy por fiador también;
dóyosle niño en Belén,
perdido y después hallado.

DOÑA ANA Los fiadores me contentan; 900 los testigos, ¿quién serán?

CRUZ Cuantos en el cielo están y en sus escaños se sientan.

DOÑA ANA El contrato referid, porque yo quede enterada 905 de la merced señalada que me hacéis.

CRUZ Cielos, oíd:
«Yo, fray Cristóbal de la Cruz, indigno religioso y profeso en la sagrada orden del patriarca felicísimo 910
Domingo santo, en esta forma digo:
Que al alma de doña Ana de Treviño, que está presente, doy de buena gana todas las buenas obras que yo he hecho en caridad y en gracia, desde el punto 915 que dejé la carrera de la muerte y entré en la de la vida; doyle todos mis ayunos, mis lágrimas y azotes, y el mérito santísimo de cuantas misas he dicho, y asimismo doyle 920 mis oraciones todas y deseos, que han tenido a mi Dios siempre por blanco;
y, en contracambio, tomo sus pecados, por inormes que sean, y me obligo de dar la cuenta dellos en el alto 925 y eterno tribunal de Dios eterno, y pagar los alcances y las penas que merecieren sus pecados todos.
Mas es la condición deste concierto que ella primero de su parte ponga 930 la confesión y el arrepentimiento.»

ANTONIO; Caso jamás oído es éste, padre!

CLÉRIGOY caridad jamás imaginada.

CRUZY, para que me crea y se asegure, le doy por fiadores a la Virgen 935 Santísima María y a su Hijo, y a las once mil vírgines benditas, que son mis valedoras y abogadas;
y a la tierra y el cielo hago testigos, y a todos los presentes que me escuchan. 940 Moradores del cielo, no se os pase esta ocasión, pues que podéis en ella mostrar la caridad vuestra encendida; pedid al gran Pastor de los rebaños del cielo y de la tierra que no deje 945 que lleve Satanás esta ovejuela que él almagró con su preciosa sangre.
Señora, ¿no aceptáis este concierto?

DOÑA ANASÍ acepto, padre, y pido, arrepentida, confesión, que me muero.

CLÉRIGO;Obras son éstas, 950
gran Señor, de las tuyas!

ANTONIO;Bueno queda
el padre Cruz ahora, hecha arista el alma, seca y sola como espárrago!
Paréceme que vuelve al Sicut erat, y que deja el breviario y se acomoda 955 con el barcelonés y la de ganchos.
Siempre fue liberal, o malo, o bueno.

DOÑA ANA Padre, no me dilate este remedio; oiga las culpas que a su cargo quedan, que, si no le desmayan por ser tantas, 960 yo moriré segura y confiada que he de alcanzar perdón de todas ellas.

CRUZ Padre, vaya al convento, y dé esta nueva a nuestro padre, y ruéguele que haga general oración, dando las gracias 965 a Dios deste suceso milagroso, en tanto que a esta nueva penitente oigo de confesión.

ANTONIO A mí me place.

CRUZ Vamos do estemos solos.

DOÑA ANA En buen hora.

CLÉRIGO ¡Oh bienaventurada pecadora! 970

FIN DE LA SEGUNDA JORNADA

Jornada tercera

Entra un CIUDADANO y el PRIOR.

CIUDADANO Oigan los cielos y la tierra entienda tan nueva y tan estraña maravilla, y su paternidad a oílla atienda;
que, puesto que no pueda referilla con aquellas razones que merece, 5 peor será que deje de decilla.

Apenas a la vista se le ofrece doña Ana al padre Cruz, sin la fe pura que a nuestras esperanzas fortalece, cuando, con caridad firme y segura, 10 hizo con ella un cambio de tal suerte, que cambió su desgracia en gran ventura.

Su alma de las garras de la muerte eterna arrebató, y volvió a la vida, y de su pertinacia la divierte; 15 la cual, como se viese enriquecida con la dádiva santa que el bendito padre le dio sin tasa y sin medida, alzó al momento un piadoso grito al cielo, y confesión pidió llorando, 20 con voz humilde y corazón contrito;

y, en lo que antes dudaba no dudando, de sus deudas dio cuenta muy estrecha a quien agora las está pagando;
y luego, sosegada y satisfecha, 25 todos los sacramentos recibidos, dejó la cárcel de su cuerpo estrecha.

Oyéronse en los aires divididos coros de voces dulces, de manera que quedaron suspensos los sentidos; 30 dijo al partir de la mortal carrera que las once mil vírgines estaban todas en torno de su cabecera; por los ojos las almas distilaban de gozo y maravilla los presentes, 35 que la süave música escuchaban;

y, apenas por los aires transparentes voló de la contrita pecadora el alma a las regiones refulgentes, cuando en aquella misma feliz hora 40 se vio del padre Cruz cubierto el rostro de lepra, adonde el asco mismo mora.
Volved los ojos, y veréis el monstruo, que lo es en santidad y en la fiereza, cuya fealdad a nadie le da en rostro. 45

(Entra el PADRE CRUZ, llagado el rostro y las manos; tráenle dos ciudadanos de los brazos, y FRAY ANTONIO.)

CRUZ Acompaña a la lepra la flaqueza;
no me puedo tener. ¡Dios sea bendito, que así a pagar mi buen deseo empieza!

PRIOR Por ese tan borrado sobreescrito no podrá conoceros, varón santo, 50 quien no os mirare muy de hito en hito.

CRUZ Padre Prior, no se adelante tanto vuestra afición que me llaméis con nombre que me cuadra tan mal, que yo me espanto.
Inútil fraile soy, pecador hombre, 55 puesto que me acompaña un buen deseo;
mas no dan los deseos tal renombre.

CIUDADANO En vos contemplo, padre Cruz, y leo la paciencia de Job, y su presencia en vuestro rostro deslustrado veo. 60

Por la ajena malicia la inocencia vuestra salió, y pagó tan de contado, cual lo muestra el rigor desta dolencia.

Obligástesos hoy, y habéis pagado hoy.

CRUZA lo menos, de pagar espero, 65
pues de mi voluntad quedé obligado.

CIUDADANO 2 ¡Oh, en la viña de Dios gran jornalero!
¡Oh caridad, brasero y fragua ardiente!

CRUZ Señores, hijo soy de un tabernero;
y si es que adulación no está presente, 70
y puede la humildad hacer su oficio, cese la cortesía, aquí indecente.

ANTONIO Yo, traidor, que a la gula, en sacrificio del alma, y a la hampa, engendradora de todo torpe y asqueroso vicio, 75 digo que me consagro desde agora para limpiar tus llagas y curarte, hasta el fin de mi vida o su mejora;
y no tendrá conmigo alguna parte la vana adulación, pues, de continuo, 80 antes rufián que santo he de llamarte.

Con esto no hallará ningún camino la vanagloria para hacerte guerra, enemigo casero y repentino.

CIUDADANO 2 Venistes para bien de aquesta tierra. 85

¡Dios os guarde mil años, padre amado!

CIUDADANO 1 ¡Sólo en su pecho caridad encierra!

CRUZPadres, recójanme, que estoy cansado.

(Éntranse todos, y salen dos demonios; el uno con figura de oso, y el otro como quisieren. (Esta visión fue verdadera, que así se cuenta en su historia).)

SAQUIEL ¡Que así nos la quitase de las manos!

¡Que así la mies tan sazónada nuestra 90 la segase la hoz del tabernero!

¡Reniego de mí mismo, y aun reniego!

¡Y que tuviese Dios por bueno y justo tal cambalache! Estúvose la dama al pie de cuarenta años en sus vicios, 95 desesperada de remedio alguno;

llega estotro buen alma, y dale luego

los tesoros de gracia que tenía adquiridos por Cristo y por sus obras.

¡Gentil razón, gentil guardar justicia, 100

y gentil igualar de desiguales

y contrapuestas prendas: gracia y culpa, bienes de gloria y del infierno males!

VISIEL Como fue el corredor desta mohatra la caridad, facilitó el contrato, 105 puesto que desigual.

SAQUIELDesa manera,

más rica queda el alma deste rufo, por haber dado cuanto bien tenía,

y tomado el ajeno mal a cuestras, que antes estaba que el contrato hiciese. 110

VISIELNo sé qué te responda; sólo veo que no puede ninguno de nosotros alabarse que ha visto en el infierno algún caritativo.

SAQUIEL¿Quién lo duda?
¿Sabes qué veo, Visiel amigo? 115 Que no es equivalente a questa lepra que padece este fraile, a los tormentos que pasara doña Ana en la otra vida.

VISIEL¿No adviertes que ella puso de su parte grande arrepentimiento?

SAQUIELFue a los fines 120
de su malvada vida.

VISIELEn un instante nos quita de las manos Dios al alma que se arrepiente y sus pecados llora; cuanto y más, que ésta estaba enriquecida con las gracias del fraile hi de bellaco. 125

SAQUIELMas deste generoso, a lo que entiendes, ¿qué será dél agora que está seco e inútil para cosa desta vida?

VISIEL¿Aqueso ignoras? ¿No sabes que conocen sus frailes su virtud y su talento, 130 su ingenio y su bondad, partes bastantes para que le encomienden su gobierno?

SAQUIEL ¿Luego, será prior?

VISIEL ¡Muy poco dices!
Provincial le verás.

SAQUIEL Ya lo adivino.
En el jardín está; tú no te muestres, 135 que yo quiero a mis solas darle un toque con que siquiera a ira le provoque.

(Éntranse.)

(Sale FRAY ÁNGEL y FRAY ANTONIO.)

ANTONIO ¿Qué trae, fray Ángel? ¿Son huevos?

AHable, fray Antonio, quedo.

ANTONIO ¿Tiene miedo?

ATengo miedo. 140

ANTONIO Déme dos de los más nuevos, de los más frescos, le digo, que me los quiero sorber así, crudos.

AHay que hacer

primero otra cosa, amigo. 145

ANTONIO Siempre acudes a mi ruego dilatando tus mercedes.

ASi estos huevos comer puedes, veslos aquí, no los niego.
(Muéstrale dos bolas de argolla.)

ANTONIO ¡Oh coristas y novicios! 150 La mano que el bien dispensa os quite de la despensa las cerraduras y quicios;
la yerba del pito os dé, que abre todas cerraduras, 155
y veáis, estando a oscuras, como el luciérnago ve;
y, señores de las llaves,
sin temor y sobresalto, deis un generoso asalto 160
a las cosas más süaves;
busquéis hebras de tocino,
sin hacer del unto caso,
y en penante y limpio vaso deis dulces sorbos de vino; 165 de almendra morisca y pasa vuestras mangas se vean llenas, y jamás muelas ajenas
a las vuestras pongan tasa; cuando en la tierra comáis 170 pan y agua con querellas, halléis empanadas bellas cuando a la celda volváis;
hágaos la paciencia escudo en cualquiera vuestro aprieto; 175 mándeos un prior discreto, afable y no cabezudo.

A Deprecación bien cristiana, fray Antonio, es la que has hecho; que aspiró a nuestro provecho 180
es cosa también bien llana.

Grande miseria pasamos
y a sumo estrecho venimos los que misa no decimos
y los que no predicamos. 185

ANTONIO ¿Para qué son esas bolas?

AYo las llevaba con fin de jugar en el jardín contigo esta tarde a solas, en las horas que nos dan 190 de recreación.

ANTONIO¿Y llevas
argolla?

AY paletas nuevas.

ANTONIO¿Quién te las dio?

AFray Beltrán.

Se las envió su prima,
y él me las ha dado a mí. 195

ANTONIOCon las paletas aquí haré dos tretas de esgrima.

Precíngete como yo,
y entrégame una paleta,
y está advertido una treta 200 que el padre Cruz me mostró cuando en la jácara fue águila volante y diestra.
Muestra, digo; acaba, muestra.

AToma, pero yo no sé 205
de esgrima más que un jumento.

ANTONIO Ponte de aquesta manera:
vista alerta; ese pie, fuera, puesto en medio movimiento.
Tírame un tajo volado 210
a la cabeza. ¡No ansí;
que ése es revés, pese a mí!

A¡Soy un asno enalbardado!

ANTONIO Ésta es la brava postura que llaman puerta de hierro 215 los jaques.

A¡Notable yerro
y disparada locura!

ANTONIO Doy broquel, saco el baldeo, levanto, señalo o pego, repárome en cruz, y luego 220
tiro un tajo de voleo.

(Entra el PADRE CRUZ, arrimado a un báculo y rezando en un rosario.)

CRUZ Fray Antonio, basta ya; no mueran más, si es posible.

A¡Qué confusión tan terrible!

CRUZ¡Buena la postura está! 225
No se os pueden embotar las agudezas de loco.

ANTONIOIndigesto estaba un poco, y quíseme ejercitar para hacer la digestión, 230 que dicen que es conveniente el ejercicio vehemente.

CRUZVos tenéis mucha razón;
mas yo os daré un ejercicio con que os haga por la posta 235 digerir a vuestra costa la superfluidad del vicio;
vaya y póngase a rezar
dos horas en penitencia;
y puede su reverencia, 240 fray Ángel, ir a estudiar, y déjese de las tretas
deste valiente mancebo.

ANTONIO¿Las bolas?

AAquí las llevo.

ANTONIO Toma, y lleva las paletas. 245

(Éntrase FRAY ANTONIO y FRAY ÁNGEL.)

CRUZ De la escuridad del suelo te saqué a la luz del día, Dios queriendo, y yo querría llevarte a la luz del Cielo.

(Vuelve a entrar SAQUIEL, vestido de oso. (Todo fue así).)

SAQUIEL Cambiador nuevo en el mundo, 250 por tu voluntad enfermo, ¿piensas que eres en el yermo algún Macario segundo?
¿Piensas que se han de avenir bien para siempre jamás, 255 con lo que es menos lo más, la vida con el morir,
soberbia con humildad,
diligencia con pereza,
la torpeza con limpieza, 260
la virtud con la maldad?
Engañaste; y es tan cierto
no avenirse lo que digo, que puedes ser tú testigo de esta verdad con que acierto. 265

CRUZ ¿Qué quieres deso inferir, enemigo Satanás?

SAQUIEL Que es locura en la que das dignísima de reír;

que en el cielo ya no dan 270
puerta a que entren de rondón, así como entró un ladrón, que entre también un rufián.

CRUZ Conmigo en balde te pones a disputar; que yo sé 275 que, aunque te sobre en la fe, me has de sobrar tú en razones.
Dime a qué fue tu venida,
o vuélvete, y no hables más.

SAQUIELMi venida, cual verás, 280 es a quitarte la vida.

CRUZ Si es que traes de Dios licencia, fácil te será quitalla,
y más fácil a mí dalla
con promptísima obediencia. 285 Si la traes, ¿por qué no pruebas a ofenderme? Aunque recelo que no has de tocarme a un pelo, por muy mucho que te atrevas.
¿Qué bramas? ¿Quién te atormenta? 290
Pero espérate, adversario.

SAQUIELEs para mí de un rosario bala la más chica cuenta.
Rufián, no me martirices;
tuerce, hipócrita, el camino. 295

CRUZAun bien que tal vez, malino, algunas verdades dices.

(Vase el demonio bramando.)

Vuelve, que te desafío
a ti y al infierno todo, hecho valentón al modo 300 que plugo al gran Padre mío.
¡Oh alma!, mira quién eres, para que del bien no tuerzas;
que el diablo no tiene fuerzas más de las que tú le dieres. 305 Y, para que no rehuyas
de verte con él a brazos, Dios rompe y quiebra los lazos que pasan las fuerzas tuyas.

(Vuelve a entrar FRAY ANTONIO con un plato de hilas y paños limpios.)

ANTONIO Éntrese, padre, a curar. 310

CRUZ Paréceme que es locura pretender a mi mal cura.

ANTONIO ¿Es eso desesperar?

CRUZ No, por cierto, hijo mío;
mas es esta enfermedad 315
de una cierta calidad,
que curarla es desvarío.
Viene del cielo.

ANTONIO ¿Es posible

que tan mala cosa encierra el cielo, do el bien se encierra? 320 Téngolo por imposible.

¿Estaráse ahora holgando doña Ana, que te la dio, y estaréme en balde yo tu remedio procurando? 325

(Entra FRAY ÁNGEL.)

A Padre Cruz, mándeme albricias, que han elegido prior.

CRUZ Si no te las da el Señor, de mí en vano las codicias.
Mas, decidme: ¿quién salió? 330

A Salió su paternidad.

CRUZ ¿Yo, padre?

A Sí, en mi verdad.

ANTONIO ¿Búrlaste, fray Ángel?

A No.

CRUZ ¿Sobre unos hombros podridos tan pesada carga han puesto? 335
No sé qué me diga desto.

ANTONIO Cególes Dios los sentidos:

que si ellos te conocieran como yo te he conocido, tomaran otro partido, 340
y otro prior eligieran.

A Ahora digo, fray Antonio, que tiene, sin duda alguna, en esa lengua importuna entretejido el demonio: 345 que si ello no fuera así, nunca tal cosa dijeras.

ANTONIO Fray Ángel, no hablo de veras;
pero conviene esto aquí.

Gusta este santo de verse 350
vituperado de todos,
y va huyendo los modos
do pueda ensoberbecerse.

Mira qué confuso está
por la nueva que le has dado. 355

A Puesto le tiene en cuidado.

ANTONIO El cargo no aceptará.

CRUZ ¿No saben estos benditos como soy simple y grosero, y hijo de un tabernero, 360
y padre de mil delitos?

ANTONIO Si yo pudiera dar voto a fe que no te le diera;
antes, a todos dijera la vida que de hombre roto 365 en Sevilla y en Toledo te vi hacer.

CRUZTiempo te queda:
dila, amigo, porque pueda escaparme deste miedo que tengo de ser prelado, 370 cargo para mí indecente:
que, ¿a qué será suficiente hombre que está tan llagado y que ha sido un...?

ANTONIO¿Qué? ¿Rufián?
Que por Dios, y así me goce, 375 que le vi reñir con doce de heria y de San Román;
y en Toledo, en las Ventillas,
con siete terciopeleros, él hecho zaque, ellos cueros, 380
le vide hacer maravillas.
¡Qué de capas vi a sus pies!
¡Qué de broqueles rajados!
¡Qué de cascos abollados!
Hirió a cuatro: huyeron tres. 385 Para aqueste ministerio sí que le diera mi voto, porque en él fuera el más doto rufián de nuestro hemisferio; pero para ser prior 390
no le diera yo jamás.

CRUZ; Oh, cuánto en lo cierto estás, Antonio!

ANTONIO; Y cómo, señor!

CRUZ Así cual quieres te goces, cristiano, y fraile, y sin mengua, 395 que des un filo a la lengua y digas mi vida a voces.

(Entra el PRIOR y otro FRAILE de acompañamiento.)

PRIOR Vuestra paternidad nos dé las manos, y bendición con ellas.

CRUZ Padres míos, ¿adónde a mí tal sumisión?

PRIOR Mi padre 400
es ya nuestro prelado.

ANTONIO; Buenos cascos
tienen, por vida mía, los que han hecho semejante elección!

PRIOR Pues qué, ¿no es santa?

ANTONIO A un Job hacen prior, que no le falta si no es el muladar y ser casado 405 para serlo del todo. ¡En fin: son frailes!

Quien tiene el cuerpo de dolores lleno, ¿cómo podrá tener entendimiento libre para el gobierno que requiere tan peligroso y trabajoso oficio 410 como el de ser prior? ¿No lo ven claro?

CRUZ; Oh qué bien que lo ha dicho fray Antonio!
¡El cielo se lo pague! Padres míos, ¿no miran cuál estoy, que en todo el cuerpo no tengo cosa sana? Consideren 415 que los dolores turban los sentidos, y que ya no estoy bueno para cosa, si no es para llorar y dar gemidos
a Dios por mis pecados infinitos.
Amigo fray Antonio, di a los padres 420 mi vida, de quien fuiste buen testigo;
diles mis insolencias y recreos, la inmensidad descubre de mis culpas, la bajeza les di de mi linaje, diles que soy de un tabernero hijo, 425 porque les haga todo aquesto junto mudar de parecer.

PRIOR Escusa débil
es ésa, padre mío; a lo que ha sido, ha borrado lo que es. Acepte y calle, que así lo quiere Dios.

CRUZ; Él sea bendito! 430 Vamos, que la experiencia dará presto muestras que soy inútil.

ANTONIO; Vive el cielo, que merece ser Papa tan buen fraile!

AQue será provincial, yo no lo dudo.

ANTONIOAqueso está de molde. Padre, vamos, 435 que es hora de curarte.

CRUZSea en buen hora.

ANTONIOVa a ser prior, ¿y por no serlo llora?

(Éntranse.)

(Salen LUCIFER, con corona y cetro, el más galán demonio y bien vestido que ser pueda, y SAQUIEL y VISIEL, como quisieren, de demonios feos.)

LUCIFER Desde el instante que salimos fuera de la mente eternal, ángeles siendo, y con soberbia voluntad y fiera 440 fuimos el gran pecado aprehendiendo, sin querer ni poder de la carrera torcer donde una vez fuimos subiendo, hasta ser derribados a este asiento, do no se admite el arrepentimiento; 445

    digo que desde entonces se recoge la fiera envidia en este pecho fiero, de ver que el cielo en su morada acoge
a quien pasó también de Dios el fuero.
En mí se estiende y en Adán se encoge 450 la justicia de Dios, manso y severo, y dél gozan los hombres in eterno,
y mis secuaces, deste duro infierno.

    Y, no contento Aquél que dio en un palo la vida, que fue muerte de la muerte, 455

de verme despojado del regalo de mi primera aventajada suerte, quiere que se alce con el cielo un malo, un pecador blasfemo, y que se acierte a salvar en un corto y breve instante 460 un ladrón que no tuvo semejante;

la pecadora pública arrebatada de sus pies el perdón de sus pecados, y su historia santísima dilata por siglos en los años prolongados; 465 un cambiador, que en sus usuras trata, deja a sola una voz sus intrincados libros, y por manera nunca vista le pasa a ser divino coronista;

y agora quiere que un rufián se asiente 470 en los ricos escaños de la gloria, y que su vida y muerte nos la cuente alta, famosa y verdadera historia.
Por esto inclino la soberbia frente, y quiero que mi angustia sea notoria 475
a vosotros, partícipes y amigos,
y de mi mal y mi rancor testigos;

no para que me deis consuelo alguno, pues tenerle nosotros no es posible, sino porque acudáis al oportuno 480 punto que hasta los santos es terrible.
Este rufián, cual no lo fue ninguno, por su fealdad al mundo aborrecible, está ya de partida para el cielo,
y humilde apresta el levantado vuelo. 485

Acudid y turbadle los sentidos, y entibiad, si es posible, su esperanza, y de sus vanos pasos y perdidos hacedle temerosa remembranza; no llegue alegre voz a sus oídos 490 que prometa segura confianza de haber cumplido con la deuda y cargo que por su caridad tomó a su cargo.

¡Ea!, que espira ya, después que ha hecho prior y provincial tan bien su oficio, 495 que tiene al suelo y cielo satisfecho, y da de que es gran santo gran indicio.

SAQUIEL No será nuestra ida de provecho, porque será de hacerle beneficio, pues siempre que a los brazos he venido 500 con él, queda con palma y yo vencido.

LUCIFER Mientras no arroja el postrimero aliento, bien se puede esperar que en algo tuerza el peso, puesto en duda el pensamiento; que a veces puede mucho nuestra fuerza. 505

VISIEL Yo cumpliré, señor, tu mandamiento:
que adonde hay más bondad, allí se esfuerza más mi maldad. Allá voy diligente.

LUCIFER Todos venid, que quiero estar presente.

(Éntranse todos, y salen tres almas, vestidas con tunicelas de tafetán blanco, velos sobre los rostros y velas encendidas.)

ALMA 1 Hoy, hermanas, que es el día 510 en quién, por nuestro consuelo, las puertas ha abierto el cielo
de nuestra carcelería, para venir a este punto todo lleno de misterio, 515 viendo en este monasterio al gran Cristóbal difunto, al alma devota suya
bien será la acompañemos, y a la región le llevemos 520

do está la eterna Aleluya.

ALMA 2 Felice jornada es ésta, santa y bienaventurada,
pues se hará, con su llegada, en todos los cielos fiesta: 525 que, llevando en compañía alma tan devota nuestra, darán más claro la muestra
de júbilo y de alegría.

ALMA 3 Ella abrió con oraciones, 530
ayunos y sacrificios,
de nuestra prisión los quicios,
y abrevió nuestras pasiones.
Cuando en libertad vivía, de nosotras se acordaba, 535
y el rosario nos rezaba con devoción cada día;
y, cuando en la religión
entró, como habemos visto, muerto al diablo y vivo a Cristo, 540
aumentó la devoción.

Ni por la riguridad
de las llagas que en sí tuvo jamás indevoto estuvo, ni falto de caridad. 545

Prior siendo y provincial,
tan manso y humilde fue, que hizo de andar a pie
y descalzo gran caudal.

Trece años ha que ha vivido 550 llagado, de tal manera que, a no ser milagro, fuera en dos días consumido.

ALMA 1 Remite sus alabanzas al lugar donde caminas, 555 que allí las darán condignas al valor que tú no alcanzas;
y mezclémonos agora
entre su acompañamiento, escuchando el sentimiento 560
deste su amigo que llora.

(Éntranse.)

(Sale FRAY ANTONIO llorando, y trae un lienzo manchado de sangre.)

ANTONIO Acabó la carrera de su cansada vida;
dio al suelo los despojos; del cuerpo voló al cielo la alma santa. 565 ¡Oh padre, que en el siglo fuiste mi nube obscura, mas en el fuerte asilo,
que así es la religión, mi norte fuiste!
Trece años ha que lidias, 570 por ser caritativo
sobre el humano modo,
con podredumbre y llagas insufribles;
mas los manchados paños de tus sangrientas llagas 575 se estiman más agora que delicados y olorosos lienzos:
con ellos mil enfermos
cobran salud entera;
mil veces les imprimen 580
los labios más ilustres y señores.
Tus pies, que mientras fuiste provincial, anduvieron
a pie infinitas leguas por lodos, por barrancos, por malezas, 585 agora son reliquias, agora te los besan

tus súbditos, y aun todos cuantos pueden llegar a donde yaces.
Tu cuerpo, que ayer era 590 espectáculo horrendo,
según llagado estaba,
hoy es bruñida plata y cristal limpio:
señal que tus carbuncos,
tus grietas y aberturas, 595 que podrición vertían, estaban por milagro en ti, hasta tanto que la deuda pagases
de aquella pecadora
que fue limpia en un punto: 600 ¡tanto tu caridad con Dios valía!

(Entra el PRIOR.)

PRIOR Padre Antonio, deje el llanto, y acuda a cerrar las puertas, porque si las halla abiertas el pueblo, que acude tanto, 605 no nos han de dar lugar para enterrar a su amigo.

ANTONIO Aunque se cierren, yo digo que ha poco de aprovechar.
No ha de bastar diligencia, 610 pero con todo, allá iré.

(Entra FRAY ÁNGEL.)

A¿Dónde vas, padre?

ANTONIO No sé.

A Acuda su reverencia, que está toda la ciudad en el convento, y se arrojan 615 sobre el cuerpo, y le despojan con tanta celeridad.

Y el virrey está también en su celda.

PRIOR Padre Antonio,
venga a ver el testimonio 620 que el cielo da de su bien.

(Éntranse todos.)

(Salen dos ciudadanos: el uno con lienzo de sangre, y el otro con un pedazo de capilla.)

CIUDADANO 1 ¿Qué lleváis vos?

CIUDADANO 2 Un lienzo de sus llagas.
¿Y vos?

CIUDADANO 1 De su capilla este pedazo, que le precio y le tengo en más estima que si hallara una mina.

CIUDADANO 2 Pues salgamos 625 aprisa del convento, no nos quiten los frailes las reliquias.

CIUDADANO 1;Bueno es eso!
¡Antes daré la vida que volvellas!

(Entra otro.)

CIUDADANO 3Yo soy, sin duda, la desgracia misma;
no he podido topar de aqueste santo 630 siquiera con un hilo de su ropa, puesto que voy contento y satisfecho con haberle besado cuatro veces los santos pies, de quien olor despide del cielo; pero tal fue él en la tierra. 635 El virrey le trae en hombros, y sus frailes, y aquí, en aquesta bóveda del claustro, le quieren enterrar. Música suena;
parece que es del cielo, y no lo dudo.

(Traen al santo tendido en una tabla, con muchos rosarios sobre el cuerpo; tráenle en hombros sus frailes y el VIRREY; suena lejos música de flautas o chirimías; cesando la música, dice a voces dentro LUCIFER; o, si quisieren, salgan los demonios al teatro.)

LUCIFERAun no puedo llegar siquiera al cuerpo, 640 para vengar en él lo que en el alma no pude: tales armas le defienden.

SAQUIELNo hay arnés que se iguale al del rosario.

LUCIFERVamos, que en sólo verle me confundo.

SAQUIEL No habemos de parar hasta el profundo. 645

ANTONIO ¿Oyes, fray Ángel?

AOigo, y son los diablos.

VIRREY Háganme caridad sus reverencias, que torne yo otra vez a ver el rostro deste bendito padre.

PRIOR Sea en buen hora.
Padres, abajen, pónganle en el suelo, 650 que, pues la devoción de su excelencia se estiende a tanto, bien será agradalle.

VIRREY ¿Que es este el rostro que yo vi ha dos días de horror y llagas y materias lleno?
¿Las manos gafas son aquéstras, cielo? 655
¡Oh alma que, volando a las serenas regiones, nos dejaste testimonio del felice camino que hoy has hecho!
Clara y limpia la caja do habitaste, abrasada primero y ahumada 660 con el fuego encendido en que se ardía, todo de caridad y amor divino.

CIUDADANO 1 Déjenosle besar sus reverencias los pies siquiera.

PRIOR Devoción muy justa.

VIRREYHagan su oficio, padres, y en la tierra 665 escondan esta joya tan del cielo;
esa esperanza nuestro mal remedia.
Y aquí da fin felice esta comedia.

Jornada primera

Sale SALEC, turco, y ROBERTO, vestido a lo griego, y, detrás dellos, un ALÁRABE, vestido de un alquicel; trai en una lanza muchas estopas, y en una varilla de membrillo, en la punta, un papel como billete, y una velilla de cera encendida en la mano; este tal ALÁRABE se pone al lado del teatro, sin hablar palabra, y luego dice ROBERTO:

ROBERTO La pompa y majestad deste tirano, sin duda alguna, sube y se engrandece sobre las fuerzas del poder humano.

Mas, ¿qué fantasma es esta que se ofrece, coronada de estopas media lanza? 5
Alárabe en el traje me parece.

SALEC Tienen aquí los pobres esta usanza cuando alguno a pedir justicia viene (que sólo el interés es quien la alcanza):

de una caña y de estopas se previene, 10
y cuando el Turco pasa enciende fuego, a cuyo resplandor él se detiene;

pide justicia a voces, dale luego
lugar la guarda, y el pobre, como jara, arremete turbado y sin sosiego, 15

y en la punta y remate de una vara al Gran Señor su memorial presenta, que para aquel efecto el paso para.

Luego, a un bello garzón, que tiene cuenta con estos memoriales, se le entrega, 20 que, en relación, después, dellos da cuenta;

pero jamás el término se llega del buen despacho destes miserables, que el interés le turba y se le niega.

ROBERTO Cosas he visto aquí que de admirables 25 pueden al más gallardo entendimiento suspender.

SALEC Verás otras más notables.

Ya está a pie el Gran Señor; puedes atento verle a tu gusto, que el cristiano puede mirarle rostro a rostro a su contento. 30

A ningún moro o turco se concede que levante los ojos a miralle, y en esto a toda majestad excede.

(Entra a este instante el GRAN TURCO con mucho acompañamiento; delante de sí lleva un PAJE vestido a lo turquesco, con una flecha en la mano levantada en alto, y detrás del TURCO van otros dos garzones con dos bolsas de terciopelo verde, donde ponen los papeles que el TURCO les da.)

ROBERTO Por cierto, él es mancebo de buen talle, y que, de gravedad y bizarría, 35 la fama, con razón, puede loalle.

SALEC Hoy hace la zalá en Santa Sofía, ese templo que ves, que en la grandeza excede a cuantos tiene la Turquía.

ROBERTO A encender y a gritar el moro empieza; 40 el Turco se detiene mesurado, señal de piedad como de alteza.

El moro llega; un memorial le ha dado;
el Gran Señor le toma y se le entrega a un bel garzón que casi trai al lado. 45

(En tanto que esto dice ROBERTO y el TURCO pasa, tiene SALEC doblado el cuerpo y inclinada la cabeza, sin miralle al rostro.)

SALEC Esta audiencia al que es pobre no se niega.
¿Podré alzar la cabeza?

ROBERTOAlza y mira,
que ya el Señor a la mezquita llega, cuya grandeza desde aquí me admira.

(Éntrase el Gran Señor, y queda en el teatro SALEC y ROBERTO.)

SALEC ¿Qué te parece Roberto, 50 de la pompa y majestad que aquí se te ha descubierto?

ROBERTOQue no creo a la verdad,
y pongo duda en lo cierto.

SALEC De a pie y de a caballo, van 55 seis mil soldados.

ROBERTOSí irán.

SALECNo hay dudar, que seis mil son.

ROBERTOJuntamente, admiración y gusto y asombro dan.

SALEC Cuando sale a la zalá 60 sale con este decoro;
y es el día del xumá,
que así al viernes llama el moro.

ROBERTO; Bien acompañado va!
Pero, pues nos da lugar 65 el tiempo, quiero acabar de contarte lo que ayer comencé a darte a entender.

SALECVuelve, amigo, a comenzar.

ROBERTO «Aquel mancebo que dije 70 vengo a buscar: que le quiero más que al alma por quien vivo, más que a los ojos que tengo.
Desde su pequeña edad,
fui su ayo y su maestro, 75
y del templo de la fama
le enseñé el camino estrecho; encaminéle los pasos
por el angosto sendero
de la virtud; tuve a raya 80 sus juveniles deseos;
pero no fueron bastantes mis bien mirados consejos, mis persecuciones cristianas, del bien y mal mil ejemplos, 85 para que, en mitad del curso de su más florido tiempo, amor no le saltease,
monfí de los años tiernos.
Enamoróse de Clara, 90
la hija de aquel Lamberto que tú en Praga conociste, teutónico caballero.

Sus padres y su hermosura nombre de Clara la dieron; 95 pero quizá sus desdichas en escuridad la han puesto.
Demandóla por esposa,
y no salió con su intento;
no porque no fuese igual 100
y acertado el casamiento, sino porque las desgracias traen su corriente de lejos, y no hay diligencia humana que prevenga su remedio. 105 Finalmente, él la sacó:
que voluntades que han puesto la mira en cumplir su gusto, pierden respetos y miedos.
Solos y a pie, en una noche 110 de las frías del invierno, iban los pobres amantes,
sin saber adónde, huyendo; y, al tiempo que ya yo había echado a Lamberto menos 115 (que éste es el nombre del triste que he dicho que a buscar vengo), con aliento desmayado,
de un frío sudor cubierto el rostro, y todo turbado, 120 ante mis ojos le veo.
Arrojóseme a los pies,
la color como de un muerto,
y, con voz interrumpida de sollozos, dijo: "Muero, 125 padre y señor, que estos nombres a tus obras se los debo.
A Clara llevan cautiva
los turcos de Rocaferro.
Yo, cobarde; yo, mezquino 130
y un traidor, que no lo niego,

hela dejado en sus manos, por tener los pies ligeros.
Esta noche la llevaba
no sé adónde, aunque sé cierto 135 que, si fortuna quisiera, fuéramos los dos al cielo".
A la nueva triste y nueva, en un confuso silencio
quedé, sin osar decirle: 140
"Hijo mío, ¿cómo es esto?"
De aquesta perplejidad me sacó el marcial estruendo del rebato a que tocaron las campanas en el pueblo. 145 Púseme luego a caballo, salió conmigo Lamberto en otro, y salió una tropa de caballos herreruelos.
Con la escuridad, perdimos 150 el rastro de los que hicieron el robo de Clara, y otros que con el día se vieron.
Temerosos de celada,
no nos apartamos lejos 155 del lugar, al cual volvimos cansados y sin Lamberto.»

SALECPues, ¿cómo? ¿Quedóse aposta?

ROBERTO«Aposta, a lo que sospecho, porque nunca ha parecido 160
desde entonces, vivo o muerto.
Su padre ofreció por Clara gran cantidad de dinero, pero no le fue posible
cobrarla por ningún precio. 165 Díjose por cosa cierta que el turco que fue su dueño la presentó al Gran Señor por ser hermosa en extremo.» Por saber si esto es verdad, 170

y por saber de Lamberto, he venido como has visto
aquí en hábito de griego.
Sé hablar la lengua de modo que pasar por griego entiendo. 175

SALECPuesto que nunca la sepas, no tienes de qué haber miedo:
aquí todo es confusión,
y todos nos entendemos con una lengua mezclada 180 que ignoramos y sabemos.
De mí no te escaparás,
pues cuando te vi, al momento te conocí.

ROBERTO¡Gran memoria!

SALECSiempre la tuve en extremo. 185

ROBERTOPues, ¿cómo te has olvidado
de quién eres?

SALECNo hablemos
en eso agora: otro día
de mis cosas trataremos; que, si va a decir verdad, 190 yo ninguna cosa creo.

ROBERTOFino ateísta te muestras.

SALECYo no sé lo que me muestro;
sólo sé que he de mostrarte, con obras al descubierto, 195 que soy tu amigo, a la traza como lo fui en algún tiempo;
y, para saber de Clara, un eunuco del gobierno del serrallo del Gran Turco 200
podrá hacerme satisfecho, que es mi amigo. Y, entre tanto, puedes mirar por Lamberto:
quizá, como tuvo el alma, también tendrá preso el cuerpo. 205

(Éntranse.)

(Salen MAMÍ y RUSTÁN, eunucos.)

MAMÍ Ten, Rustán, la lengua muda, y conmigo no autorices
tu fee, de verdad desnuda, pues mientes en cuanto dices, y eres cristiano, sin duda: 210 que el tener así encerrada tanto tiempo y tan guardada a la cautiva española, es señal bastante y sola que tu intención es dañada. 215 Has quitado al Gran Señor de gozar la hermosura que tiene el mundo mayor, siendo mal darle madura fruta, que verde es mejor. 220 Seis años ha que la celas
y la encubres con cautelas que ya no pueden durar, y agora por desvelar

esta verdad te desvelas. 225

Pero, ¡espera, perro, aguarda, y verás de qué manera
la fe al Gran Señor se guarda!

RUSTÁN ¡Mamí amigo, espera, espera!

MAMÍ llega el castigo, aunque tarda; 230
y el que sabe una traición, y se está sin descubrilla algún tiempo, da ocasión de pensar si en consentilla tuvo parte la intención. 235

La tuya he sabido hoy,
y así, al Gran Señor me voy a contarle tu maldad.

(Éntrese MAMÍ.)

RUSTÁN No hay negalle esta verdad;
por empalado me doy. 240

(Sale DOÑA CATALINA DE OVIEDO, GRAN SULTANA, vestida a la turquesca.)

SULTANA Rustán, ¿qué hay?

RUSTÁN Mi señora,
de nuestra temprana muerte
es ya llegada la hora:
que así el alma me lo advierte, pues en mi costancia llora; 245 que, aunque parezco mujer, nunca suelo yo verter

lágrimas que den señal
de grande bien o gran mal, como suele acontecer. 250

Mamí, señora, ha notado, con astucia y con maldad, el tiempo que te he guardado, y ha juzgado mi lealtad por traición y por pecado. 255

Al Gran Señor va derecho a contar por malo el hecho que yo he tenido por bueno, de malicia y rabia lleno el siempre maligno pecho. 260

SULTANA ¿Qué hemos de hacer?

RUSTÁN Esperar
la muerte con la entereza que se puede imaginar, aunque sé que a tu belleza sultán ha de respetar. 265

No te matará sultán;
quien muera será Rustán,
como deste caso autor.

SULTANA ¿Es crüel el Gran Señor?

RUSTÁN Nombre de blando le dan; 270 pero, en efecto, es tirano.

SULTANA Con todo, confío en Dios, que su poderosa mano

ha de librar a los dos deste temor, que no es vano; 275

y si estuvieren cerrados
los cielos por mis pecados, por no oír mi petición, dispondré mi corazón
a casos más desastrados. 280

No triunfará el inhumano del alma; del cuerpo, sí, caduco, frágil y vano.

RUSTÁN Este suceso temí de mi proceder cristiano. 285

Mas no estoy arrepentido;
antes, estoy prevenido
de paciencia y sufrimiento para cualquiera tormento.

SULTANA Con mi intención has venido. 290

Dispuesta estoy a tener por regalo cualquier pena que me pueda suceder.

RUSTÁN Nunca a muerte se condena tan gallardo parecer. 295

Hallarás en tu hermosura, no pena, sino ventura;
yo, por el contrario extremo, hallaré, como lo temo,
en el fuego sepultura. 300

SULTANA Bien podrá ofrecerme el mundo cuantos tesoros encierra la tierra y el mar profundo;

podrá bien hacerme guerra el contrario sin segundo 305 con una y otra legión
de su infernal escuadrón;
pero no podrán, Dios mío, como yo de vos confío,
mudar mi buena intención. 310

En mi tierna edad perdí, Dios mío, la libertad,
que aun apenas conocí;
trújome aquí la beldad, Señor, que pusiste en mí; 315 si ella ha de ser instrumento de perderme, yo consiento, petición cristiana y cuerda, que mi belleza se pierda por milagro en un momento; 320 esta rosada color
que tengo, según se muestra en mi espejo adulator, marchítala con tu diestra;
vuélveme fea, Señor; 325 que no es bien que lleve palma de la hermosura del alma la del cuerpo.

RUSTÁNDices bien.
Mas no es bien que aquí se estén nuestros sentidos en calma, 330 sin que demos traza o medio de buscar a nuestra culpa o ya disculpa, o remedio.

SULTANADel remedio a la disculpa hay grandes montes en medio. 335 Vámonos a apercebir,
amigo, para morir

cristianos.

RUSTÁNRemedio es ése
del más subido interesse que al Cielo puedes pedir. 340

(Éntranse.)

(Salen MAMÍ, el eunuco, y el GRAN TURCO.)

MAMÍ Morato Arráez, Gran Señor, te la presentó, y es ella la primera y la mejor que del título de bella puede llevarse el honor. 345

De tus ojos escondido
este gran tesoro ha sido por industria de Rustán seis años, y a siete van, según la cuenta he tenido. 350

TURCO ¿Y del modo que has contado es hermosa?

MAMÍEs tan hermosa
como en el jardín cerrado la entreabierta y fresca rosa a quien el sol no ha tocado; 355

o como el alba serena, de aljófar y perlas llena,
al salir del claro Oriente;
o como sol al Poniente, con los reflejos que ordena. 360

Robó la naturaleza

lo mejor de cada cosa
para formar esta pieza, y así, la sacó hermosa sobre la humana belleza. 365

Quitó al cielo dos estrellas, que puso en las luces bellas de sus bellísimos ojos, con que de amor los despojos se aumentan, pues vive en ellas. 370

El todo y sus partes son correspondientes de modo, que me muestra la razón
que en las partes y en el todo asiste la perfección. 375

Y con esto se conforma
el color, que hace la forma hermosa en un grado inmenso.

TURCOEste loco, a lo que pienso, de alguna diosa me informa. 380

MAMÍ A su belleza, que es tanta que pasa al imaginar, su discreción se adelanta.

TURCOTú me la harás adorar por cosa divina y santa. 385

MAMÍ Tal jamás la ha visto el sol, ni otra fundió en su crisol el cielo que la compuso;
y, sobre todo, le puso
el desenfado español. 390

Digo, señor, que es divina la beldad desta cautiva, en el mundo peregrina.

TURCO De verla el deseo se aviva.
¿Y llámase?

MAMÍ Catalina, 395
y es de Oviedo el sobrenombre.

TURCO ¿Cómo no ha mudado el nombre, siendo ya turca?

MAMÍ No sé;
como no ha mudado fe,
no apetece otro renombre. 400

TURCO ¿Luego, es cristiana?

MAMÍ Yo hallo
por mi cuenta que lo es.

TURCO ¿Cristiana, y en mi serrallo?

MAMÍ Más deben de estar de tres;
mas ¿quién podrá averiguallo? 405 Si otra cosa yo supiera, como aquésta, la dijera, sin encubrir un momento dicho o hecho o pensamiento que contra ti se ofreciera. 410

TURCO Descuido es vuestro y maldad.

MAMÍYo sé decir que te adoro y sirvo con la lealtad
y con el justo decoro que debo a tu majestad. 415

TURCO Al serrallo iré esta tarde a ver si yela o si arde la belleza única y sola de tu alabada española.

MAMÍMahoma, señor, te guarde. 420

(Éntranse estos dos.)

(Salen MADRIGAL, cautivo, y ANDRÉS, en hábito de griego.)

MADRIGAL ¡Vive Roque, canalla barretina, que no habéis de gozar de la cazuela, llena de boronía y caldo prieto!

ANDREA¿Con quién las has, cristiano?

MADRIGALNo, con naide.
¿No escucháis la bolina y la algazara 425 que suena dentro desta casa?

(Dice dentro un JUDÍO:)

JUDÍO¡Ah perro!
¡El Dío te maldiga y te confunda!
¡Jamás la libertad amada alcances!

ANDREADi: ¿por qué te maldicen estos tristes?

MADRIGALEntré sin que me viesen en su casa, 430
y en una gran cazuela que tenían de un guisado que llaman boronía, les eché de tocino un gran pedazo.

ANDREAPues ¿quién te lo dio a ti?

MADRIGALCiertos jenízaros mataron en el monte el otro día 435 un puerco jabalí, que le vendieron a los cristianos de Mamud Arráez, de los cuales compré de la papada lo que está en la cazuela sepultado para dar sepultura a estos malditos, 440 con quien tengo rencor y mal talante;
a quien el diablo pape, engulla y sorba.

(Pónese un JUDÍO a la ventana.)

JUDÍO¡Mueras de hambre, bárbaro insolente; el cotidiano pan te niegue el Dío;
andes de puerta en puerta mendigando; 445 échente de la tierra como a gafo, agraz de nuestros ojos, espantajo, de nuestra sinagoga asombro y miedo, de nuestras criaturas enemigo el mayor que tenemos en el mundo! 450

MADRIGAL¡Agáchate, judío!

JUDÍO; Ay, sin ventura, que entrambas sienes me ha quebrado! ¡Ay triste!

ANDREA Sí, que no le tiraste.

MADRIGAL; Ni por pienso!

ANDREA Pues ¿de qué se lamenta el hideputa?

(Dice dentro otro JUDÍO:)

JUDÍO Quítate, Zabulón, de la ventana, 455 que ese perro español es un demonio, y te hará pedazos la cabeza con sólo que te escupa y que te acierte.
¡Guayas, y qué comida que tenemos!
¡Guayas, y qué cazuela que se pierde! 460

MADRIGAL; Los plantos de Ramá volvéis al mundo, canalla miserable? ¿Otra vez vuelves,
perro?

JUDÍO; Qué!, ¿aún no te has ido? ¿Por ventura quieres atosigarnos el aliento?

MADRIGAL; Recógeme este prisco!

(Dicen dentro:)

No aprovecha 465
decirte, Zabulón, que no te asomes?
Déjale ya en mal hora; éntrate, hijo.

ANDREA; Oh gente aniquilada! ¡Oh infame, oh sucia raza, y a qué miseria os ha traído vuestro vano esperar, vuestra locura 470 y vuestra incomparable pertinacia, a quien llamáis firmeza y fee inmutable contra toda verdad y buen discurso!
Ya parece que callan; ya en silencio pasan su burla y hambre los mezquinos. 475 Español, ¿conocéisme?

MADRIGAL Juraría
que en mi vida os he visto.

ANDREA Soy Andrea,
la espía.

MADRIGAL ¿Vos, Andrea?

ANDREA Sí, sin duda.

MADRIGAL ¿El que llevó a Castillo y Palomares, mis camaradas?

ANDREA Y el que llevó a Meléndez, 480
a Arguijo y Santisteban, todos juntos, y en Nápoles los dejó a sus anchuras, de la agradable libertad gozando.

MADRIGAL ¿Cómo me conocistes?

ANDREALa memoria
tenéis dada a adobar, a lo que entiendo, 485
o reducida a voluntad no buena.
¿No os acordáis que os vi y hablé la noche que recogí a los cinco, y vos quisistes quedaros por no más de vuestro gusto, poniendo por excusa que os tenía 490 amor rendida el alma, y que una alárabe, con nuevo cautiverio y nuevas leyes, os la tenía encadenada y presa?

MADRIGALVerdad; y aun todavía tengo el yugo al cuello, todavía estoy cautivo, 495 todavía la fuerza poderosa de amor tiene sujeto a mi albedrío.

ANDREALuego, ¿en balde será tratar yo agora de que os vengáis conmigo?

MADRIGALEn balde, cierto.

ANDREA¿Desdichado de vos!

MADRIGALQuizá dichoso. 500

ANDREA¿Cómo puede ser esto?

MADRIGAL Son las leyes
del gusto poderosas sobremodo.

ANDREA Una resolución gallarda puede romperlas.

MADRIGAL Yo lo creo; mas no es tiempo de ponerme a los brazos con sus fuerzas. 505

ANDREA ¿No sois vos español?

MADRIGAL ¿Por qué? ¿Por esto?
Pues, por las once mil de malla juro, y por el alto, dulce, omnipotente deseo que se encierra bajo el hopo de cuatro acomodados porcionistas, 510 que he de romper por montes de diamantes y por dificultades indecibles, y he de llevar mi libertad en peso sobre los propios hombros de mi gusto, y entrar triunfando en Nápoles la bella 515 con dos o tres galeras levantadas por mi industria y valor, y Dios delante, y dando a la Anunciada los dos bucos, quedaré con el uno rico y próspero;
y no ponerme ahora a andar por trena, 520 cargado de temor y de miseria.

ANDREA ¡Español sois, sin duda!

MADRIGAL Y soylo, y soylo, lo he sido y lo seré mientras que viva,
y aun después de ser muerto ochenta siglos.

ANDREA¿Habr  quien quiera libertad huyendo? 525

MADRIGALCuatro bravos soldados os esperan, y son gente de pluma y bien nacidos.

ANDREA¿Son los que dijo Arguijo?

MADRIGALAquellos mismos.

ANDREAYo los tengo escondidos y a recaudo.

MADRIGAL¿Qu  turba es  sta? ¿Qu  ruido es  ste? 530

ANDREAEs el embajador de los persianos, que viene a tratar paces con el Turco.
Haceos a aquesta parte mientras pasa.

(Entra un embajador, vestido como los que andan aqu , y acomp  anle jen zaros; va como TURCO.)

MADRIGAL Bizarro va y gallardo por extremo!

ANDREALos m s de los persianos son gallardos, 535 y muy grandes de cuerpo, y grandes hombres de a caballo.

MADRIGALY son, seg n se dice,
los caballos el nervio de sus fuerzas.

¡Plega a Dios que las paces no se hagan!
¿Queréis venir, Andrea?

ANDREA Guía adonde 540
fuere más de tu gusto.

MADRIGALA Al baño guío
del Uchalí.

ANDREA Al de Morato guía, que he de juntarme allí con otra espía.

(Éntranse.)

(Entra el GRAN TURCO, RUSTÁN y MAMÍ.)

TURCO Flaca disculpa me das de la traición que me has hecho, 545 mayor que se vio jamás.

RUSTÁN Si bien estás en el hecho, señor, no me culparás.

Cuando vino a mi poder, no vino de parecer 550
que pudiese darte gusto,
y fue el reservarla justo
a más tomo y mejor ser;
muchos años, Gran Señor, profundas melancolías 555
la tuvieron sin color.

TURCO¿Quién la curó?

RUSTÁNSedequías,
el judío, tu doctor.

TURCO Testigos muertos presentas en tu causa; a fe que intentas 560 escaparte por buen modo.

RUSTÁNYo digo verdad en todo.

TURCORazón será que no mientas.

RUSTÁN No ha tres días que el sereno cielo de su rostro hermoso 565 mostró de hermosura lleno;
no ha tres días que un ansioso dolor salió de su seno.

En efecto: no ha tres días que de sus melancolías 570 está libre esta española, que es en la belleza sola.

TURCOTú mientes o desvarías.

RUSTÁN Ni miento ni desvarío.
Puedes hacer la experiencia 575 cuando gustes, señor mío.
Haz que venga a tu presencia:
verás su donaire y brío;
verás andar en el suelo, con pies humanos, al cielo, 580

cifrado en su gentileza.

TURCO De un temor otro se empieza, de un recelo, otro recelo.

Mucho temo, mucho espero, mucho puede la alabanza 585
en lengua de lisonjero;
mas la lisonja no alcanza parte aquí. Rustán, yo quiero ver esa cautiva luego;
¡ve por ella, y por el dios ciego, 590 que me tiene asombrado, que a no ser cual la has pintado, que te he de entregar al fuego!

(Éntrese RUSTÁN.)

MAMÍ Si no está en más la ventura de Rustán, que en ser hermosa 595 la cautiva, y de hermosura rara, su suerte es dichosa;
libre está de desventura.

Desde ahora muy bien puedes hacerle, señor, mercedes, 600 porque verás, de aquí a poco, aquí todo el cielo.

TURCO Loco,
a todo hipérbole excedes.

Deja, que es justo, a los ojos algo que puedan hallar 605 en tan divinos despojos.

MAMÍ¿Qué vista podrá mirar de Apolo los rayos rojos que no quede deslumbrada?

TURCOTanta alabanza me enfada. 610

MAMÍRemítome a la experiencia que has de hacer con la presencia désta, en mi lengua, agraviada.

(Entran RUSTÁN y la SULTANA.)

RUSTÁN Háblale mansa y süave, que importa, señora mía, 615
porque con todos no acabe.

SULTANADaré de la lengua mía al santo cielo la llave;
arrojaréme a sus pies;
diré que su esclava es 620
la que tiene a gran ventura besárselos.

RUSTÁNEs cordura
que en ese artificio des.

SULTANA Las rodillas en la tierra y mis ojos en tus ojos, 625 te doy, señor, los despojos que mi humilde ser encierra;
y si es soberbia el mirarte, ya los abajo e inclino

por ir por aquel camino 630 que suele más agradarte.

TURCO ¡Gente indiscreta, ignorante, locos, sin duda, de atar,
a quien no se puede hallar,
en ser simples, semejante; 635 robadores de la fama
debida a tan gran sujeto;
mentirosos, en efecto,
que es la traición que os infama!
¡Por cierto que bien se emplea 640 cualquier castigo en vosotros!

MAMÍ ¡Desdichados de nosotros si le ha parecido fea!

TURCO ¡Cuán a lo humano hablasteis de una hermosura divina, 645 y esta beldad peregrina cuán vulgarmente pintastes!
¿No fuera mejor ponella al par de Alá en sus asientos, hollando los elementos 650
y una y otra clara estrella, dando leyes desde allá, que con reverencia y celo guardaremos los del suelo, como Mahoma las da? 655

MAMÍ ¿No te dije que era rosa en el huerto a medio abrir?
¿Qué más pudiera decir
la lengua más ingeniosa?
¿No te la pinté discreta 660

cual nunca se vio jamás?
¿Pudiera decirte más
un mentiroso poeta?

RUSTÁN Cielo te la hice yo, con pies humanos, señor. 665

TURCOA hacerla su Hacedor acertaras.

RUSTÁN Eso no:
que esos grandes atributos
cuadran solamente a Dios.

TURCO En su alabanza los dos 670 anduvistes resolutos
y cortos en demasía,
por lo cual, sin replicar, os he de hacer empalar
antes que pase este día. 675

Mayor pena merecías, traidor Rustán, por ser cierto que me has tenido encubierto tan gran tesoro tres días.

Tres días has detenido 680
el curso de mi ventura;
tres días en mal segura vida y penosa he vivido;
tres días me has defraudado del mayor bien que se encierra 685 en el cerco de la tierra
y en cuanto vee el sol dorado.

Morirás, sin duda alguna,
hoy, en este mismo día:
que, a do comienza la mía, 690

ha de acabar tu fortuna.

SULTANA Si ha hallado esta cautiva alguna gracia ante ti, vivan Rustán y Mamí.

TURCORustán muera; Mamí viva. 695

Pero maldigo la lengua que tal cosa pronunció;
vos pedís; no otorgo yo.
Recompensaré esta mengua con haceros juramento, 700
por mi valor todo junto, de no discrepar un punto de hacer vuestro mandamiento.

No sólo viva Rustán;
pero, si vos lo queréis, 705
los cautivos soltaréis, que en las mazmorras están;
porque a vuestra voluntad
tan sujeta está la mía, como está a la luz del día 710 sujeta la oscuridad.

SULTANA No tengo capacidad para tanto bien, señor.

TURCOSabe igualar el amor el vos y la majestad. 715

De los reinos que poseo, que casi infinitos son, toda su jurisdicción
rendida a la tuya veo;
ya mis grandes señoríos, 720 que grande señor me han hecho, por justicia y por derecho,

son ya tuyos más que míos;
y, en pensar no te demandes esto soy, aquello fui; 725 que, pues me mandas a mí, no es mucho que al mundo mandes.

Que seas turca o seas cristiana,
a mí no me importa cosa;
esta belleza es mi esposa, 730
y es de hoy más la Gran Sultana.

SULTANA Cristiana soy, y de suerte, que de la fe que profeso
no me ha de mudar exceso de promesas ni aun de muerte. 735

Y mira que no es cordura que entre los tuyos se hable de un caso que, por notable, se ha de juzgar por locura.

¿Dónde, señor, se habrá visto 740 que asistan dos en un lecho, que el uno tenga en el pecho a Mahoma, el otro a Cristo?

Mal tus deseos se miden con tu supremo valor, 745 pues no junta bien Amor dos que las leyes dividen.

Allá te avén con tu alteza,
con tus ritos y tu secta, que no es bien que se entremeta 750
con mi ley y mi bajeza.

TURCO En estos discursos entro, pues Amor me da licencia;
yo soy tu circunferencia,
y tú, señora, mi centro; 755 de mí a ti han de ser iguales las cosas que se trataren, sin que en otro punto paren que las haga desiguales.

La majestad y el Amor 760
nunca bien se convinieron, y en la igualdad le pusieron, los que hablaron del mejor.

Deste modo se adereza
lo que tú ves despüés: 765 que, humillándome a tus pies, te levanto a mi cabeza.
Iguales estamos ya.

SULTANA Levanta, señor, levanta, que tanta humildad espanta. 770

MAMÍ Rindióse; vencido está.

SULTANA Una merced te suplico, y me la has de conceder.

TURCOA cuanto quieras querer obedezco y no replico. 775

Suelta, condena, rescata, absuelve, quita, haz mercedes,
que esto y más, señora, puedes:
que Amor tu imperio dilata.

Pídeme los imposibles 780 que te ofreciere el deseo, que, en fe de ser tuyo, creo que los he de hacer posibles.

No vengas a contentarte con pocas cosas, mi amor; 785 que haré, siendo pecador, milagros por agradarte.

SULTANA Sólo te pido tres días, Gran Señor, para pensar...

TURCO Tres días me han de acabar. 790

SULTANA...en no sé qué dudas mías, que escrupulosa me han hecho,
y, éstos cumplidos, vendrás,
y claramente verás
lo que tienes en mi pecho. 795

TURCO Soy contento. Queda en paz, guerra de mi pensamiento,
de mis placeres aumento,
de mis angustias solaz.

Vosotros, atribulados 800
y alegres en un instante, llevaréis de aquí adelante vuestros gajes seisdoblados.

Entra, Rustán; da las nuevas a esas cautivas todas 805 de mis esperadas bodas.

MAMÍ;Gentil recado les llevas!

TURCO Y como a cosa divina, y esto también les dirás, sirvan y adoren de hoy más 810
a mi hermosa Catalina.

(Éntranse el TURCO, MAMÍ y RUSTÁN, y queda en el teatro sola la SULTANA.)

SULTANA    ¡A ti me vuelvo, Gran Señor, que alzaste, a costa de tu sangre y de tu vida,
la mísera de Adán primer caída,
y, adonde él nos perdió, Tú nos cobraste.    815

    A Ti, Pastor bendito, que buscaste de las cien ovejuelas la perdida, y, hallándola del lobo perseguida, sobre tus hombros santos te la echaste;
    a Ti me vuelvo en mi aflicción amarga,    820
y a Ti toca, Señor, el darme ayuda:
que soy cordera de tu aprisco ausente, y temo que, a carrera corta o larga, cuando a mi daño tu favor no acuda, me ha de alcanzar esta infernal serpiente!    825

FIN DE LA PRIMERA JORNADA

Jornada segunda

Traen dos moros atado a MADRIGAL, las manos atrás, y sale con ellos el GRAN CADÍ, que es el juez obispo de los turcos.

MORO 1 Como te habemos contado, por aviso que tuvimos,
en fragante le cogimos
cometiendo el gran pecado.

La alárabe queda presa, 5
y, como se vee con culpa que carece de disculpa, toda su maldad confiesa.

CADÍ Dad con ellos en la mar, de pies y manos atados, 10
y de peso acomodados,
que no los dejen nadar;
pero si moro se vuelve,
casaldos, y libres queden.

MADRIGAL Hermanos, atarme pueden. 15

CADÍ ¿En qué el perro se resuelve:
en casarse, o en morir?

MADRIGAL Todo es muerte, y todo es pena; ninguna cosa hallo buena en casarme ni en vivir. 20 Como la ley no dejara
en la cual pienso salvarme,

la vida, con el casarme,
aunque es muerte, dilatara;
    pero casarme y ser moro 25 son dos muertes, de tal suerte, que atado corro a la muerte
y suelto mi ley adoro.
    Mas yo sé que desta vez no he de morir, señor bueno. 30

CADÍ¿Cómo, si yo te condeno, y soy supremo jüez?
    De las sentencias que doy
no hay apelación alguna.

MADRIGALCon todo, de mi fortuna, 35
aunque mala, alegre estoy.
    La piedra tendré ya puesta al cuello, y has de pensar que no me pienso anegar;
y desto haré buena puesta. 40
    Y, porque no estés suspenso, haz salir estos dos fuera:
diréte de la manera
que ha de ser, según yo pienso.

CADÍ Idos, y dejalde atado, 45 que quiero ver de la suerte cómo escapa de la muerte, a quien está condenado.

(Vanse los dos moros.)

MADRIGAL Si de bien tendrás memoria, porque no es posible menos, 50

de aquel sabio cuyo nombre fue Apolonio Tianeó, el cual, según que lo sabes,
o fuese favor del cielo,
o fuese ciencia adquirida 55 con el trabajo y el tiempo, supo entender de las aves el canto tan por extremo, que en oyéndolas decía: «Esto dicen». Y esto es cierto. 60 Ora cantase el canario, ora trinase el jilguero,
ora gimiese la tórtola, ora graznasen los cuervos, desde el pardal malicioso 65 hasta el águila de imperio, de sus cantos entendía
los escondidos secretos.
Éste fue, según es fama,
abuelo de mis abuelos, 70
a quien dejó de su gracia por únicos herederos.
Uno la supo de todos
los que en aquel tiempo fueron, y no la hereda más de uno 75
de sus más cercanos deudos.
De deudo a deudo ha venido, con el valor de los tiempos, a encerrarse esta ventura en mi desdichado pecho. 80 A esta mañana, que iba
al pecado, porque vengo a tener cercada el alma de esperanzas y de miedos, oí en casa de un judío 85
a un ruiñón pequeñuelo, que, con divina armonía,
aquesto estaba diciendo:
«¿Adónde vas, miserable?

Tuerce el paso, y hurta el cuerpo 90 a la ocasión que te llama y lleva a tu fin postrero.
Cogeránte en el garlito, ya cumplido tu deseo;
morirás, sin duda alguna, 95
si te falta este remedio.
Dile al jüez de tu causa que han decretado los cielos que muera de aquí a seis días y baje al estigio reino; 100 pero que si hiciere emienda de tres grandes desafueros que a dos moros y una viuda no ha muchos años que ha hecho;
y si hiciere la zalá, 105 lavando el cuerpo primero con tal agua (y dijo el agua, que yo decirte no quiero), tendrá salud en el alma, tendrá salud en el cuerpo, 110 y será del Gran Señor favorecido en extremo».
Con esta gracia admirable,
otra más subida tengo:
que hago hablar a las bestias 115 dentro de muy poco tiempo.
Y aquel valiente elefante del Gran Señor, yo me ofrezco de hacerle hablar en diez años distintamente turquesco; 120
y cuando desto faltare, que me empalen, que en el fuego me abrasen, que desmenucen brizna a brizna estos mis miembros.

CADÍEl agua me has de decir, 125 que importa.

MADRIGAL Su tiempo espero, porque ha de ser destilada de ciertas yerbas y yezgos.
Tú no la conocerás;
yo sí, y al cielo sereno 130 se han de coger en tres noches.

(Desátale.)

CADÍ En tu libertad te vuelvo.
Pero una cosa me tiene
confuso, amigo, y perplejo:
que no sé cuál viuda sea, 135 ni cuáles moros sean éstos a quien he de hacer la enmienda:
que veo que son sin cuento los moros de mí ofendidos, y viudas pasan de ciento. 140

MADRIGAL Iré a oír al ruiseñor otra vez, y yo sé cierto que él me dirá en su cántico quién son los que no sabemos.

CADÍA estos moros les diré 145 la causa por que te suelto, que será que al elefante has de hacer hablar turquesco.
Pero dime: ¿acaso sabes hablar turco?

MADRIGAL ¡Ni por pienso! 150

CADÍPues ¿cómo de lo que ignoras quieres mostrarte maestro?

MADRIGALAprenderé cada día lo que mostrarle pretendo, pues habrá tiempo en diez años 155 de aprender el turco y griego.

CADÍDices verdad. Mira, amigo, que mi vida te encomiendo:
que será desto la paga
tu libertad, por lo menos. 160

MADRIGAL¡Penitencia, gran cadí; penitencia y buen deseo de no hacer de aquí adelante tantos tuertos a derechos!

CADÍNo se te olviden las yerbas, 165 que es la importancia del hecho memorable que me has dicho, y sin duda alguna creo:
que ya sé que fue en el mundo Apolonio Tiano, 170
que entendía de las aves el canto, y también entiendo que hay arte que hace hablar a los mudos.

MADRIGAL¡Bueno es eso!
Al elefante os aguardo, 175
y las yerbas os espero.

(Parece el GRAN TURCO detrás de unas cortinas de tafetán verde; salen cuatro bajaes ancianos; siéntanse sobre alfombras y almohadas; entra el EMBAJADOR DE PERSIA, y al entrar le echan encima una ropa de brocado; llévanle dos turcos de brazo, habiéndole mirado primero si trae armas encubiertas; llévanle a asentar en una almohada de terciopelo; descúbrese la cortina; parece el GRAN TURCO. (Mientras esto se hace pueden sonar chirimías). Sentados todos, dice el EMBAJADOR:)

EMBAJADOR    Prospera Alá tu poderoso Estado, señor universal casi del suelo;
sea por luengos siglos dilatado, por suerte amiga y por querer del cielo.    180

La embajada de aquél que me ha enviado, con preámbulos cortos, como suelo, diré, si es que me das de hablar licencia;
que sin ella enmudezco en tu presencia.

BAJÁ 1    Di con la brevedad que has prometido,    185 que si es con la que sueles, será parte a darte el Gran Señor atento oído, puesto que le forzamos a escucharte.
Por muchas persuasiones ha venido a darte audiencia y a respuesta darte;    190 que pocas veces oye al enemigo.
Di, pues; que ya eres largo.

EMBAJADORPues ya digo.

Dice el Soldán, señor, que, si tú gustas de paz, que él te la pide, y que se haga con leyes tan honestas y tan justas,    195 que el tiempo o el rencor no las deshaga;

si a la suya, que es buena, tu alma ajustas, dar el cielo a los dos será la paga.

BAJÁ 2 No aconsejes; propón, di tu embajada.

EMBAJADOR Toda en pedir la paz está cifrada. 200

BAJÁ 1 Ese cabeza roja, ese maldito, que de las ceremonias de Mahoma, con depravado y bárbaro apetito, unas cosas despide y otras toma, bien debe de pensar que el infinito 205 poder, que al mundo espanta, estrecha y doma, del Gran Señor, el cielo tal le tenga, que hacer paces infames le convenga.

Su mendiguez sabemos y sus mañas, por quien con él de nuevo me enemisto, 210 viendo que el grande rey de las Españas muchos persianos en su Corte ha visto.
Éstas son de tu dueño las hazañas;
pedir favor a quien adora en Cristo;
y como ve que el ayudarle niega, 215 por paz cobarde en ruego humilde ruega.

EMBAJADOR Aquella majestad que tiene al mundo admirado y suspenso; el verdadero retrato de Filipo, aquel Segundo, que sólo pudo darse a sí tercero; 220 aquel cuyo valor alto y profundo no es posible alabarle como quiero;
aquel, en fin, que el sol, en su camino, mirando va sus reinos de continuo;
llevado en vuelo de la buena fama 225 su nombre y su virtud a los oídos del Soldán, mi señor, así le inflama el deseo de verle los sentidos, que a mí me insiste, solicita y llama y manda que por pasos no entendidos, 230 por mares y por reinos diferentes, vaya a ver al gran rey.

BAJÁ 1¿Esto consientes?

Echadle fuera. Adulador, camina; embajador cristiano. Echadle fuera; que, de los que profesan su dotrina, 235
algún buen fruto por jamás se espera.
El cuerpo dobla; la cabeza inclina.
Echadle, digo.

BAJÁ 2¿No es mejor que muera?

BAJÁ 1Goce de embajador la preeminencia, que es la que no ejecuta esa sentencia. 240

(Échanle a empujones al EMBAJADOR.)

No es mucho, Gran Señor, que me desmande a alzar la voz, de cólera encendido:
que no ha sido pequeña, sino grande,
la desvergüenza deste fementido.
Vea tu majestad ahora, y mande 245 la respuesta que más fuere servido que se le dé a este can.

TURCOComunicadme

y, cual el caso pide, aconsejadme.

Mirad bien si la paz es conveniente

y honrosa.

BAJÁ 2A lo que yo descubro y veo, 250 que sosegar las armas del Oriente, no te puede pedir más el deseo, con tanto que el persiano no alce frente contra ti. Triste historia es la que leo; que a nosotros la Persia así nos daña, 255 que es lo mismo que Flandes para España.

Conviene hacer la paz, por las razones que en este pergamino van escritas.

TURCOPresto a la paz ociosa te dispones;
presto el regalo blando solicitas. 260 Tú, Braín valeroso, ¿no te opones a Mustafá? ¿Por dicha, solicitas también la paz?

BAJÁ 1La guerra facilito,
y daré las razones por escrito.

TURCO Veréla y veré lo que contiene, 265
y de mi parecer os daré parte.

BAJÁ 1Alá, que el mundo entre los dedos tiene, te entregue dél la rica y mayor parte.

BAJÁ 2Mahoma así la paz dichosa ordene, que se oiga el son del belicoso Marte, 270 no en Persia, sino en Roma, y tus galeras corran del mar de España las riberas.

(Éntranse.)

(Sale la SULTANA y RUSTÁN.)

RUSTÁN Como de su alhaja, puede gozar de ti a su contento.

SULTANA La viva fe de mi intento 275
a toda su fuerza excede:
resuelta estoy de morir,
primero que darle gusto.

RUSTÁN Contra intento que es tan justo no tengo qué te decir; 280 pero mira que una fuerza tal puede mucho, señora;
y mira bien que a ser mora
no te induce ni te fuerza.

SULTANA ¿No es grandísimo pecado 285 el juntarme a un infiel?

RUSTÁN Si pudieras huir dél, te lo hubiera aconsejado;
mas cuando la fuerza va contra razón y derecho, 290 no está el pecado en el hecho, si en la voluntad no está;
condénanos la intención
o nos salva en cuanto hacemos.

SULTANA Eso es andar por extremos. 295

RUSTÁN Sí; mas puestos en razón:

que el alma no es bien peligro cuando por fuerza de brazos echan a su cuerpo lazos que rendirán a una tigre. 300

Desta verdad se recibe
la que no habrá quien la tuerza:
que peca el que hace la fuerza, pero no quien la recibe.

SULTANA Mártir seré si consiento 305
antes morir que pecar.

RUSTÁN Ser mártir se ha de causar por más alto fundamento, que es por el perder la vida por confesión de la fe. 310

SULTANA Esa ocasión tomaré.

RUSTÁN ¿Quién a ella te convida?

Sultán te quiere cristiana,
y a fuerza, si no de grado, sin darle muerte al ganado 315 podrá gozar de la lana.

Muchos santos desearon ser mártires, y pusieron los medios que convinieron para serlo, y no bastaron: 320 que al ser mártir se requiere virtud sobresingular, y es merced particular que Dios hace a quien Él quiere.

SULTANA Al cielo le pediré, 325 ya que no merezco tanto, que a mi propósito santo de su firmeza le dé;
haré lo que fuere en mí,
y en silencio, en mis recelos, 330 daré voces a los cielos.

RUSTÁN Calla, que viene Mamí.

(Entra MAMÍ.)

MAMÍ El Gran Señor viene a verte.

SULTANA ¡Vista para mí mortal!

MAMÍ Hablas, señora, muy mal. 335

SULTANA Siempre hablaré desta suerte;
y no quieras tú mostrarte prudente en aconsejarme.

MAMÍ Sé que vendrás a mandarme, y no es bien discontentarte. 340

(Entra el GRAN TURCO.)

TURCO ¡Catalina!

SULTANAÉse es mi nombre.

TURCO
Catalina la Otomana
te llamarán.

SULTANA
Soy cristiana,
y no admito el sobrenombre, porque es el mío de Oviedo, 345 hidalgo, ilustre y cristiano.

TURCONo es humilde el otomano.

SULTANA
Esa verdad te concedo:
    que en altivo y arrogante ninguno igualarte puede. 350

TURCO
Pues el tuyo al mío excede
y en todo le va adelante, pues que desprecias por él al mayor que el suelo tiene.

SULTANA
Sé yo que en él se contiene 355 lo que es de estimar en él, que es el darme a conocer por cristiana si me nombran.

TURCO
Tus libertades me asombran, que son más que de mujer; 360 pero bien puedes tenellas con quien solamente puede aquello que le concede el valor que vive en ellas.

Dél conozco que te estimas 365 en todo aquello que vales, y con arrogancias tales me alegras y me lastimas.

Muéstrate más soberana, haz que te tenga respeto 370
el mundo, porque, en efeto, has de ser la Gran Sultana.

Y doyte la preeminencia desde luego: ya lo eres.

SULTANA¿Dar a una tu esclava quieres 375 de tu esposa la excelencia?

Míralo bien, porque temo que has de arrepentirte presto.

TURCOYa lo he mirado, y en esto no hago ningún extremo, 380 si ya no fuese el de hacer que con la sangre otomana mezcle la tuya cristiana para darle mayor ser.

Si el fruto que de ti espero 385 llega a colmo, verá el mundo que no ha de tener segundo el que me dieres primero.

No habrá descubierto el sol, en cuanto ciñe y rodea, 390 no, quien pase, que igual sea a un otomano español.

Mira a lo que te dispones, que ya mi alma adivina que has de parir, Catalina, 395 hermosísimos leones.

SULTANA    Antes tomara engendrar águilas.

TURCOA tu fortuna
no hay dificultad alguna que la pueda contrastar. 400

    En la cumbre de la rueda estás, y, aunque variable, contigo ha de ser estable, estando en tu gloria queda.

    Daréte la posesión 405
de mi alma aquesta tarde, y la de mi cuerpo, que arde en llamas de tu afición;
    afición, de amor interno, que, con poderoso brío, 410 de mi alma y mi albedrío tiene el mando y el gobierno.

SULTANA    He de ser cristiana.

TURCOSélo;
que a tu cuerpo, por agora, es el que mi alma adora 415 como si fuese su cielo.

    ¿Tengo yo a cargo tu alma,
o soy Dios para inclinalla, o ya de hecho llevalla
donde alcance eterna palma? 420

    Vive tú a tu parecer, como no vivas sin mí.

RUSTÁN¿Qué te parece, Mamí?

MAMÍ;Mucho puede una mujer!

SULTANA No me has de quitar, señor, 425 que con cristianos no trate.

MAMÍÉste es grande disparate, y el concederle, mayor.

TURCO Tal te veo y tal me veo, que con grave imperio y firme 430 puedes, Sultana, pedirme cuanto te pida el deseo.

De mi voluntad te he dado entera jurisdicción;
tus deseos míos son: 435
mira si estoy obligado
a cumplillos.

MAMÍCaso grave,
y entre turcos jamás visto,
andar por aquí tu Cristo, Rustán.

RUSTÁNÉl mismo lo sabe. 440
Él suele, Mamí, sacar
de mucho mal mucho bien.

TURCOTus aranceles me den el modo que he de guardar para no salir un punto 445 de tu gusto; que el sabelle y el entendelle y hacelle estará en mi alma junto.

Saca de aquesta humildad, bellísima Catalina, 450 que se guía y se encamina a rendir su voluntad.

No quiero gustos por fuerza de gran poder conquistados:
que nunca son bien logrados 455 los que se toman por fuerza.

Como a mi esclava, en un punto pudiera gozarte agora;
mas quiero hacerte señora, por subir el bien de punto; 460 y, aunque del cercado ajeno es la fruta más sabrosa que del propio, ¡extraña cosa!, por la que es tan mía peno.

Entre las manos la tengo, 465
y entre la boca y las manos desparece. ¡Oh, miedos vanos, y a cuántas bajezas vengo!

Puedo cumplir mi deseo
y estoy en comedimientos. 470

RUSTÁN Humilla tus pensamientos, porque muy airado veo
al Gran Señor; no fabriques tu tristeza en su pesar, y a quien ya puedes mandar, 475
no será bien que supliques.

SULTANA Dio el temor con mi buen celo en tierra. ¡Oh pequeña edad!
¡Con cuánta facilidad
te rinde cualquier recelo! 480

Gran Señor, veisme aquí; postro las rodillas ante ti;
tu esclava soy.

TURCO;Cómo así?
Alza, señora, ese rostro,
y en esos sus soles dos, 485 que tanto le hermosean, harás que mis ojos vean el grande poder de Dios, o de la naturaleza,
a quien Alá dio poder 490 para que pudiese hacer
milagros en su belleza.

SULTANA Advierte que soy cristiana, y que lo he de ser contino.

MAMÍ;Caso extraño y peregrino: 495 cristiana una Gran Sultana!

TURCO Puedes dar leyes al mundo,
y guardar la que quisieres:
no eres mía, tuya eres,
y a tu valor sin segundo 500
se le debe adoración,
no sólo humano respeto;
y así, de guardar prometo las sombras de tu intención.
Mamí, tráeme, ¡así tú vivas!, 505 a que den en mi presencia a Sultana la obediencia del serrallo las cautivas.

(Éntrase MAMÍ.)

Reveréncienla, no sólo

los que obediencia me dan, 510 sino las gentes que están desde éste al contrario polo.

SULTANA ¡Mira, señor, que ya pasan
tus deseos de lo justo!

TURCOLas cosas que me dan gusto 515
no se miden ni se tasan;
todas llegan al extremo mayor que pueden llegar, y para las alcanzar
siempre espero, nunca temo. 520

(Vuelve MAMÍ, y con él CLARA, llamada ZAIDA, y ZELINDA, que es LAMBERTO, el que busca ROBERTO.)

MAMÍ Todas vienen.

TURCOÉstas dos
den la obediencia por todas.

ZAIDAHagan dichosas tus bodas las bendiciones de Dios;
fecundo tu seno sea, 525
y, con parto sazonado, del Gran Señor el Estado con mayorazgo se vea;
logres la intención que tienes, que ya de Rustán la sé, 530
y en varios modos te dé el mundo mil parabienes.

ZELINDA    Hermosísima española, corona de su nación,
única en la discreción,    535
y en buenos intentos sola;
    traiga a colmo tu deseo el Cielo, que le conoce, y en estas bodas se goce el dulce y santo Himeneo;    540 por tu parecer se rija
el imperio que posees;
ninguna cosa desees
que el no alcanzalla te aflija; de ensalzarte es cosa llana    545 que Mahoma el cargo toma.

TURCONo le nombréis a Mahoma, que la Sultana es cristiana.

    Doña Catalina es
su nombre, y el sobrenombre    550 de Oviedo, para mí, nombre de riquísimo interés;
    porque, a tenerle de mora,
nunca a mi poder llegara, ni del tesoro gozara    555 que en su hermosura mora.

    Ya como a cosa divina,
sin que lo encubra el silencio, el gran nombre reverencio de mi hermosa Catalina.    560

    Para celebrar las bodas, que han de dar asombro al suelo, deme de su gloria el cielo
y acudan mis gentes todas; concédame el mar profundo,    565 de sus senos temerosos, los pescados más sabrosos;
sus riquezas me dé el mundo;
    denme la tierra y el viento aves y caza, de modo 570 que esté en cada una el todo del más gustoso alimento.

SULTANA Mira, señor, que me agravia el bien que de mí pregonas.

TURCO Denme para tus coronas 575 perlas el Sur, oro Arabia, púrpura Tiro y olores
la Sabea, y, finalmente, denme para ornar tu frente abril y mayo sus flores; 580 y si os parece que el modo de pedir ha dado indicio de tener poco juicio, venid y veréislo todo.

(Éntranse todos, si no es ZAIDA y ZELINDA.)

ZELINDA ¡Oh Clara! ¡Cuán turbias van 585 nuestras cosas! ¿Qué haremos?
Que ya están en los extremos del más sin remedio afán.
¿Yo varón, y en el serrallo del Gran Turco? No imagino 590 traza, remedio o camino
a este mal.

ZAIDA Ni yo le hallo.
¡Grande fue tu atrevimiento!

ZELINDA Llegó do llegó el Amor, que no repara en temor 595

cuando mira a su contento.

Entre una y otra muerte, por entre puntas de espadas contra mí desenvainadas, entrara, mi bien, a verte. 600

Ya te he visto y te he gozado, y a este bien no llega el mal que suceda, aunque mortal.

ZAIDA Hablas como enamorado:

todo eres brío, eres todo 605
valor y todo esperanza;
pero nuestro mal no alcanza remedio por ningún modo:

que desta triste morada, por nuestro mal conocida, 610 es la muerte la salida
y desventura la entrada.

De aquí no hay pensar huir
a más seguro lugar:
que sólo se ha de escapar 615 con las alas del morir.

Ningún cohecho es bastante que a las guardas enternezca, ni remedio que se ofrezca que el morir no esté delante. 620

¿Yo preñada, y tú varón, y en este serrallo? Mira adónde pone la mira nuestra cierta perdición.

ZELINDA ¡Alto! Pues se ha de acabar 625 en muerte nuestra fortuna, no esperar salida alguna es lo que se ha de esperar;
pero estad, Clara, advertida que hemos de morir de suerte 630 que nos granjee la muerte nueva y perdurable vida.

Quiero decir que muramos cristianos en todo caso.

ZAIDA De la vida no hago caso, 635 como a tal muerte corramos.

(Éntranse.)

(Sale MADRIGAL, el maestro del elefante, con una trompetilla de hoja de lata, y sale con él ANDREA, la espía.)

ANDREA ¡Bien te dije, Madrigal, que la alárabe algún día
a la muerte te traería!

MADRIGAL Más bien me hizo que mal. 640

ANDREA Maestro de un elefante te hizo.

MADRIGAL ¿Ya es barro, Andrea?
Podrá ser que no se vea jamás caso semejante.

ANDREA Al cabo, ¿no has de morir 645 cuando caigan en el caso de la burla?

MADRIGALNo hace al caso.
Déjame ahora vivir,
    que, en término de diez años,
o morirá el elefante, 650
o yo, o el Turco, bastante causa a reparar mis daños.
    ¿No fuera peor dejarme arrojar en un costal, por lo menos en la mar, 655
donde pudiera ahogarme, sin que pudiera valerme de ser grande nadador?
    ¿No estoy ahora mejor?
    ¿No podéis vos socorrerme 660 ahora con más provecho
vuestro y mío?

ANDREAAsí es verdad.

MADRIGALAndrea, considerad que este hecho es un gran hecho, y aun salir con él entiendo 665 cuando menos os pensáis.

ANDREAGracias, Madrigal, tenéis, que al diablo las encomiendo.
    ¿El elefante ha de hablar?

MADRIGALNo quedará por maestro; 670
y él es animal tan diestro, que me hace imaginar que tiene algún no sé qué de discurso racional.

ANDREA Vos sí sois el animal 675 sin razón, como se ve, pues en disparates daís
en que no da quien la tiene.

MADRIGAL Darlo a entender me conviene así al Cadí.

ANDREA Bien andáis; 680
pero no os cortéis conmigo las uñas, que no es razón.

MADRIGAL Es mi propia condición burlarme del más amigo.

ANDREA ¿Esa trompeta es de plata? 685

MADRIGAL De plata la pedí yo;
mas dijo quien me la dio que bastaba ser de lata.
Al elefante con ella
he de hablar en el oído. 690

ANDREA ¡Trabajo y tiempo perdido!

MADRIGAL ¡Traza ilustre y burla bella!
Cien ásperos cada día
me dan por acostamiento.

ANDREA ¿Dos escudos? ¡Gentil cuento! 695 ¡Buena va la burlería!

MADRIGAL El cadí es éste. A más ver, que me conviene hablalle.

ANDREA ¿Querrás de nuevo engañalle?

MADRIGAL Podrá ser que pueda ser. 700

(Vase ANDREA, y entra el CADÍ.)

CADÍ Español, ¿has comenzado a enseñar al elefante?

MADRIGAL Sí; y está muy adelante:
cuatro liciones le he dado.

CADÍ ¿En qué lengua?

MADRIGAL En vizcaína, 705 que es lengua que se averigua que lleva el lauro de antigua a la etiopía y abisina.

CADÍ Paréceme lengua estraña.
¿Dónde se usa?

MADRIGAL En Vizcaya. 710

CADÍ ¿Y es Vizcaya...?

MADRIGAL Allá en la raya de Navarra, junto a España.

CADÍ Esta lengua de valor por su antigüedad es sola; enséñale la española, 715 que la entendemos mejor.

MADRIGAL De aquéllas que son más graves, le diré las que supiere,
y él tome la que quisiere.

CADÍ ¿Y cuáles son las que sabes? 720

MADRIGAL La jerigonza de ciegos, la bergamasca de Italia, la gascona de la Galia
y la antigua de los griegos;
con letras como de stampa 725
una materia le haré, adonde a entender le dé
la famosa de la hampa;
y si de aquéstras le pesa,
porque son algo escabrosas, 730 mostraréle las melosas valenciana y portuguesa.

CADÍ A gran peligro se arrisca tu vida si el elefante no sale grande estudiante 735 en la turquesca o morisca o en la española, a lo menos.

MADRIGAL En todas saldrá perito, si le place al infinito sustentador de los buenos, 740 y aun de los malos, pues hace que a todos alumbre el sol.

CADÍ Hazme un placer, español.

MADRIGAL Por cierto que a mí me place.
Declara tu voluntad, 745 que luego será cumplida.

CADÍ Será el mayor que en mi vida pueda hacerme tu amistad.
Dime: ¿qué iban hablando, con acento bronco y triste, 750 aquellos cuervos que hoy viste ir por el aire volando?
Que por entonces no pude preguntártelo.

MADRIGAL Sabrás
(y de aquesto que me oirás 755 no es bien que tu ingenio dude), sabrás, digo, que trataban que al campo de Alcudia irían, lugar donde hartar podían la gran hambre que llevaban: 760 que nunca falta res muerta en aquellos campos anchos, donde podrían sus panchos de su hartura hallar la puerta.

CADÍ Y esos campos, ¿dónde están? 765

MADRIGAL En España.

CADÍ ¡Gran viaje!

MADRIGAL Son los cuervos de volaje tan ligeros, que se van dos mil leguas en un tris:
que vuelan con tal instancia, 770 que hoy amanecen en Francia, y anohecen en París.

CADÍ Dime: ¿qué estaba diciendo aquel colorín ayer?

MADRIGAL Nunca le pude entender; 775 es húngaro: no le entiendo.

CADÍ Y aquella calandria bella, ¿supiste lo que decía?

MADRIGAL Una cierta niñería que no te importa sabella. 780

CADÍ Yo sé que me lo dirás.

MADRIGAL Ella dijo, en conclusión, que andabas tras un garzón,
y aun otras cosillas más.

CADÍ Pues, ¡válgala Lucifer!, 785
¿a qué se mete conmigo?

MADRIGAL Si hay algo de lo que digo, verás que la sé entender.

CADÍ No va muy descaminada; pero no ha llegado el juego 790
a que me abrase en tal fuego.
No digas a nadie nada,
que el crédito quedaría
granjeado a buenas noches.

MADRIGAL Para hablar en tus reproches, 795 es muda la lengua mía.

Bien puedes a sueño suelto dormir en mi confianza, pues de hablar en tu alabanza para siempre estoy resuelto. 800

Puesto que los tordos sean de tu ruindad pregoneros, y la digan los silgueros que en los pimpollos gorjean;

ora los asnos roznando 805
digan tus males protervos, ora graznando los cuervos,
o los canarios cantando:

que, pues yo soy aquel solo que los entiende, seré 810 aquel que los callaré
desde el uno al otro polo.

CADÍ ¿No habrá pájaro que cante alguna virtud de mí?

MADRIGAL Respetar ánte, ¡oh cadí!, 815 si puedo, de aquí adelante:
que, apenas veré en sus labios dar indicios de tus menguas, cuando les corte las lenguas, en pena de tus agravios. 820

(Entra RUSTÁN, el eunuco, y tras él un CAUTIVO anciano, que se pone a escuchar lo que hablan.)

CADÍ Buen Rustán, ¿adónde vais?

RUSTÁNA buscar un tarasí
español.

MADRIGAL ¿No es sastre?

RUSTÁNSÍ.

MADRIGAL Sin duda que me buscáis, pues soy sastre y español, 825 y de tan grande tijera que no la tiene en su esfera el gran tarasí del sol.
¿Qué hemos de cortar?

RUSTÁN Vestidos
ricos para la Sultana, 830 que se viste a la cristiana.

CADÍ¿Dónde tenéis los sentidos?

Rustán, ¿qué es lo que decís?
¿Ya hay Sultana, y que se viste a la cristiana?

RUSTÁNNo es chiste; 835
verdades son las que oís.

Doña Catalina ha nombre con sobrenombre de Oviedo.

CADÍVos diréis algún enredo con que me enoje y asombre. 840

RUSTÁN Con una hermosa cautiva se ha casado el Gran Señor, y consiéntele su amor que en su ley cristiana viva, y que se vista y se trate 845 como cristiana, a su gusto.

CRISTIANO¡Cielo pñadoso y justo!

CADÍ¿Hay tan grande disparate?
Moriré si no voy luego
a reñirle.

(Vase el CADÍ.)

RUSTÁNEn vano irás, 850
pues del amor le hallarás del todo encendido en fuego.

Venid conmigo, y mirad que seáis buen sastre.

MADRIGAL Señor, yo sé que no le hay mejor 855
en toda esta gran ciudad, cautivo ni renegado;
y, para prueba de aquesto, séaos, señor, manifiesto que yo soy aquel nombrado 860 maestro del elefante;
y quien ha de hacer hablar a una bestia, en el cortar de vestir será elegante.

RUSTÁN Digo que tenéis razón; 865 pero si otra no me dais, desde aquí conmigo estáis en contraria posesión.
    Mas, con todo, os llevaré.
Venid.

CRISTIANO Señor, a esta parte, 870 si quieres, quiero hablarte.

RUSTÁN Decid, que os escucharé.

CRISTIANO Para mí es averiguada cosa, por más de un indicio, que éste sabe del oficio 875
de sastre muy poco o nada.
    Yo soy sastre de la Corte, y de España, por lo menos,
y en ella de los más buenos,

de mejor medida y corte; 880 soy, en fin, de damas sastre, y he venido al cautiverio quizá no sin gran misterio, y sin quizá, por desastre.
Llevadme: veréis quizá 885 maravillas.

RUSTÁN Está bien.
Venid vos, y vos también;
quizá alguno acertará.

MADRIGAL Amigo, ¿sois sastre?

CRISTIANO Sí.

MADRIGAL Pues yo a Judas me encomiendo 890 si sé coser un remiendo.

CRISTIANO ¡Ved qué gentil tarasí!
Aunque pienso, con mi maña, antes que a fuerza de brazos, de sacar de aquí retazos 895 que puedan llevarme a España.

(Éntranse todos.)

(Entra la SULTANA con un rosario en la mano, y el GRAN TURCO tras ella, escuchándola.)

SULTANA ¡Virgen, que el sol más bella;

Madre de Dios, que es toda tu alabanza;
del mar del mundo estrella, por quien el alma alcanza 900
a ver de sus borrascas la bonanza!

En mi aflicción te invoco;
advierde, ¡oh gran Señora!, que me anego, pues ya en las sirtes toco del desvalido y ciego 905 temor, a quien el alma ansiosa entrego.

La voluntad, que es mía
y la puedo guardar, ésa os ofrezco, Santísima María;
mirad que desfallezco; 910
dadme, Señora, el bien que no merezco.
¡Oh Gran Señor! ¿Aquí vienes?

TURCOREza, reza, Catalina, que sin la ayuda divina duran poco humanos bienes; 915
y llama, que no me espanta, antes me parece bien,
a tu Lela Marién,
que entre nosotros es santa.

SULTANA No hay generación alguna 920 que no te bendiga, ¡oh Esposa de tu Hijo!, ¡oh tan hermosa que es fea ante ti la luna!

TURCO Bien la puedes alabar, que nosotros la alabamos, 925
y de ser Virgen la damos la palma en primer lugar.

(Entra RUSTÁN, MADRIGAL y el viejo CAUTIVO y MAMÍ.)

RUSTÁN    Éstos son los tarasíes.

MADRIGAL Yo, señor, soy el que sabe cuanto en el oficio cabe; 930 los demás son baladíes.

SULTANA    Vestiréisme a la española.

MADRIGAL Eso haré de muy buen grado, como se le dé recado
bastante a la chirinola. 935

SULTANA    ¿Qué es chirinola?

MADRIGAL Un vestido
trazado por tal compás que tan lindo por jamás ninguna reina ha vestido; trecientas varas de tela 940
de oro y plata entran en él.

SULTANA Pues, ¿quién podrá andar con él, que no se agobie y se muela?

MADRIGAL    Ha de ser, señora mía, la falda postiza.

CRISTIANO ¡Bueno! 945
Éste está de seso ajeno,

o se burla, o desvaría.

Amigo, muy mal te burlas,
y sabe, si no lo sabes, que con personas tan graves 950
nunca salen bien las burlas.

Yo os haré al modo de España un vestido tal que os cuadre.

SULTANA Éste, sin duda, es mi padre, si no es que la voz me engaña. 955

Tomadme vos la medida,
buen hombre.

CRISTIANO ¡Fuera acertado que se la hubieran tomado ya los cielos a tu vida!

SULTANA Sin duda, es él. ¿Qué haré? 960 ¡Puesta estoy en confusión!

TURCO Libertad por galardón, y gran riqueza os daré.

Vestídmela a la española, con vestidos tan hermosos 965 que admiren por lo costosos, como ella admira por sola;
gastad las perlas de Oriente
y los diamantes indianos, que hoy os colmaré las manos 970 y el deseo fácilmente.

Véase mi Catalina
con el adorno que quiere, puesto que en el que trujere la tendré yo por divina. 975

Es ídolo de mis ojos,

y, en el propio o extranjero adorno, adorarla quiero,
y entregarle mis despojos.

CRISTIANO Venid acá, buena alhaja; 980 tomaros he la medida, que fuera más bien medida
a ser de vuestra mortaja.

MADRIGAL Por la cintura comienza, así es sastre como yo. 985

TURCO Cristiano amigo, eso no, que algo toca en desvergüenza;
tanteadla desde fuera,
y no lleguéis a tocalla.

CRISTIANO ¿Adónde, señor, se halla 990 sastre que desa manera haga su oficio? ¿No ves que en el corte erraría si no llevase por guía
la medida?

TURCO Ello así es; 995
mas, a poder escusarse, tendríalo por mejor.

CRISTIANO De mis abrazos, señor, no hay para qué recelarte, que como de padre puede 1000 recebirlos la Sultana.

SULTANA Ya mi sospecha está llana; ya el miedo que tengo excede
a todos los de hasta aquí.

TURCOLlegad, y haced vuestro oficio. 1005

SULTANA No des, ¡oh buen padre!, indicio de ser sino tarasí.

(Estándole tomando la medida, dice el padre:)

CRISTIANO ¡Pluguiera a Dios que estos lazos que tus aseos preparan fueran los que te llevaran 1010
a la fuesa entre mis brazos!
¡Pluguiera a Dios que en tu tierra en humildad y bajeza
se cambiara la grandeza que esta majestad encierra, 1015 y que estos ricos adornos en burieles se trocaran, y en España se gozaran
detrás de redes y tornos!

SULTANA ¡No más, padre, que no puedo 1020 sufrir la reprehensión;
que me falta el corazón
y me desmayo de miedo!
(Desmáyase la SULTANA.)

TURCO ¿Qué es esto? ¿Qué desconcierto es éste? ¿Qué desespero? 1025 Di, encantador, embustero: ¿hasla hechizado?, ¿hasla muerto?

Basilisco, di: ¿qué has hecho?
Espíritu malo, habla.

CRISTIANO Ella volverá a su habla. 1030 Haz que la aflojen el pecho, báñenle con agua el rostro,
y verás cómo en sí vuelve.

TURCO ¡La vida se le resuelve!
¡Empalad luego a ese monstruo! 1035
¡Empalad aquél también!
¡Quitádmelos de delante!

MADRIGAL ¡Primero que el elefante vengo a morir!

MAMÍ ¡Perro, ven!

CRISTIANO Yo soy el padre, sin duda, 1040
de la Sultana, que vive.

MAMÍ De mentiras se apercibe el que la verdad no ayuda.
Venid, venid, embusteros, españoles y arrogantes. 1045

MADRIGAL ¡Oh flor de los elefantes!, hoy hago estanco en el veros.

(Llevan MAMÍ y RUSTÁN por fuerza al PADRE de la SULTANA y a MADRIGAL; queda en el teatro el GRAN TURCO y la SULTANA, desmayada.)

TURCO    ¡Sobre mis hombros vendrás, cielo deste pobre Atlante, en males sin semejante, 1050
si vos en vos no volvéis!
(Llévala.)

Jornada tercera

Salen RUSTÁN y MAMÍ.

MAMÍ A no volver tan presto del grave parasismo, la Sultana quedara
sin padre, y sin maestro el elefante.
Volvió, y a voces dijo: 5 «¿Qué es de mi padre? ¡Ay triste!
¿Adónde está mi padre?», buscándole por todo con la vista.
Sin esperar respuestas de preguntas tardías, 10 el gran señor mandóme que acudiese a quitar del palo o fuego
a los dos tarasíes, certísimo adivino
que el más anciano era 15 de su querida prenda el padre amado.
Corrí, llegué, y hallélos a tiempo que ya estaba aguzando el verdugo
las puntas de los palos del suplicio. 20 El español maestro, apenas se vio libre,
cuando, dando dos brincos, dijo: «¡Gracias a Dios y a mi discípulo!»;
creyendo, a lo que creo, 25 que le daban la vida porque él el habla diese que tiene prometida al elefante.
Al padre anciano truje ante la Gran Sultana, 30 que con abrazos tiernos le recibió, besándole mil veces.

Allí se dieron cuenta,
aunque en razones cortas,
de mil sucesos varios 35
al padre y a la hija acontecidos.
Finalmente, mandóme
el Gran Señor que hiciese cómo en la judería
se alojase su suegro. 40 Ordena que le sirvan
a la cristiana usanza,
con pompa y aparato
que dé fe de su amor y su grandeza.

RUSTÁN;Estraño caso es éste! 45 Ámala tiernamente;
su voluntad se rige
por la de la cristiana.
Al gran cadí no quiso
escuchar, sospechoso 50 que con reprehensiones pesadas sus intentos afearía.
Quiere de aquí a dos días con ella y sus cautivas holgarse en el serrallo 55 con bailes y con danzas cristianiscas.
Músicos he buscado,
cautivos y españoles,
que alegres solenicen
la fiesta, en el serrallo jamás vista. 60 ¿Haré que vayan limpios y vestidos de nuevo?

MAMÍSÍ, pero como esclavos.

RUSTÁNA dar lugar el tiempo, mejor fuera que fueran como libres, 65 con plumas y con galas, representando al vivo
los saraos que en España se acostumbran.

MAMÍNo te metas en eso, pues ves que no es posible. 70

RUSTÁNYa la Sultana tiene un vestido español.

MAMÍ¿Y quién le hizo?

RUSTÁNUn judío le trujo de Argel, a do llegaron dos galeras de corso, 75 colmas de barcas, fuertes de despojos, y allí compró el judío
el vestido que he dicho.

MAMÍSerá indecencia grande vestirse una sultana ropa ajena. 80

RUSTÁNTiene tanto deseo de verse sin el traje turquesco, que imagino que de jerga y sayal se vestiría, como el vestido fuese 85
cortado a lo cristiano.

MAMÍA mí, mas que se vista de hojas de palmitos o lampazos.

RUSTÁN Mamí, vete en buen hora, porque he de hacer mil cosas. 90

MAMÍ Y yo dos mil y tantas en el servicio del señor Oviedo.

(Éntranse.)

(Salen la SULTANA y su PADRE, vestido de negro.)

PADRE Hija, por más que me arguyas, no puedo darme a entender sino que has venido a ser 95 lo que eres por culpas tuyas;
quiero decir, por tu gusto;
que, a tenerle más cristiano, no gozara este tirano
de gusto que es tan injusto. 100 ¿Qué señales de cordeles descubren tus pies y brazos?
¿Qué ataduras o qué lazos fueron para ti crüeles?
De tu propia voluntad 105 te has rendido, convencida desta licenciosa vida,
desta pompa y majestad.

SULTANA Si yo de consentimiento pacífico he convenido 110 con el deste descreído, ministro de mi tormento, todo el Cielo me destruya,

y, atenta a mi perdición, se me vuelva en maldición, 115
padre, la bendición tuya.

Mil veces determiné
antes morir que agradalle;
mil veces, para enojalle, sus halagos desprecié; 120
pero todo mi desprecio, mis desdenes y arrogancia fueron medio y circunstancia para tenerme en más precio.

Con mi celo le encendía, 125
con mi desdén le llamaba, con mi altivez le acercaba a mí cuando más huía.

Finalmente, por quedarme con el nombre de cristiana, 130 antes que por ser sultana, medrosa vine a entregarme.

PADRE Has de advertir en tu mal, y sé que lo advertirás, que por lo menos estás, 135
hija, en pecado mortal.

Mira el estado que tienes, y mira cómo te vales,
porque está lleno de males, aunque parece de bienes. 140

SULTANA Pues sabrás aconsejarme, dime, mas es disparate: ¿será justo que me mate, ya que no quieren matarme?
¿Tengo de morir a fuerza 145 de mí misma? Si no quiere Él que viva, ¿me requiere matarme por gusto o fuerza?

PADRE Es la desesperación pecado tan malo y feo, 150 que ninguno, según creo, le hace comparación.

El matarse es cobardía
y es poner tasa a la mano liberal del Soberano 155
Bien que nos sustenta y cría.

Esta gran verdad se ha visto donde no puede dudarse:
que más pecó en ahorcarse Judas que en vender a Cristo. 160

SULTANA Mártir soy en el deseo, y, aunque por agora duerma la carne frágil y enferma en este maldito empleo, espero en la luz que guía 165
al cielo al más pecador, que ha de dar su resplandor en mi tiniebla algún día;
y desta cautividad,
adonde reino ofendida, 170 me llevará arrepentida a la eterna libertad.

PADRE Esperar y no temer es lo que he de aconsejar, pues no se puede abreviar 175
de Dios el sumo poder.

En su confianza atino,
y no en mal discurso pinto deste ciego laberinto
a la salida el camino; 180
pero si fuera por muerte,

no la huyas, está firme.

SULTANA Mis propósitos confirme el cielo en mi triste suerte, para que, poniendo el pecho 185
al rigor jamás pensado, Él quede de mí pagado
y vos, padre, satisfecho.

Y voyme, porque esta tarde tengo mucho en que entender; 190 que el Gran Señor quiere hacer de mis donaires alarde.

Si os queréis hallar allí, padre, en vuestra mano está.

PADRE ¿Cómo hallarse allí podrá 195
quien está perdido aquí?

Guardarás de honestidad el decoro en tus placeres, y haz aquello que supieres alegre y con brevedad; 200 da indicios de bien criada y bien nacida.

SULTANA Sí haré, puesto que sé que no sé
de gracias algo, ni aun nada.

PADRE ¡Téngate Dios de su mano! 205 ¡Ve con él, prenda querida, malcontenta y bien servida;
yo, triste y alegre en vano!

(Éntranse, y la SULTANA se ha de vestir a lo cristiano, lo más bizarramente que pudiere.)

(Salen los dos músicos, y MADRIGAL con ellos, como cautivos, con sus almillas coloradas, calzones de lienzo blanco, borceguíes negros, todo nuevo, con vueltas sin lechuguillas. MADRIGAL traiga unas sonajas, y los demás sus guitarras. Señálanse los músicos primero y segundo.)

MÚSICO 1.º Otro es esto que estar al pie del palo, esperando la burla que os tenía 210
algo de mal talante.

MADRIGAL ¡Por San Cristo, que estaba algo mohíno! Media entena habían preparado y puesto a punto para ser asador de mis redaños.

MÚSICO 2.º ¿Quién os metió a ser sastre?

MADRIGAL El que nos mete 215
ahora a todos tres a ser poetas, músicos y danzantes y bailistas:
el diablo, a lo que creo, y no otro alguno.

MÚSICO 1.º A no volver en sí la Gran Sultana tan presto, ¡cuál quedábades, bodega! 220

MADRIGAL Como conejo asado, y no en parrillas.
¡Mirad este tirano!

MÚSICO 2.º Hablad pasito.
¡Mala Pascua os dé Dios! ¿No se os acuerda de aquel refrán que dicen comúnmente que las paredes oyen?

MADRIGAL Hablo paso, 225
y digo...

MÚSICO 1.º ¿Qué decís? No digáis nada.

MADRIGAL Digo que el Gran Señor tiene sus ímpetus, como otro cualquier rey de su tamaño, y temo que a cualquiera zancadilla que demos en la danza ha de pringarnos. 230

MÚSICO 2.º ¿Y sabéis vos danzar?

MADRIGAL Como una mula;
pero tengo un romance correntío, que le pienso cantar a la loquesca, que trata ad longum todo el gran suceso de la grande sultana Catalina. 235

MÚSICO 1.º ¿Cómo lo sabéis vos?

MADRIGAL Su mismo padre me lo ha contado todo ad pedem litere.

MÚSICO 2.º ¿Qué cantaremos más?

MADRIGAL Mil zarabandas, mil zambapalos lindos, mil chaconas, y mil pésame dello, y mil folías. 240

MÚSICO 1.º ¿Quién las ha de bailar?

MADRIGAL La Gran Sultana.

MÚSICO 2.º Imposible es que sepa baile alguno, porque de edad pequeña, según dicen, perdió la libertad.

MADRIGAL Mirad, Capacho,
no hay mujer española que no salga 245 del vientre de su madre bailadora.

MÚSICO 1.º Ésa es razón que no la contradigo; pero dudo en que baile la Sultana por guardar el decoro a su persona.

MÚSICO 2.º También danzan las reinas en saraos. 250

MADRIGAL Verdad; y a solas mil desenvolturas, guardando honestidad, hacen las damas.

MÚSICO 1.º Si nos hubieran dado algún espacio para poder juntarnos y acordarnos, trazáramos quizá una danza alegre, 255 cantada a la manera que se usa en las comedias que yo vi en España;
y aun Alonso Martínez, que Dios haya, fue el primer inventor de aquestos bailes, que entretienen y alegran juntamente, 260 más que entretiene un entremés de hambriento, ladrón o apaleado.

MÚSICO 2.ºVerdad llana.

MADRIGAL Desta vez nos empalan; ésta vamos
a ser manjar de atunes y de tencas.

MÚSICO 1.ºMadrigal, ésa es mucha cobardía; 265 mentiroso adivino siempre seas.

(Entra RUSTÁN.)

RUSTÁNAmigos, ¿estáis todos?

MADRIGAL Todos juntos,
como nos ves, con nuestros instrumentos;
pero todos con miedo tal, que temo que habemos de oler mal desde aquí a poco. 270

RUSTÁN Limpios y bien vestidos vais, de nuevo;
no temáis, y venid, que ya os espera el Gran Señor.

MADRIGAL Yo juro a mi pecado que voy.
¡Dios sea en mi ánima!

MÚSICO 2.ºNo temas, que nos haces temer sin cosa alguna, 275
y ayuda a los osados la Fortuna.

(Éntranse.)

(Sale MAMÍ a poner un estrado, con otros dos o tres garzones; tienden una alfombra turca, con cinco o seis almohadas de terciopelo de color.)

MAMÍ Tira más desa parte, Muza, tira; entra por los cojines tú, Arnaute;
y tú, Bairán, ten cuenta que las flores se esparzan por do el Gran Señor pisare, 280 y enciende los pebetes. ¡Ea, acabemos!

(Hácese todo esto sin responder los garzones, y, en estando puesto el estrado, entra el GRAN TURCO, RUSTÁN y los músicos y MADRIGAL.)

TURCO ¿Sois españoles, por ventura?

MADRIGAL Somos.

TURCO ¿De Aragón o andaluces?

MADRIGAL Castellanos.

TURCO ¿Soldados, o oficiales?

MADRIGAL Oficiales.

TURCO ¿Qué oficio tenéis vos?

MADRIGAL ¿Yo? Pregonero. 285

TURCO Y éste, ¿qué oficio tiene?

MADRIGALGuitarrista:
quiero decir que tañe una guitarra peor ochenta veces que su madre.

TURCO¿Qué habilidad esotro tiene?

MADRIGALGrande:
costales cose, y sabe cortar guantes. 290

TURCO¿Por cierto, los oficios son de estima!

MADRIGAL¿Quisieras tú, señor, que el uno fuera herrero, y maestro de hacha fuera el otro, y el otro polvorista, o, por lo menos, maestro de fundar artillería? 295

TURCOA serlo, os estimara y regalara sobre cuantos cautivos tengo.

MADRIGALBueno;
en humo se nos fuera la esperanza de tener libertad.

TURCOCuando Alá gusta,
hace cautivo aquél, y aquéste libre: 300
no hay al querer de Alá quien se le oponga.
Mirad si viene Catalina.

RUSTÁNViene,
y adonde pone la hermosa planta un clavel o azucena se levanta.

TURCO Bien vengas, humana diosa, 305 con verdad, y no opinión;
más que los cielos hermosa, centro do mi corazón
se alegra, vive y reposa;
a mis ojos más lozana 310 que de abril fresca mañana, cuando, en brazos de la aurora, pule, esmalta, borda y dora el campo y al mundo ufana.
No es menester mudar traje 315 para que os rinda, contento, todo el orbe vasallaje.

SULTANA Tantas alabanzas siento que me han de servir de ultraje, pues siempre la adulación 320 nunca dice la razón
como en el alma se siente,
y así, cuando alaba, miente.

MADRIGALA un mentís, un bofetón.

MÚSICO 2.º Madrigal amigo, advierte 325 dónde estamos; no granjees con tu lengua nuestra muerte.

TURCO Puede el valor que posees sobre el cielo engrandecerte.

Ven, señora, y toma asiento, 330 que hoy mi alma tiene intento, dulce fin de mis enojos, de hacerse toda ojos
por mirarte a su contento.

(Siéntese el TURCO y la SULTANA en las almohadas; quedan en pie RUSTÁN y MAMÍ y los músicos.)

MAMÍ A la puerta está el cadí. 335

TURCO Ábrele, y entre, Mamí, pues no hay negarle la entrada.
Esta visita me enfada,
y más por hacerse aquí.

Vendráme a reprehender, 340
a reñir y a exagerar que tengo en mi proceder, como altivez en mandar,
llaneza en obedecer.

Inútil reprehensor 345
ha de ser, porque el Amor, cuyas hazañas alabo,
teniéndome por su esclavo
no me deja ser señor.

(Entra el CADÍ.)

CADÍ ¿Qué es lo que veo? ¡Ay de mí! 350 ¡Cielo, que esto consintáis!

TURCO ¡Por vida del gran cadí, que no me reprehendáis,

y que os sentéis junto a mí!
    Porque las reprehensiones 355
piden lugar y ocasiones diferentes que éstas son.

CADÍEnmudezca mi razón
el silencio que me pones.
    Callo y siéntome.

TURCOAnsí haced. 360
Vosotros, como he pedido,
a darme gusto atended;
que yo sabré, agradecido,
hacer a todos merced.

MADRIGAL    Antes de llegar al trance 365 del baile nunca aprendido, oye, señor, un romance.

MÚSICO 1.º¡Plega a Dios que este perdido no nos pierda en este lance!

MADRIGAL    Y has de saber que es la historia 370 de la vida de tu gloria;
y cantaréle muy presto,
porque soy único en esto,
y lo sé bien de memoria.
    «En un bajel de diez bancos, 375
de Málaga, y en invierno, se embarcó para ir a Orán un tal Fulano de Oviedo, hidalgo, pero no rico:
maldición del siglo nuestro, 380 que parece que el ser pobre al ser hidalgo es anejo.

Su mujer y una hija suya, niña y hermosa en extremo, por convenirles así, 385
también con él se partieron.
El mar les aseguraba
el tiempo, por ser de enero, sazón en que los cosarios se recogen en sus puertos; 390 pero como las desgracias navegan con todos vientos, una les vino tan mala,
que la libertad perdieron.
Morato Arráez, que no duerme 395 por desvelar nuestro sueño, en aquella travesía
alcanzó al bajel ligero;
hizo escala en Tetuán
y a la niña vendió luego 400
a un famoso y rico moro, cuyo nombre es Alí Izquierdo.
La madre murió de pena;
al padre a Argel le trujeron, adonde sus muchos años 405
le escusaron de ir al remo.
Cuatro años eran pasados, cuando Morato, volviendo a Tetuán, vio a la niña más hermosa que el sol mismo. 410 Compróla de su patrón, cuatrodoblándole el precio que había dado por ella
a Alí, comprador primero, el cual le dijo a Morato: 415
"De buena gana la vendo, pues no la puedo hacer mora por dádivas ni por ruegos.
Diez años tiene apenas;

mas tal discreción en ellos, 420 que no les hacen ventaja los maduros de los viejos.
Es gloria de su nación
y de fortaleza ejemplo;
tanto más cuanto es más sola, 425
y de humilde y frágil sexo".
Con la compra el gran cosario sobremanera contento,
se vino a Constantinopla, creo el año de seiscientos; 430
presentóla al Gran Señor, mozo entonces, el cual luego
del serrallo a los eunucos hizo el estremado entrego.
En Zoraida el Catalina, 435 su dulce nombre, quisieron trocarle; mas nunca quiso, ni el sobrenombre de Oviedo.
Viola al fin el Gran Señor, después de varios sucesos, 440
y, cual si mirara al sol, quedó sin vida y suspenso;
ofrecióle el mayorazgo
de sus estendidos reinos,
y dióle el alma en señal...» 445

TURCO;Qué gran verdad dice en esto!

MADRIGAL«Consíéntale ser cristiana...»

CADÍ;Estraño consentimiento!

TURCOCalla, amigo; no me turbes, que estoy mis dichas oyendo. 450

MADRIGAL«Cómo no la halló su padre, contar aquí no pretendo:
que serán cuentos muy largos, si he de abreviar este cuento;
basta que vino a buscalla 455 por discursos y rodeos dignos de más larga historia y de otra sazón y tiempo.
Hoy Catalina es Sultana, hoy reina, hoy vive y hoy vemos 460 que del león otomano pisa el indomable cuello;
hoy le rinde y avasalla,
y, con no vistos extremos, hace bien a los cristianos. 465
Y esto sé deste suceso.»

MÚSICO 2.º¡Oh repentino poeta!
El rubio señor de Delo, de su agua de Aganipe
te dé a beber un caldero. 470

MÚSICO 1.ºPaladéente las musas con jamón y vino añejo de Rute y Ciudarréal.

MADRIGALCon San Martín me contento.

CADÍ¡El diablo es este cristiano! 475 Yo le conozco, y sé cierto que sabe más que Mahoma.

TURCOHacerles mercedes pienso.

MADRIGAL Tú, señora, a nuestra usanza ven, que has de ser de una danza 480 la primera y la postrera.

SULTANA El gusto de esa manera del Gran Señor no se alcanza; que, como la libertad perdí tan niña, no sé 485 bailes de curiosidad.

MADRIGAL Yo, señora, os guiaré.

SULTANA En buen hora comenzad.

(Levántase la SULTANA a bailar, y ensáyase este baile bien.)

(Cantan los músicos:)

MÚSICO A vos, hermosa española, tan rendida el alma tengo, 490 que no miro por mi gusto
por mirar al gusto vuestro; por vos ufano y gozoso
a tales extremos vengo, que precio ser vuestro esclavo 495 más que mandar mil imperios;
por vos, con discurso claro, puesto que puedo, no quiero admitir reprehensiones ni escuchar graves consejos; 500 por vos, contra mi Profeta, que me manda en sus preceptos que aborrezca a los cristianos, por vos, no los aborrezco;

con vos, niña de mis ojos, 505
todas mis venturas veo,
y sé que, sin duda alguna,
por vos vivo y por vos muero.

(Muda el baile.)

Escuchaba la niña los dulces requiebros,
y está de su alma su gusto lejos. 510

Como tiene intento
de guardar su ley,
requiebros del rey
no le dan contento.
Vuelve el pensamiento 515
a parte mejor,
sin que torpe amor
le turbe el sosiego.

Y está de su alma su gusto lejos.

Su donaire y brío 520
estremos contienen que del Turco tienen
preso el albedrío.
Arde con su frío,
su valor le asombra, 525
y adora su sombra,
puesto que vee cierto
que está de su alma su gusto lejos.

TURCO Paso, bien mío, no más, porque me llevas el alma 530 tras cada paso que das.
Déte el donaire la palma,
la ligereza y compás.

Alma mía, sosegad,
y si os cansáis, descansad; 535
y en este dichoso día

la liberal mano mía
a todos da libertad.

(Híncanse delante del TURCO, en diciendo esto, todos de rodillas: los cautivos, y ZAIDA y ZELINDA, los garzones y la SULTANA.)

SULTANA ¡Mil veces los pies te beso!

ZELINDA ¡Éste ha sido para mí 540 felicísimo suceso!

TURCO Catalina, ¿estás en ti?

SULTANA No, señor, yo lo confieso: que con la grande alegría de la suma cortesía 545 que has con nosotros usado, tengo el sentido turbado.

TURCO Levanta, señora mía, que a ti no te comprende la merced que quise hacer; 550
y, si la queréis saber,
a los esclavos se estiende, y no a ti, que eres señora de mi alma, a quien adora como si fueses su Alá. 555

ZELINDA ¡Cerróseme el cielo ya!
¡Llegó de mi fin la hora!
No sé, Clara, qué temores de nuevo me pronostican el fin de nuestros amores, 560 y que ha de ser significan nuevo ejemplo de amadores.

Creí que la libertad que la liberalidad del Gran Señor prometía, 565
a nosotros se extendía, mas no ha salido verdad.

ZAIDA Calla, y mira que no des indicio de la sospecha, que me contarás después. 570

CADÍ¿De la merced tan bien hecha no han de gozar estos tres?

TURCO Los dos, sí; pero éste no, que es aquel que se ofreció de mostrar al elefante 575
a hablar turquesco elegante.

MADRIGAL¿Cuerpo de quien me parió!
¿Ahí llegamos ahora?

TURCOEnséñele, y llegará de su libertad la hora. 580

MADRIGALHora menguada será, si Andrea no la mejora.

Pondré pies en polvorosa;
tomaré de Villadiego
las calzas.

CADÍEs tan hermosa 585

Catalina, que no niego
ser su suerte venturosa.

Pero, entre estos regocijos, atiende, hijo, a hacer hijos, y en más de una tierra siembra. 590

TURCO
Catalina es bella hembra.

CADÍY tus deseos prolijos.

TURCO ¿Cómo prolijos, si están a sólo un objeto atentos?

CADÍLos sucesos lo dirán. 595

TURCOCon todo, tus documentos por mí en obra se pondrán.

Escucha aparte, Mamí.

MADRIGALY escuche, señor cadí, cosas que le importan mucho. 600

CADÍYa, Madrigal, os escucho.

MADRIGALPues ya hablo, y digo así:

que me vengan luego a ver treinta escudos, que han de ser para comprar al instante 605 un papagayo elegante que un indio trae a vender.

De las Indias del Poniente, el pájaro sin segundo

viene a enseñar suficiente 610 a la ignorante del mundo sabia y rica y pobre gente.

Lo que dice te diré,
pues ya sabes que lo sé por ciencia divina y alta. 615

CADÍVe por ellos, que sin falta en mi casa los daré.

TURCO Mamí, mira que sea luego, porque he de volver al punto.
Venid, yesca de mi fuego, 620
divino y propio trasunto de la madre del dios ciego.

Venid vosotros, gozad
de la alegre libertad que he concedido a los dos. 625

MÚSICO 2.º ¡Concédate el alto Dios siglos de felicidad!

MADRIGAL Dicipulo, ¿dónde hallaste una paga tan perdida del gran bien que en mí cobraste? 630 Que si me diste la vida, la libertad me quitaste.

Desto infiero, juzgo y siento que no hay bien sin su descuento, ni mal que algún bien no espere, 635 si no es el mal del que muere y va al eterno tormento.

(Vanse todos, si no es MAMÍ y RUSTÁN, que quedan.)

MAMÍ ¿Qué piensas que me quería el Gran Sultán?

RUSTÁN No sé cierto;
pero saberlo querría. 640

MAMÍ Él tiene, y en ello acierto, voluble la fantasía.

Quiere renovar su fuego y volver al dulce fuego de sus pasados placeres; 645 quiere ver a sus mujeres,
y no tarde, sino luego.

Cuadróle mucho el consejo del gran cadí, que le dijo, como astuto, sabio y viejo: 650 «Hijo, hasta hacer un hijo que sembréis os aconsejo en una y en otra tierra:
que si ésta no, aquélla encierra alegre fertilidad». 655

RUSTÁN Fundado en esa verdad, Amurates poco yerra.

Poco agravia a la Sultana, pues por tener heredero cualquier agravio se allana. 660

MADRIGAL Y aun es mejor, considero, no haberle en una cristiana de cuantas cautivas tiene.
¿Quién es ésta que aquí viene?

RUSTÁNDos son.

MAMÍEstas dos serán 665
las que principio darán al alarde.

RUSTÁNAsí conviene,
que son en extremo bellas.

(Entran CLARA y LAMBERTO; y, como se ha dicho, son ZAIDA y ZELINDA.)

ZELINDANo puedo de mis querellas darte cuenta, que aún aquí 670 se están Rustán y Mamí.

ZAIDAPon silencio, amigo, en ellas.

MAMÍ Cada cual de vosotras pida al cielo que la suerte le sea favorable en que Sultán la mire y le contente. 675

ZELINDA¿Pues cómo? ¿El Gran Señor vuelve a su usanza?

RUSTÁNY en este punto se ha de hacer alarde de todas sus cautivas.

ZAIDA¿Cómo es esto?
¿Tan presto se le fue de la memoria la singular belleza que adoraba? 680
El suyo no es amor, sino apetito.

RUSTÁN Busca dónde hacer un heredero, y sea en quien se fuere; ésta es la causa de mostrarse inconstante en sus amores.

MAMÍ ¿Dónde pondré a Zelinda que la mire? 685 Que tiene parecer de ser fecunda.
¿Será bien al principio?

ZELINDA ¡Ni por pienso!
Remate sean de la hermosa lista
Zaida y Zelinda.

MAMÍ Sean en buen hora, pues que dello gustáis.

RUSTÁN Mira, Zelinda: 690
da rostro al Gran Señor; muéstrale el vivo varonil resplandor de tus dos soles:
quizá te escogerá, y serás dichosa dándole el mayorazgo que desea.
Aquí será el remate de la cuenta. 695 Quedaos en tanto que a las otras pongo en numerosa lista.

ZAIDA Yo obedezco.

ZELINDA Y yo que aquí nos pongas te agradezco.

(Vanse MAMÍ y RUSTÁN.)

ZELINDA ¡Ahora sí que es llegada la infelicísima hora, 700
antes de venir, menguada!
¿Qué habemos de hacer, señora, yo varón y tú preñada?

Que si Amurates repara en esa tu hermosa cara, 705 escogeráte, sin duda;
y no hay prevención que acuda
a desventura tan clara.

Y si, por desdicha, fuese tan desdichada mi suerte 710 que el Gran Señor me escogiese...

ZAIDA Veréme en el de mi muerte, si en ese paso te viese.

ZELINDA ¿No será bien afearnos los rostros?

ZAIDA Será obligarnos 715
a dar razón del mal hecho, y será tan sin provecho que ella sea en condenarnos.

ZELINDA Mira qué prisa se dan el renegado Mamí 720
y el mal cristiano Rustán.
Ya las cautivas aquí
llegan: ya todas están;
yo seguro, si las cuentas, que hallarás más de docientas. 725

ZAIDA Y todas, a lo que creo, con diferente deseo

del nuestro, pero contentas.
¡Oh, qué de paso que pasa por todas el Gran Señor! 730
A más de la mitad pasa.

ZELINDA Clara, un helado temor el corazón me traspasa.
¡Plegue a Dios que, antes que llegue, el cielo a la tierra pegue 735 sus pies!

ZAIDA Quizá escogerá
primero que llegue acá.

ZELINDA Y si llegare, ¡que ciegue!

(Entra el GRAN TURCO, MAMÍ y RUSTÁN.)

TURCO De cuantas quedan atrás no me contenta ninguna. 740
Mamí, no me muestres más.

MAMÍ Pues entre estas dos hay una en quien te satisfacerás.

RUSTÁN Alzad, que aquí la vergüenza no conviene que os convenza; 745 alzad el rostro las dos.

TURCO ¡Catalina, como vos,

no hay ninguna que me venza!

Mas, pues lo quiere el cadí, y ello me conviene tanto, 750
ésta me trairéis, Mamí.

(Échale un pañizuelo el TURCO a ZELINDA y vase.)

RUSTÁN; Tú solenizas con llanto la dicha de estotra?

ZAIDASí;
porque quisiera yo ser
la que alcanzara tener 755 tal dicha.

MAMÍZelinda, vamos.

RUSTÁNSola y triste te dejamos.

ZAIDA;Tengo envidia, y soy mujer!

(Vanse RUSTÁN y MAMÍ, y llevan a ZELINDA, que es LAMBERTO.)

¡Oh mi dulce amor primero!
¿Adónde vas? ¿Quién te lleva 760 a la más estraña prueba que hizo amante verdadero?

Esta triste despedida bien claro me da a entender que, por tu sobra, ha de ser 765 mi falta más conocida.

¿Qué remedio habrá que cuadre en tan grande confusión, si eres, Lamberto, varón,

y te quieren para madre? 770 ¡Ay de mí, que de la culpa de nuestro justo deseo, por ninguna suerte veo
ni remedio ni disculpa!

(Sale la SULTANA.)

SULTANA Zaida, ¿qué has?

ZAIDA Mi señora, 775
no alcanzo cómo te diga el dolor que en mi alma mora: Zelinda, aquella mi amiga que estaba conmigo ahora, al Gran Señor le han llevado. 780

SULTANA ¿Pues eso te da cuidado?
¿No va a mejorar ventura?

ZAIDA Lévanla a la sepultura;
que es varón y desdichado.

Ambos a dos nos quisimos 785 desde nuestros años tiernos, y ambos somos transilvanos,
de una patria y barrio mismo.

Cautivé yo por desgracia, que ahora no te la cuento 790 porque el tiempo no se gaste sin pensar en mi remedio;
él supo con nueva cierta
el fin de mi cautiverio, que fue traerme al serrallo, 795

sepulcro de mis deseos, y los suyos de tal suerte
le apretaron y rindieron, que se dejó cautivar con un discurso discreto. 800 Vistióse como mujer,
cuya hermosura al momento hizo venderla al Gran Turco sin conocerla su dueño.
Con este designio extraño 805
salió con su intento Alberto,
que éste es el nombre del triste
por quien muero y por quien peno.
Conocióme y conocíle,
y destos conocimientos 810
he quedado yo preñada;
que lo estoy, y estoy muriendo.
Mira, hermosa Catalina, que con este nombre entiendo que te alegras: ¿qué he de hacer 815 en mal de tales extremos?
Ya estará en poder del Turco el desdichado mancebo,
enamorado atrevido,
más constante que no cuerdo; 820 ya me parece que escucho que vuelve Mamí diciendo: «Zaida, ya de tus amores se sabe todo el suceso.
¡Dispónte a morir, traidora, 825 que para ti queda el fuego encendido, y puesto el gancho para enganchar a Lamberto!»

SULTANA Ven conmigo, Zaida hermosa, y ten ánimo, que espero, 830
en la gran bondad de Dios, salir bien de aqueste estrecho.

(Éntranse las dos.)

(Sale el GRAN TURCO, y trae asido del cuello a LAMBERTO, con una daga desenvainada; sale con el CADÍ y MAMÍ.)

TURCO ¡A mí el ser verdugo toca de tan infame maldad!

ALBERTO Tiempla la celeridad 835 que aun tu grandeza apoca; déjame hablar, y dame
después la muerte que gustes.

TURCO No podrás con tus embustes que tu sangre no derrame. 840

CADÍ Justo es escuchar al reo: Amurates, óyele.

TURCO Diga, que yo escucharé.

MAMÍ Que se disculpe deseo.

ALBERTO Siendo niña, a un varón sabio 845 oí decir las excelencias y mejoras que tenía
el hombre más que la hembra;
desde allí me aficioné
a ser varón, de manera 850 que le pedí esta merced al Cielo con asistencia.

Cristiana me la negó,
y mora no me la niega Mahoma, a quien hoy gimiendo, 855 con lágrimas y ternezas, con fervorosos deseos,
con votos y con promesas,
con ruegos y con suspiros que a una roca enternecieron, 860 desde el serrallo hasta aquí, en silencio y con inmensa eficacia, le he pedido me hiciese merced tan nueva.
Acudió a mis ruegos tiernos, 865 enternecido, el Profeta, y en un instante volvíome en fuerte varón de hembra;
y si por tales milagros se merece alguna pena, 870
vuelva el Profeta por mí, y por mi inocencia vuelva.

TURCO ¿Puede ser esto, cadí?

CADÍY sin milagro, que es más.

TURCONi tal vi, ni tal oí. 875

CADÍEl cómo es esto sabrás, cuando quisieres, de mí,
y la razón te dijera
ahora si no viniera
la Sultana, que allí veo. 880

TURCOY enojada, a lo que creo.

ALBERTO; Mi desesperar espera!

(Entra la SULTANA y ZAIDA.)

SULTANA ¡Cuán fácilmente y cuán presto has hecho con esta prueba tu tibio amor manifiesto! 885 ¡Cuán presto el gusto te lleva tras el que es más descompuesto!

Si es que estás arrepentido de haberme, señor, subido desde mi humilde bajeza 890
a la cumbre de tu alteza, déjame, ponme en olvido.

Bien, cuitada, yo temía que estas dos habían de ser azares de mi alegría; 895 bien temí que había de ver este punto y este día.

Pero, en medio de mi daño, doy gracias al desengaño,
y, porque yo no perezca, 900 no ha dejado que más crezca tu sabroso y dulce engaño.

Échalas de ti, señor,
y del serrallo al momento:
que bien merece mi amor 905 que me des este contento y asegures mi temor.

Todos mis placeres fundo en pensar no harás segundo yerro en semejante cosa. 910

TURCOMás precio verte celosa, que mandar a todo el mundo, si es que son los celos hijos del Amor, según es fama,
y, cuando no son prolijos, 915 aumentan de amor la llama, la gloria y los regocijos.

SULTANA Si por dejar herederos este y otros desafueros haces, bien podré afirmar 920 que yo te los he de dar, y que han de ser los primeros, pues tres faltas tengo ya de la ordinaria dolencia que a las mujeres les da. 925

TURCO;Oh archivo do la prudencia
y la hermosura está!
    Con la nueva que me has dado, te prometo, a fe de moro bien nacido y bien criado, 930 de guardarte aquel decoro que tú, mi bien, me has guardado; que los cielos, en razón de no dar más ocasión
a los celos que has tenido, 935
a Zelinda han convertido, como hemos visto, en varón.
    Él lo dice, y es verdad,
y es milagro, y es ventura,
y es señal de su bondad. 940

SULTANAY es un caso que asegura sin temor nuestra amistad.
    Y, pues tal milagro pasa,

con Zaida a Zelinda casa, y con lágrimas te ruego 945
los echés de casa luego;
no estén un punto en tu casa, que no quiero ver visiones.

ZAIDA En duro estrecho me pones, que no quisiera casarme. 950

SULTANA Podrá ser vengáis a darme por esto mil bendiciones.
Hazles alguna merced,
que no los he de ver más.

TURCO Vos, señora, se la haced. 955

RUSTÁN ¿Ha visto el mundo jamás tal suceso?

TURCO Disponed,
señora, a vuestro albedrío
de los dos.

SULTANA Bajá de Xío,
Zelinda o Zelindo es ya. 960

TURCO ¿Cómo tan poco le da tu gran poder, si es el mío?
Bajá de Rodas le hago,
y con esto satisfago
a su valor sin segundo. 965

ALBERTO Déte sujeción el mundo,

y a ti el Cielo te dé el pago de tus entrañas piadosas, ¡oh rosa puesta entre espinas para gloria de las rosas! 970

TURCO Tú me fuerzas, no que inclinas, a hacer magníficas cosas;
y así quiero, en alegrías de las ciertas profecías que de tus partos me has dado, 975 que tenga el cadí cuidado de hacer de las noches días; infinitas luminarias
por las ventanas se pongan, y, con invenciones varias, 980 mis vasallos se dispongan
a fiestas extraordinarias; renueven de los romanos los santos y los profanos grandes y admirables juegos, 985
y también los de los griegos, y otros, si hay más, soberanos.

CADÍ Haráse como deseas, y desta grande esperanza en la posesión te veas; 990
y tú con honesta usanza, cual Raquel, fecunda seas.

SULTANA Vosotros luego en camino os poned, que determino no veros más, por no ver 995 ocasión que haya de ser causa de otro desatino.

ALBERTO En dándome la patente, me veré, señora mía,
de tu alegre vista ausente, 1000 y tu ingenio y cortesía tendré continuo presente.

ZAIDA Y yo, hermosa Catalina, por sin par y por divina tendré vuestra discreción. 1005

TURCO Justas alabanzas son de su bondad peregrina.
Ven, cristiana de mis ojos, que te quiero dar de nuevo de mi alma los despojos. 1010

SULTANA Dese modo, yo me llevo la palma destos enojos;
porque las paces que hacen amantes desavenidos alegran y satisfacen 1015
sobremodo a los sentidos, que enojados se deshacen.

(Éntranse todos.)

(Salen MADRIGAL y ANDREA.)

MADRIGAL Veislos aquí, Andrea, y dichosísimo seré si me ponéis en salvamento; porque no hay que esperar a los diez años 1020 de aquella elefantil cátedra mía; más vale que los ruegos de los buenos el salto de la mata.

ANDREA¿No está claro?

MADRIGALLos treinta de oro en oro son el precio de un papagayo indiano, único al mundo, 1025 que no le falta sino hablar.

ANDREASi es mudo,
alabáisle muy bien.

MADRIGAL¿Cadí ignorante!...

ANDREA¿Qué decís del cadí?

MADRIGALPor el camino te diré maravillas. Ven, que muero por verme ya en Madrid hacer corrillos 1030 de gente que pregunte: «¿Cómo es esto?
Diga, señor cautivo, por su vida:
¿es verdad que se llama la Sultana que hoy reina en la Turquía, Catalina, y que es cristiana, y tiene don y todo, 1035
y que es de Oviedo el sobrenombre suyo?» ¡Oh, qué de cosas les diré! Y aun pienso, pues tengo ya el camino medio andado, siendo poeta, hacerme comediante y componer la historia desta niña 1040 sin discrepar de la verdad un punto, representado el mismo personaje allá que hago aquí. ¿Ya es barro, Andrea, ver al mosqueterón tan boquiabierto, que trague moscas, y aun avispas trague, 1045 sin echarlo de ver, sólo por verme?

Mas él se vengará quizá poniéndome nombres que me amohínen y fastidien.
¡Adiós, Constantinopla famosísima!
¡Pera y Permas, adiós! ¡Adiós, escala, 1050 Chifutí y aun Guedí! ¡Adiós, hermoso jardín de Visitax! ¡Adiós, gran templo que de Santa Sofía sois llamado, puesto que ya servís de gran mezquita!
¡Tarazanas, adiós, que os lleve el diablo, 1055 porque podéis al agua cada día echar una galera fabricada desde la quilla al tope de la gavia, sin que le falte cosa necesaria a la navegación!

ANDREAMira que es hora, 1060
Madrigal.

MADRIGALYa lo veo, y no me quedan sino trecientas cosas a quien darles el dulce adiós acostumbrado mío.

ANDREAVamos, que tanto adiós es desvarío.

(Vanse.)

(Salen SALEC, el renegado, y ROBERTO (los dos primeros que comenzaron la comedia).)

SALECElla, sin duda, es, según las señas 1065 que me ha dado Rustán, aquel eunuco que dije ser mi amigo.

ROBERTO No lo dudo;
que aquel volverse en hombre por milagro fue industria de Lamberto, que es discreto.

SALEC Vamos a la gran corte, que podría 1070 ser que saliese ya con la patente de gran bajá de Rodas, como dicen que el Gran Señor le ha hecho.

ROBERTO ¡Dios lo haga!
¡Oh si los viese yo primero, y antes que cerrase la muerte estos mis ojos! 1075

SALEC Vamos, y el cielo alegre tus enojos.

(Éntranse.)

(Suenan las chirimías; comienzan a poner luminarias; salen los garzones del TURCO por el tablado, corriendo con hachas y hachos encendidos, diciendo a voces: «¡Viva la gran sultana doña Catalina de Oviedo! ¡Felice parto tenga, tenga parto felice!» Salen luego RUSTÁN y MAMÍ, y dicen a los garzones:)

RUSTÁN Alzad la voz, muchachos; viva a voces la gran sultana doña Catalina, gran sultana y cristiana, gloria y honra de sus pequeños y cristianos años, 1080 honor de su nación y de su patria, a quien Dios de tal modo sus deseos encamine, por justos y por santos, que de su libertad y su memoria se haga nueva y verdadera historia. 1085

Jornada primera

Salen dos ciudadanos de Novara, y el DUQUE ANASTASIO en hábito de labrador.

ANASTASIO    Señores, ¿es verdad lo que se suena; que apenas treinta millas de Novara está Manfredo, duque de Rosena?

CIUDADANO 1    Si esa verdad queréis saber más clara, aquí un embajador del duque viene,    5 que bien la nueva y su llegada aclara.

En Roso y sus jardines se entretiene, hasta que nuestro duque le dé aviso para venir al tiempo que conviene.

ANASTASIO    ¿Y es Manfredo galán?

CIUDADANO 2    Es un Narciso,    10
según que sus retratos dan la muestra, y aun le va bien de discreción y aviso.

ANASTASIO    ¿Y Rosamira, la duquesa vuestra, pone de voluntad el yugo al cuello?

CIUDADANO 1    Nunca al querer del padre fue siniestra;    15 cuanto más, que se vee que gana en ello, siendo el duque quien es.

ANASTASIO Así parece;
aunque, con todo, algunos dudan dello:

CIUDADANO 2 Del duque es esta guarda que se ofrece,
y aquí el embajador vendrá, sin duda. 20

CIUDADANO 1 Mucho le honra el duque.

CIUDADANO 2 Él lo merece.

(Entra el DUQUE FEDERICO DE NOVARA y el EMBAJADOR DE EL DE ROSENA, con acompañamiento.)

DUQUE Diréis también que a recrearse acuda.
Y que en Módena o Reza se entretenga mientras del tiempo este rigor se muda, para que en este espacio se prevenga 25
a su venida tal recibimiento, que más de amor que de grandeza tenga;
añadiréis el singular contento que con sus donas recibió su esposa, y más de su llegada a salvamento. 30

EMBAJADOR Tu condición, señor, tan generosa, me obliga a que me haga lenguas todo para decir el bien que en ti reposa; pero, aunque no las tenga, me acomodo a decir por extenso al señor mío 35 de tus grandezas el no visto modo.

DUQUE Dellas no, mas de vos muy más confío.

(Entra DAGOBERTO, hijo del duque de Utrino.)

DAGOBERTO Si no supiera, ¡oh sabio Federico!, gran duque de Novara generoso, que sabes bien quién soy, y que me aplico 40 contino al proceder más virtuoso, juro por lo que puedo y certifico que a este trance viniera temeroso;
mas tráeme mi bondad aquí sin miedo, para decir lo que encubrir no puedo. 45

Tu honra puesta en deshonorado trance está por quien guardarla más debiera, haciendo della peligroso alcance la fama, en esta parte verdadera.
Forzosa es la ocasión, forzoso el lance; 50 las riendas he soltado en la carrera:
imposible es parar hasta que diga lo que una justa obligación me obliga.

Tu hija Rosamira en lazo estrecho yace con quien pudiera declarallo, 55 si a la grande importancia deste hecho tocara con la lengua publicallo.
Impide una ocasión lo que el derecho pide, y así, es forzoso el ocultallo; basta que esto es verdad, y que me obligo 60
a probar con las armas lo que digo.

Digo que en deshonorado ayuntamiento se estrecha con un bajo caballero, sin tener a tus canas miramiento, ni a la ofensa de Dios, que es lo primero. 65 Y a probar la verdad de lo que cuento diez días en el campo armado espero; que ésta es la vía que el derecho halla;
do no hay testigos, suple la batalla.

DUQUE Confuso estoy; no sé qué responderte; 70 considero quién eres, e imagino que sólo la verdad pudo traerte a cerrar de mis glorias el camino.

¿Quién dará medio a extremos de tal suerte?
Es el que acusa un príncipe de Utrino; 75 la acusada, mi hija; él, sabio y justo;
ella, cortada de la honra al justo.

A que te crea tu valor me incita, puesto que la bondad de Rosamira tiene perpleja el alma, y solicita 80 que no confunda a la razón la ira.
Mas, si es que en parte la sospecha quita,
o muestra la verdad o la mentira, la confesión del reo, oílla quiero, por ver si he de ser padre o juez severo. 85

Traigan a Rosamira a mi presencia, que es bien que la verdad no se confunda:
que el reo a quien le libra su inocencia, la avisa en gloria y en su honor redunda.

EMBAJADOR Dame, señor, para partir licencia; 90 que, aunque entiendas que el príncipe se funda en claro o en confuso testimonio, borrado ha de Manfredo el matrimonio.

Calunia tal, o falsa o verdadera, deshará más fundadas intenciones: 95 que no es prenda la honra tan ligera que se deba traer en opiniones.
Mira si mandas otra cosa.

DUQUE Espera;
quizá verás que sin razón te pones a llevar a Manfredo aquesta nueva, 100 hasta que veas más fundada prueba.

Tráiganme aquí a mi hija.

GUARDIA Ya son idos
por ella.

DAGOBERTO ¿Poca prueba te parece la verdad que en mis hechos comedidos y en mis palabras la razón ofrece? 105

DUQUE Yo he visto engaños por verdad creídos.

DAGOBERTO El que dellos se precia bien merece que su verdad se tenga por mentira.

(Entra ROSAMIRA.)

GUARDIA Ya viene mi señora Rosamira.

ROSAMIRA ¿Qué prisa es ésta, buen señor?

DUQUE ¿Qué prisa? 110
Dirála ahora el príncipe de Utrino.

DAGOBERTO Diréla, y sabe Dios cuánto me pesa el venirla a decir por tal camino.
Yo he dicho, ¡oh, hermosísima duquesa!, lo que callarlo fuera desatino: 115
he dicho que, con torpe ayuntamiento, un caballero está de ti contento;
copia de ti le haces en secreto.
Y esta prueba remítola a mi espada, que ha de ser el testigo más perfecto 120 que se halle en la causa averiguada;
y esto será cuando deste aprieto se admita tu disculpa mal fundada;
mas sabes que es tan cierta ésta tu culpa, que no te has de atrever a dar disculpa. 125

DUQUE ¿Qué dices, hija? ¿Cómo no respondes?
¿Empáchate el temor, o la vergüenza?
Sin duda quieres, pues el rostro ascondes, que tu contrario sin testigos venza.
¡Mal a quien eres hija correspondes! 130

DAGOBERTO Con la verdad bien es que se convenza.

DUQUE Culpada estáis, indicio es manifiesto tu lengua muda, tu inclinado gesto.
¿Quién fue el traidor que te engañó, cuitada?
¿O cuál fue el que la honra me ha llevado? 135
¿O qué estrella, en mi daño conjurada, nos ha puesto a los dos en tal estado?
¿Dó está tu condición tan recatada?
¿Adónde tu juicio reposado?
¡Mal le tuviste con el vicio a raya! 140

PAJE ¡Señores, mi señora se desmaya!

(Desmáyase ROSAMIRA.)

DUQUE Llévenla como está luego a esta torre, y en ella esté en prisión dura y molesta, hasta que alguna espada o pluma borre la mancha que en la honra lleva puesta. 145

DAGOBERTO Porque lengua probanza aquí se ahorre, está mi mano con mi espada presta
a probar lo que he dicho en campo abierto.

DUQUE Parece que admito ese concierto,

puesto que al parecer de mi consejo 150 tengo de remitir todo este hecho.

DAGOBERTO Pues yo en mi espada y mi verdad lo dejo, y en la sana intención de mi buen pecho.

EMBAJADOR Confuso voy, atónito y perplejo, entre el sí y entre el no mal satisfecho. 155 Adiós, señor, porque este estraño caso, junto con el dolor, acucia el paso.

(Vase el EMBAJADOR.)

DUQUE ¡Parte con Dios, y lleva mi deshonra a los oídos de mi yerno honrados, yerno con quien pensé aumentar la honra 160 que tan por tierra han puesto ya mis hados!
Mostrado me has, Fortuna, que quien honra tus altares, en humo levantados, por premio le has de dar infamia y mengua, pues quita cien mil honras una lengua. 165

(Éntrase el DUQUE, y al entrarse DAGOBERTO, le detiene ANASTASIO.)

ANASTASIO Oye, señor, si no es que tu grandeza no se suele inclinar a dar oídos al bajo parecer de mi rudeza y a los que amenguan rústicos vestidos.

DAGOBERTO La gravedad de confirmada alteza 170 no tiene aquesos puntos admitidos:
habla cuanto te fuere de contento, que a todo te prometo estar atento.

ANASTASIO    Por esta acusación, que a Rosamira has puesto tan en mengua de su fama, 175 este rústico pecho, ardiendo en ira,
a su defensa me convida y llama;
que, ora sea verdad, ora mentira el relatado caso que la infama, el ser ella mujer, y amor la causa, 180 debieran en tu lengua poner pausa.

No te azores, escúchame: o tú solo sabías este caso, o ya la noticia vino de más de alguno que notólo, o por curiosidad o por malicia. 185 Si solo lo sabías, mal mirólo tu discreción, pues, no siendo justicia, pretende castigar secretas culpas, teniendo las de amor tantas disculpas.

Si a muchos era el caso manifiesto, 190 dejaras que otro alguno le dijera:
que no es decente a tu valor, ni honesto, tener para ofender lengua ligera.
Si notas de mi arenga el presupuesto, verás que digo, o que decir quisiera, 195 que espadas de los príncipes, cual eres, no ofenden, mas defienden las mujeres.

Si amaras al buen duque de Novara, otro camino hallaras, según creo, por donde, sin que en nada se infamara 200 su honra, tú cumplieras tu deseo.
Mas tengo para mí, y es cosa clara, por mil señales que descubro y veo, que en ese pecho tuyo alberga y lidia, más que celo y honor, rabia y envidia. 205

Perdóname que hablo desta suerte, si es que la verdad, señor, te enoja.

CIUDADANO 1 Apostad que le da el príncipe muerte.
¿No veis el labrador cómo se arroja?

DAGOBERTO Quisiera de otro modo responderte; 210
mas será bien que la razón recoja las riendas a la ira. Calla y vete, que más paciencia mi bondad promete.

(Éntrase DAGOBERTO.)

CIUDADANO 2 Por Dios, que habéis hablado largamente, y que, notando bien vuestro lenguaje, 215 es tanto del vestido diferente, que uno muestra la lengua y otro el traje.

ANASTASIO A veces un enojo hace elocuente al de más torpe ingenio: que el coraje levanta los espíritus caídos 220
y aun hace a los cobardes atrevidos.

En fin, ¿éste es el príncipe de Utrino, digo, el hijo heredero del Estado?

CIUDADANO 1 Él es.

ANASTASIO Pues ¿cómo aquí a Novara vino?

CIUDADANO 2 Dicen que del amor blando forzado. 225

ANASTASIO ¿Y a quién daba su alma?

CIUDADANO 2 Yo imagino, si no es que el vulgo en esto se ha engañado, que Rosamira le tenía rendido;

pero ya lo contrario ha parecido.

ANASTASIO Si eso dijo la fama, cosa es clara, 230
y no van mal fundados mis recelos, visto que en su deshonra no repara, que esta su acusación nace de celos.
¡Oh infernal calentura, que a la cara sale, y aun a la boca! ¡Oh santos cielos! 235 ¡Oh amor! ¡Oh confusión jamás oída!
¡Oh vida muerta! ¡Oh libertad rendida!

(Éntrase ANASTASIO.)

CIUDADANO 1 So aquel sayal hay al, sin duda alguna:
o yo sé poco, o no sois vos villano.

CIUDADANO 2 Mudan los trajes trances de fortuna, 240
y encubren lo que está más claro y llano.
No sé yo si debajo de la luna se ha visto lo que hemos visto. ¡Oh mundo insano, cómo tus glorias son perecederas, pues vendes burlas, pregonando veras! 245

(Éntranse.)

(Salen JULIA y PORCIA en hábito de pastorcillos, con pellicos.)

JULIA Porcia amiga...

PORCIA ¡Bueno es eso!

Rutilio me has de llamar, si es que quieres escusar un desastrado suceso.

Yo no sé cómo te olvidas 250
de nuestros nombres trocados.

JULIA Suspéndenme los cuidados de nuestras trocadas vidas;

y no es bien que así te asombre ver mi memoria perdida: 255 que, quien de su ser se olvida, no es mucho olvide su nombre.

Rutilio amigo, ¡ay de mí!, que arrepentida me veo, muerta a manos de un deseo 260
a quien yo la vida di.

Mientras más, Rutilio, voy considerando lo hecho,
más temor nace en mi pecho, más arrepentida estoy. 265

PORCIA Eso, amigo, es lo peor que yo veo en tus dolores:
que adonde sobran temores,
hay siempre falta de amor.

Si el amor en ti se enfría, 270 cuesta se te hará la palma, grave tormenta la calma,
noche obscura el claro día.

Ama más, y verás luego
esparcirse los nublados, 275 todos tus males trocados en dulce paz y sosiego.

Pero, quieras o no quieras, ya estás puesta en la batalla, y tienes de atropellalla, 280 sea de burlas, sea de veras.

Ya en el ciego laberinto te metió el amor crüel;
ya no puedes salir dél
por industria ni distinto. 285

El hilo de la razón
no hace al caso que prevengas; todo el toque está en que tengas un gallardo corazón,
no para entrar en peleas, 290 que en ellas no es bien te pongas, sino con que te dispongas
a alcanzar lo que desees, cuéstete lo que costare:
que si tu deseo alcanzas, 295 no hay cumplidas esperanzas en quien el gusto repare.

Muestra ser varón en todo,
no te descuides acaso,
algo más alarga el paso, 300
y huella de aqueste modo;
a la voz da más aliento,
no salga tan delicada;
no estés encogida en nada, espárcete en tu contento; 305 y, si fuere menester
disparar un arcabuz, ¡juro a Dios y a ésta que es cruz, que lo tenéis de hacer!

JULIA ¡Jesús! ¿Quieres que me asombre, 310
Rutilio, en verte jurar?

PORCIA¿Con qué podré yo mostrar más fácilmente ser hombre?

Un voto de cuando en cuando, es gran cosa, por mi fe. 315

JULIA Yo, amiga, jurar no sé.

PORCIA Iráte el tiempo enseñando.

JULIA ¿Sabes, Porcia, lo que temo?
¡Ay, que el nombre se me olvida!

PORCIA ¡Juro a Dios que estás perdida! 320

JULIA Ya a queso pasa de extremo.
No jures más; si no, a fe, que te deje y que me vaya.

PORCIA Tanto melindre mal haya.

JULIA Pues, ¿por qué?

PORCIA Yo me lo sé. 325

JULIA En cólera me deshago en verte jurar por Dios.

PORCIA Pues también soy como vos medrosa, y a todo hago;
y no os llevo tantos años, 330 que ellos puedan enseñarme la experiencia de librarme de no conocidos daños.
Avisad y tened brío;
y, pues ya estamos en esto, 335
echad del ánimo el resto, que yo estaré con el mío.

JULIA Porcia amiga, ello es así.
¡Ay, que el nombre se olvidó!

PORCIA ¡Mal haya quien me parió! 340
Di Rutilio, ¡pesia a mí!

JULIA No te enojés, que yo juro de no olvidarme jamás.

PORCIA Cuando jures, jura más
y estarás muy más seguro. 345

JULIA Téname destos pellicos que nos han de descubrir.

PORCIA Yo lo he querido decir:
que es malo que sean tan ricos.

JULIA No va en esto, sino en ser 350
conocidos.

PORCIA Pues ¿en qué?

JULIA ¿No ves que yo los mandé de aqueste modo hacer para la farsa o comedia que querían mis doncellas 355 hacer?

PORCIA Haráse sin ellas; mas quizá será tragedia.

JULIA Y no los echaron menos cuando nosotras faltamos.
Por esto en peligro estamos, 360
y no por ser ellos buenos.

PORCIA Como a Módena lleguemos, mudaremos este traje.

JULIA Yo me vestiré de paje.

PORCIA Entrambos nos vestiremos. 365

JULIA Téme que está en Novara mi hermano.

PORCIA ¡Pluguiese al cielo!

JULIA Pues a fe que lo recelo; mas, sin duda, es cosa clara que él de Rosamira está 370 en extremo enamorado
y sírvela disfrazado.

PORCIA Eso importa poco ya;
que, en llegando el de Rosena, Celia se casa con él. 375

Podrá tu hermano fiel
morir, o dejar su pena.

JULIA ¡Qué corta es nuestra ventura!
Tú enamorada de quien tiene a otra por su bien; 380 yo, de quien mi mal procura, de quien se casa mañana.
Y la fortuna molesta
nos lleva a morir la fiesta de nuestra muerte temprana. 385 ¡Qué de imposibles se oponen a nuestros buenos deseos!
¡Qué miedos, qué devaneos nuestra intención descomponen!
¡Ay Rutilio, y cuán en vano 390 ha de ser nuestra venida!

PORCIAMientras esté con la vida, pienso que en ventura gano.
Confía y no desesperes, que puesto en plática está 395 que el diablo no acabará lo que no acaban mujeres.

JULIA Escucha, que gente suena;
cazadores son; escucha:
gente viene, y gente mucha. 400

PORCIANo te dé ninguna pena; saludarlos y pasar,
sin ponernos en razones.

(Entran dos cazadores.)

CAZADOR 1¿Tomó dos esmerejones?

CAZADOR 2Sí.

CAZADOR 1No hay más que desear. 405
¿Y el duque, quédase atrás?

CAZADOR 2No; que veisle aquí a do viene.

CAZADOR 1Mucho en Rezo se detiene.

CAZADOR 2Sabed que no puede más.
Y hoy vendrá su embajador, 410
y sabrá lo que ha de hacer.

PORCIACamilo, aquí es menester ingenio, esfuerzo y valor, que el de Rosena es aquél que allí viene, según creo. 415

JULIA¡Amor, ayuda al deseo, pues que me pusiste en él!

(Sale el DUQUE DE ROSENA, de caza.)

MANFREDO ¿La garza no parece?

CAZADOR 1Ayer se descubrió en esta laguna que a la vista se ofrece. 420

MANFREDO Pues un pastor me ha dicho que ninguna se ha visto en estos llanos.

CAZADOR 2 Pues de dos me dijeron dos villanos.

MANFREDO Dése a Rezo la vuelta; que, aunque no es tarde, va creciendo el viento, 425
y aquella nube suelta señala injuria de turbi6n violento.
¡Oh, qué bellos zagales!
Mancebos, ¿sois de Rezo naturales?

JULIA En Pavía nacimos. 430

MANFREDO Pues, ¿d6nde vais agora?

JULIA Hacia Novara,
no más de porque oímos que el duque Federico allí prepara una fiesta que admira, porque casa a su hija Rosamira 435 con un señor llamado
Manfredo, que es gran duque de Rosena.

MANFREDO Verdad os han contado.

PORCIA Pues a la fama que será tan buena la fiesta y boda vamos, 440
y a nuestro padre en cólera dejamos.

MANFREDO ¿Y adónde queda el ganado?

PORCIA Imagino que perdido.

MANFREDO;Mucho atrevimiento ha sido!

JULIAA más obliga un cuidado. 445

MANFREDO ¿Úsanse aquestos pellicos ahora entre los pastores?

PORCIATambién muestran sus primores los villanos, si son ricos.

MANFREDO ¿Y lleváis bien que gastar? 450

JULIAUn tesoro de paciencia.

MANFREDO¿Encargaréis la conciencia si le acabáis de acabar?

PORCIA Tal puede ser el suceso que se acabe el sufrimiento. 455

MANFREDO;Por Dios, que me dais contento!

JULIAYa nos viéramos en eso.

MANFREDO ¿Cómo os llamáis?

JULIA Yo, Camilo.

PORCIA Y yo, Rutilio.

MANFREDO En verdad
que parecen de ciudad 460
vuestros nombres y el estilo, y que en ellos, y aun en él,
poco es, mentís villanía.

PORCIA Como hay estudio en Pavía, algo se nos pega dél. 465

JULIA Díganos, señor: ¿qué millas desde aquí a Novara habrá?

MANFREDO Treinta a lo más que creo está.

CAZADOR 2Y dos más; son angostillas.

MANFREDO Conmigo os iréis, si os place, 470 que yo ese camino hago.

JULIA Yo, por mí, me satisfago.

PORCIA Pues a mí no me desplace.

Pero advierta que los dos vamos poco a poco a pie. 475

MANFREDO Bien está: que yo os daré en que vais.

PORCIAPágueoslo Dios;
que bien parecéis honrado,
noble y rico y principal.

CAZADOR 1Y aun vosotros, de caudal 480 mayor del que habéis mostrado;
si no, dígalo el lenguaje,
y el uno y otro pellico.

CAZADOR 2Es en Pavía muy rico casi todo el villanaje, 485 y éstos hijos deben ser de algún rico ganadero.

MANFREDO A Rezo volverme quiero;
bien os podéis recoger.

(Entra UNO.)

UNO Tu embajador ha llegado. 490

MANFREDO ¿Mompesir?

UNO Sí, mi señor.

MANFREDO Esperadme, por mi amor, que luego vuelvo.

PORCIA Haz tu grado.

(Éntranse todos, si no es PORCIA y JULIA, que quedan.)

JULIA Rutilio, ¿qué te parece?

PORCIA Camilo amigo, que estás 495 en punto donde verás que es bueno el que se te ofrece.

La Fortuna te ha traído a poder del duque; advierte que un principio de tal suerte 500 un buen fin tiene escondido.

JULIA ¿Parécete que le diga quién soy por un modo honesto?

PORCIA No te descubras tan presto.

JULIA Pues ¿cómo quies que prosiga? 505

PORCIA El tiempo vendrá a avisarte de aquello que has de hacer.

JULIA Mi mal no puede tener en parte del tiempo parte.

Si no estará el duque apenas 510 tres días sin que se case, ¿cómo dejaré que pase
el tiempo, como me ordenas?

PORCIA Un caso tan grave y tal, con prisa mal se resuelve. 515 Silencio, que el duque vuelve;
el semblante trae mortal.

(Vuelve a entrar el DUQUE y el EMBAJADOR que entró primero, y los dos cazadores.)

EMBAJADOR Digo, señor, que el príncipe de Utrino, Dagoberto, heredero del Estado, en mi presencia y la del duque vino, 520
y allí propuso lo que te he contado.
No con la triste nueva perdió el tino el padre; padre no, mas recatado jüez, pues, como tal, mandó traella, y el príncipe afirmó su culpa ante ella. 525

Rosamira la oyó, y en su defensa mover no pudo, o nunca quiso, el labio;
por esto el duque que es culpada piensa,
pues no responde a tan notable agravio.
El caso ponderó, y al fin dispensa, 530 en todo procediendo como sabio, que, mientras se vee el caso, la duquesa en una torre esté encerrada y presa.

Dagoberto se ofrece con su espada a probar en el campo lo que dice. 535 Yo, viendo a Rosamira así acusada, tus bodas al instante las deshice.
Esto resulta, en fin, de mi embajada;
mira, señor, si bien o si mal hice:
que el duque, ya rendido a su fortuna, 540

no quiso responderte cosa alguna.

MANFREDO ¡Válame Dios, qué miserable caso!
¿Dónde fabricas, mundo, estos vaivenes?
¿Daslos con luenga prevención o acaso?
¿O por qué antes de dallos no previenes? 545

CAZADOR 1 Señor, con largo y con ligero paso, cubierto de las plantas a las sienes de luto, un caballero veo que asoma por el verde recuesto desta loma.

MANFREDO Y aun me parece que hacia aquí endereza 550 la rienda, y del caballo ya se apea.
¡Qué bien con la color de mi tristeza viene el que trae aquí por librea!
¿Quién podrá ser?

CAZADOR 2 La espada se adereza.

EMBAJADOR Descolorido llega.

MANFREDO Y mal criado. 555

(Entra un EMBAJADOR del DUQUE DE DORLÁN, vestido de luto.)

DORLÁN ¡Gracias a Dios, Manfredo, que te he hallado!
Quien viene a lo que yo, Manfredo, vengo, no le conviene usar de más crianza:
que sólo en las razones me prevengo que estarán en la lengua o en la lanza. 560 La antigua ley de embajador mantengo:

escúchame, y responde sin tardanza, que a ti el gran duque de Dorlán me envía
y a guerra a sangre y fuego desafía.

Dice, y esto es verdad, que habiendo dado 565
a tu corte en la suya alojamiento, y habiéndote en su casa agasajado, viniendo a efetuar tu casamiento, como el troyano huésped, olvidado del hospedaje, con lascivo intento 570 su hija le robaste y su sobrina:
traición no de tu fama y nombre digna.

Por esto, si a su intento no te ajustas,
y a la ley no respondes de hidalguía, de poder a poder, o, si más gustas, 575 de persona a persona, desafía.

PORCIANuestras sandeces causan estas justas.
¿Haslo notado bien? Di, Julia mía.

JULIACalla, y entre estos árboles te esconde;
veremos lo que el duque le responde. 580

DORLÁN Y tanto a la venganza está dispuesto de aqueste agravio y malicioso hecho, que deste paño de color funesto que se vista su gente toda ha hecho, en tanto, o ya sea tarde, o ya sea presto, 585 que, a desprecio y pesar de tu despecho, castiga la insolencia deste ultraje, transgresor de la ley del hospedaje.

Éste es el fin de mi embajada; mira si quieres responderme alguna cosa. 590

MANFREDORreprima mi inocencia en mí la ira que alborota tu lengua licenciosa; yo no sé qué responda a esa mentira;

sólo sé que Fortuna, mentirosa, debe o quiere probar con su insolencia 595 los quilates que tiene mi paciencia.

Diréisle al duque que ante él mismo apelo de aquesta acusación vana que ha hecho, porque, por la Deidad que rige el cielo,
que jamás tal traición cupo en mi pecho. 600 Leal pisé de su palacio el suelo, leal salí, guardando aquel derecho que al hospedaje amigo se debía y a la ley que profeso de hidalguía.

Ni vi a su hija, ni jamás la he visto, 605 ni la intención de mi camino era hacerme con mis huéspedes malquisto, aunque el lascivo gusto lo pidiera;
que entonces con mayor fuerza resisto, cuando la torpe inclinación ligera 610 con más regalo acude al pensamiento, estando al ser quien soy contino atento.

Ni acepto el desafío, ni desecho;
sólo lo que pretendo es dilatallo hasta que el duque esté más satisfecho 615 y la misma verdad venga a estorballo.
Y cuando esto no fuese de provecho,
y el engaño prosiga en engañallo, para entonces acepto el desafío, ajustando a su gusto el gusto mío. 620

Esto doy por respuesta y no otra cosa;
mirad si a Rejo queréis ir conmigo.

DORLÁNEs el camino largo, y presurosa la gana de volver al suelo amigo.
¡A Dios quedad!

Vase.

MANFREDO Fortuna rigurosa, 625 ¿qué es esto? ¿Quién soy yo, o qué pasos sigo tan malos, que se extrema así tu furia en hacerme una injuria y otra injuria?
¡Infamada mi esposa, y yo infamado, y por lo menos de traición! ¿Qué es esto? 630 ¡En tan triste sazón me tiene puesto!

EMBAJADOR Señor, si en nada desto estás culpado, no es bien que te congoje nada desto:
tu esposa aún no era tuya: esta culpa en tu pura verdad tiene disculpa. 635

MANFREDO No me aconsejes ni me des consuelo, y a Rosena mi gente luego vuelva;
que este rigor con que me trata el Cielo
quiere que en éste sólo me resuelva.

EMBAJADORA Aunque con vengativo, airado celo, 640 su fuerza el hado contra ti resuelva, yo no le he de dejar.

MANFREDO Escucha un poco:
quizá dirás de veras que estoy loco.

PORCIA ¿Qué hemos de hacer, Camilo?

JULIA ¿No está claro?
Seguir del duque las pisadas todas. 645

PORCIA ¿Con qué ocasión?

JULIA En eso no reparo.

PORCIA ¿No ves que se han deshecho ya las bodas?

JULIA Ventura ha sido mía.

MANFREDO No me aclaro
más por agora.

EMBAJADOR En fin, ¿que te acomodas a ir desamano?

MANFREDO Ten a punto 650
los vestidos que digo.

EMBAJADOR Harélo al punto.

MANFREDO Y no quede ninguno de los míos.
Y en esto no me hagas más instancia, que la mudable rueda en desvaríos tiene encerrada a veces la ganancia. 655 Y estos dos pastorcillos, que en sus bríos muestran más sencillez que no arrogancia, si dello gustan, quedarán conmigo.

PORCIA ¿Entendístele?

JULIA ¡Y cómo, oh cielo amigo!
Señor, si es que la ida de Novara, 660 según que hemos oído, se te impide, volver queremos a la patria clara, si otra cosa tu gusto no nos pide.

MANFREDO Puesto que la fortuna y suerte avara su querer con el mío jamás mide, 665 por esta vez entiendo que me ha dado en los dos lo que pide mi cuidado.

Quedaos conmigo, que a Novara iremos, donde, puesto que fiestas no veamos, quizá cosas más raras hallaremos, 670 con que el sentido y vista entretengamos.

PORCIA Por tuyos desde aquí nos ofrecemos: que bien se nos trasluce que ganamos en servirte, señor, cuanto es posible.

MANFREDO Haz lo que he dicho.

EMBAJADOR ¡Oh, caso no creíble! 675

(Éntranse todos, y sale ANASTASIO y CORNELIO, su criado.)

ANASTASIO Poco me alegra el campo ni las flores.

CORNELIO Ni a mí tus sinsabores me contentan; porque es cierto que afrentan los amores que en tan bajos primores se sustentan, y en mil partes nos cuentan mil autores 680 cien mil varios dolores que atormentan al miserable amante no entendido, poco premiado y menos conocido.

ANASTASIO    Ya te he dicho, Cornelio, que te dejes de darme esos consejos escusados, 685 y nunca a los amantes aconsejes cuando tienen por gloria sus cuidados; que es como quien predica a los herejes, en sus vanos errores obstinados.

CORNELIO    Muy bien te has comparado. Advierte y mira 690 que ya no es Rosamira Rosamira:

    las trenzas de oro y la espaciosa frente, las cejas y sus arcos celestiales, el uno y otro sol resplandeciente, las hileras de perlas orientales, 695 la bella aurora que del nuevo oriente sale de las mejillas, los corales de los hermosos labios, todo es feo, si a quien lo tiene infama infame empleo.

    La buena fama es parte de belleza, 700
y la virtud, perfecta hermosura;
que, a do suele faltar naturaleza, suple con gran ventaja la cordura;
y, entre personas de subida alteza, amor hermoso a secas es locura. 705
En fin, quiero decir que no es hermosa, siéndolo, la mujer no virtuosa.

    Rosamira, en prisión; la causa, infame;
tú, disfrazado y muerto por librilla, ignoras la verdad; ¿y quiés que llame 710 justa la pretensión desta batalla?

ANASTASIO    Tu sangre harás, Cornelio, que derrame, pues procuras la mía así alteralla con tus razones vanas y estudiadas, y entre libres discursos fabricadas. 715

    Vete; déjame y calla; si no, ¡juro...!

CORNELIO Yo callaré; no jures, sino advierte que gente viene alrededor del muro, y temo, al fin, que habrán de acometerte.

ANASTASIO Desto puedes estar muy bien seguro, 720 que en la ciudad he estado desta suerte seis días hace hoy, y estaré ciento:
que salió este disfraz a mi contento.

(Entran TÁCITO y ANDRONIO, estudiantes capigorristas.)

ANDRONIO Deja los libros, Tácito; digo, deja el tomar de coro agora, 725
y, a nuestro beneplácito, gozando el fresco de la fresca aurora, por aquí nos andemos.

TÁCITO ¡Por Dios, que es buen encuentro el que tenemos!
Villano es el morlaco. 730 ¿Quieres que le tentemos las corazas, y veremos si es maco?

ANDRONIO Siempre en las burlas, Tácito, que trazas salimos mal medrados.
Talle tienen los mozos de avisados. 735

TÁCITO Por esta vez, probemos:
que si el pacho consiente bernardinas, el tiempo entretendremos.

ANDRONIO ¡Con qué facilidad te determinas

a hacer bellaquerías! 740

CORNELIOHacia nosotros vienen.

TÁCITONo te rías.

Díganos, gentilhombre,
así la diosa de la verecundia reciproque su nombre,
y el blanco pecho de tremante enjundia 745
soborne en conforino:
¿adónde va, si sabe, este camino?

ANASTASIO Mancebo, soy de lejos, y no sé responder a esa pregunta.

TÁCITODígame: ¿son reflejos 750 los marcurcios que asoman por la punta de aquel monte, compadre?

CORNELIO¿Bellaco sois, por vida de mi madre!
¿Bernardinas a horma?
Yo apostaré que el duque no le entiende. 755

ANASTASIOHabláisme de tal suerte, que no sé responderos.

TÁCITOPues atienda, gamicivo, y está atento.

CORNELIO¿Qué donaire y qué gracioso acento!

TÁCITO Digo que ¿si mi paso 760 tiendo por los barrancos deste llano, si podrá hacer al caso?

ANASTASIO Digo que no os entiendo, amigo hermano.

TÁCITO Pues bien claro se aclara, que es clara, si no es turbia, el agua clara. 765 Quiero decir que el tronto, por do su curso lleva al horizonte, está a caballo, y prompto
a propagar la cima de aquel monte.

ANASTASIO ¡Ya, ya; ya estoy en ello! 770

TÁCITO Pues ¿qué quiero decir, gozmio, camello?

ANASTASIO Que son bellacos grandes los mancebitos de primer tonsura.

TÁCITO Tontón, no te desmandes, que llevarás del sueño la soltura. 775

CORNELIO Mi señor estudiante, mire no haga que le asiente el guante.

ANASTASIO Confieso que al principio yo no entendí la flor de los mancebos.

ANDRONIO Arena, cal y ripio 780 trago, mi señorazo papahuevos.

CORNELIO Su flor se ha descubierta.

TÁCITO Pues zarpo déste y voyme a mejor puerto.

CORNELIO No se vayan, que asoman otros dos de su traza y compostura, 785 y este camino toman.
También son éstos de primer tonsura,
y, a lo que yo imagino,
de aquí no son, y vienen de camino.

(Entran JULIA y PORCIA, como estudiantes de camino.)

PORCIA Querría que no errásemos 790 en lo que el duque nos mandó, Camilo, y es que aquí le esperásemos.

JULIA ¿Entendístelo bien?

PORCIA Bien entendílo.

ANDRONIO Argumentando vienen.
Lleguémonos, si acaso se detienen, 795
y déjennos con ellos;
gustarán de la burla.

CORNELIO Que nos place.

ANASTASIO Yo no estoy para vellos: que mal la alegre burla satisface al alma que no alcanza 800
a ver, si no es burlada, su esperanza.

(Éntranse ANASTASIO y CORNELIO.)

JULIA En esta tierra asiste, en disfrazado traje, aquel mi hermano a quien tú adoras triste.
Si me encuentra y conoce...

PORCIA Es temor vano; 805 que en tal traje nos vemos, que a la misma verdad engañaremos.
A mí una vez me ha visto, y ésa de noche.

JULIA A mí, casi ninguna.
Mal al temor resisto; 810 estudiantes son éstos.

TÁCITO La fortuna
mi atrevimiento ayude;
si en trabajo me viere, Andronio, acude.
¿Son estudiantes, señores?

PORCIA Sí, señor, y forasteros. 815

TÁCITO ¿Pacacios, o caballeros?

JULIA No somos de los peores.

TÁCITO ¿Y qué han oído?

PORCIA Desgracias.

JULIA Y en ellas somos maestros.

ANDRONIO Por mi vida, que son diestros 820
y que saben decir gracias.

Pues háganme este latín, así Dios les dé salud:
«Yo soy falto de virtud, tan bellaco como ruin». 825

PORCIA No venimos dese espacio.

ANDRONIO No se deben de escusar, si es que nos quieren mostrar que son hombres de palacio.

JULIA Ni aun de nada somos hombres. 830

ANDRONIO Pues, ya que se escusan desto, dígannos, y luego, y presto de dónde son, y sus nombres, qué estudian, la edad que tienen, si es rico o pobre su padre, 835
la estatura de su madre, dónde van y de a dó vienen.
¡Turbados están! ¡Apriesa, respondan, que tardan mucho!

PORCIA Con gran paciencia te escucho, 840 mancebito de traviesa.

Váyase y déjenos ir,
y serále muy más sano.

ANDRONIO ¡Jesús, qué mal cortesano!
¿Tal se ha dejado decir? 845

JULIA Es tarde, y hay que hacer, y servimos, y tardamos.

TÁCITO Ténganse, que aquí cobramos la alcabala del saber;
porque cuando el sacrilegio 850
a Mahoma se entregó, esta autoridad nos dio
nuestro famoso colegio.
¡Miren si voy arguyendo con razones circunflejas! 855

PORCIA Atruénasme las orejas, mancebito, y no te entiendo.

TÁCITO Andronio.

ANDRONIO Ya estoy al cabo.

(Pónese ANDRONIO detrás de JULIA para hacerla caer; pero no la ha de derribar.)

TÁCITO Volviendo a nuestro comienzo, el asado San Lorenzo, 860

cuyas virtudes alabo,
en sus Cuntiloquios dice...

JULIA ¡Ésta es gran bellaquería, y juro por vida mía...!

TÁCITO Y dirán que yo lo hice. 865

JULIA Pero aquí viene nuestro amo, y mala ventura os mando.

TÁCITO Signori, me recomendo,
y a la corona me llamo.

Y a revederci altra volta, 870 dove finitemo el resto, or non piu, & visogna presto fugiré de qui si ascolta.

(Éntrase TÁCITO y ANDRONIO.)

(Entra MANFREDO, como estudiante, de camino.)

MANFREDO Rutilio y Camilo, pues,
¿he, por ventura, tardado? 875

PORCIA Más de un hora hemos estado esperando, como ves;
y aun nos han dado mal rato
dos bonitos estudiantes, que tienen más de chocantes, 880 que no de letras su trato.
Pero ¿en qué te has detenido tanto tiempo?

MANFREDO Fui escuchando dos que iban razonando
de este caso sucedido. 885

Y apostaré que estos dos que vienen tratan también de este hecho. Escucha bien si acierto, así os guarde Dios.

JULIA ¿De qué sirve el escuchar, 890 pues podemos preguntarlo?

(Entran los dos ciudadanos que entraron al principio.)

CIUDADANO 1 Por mil conjeturas hallo que ella habrá de peligrar.

CIUDADANO 2 En fin: que no se disculpa.

CIUDADANO 1 ¡Ésa es una cosa estraña! 895

CIUDADANO 2 El pensamiento me engaña, o ella no tiene culpa.

MANFREDO Mis señores, ¿qué se suena del caso de la duquesa?

CIUDADANO 1 Que se está todavía presa, 900
y el silencio la condena.

MANFREDO ¿Quién la acusa?

CIUDADANO 2Dagoberto.

MANFREDO¿Da testigos?

CIUDADANO 2Ni aun indicio.

MANFREDOCierto que no es ése oficio de caballero.

CIUDADANO 1No, cierto. 905

MANFREDO ¿Y su padre?

CIUDADANO 1¿Qué ha de hacer?
Sólo ha hecho pregonar que a quien la acierte a librar se la dará por mujer, como sea caballero 910
el que se oponga a la empresa.

MANFREDO¿Y que calla la duquesa?

CIUDADANO 2Como si fuese un madero.

MANFREDO ¿Y del duque que se suena que había de ser su esposo? 915

CIUDADANO 1 Que, en sabiendo el caso astroso, dio la vuelta hacia Rosena.

Y aun otras nuevas nos dan,
ni sé si es verdad o no:
que, estando en Dorlán, sacó 920 una hija al de Dorlán,
y también a una parienta,
del mismo duque sobrina,
y que el duque determina vengarse de aquesta afrenta. 925

Y que se tiene por cierto que la sacó el de Rosena.

CIUDADANO 2 Hasta agora, así se suena; ni sé si es cierto o incierto.

MANFREDO Y, si como eso es mentira, 930 como me doy a entender, podrá ser que venga a ser
bien mismo de Rosamira:
que sé que el duque es muy bueno, y que traición ni ruindad, 935
si no es razón y bondad, jamás albergó en su seno.

CIUDADANO 1 ¿Sois acaso milanés?
Porque de sello dais muestra.

MANFREDO Aunque la lengua lo muestra, 940
no soy sino boloniés;
mas he estudiado en Pavía,
y algo la lengua he tomado.

CIUDADANO 2 ¿Y qué es lo que se ha estudiado?

MANFREDO Humanidad.

CIUDADANO 1 Sí haría: 945 que todos los de su edad eso es lo que estudian más.

MANFREDO Sin estudiarla, jamás se aprende esta facultad.

CIUDADANO 1 ¿Y a qué venís a Novara? 950

MANFREDO A ver la boda venía.

CIUDADANO 2 No quiso en tanta alegría ponernos la suerte avara;
y en lugar della, podréis ver, si gustáis, la batalla. 955

MANFREDO Si no hay quien salga a tomalla.

CIUDADANO 1 Poco tiempo os detendréis: que no quedan más de seis días para el plazo puesto.

MANFREDO De quedarme estoy dispuesto. 960

CIUDADANO 1 Sin duda, lo acertaréis.
Y ¡adiós!

MANFREDO Con él vais los dos.

CIUDADANO 2 ¿Luego aquí os queréis quedar?

MANFREDO Sí; porque aquí he de aguardar a un amigo.

CIUDADANO 2 Pues, ¡adiós! 965

MANFREDO Yo no sé en qué se confía mi dudosa voluntad,
y, si no es curiosidad, ¿qué locura es ésta mía?

Creo que a darme deshonra, 970 ingrato amor, te dispones, pues cuando está en opiniones la honra, no hay tener honra.

(Éntrase JULIA, PORCIA y MANFREDO.)

(Sale el DUQUE FEDERICO y el CARCELERO que tiene a la DUQUESA ROSAMIRA.)

DUQUE ¿Cómo está la duquesa?

CARCELERO Negro luto
cubre su faz, y, sola en su aposento, 975

al suelo da de lágrimas tributo con doloroso, amargo sentimiento.

DUQUE; Oh bien hermoso y mal nacido fruto, marchito en la sazón de más contento, y cómo al mejor tiempo me has burlado, 980 quedando en mis designios defraudado!
¿Y que no se disculpa?

CARCELERONi por pienso.

DUQUE¿De quién se queja?

CARCELERODE su corta suerte.

DUQUEEn breve tiempo de su vida el censo dará a una infame, inevitable muerte. 985

CARCELERO¿Sabes, señor, lo que imagino y pienso?

DUQUE¿Qué piensas o imaginas?

CARCELEROQue es muy fuerte de creer que el de Utrino verdad diga.

DUQUEA que lo crea su bondad me obliga,
y el ver que Rosamira, en su disculpa, 990 el labio no ha movido ni le mueve;
y es muy cierta señal de tener culpa el que a volver por sí nunca se atreve.

La culpa es grave; grave el que la culpa;
el plazo a la batalla, corto y breve; 995 defensor no se ofrece: indicio claro que a su desdicha no ha de hallar reparo.

CARCELERO ¿Si quisiere, por dicha, dar descargo con otro, pues no quiere en tu presencia, quizá turbada del infame cargo, 1000
dejarla he visitar?

DUQUE Con mi licencia.

CARCELERO Puesto que el bien guardalla está a mi cargo,
no está a mi cargo usar desta inclemencia:
que, a fe, si su remedio se hallase, que muy poco tus órdenes guardase. 1005

Jornada segunda

Entran CORNELIO y ANASTASIO.

CORNELIO Volviendo a lo comenzado, señor, ¿qué piensas hacer?

ANASTASIO Lo que procuro es saber si el príncipe se ha engañado, o qué causa le ha movido 5
a acusar a Rosamira:
si fueron celos, o ira,
ser llamado y no escogido;
y, cuando desta querella
no sepa verdad jamás, 10 por gentileza no más
me dispongo a defendella.

CORNELIO Propongo que Dagoberto es vencido en la batalla, y que ella libre se halla 15 de la tormenta en el puerto:
¿tendrás por cosa notoria el poder asegurarte que la razón vino a darte, y no fuerza, la vitoria? 20 Porque de Dios los secretos son tan incomprensibles, que a veces vemos visibles,
de bienes, malos efectos.

ANASTASIO    Ya entiendo tus argumentos, 25
y con ellos me das pena.
Haga el Cielo lo que ordena;
yo honraré mis pensamientos.

(Entran JULIA y PORCIA.)

CORNELIO    Los estudiantes son estos de quien los otros burlaron. 30

ANASTASIO    Sus burlas, ¿en qué pararon?

CORNELIO    Eran algo descompuestos.

Forastero me parece
en cierto modo su traje;
eso veré en su lenguaje, 35
si el hablallos se me ofrece.

PORCIA    Camilo, no te descuides en mostrar en dicho y hecho que eres varón, a despecho de cuantos cuidados cuides. 40

Deja melindres aparte, da a las ternezas de mano, y mira que está en tu mano el perderte o el ganarte.

Mira que amor te ha traído, 45 por un nunca visto enredo
a ser paje de Manfredo, y paje favorecido:
que es principio que asegura buen fin a tu pretensión. 50

JULIA    Tienes, Rutilio, razón;

mas no tengo yo ventura, pues, cuando más me acomodo
a hacer lo que me ordenas, embebecida en mis penas, 55
se me olvida a veces todo.

Mas, ¡ay de mí, desdichada, que éste es el duque, mi hermano!

PORCIAVuelve el rostro a esotra mano, y vuélvete a la posada; 60 que él no me conoce a mí, y conviéneme hablalle.

JULIA¿Por dó he de ir?

PORCIAPor esa calle.

JULIA¿Vendrás presto?

PORCIAVoy tras ti.

(Vase JULIA.)

Buen hombre, ¿sois desta tierra? 65

ANASTASIONi soy della, ni buen hombre.

PORCIA Pues, ¿cómo la vuestra ha nombre?

ANASTASIO Como el cielo que la encierra.

CORNELIO Aparte.

Querrá decir Rosamira, que es tierra y cielo a do vive. 70 Estas quimeras concibe
quien más por amor suspira.

ANASTASIO Y vos, ¿sois deste lugar, señor estudiante?

PORCIANó.

ANASTASIO ¿Pues de dónde?

PORCIA Aún no sé yo 75
de a dó me podré llamar:
que el cielo y tierra, hasta agora, me tratan como extranjero, y ni dél ni della espero ver en mis cuitas mejora. 80

ANASTASIO ¿Vos con cuitas en edad tan tierna? ¡A fe que me espanta!

PORCIA A los años se adelanta tal vez la calamidad;
y más cuando son de aquellas 85 que trae el amor en sus alas.

CORNELIO Sus razones no son malas, aunque yo no sé entendellas;
    mas, con todo, apostaré que está el rapaz traspasado 90 del agudo arpón dorado, como el señor su mercé.

ANASTASIO   ¿Amáis, por ventura?

PORCIA Sí;
mas no sé si por ventura, aunque alguna me asegura 95 ver ahora lo que vi.

ANASTASIO   Pues, ¿qué veis?

PORCIA No será honesto hacer que me ponga en mengua tan fácilmente mi lengua como mis ojos me han puesto; 100 ni vuestro traje me mueve, ni mi deseo, a mostrar
lo que en silencio ha de estar hasta que otras cosas pruebe.

ANASTASIO   ¿Tan mal os parece el traje? 105

PORCIA No, por cierto; porque veo que dese rústico aseo es muy contrario el lenguaje, y podrá ser que el sayal encubra el al del refrán. 110

ANASTASIO¿De dónde sois?

PORCIADe Dorlán.

ANASTASIODe ahí soy yo natural.
¿Cuánto ha que de allá venistes?

PORCIAPoco más de doce días.

ANASTASIO¿Qué hay de nuevo?

PORCIANIñerías, 115
aunque son un poco tristes.

ANASTASIO ¿Y qué son?

PORCIAQue el de Rosena, que el de Dorlán hospedó, a Julia y Porcia robó, como Paris hizo a Helena. 120

ANASTASIO ¿Tiénese eso por verdad?

PORCIASí tiene; mas yo imagino que no lleva más camino que del cielo la maldad.

ANASTASIO ¿Pues qué dicen?

PORCIA Yo entreoí 125
que la Porcia quería bien a Anastasio.

ANASTASIO ¿Cómo? ¿A quién?

PORCIA A Anastasio.

ANASTASIO Aparte.

¿Cómo? ¿A mí?
¿A su primo hermano? ¡Bueno!

PORCIA Quizá guiaba su intento 130 por vía de casamiento.

ANASTASIO Deso está mi bien ajeno.
Mas, ¿eso qué importa al hecho de roballa?

PORCIA No sé yo;
dícese que la sacó 135
el mismo amor de su pecho.
Mas deben de ser hablillas del vulgo mal informado.

CORNELIO A mí me han maravillado.

ANASTASIO ¿Pues de qué te maravillas? 140 Di: ¿no puede acontecer, sin admiración que asombre, que una mujer busque a un hombre, como un hombre a una mujer?

CORNELIO    Sí puede; y es tan agible 145 lo que dices, que se ve que, en las posibles, no sé otra cosa más posible.

ANASTASIO    Como a su centro camina, esté cerca o apartado, 150
lo leve o lo que es pesado, y a procuralle se inclina, tal la hembra y el varón
el uno al otro apetece, y a veces más se parece 155
en ella esta inclinación;
    y si la naturaleza
quitase a su calidad
el freno de honestidad, que tiembla su ligereza, 160 correría a rienda suelta por do más se le antojase, sin que la razón bastase
a hacerla dar la vuelta;
    y así, cuando el freno toma 165 entre los dientes del gusto,
ni la detiene lo justo,
ni algún respeto la doma.

PORCIA    ¡En poca deuda os están las mujeres!

CORNELIO Si así fuera, 170
ni yo este traje trujera, ni él vistiera aquel gabán.

ANASTASIO No es tan poca: que si hago la cuenta, no sé yo paga que a la deuda satisfaga, 175 puesto que en ella me pago.

PORCIA En fin: ¿amáis?

ANASTASIO Alma tengo,
y no he de estar sin amor.

PORCIA Hay amor bueno y mejor.

ANASTASIO Yo con el mejor me avengo. 180

PORCIA ¿Es labradora?

ANASTASIO El tabarro
que me cubre así lo dice.

PORCIA Pues todo lo contradice el talle y horro bizarro; que el tabarro es tosca caja 185 que encierra el fino diamante.

CORNELIO ¡El diablo es el estudiante!
¡Qué bien su razón encaja!
Apostaré que mi amo,
sin más ni más, le da cuenta 190

de quién es y lo que intenta.
Por aquesto le desamo:
    que presume de discreto,
y no ve que es ignorancia, en las cosas de importancia, 195
fiar de nadie el secreto.

ANASTASIO   Ahora bien, si vuestra estada no es de asiento en el lugar y queréis conmigo estar en una misma posada, 200 en la que tengo os ofrezco el género de amistad que engrandece la igualdad.

PORCIADaisme lo que no merezco.
    Mas heme de despedir 205
primero de un cierto amigo.

CORNELIOAquesto es lo que yo digo:
él se vendrá a descubrir.

ANASTASIO   A la insignia del Pavón es mi estancia.

PORCIAAndad con Dios, 210
que mañana soy con vos.
¡Oh venturosa ocasión!

(Éntrase ANASTASIO y CORNELIO.)

Si al fuego natural no se le pone materia que en la tierra le sustente, volverá a su esfera fácilmente, 215 que así naturaleza lo dispone.

Y el amante que quiere que se abone su fe con afirmar que no consiente en su alma esperanza, poco siente de amor, pues que a su ley justa se opone. 220

Cual sin el agua quedaría la tierra, sin sol el cielo, el aire sin vacío, el mar en tempestad, nunca en bonanza,
y sin su objeto, que es la paz, la guerra, forzado sin su gusto el albedrío, 225 tal quedara amor sin esperanza.

(Éntrese PORCIA.)

(Salen TÁCITO y ANDRONIO.)

ANDRONIO Vamos hacia la prisión de la duquesa, que importa.

TÁCITO Reporta, Andronio, reporta tu arrojada condición: 230 que siempre quieres saber lo que no te importa un pelo.

ANDRONIO Soy curioso.

TÁCITO Yo recelo
que aqueso te ha de ofender.
Necio llamaré del todo, 235 no curioso, al que se mete en lo que no le compete ni toca por algún modo.

Hay algunos tan simplones, que desde su muladar 240 se ponen a gobernar
mil reinos y mil naciones;
dan trazas, forman Estados y repúblicas sin tasa,
y no saben en su casa 245
gobernar a dos criados.

De aquéllos mi Andronio es,
y esto lo sé con certeza,
que emiendan a la cabeza,
y apenas son ellos pies. 250

Lllaman con su ceguedad y mal fundada opinión,
al recato, remisión;
al castigo, crüeldad.

El gobierno no les cuadra 255
más justo y más nivelado;
siguen del vulgo engañado la siempre mudable escuadra.

El que es buen vasallo, atiende a rogar por su señor, 260 si es bueno, que sea mejor;
y si es malo, que se emiende.

De los viejos que enterramos, fue sentencia singular que el mundo hemos de dejar 265 del modo que le hallamos.

¿Qué te importa a ti si hace bien o mal el duque en esto?

ANDRONIO¿Hasme oído tratar desto?

TÁCITOY tanto, que me desplace. 270 Que quemen a la duquesa, no se te dé a ti un ardite.

ANDRONIO Desde hoy más guardaré el chite,
y de lo hablado me pesa.

TÁCITO A la espada me remito 275
de Dagoberto en la riña.

ANDRONIO ¿Si vence...?

TÁCITO Pague la niña:
que a buen bocado, buen grito.
Quien de honestidad los muros rompe, mil males se aplica. 280

ANDRONIO Cuando la zorra predica, no están los pollos seguros.

(Éntranse TÁCITO y ANDRONIO. Sale PORCIA, como labrador, y JULIA, como estudiante.)

JULIA ¿Por qué quieres intentar, Rutilio, tan gran locura?

PORCIA Porque en el mal es cordura 285
no temer, sino esperar;
y la negligencia estraga
los remedios del dolor,
y no quiero yo que amor conmigo milagros haga. 290 El que padece tormenta, si es que de piloto sabe, si puede, guíe la nave

a donde menos la sienta.

Yo en la mía un puerto veo 295
a los ojos de mi fe, y allá me encaminaré
con los soplos del deseo.

Ya viste que era tu hermano el labrador que aquí vimos: 300 que los dos le conocimos, aunque en el traje villano;
y ha muchos días que sabes,
y yo también, por mi mal, que tiene de su caudal 305
el amor todas las llaves, y que Rosamira es
la que así le tiene aquí.

JULIA Ya yo te he dicho que sí.

PORCIA Pues dime: ¿ahora no ves 310 que será muy acertada
la traza que te he contado?

JULIA Caminas tras tu cuidado;
en fin, como enamorada.
¿Que podrás dejarme a solas? 315

PORCIA ¿A solas dices que estás, quedando con quien podrás contrastar de amor las olas?
Ingenio tienes, y brío,
y ocasión tienes también 320 para procurar tu bien,
como yo procuro el mío.

JULIA ¿Y si te conoce, a dicha?

PORCIA Engañada en eso estás: que él no me ha visto jamás. 325

JULIA Puede mucho una desdicha.

PORCIA Nuestro mucho encerramiento y libertad oprimida,
como causó esta venida,
cegará su entendimiento. 330

JULIA Pues si el cielo, mi enemigo, te hiciere conocer,
nunca lo des a entender que te veniste conmigo.

Sigue a solas tu ventura, 335 que yo seguiré la mía,
y el blando amor que nos guía abone nuestra locura.

Yo a Manfredo le diré que a la patria te volviste. 340
Mas, ¿qué gente es ésta? ¡Ay triste!

PORCIA No sé; disimúlate.

(Entran ANASTASIO, MANFREDO y los dos ciudadanos.)

CIUDADANO 1 Es el caso inaudito, y la insolencia del duque de Rosena demasiada, mala en el hecho y mala en la apariencia. 345

ANASTASIO Cuando del apetito es sojuzgada la razón, no hay respeto que se mire, ni justa obligación que sea guardada.

CIUDADANO 2 ¿Quién lo vendrá a entender que no se admire?: que, faltando a la ley del hospedaje, 350 con las prendas del huésped se retire.
Y más aquel que debe por linaje, por ser, por calidad, por gentileza, hacer a todos bien, a nadie ultraje.

ANASTASIO Debe de ser de vil naturaleza, 355
o a quien soberbia natural inclina a tan infames hechos de bajeza.
Pues a fe que fabricas tu ruina, Manfredo ingrato: que Dorlán bien suele amansar tu arrogancia repentina. 360

MANFREDO A un pobre labrador, ¿por qué le duele tanto de Julia y Porcia el robo incierto?
Quizá miente la fama.

PORCIA¿Hablaréle?

JULIAHáblale; pero no te ha descubierto.

ANASTASIO¡Siempre son ciertas las desdichas mías! 365

MANFREDO¿Desdichas tuyas? ¡Bueno estás, por cierto!

ANASTASIO ¿Qué scita vive en sus regiones fieras, qué garamanta en su abrasada arena,
o en tierras, si las hay, de amubaceas, que apruebe que un gran duque de Rosena, 370

siendo del de Dorlán huésped y amigo...

JULIAAquestos argumentos me dan pena.

ANASTASIO ...como astuto ladrón, como enemigo, haberle de sus prendas despojado, sin que diga lo mismo que yo digo: 375 que fue Manfredo ingrato y mal mirado?

JULIAApostaré que el duque te conoce.

PORCIADesvíate en buen hora a esotro lado.

MANFREDO Buen hombre, no es razón que se alboroce así vuestro sentido: que a Manfredo 380 no le estima cual vos quien le conoce.

JULIAQue han de reñir los dos tengo gran miedo.

PORCIAPues, por Dios, que si riñen...

JULIACalla o vete.

PORCIAAñade a lo que dices: si es que puedo.

ANASTASIO Tampoco no sé yo a qué se entremete 385
a defender un hecho un estudiante donde tan gran pecado se comete.

CIUDADANO 2 Señores, no paséis más adelante:
que si es verdad que el duque hizo tal hecho, aquel que lo defiende es ignorante. 390

ANASTASIO ¡Vive Dios, que se me arde en rabia el pecho!

MANFREDO ¡Por Dios, que está el villano muy donoso!

JULIA Cuajóse la cuestión; ello está hecho.

ANASTASIO ¿Villano a mí? ¡Escolar sucio y astroso, capigorrón, brodista, pordiosero! 395

MANFREDO ¡Oh villano otra vez, loco furioso!

PORCIA Mal haré si no ayudo a quien bien quiero.

CIUDADANO 1 ¿Qué es esto? ¿Con puñal a un desarmado?

ANASTASIO Dejad que llegue a este vil grosero.

CIUDADANO 2 Cada cual de los dos sea bien mirado: 400
miren quién está en medio.

MANFREDO ¿Tanto brío
en un villano pecho está encerrado?

JULIA ¿Piedras a mi señor?

PORCIA¿Piedras tú al mío?

JULIA¿Oh! ¿También tú, villano?

PORCIA¿Oh sucio paje!

JULIARutilio, di: ¿no es éste desvarío? 405 ¿Bofetada en mi rostro? ¡Ya el coraje ha llegado a su punto, y no es posible que temor o respeto aquí le ataje!

CIUDADANO 1 Los dos criados, con furor terrible, se han asido también.

CIUDADANO 2¿Ténganse, digo! 410

MANFREDO¿Hasta que mate a éste, es imposible!

ANASTASIO¿No estimo su puñal en sólo un higo!

CIUDADANO 2¿Otra vez digo que se tengan, ea!

JULIA¿Deja estar los cabellos, enemigo!
¿Quieres, con esparcirlos, que se vea 415
quién somos?

PORCIA Pues, hereje, ¿estásme dando, y no te he yo de dar?

CIUDADANO 1 Otra pelea
es ésta más crüel que estoy mirando.

JULIA ¡Ay, que la boca toda me deshaces!

PORCIA ¡Suelta tú el labio!

JULIA ¡Ya le voy soltando! 420

PORCIA ¡Acaba de soltar!

CIUDADANO 1 ¡Quitad, rapaces!

JULIA ¡Ay, que me muerde!

PORCIA ¿Echáisme zancadilla?

JULIA ¿Qué haces, enemigo?

PORCIA Y tú, ¿qué haces?

CIUDADANO 2 Envainad vos, señor, y esta rencilla quédese así, pues no os importa nada. 425

MANFREDO;Dios sabe por qué gusto diferilla!

PORCIA Quitásteme el gabán, desvergonzada;
la mano, digo, que tal fuerza tiene;
pero ésta mía me hará vengada.

CIUDADANO 1¿Han visto con qué brío el mozo viene? 430
¿Y éste es vuestro criado?

ANASTASIONo, por cierto.

MANFREDORutilio, ¿cómo es esto?

PORCIANo conviene
que mi designio aquí sea descubierto.

MANFREDOPues, ¿por qué peleabas con tu hermano?

PORCIADe ignorancia nació mi desconcierto; 435 que, como vi este traje de villano, tan parecido a aquellos de mi tierra, dejarle de ayudar no fue en mi mano.
Y creo, si la vista no se yerra, que éste es un mi pariente conocido, 440 que de todo mi gusto me destierra.

MANFREDOEl seso, al parecer, tienes perdido;
mas no le pierdas tanto que señales pieza por donde yo sea conocido.

PORCIA Seguro está, señor, que ni por males 445 ni bienes que a Rutilio el cielo envíe, dará de ser quién eres las señales,
y en tal seguro el tuyo se confíe.

MANFREDO ¿De modo que a la patria quies volverte?

PORCIA Antes que el tiempo cargue y más enfríe. 450

MANFREDO ¡Adiós, que yo no quiero detenerte!

PORCIA Mi hermano queda acá.

MANFREDO Gusto infinito.

PORCIA Plega a Dios que en servirte en todo acierte.

(Vase MANFREDO y los dos ciudadanos.)

JULIA Dime, Rutilio: ¿a dicha, queda escrito en el alma el rencor que hemos mostrado? 455

PORCIA A la ocasión y al gusto le remito.

JULIA ¿Iré de tu buen pecho confiado?

PORCIA Pues, ¿quién lo duda?

JULIA ¡Adiós, pues, firme amigo!

(Vase JULIA.)

PORCIA ¡Adiós, mocito mal aconsejado!
Ya me tienes, señor, aquí contigo; 460 a tu gusto me manda, que yo espero que amor me ha de ayudar al bien que sigo.

ANASTASIO Pues yo de todo bien ya desespero.
¡Oh amor, que con la vida me atropellas la honra, pues sin ella vivo y muero! 465 Allí llega el ardor de sus centellas, donde pueda quitar el sentimiento de las cosas que es muerte el no tenellas.
Julia, robada; el duque, en salvamento;
yo, a quien el caso toca, descuidado 470 con el cuidado que en el alma siento.
De un estudiante vil mal afrentado;
socorrido de un pobre pastorcillo, aunque en esto me doy por bien pagado.
Padezco el mal; no sé a quién descubrillo; 475 mas, aunque lo supiese, no osaría, pues no es para sufrillo ni decillo.

PORCIA Si acaso éste no fuera el primer día que de buena amistad te doy la mano, pudieraste fiar de la fe mía. 480 Acomódome al traje de villano por servirte en el tuyo: señal clara que soy de proceder fácil y llano.
Si en algunos escrúpulos repara tu voluntad, el tiempo tendrá cargo 485 de mostrarte la mía abierta y clara.
Yo de serte fiel sólo me encargo, con pecho noble, sin torcido enredo, sin que dificultad me ponga embargo.

ANASTASIO Sabrás...; basta, no más.

PORCIA ¿Que tienes miedo 490 de descubrirte a mí? Pues yo te juro, por todo aquello que jurarte puedo, que puedes sin escrúpulo, al seguro, fiar de mí cualquier tu pensamiento.

ANASTASIO Conviéneme creer que estoy seguro; 495 porque para salir con el intento que tengo, sólo entiendo que tú eres el más fácil y cómodo instrumento;
y es menester, si gusto darme quieres, que, fingiendo ser moza labradora... 500 ¿De qué te ríes?

PORCIA Di lo que quisieres, que no me río, a fe.

ANASTASIO Si es que no mora voluntad en tu pecho de servirme, dímelo, y callaré luego a la hora.

PORCIA No digo de mujer; pero vestirme 505 de diablo lo haré, pues que te agrada, con prompta voluntad y ánimo firme.

ANASTASIO Serás de mí tan bien gratificado, que iguale a tu deseo el beneficio.

PORCIAQuedo en sólo servirte bien pagado. 510
Prosigue, pues.

ANASTASIOHa dado en sacrificio un amigo su alma a la duquesa, que está acusada de un infame vicio.
No se puede saber, como está presa, si tiene culpa o no, y él, sin sabello, 515
duda el ser defensor de tal empresa.

A mí me ha dado el cargo de entenderlo,
y, con este gabán disimulado, ha algunos días que he entendido en ello.

PORCIA¿Y has alguna verdad averiguado? 520

ANASTASIONinguna.

PORCIAPues, ¿qué ordenas?

ANASTASIOQue te pongas
en el traje que digo disfrazado, y a dar a Rosamira te dispongas un papel, y a sacarle de su pecho cuanto tuviere en él.

PORCIAComo compongas 525 bien el rústico traje, ten por hecho lo que pides.

ANASTASIOLa entrada está segura, dejando al carcelero satisfecho.

Has de llevar el rostro con mesura.

PORCIA Para una labradora, poco importa; 530 basta que lleve el pecho con cordura.
La carta escribe y la partida acorta, que yo de parecer mujer no dudo.

ANASTASIO Habla sutil, y en pláticas sé corta.

PORCIA ¡Ah ciego amor, de piedad desnudo, 535
y en qué trance me pones!

ANASTASIO ¿Te arrepientes?

PORCIA Nunca del buen intento yo me mudo.
Aunque tuviera el caso inconvenientes mayores, con mi industria los venciera y buscara los medios suficientes. 540

ANASTASIO Si supieses la paga que te espera, cual yo la sé, mancebo generoso,
a más tu voluntad se dispusiera:
que soy otra persona que este astroso hábito muestra.

PORCIA Y yo seré un criado 545 para ti el más fiel y cuidadoso que se pueda hallar en lo criado.

(Éntranse.)

(Sale MANFREDO y JULIA.)

MANFREDO ¡Brioso era el villano!

JULIA Y atrevido además, según dio muestra.

MANFREDO Y muy necio tu hermano. 550

JULIA La juventud lo causa, poco diestra en lazos de importancia.

MANFREDO ¿Volvióse?

JULIA ¡Y no le arriendo la ganancia!

MANFREDO Torna, pues, ¡oh Camilo!, y dime aquello que decías agora, 555
usando el mismo estilo:
que el modo de decirlo me enamora,
y el caso me suspende.

JULIA Pues dello gustas, buen señor, atiende.

«Llegóse a mí un mancebo 560 de agradable presencia, bien tratado, con un vestido nuevo,
que creo que por éste fue trazado;
llegóse, como digo,
y díjome: "Escuchadme, buen amigo". 565 Volví, miréle, y vile lloviendo perlas de sus bellos ojos;

la mano entonces dile,
de lástima movido, y él, de hinojos, temeroso tomóla, 570
y, bañándola en lágrimas, besóla.

Yo, del caso espantado, le alcé y le pregunté lo que quería;
él, casi desmayado,
me dijo que merced recibiría 575
si un poco le escuchase en parte donde naide nos notase.

Llévele a mi aposento;
sentóse, sosegóse, y después dijo con desmayado aliento, 580 con voz turbada y anhelar prolijo:
"Yo soy...", y calló luego,
y el rostro se le puso como un fuego.

Por estos movimientos conocí que vergüenza le estorbaba 585
a decir sus intentos;
y como yo sabellos deseaba, lleguéme a él, diciendo razones que le fueron convenciendo.

En fin, dellas vencido, 590 tras de un suspiro doloroso, ardiente, ya el rostro amortecido,
el codo y palma en la rodilla y frente, dijo: "Yo soy aquella
a quien persigue su contraria estrella; 595 yo soy la sin ventura que, a la primera vista de unos ojos, sin valor ni cordura,

rendí la libertad de los despojos de la honra y la vida, 600 pues una y otra cuento por perdida:

yo soy Julia, la hija del duque de Dorlán, cuyo deseo ya no hay quien le corrija; ni el cielo ofrece, ni en la tierra veo 605
remedio al dolor mío,

y es bien que no le tenga un desvarío".

Quedé, en oyendo aquesto, bien como estatua mudo, y, sin hablalla, quise escuchar el resto, 610 temiendo con mi plática estorballa;
y prosiguió diciendo
lo que me fue encantando y suspendiendo:

"Yo -dijo-vi a Manfredo, aqueste dueño venturoso tuyo 615
-que ya no tengo miedo, ni de contar, y más a ti, rehuyo la mal tejida historia, digna de infame y de inmortal memoria-.

Teníame mi padre 620
encerrada do el sol entraba apenas;
era muerta mi madre,
y eran mi compañía las almenas
de torres levantadas, sobre vanos temores fabricadas. 625

Avivóme el deseo
la privación de lo que no tenía
-que crece, a lo que creo, la hambre que imagina carestía-;
mas no era de manera 630 que yo no respondiese a ser quien era.

Hasta que mi desdicha hizo que este Manfredo huésped fuese de mi padre, que a dicha tuvo que la ocasión se le ofreciese 635 de mostrar su grandeza
sirviendo a un duque de tan grande alteza.

En fin, yo, de curiosa, un agujero hice en una puerta, que a la vista medrosa, 640 y aun al alma, mostró ventana abierta para ver a Manfredo.
Vile, y quedé cual declarar no puedo".»

Ni aun yo puedo contarte más por agora, porque gente viene. 645

MANFREDO Vamos por esta parte, que está mas fresca y menos gente tiene.
Anda, que estoy suspenso,
y vame dando el cuento gusto inmenso.

(Éntranse MANFREDO y JULIA.)

(Sale PORCIA, como labradora, con un canastico de flores y fruta.)

PORCIA Amor, bien será que abajes 650 mi vida a tu proceder,
pues no me quieres comer,
aun hecha tantos potajes.

Primeramente pastor
me hiciste, y luego estudiante, 655
y, andando un poco adelante, me volviste en labrador,
para labrar mis desdichas con yerros de tus marañas:
que éstas son de tus hazañas 660 las más venturosas dichas.

Flores llevo, donde el fruto que cogeré ha de ser tal, que al corazón de mortal le sirva y de triste luto. 665

Papel que vas encerrado entre estas flores, advierte que eres sierpe que a mi muerte ha el amor determinado.

No pienses, yendo conmigo, 670 ver tu intención declarada:
que no he de poner la espada en manos de mi enemigo.

Tú de mi alma lo eres,
y éstos del cuerpo lo son. 675

(Entra TÁCITO y ANDRONIO.)

¡Del diablo es esta visión!
Vade retro! ¿Qué me quieres?

TÁCITO ¡Oh, qué buen rato se ofrece con la pulida villana!

PORCIA ¡Por Dios, que vengo de gana! 680

ANDRONIO Bonísima me parece.
¿Qué es lo que cogió del suelo?

TÁCITO Algo que se le cayó;
o tú llega, o llego yo.

PORCIA Algún mal caso recelo; 685 que éstos son grandes bellacos, y me tienen de embestir.
¡Oh, quien pudiera huir el encuentro destos cacos!

TÁCITO Mi señora labradora, 690 vengáis con los años buenos, de paz y abundancia llenos.

ANDRONIO Vengáis muy mucho en buen hora.

TÁCITO ¿Qué trae aquí, por mi vida?

¡Oh, pese a quien me parió! 695

ANDRONIO ¿Diote?

TÁCITO Sí. ¡Y cómo que me dio!

La mano tengo aturdida.

¡Con otro me has de pagar el garrote que me has dado!

PORCIA ¡Que me roban en poblado! 700

¿No hay quien me venga a ayudar?

¡Que me roban, ay de mí!
¡Ladrones, dejad la cesta!

(Sale el CARCELERO.)

¿Qué soledad es aquésta?

¿Naide pasa por aquí? 705

CARCELERO ¿Qué es esto, desvergonzados?

TÁCITO Ojo, el señor, ¿con qué viene?

Bien parece que no tiene

los amplíficos cuidados ni la cuenta del negocio 710

de los dolientes distintos, cuando destos laberintos es la propia causa el ocio.

CARCELERO ¿Qué es lo que decís, malditos?

ANDRONIOQue se vaya dilatando 715 en paz, con el cómo y cuándo;
tenga los ojos marchitos, porque nos cumple acabar con aquesta labradora.

CARCELEROY vos, ¿qué decís, señora? 720

PORCIAQue me querían robar aquesta fruta que llevo a la señora duquesa.

CARCELERO¿A la presa?

PORCIASí, a la presa.

TÁCITONego.

ANDRONIOProbo.

(Metén la mano en el canastillo y comen de la fruta.)

TÁCITOY yo las pruebo. 725

CARCELERO ¡Hídeputa, sinvergüenza!
¡Andad, bellacos, de aquí!

TÁCITONunca el comer puso en mí género de desvergüenza.

ANDRONIO Agradezca la villana 730 que ha tenido buen padrino;
mas si hacéis otro camino, yo reharé mi sotana.

TÁCITO ¡Mal haya la suerte avara!

ANDRONIO Vamos, amigo, a lición... 735

(Éntranse TÁCITO y ANDRONIO.)

CARCELEROTan grandes bellacos son como los hay en Ferrara.

Vamos, labradora, a donde podáis ver a la duquesa, que en mi poder está presa. 740

PORCIAGuée, que no sé por dónde.

(Éntranse.)

(Salen MANFREDO y JULIA.)

MANFREDO Prosigue, que no hay gente que aquí nos pueda oír.

JULIALa desdichada
prosiguió en voz doliente su historia, en desvaríos comenzada, 745 y dijo: «Vi a Manfredo,
vile, y quedé cual declarar no puedo:
que en un instante pudo

y quiso amor, con mano poderosa, de piedad desnudo, 750
la imagen de Manfredo generosa grabar así en mi alma,
que della luego le entregué la palma.

Volvíme a mi aposento,
llevando en la memoria y en el seno, 755
con gusto y descontento, la mirada belleza y el veneno de amor que me abrasaba y la virtud honrosa refriaba.

Hice discursos varios, 760 fundé esperanzas en el aire vano, atropellé contrarios,
dile al Amor renombre de tirano
y de señor piadoso,
y al cabo el entregarme fue forzoso. 765

Dejé mi padre, ¡ay cielos!;
dejé mi libertad, dejé mi honra,
y, en su lugar, recelos
y sujeción tomé, muerte y deshonra;
y a buscar he venido 770
este huésped apenas conocido.

Hoy en tu compañía
le he visto, y, aunque en traje disfrazado, como en el alma mía
traigo su rostro al vivo dibujado, 775
al punto conocíle;
vile, alegréme, y hasta aquí seguíle.

"Quiero, pues, ¡oh mancebo!
-y esto cubriendo perlas sus mejillas, hincándose de nuevo 780
ante mí, visión bella, de rodillas-;
quiero -dijo-que digas
al tuyo, que es mi dueño, mis fatigas.

Que yo no tengo lengua para decir mi mal, ni la dolencia 785 mi honestidad y mengua, para poder ponerme en su presencia.

Tú a solas le relata,
la muerte con que amor mi vida mata;
que no estará tan duro 790
cual peñasco al tocar de leves ondas, ni cual está al conjuro del sabio encantador, en cuevas hondas, la sierpe, en esto cauta, ni cual airado viento al Euste nauta. 795

No le habrán leche dado leonas fieras de la Libia ardiente, ni habrá sido engendrado de algún cíclope bárbaro inclemente, para que no se ablande 800
oyendo mi dolor y amor tan grande.

Rica soy y no fea,
tan buena como él en el linaje, si ya no es que me afea
y me deshonra este trocado traje; 805 mas, cuando amor las causa, en todas estas cosas pone pausa.

Rosamira infamada,
justamente impedido el casamiento, yo dél enamorada, 810
cual la tierra del húmido elemento:
si esto no es desvarío, ¿quién lo podrá estorbar que no sea mío?"»

Esto dijo, y al punto dejó caer los brazos desmayados, 815
quedó el rostro difunto, los labios, que antes eran colorados,
cárdenos se tornaron,
y sus dos bellos soles se eclipsaron.

Levantósele el pecho, 820
su rostro de un sudor frío cubrióse, púsela sobre el lecho,
de allí a un pequeño rato estremecióse,
volvió en sí suspirando, siempre lágrimas tiernas derramando. 825

Consoléla y roguéla

que en aquel aposento se estuviese, sin temor de cautela,
hasta que yo su historia te dijese.
Encerrada la dejo: 830
¡mira si es raro de mi cuento el dejo!

MANFREDO Y tan raro, que no puedo persuadirme a que es verdad;
aunque amor y liviandad no se apartan por un dedo. 835 ¿Y que queda en tu aposento?

JULIA Como digo, sin mentir.

MANFREDO No me pudiera venir nueva de mayor contento.

JULIA Luego, ¿piénsasla gozar? 840

MANFREDO Mal me conoces, Camilo: que tan mal mirado estilo
no se puede en mí hallar.

JULIA Pues, ¿qué piensas hacer della?

MANFREDO Envialla al padre suyo: 845 que con esto restituyo
mi inocencia y su querella.

JULIA ¡Mal pagas lo que te quiere!

MANFREDO La honra se satisfaga: que un torpe amor esta paga 850
y aun otra peor requiere.

JULIA ¿Amar tan alto sujeto es error?

MANFREDO Y conocido:
porque amor tan atrevido, aunque es amor, no es perfeto. 855 Es el amor, cuando es bueno, deseo de lo mejor;
si esto falta, no es amor,
sino apetito sin freno.

Con todo, vamos a vella; 860
pero no es bien miralla, que en tales visitas se halla ocasión para perdella;
que yo no soy Scipión ni Alejandro en continencia, 865 para hacer la experiencia de mi blanda condición;
y yo soy de parecer,
y la experiencia lo enseña, que ablandarán una peña 870
lágrimas de una mujer.

JULIA Si no te ablanda su amor,
no lo hará su hermosura.

MANFREDO Con todo, será cordura huir del daño mayor. 875 Si la recibo, me hago
en su huida culpado;
si la vuelvo, habré mostrado que a ser quien soy satisfago, escusaré el desafío, 880

cobraré el perdido honor.

JULIA ¡Oh! ¡Mal haya tanto amor, mal pagado y mal nacido!
    ¡Desdichada de la triste que te quiso sin porqué! 885

MANFREDO En esos trances se ve quien su gusto no resiste.
    Pero vámonos a casa,
que, con todo, pienso vella.

JULIA Quizá vendrás a querella. 890

MANFREDO No es mi fuego desa brasa.

(Éntrese MANFREDO.)

JULIA ¡Ay, crüel, cómo te vas triunfando de mis despojos!
¿Qué consejo en mis enojos es, ¡oh Amor!, el que me das? 895
    En gran confusión me veo.
¿Quién me podrá aconsejar?
En fin, habré de acabar
a las manos del deseo.

Éntrese JULIA.

(Sale ROSAMIRA con un manto hasta los ojos.)

ROSAMIRA Quien me viere desta suerte, 900
juzgará, sin duda alguna, que me tiene la fortuna
en los brazos de la muerte.

Pues no es así: porque Amor, cuando se quiere extremar, 905 con el velo del pesar
suele encubrir su favor.

Honra, eclipse padecéis porque entre vos y mi gusto la industria ha puesto un disgusto, 910 por el cual oscura os veis;
mas pasará esta fortuna que así vuestra luz atierra como sombra de la tierra, puesta entre el sol y la luna. 915

(Entran el CARCELERO y PORCIA.)

CARCELERO Veisla ahí; habladla, y luego os salid con brevedad.

PORCIA ¡Ay obscura claridad!
¡Mal haya el vendado ciego!
¡Mirad cuál la tiene puesta! 920

ROSAMIRA Pues, amiga, ¿qué buscáis?

PORCIA Señora, que recibáis lo que traigo en esta cesta, que son unas bellas flores con alguna fruta nueva. 925

ROSAMIRA ¡Vos sola habéis hecho prueba de consolar mis dolores!

Sentaos aquí par de mí,
y esas flores me mostrad,
y ese rebozo os quitad. 930

PORCIA Señora, veislas aquí; pero sentarme, eso no.
El embozo, ya le quito.

ROSAMIRA Sentaos conmigo un poquito;
basta que lo diga yo. 935

PORCIA Estaba determinada, señora, de no lo hacer;
mas dicen que es mejor ser
necia, que no porfiada, y así, me asiento y suplico, 940
si mi ruego puede tanto, que os alcéis del rostro el manto otro poco, otro tantico.

ROSAMIRA Vesme descubierta, amiga; que a más fuerza tu cordura. 945

PORCIA ¡Jesús! ¿Que tanta hermosura ha puesto en tanta fatiga?

ROSAMIRA Amiga, déjate deso, y dime: ¿qué te movió
a venirme a ver?

PORCIA Sé yo 950
que fue de amor el exceso,

y el ver que ya el señalado plazo llega a más correr, adonde el mundo ha de ver tu inocencia o tu pecado; 955 y querría ver si puedo serte en algo de provecho, antes de llegar al hecho que al más fuerte pone miedo; que es Dagoberto valiente. 960

ROSAMIRA Así le conviene ser quien tiene de defender que es culpada la inocente.

Sale del curso ordinario el caso de mi porfía, 965 porque está la salud mía en la lengua del contrario.

Quien me deshonra ha de ser el mismo que me ha de honrar, y esto me hace callar 970
y culpada parecer.

Mas, dime: ¿acaso has oído qué se hizo el de Rosena?

PORCIA Por todo el lugar se suena que volvió al suyo corrido. 975

Otros la culpa le dan
de que la hija sacó, cuando alegre le hospedó
el gran duque de Dorlán, y con ella otra su prima; 980
pero yo sé que es mentira.

ROSAMIRA ¡Ya no es sola Rosamira a quien Fortuna lastima!

PORCIA Y esta su prima es hermana de Dagoberto el traidor. 985

ROSAMIRA;Sabes muy poco de amor, discreta y bella aldeana!

PORCIA El hijo del de Dorlán se suena que te defiende.

ROSAMIRA¿Quién lo dice?

PORCIAQuien lo entiende. 990

ROSAMIRA;En vano toma ese afán!
Mas su intención le agradezco, porque, al fin, es de quien es.

PORCIAQue él no pida el interés, aunque venza, yo me ofrezco; 995 porque por su gentileza lo hace, y no por su amor.

ROSAMIRAAsí mostrará mejor su valentía y nobleza.
Pero, puesto que él venciese, 1000
con él no me casaré.

PORCIAPues, ¿por qué?

ROSAMIRAYo sé el porqué.

PORCIA¿Y si él el premio pidiese?

ROSAMIRA No llegará a aqueso extremo, si me vale mi justicia; 1005
mas, como reina malicia, de cien mil azares temo.

Ven conmigo a otro aposento, labradora de mi vida,
que en parte más escondida 1010 te quiero hablar un momento;

que me ha dado el corazón que el Cielo aquí te ha traído para que en gozo cumplido vuelvas mi amarga prisión. 1015

Ven, que ya en tu voluntad está mi vida o mi muerte, mi buena o mi mala suerte,
mi prisión o libertad.

PORCIA Vamos, señora, do quieres, 1020 y de mí daré a entender que te puedes prometer
aun más de lo que quisieres:
que desde aquí te consagro la voluntad y la vida. 1025

ROSAMIRASin duda que tu venida ha sido aquí por milagro.

Jornada tercera

Salen MANFREDO y JULIA.

MANFREDO ¿Que se fue?

JULIA Como lo cuento.

MANFREDO Pues ¿por qué no la tuviste?

JULIA Porque muy mal se resiste un determinado intento.

Apenas abrí la puerta, 5 cuando dijo: «Amigo mío, yo sé que mi desvarío
en ninguna cosa acierta.

No digas al duque nada, pues sé que no ha de importar, 10
y es mejor el acabar
con mi muerte esta jornada.

¡Quédate a Dios!» Y salióse, sin podella resistir;
y, aunque la quise seguir, 15
al punto desaparecióse.

MANFREDO Mucho descuido has tenido.
¿Por dó se fue?

JULIA No sé, a fe.

MANFREDO ¿Que es posible que se fue?

JULIA Del modo que he referido. 20

Mas, si no la puedes ver, mejor es que no esté en casa.

MANFREDO ¿No sabes ya lo que pasa?

JULIA Más de lo que he menester.

Aparte.

¡Ay de mí, cómo me veo, 25
puesta en dudosa balanza, esperando la esperanza
cuando revive el deseo!

MANFREDO ¿Qué es lo que dices?

JULIA No, nada:

sólo digo que va tal, 30 que será el fin de su mal acabar desesperada.

MANFREDO En eso echarás de ver, Camilo, bien claramente, que apenas hay accidente 35 que sea bueno en la mujer.

Quieren do han de aborrecer, vanse de adonde han de estar, temen donde han de esperar, esperan do han de temer. 40

JULIA Pues si la vuelvo a encontrar, ¿quieres, señor, que la diga que te duele su fatiga?

MANFREDOA nadie supe engañar; mas dile lo que quisieres, 45 como hagas que la vea.

JULIA De modo haré que así sea, si haces como quien eres.

MANFREDO ¿Qué es lo que tengo de hacer?

JULIA Ni reñilla, ni afrentalla, 50 ni al padre suyo envialla.

MANFREDO No sé cómo podrá ser.
Sin duda, te dejó el pecho blando Julia con su llanto.

JULIA Tanto, que, a entender tú el cuánto, 55 ya la hubieras satisfecho.
¿Lágrimas eran aquellas para no ablandar un canto?
Y ¿hay cielo que se alce tanto do no alcancen sus querellas? 60 ¡Ah, señor Manfredo!

MANFREDOA fe,

Camilo, que estás rendido.

JULIA Tengo el corazón herido de lo que en Julia noté.

El agradable reposo, 65
las razones tan sentidas, aquellas perlas vertidas
por aquel rostro hermoso;
los desmayos, los temores, la vergüenza y sobresaltos, 70 el darle el corazón saltos, en fin, el morir de amores, con otras cosas que, a vellas tú, señor, como las vi, así como han hecho a mí, 75
te ablandaran sus querellas.

MANFREDO Vamos; que, pues ya se fue, no hay della tratarme más;
mas si vuelve, le dirás...

JULIA ¿Qué?

MANFREDO ¿Por Dios, que no sé qué! 80 Dicen que dejan hablar
ya a la presa Rosamira.

JULIA Esa cuerda es la que tira de tu gusto y mi pesar.

MANFREDO Y he de procurar, si puedo, 85 hablalla, porque me importa.

JULIA Aparte.

¡En fin, mi ventura es corta;
no hay que esperar en Manfredo!

Mas, antes que el fin funesto llegue que temo y deseo, 90 yo echaré de mi deseo en la plaza todo el resto.

(Éntranse JULIA y MANFREDO.)

(Sale ROSAMIRA con el vestido y rebozo de PORCIA, y PORCIA sale con el de ROSAMIRA, con el manto hasta cubrirse todo el rostro.)

ROSAMIRA Abrázame, y a Dios queda, y de mi palabra fía.

PORCIA Advertid, señora mía, 95 que es variable la rüeda de la Fortuna, y que es bien que a la prisión no volváis; porque, aunque sin culpa estáis, hasta agora no veo quién 100 os defienda.

ROSAMIRA Yo haré en eso lo que a entrambas más importe.

PORCIA Dad en vuestras cosas corte sin temor de mi suceso:
que a mí no me han de matar 105

por hacer tan buena obra, y yo sé que mi alma cobra en ella un bien singular, y en que vos no parezcáis está este bien escondido. 110
Idos, que siento rüido.

ROSAMIRAYo volveré.

Vase.

PORCIANo volváis.

(Entra el CARCELERO, en la mano un manto, la mitad de arriba abajo de tafetán negro, y la otra mitad de tafetán verde.)

CARCELERO ¡Vais norabuena, labradora hermosa!
Si de volver gustáredes, prometo de daros puerta franca a todas horas, 115 y aun a todos aquellos que quisieren comunicar con mi señora.

PORCIABueno.

CARCELERONo, sino no le den al delincuente procurador, y niéguenle abogado, ciérrenle los caminos y los medios 120 de su defensa, tápenle la boca;
quedarse ha a buenas noches de la vida.
¡Oh señora! ¿Aquí estabas? Yo te hacía en el otro aposento, donde sueles en ciega obscuridad pasar los días. 125

Orden es de tu padre que te pongas mañana, cuando salgas a la plaza, al triste, temeroso, amargo trance, este manto que ves, de dos colores.
Ha ordenado también que te acompañen 130 la mitad de su guarda con insignias de dolor y tristeza, y que asimismo vaya la otra mitad de gala y fiesta.
Al lado izquierdo has de llevar, señora, al verdugo, blandiendo el terso acero, 135 instrumento mortal que te amenace a muerte irreparable si, por dicha, venciere Dagoberto en tu deshonra.
De verde lauro una corona hermosa al diestro lado ha de llevar un niño, 140 para que del suceso que resulte, alegre o triste, o ya el cuchillo corra por tu bella garganta, o ya tus sienes del vitorioso lauro veas ceñidas.
Esto vengo a decirte, y no otra cosa. 145
¿No me respondes? Pues a fe que sabes la voluntad que tengo de servirte, y que, como el soltarte no me pidas, porque, en fin, soy leal al señor mío, que no habrá cosa que por ti no haga, 150
y así, una pura voluntad te ofrezco.
¿Qué me respondes?

PORCIAQue te lo agradezco.

(Éntrase PORCIA.)

CARCELERO ¡Estraño silencio es éste!
¡Mucho me da que pensar!
aunque la vida me cueste!

(Entran ANASTASIO y CORNELIO.)

CORNELIO De un mozo no conocido fiarte así, ¿quién tal vio?

ANASTASIO¿Pues qué he de hacer?

CORNELIO¿Qué sé yo?

ANASTASIO¿Hase de ir así vestido? 160

CORNELIO Con todo, digo que fue error conocido y claro.

ANASTASIOA lo hecho no hay reparo.
Mas, ¿no es éste?

CORNELIO¿Yo qué sé?

(Sale ROSAMIRA con el embozo.)

ANASTASIO Él es. Vengas en buen hora, 165
Rutilio, mi buen amigo.

CORNELIO Tal estás, que afirmo y digo que eres pura labradora.

ANASTASIO No porque estemos los dos, vayas el caso encubriendo. 170

ROSAMIRAHermanos, yo no os entiendo; dejadme, y andad con Dios, que no soy la que pensáis.

ANASTASIONo es de Rutilio la habla.
¡Mal mi negocio se entabla! 175
¿Pues quién sois? ¿Adónde vais?
O ¿quién os dio este vestido?
Porque le conozco yo.

ROSAMIRAMi dinero me le dio.

ANASTASIOY el vendedor, ¿quién ha sido? 180 Porque hasta que lo digáis, no habéis de pasar de aquí.

ROSAMIRA¡Desventurada de mí; mal término es el que usáis!
No me quitéis el embozo, 185
porque a fe que os cueste caro.

ANASTASIO¡En amenazas reparo!
Venga el vestido, o el mozo.
¿Qué dije? Muy mal hablé:
este vestido os demando. 190

(Sale DAGOBERTO y un criado suyo.)

DAGOBERTOAlza los ojos, mirando si la ves.

ROSAMIRA Ya me escapé;
    porque aquí es Dagoberto,
a quien yo vengo a buscar.

ANASTASIO Pues qué, ¿piénsaste escapar? 195

ROSAMIRA Tenga; si no, juro, cierto...

DAGOBERTO ¿Qué pendencia es ésta, amigos?

ROSAMIRA Príncipe, hablarte quisiera a solas, si ser pudiera, o no con tantos testigos. 200
    Y, para facilitallo, mira quién soy.

(Descúbrese ROSAMIRA a sólo DAGOBERTO.)

DAGOBERTO ¿Qué es aquesto?
Amigos, váyanse presto.

ANASTASIO En gran confusión me hallo: que éste no es Rutilio; no, 205
puesto que trae su vestido.

CORNELIO Algún mal le ha sucedido.

ANASTASIO ¿Mal ha de ser?

CORNELIONo sé yo.

ANASTASIO Yo he de hablar a Rosamira, y della lo he de saber. 210

CORNELIOA mucho te quiés poner.

DAGOBERTOSeñora, el verte me admira.
¿Cómo vienes deste modo?
¿Quién te puso en este traje?

ROSAMIRAEI tiempo, que es corto, ataje 215 el darte cuenta de todo.
Sólo vengo a que me lleves luego a Utrino.

DAGOBERTO¿Cómo así?

ROSAMIRAY lo ordenado hasta aquí, ni lo intentes, ni lo pruebes. 220 No quiero en un cadahalso verme puesta, hecha terrero del vulgo bajo y grosero, ni a ti juzgado por falso.

DAGOBERTO ¿Tienes más que me decir? 225

ROSAMIRANo.

DAGOBERTO¿Ni veniste a otra cosa?

ROSAMIRANó.

DAGOBERTOMi aldeana hermosa, mal me sabéis persuadir.

Vamos; que yo daré medio
a lo que más nos importe. 230

ROSAMIRAYo no sé otro mejor corte.

DAGOBERTOMil tiene nuestro remedio.

(Éntrase ROSAMIRA, DAGOBERTO y su criado.)

(Salen el CARCELERO, MANFREDO y JULIA.)

CARCELERO Señor, yo os pondré con ella;
y, pues venís por su bien,
a los dos nos está bien: 235
a mí, mostralla; a vos, vella.

Si la prisión os he abierto, es que me da el corazón que tiene poca razón el príncipe Dagoberto. 240

Esperad aquí un poquito; entraré a llamalla yo.

MANFREDOCamilo, vete.

CARCELERONó, no;

estése aquí el pajecito:
que mejor es que haya gente, 245 por carecer de sospechas.

(Éntrase el CARCELERO.)

JULIA ¡Ay triste, con cuántas flechas me hiere Amor inclemente!

MANFREDO ¿Qué dices, Camilo?

JULIA Digo
que es Julia muy desdichada. 250

MANFREDO No anduvo en irse acertada.

JULIA Fue huyendo de su enemigo.

MANFREDO Ésta es la duquesa; calla.

JULIA ¡Qué cubierto el rostro tiene!

CARCELERO Digo, señora, que viene 255
a hacer por vos batalla;

(Sale PORCIA y el CARCELERO.)

y es de gentil contención y de persona despierta.
Yo me quiero ir a la puerta, por si viene su excelencia. 260

(Vase el CARCELERO.)

MANFREDO Aunque de quien sois se infiere y nace seguridad
que no os toca la maldad que os ahíja el que no os quiere, será bien que vuestra lengua 265 descubra lo que hay en esto, porque su silencio ha puesto
a vuestro crédito en mengua.

Quien lleva en el desafío a la razón de su parte, 270 de hombre tierno, se hace un Marte;
de flaco y torpe, con brío.

Si estáis sin culpa, no os pene que Dagoberto sea tal, que el mundo no le dé igual 275
en cuantos valientes tiene;
porque sabed, Rosamira, que los filos de verdad cortan con facilidad las armas de la mentira. 280

Y si acaso estáis culpada,
y de amor la culpa fue, asimismo probaré
con el contrario mi espada:
que en fe de que él no hizo bien 285
en descubrir lo secreto, de mi vitoria os prometo que os den más de un parabién.

Y soy persona que puedo prometer esto y aun más. 290 ¿Para qué en silencio estás?
Habla: desecha ya el miedo.

PORCIA Esta noche, y no durmiendo, porque entre el sueño y mis cuitas nunca el reposo hizo treguas, 295 ni de veras ni de burlas, digo que, estando despierta, desvelada en mis angustias, se me ofreció ante mis ojos de ti mismo una figura. 300 Las razones que aquí has dicho dijo aquel tú, y otras muchas, que todas se encaminaban
a desear mi ventura.
Dijo que le asegurase 305
de mi inocencia o mi culpa, aunque, de cualquier manera,
se ofrecía a darme ayuda.
Yo, sepultada en silencio y con el miedo confusa, 310 hice lengua de los ojos, por tener la lengua muda;
con ellos le di a entender ser traidor el que me acusa, y que mi silencio nace 315
de considerada astucia.
Ya la visión se volvía, cuando vi, sin poner duda, entre el sí y el no una sombra; ¿qué digo sombra?, a la luna 320 vi y al sol en dos mejillas de una doncella importuna que, arrodillada a tu imagen,
tales razones pronuncia: «Yo soy -dijo-, señor mío, 325
la desventurada Julia, que, cual Clicia, voy siguiendo esa luz del sol y tuya.
Soy quien te ha entregado el alma con la fe más tierna y pura 330 que vio Amor en cuantos pechos ha rendido a su ley justa.

Tú ofreces favor a quien ni te quiere ni te escucha, y niegas de dar oídos 335
a quien te sigue aunque huyas.
Promete, acorre, defiende, ofrece, trabaja y suda:
que amor tiene decretado que al fin fin yo he de ser tuya». 340
A estas sentidas razones acompañaba una lluvia
de vivas líquidas perlas, correos de su tristura.
Tu imagen se le humilló, 345
y aun le dijo: «Estad segura, señora, que he de ser vuestro,
a pesar de la fortuna».
Si esto es así, ¿qué me ofreces?
¿Para qué siempre procuras 350 otro bien, si te da el cielo
el mayor, dándote a Julia?
Mas, ¿con quién hablo, cuitada?
La misma visión, sin duda, es aquesta que vi anoche, 355
o en muy poquito se muda.
Del varón, ésta es la imagen;
la de aquéste, la de Julia.
¡Oh visiones amorosas, dejadme en mi desventura, 360
idos a buscar verdades,
y no os curéis de mis burlas;
haced cierto lo que amor os da a entender por figuras!
¿No os vais? Por Dios que dé gritos: 365 que mis ojos no acostumbran a ver visiones, aunque éstas más alegran que atribulan.
¿No os vais? A fe que dé voces.
¿No hay ninguno que me acuda? 370

MANFREDO Ya nos vamos; calla un poco.
¡Ella está loca, sin duda!

JULIA Antes parece profeta.
¿Quién le ha dicho lo de Julia?

MANFREDO ¡Calla, que su guarda vuelve! 375 ¡El alma llevo confusa!

(Vanse MANFREDO y JULIA, y entra el CARCELERO.)

CARCELERO Otro Cipión está abajo, que, si a queste no os contenta, por sacaros desta afrenta, se pondrá en cualquier trabajo. 380

Vestido trae de villano;
pero a fe que es caballero:
que el lenguaje no es grosero
y el brío es de cortesano.

Dice que os quiere hablar, 385
y yo estoy puesto en que os hable.
Hablad más, mostraos afable, que os mata tanto callar.

(Vuelve a salir el CARCELERO.)

PORCIA Si fuese Anastasio... ¡Ay cielos!
¿Qué he de hacer si acaso es él? 390
¿He de estar muda con él, o he de decir mis duelos?
¡En gran confusión me veo!
Ingenio, cielos, ayuda:

que no es posible estar muda 395 con tan parlero deseo.

(Entra ANASTASIO y CORNELIO, su criado, y el CARCELERO.)

CARCELERO Despachad con brevedad, no os suceda algún desmán, que estos negocios están de muy mala calidad. 400

Que el silencio desta dama tiene a Novara suspensa, y no imagino en qué piensa la que no piensa en su fama.

Yo estaré con ojo alerta 405 por algún pequeño espacio, mirando si de palacio
alguno llega a esta puerta.

(Éntrase el CARCELERO.)

PORCIA ¿Sois vos Anastasio?

ANASTASIOSí.

PORCIA¿El que envió este papel? 410

ANASTASIOSeñora, yo soy aquel que ha mucho que el alma os di; soy quien por vuestra desgracia a más desventuras vino que las que vio en su camino 415 el gran músico de Tracia;
soy aquel que alegre piensa,

fiado en vuestro valor, poner la vida y honor
y el alma en vuestra defensa. 420

PORCIA ¿No leístes la respuesta que os llevó la labradora?

ANASTASIONo la he visto más, señora, y hartos el buscarla me cuesta.

PORCIA Quizá, como forastera, 425
debió de errar la posada.
¡Pues a fe que es avisada, y que os fue buena tercera!

En efeto, correspondía con justos comedimientos, 430 que vuestros ofrecimientos con el alma agradecía,
y que de mi honestidad,
que ahora la infamia lleva, hiciédeses vos la prueba 435 que os mostrase la verdad.

Jurábaos que Dagoberto
jamás en dicho o en hecho pudo ver cosa en mi pecho que apruebe su desconcierto. 440

En vuestros brazos valientes me resignaba, y ponía
en ellos la suerte mía, segura de inconvenientes.

Ofrecía, finalmente, 445
de tomaros por esposo:
señal de que es mentiroso Dagoberto, y yo inocente.

ANASTASIO ¡Oh dulce fin de mis males y principio de mis bienes, 450 cielo que en la tierra tienes glorias que son sin iguales!
Vesme rendido a tus pies;
dispón a tu voluntad
con toda seguridad 455
de cuanto valgo.

PORCIA¿No ves
que soy tuya y que a ti toca disponer de mí a tu gusto?

ANASTASIO¡Alma, ahora sí que es justo que os vuelva este gusto loca! 460

CORNELIO Déjate desas sandeces; haz, señor, lo que has de hacer:
que no es tiempo de expender el tiempo así todas veces.
Recíbela por esposa; 465
acaba, y vamos de aquí.

ANASTASIOSeñora, ¿queréislo así?

PORCIASí, y me tengo por dichosa.

ANASTASIO Pues dadme esa hermosa mano, y tomad mi fe y la mía. 470

(Danse las manos.)

PORCIA Veisla ahí; que una porfía, cualquier risco vuelve en llano.

ANASTASIO Ya, pues, que hasta vuestro cielo levantaste mi caída, sed, mi señora, servida 475
de alzar dél el negro velo, para que las luces bellas vea cúyos rayos fueron los que han hecho y deshicieron las nubes de mis querellas, 480 y para que, con su llama alentado el corazón,
de la esperada quistión
se prometa triunfo y fama.

PORCIA No verán ojos mortales, 485 destos que vos amáis tanto, levantado el negro manto,
ni más alegres señales,
hasta que mi fama obscura,
a pesar de Dagoberto, 490 vuelva por vos a buen puerto limpia, alegre, clara y pura.
Y perdonadme, señor,
negaros la primer cosa que pedís a vuestra esposa. 495
Echad la culpa a mi amor.

ANASTASIO Dadme un abrazo siquiera.

PORCIA Eso, de muy buena gana.

CORNELIO Vamos, y espere mañana vuestro invierno primavera. 500

(Vanse ANASTASIO y CORNELIO.)

PORCIA Hasta ahora, en popa el viento lleva mi barca amorosa.
¡Oh Fortuna poderosa, condúcela a salvamento!

(Éntrase PORCIA.)

(Sale JULIA con una rica rodela y una espada, todo en la mano; sale también MANFREDO.)

JULIA En fin, ¿las armas son éstas 505 que señaló Dagoberto?

MANFREDO Sí, amigo.

JULIA Él está en lo cierto;
que son livianas y prestas, y él tiene fama de diestro
y de ligero además. 510

(Toma MANFREDO la espada y la rodela.)

MANFREDO Muestra, Camilo, y verás cómo soy dellas maestro.

JULIA Pues ¿con quién te has de probar?

MANFREDOLlama al huésped.

JULIAVesle aquí.

GÜÉSPED¡Ah, Camilo, pesia mí! 515 Venid, que os ando a buscar más ha de un hora.

JULIA Pues bien,
¿qué hay de nuevo?

GÜÉSPEDQue os espera
vuestra mujer allí fuera.

JULIA¿Mujer a mí?

GÜÉSPEDY aun de bien, 520
según su traje.

JULIA Imagino
que es Julia.

MANFREDOSi Julia es,
hazla entrar.

JULIA¿Qué harás después
de entrada?

MANFREDO Yo determino
de hablarla y ver qué es su intento. 525

JULIA ¿Y enviarás la do dijiste?

MANFREDO No, por Dios.

JULIA No; que la triste
no puede más, según siento.
¡Oh, a qué buen tiempo llegaste!
Güésped, yo os lo serviré. 530 ¿Y el vestido que ordené?

GÜÉSPED Está donde lo ordenaste.

(Éntrase JULIA a vestirse de mujer lo más breve que se pueda.)

MANFREDO Si otra rodela tenéis, id por ella, y volved luego.

GÜÉSPED ¿Queréis probar en el juego 535 lo que en las veras haréis?

MANFREDO Sí, amigo.

GÜÉSPED Yo vuelvo presto con una que es de provecho.

(Éntrase el HUÉSPED.)

MANFREDO El corazón en el pecho me da saltos. ¿Qué es aquesto? 540

Mas, si anuncia que es verdad lo que Rosamira dijo,
por vanas cuentas me rijo.
¿No tengo yo voluntad?

¿Cómo? ¿Sentidos no tengo? 545
¿No tengo libre albedrío?
¿Pues qué miedo es éste mío?
¡Mal con mi esfuerzo me avengo!

¿Con qué, para que me venza,
Julia me ha obligado a mí? 550 Pues no es señal verla aquí de amor, mas de desvergüenza.

¿A dicha, solicítela?
¿Dónde vee ricos despojos?
¿Viéronla jamás mis ojos, 555
o, por ventura, habléla?

No, por cierto. ¿Pues qué cargo me puede Julia hacer?
¿Que me quiere y es mujer?
No me faltará descargo. 560

(Vuelve a entrar el GÜÉSPED con una rodela.)

GÜÉSPED Vesla aquí.

MANFREDO Toma tu espada,
y vente hacia mí con ella.
Muy mejor fuera no vella.

GÜÉSPED ¿Qué dices?

MANFREDONo digo nada.

GÜÉSPED ¿Hela de desenvainar? 565

MANFREDO Poco importa; desenvaina.

GÜÉSPED Más seguro es con la vaina.

MANFREDO ¡Mucho me das que pensar, Julia!

GÜÉSPED Mas yo desenvaino.
¿Estoy bien puesto? ¿No entiendes, 570 señor? ¿De qué te suspendes?
Si no te ensayas, envaino.

MANFREDO No vella fuera mejor, digo otra vez y otras ciento.
Vente a mí.

GÜÉSPED ¡Dios ponga tiento 575
en sus manos!

MANFREDO ¡Las de amor
son las que me desatientan!

GÜÉSPED ¿Qué es lo que entre dientes hablas?

MANFREDO;Mal tus negocios entablas, amor, cuando al fin afrentan! 580

Ponte en aquesta postura, la rodela junto al pecho,
y parte con pie derecho.
¡Estraña desenvoltura
ha sido la desta loca! 585

GÜÉSPED;Qué es lo que dices, señor?

MANFREDO;A qué locura, oh Amor, tu locura me provoca!

No hay piloto tan famoso que en tus mares no se ahogue; 590 hieres, amor, como azogue penetrante y bullicioso.

GÜÉSPED Cordura será dejarte, mejor sazón aguardando:
que estás del Amor tratando, 595 cuando has de tratar de Marte.

MANFREDO Mas quizá no será ella.

GÜÉSPEDEl temor le desatienta.

MANFREDO Si él aquesta treta tienta, bien sé yo la contra della. 600 ¡Válate Dios, la mujer, cuál me tienes sin porqué!

(Entra TÁCITO.)

TÁCITO Señor güésped, oígame, que una merced me ha de hacer, y es que me preste su haca 605 para ver el desafío
mañana.

GÜÉSPEDA la fe, hijo mío, ya no puede andar de flaca.

TÁCITO No importa: que poco peso
y no he de estar mucho en ella. 610

GÜÉSPEDSobre su espinazo está subido un palmo de hueso.

TÁCITO Haréle la silla atrás o adelante, si es que importa.

GÜÉSPED¿No sabéis que es pasicorta, 615
y que es rijosa además?

TÁCITO Yo le tiraré del freno y me pondré desviado
de otras bestias.

GÜÉSPEDHale dado
torozón de comer feno. 620

TÁCITO Tendréla yo sin comer dos días y sanará.

GÜÉSPED Para comer, sana está;
pero no para correr.

TÁCITO ¿Yo corrella? ¡Ni por lumbre! 625

GÜÉSPED Digo que está ciega y manca.

TÁCITO Eso no importa una blanca.
¿No sabe ya mi costumbre?
Que correré sobre un palo, sin pies y manos, si quiero. 630

MANFREDO ¡Qué gracioso chocarrero!

GÜÉSPED No es el jinete muy malo, que no acaba de entender que no la quiero prestar.

TÁCITO ¡Acabara yo de hablar! 635

MANFREDO Y vos de importuno ser.

TÁCITO Pues présteme seis reales para alquilar un rocín.

GÜÉSPED ¿Yo prestar? ¡Ni aun un cuatrín!

TÁCITO ¿Tanto era, pesia mis males? 640

¿Pedíalo algún chocante o algún mozuelo ordinario, sino un mero bacalarío,
diestro músico estudiante?

MANFREDO Veislos aquí. Andad con Dios, 645 que vuestro donaire fuerza a que os den más.

TÁCITOY esme fuerza, señor, llevar otros dos para alquilar un pretal de cascabeles.

MANFREDOTomad. 650

TÁCITOVuestra liberalidad es de persona real.
¡Oh, si al pretal se añadieran un par de espuelas!

MANFREDOCompraldas.

GÜÉSPEDPedí un puño de esmeraldas. 655

TÁCITO¿Qué mucho que las pidieran?
Tan aína este señor
las tuviera aquí a la mano.

GÜÉSPEDIdos en buen hora, hermano.

TÁCITO Prospera el cielo tu honor, 660
y a tu hacienda dé salud,
y a mí gracia de corrala.

GÜÉSPED ¡No echaréis la pata en ella, por vida de Cafalud!,

(Vase TÁCITO.)

que éste es mi nombre.

MANFREDO Camina, 665
que me importa quedar solo.

GÜÉSPED Encubierta trae este Apolo su angélica faz divina.

(Vase el GÜÉSPED y entra JULIA muy bien adrezada de mujer, cubierta con su manto hasta los ojos, y pónese de rodillas ante MANFREDO.)

JULIA Si no halla en tu valor disculpa mi atrevimiento, 670 en las disculpas no siento que la puede haber mejor;
y si no tiembla el rigor
de tu indignación mi pena, acabará esta jornada 675
culpada y desesperada,
como mi suerte lo ordena.

MANFREDO Levanta, señora mía, que esta tu tamaña culpa el deseo la disculpa 680

que en tus entrañas se cría:
que de Amor la tiranía
a peores cosas fuerza,
y sé yo por experiencia que no hay hacer resistencia 685 a los golpes de su fuerza.

Pues ya Amor me ha descubierto tus pasos, tu intento y celo, descúbreme tú ese cielo que traes con nubes cubierto; 690 y si lo ignoras, te advierto que son seguras verdades las que la experiencia apura:
que es parte la hermosura para mudar voluntades. 695

JULIA Harélo, como es razón;
mas, ¡ay de mí!, que barrunto que ha de llegar en un punto mi muerte y tu admiración.
No te espante esta visión 700 ni este nunca visto estilo;
que el amor que en mí se esmera, de Julia la verdadera
hizo un fingido Camilo.

MANFREDO Gran desenvoltura es ésta, 705 Camilo, y pensando voy
por qué te burlas si estoy más de luto que de fiesta;
y es cosa muy descompuesta burla de tal proceder 710 en tiempo turbado y triste;
y el que de mujer se viste, mucho tiene de mujer.

JULIA Julia soy la desdichada, y, entre mi pena crecida, 715
más siento el no ser creída, que siento el ser mal pagada.
Como no repara en nada
aquel que llaman Amor, quiere que sus hechos cante 720 Julia vuelta en estudiante, que primero fue pastor.
Soy la que vio Rosamira en visión ante tus pies;
soy, señor, la que no es 725
en los ojos de tu ira;
soy la que de sí se admira, viendo las muchas mudanzas que Amor en sus trajes pone, y que en ninguno dispone, 730 el fin de sus esperanzas.

MANFREDO Yo te creo, pues tus ojos no pudieran fingir tanto que mostraran con su llanto entregarme tus despojos. 735 Pon ya tregua a tus enojos, Julia hermosa, y ven conmigo:
que quizá en estos rodeos descubrirán tus deseos que no es Amor tu enemigo. 740 Servirásme de padrino
en la batalla que espero:
que por gentileza quiero ponerme en este camino;
y si el cielo y el destino 745
ordenan que yo sea tuyo, no por salir a este trance se ha de borrar este lance, y más si yo no le huyo.
No te arrodilles; levanta, 750 que eres mi igual, y aun mejor.

(Éntrase MANFREDO.)

JULIA De hoy más diré que es, Amor, tu rigor blandura santa;
ya a mi pena se adelanta mi gozo; ya me contemplo, 755 libre del mar de mis penas, colgar, ¡oh Amor!, las cadenas, en los muros de tu templo.

(Éntrase JULIA.)

(Suenan trompetas tristes: sale el DUQUE DE NOVARA con su acompañamiento y dos jueces; siéntase en su trono, que ha de estar cubierto de luto, y dice:)

DUQUE Traigan a Rosamira de aquel modo que yo tengo ordenado.

UNO Ya ella viene, 760
según lo dice el triste son que suena.

(Sale PORCIA cubierta con el manto que le dio el CARCELERO, acompañada de la misma manera que dijo, con la mitad del acompañamiento enlutado y la otra mitad de fiesta; el VERDUGO al lado izquierdo, desenvainado el cuchillo, y al siniestro, el niño con la corona de laurel; los atambores delante sonando triste y ronco, la mitad de la caja de verde y la otra mitad de negro, que será un extraño espectáculo. Siéntase PORCIA, cubierta, en un asiento alto que ha de estar a un lado del teatro, desviado del de su padre; entran asimismo DAGOBERTO y ROSAMIRA, como peregrinos embozados, y TÁCITO.)

DUQUE¿Cómo no viene Dagoberto? ¿Espera que se le pase el día, pues ya es hora?

JUEZSin duda, debe ser éste que viene: que el actor es costumbre se presente 765 antes que el reo en la estacada.

DUQUEEs claro.

(Entra ANASTASIO, y CORNELIO por padrino, y ANASTASIO viene cubierto el rostro con un tafetán; viene con sus atambores; serán los mismos que trujeron a PORCIA.)

¿No es éste Dagoberto?

ANASTASIONi aun quisiera serlo por la mitad de todo el mundo.

DUQUE¿Pues quién sois?

ANASTASIOSu enemigo, sólo en cuanto lo es de la duquesa Rosamira, 770 cuya defensa tomo yo a mi cargo.

DUQUEYo os lo agradezco.

JUEZDagoberto tarda.

DUQUECajas oigo sonar; él es, sin duda.

(Entra MANFREDO con un tafetán por el rostro; trae a JULIA por padrino, que asimesmo viene embozada.)

JUEZ Tampoco es éste Dagoberto.

DUQUE El talle
no nos dice que es él.

JUEZ Sin duda, pienso <sup>775</sup> que ha de tener de sobra defensores la duquesa.

DUQUE Sepamos quién es éste.

JUEZ ¿Quién sois o a qué venís, buen caballero?

MANFREDO El saber quién yo sea importa poco; saber a lo que vengo, sí que importa: <sup>780</sup>
a defender a la duquesa vengo.

DAGOBERTO ¿Quién serán estos dos?

ROSAMIRAN No los conozco ni sé quién puedan ser.

ANASTASIO A mí me toca
por derecho y razón esa defensa, pues fui el primero que llegué a este punto. <sup>785</sup>

TÁCITORazón tiene el primero, o yo sé poco desto de desafíos y estacadas.

JUEZA la duquesa toca el declararse cuál quiere de los dos que la defienda.

DUQUEEso es razón.

ANASTASIOY yo por tal la tengo. 790

MANFREDOY yo también: que no me queda cosa por saber de las leyes de la guerra.

DUQUEPregúntenselo, pues, y vean qué dice mi hija. ¡Oh nombre dulce, cuando el cielo quiso que sin escrúpulo llegase 795 a mis oídos!

JUEZId vos, y sabeldo.

UNOEl duque, mi señor, dice, señora, que estos caballeros han venido a ser tus defensores, y que escojas cuál quieres de los dos que te defienda. 800

PORCIAEn Dios y en el primero deposito mi agravio, mi inocencia y esperanza.

DAGOBERTO¿Labradora es ésta? Mejor me ayude el cielo que la crea. Ya se tarda mi criado.

ROSAMIRA Confusa estoy, amigo. 805
No sé en qué ha de parar tan grande enredo.

JUEZ Bien se oyó lo que dijo; a vos os toca, señor, su defensa.

MANFREDOTener paciencia es lo que más importa en este caso; basta que se ha mostrado al descubierto 810 mi voluntad.

DUQUE El cielo así os lo pague como yo os lo agradezco.

JUEZ No hay disculpa que pueda disculpar ya la tardanza de Dagoberto.

DUQUE; Mas, que nunca venga!

TÁCITO Ciégale, San Antón; quémale un brazo; 815 destróncale un tobillo; nunca acierte a venir a este sitio; salga en palmas nuestra buena duquesa, que es un ángel, una paloma duenda, una cordera, que no tiene más hiel que cuatro toros. 820

(Entra un CORREO con una carta.)

CORREOEs de tanta importancia este despacho que traigo, ¡oh buen señor!, que me es forzoso dártelo aquí; que así me lo mandaron, porque es de Dagoberto, y que te importa.

DUQUE¿De Dagoberto? Muestra cómo es esto. 825 ¿Cómo toma la pluma por la espada?
¿Tiempo es éste de cartas?

CORREONo sé nada:
ello dirá.

JUEZVuestra excelencia vea lo que la carta dice.

DUQUEAsí lo hago.

DAGOBERTOParece que se turba el duque.

ROSAMIRA¡Ay triste! 830
¡Cuánto mejor nos fuera habernos ido y esperar desde lejos el suceso deste tan grande enredo y desventura!
¡Temblando estoy!

TÁCITO¿Carticas a tal tiempo?
Apostaré que no llega esta danza 835
a hacer con las cindojas el tretoque.

DUQUE ¿Hay cosa igual? Leed aquesa carta en alta voz, que es bien que la oigan todos.

(Después de haber leído el DUQUE la carta, se la da al JUEZ, que la lee en alta voz.)

JUEZ (Carta.) La presta resolución que tomaste de entregar a Manfredo por esposa a tu hija Rosamira me forzó a usar de la industria de acusalla, por evitar por entonces el peligro de perdella. La mejor señal que te podré dar de que es buena es el haberla yo escogido por mi legítima mujer. Considera, señor, antes que del todo me culpes, que soy tan bueno como Manfredo, y que tu hija escogió lo que quizá tú no le dieras casándola contra su voluntad. Si con ella usares término de piadoso padre, usaré yo contigo el de obediente hijo; aunque, de cualquier manera que me trates lo habré de ser hasta la muerte.
Tu hijo Dagoberto.

ANASTASIO ¿Hase visto maldad tan insolente?
A no estar seguro deste hecho, 840 ¿saliera Dagoberto fácilmente con el embuste que forjó en su pecho?

DUQUE Si esto permite el cielo y lo consiente, ¿qué puedo yo hacer? Ello está hecho;
gócela en paz.

ANASTASIO Aqueso es sin justicia 845
y contra todo estilo de milicia.
Según tu bando, mía es Rosamira:
porque tú prometiste de entregalla por legítima esposa al que la mira pusiese en defendella y libertalla. 850 Lo que el de Utrino dice es gran mentira, y podrá la experiencia averigualla;
luego en este momento yo he vencido, pues mi contrario al puesto no ha venido, y la excusa que da no es de importancia, 855 porque es todo al revés de lo que cuenta.

MANFREDO Venciste; pero mía es tu ganancia, si aquí al buen proceder se tiene cuenta.
Si de otro es Rosamira, es ignorancia pensar que ha de ser tuya.

ANASTASIO ¡No consienta 860
el Cielo que mi esposa de otro sea!

MANFREDO Esta verdad haré que aquí se vea.

ANASTASIO ¿En qué la fundas?

MANFREDO En que soy Manfredo, de Rosamira, por concierto, esposo.
Que la has librado tú, yo lo concedo, 865
no más de porque yo fui perezoso.
Por cuatro pasos, bien decirlo puedo, que llevaste a los míos, fin dichoso has alcanzado en la dudosa empresa; mas no por esto es tuya la duquesa: 870 que la razón que así te da el derecho, por primer defensor que llegó al puesto, la turba, según siento, estar ya hecho conmigo el casamiento antes de aquesto.

PORCIA ¡Saltando el corazón me está en el pecho! 875

JULIA ¡Válame Dios! ¿En qué ha de parar esto?

ROSAMIRA ¿Adónde vas?

DAGOBERTO Sosiégate.

ROSAMIRA Recelo...

DUQUE ¿Ha visto caso semejante el suelo?

ANASTASIO Quedaos, amor, un poco aquí arrimado;
venid en su lugar, honra, conmigo. 880 Oye, Manfredo, güésped mal mirado, ladrón de paz y engañador amigo:
¿dó están las ricas prendas que has robado?
¿Por qué tan sin porqué, como enemigo, usando en la amistad tan mal decoro, 885
a mi padre robaste su tesoro?

MANFREDO ¿Quién eres?

ANASTASIO Anastasio, el heredero de Dorlán, y de Julia único hermano, de Porcia primo, por las cuales quiero probar que eres ladrón torpe y villano. 890

MANFREDO Si como eres valiente caballero fueras más atentado, claro y llano, vieras que esas razones afrentosas se fundan en quimeras fabulosas.

Yo no robé a tu hermana ni a tu prima; 895 mas de alguna sabrás, como tú hagas que a la quistión primera se dé cima, con que tu gusto al mío satisfagas.

DAGOBERTO La honra de mi hermana me lastima.

ROSAMIRA ¿Dónde vas, Dagoberto? No deshagas 900 el buen principio que la suerte muestra de dar buen fin a la desdicha nuestra.

DAGOBERTO Sabe que soy Dagoberto, Manfredo, y sabe que soy aquel que agraviado estoy 905 de tu infame desconcierto.
¡Dame a mi hermana, traidor, de fe falsa y alevosa!

MANFREDO Restituye tú a mi esposa antes el robado honor. 910
No te desmiento, porque
de aquí a bien poco verás en el engaño en que estás y la bondad de mi fe.

ANASTASIO Primo -mas quédese aparte 915 el parentesco hasta ver si del justo proceder os dio el cielo alguna parte-, ¿vos decís que es vuestra esposa Rosamira?

DAGOBERTO Y es verdad. 920

ANASTASIO¿Tenéis otra claridad deste hecho no dudosa,
como es el decirlo vos?

DAGOBERTO¿Bastará que yo lo diga?

ANASTASIO¿Quién duda?

DAGOBERTOPues no se diga 925 más contienda entre los dos ni entre los tres, que yo haré que ella lo declare al punto.

DUQUEEl bien me ha venido junto cuando menos lo pensé. 930 Escoja mi hija, y haga
su gusto: que todos tres son iguales.

JUEZAsí es.

MANFREDOBien cierta tengo la paga, pues tan de su voluntad 935
se entregaba por mi esposa.

ANASTASIONo está mi suerte dudosa, si es que es firme la verdad.

DAGOBERTO ¡Qué engañados quedarán los dos en este suceso! 940

JULIA Cerrado está ya el proceso; mirad qué sentencia os dan,
    corazón. ¡Ay de mí, triste,
que el miedo crece, y desmengua la esperanza! Callad, lengua, 945 que mal tal, mal se resiste.

PORCIA Aparte.

    ¿Si es tiempo de descubrir la verdad de mi mentira?

MANFREDO Señor, manda a Rosamira diga a quién quiere admitir. 950

DUQUE   Dígalo en buen hora.

PORCIA Digo
que es Anastasio mi esposo.

JULIA ¡Alentad, pecho amoroso!

ROSAMIRA Lo que tú dices desdigo: que Dagoberto es mi bien. 955

ANASTASIO Y vos, señora, mi gloria.

MANFREDO Tragedia ha sido mi historia.

JULIA Aún quedan glorias que os den.
¿Tuya no soy, pena vuestra?

TÁCITO ¿De qué Anastasio se admira? 960

JULIA Aquélla no es Rosamira.

ANASTASIO ¡Ay suerte airada y siniestra!
¿Quién eres?

PORCIA Soy la que quiso el Cielo, en todo piadoso, sacarla de un riguroso 965
infierno a tu paraíso;
soy la que, en traje mudado, trayendo amor en el pecho, procurando tu provecho
he mi gusto procurado; 970 soy aquélla a quien tú diste de esposa la fe y la mano;
soy quien tiene amor ufano por ver que no se resiste;
soy de Dagoberto hermana 975
y soy tu prima, y soy quien, cuando me falte tu bien,
no soy más que sombra vana.

ANASTASIO ¿Dónde está Julia?

PORCIA Señor,
yo sé que la verás presto. 980

JULIA ¿Podré esperar, según esto, blandura de tu rigor?

Mira con qué mansedumbre Anastasio a Porcia mira; mira que es de Rosamira 985
ya Dagoberto su lumbré;
mira que yo sola quedo
en los brazos de la muerte, si tu clemencia no advierte que soy Julia y tú Manfredo. 990

MANFREDO Levanta, pues que ya el Cielo
tus deseos asegura, gracias a tu hermosura
y a mi siempre honrado celo.

Anastasio, mira agora 995 con gusto y admiración que yo nunca fui ladrón ni de condición traidora.

Aquésta es Julia, tu hermana, y ésa, tu prima, cual dice, 1000 con las cuales nunca hice traición ni fuerza villana.

Ellas te dirán después
del modo que aquí vinieron; basta que el fin consiguieron, 1005
y es gusto de su interés.

Tu industria y el cielo han hecho que les seamos esposos;
ellos son lances forzosos;
no hay sino hacerles buen pecho. 1010

Quien se pudiera quejar de Rosamira era yo;
mas si el Cielo esto ordenó...

ANASTASIO Que paciencia y barajar.

DAGOBERTO ¡Oh hermana mía!

PORCIA ¡Oh mi hermano! 1015

DAGOBERTO ¡Buenos pasos son aquéstos!

PORCIA Nunca pasos descompuestos ganaron lo que yo gano.

ANASTASIO Más es tiempo de aliviallas aquéste, que de reñillas. 1020

DUQUE Aquéstas son maravillas dignas solas de admirallas.

ANASTASIO En fin, mi hermana es tu esposa.

MANFREDO Así es.

ANASTASIO Y Porcia es mía, si no lo impide y desvía 1025 ser mi prima.

DUQUE Fácil cosa
es haber dispensación
en caso tan importante.

TÁCITO Hoy del campo de Agramante he visto la confusión, 1030 y la paz de Otaviano
he visto en espacio breve.
¡No hay camino que amor pruebe, difícil, que no sea llano!

DUQUE Entremos en la ciudad, 1035 donde despacio sabremos destos no vistos extremos toda la puntualidad,
y allí se harán regocijos
y desposorios honrosos 1040 de los seis tan venturosos que ya los tengo por hijos.

TÁCITO Éstas son, ¡oh Amor!, en fin,
tus disparates y hazañas;
y aquí acaban las marañas 1045
tuyas, que no tienen fin.

Jornada primera

Salen OCAÑA, lacayo, con un mandil y harnero, y CRISTINA, fregona.

OCAÑA Mi sora Cristina, denmos.

CRISTINA ¿Qué hemos de dar, mi so Ocaña?

OCAÑA Dar en dulce, no en huraña, ni en tan amargos extremos.

CRISTINA ¿Querría el sor que anduviese 5
de pa y vereda contino?

OCAÑA No hay quien ande ese camino que algún gusto no interese.

CRISTINA Siempre la melancolía fue de la muerte parienta, 10 y en la vida alegre asienta el hablar de argentería.

Motes, cuentos, chistes, dichos, pensamientos regalados, muy buenos para pensados, 15
y mejores para dichos.

OCAÑA Sé yo, Cristina, con quién te burlas, y no es conmigo.

CRISTINA¿Sabe, Ocaña, qué le digo?

OCAÑA¿Qué dirás que me esté bien? 20

CRISTINA Dígole que no malicie con tan dañados intentos.

OCAÑAPues a fe que en estos cuentos ando por la superficie:
que, si llegase hasta el centro, 25 ¡oh, qué diría de cosas!

CRISTINAMuchas, pero maliciosas.

OCAÑASálenme mil al encuentro del corazón a la lengua.

CRISTINANo te pienso escuchar más. 30

OCAÑAVuelve, Cristina; ¿a dó vas?

CRISTINAEs el escucharte mengua, y enfádanme tus ruindades
y tus modos de decir.

OCAÑAEI que está para morir, 35
siempre suele hablar verdades.
Yo estoy muriendo, y confieso que quieres bien a Quiñones.

CRISTINA De tus malas intenciones agora se vee el exceso; 40 agora se echa de ver
que eres loco y laca...

OCAÑA Bueno;
pronuncia de lleno en lleno, aunque el «yo» no es menester; que el ser lacayo no ignoro, 45 sin rodeos y sin cifras.
Y mal tu venganza cifras en no guardar el decoro que debes a ser fregona de las más lindas que vi, 50 entre Quiñones y mí,
ya cordera y ya leona.

CRISTINA ¿Soy, por ventura, mujer que he de avasallarme a un paje?
¿O vengo yo de linaje 55
de tan bajo proceder?
¿No soy yo la que en mi flor, por no querer ofendella,
presumo más de doncella, que no el Cid de Campeador? 60 ¿No soy yo de los Capoches de Oviedo? ¿Hay más que mostrar?

OCAÑA Con todo, te has de quedar, Cristina...

CRISTINA ¿A qué?

OCAÑAA buenas noches,

Eres muy solicitada 65
y muy vista, y no está el toque en que la flor no se toque, si al serlo está aparejada.

Las flores en el campo están sujetas a cualquier mano: 70

a las del bajo villano

y a las del alto galán,

al arado y al pie duro
del labrador que le guía;
pero la flor que se cría 75

tras el levantado muro

del recato, no la ofende

el cierzo murmurador,

ni la marchita el ardor del que tocarla pretende. 80

La mujer ha de ser buena, y parecerlo, que es más.

CRISTINA Gran predicador estás;

mas tu doctrina condena

a tus lascivos intentos. 85

OCAÑAA Levántasles testimonio:

que al blanco del matrimonio asestan mis pensamientos.

CRISTINA A mucho te has atrevido.

Muestra; aquí está la cebada. 90

(Dale el harnero.)

(Éntrase CRISTINA.)

OCAÑA Toma el harnero, agraviada deste que de ti lo ha sido.

¡Oh pajes, que sois halcones destas duendas fregoniles, de su salario alguaciles, 95
de sus vivares hurones!

Lleváisos la media nata deste común beneficio;
dais en ella rienda al vicio, sin hallar ninguna ingrata: 100

gozáis del justo botín
y de la limpia chinela, y os reís del arandela
y del dorado chapín;

hacéis con modos süaves 105
burla que os cuesta barata de aquellas lunas de plata que van pisando las graves.

¡Qué presto Cristina vuelve con la cebada y Quiñones! 110 ¡Corazón, triste te pones!
¡La sangre se me revuelve en ver a estos dos tan juntos, tan domésticos y afables!

(Entra CRISTINA, con la cebada, y QUIÑONES, el paje.)

CRISTINA No le mires ni le hables. 115 Si le hablares, no sea en puntos que te descubran celoso;
que hará mil suertes en ti.

QUIÑONES Aunque mozo, nunca fui, ni soy, ni seré medroso. 120

CRISTINA Advierte que está delante.

Tome, galán, la cebada.

OCAÑA¿Bien medida?

CRISTINAY bien colmada.

OCAÑA¿Midióla mi so galante?

CRISTINA No la midió sino el diablo, 125 que tu mala lengua atiza.

OCAÑAVoyme a mi caballeriza, por no ver este retablo destas dos figuras juntas que no se apartan jamás. 130

QUIÑONESEn tales malicias das, que con una mil apuntas;
y que te engañas sé yo.

OCAÑAY también sé yo muy bien que a los dos estará bien 135 el callar.

CRISTINAYo sé que no, porque quien calla concede con el mal que dél se dice.

OCAÑANinguno te dije o hice.

QUIÑONES Ni él decir o hacerle puede. 140

OCAÑA Por vida suya, que abaje el toldo; que, en mi conciencia, que hay muy poca diferencia entre un lacayo y un paje.

La longura de un caballo 145
puede medirla a compás, yo delante, y él detrás:
andallo, mi vida, andallo.

(Éntrase OCAÑA.)

CRISTINA ¡Y que tú no tengas brío para responderle! Creo 150 que he de recobrar mi empleo y volverme a lo que es mío.

QUIÑONES ¿Qué tengo de responder?
¿Ciño espada? No la ciño.
Y más, que es mengua si riño 155 con...

CRISTINA Quiñones, a placer: que es Ocaña hombre de bien,
y espadachín además.

(Entran DON ANTONIO y su hermana MARCELA.)

DON ANTONIO ¡Porfiada, hermana, estás!
Quiero, mas no diré a quién. 160
Tengo ausente mi alegría, sin saber adónde yace,

y de aquesta ausencia nace toda mi malencolía.

Hanla escondido, y no sé 165 adónde, en cielo ni en tierra;
muévenme los celos guerra,
y dan alcance a mi fe,

no porque la menoscaben:
que, celos no averiguados, 170 ministran a los cuidados materia porque no acaben;
son la leña del gran fuego que en el alma enciende amor, viento con cuyo rigor 175
se esparce o turba el sosiego.

QUIÑONES Aún no han echado de ver que estamos aquí nosotros.

DON ANTONIO Dejadnos aquí vosotros.

CRISTINA Entra aquí el obedecer. 180

(Éntranse QUIÑONES y CRISTINA.)

MARCELA ¿Siquiera no me dirás el nombre desa tu dama?

DON ANTONIO Como te llamas, se llama.

MARCELA ¿Como yo?

DON ANTONIO Y aun tiene más:

que se te parece mucho. 185

MARCELA Aparte.

¡Válame Dios! ¿Qué es aquesto?
¿Si es amor éste de incesto?
Con varias sospechas lucho.
¿Es hermosa?

DON ANTONIO Como vos,
y está bien encarecido. 190

MARCELA Aparte.

El seso tiene perdido
mi hermano. ¡Válgale Dios!

(Entra DON FRANCISCO, amigo de DON ANTONIO.)

DON FRANCISCO ¿Andan hinchadas las olas del mar de tu pensamiento?

DON ANTONIO Entraos en vuestro aposento; 195 dejadnos, hermana, a solas;
retiraos, hermana mía.

MARCELA ¡Dios tus intentos mejore!

(Éntrase MARCELA.)

DON ANTONIO ¿Traéis desdichas que llore, o ya venturas que ría? 200

DON FRANCISCO Promesas que se han cumplido con dádivas, se han probado; industrias se han intentado
del Sinón más entendido;
las diligencias que he hecho 205
frisan con las imposibles;
lince ha habido invisibles,
y espías de trecho a trecho;
pero no puede mostrar
sagacidad o cautela 210
dónde han llevado a Marcela;
cosa que es para admirar.
Solamente se imagina que una noche la sacó su padre, y se la llevó; 215 pero adónde, no se atina.

DON ANTONIO ¿Si podrá la astrología judiciaria declarallo?

DON FRANCISCO Yo no pienso interrogallo; que tengo por fruslería 220 la ciencia, no en cuanto a ciencia, sino en cuanto al usar della el simple que se entra en ella sin estudio ni experiencia.
Si acaso Marcela fuera 225
alguna joya perdida,
yo buscara otra salida,
que buena en esto la diera.
Santos hay auxiliadores veinte, o más, o no sé cuántos; 230 pero no querrán los santos curarnos de mal de amores.

A la justa petición
siempre favorece el Cielo.

DON ANTONIO Pues, ¿no es muy justo mi celo? 235

¿No está muy puesto en razón?

¿Busco yo a Marcela acaso sino para ser mi esposa?

¿Della pretendo otra cosa?

DON FRANCISCO Vámonos, o habla paso: 240 que no sabes quién te escucha.

DON ANTONIO Vamos, amigo, y advierte que fío mi vida y muerte

de tu discreción, que es mucha.

(Éntranse DON ANTONIO y DON FRANCISCO.)

(Entran CARDENIO, con manteo y sotana, y tras él TORRENTE, capigorrón, comiendo un membrillo o cosa que se le parezca.)

CARDENIO Vuela mi estrecha y débil esperanza 245

con flacas alas, y, aunque sube el vuelo

a la alta cumbre del hermoso cielo,

jamás el punto que pretende alcanza.

Yo vengo a ser perfecta semejanza de aquel mancebo que de Creta el suelo 250

dejó, y, contrario de su padre al cielo,

a la región del cielo se abalanza.

Caerán mis atrevidos pensamientos, del amoroso incendio derretidos, en el mar del temor turbado y frío; 255 pero no llevarán cursos violentos, del tiempo y de la muerte prevenidos, al lugar del olvido el nombre mío.

¿Comes? Buena pro te haga;
la misma hambre te tome. 260

TORRENTENo puede decir que come el que masca y no lo traga.

No se me vaya a la mano, que ésta, si acaso es culpa, ser me sirve de disculpa 265 el membrillo toledano.

Sé cierto que decir puedo,
y mil veces referillo:
espada, mujer, membrillo,
a toda ley, de Toledo. 270

Las acciones naturales son forzosas, y el comer una dellas viene a ser,
y de las más principales;
y esto aquí de molde viene, 275
y es una advertencia llana:
come el rico cuando ha gana,
y el pobre, cuando lo tiene.

CARDENIO Con todo, me darás gusto de que en la calle no comas. 280

TORRENTESi estas niñerías tomas por deshonra o por disgusto, yo me aturaré la boca
con cal y arena a pisón.

CARDENIOSé que tienes discreción. 285

TORRENTE¡Y golosina no poca!

CARDENIO Sabes lo que nunca supo el diablo.

TORRENTEY aun soy peor.

CARDENIO¿Vuelves a comer, traidor?

TORRENTEY a no como, sino chupo. 290

(Entra MUÑOZ, escudero de MARCELA.)

Pero ves dónde parece tu Santelmo.

CARDENIO Así es verdad, puesto que mi tempestad nunca mengua y siempre crece.
En estas benditas manos 295
tengo mi remedio puesto.

MUÑOZ Vos veréis cómo echo el resto en daros consejos sanos.

Advertid, hijo, que son las canas el fundamento 300 y la basa a do hace asiento la agudeza y discreción.

En la mucha edad se muestra que asiste toda advertencia porque tiene a la experiencia 305 por consejera y maestra;

y estas canas no han nacido en aqueste rostro acaso.

CARDENIO Hablad, señor Muñoz, paso, que ya os tengo conocido, 310
y sé que sabéis cortar, colgado del aire, un pelo.

MUÑOZ Así me ayude a mí el cielo como os pienso de ayudar;
porque el premio es el que aviva 315 al más torpe ingenio y rudo.

CARDENIO Si es premio este pobre escudo, vuestra merced le reciba con aquella voluntad sana con que yo le ofrezco. 320

MUÑOZ; Oh señor, que no merezco tanta liberalidad!

TORRENTE Tomóle, besóle y diole quizá perpetua clausura;
del oro la color pura 325 sin duda que enamoróle, porque tiene una virtud de alegrar el corazón,
y la avara condición
vive con la senetud. 330 Pero, ¿a qué pecho no doma la hambre del oro?

MUÑOZ Escucha,

y con advertencia mucha,
hijo, este consejo toma.

De Marcela no hay pensar 335 que es de tan tiernos aceros, que la han de ablandar terceros, ni rogar, ni porfiar,

ni lágrimas, ni suspiros, ni voluntad verdadera: 340 que son con ella de cera de amor los más fuertes tiros.

A las olas que se atreven
a embestirla por amar, se muestra roca en la mar, 345 que la tocan y no mueven.

Esto con Marcela pasa.

CARDENIO No me acobardes y espantes.

TORRENTE ¡Oh, cuántos destos diamantes he visto volver de masa! 350

¡Cuántas he visto rendidas a un billete trasnochado!
¡Cuántas, sin darlas, han dado de ganadas en perdidas!

¡Cuántas siguen sus antojos 355 en mitad de su recato!

¡Cuántas en el dulce trato tropiezan, y aun dan de ojos!

MUÑOZ Pues ni Marcela tropieza ni cae.

TORRENTE ¡Gran milagro!

CARDENIO Calla: 360 que es extremo que se halla hoy en la naturaleza,
y el señor Muñoz bien sabe lo que dice.

MUÑOZ Yo estoy cierto
que, aún más bien del que os advierto, 365 todo en mi señora cabe.
Pero vengamos al punto
de lo que quiero decir.

CARDENIO Hasta acabarle de oír, estoy, Torrente, difunto. 370

MUÑOZ Es el caso que está en Lima un hermano de su padre
de Marcela, caballero
de ilustre y claro linaje.
De los bienes de fortuna 375
dicen que le cupo parte tanta que, entre los más ricos, suelen por rico nombrarle.
Tiene un hijo que se llama don Silvestre de Almendárez, 380 el cual con doña Marcela, aunque prima, ha de casarse.
Cada flota le esperamos;
mas, si en esta que se sabe que ha llegado a salvamento 385 no viene, echado ha buen lance.
Fíngete tú don Silvestre, que yo te daré bastantes relaciones con que muestres ser él mismo; y serán tales, 390 que, por más que te pregunten, podrás responder con arte, que, acreditando el engaño,

tus mentiras sean verdades.
Aposentarán en casa, 395
harán gasajos grandes,
y tú dentro, una por una,
podrás ver cómo te vales.

CARDENIO Está bien; pero si acaso en aquesta flota traen 400 cartas dese don Silvestre,
y de que no viene saben, yo dentro en casa, ¿qué haré?
¿Cómo podrá acreditarse tan conocida mentira 405 para que pase adelante?

MUÑOZ Dirás que, después de escritas y dadas, quiso tu madre que te vinieses a España, aunque a hurto de tu padre; 410 que ella, deseando verse con nietos en quien dilate su nombre y posteridad, no quiso que más tardases.
Y este venirte a escondidas 415
podrá, señor, escusarte de no venir con riquezas que el ser quien eres señalen;
mas no dejes de traer algunas piedras bezares, 420
y algunas sartas de perlas, y papagayos que hablen.

CARDENIO En eso yo daré trazas que dese aprieto me saquen,

y tales, que satisfagan. 425

TORRENTETodo aquesto es disparate.

CARDENIOLa memoria sea cumplida, y los puntos importantes que en este nuevo edificio han de ser fundamentales, 430 vengan especificados,
de modo que me declaren por el mismo don Silvestre.

MUÑOZVen por ellos esta tarde.

CARDENIOVolverá este mi criado. 435

TORRENTEVolveré, si a Dios le place; que, sin su ayuda, no puedo,
ni estornudar, ni mudarme.

MUÑOZSeñor, si acaso, si a dicha, si por buena suerte traes 440 otro escudillo, bien puedes con liberal mano darle:
que es invierno, y no hay bayeta, y no será bien que pase frío el que al incendio tuyo 445 procura refrigerarle.

CARDENIONo le traigo, en mi conciencia; pero yo haré que se os saque un vestido de bayeta,

y a mi cuenta le hará el sastre. 450

MUÑOZ Venderéle, ¡vive Roque!
No consentiré se ensanche Marcela con mis trofeos, que cuestan gotas de sangre.
Vístame la que quisiere 455 que polido la acompañe:
que gastar yo mi bayeta
en servicio ajeno, ¡tate!
Y voyme, porque conviene que la memoria se estampe 460 que fortifique este embuste.
Y a Dios quedéis.

CARDENIO Él os guarde.

MUÑOZ Mire que no se le olvide lo de la bayeta y sastre:
que en este punto consisten 465 sus gustos o sus pesares.

(Éntrese MUÑOZ.)

CARDENIO ¡Gran principio a mi quimera!

TORRENTE Lámala, señor, dislate;
torre fundada en palillos, como casica de naipes. 470 Dime: ¿dónde están las perlas?
¿Dónde las piedras bezares?
¿Adónde las catalnicas
o los papagayos grandes?
¿Dónde la práctica de Indias, 475 de los puertos y los mares que se toman y navegan?

¿Dónde la bayeta y sastre?
Si quieres que tus negocios en felice punto paren, 480 lleva, y esto te aconsejo, siempre la verdad delante.
Capigorrista soy tuyo,
y como padezco hambre,
tengo sutil el ingenio, 485
y en dar consejos soy sacre.

CARDENIO Yo me remito a la lista
de Muñoz; tú no desmayes, que en las empresas de amor, tal vez se ha visto que valen 490 el ingenio y la ventura más que las riquezas grandes.

TORRENTE Deste laberinto, el cielo con las narices nos saque.

(Éntranse.)

(Entran MARCELA y DOROTEA, su doncella.)

DOROTEA Dime, señora: ¿qué muestra 495 te ha dado tu hermano tal, que sea indicio y señal
de alguna intención siniestra?
No puedo darme a entender que te ama viciosamente, 500 aunque es caso contingente.

MARCELA;Y cómo si puede ser!

¿Ya no se sabe que Amón amó a su hermana Tamar?

¿Y no nos vienen a dar 505

Mirra y su padre ocasión de temer estos incestos?

DOROTEACon todo, señora, creo que encamina su deseo por términos más compuestos, 510
y esto tengo por verdad.

MARCELAMi querida Dorotea, plega al Cielo que así sea;
Él rija su voluntad.

De contino trae en la boca 515 mi nombre, a hurto me mira, gime a solas y suspira,
las manos me besa y toca;
y da por disculpa desto, que me parezco a su dama, 520 que de mi nombre se llama.

DOROTEA¿Hase, a dicha, descompuesto a hacer más de lo que dices?

MARCELANo, por cierto; ni querría.

DOROTEA Pues desto, señora mía, 525 no es bien que te escandalices;
pues podrá ser que su dama se llame, señora, así,
y que se parezca a ti,
si de hermosa tiene fama. 530

(Entra DON ANTONIO, hermano de MARCELA.)

MARCELA Mira do viene suspenso; tanto, que no echa de ver que aquí estamos. De su ser que está trastocado pienso.

Escuchémosle, y advierte 535
cómo de Marcela trata.

DON ANTONIOEs tu ausencia la que mata;
no el desdén, aunque es tan fuerte.

¡Ay dura, ay importuna, ay triste ausencia!
¡Cuán lejos debió estar de conocerte 540 el que al furor de la invencible muerte igualó tu poder y tu violencia!

Que, cuando con mayor rigor sentencia, ¿qué puede más su limitada suerte que deshacer la liga y nudo fuerte 545 que a cuerpo y alma tiene inconveniencia?

Tu duro alfanje a mayor mal se estiende, pues un espíritu en dos mitades parte.
¡Oh milagros de amor, que nadie entiende!

Que, del lugar de do mi alma parte, 550 dejando su mitad con quien la enciende, consigo traiga la más frágil parte.

¡Oh Marcela fugitiva
y sorda al lamento mío!
¿Cómo quiere tu desvío 555 que ausente muriendo viva?

¿Dónde te escondes? ¿Qué clima, inhabitable te encierra?

¿Cómo a tu paz no da guerra el dolor que me lastima? 560

¡Téngote siempre delante, y no te puedo alcanzar!

MARCELA Para temer y pensar, ¿esto no es causa bastante?

DOROTEA Sí, por cierto. Nunca estés 565 sola, si fuere posible;
de que aspire a lo imposible, jamás ocasión le des;
    rómpase en tu honestidad, en tu advertencia y recato, 570 la fuerza de su mal trato, que nace de ociosidad.
    Y vámonos, no nos vea;
dé a solas rienda a su intento.

MARCELA Yo estoy en tu pensamiento, 575 que es muy bueno, Dorotea.

(Éntrase MARCELA y DOROTEA.)

(Sale OCAÑA, de lacayo, con una varilla de membrillo y unos antojos de caballo en la mano, y pónese atento a escuchar a su amo.)

DON ANTONIO Amor, que lo imposible facilitas con poderosa fuerza blandamente, allanando las cumbres,
¿por qué las nubes de mi sol no quitas? 580 ¿Por qué no muestras por algún Oriente las dos hermosas cumbres que dan rayos al sol, luz a tus ojos, por quien te rinde el mundo sus despojos?
    ¿Qué quieres, Ocaña?

OCAÑAQuiero 585

herrar el bayo, señor,
y no acierta el herrador
a herralle si no hay dinero.

Débense cuatro herraduras y un brebajo; mira, pues, 590
si andarán aquellos pies, siendo tus manos tan duras.

Y vengo por seis raciones que me deben: que amohína ver que sobren a Cristina 595
y resobren a Quiñones,
y que falten para mí,
que sirvo mejor que todos,
de tres y de cuatro modos.

DON ANTONIOConfieso que ello es así, 600

Ocaña amigo, y sabed que todo se os pagará.
Y andad con Dios.

OCAÑASiempre está
conmigo vuestra merced riguroso por el cabo. 605

DON ANTONIO¿En qué modo?

OCAÑA¿Yo no veo
que, cual si fuera guineo, bezudo y bozal esclavo, apenas entro en la sala por alguna niñería, 610 cuando cualquiera me envía, si no en buena, en hora mala?

A nadie se le trasluce, por más que yo lo procuro, el ingenio lucio y puro 615 que en este lacayo luce.

Anda conmigo al revés
fortuna poco discreta:
que, si tú fueras poeta, quizá fuera yo marqués, 620
o, por lo menos, ya fuera, tu consejero y privado;
pero de mi corto hado
tamaño bien no se espera.

Hay poetas tan divinos, 625
de poder tan singular, que puedan títulos dar
como condes palatinos;
y aun, si lo toman despacio, en tiempo y caso oportuno, 630 no habrá lacayo ninguno que no casen en palacio con doncellas de la reina, de valor único y solo:
que, por la gracia de Apolo, 635 esta gracia en ellos reina.

Pero yo nací, sin duda,
para la caballeriza,
haciendo en mis dichas riza mi suerte, que no se muda. 640

El discreto es concordancia que engendra la habilidad;
el necio, disparidad
que no hace consonancia.

Del cuerpo por los sentidos 645 obra el alma, y, cuales son,
o muestra su perfección,
o términos abatidos.

De aquesto quiero inferir que tan sutil cuerpo tengo, 650 que en un instante prevengo lo que he de hacer y decir.

Lacayo soy, Dios mediante;

pero lacayo discreto,
y, a pocos lances, prometo 655
ser para marqués bastante, como aquel de Marinán,
de dinare, e più dinare, si la suerte no estorbare este bien que no me dan. 660

DON ANTONIO ¡Alto! Vos habéis hablado de modo que me obligáis a que de humilde subáis a más eminente estado, siendo al primero escalón 665
servirme de consejero;
y así, amigo Ocaña, quiero mostraros mi corazón, para que, viendo patentes las ansias que en él se anidan, 670 ellas a tu ingenio pidan los remedios suficientes:
que tal vez una dolencia casi incurable la sana de una vejezuela cana 675 una fácil experiencia.

OCAÑA Dime tu mal, mi señor, y verás cómo en tantico tantos remedios aplico, que sanes con el menor. 680 Y si por ventura es
el ciego el que te atormenta, puedes, señor, hacer cuenta de que ya sano te ves, porque no se ha de tomar 685
conmigo el dios ceguezuelo.

DON ANTONIOQue no estás en ti recelo.

OCAÑA¿Pues en quién había de estar?

Que, a no tomarme del vino, por costumbre o por conhorto, 690 no hubiera en toda la corte otro Catón Censorino como yo.

DON ANTONIOYa desvarías.
Vuélvete, Ocaña, a tu establo.

(Éntrase DON ANTONIO.)

OCAÑA Aunque más sentencias hablo 695 y elevadas fantasías,
se me trasluce y figura,
conjeturo, pienso y hallo,
ha de ser mi sepultura.

Y está muy puesto en razón: 700
que, el que quiere porfiar contra su estrella, ha de dar coces contra el aguijón.

Cristinica estará agora en la plaza; allá me impele 705 aquella fuerza que suele, que dentro del alma mora.

Búscola como a mi centro,
y si la encontrase yo,
nunca jugador echó 710
tan rico y gustoso encuentro.

Deste gusto no me prive Amor, que en mi ayuda llamo, y siquiera, con mi amo, ni más medre ni más prive. 715

(Éntrase OCAÑA.)

(Salen DON AMBROSIO, caballero, y CRISTINA, con un billete en la mano.)

CRISTINA Hasta ponerle yo en parte donde le vea, harélo;
pero en lo demás recelo que no podré contentarte.

DON AMBROSIO Haz, amiga, que le lea: 720 que en sólo aquesto consiste la alegría deste triste.

CRISTINA Digo que haré que le vea.

Quizá, por curiosidad, querrá leerle Marcela: 725 que se ha de usar de cautela con su mucha honestidad.

No desplegaré la boca
para decirla palabra:
que en sus entrañas no labra 730
fuerza de amor, mucha o poca.

DON AMBROSIO ¿Regálala, por ventura, don Antonio?

CRISTINA Como a hermana.

DON AMBROSIO De ser su intención tan sana, no sé yo quién lo asegura. 735 ¡Oh padre mal advertido!

CRISTINA No le tiene.

DON AMBROSIO Sí le tiene; pero a mí no me conviene
el darme por entendido.

De las cosas que sospecho 740
y de las que son tan graves, tenga la lengua las llaves,
y no las arroje el pecho.

CRISTINA Vete, señor, que allí asoma un paje de casa.

DON AMBROSIO Amiga, 745 por tu industria y tu fatiga, este pobre premio toma.

Y prométete de mí
montes de oro, que bien puedes.

CRISTINA La menor de tus mercedes 750
suele ser un Potosí.
(Dale una cajita pintada.)

(Vase AMBROSIO, y entra QUIÑONES.)

QUIÑONES ¿Quién era, Cristina, el lindo que con tanta sumisión
debió encajar su razón?
«Tuyo soy, y a ti me rindo». 755 ¡Vive el Dador de los cielos, que es la fregona bonita!
Ordena, manda, pon, quita;

ta, ta, también pide celos.

CRISTINA El so paje, por su entono, 760 que primero se tarace la lengua, que otra vez trace palabras, y no en mi abono.
¿Hásenos vuelto otro Ocaña?
¡Celos y más celos!

QUIÑONES Calle, 765
y advierta que está en la calle.

CRISTINA ¡Ay! Por mi fe, que se ensaña el mancebito frión.

QUIÑONES Cristina, menos gallarda; que esa gallardía aguarda... 770

CRISTINA ¿Qué, mi rufo?

QUIÑONES Un bofetón.

CRISTINA ¿En mi cara?

QUIÑONES En la del cura le diera, a venir a mano.

CRISTINA ¿Y que alzarás tú la mano contra tanta hermosura 775 como pusieron los cielos

en mis mejillas rosadas?

QUIÑONES Siempre son desatinadas las venganzas de los celos.

Ocaña es éste. Camina, 780 y escóndete entre la gente.

(Éntranse QUIÑONES y CRISTINA, y sale OCAÑA.)

OCAÑA Partió mi sol de su Oriente, y al ocaso se encamina,
y tras sí lleva la sombra que le sirve de arrebol. 785

Para mí no es este sol, sino niebla que me asombra.

Plega a Dios, humilde paje, asombro de mi esperanza, que ni valgas por privanza, 790 ni te estimen por linaje;

sirvas a un catarribera,
que te dé corta ración;
sea tu estado un bodegón;
no te dé luto, aunque muera; 795

y cuando el cielo te adiestre
a servir a un titulado, tu enemigo declarado
el maestresala se muestre.

De las hachas no te valgas, 800 ni de relieves veas gozo, y nunca te salga el bozo,
porque de paje no salgas.

Póngante infames renombres;
juegues; pierdas la ración, 805 que es la mayor maldición que pueden darte los hombres.

(Éntrase OCAÑA.)

(Sale MUÑOZ.)

MUÑOZ Despierto y durmiendo, estoy pensando siempre y soñando cuándo ha de llegar el cuándo 810 mude el pellejo en que estoy; cuándo querrá aquel planeta que sobre mí predomina, que remedien mi rüina el gran sastre y la bayeta. 815 Diles la memoria, y diles, previniendo mil barruntos, de los más sotiles puntos las respuestas más sotiles; pero, con todo, me pesa 820
de haberme empeñado así, porque tengo para mí
ser de peligro la empresa.

(Entran DON ANTONIO y TORRENTE en hábito de peregrino.)

DON ANTONIO Mucho más es melindre que advertencia, y hase tenido confianza poca 825 de quien yo soy. Por Dios, que estoy corrido.

MUÑOZ; Válgate el diablo! ¿Qué disfraz es éste?
Esto no puse yo en la lista.

TORRENTEDigo
que el señor don Silvestre de Almendárez no pudo más. El caso fue forzoso, 830 y la borrasca tal, que nos convino alijar el navío, y echar cuanto en su anchísimo vientre recogía al mar, que se sorbió como dos huevos catorce mil tejuelos de oro puro. 835 Al cielo las promesas y oraciones volaban más espesas que las nubes, que la cara del sol cubrían entonces;

entre las cuales oraciones, una envió don Silvestre al sumo alcázar 840 con tan vivos y tiernos sentimientos, que penetró los cascos de los cielos.
Conteníase en ella que de Roma aquello que se llama Siete Iglesias andaría descalzo peregrino, 845 si Dios de aquel peligro le sacaba.
Añadió a su promesa mi persona;
añadidura inútil, aunque buena en parte, pues que soy su amparo y báculo.
En fin: salimos mondos y desnudos 850
a tierra, ni sé adónde, ni sé cómo, habiéndose engullido el mar primero hasta una catalnica que traíamos, de habilidad tan rara, y tan discreta, que, si no era el hablar, no le faltaba 855 otra cosa ninguna.

DON ANTONIO Bien, por cierto, la habéis encarecido; aunque yo pienso que catalnicas mudas valen poco.

TORRENTE Por señas nos decía todo cuanto quería que entendiésemos.

MUÑOZ ¡Milagro! 860

TORRENTE De perlas, ¡qué de cajas arrojamamos; tamañas como nueces, de buen tomo, blancas como la nieve aún no pisada!;
de esmeraldas, las peñas como cubas, digo, como toneles, y aun más grandes; 865 piedras bezares, pues dos grandes sacos;
anís y cochinilla, fue sin número.

MUÑOZ Entre esas zarandajas, ¿por ventura fue bayeta al mar?

TORRENTE ¡Y el sastre y todo!

MUÑOZ A malísimo viento va esta parva; 870
no me cuadra ni esquina esta tormenta, puesto que viene bien para el embuste.

DON ANTONIO ¿En qué paraje sucedió el naufragio?

TORRENTE Estaba yo durmiendo en aquel trance, y no pude del paje ver el rostro. 875

DON ANTONIO Paraje dije; pero no me espanto, que aun hasta aquí os conturba la borrasca, ni que en ella os durmiédeses; que el miedo tal vez suele causar sueño profundo.

TORRENTE No quiso mi señor, ni por semejanzas, 880 de cuatro mil y más ofrecimientos que de darle dineros se le hicieron, recebir sino aquellos que bastasen
a no pedir limosna en su viaje;

pero no supo bien hacer la cuenta, 885 porque ya casi todos son gastados.

MUÑOZ; Válgate Satanás, qué bien lo enredas!

TORRENTE La primera estación fue a Guadalupe, y a la imagen de Illescas la segunda, y la tercera ha sido a la de Atocha; 890 a hurto quiso verte, y esta tarde quiere partirse a Roma; agora queda en San Ginés hincado de hinojos, arrojando del pecho mil suspiros, vertiendo de sus ojos tiernas lágrimas, 895 pidiendo a Dios que le encamine y guíe en el viaje santo prometido.
Yo, señor, soy ternísimo de plantas,
a quien callos durísimos enclavan, de tan largo camino procedidos; 900 querría que se diese alguna traza de que por quince días descansásemos, para tomar aliento y refrigerio en el nuevo camino que se espera.
Además, que también él es ternísimo, 905
y podría el cansancio fatigalle, de modo que el camino con la vida se acabase en un punto: caso triste si tal viniese a ser, por el tremendo dolor que sentiría mi señora 910 doña Ana de Briones, madre suya.

DON ANTONIO Vamos, que yo pondré remedio en todo.

TORRENTE No hay decir, señor, que yo te he visto, porque me ha de matar si es que tal sabe.
¡Oh pecador de mí!, ¡Éste es que viene! 915

¡En la red me ha cogido! ¡Negativa, señor; si no, yo muero!

DON ANTONIO No hayas miedo.

(Entra CARDENIO, como peregrino.)

Mi señor don Silvestre de Almendárez, ¿para qué es encubriros de quien tiene tantas obligaciones de serviros? 920

CARDENIO ¡Oh traidor, malnacido! Por Dios vivo, que os engaña, señor, este embustero:
que yo no soy aqueste don Silvestre que dices de Almendárez, sino un pobre peregrino, y tan pobre.

TORRENTE ¿Qué me miras? 925 Yo no le he dicho nada; y si lo he dicho, digo que miento una y cien mil veces.
Aparte, a DON ANTONIO.
¡Vive Dios!, que es el mismo que te digo.
Apriétale, y conjúrale, y confiese.

DON ANTONIO ¡Por Dios, primo y señor, que es caso fuerte 930 negarme esta verdad! ¿Qué importa vengas rico o pobre a tu casa, que es la mía?

TORRENTE ¡Eso es lo que yo digo, pesia al mundo!

DON ANTONIO ¿Mandabas tú a los vientos, o pudiste del proceloso mar las altas olas 935

sosegar algún tanto? ¿No es locura hacer caso de honra los sucesos varios de la fortuna, siempre inestable, o, por mejor decir, del cielo firme?

TORRENTE ¡Ea, señor, que ya pasa de raya 940 tan grande pertinacia! ¡Vive Roque, señor, que es don Silvestre de Almendárez, vuestro primo y cuñado, el peregrino,
y mi amo, que es más!

CARDENIO Pues tú lo dices, no quiero más negarlo, pues no importa. 945 Dadme, señor, las manos.

DON ANTONIO Doy los brazos, y el alma en su lugar, querido primo.

CARDENIO Tomad los míos, que, entre aquestos brazos, también os doy mi alma.

A TORRENTE.
En recompensa,
no te la cubriré pelo, si puedo. 950

TORRENTE Que no temo amenazas mal nacidas, porque esto es lo que importa a nuestro hecho.

MUÑOZ ¿Y cómo?

DON ANTONIO No hayáis miedo que se os toque al pelo de la ropa por lo dicho.

TORRENTE Mi señor es discreto, y verá presto 955 de cuán poca importancia era el silencio, en semejante caso.

DON ANTONIO Señor primo, vamos a casa, y sepa vuestra esposa vuestra buena venida y deseada.

CARDENIO Siempre he de obedecer.

MUÑOZ ¿Qué bien trazada 960 quimera! Si ella llega a colmo, espero un Potosí de barras y dinero.

TORRENTE ¿Qué os parece, Muñoz?

MUÑOZ Que me parece
que es verdad cuanto ha dicho, y que lo veo.

TORRENTE ¡Y cómo que es verdad! Sin que le falte 965 un átomo, una tilde, una meaja.

(Éntranse DON ANTONIO, CARDENIO y TORRENTE.)

MUÑOZ Términos tienen estos socarrones de hacerme a mí entender que la borrasca y el alijo de ropa es verdadero.
Ahora bien, veremos lo que pasa, 970 que, una por una, los dos ya están en casa.

FIN DE LA PRIMERA JORNADA

Jornada segunda

Salen MARCELA y DOROTEA, con una almohadilla, y CRISTINA.

MARCELA Andas con vergüenza poca, Cristina, muy inquieta,
y, con puntos de discreta, das mil puntadas de loca.

Sabed, señora, una cosa: 5 que, entre las prendas de honor, es tenuta por mejor
la honesta que la hermosa.

CRISTINA Aparte.

Señora me llama. ¡Malo!: que ya sé por experiencia 10 que no hay dos dedos de ausencia desta cortesía a un palo.

MARCELA ¿Qué murmuras, desatada, maliciosa y atrevida?

CRISTINA Nunca murmuré en mi vida. 15

MARCELA ¿Qué dices?

CRISTINA No digo nada.
¡Tenga el Señor en el cielo

a mi señora la vieja!

MARCELA Desas plegarias te deja.

CRISTINA Pronúncialas mi buen celo. 20

Si ella fuera viva, sé que otro gallo me cantara, y que ninguna no osara
reñirme; no, en buena fe.

¡Tristes de las mozas 25
a quien trujo el cielo
por casas ajenas
a servir a dueños,
que, entre mil, no salen cuatro apenas buenos, 30 que los más son torpes
y de antojos feos!

¿Pues qué, si la triste acierta a dar celos
al ama, que piensa 35
que le hace tuerto?

Ajenas ofensas
pagan sus cabellos,
oyen sus oídos
siempre vituperios, 40
parece la casa
un confuso infierno;
que los celos siempre
fueron vocingleros.

La tierna fregona, 45
con silencio y miedo,
pasa sus desdichas,
malogra requiebros,
porque jamás llega
a felice puerto 50
su cargada nave
de malos empleos.

Pero, ya que falte
este detrimento,
sobran los del ama, 55
que no tienen cuento:
«Ven acá, suciona.
¿Dónde está el pañuelo?
La escoba te hurtaron
y un plato pequeño. 60
Buen salario ganas;
dél pagarme pienso,
porque despabiles
los ojos y el seso.
Vas y nunca vuelves, 65
y tienes bureo
con Sancho en la calle, con Mingo y con Pedro.
Eres, en fin, pu...
El ta diré quedo, 70
porque de cristiana
sabes que me precio».
Otra vez repito,
con cansado aliento,
con lágrimas tristes 75
y suspiros tiernos:
¡triste de la moza
a quien trujo el cielo
por casas ajenas!

DOROTEAS señoras, ¿qué es esto? 80 Cristinica, amiga,
dime: ¿con qué viento
esta polvareda
has alzado al cielo?

MARCELA La desenvoltura 85 es un viento cierzo
que del rostro ahuyenta

la vergüenza y miedo.
Pero yo haré,
si es que acaso puedo, 90
si ella no se emienda,
lo que callar quiero.

(Entra QUIÑONES, el paje.)

QUIÑONES Don Antonio, mi señor, entra con dos peregrinos.

(Entran DON ANTONIO, CARDENIO, TORRENTE y MUÑOZ.)

DON ANTONIO ¿Vuestros intentos divinos 95 fueran disculpa al rigor del no vernos?

CARDENIO Así es;
pero yo, señor, holgara que esta deuda se pagara de espacio, y fuera después 100 de mi peregrinación,
que no se puede excusar.

DON ANTONIO Fácilmente habéis de hallar en mi voluntad perdón.

CARDENIO ¿Es mi señora y mi prima? 105

DON ANTONIO La misma.

CARDENIO; Oh mi señora, rico archivo donde mora
de la belleza la prima!
No me niegues estos pies, pues no merezco esas manos. 110

DOROTEA Peregrinos cortesanos son éstos.

DON ANTONIO No tan cortés, señor primo, que mi hermana está del caso suspensa.

MUÑOZ Aparte.

La traza de lo que él piensa 115
es más cortés que no sana.

MARCELA Señor, para que me muestre con el respeto debido
a quien sois, el nombre os pido.

CARDENIO Vuestro primo don Silvestre 120 de Almendárez; vuestro esposo, o el que lo tiene de ser.

MARCELA Mudaré de proceder con un huésped tan famoso:
los brazos habré de daros, 125 que no los pies, primo mío.

MUÑOZ Aparte.

Destos principios yo fío que son más dulces que caros.

CARDENIO No fue huracán el que pudo desbaratar nuestra flota, 130 ni torció nuestra derrota el mar insolente y crudo;
no fue del tope a la quilla mi pobre navío abierto, pues he llegado a tal puerto, 135
y pongo el pie en tal orilla;
no mis riquezas sorbieron las aguas que las tragan, pues más rico me dejaron con el bien que en vos me dieron. 140 Hoy se aumenta mi riqueza, pues con nueva vida y ser, peregrino llego a ver
la imagen de tu belleza.

(Entra OCAÑA.)

OCAÑA Desta común alegría 145
alguna parte quizá
mi tristeza alcanzará, que está como estar solía.
Desde aquí quiero mirarte, si es que te dejas mirar, 150
de mi suerte amargo azar, de mi bien el todo y parte.
Puesto en aqueste rincón, como lacayo sin suerte, veré quizá de mi muerte 155

alguna resurrección.

MARCELA La desventura mayor, más espantosa y temida,
es la de perder la vida.

DON ANTONIO Primero es la del honor. 160

MARCELA Así es; y pues vos, primo, con honra y vida venís, mal haréis si mal sentís del mal que por bien yo estimo.

Y en llegar adonde os veis, 165 habéis de tener por cierto que habéis arribado a un puerto adonde restauraréis
las riquezas arrojadas
al mar, siempre codicioso. 170

CARDENIO Tendrá el que fuere tu esposo las venturas confirmadas.

TORRENTE ¿Doncella acaso es de casa?

CRISTINA No soy sino de la calle.

TORRENTE Eso no; que aquesa talle 175 a los de palacio pasa.
¿Sirve en ella?

CRISTINA Soy servida.

TORRENTE La respuesta ha sido aguda.

OCAÑA Ten, pulcra, la lengua muda;
no la descosas, perdida. 180

TORRENTE ¿El nombre?

CRISTINA Cristina.

TORRENTE Bueno;
que es dulce, con ser de rumbo.
¿Túmbase?

CRISTINA Yo no me tumbo.
Basta; que tiene barreno el indianazo gascón. 185

TORRENTE Yo, señora, como ves, soy criollo perulés,
aunque tiro a borgoñón.

DON ANTONIO Reposaréis, primo mío, y después saber querría 190
del buen estar de mi tía, de vuestro padre y mi tío.

OCAÑA ¡Oh peregrino traidor, cómo la miras! ¡Oh falsa, cómo le vas dando salsa 195
al gusto de su sabor!

TORRENTE Pluguiera a Dios que nunca aquí viniera;
o, ya que vine aquí, que nunca amara;
o, ya que amé, que amor se me mostrara, de acero no, sino de blanda cera... 200

CARDENIO Depositario fue el mar de tus cartas y presentes.

OCAÑA Aparte.

¡El alma tengo en los dientes!
¡Casi estoy para espirar!

TORRENTE ...O que de aquesta fregonil guerrera, 205 de los dos soles de su hermosa cara, no tan agudas flechas me arrojara,
o menos linda y más humana fuera.

MARCELA Entrad, señor, do podáis mudar vestido decente. 210

CARDENIO Mi promesa no consiente que esa merced me hagáis.

TORRENTE Aparte.

Éstas sí son borrascas no fingidas, de quien no espero verdadera calma, sino naufragios de más duro aprieto. 215

CARDENIO No puedo mudar de traje por un tiempo limitado:
que esta pobreza ha causado la tormenta del viaje.

TORRENTE ¡Oh, tú, reparador de nuestras vidas, 220 Amor, cura las ansias de mi alma, que no pueden caber en un soneto!

DON ANTONIO A no ser tan perfecto, primo, vuestro designio, yo hiciera que por otra persona se cumpliera. 225

(Éntranse MARCELA, DON ANTONIO, DOROTEA, y CRISTINA y CARDENIO. Quedan en el teatro MUÑOZ, TORRENTE y OCAÑA.)

MUÑOZ No me habléis, Torrente hermano, que nos escuchan, y siento que en nuestro famoso intento el callar es lo más sano.

(Éntrase MUÑOZ.)

OCAÑA Si a mí el ojo no me miente, 230 sé con gran certinidad que vuestra paternidad
tiene el alma algo doliente.

Es Cristinica un harpón, es un virote, una jara 235 que el ciego arquero dispara, y traspasa el corazón.

Es un incendio, es un rayo.
¿Cómo un rayo? Dos y tres.

TORRENTEY vuesa merced, ¿quién es? 240

OCAÑASoy desta casa el lacayo;
y, aunque en la caballeriza me arrincono, el amor ciego, con su yelo y con su fuego, me consume y martiriza. 245

Entre el harnero y pesebre, entre la paja y cebada,
de noche y de madrugada,
me embiste de amor la fiebre.

TORRENTE ¿Y es Cristina la ocasión 250 de tan grande encendimiento?

OCAÑANo sé quién es; sé que siento el alma hecha un carbón.

TORRENTE Si es Cristina, pondré pausa en ciertos recién nacidos 255 pensamientos atrevidos que su memoria me causa.

No pienso en manera alguna seros rival: que sería género de villanía 260
que al ser quien yo soy repugna.

Honestísimo decoro
se guardará en esta casa, puesto que me arda la brasa desta niña a quien adoro. 265

Quebrantaré en la pared mis pensamientos primeros, con gusto de conoceros
para haceros merced.

Porque no han de naufragar 270 siempre las flotas: que alguna tendrá próspera fortuna para podérsela dar.

OCAÑA Beso tus pies, peregrino, único, raro y bastante 275
a ablandar en un instante un corazón diamantino.

Yo, en quien nacieron barruntos de celos cuando te vi, a tus pies los pongo aquí, 280
semivivos y aun difuntos.

TORRENTE Alzaos, señor; no hagáis sumisión tan indecente, que humillaré yo mi frente si es que la vuestra no alzáis. 285

Dadme los brazos de amigo, que lo hemos de ser los dos gran tiempo, si quiere Dios, que es de mi intención testigo.

OCAÑA Como tú, señor, me abones 290 con tu amistad peregrina, doy por cordera a Cristina
y por cabrito a Quiñones.

TORRENTE Por verte con gusto, voy alegre, así Dios me salve. 295

OCAÑA Aparte.

Para éstas, que yo os calve, o no seré yo quien soy.

(Éntranse TORRENTE y OCAÑA.)

(Entra DON AMBROSIO.)

DON AMBROSIO Por ti, virgen hermosa, esparce ufano, contra el rigor con que amenaza el cielo, entre los surcos del labrado suelo, 300 el pobre labrador el rico grano.

Por ti surca las aguas del mar cano el mercader en débil leño a vuelo;
y, en el rigor del sol como del yelo, pisa alegre el soldado el risco y llano. 305

Por ti infinitas veces, ya perdida la fuerza del que busca y del que ruega, se cobra y se promete la vitoria.

Por ti, báculo fuerte de la vida, tal vez se aspira a lo imposible, y llega 310 el deseo a las puertas de la gloria.

¡Oh esperanza notoria,
amiga de alentar los desmayados, aunque estén en miserias sepultados!

(Entra CRISTINA.)

CRISTINA Habrá fiesta y regodeo, 315 y la parentela toda
vendrá, sin duda, a la boda.

DON AMBROSIO Mi norte descubro y veo.
¡Oh dulcísima Cristina!

CRISTINA De alcorza debo de ser. 320

DON AMBROSIO Tribunal do se ha de ver lo que el Amor determina en mi contra o mi provecho.

CRISTINA ¡Estraña salutación!

DON AMBROSIO La lengua da la razón 325 como la saca del pecho.
Pero vengamos al punto.
Mi esperanza, ¿cómo está?
¿Ha de morir? ¿Vivirá?
¿Contaréme por difunto? 330
¿Difícúltase la empresa?
¡Presto, que me vuelvo loco!

CRISTINA Idos, señor, poco a poco, que preguntáis muy apriesa.

DON AMBROSIO Más apriesa me consume 335
el vivo incendio de amor.

CRISTINA En sólo un punto el rigor suyo se abrevia y resume, y es que puedes ya contar
a Marcela por casada. 340 Ya no es suya: ya está dada
a quien la sabrá estimar.

DON AMBROSIO No me digas el esposo, que, sin duda, es don Antonio.

CRISTINA Levantas un testimonio 345 que pasa de mentiroso.
¿Con su hermana?

DON AMBROSIO; Ah Cristinica!
¿Qué es eso? ¿Cubierta y pala con que una obra tan mala se apoya y se fortifica? 350

CRISTINA Que es con su primo.

DON AMBROSIO; ¿Qué es esto, cielo siempre soberano?
¿Hoy primo el que ayer fue hermano?
¿Cámbiase un hombre tan presto?

CRISTINA Digo que es un peregrino, 355 primo suyo y perulero,
de tan soberbio dinero,
que de las Indias nos vino.
De oro más de cien mil tejos se sorbió el mar como un huevo, 360 deste peregrino nuevo,
que no está de ti muy lejos, porque vesle allí dó asoma.

DON AMBROSIO; Y que esto en el mundo pase!

CRISTINA Puesto que antes que se case, 365 entiendo que ha de ir a Roma.

(Entran CARDENIO, TORRENTE y MUÑOZ.)

DON AMBROSIO    Embustero y perulero, atrevido e insolente, ¿por qué te haces pariente de la vida por quien muero? 370

TORRENTE    Descornado se ha la flor; perecemos.

MUÑOZ    Malo es esto;
la traza se ha descompuesto al primer paso.

CARDENIO    Señor,
no te entiendo, ni imagino 375 por qué tan acelerado
la maldita has desatado contra un noble peregrino.

MUÑOZ    Quien dijere que yo di lista a nadie, mentirá 380 cuantas veces lo dirá.
No sino lléguese a mí,
que fabrico en ningún modo castillos mal prevenidos.

TORRENTE    Aparte.

Antes de ser convencidos, 385
éste lo ha de decir todo.
¡Oh levantadas quimeras en el aire, cual yo dije!

DON AMBROSIO Por el Cielo que nos rige, que si acaso perseveras 390
en el embuste que intentas, primero que en algo aciertes, ha de ser una y mil muertes el remate de tus cuentas.
Vuélvete a tu Potosí, 395
deja lograr mi porfía.

CARDENIO Aquéste ya desvaría.

TORRENTE Así me parece a mí.

CRISTINA Don Francisco y mi señor son éstos. ¡Pies, a correr! 400

(Éntrase CRISTINA.)

(Salen DON FRANCISCO y DON ANTONIO.)

DON FRANCISCO Todo aqueso puede ser: que a más obliga el rigor de un celoso, si es honrado, como el padre de Marcela.

DON AMBROSIO Éste es el que urdió la tela 405 que tan cara me ha costado.
¿Qué rigor de estrella ha sido, señor don Antonio, aquel que de piadoso en crüel contra mí os ha convertido? 410

¿Y qué peregrino es éste, tan medido a vuestro intento, que queréis que su contento
a mí la vida me cueste?

Mía es Marcela, si el cielo 415
quisiere y si vos queréis:
que en vuestra industria tenéis de mi mal todo el consuelo.

No es desigual mi linaje del suyo, y su padre creo 420 que deste igual himeneo no ha de recibir ultraje.

Si él la escondió en vuestra casa por quitármela delante, ved, si acaso sois amante, 425 lo que el alma ausente pasa.

DON FRANCISCO Éste habla de Marcela Osorio, y no de tu hermana.

DON ANTONIO La presunción está llana, gran mal mi alma recela. 430

Desta vana presunción
y mal formados antojos os han de dar vuestros ojos la justa satisfacción.

Veníos conmigo, y veréis 435
en el engaño en que estáis.

DON AMBROSIO Si a Marcela me lleváis, al cielo me llevaréis.

(Éntrase DON ANTONIO, DON FRANCISCO y DON AMBROSIO. Quedan en el teatro MUÑOZ, TORRENTE y CARDENIO.)

CARDENIO ¡Ah Muñoz, con cuán pequeña ocasión habéis temblado! 440

MUÑOZ Temo de verme brumado, y molido como alheña;
temo que mis trazas den,
mis embustes y quimeras, con mi cuerpo en las galeras, 445 que no le estará muy bien.

TORRENTE ¿Sin apretaros la cuerda os descoséis? ¡Mala cosa!

MUÑOZ La conciencia temerosa, de los castigos se acuerda. 450 Pero desde aquí adelante pienso ser mártir, y pienso que paga a la culpa censo con temor el más constante.
Pésame que fue la lista 455
de mi letra y de mi mano,
y este temor, que no es vano, todas mis fuerzas conquista.

TORRENTE Vamos a ver en qué para el comenzado desastre. 460

MUÑOZ Aquella bayeta y sastre nunca el cielo lo depara.

(Éntranse todos.)

(Salen MARCELA y DOROTEA.)

MARCELA Este primo no me agrada, dulce amiga Dorotea.
¡Plegue a Dios que por bien sea 465 su venida no esperada!

DOROTEA Como le ves mal vestido, no te parece galán.

MARCELA Las galas no siempre dan aire y brío, ni el vestido. 470 Desmayado me parece, aunque atrevido tal vez.

DOROTEA De su causa eres jüez.

MARCELA Basta; poco me apetece.

DOROTEA Parece que se ha templado 475 tu hermano en su pensamiento.

MARCELA Todavía, a lo que siento, anda un poco apasionado;
no se le cae de la boca mi nombre, y aun todavía 480 descubre una fantasía que en lascivos puntos toca; mas yo no le doy lugar
de que esté a solas conmigo.

DOROTEA Eso es lo que yo te digo, 485
y lo que has de procurar.

(Aquí han de entrar DON ANTONIO, DON FRANCISCO, CARDENIO, TORRENTE y MUÑOZ.)

DON ANTONIO Mirad, señor, destas dos, cuál es la Marcela hermosa que con fuerza poderosa os tiene fuera de vos. 490

DON AMBROSIO Ésta le parece en algo, y no es ella; mas ya veo, sin duda, que es devaneo,
y que de sentido salgo.
Téngame Amor de su mano, 495
y los cielos, si me ofenden.

MARCELA ¿O me compran o me venden?
Decidme qué es esto, hermano.

DON AMBROSIO No es otra cosa alguna, sino que la belleza 500 incomparable y sola
de otra que tiene el propio nombre vuestro, su donaire, su gracia,
su honesta compostura,
su ingenio, su linaje, 505
se llevaron tras sí mis pensamientos.
Améla honestamente,
adoréla rendido,
solicitéla mudo,
aunque los ojos son parleros siempre. 510 Su padre, recatado,

por algún su desinio,
o por mi desventura,
llevóla, y no sé adónde.

DON ANTONIO Ésta es mi historia.

DON AMBROSIO No con más diligencia 515 la diosa de las mieses
buscó a su hija amada hasta los escondrijos del infierno, como yo la he buscado por cuanto las sospechas 520
han podido llevarme,
pensativo, solícito y ansioso.

En esto, a mis oídos el nombre de Marcela
llegó, y vuestra hermosura; 525 pero no el sobrenombre de Almendárez.

Creí que don Antonio,
vuestro querido hermano, por orden de su padre
de la Marcela Osorio, que yo busco, 530 en casa la tenía,
y, mal considerado,
y con los celos ciego,
hice los disparates que habéis visto.

DON FRANCISCO ¿Éstas no son lanzadas 535 que te pasan el alma?

DON ANTONIO Y aun rayos que la embisten, la hieren, desmenuzan y quebrantan.

DOROTEA Apostaré, señora, que es ésta la Marcela 540
por quien tu hermano gime, suspira y con angustia se lamenta.

TORRENTE Un canto pesadísimo, una montaña dura,
una máquina inmensa, 545
de acero un monte dilatado y grave, de sobre el pecho quito.

MUÑOZY yo de sobre el alma una carcoma aguda.
¡Maldito seas de Dios, amante simple! 550 ¡Qué confusos nos tuvo aqueste mentecato!
¡Con cuán pocos indicios trocó las dos Marcelas el cuitado!
Ya pensé que mi lista 555 andaba por la casa
de mano en mano. ¡Ay duro trance, no imaginado y repentino!

DON FRANCISCO Pues en esta Marcela veis patente de vuestro pensamiento el desengaño, 560 mostraos, señor, más cauto y más prudente otra vez que os acose vuestro engaño, y volved a buscar más diligente la causa original de vuestro daño.

DON AMBROSIO Tiene cualquiera enamorada culpa 565 fácil y compasiva la disculpa.
Erré; mas no es el yerro de tal suerte que perdón no merezca.

CARDENIO Yo imagino que ministró ocasión al atreverte este pobre sayal de peregrino. 570

DON ANTONIO La rabia de los celos es tan fuerte, que fuerza a hacer cualquiera desatino.
Sélo yo bien, que ya me vi celoso, atrevido, arrojado y malicioso.

DON AMBROSIO En siglos prolongados tu ventura 575 goces, ¡oh peregrino!, y tus bisnietos te lleven a la honrada sepultura sobre sus hombros, para el caso electos;
no menoscabe el tiempo la hermosura de tu Marcela; celos indiscretos 580 no perturben tu paz en tanto cuanto de vida os diere aliento el Cielo santo.

Yo vuelvo a renovar mi pena antigua, buscando aquélla que me encubre el cielo,
y, mientras dónde está no se averigua, 585 un Sísifo seré nuevo en el suelo.
De noche, como sombra o estantigua, llena la vista de inmortal desvelo, por ver el fin de mis trabajos largos, un lince habré de ser con ojos de Argos. 590

(Éntrase DON AMBROSIO.)

MARCELA Desesperado se parte.

DON ANTONIO Yo sin esperanza quedo, dulce Marcela, de hallarte.

TORRENTE De mí se ha arredrado el miedo.

MUÑOZ En mí ya no tiene parte; 595 pero, con todo, quisiera que la lista se rompiera que di escrita de mi mano:
que cualquier susto, aunque vano, la mala conciencia altera. 600

DON FRANCISCO Haz cuenta, amigo, que envías, en este amante curioso,
a buscar tu gloria espías.

DON ANTONIO Con todo, estoy temeroso: que son tiernas sus porfías, 605
y muchas, que es lo peor.

DON FRANCISCO Yo lo tengo por mejor: que este anzuelo ha de sacar del profundo de la mar la perla que escondió Amor. 610

(Éntrese DON FRANCISCO y DON ANTONIO.)

CARDENIO ¿No ha sido estremado el cuento, señora prima?

MARCELA Sí ha sido;
aunque dél me ha parecido ir mi hermano descontento, pensativo y desabrido. 615 Y es la causa que la dama que aquél busca, adora y ama como quiere Amor tirano, es la misma que mi hermano quiere, busca, nombra y llama. 620

Y yo, simple, imaginaba ser yo la hermosa Marcela a quien mi hermano llamaba, y con malicia y cautela a las manos le miraba, 625
a los ojos y a la boca, y con no advertencia poca
ponderaba sus razones, sus movimientos y acciones.

DOROTEA Curiosidad simple y loca. 630 Pídele perdón.

MARCELA No quiero,
pues nunca arraigó en mi pecho
el pensamiento primero.

CARDENIO Y más, que te ha satisfecho tan llano y tan por entero. 635

MUÑOZ ¿Hemos de hacer la visita de mi señora doña Ana?

MARCELA Todavía es de mañana, y el frío la gana quita de hacer visitas agora. 640 Ven, amiga Dorotea;
vamos donde el sol nos vea.

DOROTEA ¡Y cómo que iré, señora!
¡Que tirito, ti, ti, ti!

¡Insufrible frío hace! 645

(Éntranse MARCELA y DOROTEA.)

TORRENTE El tuyo a mí me desplace.

¿Para qué veniste aquí,

Cardenio, si te has de estar como una estatua sin lengua?

Allá voy, y no hago mengua. 650

¿Piensas que se te ha de entrar la ventura por la puerta,

y arrojársete en la cama?

CARDENIO A mi yelo y a mi llama ningún medio las concierto. 655

Cuando de Marcela ausente

algún breve espacio estoy, ardo de atrevido, y doy en pensar que soy valiente;

pero apenas me da el cielo 660

lugar para a solas vella, cuando estoy, estando ante ella, frío mucho más que el yelo.

TORRENTE Con ese yelo no habrá ostugo que nos alcance. 665

MUÑOZ Cierta que yo he echado un lance que a los ojos me saldrá, si a las espaldas no sale primero. ¡Oh viejo imprudente!

Bien merecéis, inocente, 670 que se evapore y exhale

el alma con el más chico

temor que te sobresalte.

CARDENIO Cuando yo, Muñoz, os falte, cuando yo no os haga rico, 675 jamás del Pirú me venga el mi esperado tesoro.

MUÑOZ; Que no me vuelva yo moro, y que yo paciencia tenga para escuchar lo que escucho! 680 ¿Dónde está el oro, señores socarrones, embaidores?

TORRENTE Muñoz, que ha de venir mucho.

MUÑOZ ¿De qué Pirú ha de venir, de qué Méjico o qué Charcas? 685

TORRENTE Cuatro cofres y seis arcas puedes desde luego abrir para echar cuatro mil barras, y aun son pocas las que digo.

MUÑOZ Tente; que Dios sea contigo, 690
Torrente, que te desgarras.
Con el sastre y la bayeta estaría yo contento.

TORRENTE Sastres pasarán de ciento.

MUÑOZ La bayeta es la que aprieta 695 al deseo de tenella.

TORRENTE Déjenme los dos aquí, que viene Cristina allí,
y me importa hablar con ella.

(Vanse MUÑOZ y CARDENIO.)

(Entra CRISTINA.)

¿Que es posible, flor y fruto 700 del árbol lindo de amor, que ha de andar por tu rigor siempre mi alma con luto?

¿Que es posible que un potente indiano no te remate 705 ni que a tu dureza mate la blandura de Torrente?

(Entra OCAÑA en calzas y en camisa, con un mandil delante, y con un harnero y una almohaza; entra puesto el dedo en la boca, con pasos tímidos, y escóndese detrás de un tapiz, de modo que se le parezcan los pies no más.)

¿Que es posible que no precies los montones de oro fino, y por un lacayo indino 710
un perulero desprecies?

¿Que no quieras ser llevada en hombros como cacique?

¿Que huigas de verte a pique de ser reina coronada? 715

¿Que por las faltas de España, que siempre suelen sobrar, no quieras ir a gozar
del gran país de Cucaña?

¿Que te tenga avasallada 720 un lacayo de tal modo,
que por él dejes el todo,
y te acojas al nonada?

¿Que a un borracho te sujetes, que cuela tan sin estorbos, 725 que unos sorbos y otros sorbos son sus briznas y luquetes?

¡Oh mujeres, que tenéis condición de escarabajo!

CRISTINA Hablad, Torrente, más bajo, 730 si por ventura podéis;
que dicen que las paredes
a veces tienen oídos.

TORRENTE Los tuyos tienes tapidos a la voz de mis mercedes. 735 Deja aquese socarrón,
que tu deshonra procura,
y fabrica tu ventura
con tu mucha discreción.

CRISTINA Pues ¿quíerole yo, mezquina, 740 o, por ventura, hago caso yo de buzaque?

TORRENTE Hablad paso;
moderad la voz, Cristina, que no sabéis quién os oye, y haced con prudencia diestra 745 que la humilde suerte vuestra con la que tengo se apoye, y veréis os encumbrada
sobre el cerco de la luna.

CRISTINA Esa próspera fortuna 750 para mí no está guardada, que soy una pecadora
inútil, una mozuela
de mantellina y chinela, no buena para señora; 755
y más, estando abatida
y murmurada de Ocaña.

TORRENTE Muéveme ese llanto a saña;
perderá Ocaña la vida.

CRISTINA Con sólo media docena 760 de palos que tú le des,
rendida vendré a tus pies.

TORRENTE Blanda y moderada pena a tanta culpa le das;
mejor fuera que la lengua 765 que se desmandó en tu mengua se le cortara, y aun más.

CRISTINA Palos bastan; vete en paz.

TORRENTE El cielo quede contigo.

CRISTINA Procura hacer lo que digo, 770 secreto, astuto y sagaz.

(Éntrese TORRENTE.)

¡Ay Jesús! ¿Quién está aquí?
¿Qué pies son éstos, cuitada?

(Sale OCAÑA.)

OCAÑA Cacica en hombros llevada desde Lima a Potosí: 775 yo soy, vesme aquí presente, hecho estafermo sufrible a tu rancor tan terrible y a los palos de Torrente.

Pocos son media docena; 780
la piedad en ti florece:
que mi culpa bien merece cuatrodoblada la pena.

Mas yo no tengo por culpa el amarte y avisarte 785 que de aquello has de guardarte que te obligue a dar disculpa.

CRISTINA Por vida tuya, lacayo el más discreto de España, que todo ha sido maraña 790
burlona y de alegre ensayo;
porque pensaba avisarte
en viéndote.

OCAÑA Una por una,
tú estarás sobre la Luna, sobre el Sol y aun sobre Marte; 795 yo, mísero, apaleado, tendido por ese suelo.

CRISTINA Nunca tal permita el cielo.

OCAÑA Tú misma me has condenado.

CRISTINA Ya te he dicho la verdad: 800 que burlaba; y esto baste.

OCAÑA Pues ¿por qué, di, le intimaste secreto y sagacidad?

CRISTINA Porque, advirtiéndote a ti del caso, y estando alerta, 805 fuese la burla más cierta
y más buena.

OCAÑA Fuera así,
cuando tú no confirmaras
con lágrimas tu deseo.

CRISTINA Luego, ¿no me crees?

OCAÑA Sí creo; 810
mas reparo.

CRISTINA ¿En qué reparas?

OCAÑA En las lágrimas, y en ver que no son burlas risueñas las que descubren por señas matar, rajar y hender. 815

Pero tú forja en tu fragua tus embustes, que yo espero que ha de ver el mundo entero el que lleva el gato al agua.

Entra y dame la cebada, 820
o darásmela después.
«¡Rendida vendré a tus pies!»

CRISTINA ¿Esa razón no te agrada?

Pero él no verá cumplida tal promesa en vida suya. 825

OCAÑA ¿Tomara yo alguna tuya, puesto que fuera fingida?

CRISTINA No seas tan ignorante;
muestra, que yo volveré.
(Dale el harnero.)

Con esto me quitaré 830 dos importunos delante.

(Éntrase CRISTINA.)

OCAÑA Que de un lacá la fuerza poderó-,

FIN DE LA SEGUNDA JORNADA

Tercera jornada

Entra DON ANTONIO.

DON ANTONIO En la sazón del erizado invierno, desnudo el árbol de su flor y fruto, cambia en un pardo desabrido luto las esmeraldas del vestido tierno.

Mas, aunque vuela el tiempo casi eterno, 5 vuelve a cobrar el general tributo, y al árbol seco, y de su humor enjuto, halla con muestras de verdor interno.

Torna el pasado tiempo al mismo instante y punto que pasó: que no lo arrasa 10 todo, pues tiemplan su rigor los cielos.

Pero no le sucede así al amante, que habrá de perecer si una vez pasa por él la infernal rabia de los celos.

(Entra DON FRANCISCO.)

DON FRANCISCO Siempre han de herir los vientos, 15 amigo, en cualquier sazón los ayes de tu pasión,
los ecos de tus lamentos.

DON ANTONIO Si acaso quiero entonar alguna voz de alegría, 20 siento que la lengua mía se me pega al paladar.

A mi angustia, a mi dolencia no dan alivio los cielos:

que no le tienen los celos, 25 ni le consiente la ausencia.

DON FRANCISCO No hay extremo sin su medio, ni es eterna humana suerte:
sólo no tiene la muerte en la vida algún remedio. 30

Naturaleza compuso
la suerte de los mortales entre bienes y entre males, como nos lo muestra el uso.

Esta verdad sé bien yo, 35 sin que en probarla porfíe:
ayer lloraba el que hoy ríe,
y hoy llora el que ayer rió.

DON ANTONIO ¡Oh, qué filósofo vienes, don Francisco!

DON FRANCISCO Yo confieso 40 que lo soy por el progreso de tus males y tus bienes.
Dame los brazos y albricias.

DON ANTONIO Los brazos veslos aquí, y las albricias de mí 45
llevarás, si las codicias;
pero yo no sé de qué
me las pides.

DON FRANCISCO Yo las pido de que el Amor ha entendido los quilates de tu fe, 50

y te la quiero premiar
con entregarte a Marcela.

DON ANTONIO Sé que es burla, y llevaréla con tu gusto y mi pesar;
pero no sé qué te mueve 55
a hacer burla de un amigo tal como yo.

DON FRANCISCO Verdad digo, y escucha, que seré breve.
Su padre de Marcela...

DON ANTONIO ¡Oh nombres cordialísimos 60
de Marcela y su padre!

DON FRANCISCO Escucha: no seas tonto.

DON ANTONIO Escucho y soylo.

DON FRANCISCO Esta mañana, estando en misa en San Jerónimo, al salir de la iglesia 65
me tomó por la mano.

DON ANTONIO ¡Oh dulce toque!

DON FRANCISCO ¿Qué toque dulce puede dar la mano de un viejo?
Traslúceseme, amigo, que así estáis vos en vos, como en el cuento. 70

DON ANTONIO Luego, ¿no fue Marcela la que os tocó la mano?

DON FRANCISCO Que no, sino su padre.

DON ANTONIO No entendí bien. Seguid, que estoy suspenso.

DON FRANCISCO Las pacíficas plantas 75 de las olivas verdes
fueron testigos ciertos destas palabras que deciros quiero.

DON ANTONIO ¡Oh santísimos orbes de todas las esferas, 80 a quien inteligencias
supernas rigen, mueven y gobiernan!
Haced que estas razones en mi provecho sean;
lleguen a mis oídos, 85
siquiera esta vez sola, alegres nuevas.

DON FRANCISCO ¡Por vida juro! ¡Muérdome la lengua! ¡Voto a Chito, que estoy por...! ¡Lleve el diablo a cuantos alfeñiques hay amantes! 90 ¡Que un hombre con sus barbas, y con su espada al lado, que puede alzar en peso un tercio de once arrobas de sardinas, llore, gima y se muestre 95 más manso y más humilde que un santo capuchino

al desdén que le da su carilinda...!

DON ANTONIO Paréntesis es éste que se lleva colgada 100 de cada razón suya
mi alma aquí y allí.

DON FRANCISCO Pues otro queda.
Pidióle a una fregona
un amante alcorzado
le diese de su ama 105
un palillo de dientes, y ofrecióle por él cuatro doblones;
y la muchacha boba
trújole de su amo,
que era viejo y sin muelas, el palillo. 110 Él dio lo prometido,
y, engastándole en oro,
se lo colgó del cuello, cual si fuera reliquia de algún santo.
Gemía ante él de hinojos, 115
y al palo seco y suyo plegarias enviaba
que en su empresa dudosa le ayudase.
¿Y el otro presumido, que va a las embusteras 120
del cedacillo y habas,
y da crédito firme a disparates?
¡Cuerpo del mundo todo!
Descubra el hombre siempre tal valor y tal brío, 125 que le muestren varón a todo trance.
No se ande con esferas, con globos y con máquinas
de inteligencias puras;
atienda, espere, escuche, advierta y mire, 130
o lo que en daño suyo,

o en su pro, sus amigos quisieren descubrirle.

DON ANTONIO Atiendo, espero, escucho, advierto y miro.

DON FRANCISCO Digo, pues, que don Pedro, 135
el padre de Marcela,
me dijo estas palabras...

DON ANTONIO ¿Es mucho que te diga que apresures la comenzada plática, de cuyo fin depende 140
o mi vida o mi muerte?

DON FRANCISCO Díjome, en fin...

DON ANTONIO ¡Primero vendrá el mío!

DON FRANCISCO ¡Colérico, enfadoso está!

DON ANTONIO ¡Cuerpo del mundo!
Acaba, don Francisco, 145 que está pendiente el alma de tu boca.

DON FRANCISCO Dijo que yo sea parte, como que él nada entiende, que a Marcela, su hija,
se la demandes por mujer.

DON ANTONIO¿Qué escucho? 150

¿Búrlaste, amigo, o quieres con falsas esperanzas entretener las mías?

DON FRANCISCONo burlo, juro a Dios: verdad te digo.

DON ANTONIO Dame esos pies.

DON FRANCISCOLevanta. 155

DON ANTONIOY pídemme en albricias el alma, y te la diera, si ya a Marcela dado no la hubiera.

Mas dime, dulce amigo:
¿tocaste, por ventura, 160
el cuerpo de don Pedro?
¿Viste si era fantasma o no?

DON FRANCISCOPerdido
estás desa cabeza.

DON ANTONIO ¿Que era don Pedro Osorio,
el padre de Marcela? 165

DON FRANCISCOEl mismo.

DON ANTONIO¡El mismo!

DON FRANCISCOEl mismo. ¿Qué es aquesto?

DON ANTONIO A tanta desventura está el corazón hecho, que no puede dar crédito a las dichosas nuevas que le intimas; 170 pero habrá de creerte,
en fe que tú las dices:
que el buen amigo vemos que es pedazo del alma de su amigo.

DON FRANCISCO Busca a don Pedro Osorio, 175 y pídele a su hija
por legítima esposa.

DON ANTONIO¿Dónde la tiene?

DON FRANCISCOEn Santa Cruz la tiene:
un monesterio santo,
que está puesto muy cerca 180
de Torrejón y Cubas,
orden del rico capitán de pobres.

DON ANTONIO ¿Qué le movió llevarla a tanto encerramiento?

DON FRANCISCONo me metí en dibujos, 185 no le pregunté nada; sólo estuve atento a su demanda,
y, con la ligereza
posible, vine a darte
la dulce que has oído alegre nueva. 190

(Entran MARCELA y CRISTINA.)

MARCELA Llega, Cristina, y dile lo que quieres.

CRISTINA Ocúpame
el rostro la vergüenza, y enmudece la lengua.

MARCELA ¡Qué melindres!
Tomarte has con un toro 195
y con un hombre armado, ¿y de mi hermano tiembles?

DON ANTONIO Pues, hermana, ¿queréis alguna cosa?
¿Mandáis que os sirva en algo?
Pedid a vuestro gusto, 200 que estoy en ocasión de hacer mercedes.

MARCELA En nombre de Cristina, os pido deis licencia
para que aquesta noche os hagan una fiesta los de casa; 205
Muñoz y Dorotea,
Torrente con Ocaña.

CRISTINA Y nuestro buen vecino el barbero también, y la barbera, que canta por el cielo 210
y baila por la tierra,
con otro oficial suyo,
nos tienen de ayudar; dígalos todo.

MARCELA Dígolo todo, y digo, hermano, que yo gusto 215 que esta fiesta se haga.

DON ANTONIO Digo que soy contento, y doy licencia para que el cielo rompa en diferentes lenguas
y en fiestas diferentes 220 las cataratas del placer, y salga a playa mi contento.

DON FRANCISCO Y aun, a ser necesario, haré yo mi figura.

DON ANTONIO Y aun yo, que soy valiente recitante. 225

CRISTINA Mil años, señor, vivas;
mil regocijos buenos
el corazón te ocupen.
Hacerme tengo rajas esta noche.

DON ANTONIO El término decente 230 de honestidad se guarde, Cristina.

CRISTINA ¡Bueno es eso!
Bailaremos a fuer de palaciegos.

DON ANTONIO Vamos, amigo.

DON FRANCISCO Vamos;
aunque don Pedro agora 235
no está en Madrid.

DON ANTONIO ¿Pues, dónde?

DON FRANCISCO A Santa Cruz es ido, y volverá mañana.

DON ANTONIO Vamos a dar al cielo gracias porque ha mirado mi buen celo. 240

(Éntranse DON FRANCISCO y DON ANTONIO.)

MARCELA Mira, Cristina, que sea el baile y el entremés
discreto, alegre y cortés, sin que haya en él cosa fea.

CRISTINA Hale compuesto Torrente 245
y Muñoz, y es la maraña casi la mitad de Ocaña, que es un poeta valiente.

El baile te sé decir que llegará a lo posible 250 en ser dulce y apacible, pues tiene que ver y oír:
que ha de ser baile cantado,
al modo y uso moderno;
tiene de lo grave y tierno, 255
de lo melifluo y flautado.

Es lacayuno y pajil
el entremés, y me admira de verle una tiramira

que tiene de fregonil. 260

MARCELA La fiesta será estremada.

CRISTINA Basta que agradable sea.

MARCELA ¿Sabe el dicho Dorotea?

CRISTINA Ninguno no ignora nada de lo que a su parte toca. 265 Dame, señora, lugar, que nos hemos de ensayar.

MARCELA Vamos.

CRISTINA De gusto voy loca.

(Éntranse.)

(Salen TORRENTE y OCAÑA, cada uno con un garrote debajo del brazo.)

TORRENTE Señor Ocaña, a esta parte, que está más llano el camino. 270

OCAÑA Por esta vez, peregrino traidor, no pienso de honrarte con darte el lado derecho, porque he de tomar el tuyo.
Desas ceremonias huyo, 275
lánguidas y sin provecho;

adondequiera voy bien,
al diestro o siniestro lado,
y no quiero, acomodado, que otros lugares nos den 280
del que me cupiere acaso, y sé yo, señor Torrente, que tiene de lo imprudente hacer destas cosas caso.

TORRENTE ¿Es daga aquese garrote, 285
señor Ocaña?

OCAÑA Es un palo que por martas lo señalo para ablandar un cogote.
¿Y es puñal aquese vuestro?

TORRENTE Es una penca verduga 290 que las espaldas arruga del maldiciente más diestro.

OCAÑA Luego, ¿vais a castigar algún maldiciente?

TORRENTE Sí.

OCAÑA Pues no pasemos de aquí, 295 que yo también he de dar doce palos a un bellaco, socarrón, traidor, y miente.

TORRENTE Si lo dices por Torrente, daré destierro a este saco, 300

y haré en calzas y en jubón, ya con el palo o sin él, que confieses ser tú aquel desmentido y socarrón.

OCAÑA Tente, Torrente; ¿estás loco?, 305
ten tus cóleras a raya, si quieres que yo me vaya
en las mías poco a poco.
¿Han de fenecer aquí, por gustos de mozas viles, 310
dos Héctores, dos Aquiles?

TORRENTE Mueran. ¿Qué se me da a mí?

OCAÑA ¡Vive Dios!, que Cristinilla me mandó te apalease;
a lo menos, te reglase 315 la una y otra mejilla
con una navaja aguda:
que es, si en ello mirar quieres,
entre las crudas mujeres, la más insolente y cruda. 320 Lo mismo a mí me mandó que a ti.

TORRENTE Sin duda, así es.

OCAÑA ¿Y saldrá con su interés?

TORRENTE Amigo Ocaña, eso no.
Vivamos para beber, 325

pues para beber vivimos,
y estos dijés y estos mimos con otros se han de entender de más tiernas intenciones y de más sufribles lomos; 330 no con nosotros, que somos malos sobre socarrones.
Disimula; vesla allí
donde viene; disimula.

OCAÑA Ésta es la más mala mula 335 que en mi vida rasqué o vi.

TORRENTE Contemporicémosla.
Quizá mudará el rigor:
que su mudanza en mejor se ha de poner en quizá. 340

(Entra CRISTINA.)

CRISTINA Apostaré que están hechos pedazos mis dos amantes, que revientan de arrogantes
y de coléricos pechos.
Pero allí están sosegados 345
más que en misa. ¿Cómo es esto?
Aún no se habrán descompuesto, que son rufos recatados.

TORRENTE Señora Cristina mía...

CRISTINA ¿Tuya? ¡Bueno!

TORRENTE Pues ¿que no? 350

CRISTINA ¿Quién a ti a Cristina dio?

TORRENTE El dinero y la porfía.

CRISTINA ¿Qué dinero?

TORRENTE Aquel que pienso darte en llegando la flota, si no es que, de puro rota, 355 da al mar el usado censo.

CRISTINA ¿Tú no me das algo, Ocaña?

OCAÑA Cristina, ¿yo no te he dado, como poeta rodado,
del entremés la maraña? 360 ¿Hay día que no te cebe con dos cuartos y aun con tres?

CRISTINA Si es que sale el entremés tal que mi señor le apruebe, yo me daré por pagada 365
y satisfecha, que es más.

TORRENTE Cristina, ¿no nos dirás, si es que el caso no te enfada,
a cuál de los dos más quieres?

CRISTINA Es injusta petición, 370 y aquesa declaración
no la han de hacer las mujeres como yo; mas, si gustáis que por señas os lo diga, haré lo que a más me obliga 375 el amor que me mostráis.
Muestra si traes un pañuelo, Ocaña.

OCAÑA Sí traigo, y roto, y te le ofrezco devoto
con sano y humilde celo. 380

CRISTINA Toma este mío, Torrente, y con esto he declarado lo que me habéis preguntado honesta y discretamente.
Y adiós; y venid, que es hora 385
de ensayar el entremés.

(Éntrase CRISTINA.)

TORRENTE Si no te aclaras después, más confuso estoy agora que antes de hacer la pregunta.

OCAÑA Pues yo me aplico la palma, 390 que en mi provecho mi alma estas razones apunta:
a ti dio, sin darle nada,
y, sin darme, a mí, tomó;
con el darte, te pagó; 395
llevando, queda obligada

al pago que recibió.

TORRENTE A quien toman lo que tiene, dan muestra que se aborrece;
y en el dar, claro parece 400 que más amor se contiene, pues con las dádivas crece.

OCAÑA La verdad desta cuestión quede a la mosquetería, que tal hay que en él se cría 405 el ingenio de un Platón.
Estos capipardos son
poetas casi los más,
y tal vez alguno oirás que a socapa dice cosas 410 que parece, de curiosas, que las dicta Barrabás.

(Éntranse TORRENTE y OCAÑA.)

(Salen DON ANTONIO, DON FRANCISCO, CARDENIO y MARCELA, y MUÑOZ.)

DON ANTONIO Quiera Dios que la fiesta corresponda al buen deseo de los recitantes.

MUÑOZ Será maravillosa, porque danza 415 nuestro vecino el barberito, ¡y cómo!

(Asómase a la puerta del teatro CRISTINA, y dice:)

CRISTINA Pónganse todos bien, que ya salimos.

MARCELA ¿Han venido los músicos?

CRISTINA Ya tiemplan.

(Éntrase CRISTINA.)

(Salen OCAÑA y TORRENTE, como lacayos embozados.)

TORRENTE Paréceme que vas algo dañado, Ocaña.

OCAÑA Cuando voy desta manera, 420 va el juicio en su punto. Tú no sabes cómo el calor vinático despierta los espíritus muertos y dormidos.
De suerte voy que pelearé con ciento, sin volver el pie atrás una semínima. 425

CARDENIO No es muy mala la entrada.

MUÑOZ ¿Cómo mala?
Digo que es la mejor cosa del mundo.
Yo soy su medio autor.

TORRENTE Ocaña, ¿es éste el zagüán de la fiesta?

OCAÑA No diviso:

que tengo las lumbreras algo turbias 430
Adonde oyeres música, repara.

TORRENTE Escucha, que aquí sale Cristina y Dorotea.

OCAÑA Cáigome de sueño.

(Salen DOROTEA y CRISTINA como fregonas.)

DOROTEA Aquesta tarde, Cristinica amiga, pienso bailar hasta molerme el alma. 435

CRISTINA Y yo, hasta reventar he de brincarme.
¡Cómo tarda Aguedilla, la del sastre!

DOROTEA ¿Díjote que vendría?

CRISTINA Y Julianilla,
la del entallador, con Sabinica, que sirve a la beata en Cantarranas. 440

DOROTEA Todas son bailadoras de lo fino.
En fregando, vendrán.

CRISTINA Como nosotras, que lo dejamos todo hecho de perlas.
De la cena no curo; que mi amo dos huevos frescos sorbe, y a Dios gracias. 445

DOROTEAEI mío nunca cena; que es asmático, y con dos bocadillos de conserva que toma, se santigua y se va al lecho.

CRISTINAY tu ama, ¿qué hace? ¿No se acuesta?

DOROTEANo toméis menos; puesta de rodillas 450 dentro de un oratorio, papa santos dos horas más allá de los maitines.

CRISTINATambién es mi señora una bendita, y, por nuestra desgracia, ellas son santas.

DOROTEAPues ¿no es mejor, amiga, que lo sean? 455

CRISTINANo; ni con cien mil leguas. Si ellas fueran resbaladoras de carcaño, acaso tropezaran aquí y allí rodaran;
y, sabiendo nosotras sus melindres, tuviéramos la nuestra sobre el hito: 460 ellas fueran las mozas, y nosotras fuéramos las patronas a baqueta, como dice il toscano.

DOROTEAVerdad dices:
que el ama de quien sabe su criada tiernas fragilidades, no se atreve, 465 ni aun es bien que se atreva, a darle voces, ni a reñir sus descuidos, temerosa que no salgan a plaza sus holguras.

CRISTINA¿Has visto qué calzado trae Lorenza, la que sirve al letrado boquituerto? 470 ¿Quién se le dio, si sabes?

DOROTEA Un su primo
donado, que es un santo.

CRISTINA ¡Ay Dorotea,
cómo los canonizas!

DOROTEA Oye, hermana, que los músicos suenan, y el barbero, gran bailarín, es éste que aquí sale. 475

MUÑOZ ¡Vive el cielo!, que es cosa de los cielos el entremés.

OCAÑA Aquel viejo me enfada;
que le he de dar, pondré, una bofetada.

(Entran los MÚSICOS y el BARBERO, danzando al son deste romance:)

MÚSICOS De los danzantes la prima es este barbero nuestro, 480 en el compás acertado,
y en las mudanzas ligero.
Puede danzar ante el rey,
y aqueso será lo menos, pues alas lleva en los pies 485
y azogue dentro del cuerpo.
Anda, aguija, salta y corre
aquí y allí como un trueno, adóranle las fregonas,

respétanle los mancebos. 490

OCAÑA Oíganme, pido atención;
no gusto destos paseos, deste dar coces al aire
y puntapiés a los vientos.
Toquen unas seguidillas, 495
y entendámonos; y advierto que se juegue limpiamente, y sepan que no me duermo.

MUÑOZ ¿Hay tal Ocaña en el mundo?
¿Hay tal lacayo en el cielo? 500

BARBERO Alto, pues; vayan seguidas.

CRISTINA Sí, amigo, porque bailemos.

MÚSICOS Madre, la mi madre,
guardas me ponéis;
que si yo no me guardo, 505
mal me guardaréis.

TORRENTE Esto sí, ¡cuerpo del mundo!, que tiene de lo moderno,
de lo dulce, de lo lindo,
de lo agradable y lo tierno. 510

MÚSICOS Dicen que está escrito,
y con gran razón,
que es la privación
causa de apetito.
Crece en infinito 515

encerrado amor;
por eso es mejor
que no me encerréis:
que si yo no me guardo...

OCAÑA Ya les he dicho que bailen 520
a lo templado y honesto:
que no gusto que se beban
de las niñas el aliento.

BARBERO; Por vida del so lacayo, que nos deje, que aquí haremos 525 lo que más nos diere gusto!

OCAÑA Bailen: después nos veremos.

MÚSICOS Es de tal manera
la fuerza amorosa
que a la más hermosa 530
vuelve en quimera.
El pecho de cera,
de fuego la gana,
las manos de lana,
de fieltro los pies: 535
que si yo no me guardo, &c.

TORRENTE Tampoco a mí me contentan estas vueltas ni floreos:
que se requiebran bailando, pues son requiebros los quiebros. 540

MÚSICOS Señores lacayos, vayan
y monden la haza, y déjennos.

OCAÑA Musiquillo de mohatra, canta y calla, que queremos estar aquí a tu pesar. 545

MÚSICO Está bien dicho; cantemos.
Que tiene costumbre
de ser amorosa,
como mariposa
se va tras su lumbre, 550
aunque muchedumbre
de guardas le pongan,
y aunque más propongan
de hacer lo que hacéis:
que si yo no me guardo... 555

TORRENTE Varilla de volver tripas, no hagas tantos meneos;
lagartija almidonada,
baila a lo grave y compuesto.

DOROTEABodegón con pies, camine, 560 que aquí no le conocemos; calle o pase, porque olisca
a lacayo y a gallego.

MUÑOZÉstas sí que son matracas, que tienen del caballero, 565 de lo ilustre y de lo lindo, de lo propio y lo risueño.

OCAÑABailar quiero con Cristina.

TORRENTE No con mi consentimiento.
¿No se acuerda el sor Ocaña 570 que a mí me dio su pañuelo, y que, en fe de ser su cuyo, sobre ella dominio tengo,
y que los rayos del sol
no la han de tocar, si puedo? 575

OCAÑA ¿Y no sabe el so Torrente que soy aquel que merezco bailar con un arzobispo, aunque sea el de Toledo?

CARDENIO ¿No pasa el baile adelante? 580

OCAÑA No; que ha de pasar primero de Ocaña la valentía,
su venganza y su denuedo.

TORRENTE ¡Ay narices derribadas y tendidas por el suelo! 585 Pero toma esta respuesta:
de Tarpeya mira Nero.

MUÑOZ Dióle. ¡Mal haya la farsa
y el autor suyo primero!
Pero yo no di esta traza, 590 ni escribí tal en mis versos.

BARBERO ¡Pasado de parte a parte está el pobre Ocaña!

MARCELA;Ay cielos!

BARBEROYo les tomaré la sangre, que para esto soy barbero. 595

DOROTEA;Mi señora se desmaya!

DON ANTONIOYo tengo la culpa desto, pues que sabía que Ocaña es buzaque en todo tiempo.

BARBERO;Paños, estopas, aguijen; 600
traíganme claras de huevos!

CARDENIO;Huye, traidor enemigo; huye, traidor, que le has muerto!

TORRENTEMire si halla mis narices, porque sin ellas no pienso 605
salir un paso de casa.

CARDENIO;Sal, que le has muerto!

TORRENTE;No quiero!

DOROTEA;Ay, sin ventura, señora!

DON ANTONIOLas dos llevadla allá dentro.
Miren quién llama a esa puerta. 610

¡Y la rompen! ¿Qué es aquesto?

DON FRANCISCO Yo pondré que es la justicia, que a los llantos lastimeros destas muchachas acude.

CRISTINA Aqueso tengo yo bueno: 615 que no lloraré una lágrima si viese a mi padre muerto;
y más, viéndome vengada destos dos amantes ciegos, importunos, maldicientes, 620
socarrones, sacrílegos, pobres, sobre todo, y ruines:
¡mirad qué extremos extremos!

(Entran un ALGUACIL y un CORCHETE.)

ALGUACIL ¿Qué guitarra es aquésta?

CORCHETE Aquí hay sangre. ¿Qué es aquesto? 625

TORRENTE Yo soy, que estoy sin narices.

OCAÑA Y yo, que estoy casi muerto.

ALGUACIL No se me vaya ninguno;
cierren esas puertas luego.

MUÑOZ De aquí habremos de ir...

DOROTEA¿Adónde? 630

MUÑOZA la cárcel, por lo menos.

DON ANTONIO¿No la habéis echado el agua?

DOROTEAYa vuelve en sí.

CORCHETE¿Qué haremos?
¿Han de ir a la cárcel todos?

ALGUACILEl caso sabré primero. 635

TORRENTE¿Que tengo de ir a Turpia!

OCAÑA¿Que esté tan cerca mi entierro!
¡Mete la tienta, cuitado, con más blandura y más tiento!

BARBEROMás de dos palmos le cuela. 640

OCAÑA Si yo cuatro azumbres cielo, no es bien se mire conmigo en dos varas más o menos.

CORCHETE Veamos estas narices.

TORRENTE Paso, detente, reniego 645 de tus pies y de tus patas:
que las pisas, y tendremos que enderezarlas si acaso quedan chatas.

CORCHETE Yo no veo
en el suelo tus narices. 650

TORRENTE Verdad, porque aquí las tengo.

MUÑOZ ¡Milagro, milagro, y grande!

OCAÑA Tú, compasivo barbero, por lo hueco de una bota entraste la tiente a tiento. 655

DON ANTONIO Luego, ¿todo esto es fingido?

OCAÑA Sí, señor.

DON ANTONIO ¡Por Dios del cielo!, que estoy por hacer que salga lo que es fingido por cierto.
¡Desnudar, donde hay mujeres, 660 espadas!

TORRENTE ¡Ah, señor bueno, qué mal sientes de sus bríos!

DON ANTONIO Digo que sois majadero.

ALGUACIL Luego, ¿todo aquesto es burla?

OCAÑA Todo aquesto es burla luego, 665 pero después serán veras.

CARDENIO ¡Qué buen relente tenemos!

DON FRANCISCO El picón, por Dios bendito, que ha sido de los más buenos que he visto hacer en mi vida. 670

DOROTEA ¿Bailaremos más?

CRISTINA Bailemos.

MARCELA No, porque aún no estoy en mí del sobresalto, y deseo reparar el accidente que me ha puesto en recio extremo. 675

DON ANTONIO Entraos, hermana.

MARCELA Vení
conmigo vosotras.

TORRENTE Demos
sobresaltado remate
al principio de sosiego.

(Éntranse CRISTINA, MARCELA y DOROTEA.)

ALGUACIL De que todo sea comedia, 680
y no tragedia, me alegro;
y así, a mi ronda, señores,
con vuestra licencia, vuelvo.

(Éntranse el ALGUACIL y el CORCHETE.)

CARDENIO Ocaña y Torrente, digo que el asunto fue discreto 685 del picón, y que se hizo con propiedad en extremo.

MUÑOZ El principio todo es mío, pero no lo fue el progreso;
el perulero y Ocaña 690
tienen el diablo en el cuerpo.

OCAÑA Miren la herida por quien metió la tiente el barbero, que, mientras es más profunda, más vida y bien me prometo. 695 (Enseña una bota de vino.)

TORRENTE Preguntar quiero otra vez, mis señores mosqueteros, quién ha de llevar la gala
de los trocados pañuelos.
Pensadlo para otra vez, 700 que en este sitio saldremos con preguntas más agudas, con entremeses más buenos.
Y advertid que soy Torrente, perulero por lo menos, 705

y os daré selvas de plata
y mil montes de oro llenos.

OCAÑA Hermanos, yo soy Ocaña, lacayo, mas no gallego;
sé brindar y sé gastar 710 con amigos cuanto tengo.

(Éntranse todos.)

(Entran DON SILVESTRE DE ALMENDÁREZ, el verdadero, con una gran cadena de oro, o que le parezca, y CLAVIJO, su compañero.)

DON SILVESTRE Si no llega al retrato su hermosura, y della ha declinado alguna parte, podrá buscar en otra su ventura.

CLAVIJO Señor, lo que yo puedo aconsejarte 715 es que procures que la vista sea la que desta verdad ha de informarte;
y si tu prima acaso fuere fea, no faltarán excusas con que impidas el lazo que se teme y se desea: 720 que, a darle el matrimonio por dos vidas, las glorias que no diera la primera, fueran en la segunda prevenidas.
Un nudo solo dado a la ligera, aprieta, estrecha y liga de tal suerte, 725 que dura hasta la hora postrimera.
No fue de Gordiano el lazo fuerte tan duro de romper como este ñudo, que sólo se desata con la muerte.
Mancebo eres, pero muy sesudo, 730
y así, de que has de hacer como discreto tan confiado estoy, que en nada dudo.

DON SILVESTRE De seguir tus consejos te prometo.

Ésta es buena coyuntura, porque imagino que es ésta 735 mi prima.

CLAVIJO Como es hoy fiesta, saldrá a misa.

DON SILVESTRE ¡Gran ventura!

De mi primo ésta es la casa.
Ella es; no hay qué dudar.

CLAVIJO Toda la puedes mirar, 740 si es que descubierta pasa.

(Salen MARCELA y DOROTEA, con mantos, y detrás QUIÑONES, con una almohada de terciopelo, y MUÑOZ, que lleva a MARCELA de la mano.)

MARCELA Delantero cargó Ocaña, Muñoz, en el entremés.

MUÑOZ ¿No sabes, señora, que es el mayor cuero de España? 745

MARCELA Desenvainar las espadas, me dio pena.

MUÑOZA Aquellas monas

nunca las sacan tizonas, porque todas son coladas.

Embebe como esponja 750 vino Ocaña, y aun Torrente bebe como hombre valiente, sin melindre y sin lisonja.

MARCELA ¿Don Silvestre queda en casa?

DOROTEASí, señora; y acostado. 755

MARCELAMi primo es tan regalado, que ya de lo honesto pasa.

¿Traes, Dorotea, las Horas?

DOROTEASí, señora.

MUÑOZEEl corazón me dice que hoy el sermón 760 tiene de durar tres horas.

(Al pasar, DON SILVESTRE y CLAVIJO hacen a MARCELA una gran reverencia, y ella, ni más ni menos.)

Pero yo le oiré de modo que fastidio no me pille.

MARCELALuego, ¿no pensáis oílle?

MUÑOZAlguna parte, no todo. 765

(Éntrase MARCELA, MUÑOZ, DOROTEA y QUIÑONES.)

DON SILVESTRE   Ésta es Marcela, mi prima, y el retrato le parece.

CLAVIJO Por cierto que ella merece ser tenida por la prima de hermosura y gentileza, 770 y estaría en perfección grande, si su discreción llega donde su belleza.

DON SILVESTRE   Primo y don Silvestre dijo, y que quedaba acostado, 775
y que era muy regalado: ¿qué infieres desto, Clavijo?

CLAVIJO   De lo que pueda inferir, ingenio no se resuelve;
mas el escudero vuelve, 780 que nos lo podrá decir.

(Vuelve MUÑOZ.)

MUÑOZ   Viejo en pie, largo sermón, temblores de puro frío,
y el estómago vacío,
no llaman la devoción. 785 Aquí, al sol estaré, en tanto que se quiebra la cabeza este fraile, rica pieza, que todos tienen por santo.

CLAVIJO Díganos, señor galán: 790 ¿quién es aquesta señora que entró de la mano ahora?

MUÑOZ ¿Adónde?

CLAVIJO En San Sebastián.

MUÑOZ Es Marcela de Almendárez, doncella la más garrida 795 que vive en toda la corte, más honesta y recogida.
Es su hermano don Antonio de Almendárez. Tiene en Indias un hermano de su padre, 800
rico a las mil maravillas, un hijo del cual en casa se huelga a pierna tendida, esperando si de Roma el Padre Santo le envía 805 licencia para casarse con Marcela, que es su prima.

DON SILVESTRE ¿Y llámase?

MUÑOZ Don Silvestre
de Almendárez, y es de Lima,
y a nuestra casa llegó, 810
puedo decir, en camisa, porque en una gran tormenta echó al mar dos mil valijas llenas de tejuelos de oro finísimo y plata fina, 815

y entre ellas fue mi bayeta, que fue oída y no fue vista.

CLAVIJO ¡Válame Dios! ¡Grave caso!

MUÑOZ Éste que viene podría contaros el caso grave 820 con más luenga narrativa:
que se halló presente a todo,
con gran dolor de su ánima.

DON SILVESTRE Ánima, querréis decir.

MUÑOZ No me importa a mí una guinda 825 pronunciar con dinguindujes.

(Entra TORRENTE.)

TORRENTE Muñoz, ¿en qué está la misa?

MUÑOZ En el misal: ahora empieza.

TORRENTE ¿Pasó por aquí Cristina?

MUÑOZ Entre la cruz creo que andáis, 830
Torrente, y la agua bendita.
Bastan las de vuestro ojos, sin buscar ajenas niñas;
que es Ocaña apitonado
y sabe mucho de esgrima. 835

TORRENTEEn este caso y en otros, ¿mondo yo, por dicha, níspolas?
Y, cuando no, su cabeza tiene de guardar la mía.

(Entra un CARTERO destos que andan por la corte dando las cartas del correo.)

CARTERO¿Don Antonio de Almendárez, 840 saben dónde vive, a dicha, señores?

MUÑOZHombre de bien,
a la vuelta, en una esquina.
¿Son de Roma?

CARTEROSÍ, señor.

MUÑOZLa dispensación sería 845 que aguarda el gran peregrino y la en beldad peregrina.
¿Cuánto es el porte?

CARTEROUn escudo.

MUÑOZ¿Hoste, puto! Vaya y diga al mayordomo de casa 850 que le pague y la reciba.

(Éntrase el CARTERO.)

TORRENTE Agora sí que tendremos gusto abierto y rica jira, regodeos hasta el tope, lautas y limpias comidas. 855 Mudaremos este pelo
de sayal con cebollinas martas.

MUÑOZ Procurad que sean ajunas, que sean más finas.
Con tantos gustos, sin duda, 860 que olvidaréis la tormenta que pasastes, que, a mi cuenta, debió ser en la Bermuda:
que siempre en aquel paraje hay huracanes malignos. 865

TORRENTE Tanto, que de peregrinos hicimos pleito homenaje yo y mi señor don Silvestre; mas yo tengo por lunático quien sube en caballo acuático, 870 cuando le tiene terrestre.
A la sorda y a la muda íbamos muy sin placer, cuando llegamos a ver
la venta de la Barbuda; 875 pero tenía cerradas
las puertas, si viene a mano, y no hay fiarse cristiano de viejas que son barbadas.

DON SILVESTRE Y la canal de Bahama, 880 ¿pasóse sin detrimento?

TORRENTE Otra canal yo no siento que aquesta por do derrama sus dulces licores Baco.

CLAVIJO ¿Dónde se alijó el navío? 885

TORRENTE No le alijó el señor mío, que le tuvo por bellaco;
y más, que espera tener hijos en su prima hermosa.

MUÑOZ La respuesta, aunque graciosa, 890 nos ha de echar a perder.

DON SILVESTRE ¿En el golfo de las Yeguas sería el trance crüel?

TORRENTE Creo que pasamos dél desviados cuatro leguas. 895

CLAVIJO ¿Y dónde se tomó tierra?

TORRENTE En el suelo.

DON SILVESTRE Dice bien.

MUÑOZ Vuestas mercedes nos den licencia.

DON SILVESTREDonaire encierra el peregrino, en verdad: 900 que si aspirara a piloto, que yo le diera mi voto con poca dificultad, porque describe los puertos
y los golfos bravamente. 905

MUÑOZEstimado Torrente
de los pilotos más ciertos que encierra Guadalcanal, Alanís, Jerez, Cazalla.

TORRENTEBaco en sus Indias se halla, 910 pasando por mi canal.

MUÑOZ Si la plática no atajo en ocasión oportuna,
vos os veis, sin duda alguna, Torrente amigo, en trabajo. 915

(Éntranse TORRENTE y MUÑOZ.)

(Salen DON ANTONIO, DON FRANCISCO y DON AMBROSIO (trae un papel en la mano).)

DON AMBROSIO Si desto albricias no dais, o esta verdad no creéis,
ni de mi mal os doléis,
ni de mi bien os holgáis.
Tras la noche triste mía, 920
amarga, lóbrega, oscura, hizo salir la ventura
claro sol y alegre día.

Por las levantadas cumbres de imposibles que temí, 925 mi luz clara salir vi llena de piadosas lumbres, que como nortes me guían
al puerto con dulces modos, y de los peligros todos 930
del mar de amor me desvían.

Ya Marcela ha parecido,
y con esa letra y firma todos mis bienes confirma;
ya, cual veis, soy su marido. 935

DON ANTONIO ¿Sabéis vos que ésta es su mano y firma?

DON AMBROSIO Sin duda alguna.

DON ANTONIO Con tan próspera fortuna, bien es que os mostréis ufano;
pero de su padre sé 940 que la casa en otra parte.

DON AMBROSIO Él ni nadie será parte a que se rompa la fe que con sangre viene escrita en ese papel que veis. 945

DON ANTONIO Haga Amor que la gocéis luengo tiempo en paz bendita.
Tomad, y hágaos buen provecho
vuestra ventura estremada.

DON FRANCISCO La mujer determinada 950

pone a todo trance el pecho.

Pero veis aquí do viene, el padre de vuestra esposa.

DON AMBROSIO Esperarle aquí no es cosa que a mis designios conviene. 955

(Entra el PADRE de Marcela, y vase AMBROSIO, y entra también OCAÑA.)

PADRE Como fue demanda honesta la que os hice, vengo a ver si vino a corresponder
con mi intención la respuesta, que ya en público la pido: 960 que no quiero que rodeos encubran que mis deseos no son de padre advertido.

Daré al señor don Antonio..., deste modo lo diré, 965
...mi alma, pues le daré
a mi hija en matrimonio.

En ella le daré esposa
bien nacida, cual se sabe, y aun extremo adonde cabe 970
el mayor de ser hermosa;
una niña a quien apenas el sol ni el viento han tocado;
un armiño aprisionado con religiosas cadenas; 975 una que son sus cuidados de simple y tierna doncella;
y ofrezco en dote con ella de renta dos mil ducados.

DON ANTONIO Con mucho gusto, señor 980 don Pedro Osorio, hiciera lo que tan bien me estuviera, mirando a vuestro valor;

mas la señora Marcela ha ganado por la mano 985
a vuestro intento tan sano, que en honrarla se desvela:
ella se ha escogido esposo, que es el que salió de aquí.

PADRE ¿Mi hija Marcela?

DON FRANCISCO Sí. 990

PADRE Padre triste, viejo astroso, ¿qué escuchas? ¿Cómo es aquesto?

DON FRANCISCO Una cédula le ha dado de su mano, donde ha echado de lo que es amor el resto. 995

PADRE ¿Será falsa?

DON FRANCISCO Podría ser;
pero imagino que no.

PADRE Pues ¿para qué os la mostró?

DON ANTONIO Turba el sentido el placer.

PADRE Primero que él la vea, 1000

primero que él la toque, primero que la goce,
ha de perder la vida, o yo la mía.
¡Que venga un embustero, con sus manos lavadas, 1005
y no limpias por esto,
y el alma os robe y saque de las carnes...!
Mitades son del alma los hijos; mas las hijas son mitad más entera, 1010 por cuyo honor el padre ha de ser lince.

OCAÑA Por Cristo benditísimo, que la razón le sobra
por cima los tejados
a este pobre señor, de quien me duelo. 1015 ¡Que aquestos pisaverdes, aquestos tiquimiquis
de encrespados copetes, se anden a pescar bobas con embustes...!

DON ANTONIO Majadero, ¿qué es esto? 1020

OCAÑA Yo callo y me arrepiento de lo dicho.

DON ANTONIO Mostrenco,
¿de cuándo acá os metéis vos en docena?

OCAÑA ¡Que no pueda hacer baza yo con este mi amo, 1025
y si a las discreciones jugamos, quince y falta puedo darle...!

PADRE No os quiero pedir nada, ni es razón que os la pida, hijo, que, si lo fuérades, 1030 remozara mis canas y mis días.
¡Hijas inobedientes, que al curso de los años
anticipáis el gusto,
destrúyaos Dios, los cielos os maldigan! 1035

(Éntrase el PADRE.)

DON ANTONIO ¡Mi gozo está en el pozo!

DON FRANCISCO¿Y si es falsa la cédula?

DON ANTONIO Aunque lo sea, amigo, ya el honor titubea de Marcela.
Cuanto más, que se sabe 1040 que es bueno don Ambrosio, y no levantaría
tan grande testimonio.

DON FRANCISCO Así lo creo.

DON ANTONIO Doncella de escritorios, de públicas audiencias, 1045
de pruebas y testigos,
no es para mí.

OCAÑA ¡Sentencia aristotélica!

(Entran TORRENTE y CARDENIO.)

TORRENTE ¿A cuándo, cuitado, aguardas?
¿Qué diligencias has hecho que te sean de provecho? 1050 ¿A qué esperas? ¿A qué tardas?
Lugar tienes y ocasión para rogar y fingir.

CARDENIO Yo tengo para morir, no para hablar, corazón. 1055

TORRENTE Tu silencio ha de ser causa de toda tu desventura.

CARDENIO Su honestidad y hermosura ponen en mi intento pausa.
Al cabo habré de morir 1060 callando.

TORRENTE ¡Qué simple amante!

CARDENIO Medroso, mas no ignorante.

TORRENTE Todo lo puedes decir.

(Entran MARCELA, DOROTEA, MUÑOZ y CRISTINA, y QUIÑONES.)

MARCELA La torpeza en vos se halla; caminad, que os valga Dios. 1065

OCAÑAUno a uno, dos a dos, juntado se ha gran batalla.

(Entran SILVESTRE y CLAVIJO.)

DON SILVESTRE ¿Un don Silvestre está aquí que tiene por sobrenombre Almendárez?

CARDENIOGentilhombre, 1070 yo soy. ¿Qué queréis de mí?

DON SILVESTRE Dadme, señor, vuestros pies, que soy grande servidor
de vuestro padre.

CARDENIOSeñor,
cortés, mas no tan cortés. 1075

DON SILVESTRE Diez mil pesos ensayados, con vos, me escribe mi padre, me envía, y tres mil mi madre.

TORRENTEPesos serán bien pesados.
Catorce mil se tragó 1080 el mar, como soy testigo.

DON SILVESTRETrece mil son los que digo.

TORRENTECatorce mil digo yo.

CARDENIO Es verdad; yo recibí, señor, todo ese dinero; 1085 pero el mar...

CLAVIJO Aquí no hay pero.

DON SILVESTRE Yo responderé por mí; callad vos. También me envía de vuestra prima un retrato.

TORRENTE Sorbiósele el mar ingrato 1090 sin guardarle cortesía.

Pensamos que se amansara tocándole su figura,
y por respeto y mesura
en su lecho se acostara; 1095
pero fue tan mal mirado, que alzó montes sobre montes, y escondió los horizontes
y aun la faz del sol dorado.

MARCELA No era reliquia el retrato. 1100

CLAVIJO No; pero si él le arrojara con devoción, se mostrara manso el mar y el cielo grato.

TORRENTE Todo esto en la memoria no está, Muñoz, que nos diste, 1105
y si nos caen en el chiste, nuestra desdicha es notoria.

DON SILVESTRE ¿Vuesa merced tiene, acaso, otro hermano?

CARDENIO Sí, señor.

MUÑOZ No, señor. ¡Oh grande error! 1110
¡Mil sustos de muerte paso!

CLAVIJO ¿Cómo se llama?

TORRENTE Don Juan
de Almendárez.

DON SILVESTRE ¿Qué edad tiene?

TORRENTE Aquella que le conviene.

OCAÑA Examinándoles van, 1115
y yo no sé para qué.

DON SILVESTRE ¿Tocaron en la Bermuda?

TORRENTE Ya he dicho desa Barbuda otra vez lo que yo sé.

DON SILVESTRE No ingenio, mas ignorancia, 1120 es fabricar la maldad,

de quien está la verdad,
no dos dedos de distancia.

Yo soy, señor don Antonio, vuestro primo verdadero, 1125 y de ser éste embustero darán claro testimonio mis papeles y el retrato de mi señora Marcela.

MUÑOZ ¡El alma se me revela! 1130
¡Si hoy no me muero, me mato!

DON SILVESTRE Dadme, señora, esos pies por vuestro primo y esposo.

DON FRANCISCO ¡Éste es caso prodigioso!

MARCELA Cortés, mas no tan cortés. 1135

TORRENTE Tres días ha, desventurado, que, por no querer hablar, te has de ver, a bien librar, en galeras y azotado.

Embistiérasla, malino, 1140
y no aguardaras a verte en la desdichada suerte
y en el traje peregrino.

DON FRANCISCO ¿Quién eres?

CARDENIO Un estudiante.

TORRENTEY yo su capigorrón, 1145 que tengo de socarrón
harto más que de ignorante.

CARDENIO Solicitóme el amor a entrar en esta conquista a la sombra de una lista... 1150

TORRENTEQue la escribió este traidor de Muñoz.

MUÑOZ¡Dios sea conmigo!
¡Llegó de Muñoz el fin!

DON ANTONIO¡Ah escudero viejo y ruin!

OCAÑA Eso pido y eso digo. 1155

CARDENIO Estos soles sobrehumanos, por quien mi mal crece y mengua, pusieron freno a mi lengua, como esposas a mis manos.

En los rayos de sus ojos 1160
se despuntaban los míos, y nunca mis desvaríos
llegaron a darla enojos.

Si me queréis castigar, primero advertid, señores, 1165 que los yerros por amores son dignos de perdonar.

DON ANTONIO En albricias, el perdón te diera, mas ten aviso que el Pontífice no quiso 1170 conceder dispensación

entre mi primo y mi hermana.

MARCELA Casamientos de parientes tienen mil inconvenientes.

CLAVIJO El favor todo lo allana. 1175 Yo iré a Roma, y la traeré.

DON SILVESTRE Yo, aunque primo verdadero, ni quedarme en casa quiero,
ni poner en ella el pie:
que la honra de mi prima 1180
ha de ir contino adelante, sin que haya otro estudiante que la asombre o que la oprima.

CRISTINA ¿No ha de haber un casamiento en esta casa jamás? 1185

OCAÑA Tú, Cristina, le harás, si te ajustas a mi intento.

CRISTINA Yo me ajusto al de Quiñones.

QUIÑONES Pues yo no me ajusto al tuyo.

CRISTINA ¿Tú, para no ser mi cuyo, 1190 hallas razón?

QUIÑONESY razones.

CRISTINA Ocaña, si me deseas, vesme aquí.

OCAÑA No es mi linaje tal, que lo que arroja un paje escoja yo, ni tal creas. 1195

TORRENTE A no estar temiendo aquí la penca de algún verdugo, ese arrojado mendrugo
le tomara para mí.

CRISTINA ¡Malos años y mal mes! 1200

TORRENTE Acordársete debía, facinorosa arpía,
del pañuelo y entremés.

MARCELA Con licencia de mi hermano y de mi primo, yo quiero 1205 sentenciar al escudero
y al gran embustero indiano.

Trocará la mano el juego
a cuyas leyes me arrimo:
quedarse ha en casa mi primo, 1210
y él se salga della luego.

Lleve su vergüenza a cuestras, que es la venganza mayor que puede tomar Amor
de invenciones como aquí. 1215

A Muñoz le doy la pena que da el arrepentimiento
y el destierro.

MUÑOZ Yo bien siento
ser ángel el que condena.

    Mi alma no se alborozaba 1220 con sentencia que es tan pía, pues ve que yo merecía
azotes, si no corozas.

OCAÑA Bien haya la lacayuna humilde y valiente raza, 1225 pues que traiciones no traza para subir su fortuna.

    Junto a la caballeriza,
y al olor de su caballo, con sus bríndez, siento y hallo 1230 que sus gustos soleniza.

CRISTINA De Quiñones desechada, y de Ocaña no escogida, aún no he de quedar perdida, porque espero ser ganada. 1235

    Hace quien se desespera un grandísimo pecado,
y es refrán muy bien pensado que tal vendrá que tal quiera.

DOROTEA Yo sola soy sin ventura. 1240
Es tan corto el hado mío, que no ha alcanzado mi brío lo que impide la hermosura.

    Nunca he sido requebrada, ni sé amor a lo que sabe; 1245

mas esto y mucho más cabe en la ventura quebrada.

TORRENTE Siento en aqueste desastre sólo el perder a Cristina.

MUÑOZ Camina, Muñoz, camina, 1250 pobre, sin bayeta y sastre.

(Éntrese.)

DOROTEA Sin Marcela, don Antonio, se entra amargo el corazón.

(Éntrese.)

DON SILVESTREY yo sin dispensación.

(Éntrese.)

CRISTINA Cristina sin matrimonio. 1255

(Éntrese.)

CLAVIJO Yo seguiré de mi amigo los pasos, medio contento.

(Éntrese.)

DON FRANCISCO Yo alabaré el pensamiento de don Antonio, a quien sigo.

(Éntrase.)

MARCELA Yo quedaré en mi entereza, 1260
no procurando imposibles, sino casos convenientes
a nuestra naturaleza.

(Éntrase.)

OCAÑA Esto en este cuento pasa:
los unos por no querer, 1265
los otros por no poder, al fin ninguno se casa.
Desta verdad conocida
pido me den testimonio:
que acaba sin matrimonio 1270
la comedia Entretenida.

(Éntrase.)

Jornada primera

Entran PEDRO DE URDEMALAS, en hábito de mozo de labrador, y CLEMENTE, como zagal.

CLEMENTE De tu ingenio, Pedro amigo, y nuestra amistad se puede fiar más de lo que digo, porque él al mayor excede, y della el mundo es testigo; 5 así, que es de calidad
tu ingenio y nuestra amistad, que, sin buscar otro medio, en ambos pongo el remedio de toda mi enfermedad. 10

Esa hija de tu amo,
la que se llama Clemencia,
a quien yo Justicia llamo,
la que huye mi presencia, cual del cazador el gamo; 15 ésa, a quien naturaleza dio el extremo de belleza que has visto, me tiene tal, que llega al punto mi mal do llega el de su lindeza. 20

Cuando pensé que ya estaba algo crédula al cuidado que en mis ansias le mostraba, yo no sé quién la ha trocado de cordera en tigre brava, 25 ni sé yo por qué mentiras sus mansedumbres en iras ha vuelto, ni sé, ¡oh Amor!, por qué con tanto rigor contra mí tus flechas tiras. 30

PEDRO Bobear; dime, en efeto,
lo que quieres.

CLEMENTE Pedro, hermano, que me libres deste aprieto con algún consejo sano
o ayuda de hombre discreto. 35

PEDRO ¿Han llegado tus deseos a más que dulces floreos, o has tocado en el lugar donde Amor suele fundar el centro de sus empleos? 40

CLEMENTE Pues sabes que soy pastor, entona más bajo el punto,
habla con menos primor.

PEDRO Que si eres, te pregunto, Amadís o Galaor. 45

CLEMENTE No soy sino Antón Clemente, y andas, Pedro, impertinente en hablar por tal camino.

PEDRO Aparte.

Pan por pan, vino por vino, se ha de hablar con esta gente. 50 ¿Haste visto con Clemencia a solas o en parte oscura, donde ella te dio licencia de alguna desenvoltura que encargase la conciencia? 55

CLEMENTE Pedro, el cielo me confunda, y la tierra aquí me hunda,
y el aire jamás me aliente, si no es un amor decente en quien el mío se funda. 60

Del padre el rico caudal el mío pobre desprecia
por no ser al suyo igual, y entiendo que sólo precia el de Llorente y Pascual, 65 que son ricos, y es razón que se lleve el corazón tras sí de cualquier mujer, no el querer, sino el tener del oro la posesión. 70

Y, demás desto, Clemencia a mi amor no corresponde por no sé qué impertinencia que le han dicho, y así, esconde de mis ojos su presencia; 75

y si tú, Pedro, no haces de nuestras riñas las paces, ya por perdido me cuento.

PEDROO no tendré entendimiento, o he de trazar tus solaces. 80

Si sale, como imagino, hoy mi amo por alcalde,
te digo, como adivino,
que hoy no te trujo de balde a hablar conmigo el destino. 85

Tú verás cómo te entrego en holganza y en sosiego el bien que interés te veda, y que al dártelo preceda promesa, dádiva y ruego. 90 Y, en tanto que esto se traza, vuelve los ojos y mira los lazos con que te enlaza Amor, y por quien suspira Febo, que allí se disfraza; 95 mira a los rubios cabellos de Clemencia, y mira entre ellos al lascivo Amor jugando, y cómo se va admirando

por ver que se mira en ellos. 100 Benita viene con ella, su prima, cual si viniese con el sol alguna estrella que no menos luz nos diese que el mismo sol: tal es ella. 105 Clemente, ten advertencia que, si llega aquí Clemencia, te le humilles: yo a Benita, como a una cosa bendita le pienso hacer reverencia. 110 Dile con lengua curiosa cosas de que no disguste,
y ten por cierta una cosa:
que no hay mujer que no guste de oírse llamar hermosa. 115 Liberal desta moneda te muestra; no tengas queda la lengua en sus alabanzas, verás volver las mudanzas de la variable rueda. 120

(Entran CLEMENCIA y BENITA, zagalas, con sus cantarillas, como que van a la fuente.)

BENITA ¿Por qué te vuelves, Clemencia?

CLEMENCIA ¿Por qué me vuelvo, Benita?
Por no verme en la presencia de quien la salud me quita y me da mortal dolencia; 125 por no ver a un insolente que tiene bien diferente de la condición el nombre.

BENITA Apostaré que es el hombre por quien lo dices Clemente. 130

CLEMENTE ¿Soy basilisco, pastora, o soy alguna fantasma
que se aparece a deshora, con que el sentido se pasma
y el ánimo se empeora? 135

CLEMENCIA No eres sino un parlero, adulador, lisonjero
y, sin porqué, jatancioso, en verdades mentiroso
y en mentiras verdadero. 140 ¿Cuándo te he dado yo prenda que de mi amor te asegure tanto, que claro se entienda que, aunque el amor me procure, no hayas temor que te ofenda? 145 Esto dijiste a Jacinta, y le mostraste una cinta encarnada que te di,
y en tu rostro se ve aquí aquesta verdad distinta. 150

CLEMENTE Clemencia, si yo he dicho cosa alguna que no vaya a servirte encaminada, venga de la más próspera fortuna a la más abatida y desastrada; si siempre sobre el cerco de la luna 155

no has sido por mi lengua levantada, cuando quiera decirte mi querella, mudo silencio el cielo infunda en ella;
si mostré tal, la fe en que yo pensaba, por la ley amorosa, de salvarme, 160 cuando a la vida el término se acaba, por ella entonces venga a condenarme;
si dije tal, jamás halle en su aljaba flechas de plomo Amor con que tirarme, si no es a ti, y a mí con las doradas, 165
a helarte y abrasarme encaminadas.

PEDRO Clemencia, tu padre viene, y con la vara de alcalde.

CLEMENCIA No la ha alcanzado de balde; que su salmorejo tiene. 170 Hermano Clemente, adiós.

CLEMENTE Pues, ¿cómo quedamos?

CLEMENCIA Bien.
Benita, si quieres, ven.

BENITA Sí, pues venimos las dos.

(Éntrase BENITA y CLEMENCIA.)

PEDRO Vete en buen hora, Clemente, 175 y quédese el cargo a mí de lo que he de hacer por ti.

CLEMENTE Adiós, pues.

PEDRO Él te contente.

(Salen MARTÍN CRESPO, alcalde, padre de CLEMENCIA, y SANCHO MACHO y DIEGO TARUGO, regidores.)

TARUGO Plácenos, Martín Crespo, del suceso.
Desechéisla por otra de brocado, 180 sin que jamás un voto os salga avieso.

ALCALDE Diego Tarugo, lo que me ha costado aquesta vara, sólo Dios lo sabe, y mi vino, y capones, y ganado.
El que no te conoce, ése te alabe, 185 deseo de mandar.

SANCHO Yo aqueso digo,
que sé que en él todo cuidado cabe.
Véala yo en poder de mi enemigo, vara que es por presentes adquirida.

ALCALDE Pues ahora la tiene un vuestro amigo. 190

SANCHO De vos, Crespo, será tan bien regida, que no la doble dádiva ni ruego.

ALCALDE No, ¡juro a mí!, mientras tuviere vida.

Cuando mujer me informe, estaré ciego;
al ruego del hidalgo, sordo y mudo; 195 que a la severidad todo me entrego.

TARUGO Ya veo en vuestro tiempo, y no lo dudo, sentencias de Salmón, el rey discreto, que el niño dividió con hierro agudo.

ALCALDE Al menos, de mi parte yo prometo 200 de arrimarme a la ley en cuanto pueda sin alterar un mínimo decreto.

SANCHO Como yo lo deseo, así suceda;
y adiós.

ALCALDE Fortuna os tenga, Sancho Macho, en la empinada cumbre de su rueda. 205

TARUGO Sin que el temor o amor os ponga empacho, juzgad, Crespo, terrible y brevemente:
que la tardanza en toda cosa tacho;
y a Dios quedad.

ALCALDE En fin, sois buen pariente.

(Éntranse SANCHO MACHO y DIEGO TARUGO.)

Pedro, que escuchando estás, 210 ¿cómo de mi buen suceso el parabién no me das?
Ya soy alcalde, y confieso que lo seré por demás, si tú no me das favor 215

y muestras algún primor con que juzgue rectamente;
que te tengo por prudente, más que a un cura y a un doctor.

PEDRO Es aqueso tan verdad, 220 cual lo dirá la experiencia, porque con facilidad luego os mostraré una ciencia que os dé nombre y calidad.

Llegaráos Licurgo apenas, 225
y la celebrada Atenas callará sus doctas leyes;
envidiaros han los reyes
y las escuelas más buenas.

Yo os meteré en la capilla 230 dos docenas de sentencias que al mundo den maravilla, todas con sus diferencias,
civiles, o de rencilla;
y la que primero a mano 235 os viniere, está bien llano que no ha de haber más que ver.

ALCALDE Desde hoy más, Pedro, has de ser no mi mozo, mas mi hermano.

Ven, y mostrarásme el modo 240 cómo yo ponga en efeto
lo que has dicho, en parte o en todo.

PEDRO Pues más cosas te prometo.

ALCALDE A cualquiera me acomodo.

(Éntranse el ALCALDE y PEDRO.)

(Salen otra vez SANCHO MACHO y TARUGO.)

SANCHO Mirad, Tarugo: bien siento 245 que, aunque el parabién le distes a Crespo de su contento, otro paramal tuvistes
guardado en el pensamiento; porque, en efeto, es mancilla 250 que se rija aquesta villa por la persona más necia que hay desde Flandes a Grecia y desde Egipto a Castilla.

TARUGO Hoy mostrará la experiencia, 255
buen regidor Sancho Macho, adónde llega la ciencia de Crespo, a quien yo no tacho hasta la primera audiencia;
y, pues agora ha de ser, 260 soy, Macho, de parecer que le oigamos.

SANCHO Sea así;
aunque tengo para mí
que un simple en él se ha de ver.

(Entran LAGARTIJA y HORNACHUELOS, labradores.)

HORNACHUELOS ¿De quién, señores, sabremos 265 si el alcalde en casa está?

TARUGOAquí los dos le atendemos.

LAGARTIJASeñal es que aquí saldrá.

SANCHOTan cierta, que ya le vemos.

(Salen el ALCALDE y REDONDO, escribano, y PEDRO.)

ALCALDE ¡Oh valientes regidores! 270

REDONDOSiéntense vuestas mercedes.

ALCALDESin ceremonia, señores.

TARUGOEn cortés, exceder puedes
a los cortesés mayores.

ALCALDE Siéntese aquí el escribano, 275 y a mi izquierda y diestra mano los regidores estén;
y tú, Pedro, estarás bien
a mis espaldas.

PEDROEs llano.

Aquí, en tu capilla, están 280
las sentencias suficientes a cuantos pleitos vendrán, aunque nunca pares mientes
a la relación que harán;

y si alguna no estuviere, 285
a tu asesor te refiere, que yo lo seré de modo que te saque bien de todo, y sea lo que se fuere.

REDONDO ¿Quieren algo, señores?

LAGARTIJASí queríamos. 290

REDONDOPues digan: que aquí está el señor alcalde, que les hará justicia rectamente.

ALCALDEPerdónemelo Dios lo que ahora digo, y no me sea tomado por soberbia:
tan tiestamenta pienso hacer justicia, 295 como si fuese un sonador romano.

REDONDOSenador, Martín Crespo.

ALCALDEAllá va todo.
Digan su pleito apriesa y brevemente:
que apenas me le habrán dicho, en mi ánima, cuando les dé sentencia rota y justa. 300

REDONDORecta, señor alcalde.

ALCALDEAllá va todo.

HORNACHUELOSPrestóme Lagartija tres reales, volvíle dos, la deuda queda en uno,

y él dice que le debo cuatro justos.
Éste es el pleito: brevedad, y dije. 305 ¿Es aquesto verdad, buen Lagartija?

LAGARTIJA Verdad; pero yo hallo por mi cuenta, o que yo soy un asno, o que Hornachuelos me queda a deber cuatro.

ALCALDE ¡Bravo caso!

LAGARTIJA No hay más en nuestro pleito, y me rezumo 310
en lo que sentenciaré el señor Crespo.

REDONDO Rezumo por resumo, allá va todo.

ALCALDE ¿Qué decís vos a esto, Hornachuelos?

HORNACHUELOS No hay qué decir; yo en todo me arremeto al señor Martín Crespo.

REDONDO Me remito, 315 ¡pese a mi abuelo!

ALCALDE Dejadle que arremeta; ¿qué se os da a vos, Redondo?

REDONDO A mí, nonada.

ALCALDE Pedro, sácame, amigo, una sentencia desa capilla: la que está más cerca.

REDONDO ¿Antes de ver el pleito, hay ya sentencia? 320

ALCALDE Ahí se podrá ver quién es Callejas.

PEDRO Léase esta sentencia, y punto en boca.

REDONDO «En el pleito que tratan .N. y .F.»

PEDRO Zutano con Fulano significan la .N. con la .F. entre dos puntos. 325

REDONDO Así es verdad. Y digo que «en el pleito que trata este Fulano con Zutano, que debo condenar, fallo y condeno al dicho puerco de Zutano a muerte, porque fue matador de la criatura 330 del ya dicho Fulano...» Yo no atino qué disparate es éste deste puerco y de tantos Fulanos y Zutanos, ni sé cómo es posible que esto cuadre ni esquine con el pleito destes hombres. 335

ALCALDE Redondo está en lo cierto, Pedro amigo, mete la mano y saca otra sentencia;
podría ser que fuese de provecho.

PEDRO Yo, que soy asesor vuestro, me atrevo de dar sentencia luego cual convenga. 340

LAGARTIJA Por mí, mas que la dé un jumento nuevo.

SANCHO Digo que el asesor es estremado.

HORNACHUELO Sentencia norabuena.

ALCALDE Pedro, vaya, que en tu magín mi honra deposito.

PEDRO Deposite primero Hornachuelos, 345 para mí, el asesor, doce reales.

HORNACHUELO Pues sola la mitad importa el pleito.

PEDRO Así es verdad: que Lagartija, el bueno, tres reales de a dos os dio prestados, y éstos le volvistes dos sencillos; 350
y por aquesta cuenta debéis cuatro, y no, cual decís vos, no más de uno.

LAGARTIJA Ello es así, sin que le falte cosa.

HORNACHUELO No lo puedo negar; vencido quedo, y pagaré los doce con los cuatro. 355

REDONDO Ensúciome en Catón y en Justiniano, ¡oh Pedro de Urde, montañés famoso!, que así lo muestra el nombre y el ingenio.

HORNACHUELO Yo voy por el dinero, y voy corrido.

LAGARTIJA Yo me contento con haber vencido. 360

(Éntranse LAGARTIJA y HORNACHUELOS.)

(Salen CLEMENTE y CLEMENCIA, como pastor y pastora, embozados.)

CLEMENTE Permítase que hablemos embozados ante tan justiciero ayuntamiento.

ALCALDE Mas que habléis en un costal atados;
porque a oír, y no a ver, aquí me siento.

CLEMENTE Los siglos que renombre de dorados 365 les dio la antigüedad con justo intento, ya se ven en los nuestros, pues que vemos en ellos de justicia los extremos.
Vemos un Crespo alcalde...

ALCALDE Dios os guarde.
Dejad aquesas lonjas a una parte... 370

REDONDO Lonjas, decir quiso.

ALCALDE Y, porque es tarde, de vuestro intento en breve nos dad parte.

CLEMENTE Con verdadera lengua, cierto alarde hace de lo que quiero parte a parte.

ALCALDEDecid: que ni soy sordo, ni lo he sido. 375

CLEMENTE Desde mis tiernos años, de mi fatal estrella conducido,
sin las nubes de engaños, el sol que en este velo está escondido miré para adorallo, 380
porque esto hizo el que llegó a miralle.

Sus rayos se imprimieron en lo mejor del alma, de tal modo, que en sí la convirtieron:
todo soy fuego, yo soy fuego todo, 385
y, con todo, me yelo, si el sol me falta que me eclipsa un velo.

Grata correspondencia
tuvo mi justo y mi cabal deseo:
que Amor me dio licencia 390 a hacer de mi alma rico empleo:
en fin, esta pastora,
así como la adoro, ella me adora.

A hurto de su padre, que es de su libertad duro tirano, 395
que ella no tiene madre, de esposa me entregó la fe y la mano;
y agora, temerosa
del padre, no confiesa ser mi esposa.

Teme que el padre, rico, 400 se afrente de mi humilde medianía, porque hace el pellico
al monje en esta edad de tiranía.
Él me sobra en riqueza;
pero no en la que da naturaleza. 405

Como él, yo soy tan bueno;
tan rico, no, y a su riqueza igualo con estar siempre ajeno de todo vicio perezoso y malo; y, entre buenos, es fuero 410 que valga la virtud más que el dinero.

Pido que ante ti vuelva
a confirmar el sí de ser mi esposa, y en serlo se resuelva, sin estar de su padre temerosa, 415 pues que no aparta el hombre a los que Dios juntó en su gracia y nombre.

ALCALDE ¿Qué respondéis a esto, sol que entre nubes se cubrió a deshora?

CLEMENTE Su proceder honesto 420 la tendrá muda, por mi mal, agora;
pero señales puede
hacer con que su intento claro quede.

ALCALDE ¿Sois su esposa, doncella?

PEDRO La cabeza bajó: señal bien clara 425 que no lo niega ella.

SANCHO Pues, ¿en qué, Martín Crespo, se repara?

ALCALDE En que de mi capilla se saque la sentencia, y en oílla.
Pedro, sácala al punto. 430

PEDRO Yo sé que ésta saldrá pintiparada, porque, a lo que barrunto, siempre fue la verdad acreditada,
por atajo o rodeo;

y esta sentencia lo dirá que leo. 435
(Saca un papel de la capilla, y léele PEDRO.) «Yo, Martín Crespo, alcalde, determino que sea la pollina del pollino».

REDONDO Vaso de suertes es vuestra capilla, y ésta que ha sido agora pronunciada, aunque es para entre bestias, maravilla, 440
y aun da muestras de ser cosa pensada.

CLEMENTE El alma en Dios, y en tierra la rodilla, la vuestra besaré, como a estremada coluna que sustenta el edificio donde moran las ciencias y el jüicio. 445

ALCALDE Puesto que redundará esta sentencia, hijo, en haberos dado el alma mía, porque no es otra cosa mi Clemencia, me fuera de gran gusto y alegría.
Y alégrenos agora la presencia 450 vuestra, que está en razón y en cortesía, pues ya lo desleído y sentenciado será, sin duda alguna, ejecutado.

CLEMENCIA Pues, con ese seguro, padre mío, el velo quito y a tus pies me postro. 455 Mal haces en usar deste desvío,
pues soy tu hija, y no espantable monstruo.
Tú has dado la sentencia a tu albedrío, y, si es injusta, es bien que te dé en rostro;
pero, si justa es, haz que se apruebe, 460 con que a debida ejecución se lleve.

ALCALDE Lo que escribí, escribí; bien dices, hija:

y así, a Clemente admito por mi hijo,
y el mundo deste proceder colija que más por ley que por pasión me rijo. 465

SANCHONo hay alma aquí que no se regocija de vuestro no pensado regocijo.

TARUGONi lengua que a Martín Crespo no alabe por hombre ingeniosísimo y que sabe.

PEDRO Nuestro amo, habéis de saber 470 que es merced particular la que el cielo quiere hacer cuando se dispone a dar al hombre buena mujer;
y corre el mismo partido 475
ella, si le da marido que sea en todo varón,
afable de condición,
más que arrojado, sufrido.

De Clemencia y de Clemente 480 se hará una junta dichosa, que os alegre y os contente, y quien lleve vuestra honrosa estirpe de gente en gente, y esta noche de San Juan 485 las bodas celebrarán
con el suyo y vuestro gusto.

ALCALDESeñales de hombre muy justo todas tus cosas me dan;
pero la boda otro día 490 se hará: que es noche ocupada de general alegría
aquésta.

CLEMENTE No importa nada, siendo ya Clemencia mía:
que el gusto del corazón 495 consiste en la posesión mucho más que en la esperanza.

PEDRO ¡Oh, cuántas cosas alcanza la industria y sagacidad!

ALCALDE Vamos, que hay mucho que hacer 500
esta noche.

TARUGO Sea en buen hora.

CLEMENTE Ni qué esperar ni temer me queda, pues por señora y esposa te vengo a ver.

TARUGO ¡Bien escogistes, Clemencia! 505

CLEMENCIA Al que ordenó la sentencia las gracias se den, y al cielo.

PEDRO De que he encargado, recelo, algún tanto mi conciencia.

(Éntranse todos, y, al entrarse, sale PASCUAL y tira del sayo a PEDRO, y quédanse los dos en el teatro, y tras PASCUAL entra un SACRISTÁN.)

PASCUAL Pedro amigo.

PEDRO ¿Qué hay, Pascual? 510

No pienses que me descuido del remedio de tu mal;
antes, en él tanto cuido,
que casi no pienso en al.

Esta noche de San Juan 515 ya tú sabes cómo están del lugar las mozas todas esperando de sus bodas

las señales que les dan.

Benita, el cabello al viento, 520

y el pie en una bacía
llena de agua, y oído atento, ha de esperar hasta el día señal de su casamiento;

sé tú primero en nombrarte 525

en su calle, de tal arte, que claro entienda tu nombre.

PASCUAL Por excelencia, el renombre de industrioso pueden darte.

Yo lo haré así: queda en paz; 530

mas, después de aquesto hecho, tú lo que faltare haz, ansí no abrasa tu pecho
el fuego de aquel rapaz.

PEDRO Así será; ve con Dios. 535

(Vase PASCUAL.)

SACRISTÁN Por ligero que seáis vos, yo os saldré por el atajo, y buscaré sin trabajo

la industria de ambos a dos.

(Éntrase el SACRISTÁN. Sale MALDONADO, conde de gitanos; y adviértase que todos los que hicieren figura de gitanos, han de hablar ceceoso.)

MALDONADO Pedro, ceñor, Dioz te guarde. 540 ¿Qué te haz hecho, que he venido a buzcarte aquezta tarde, por ver ci eztás ya atrevido,
o todavía cobarde?
Quiero decir, ci te agrada 545
el cer nueztra camarada, nueztro amigo y compañero, como me haz dicho.

PEDROSí quiero.

MALDONADO¿Reparaz en algo?

PEDROEn nada.

MALDONADO Mira, Pedro: nueztra vida 550
ez zuelta, libre, curioza, ancha, holgazana, estendida, a quien nunca falta coza que el deceo buzque y pida.
Danoz el herbozo zuelo 555 lechoz; círvenoz el cielo
de pabellón dondequiera;
ni noz quema el zol, ni altera
el fiero rigor del yelo.

El máz cerrado vergel 560
laz primiciaz noz ofrece de cuanto bueno haya en él;
y apenaz ce vee o parece
la albilla o la mozcatel, que no eztá luego en la mano 565
del atrevido gitano,
zahorí del fruto ajeno,
de induztia y ánimo lleno, ágil, prezto, zuelto y zano.

Gozamoz nuestroz amorez 570 librez del dezazociego
que dan loz competidorez, calentándonoz zu fuego
cin celoz y cin temorez.

Y agora eztá una mochacha 575 que con nadie no ce empacha en nueztro rancho, tan bella, que no halla en qué ponella la envidia ni aun una tacha.

Una gitana, hurtada, 580 la trujo; pero ella es tal, que, por hermosa y honrada, muestra que es de principal y rica gente engendrada.

Ezta, Pedro, cerá tuya, 585 aunque máz el yugo huya, que rinde la libertad,
cuando de nueztra amiztad lo acordado ce concluya.

PEDRO Porque veas, Maldonado, 590 lo que me mueve el intento a querer mudar de estado, quiero que me estés atento un rato.

MALDONADO De muy buen grado.

PEDRO Por lo que te he de contar, 595 vendrás en limpio a sacar si para gitano soy.

MALDONADO Atento eztaré y eztoy;
bien puez ya comenzar.

PEDRO Yo soy hijo de la piedra, 600 que padre no conocí:
desdicha de las mayores que a un hombre pueden venir.
No sé dónde me criaron;
pero sé decir que fui 605 destos niños de dotrina sarnosos que hay por ahí.
Allí, con dieta y azotes, que siempre sobran allí, aprendí las oraciones, 610
y a tener hambre aprendí;
aunque también con aquesto supe leer y escribir,
y supe hurtar la limosna,
y desculparme y mentir. 615 No me contentó esta vida cuando algo grande me vi, y en un navío de flota
con todo mi cuerpo di, donde serví de grumete, 620
y a las Indias fui y volví, vestido de pez y anjeo,
y sin un maravedí.
Temí con los huracanes,
y con las calmas temí, 625
y espantóme la Bermuda

cuando su costa corrí.
Dejé el comer del bizcocho con dos dedos de hollín, y el beber vino del diablo 630
antes que de San Martín.
Pisé otra vez las riberas del rico Guadalquivir,
y entreguéme a sus crecientes, y a Sevilla me volví, 635
donde al rateruelo oficio me acomodé bajo y vil
de mozo de la esportilla, que el tiempo lo pidió así;
en el cual, sin ser yo cura, 640 muy muchos diezmos cogí, haciendo salva a mil cosas que me condenan aquí.
En fin: por cierta desgracia, el oficio tuvo fin, 645
y comenzó el peligroso
que suelen llamar mandil.
En él supe de la hampa
la vida larga y cerril, formar pendencias del viento, 650
y con el soplo herir.
Mi amo, que era tan bravo como ligero pasquín, dio asalto a una faldriquera a lo callado y sutil; 655 con las manos en la masa le cogió un cierto alguacil, y él quiso ser en un potro confesor y no martir;
mártir, digo, Maldonado. 660

MALDONADO En eso, ¿qué me va a mí?
Pronunciad como os dé gusto,
pues que no habláis latín.

PEDROPalmeóle las espaldas contra su gusto el bochín, 665 de lo cual quedó mohíno, según que dijo un malsín.
A las casas movedizas le llevaron, y yo vi
arañarse la Escalanta 670
y llorar la Becerril.
Yo, viéndome sin el fieltro de mi andaluz paladín, de mandil a mochilero
un salto forzoso di. 675 Deparóme la fortuna un soldado espadachín
de los que van hasta el puerto,
y se vuelven desde allí.
Las boletas rescatadas, 680
las gallinas que cogí, si no las perdona el cielo, ¡desventurado de mí!
Diome en rostro aquella vida, porque della conocí 685 que el soldado churrullero tiene en las gurapas fin, y a gentilhombre de playa en un punto me acogí, vida de mil sobresaltos 690
y de contentos cien mil.
Mas, por temor de irme a Argel, presto a Córdoba me fui, adonde vendí aguardiente,
y naranjada vendí. 695
Allí el salario de un mes en un día me bebí,
porque, si hay agua que sepa,
la ardiente es doctor sutil.
Arrojárame mi amo 700

con un trabuco de sí,
y en casa de un asturiano por mi desventura di.
Hacía suplicasiones,
suplicasiones vendí, 705
y en un día diez canastas todas las jugué y perdí.
Fuime, y topé con un ciego,
a quien diez meses serví, que, a ser años, yo supiera 710 lo que no supo Merlín.
Aprendí la jerigonza,
y a ser vistoso aprendí,
y a componer oraciones
en verso airoso y gentil. 715 Murióseme mi buen ciego, dejóme cual Juan Paulín, sin blanca, pero discreto,
de ingenio claro y sotil.
Luego fui mozo de mulas, 720
y aun de un fullero lo fui, que con la boca de lobo se tragara a San Quintín; gran jugador de las cuatro, y con la sola le vi 725
dar tan mortales heridas, que no se pueden decir.
Berrugeta y ballestilla, el raspadillo y hollín
jugaba por excelencia, 730
y el Mase Juan hi de ruin.
Gran saje del espejuelo,
y del retén tan sotil, que no se le viera un lince con los antojos del Cid. 735 Cayóse la casa un día, vínole su San Martín,
pusieronle un sobreescrito encima de la nariz.

Dejéle, y víneme al campo, 740
y sirvo, cual ves, aquí, a Martín Crespo, el alcalde, que me quiere más que a sí.
Es Pedro de Urde mi nombre:
mas un cierto Malgesí, 745 mirándome un día las rayas de la mano, dijo así: «Añadidle Pedro al Urde
un malas; pero advertid, hijo, que habéis de ser rey, 750
fraile y papa, y matachín.
Y avendríos por un gitano un caso que sé decir que le escucharán los reyes y gustarán de le oír. 755 Pasaréis por mil oficios trabajosos; pero al fin tendréis uno do seáis todo cuanto he dicho aquí».
Y, aunque yo no le doy crédito, 760 todavía veo en mí
un no sé qué que me inclina a ser todo lo que oí;
pues, como deste pronóstico el indicio veo en ti, 765 digo que he de ser gitano, y que lo soy desde aquí.

MALDONADO ¡Oh Pedro de Urdemalaz generoso, coluna y cer del gitanezco templo!
Ven, y daraz principio al alto intento 770 que te incita, te mueve, impele y lleva a ponerte en la lizta gitanezca; ven a adulcir el agrio y tierno pecho de la hurtada mochacha que te he dicho, por quien zeráz dichoso zobremodo. 775

PEDRO Vamos, que yo no pongo duda en eso, y espero deste asumpto un gran suceso.

(Éntranse.)

(Pónese BENITA a la ventana en cabello.)

BENITA Tus alas, ¡oh noche!, extiende sobre cuantos te requiebran, y a su gusto justo atiende, 780 pues dicen que te celebran hasta los moros de aliende.

Yo, por conseguir mi intento, los cabellos doy al viento,
y el pie izquierdo a una bacía 785 llena de agua clara y fría, y el oído al aire atento.

Eres noche tan sagrada, que hasta la voz que en ti suena dicen que viene preñada 790 de alguna ventura buena
a quien la escucha guardada.

Haz que a mis oídos toque alguna que me provoque
a esperar suerte dichosa. 795

(Entra el SACRISTÁN.)

SACRISTÁN Prenderá a la dama hermosa, sin alguna duda, el Roque.

Roque ha de ser el que prenda en este juego a la dama, puesto que ella se defienda; 800 que su ventura le llama a gozar tan rica prenda.

BENITA Roque dicen, Roque oí.
Pues no hay otro Roque aquí que el necio del sacristán. 805 Veamos si nombrarán
Roque otra vez.

SACRISTÁN Será así,
porque es el Roque tal pieza, que no hay dama que se esquite de entregalle su belleza; 810
y, aunque en estrechez vive, es muy rico en su estrechez.

BENITA ¡Ce!, gentilhombre, tomad este listón y mostrad quién sois mañana con él. 815

SACRISTÁN Seréos en todo fiel,
estremo de la beldad;

(Estándole dando un listón BENITA al SACRISTÁN, entra PASCUAL, y ásele del cuello y quítale la cinta.)

que cualquiera que seáis de las dos que en esta casa vivís, sé os aventajáis 820 a Venus.

PASCUAL ¿Que aquesto pasa?
¿Que esta cuenta de vos dais?
Benita, ¿que a un sacristán, vuestros despojos se dan?
Grave fuera aquesta culpa, 825

si no tuviera disculpa en ser noche de San Juan.

Vos, bachiller graduado en letras de canto llano, ¿de quién fuistes avisado 830 para ganar por la mano
el juego mal comenzado?

¿Así a maitines se toca con vuestra vergüenza poca?
¿Así os hacen olvidar 835 del cantar y repicar
los picones de una loca?

(Entra PEDRO.)

PEDRO ¿Qué es esto, Pascual amigo?

PASCUAEl sacristán y Benita han querido sea testigo 840 de que ella es mujer bendita
y él de embustes enemigo;
mas, porque no se alborote y vea que al estricote le trae su honra su intento, 845 por testigos le presento esta cinta y este zote.

SACRISTÁN Por las santas vinajeras, a quien dejo cada día agostadas y ligeras, 850 que no fue la intención mía de burlarme con las veras.

Hoy a los dos os oí
lo que había de hacer allí Benita, en cabello puesta, 855

y, por gozar de la fiesta, vine, señores, aquí.

Nombréme, y ella acudió al reclamo, como quien, del primer nombre que oyó, 860 de su gusto y de su bien indicio claro tomó;
que la vana hechicería
que la noche antes del día de San Juan usan doncellas, 865 hace que se muestren ellas de liviana fantasía.

PASCUAL ¿Para qué te dio esta cinta?

SACRISTÁNPara que me la pusiese, y conocer por su pinta 870 quién yo era, cuando fuese ya la luz clara y distinta.

BENITA ¿Para qué a tantas preguntas te alargas, Pascual? ¿Barruntas mal de mí? Mas no lo dudo, 875 porque, en mi daño, de agudo siempre he visto que despuntas.

PASCUAL Así con esa verdad se te arranque el alma, ingrata, sospechosa en la amistad, 880 que con más llaneza trata que vio la sinceridad.

Los álamos de aquel río, que con el cuchillo mío tienen grabado tu nombre, 885 te dirán si yo soy hombre

de buen proceder vacío.

PEDRO Yo soy testigo, Benita, que no hay haya en aquel prado donde no te vea escrita, 890 y tu nombre coronado que tu fama solicita.

PASCUAL ¿Y en qué junta de pastores me has visto que los loores de Benita no alce al cielo, 895 descubriendo mi buen celo
y encubriendo mis amores?
¿Qué almendro, guindo o manzano has visto tú que se viese en dar su fruto temprano 900 que por la mía no fuese traído a tu bella mano antes que las mismas aves le tocasen? Y aun tú sabes que otras cosas por ti he hecho 905 de tu honra y tu provecho, dignas de que las alabes.

Y en los árboles que ahora vendrán a enramar tu puerta, verás, crüel matadora, 910 cómo en ellos se vee cierta la gran fe que en mi alma mora.

Aquí verás la verbena,
de raras virtudes llena,
y el rosal, que alegra al alma, 915
y la vitoriosa palma,
en todos sucesos buena.

Verás del álamo erguido pender la delgada oblea, y del valle aquí traído, 920 para que en tu puerta sea sombra al sol, gusto al sentido.

BENITA No hayas miedo me provoque tu arenga a que yo te toque la mano, encuentro amoroso, 925 porque no ha de ser mi esposo quien no se llamare Roque.

PEDRO Tú tienes mucha razón; pero el remedio está llano con toda satisfacción, 93 0930 porque nos le da en la mano la santa Confirmación.
Puede Pascual confirmarse,
y puede el nombre mudarse de Pascual en Roque, y luego, 935 con su gusto y tu sosiego, puede contigo casarse.

BENITA Dese modo, yo lo aceto.

SACRISTÁN; Gracias a Dios que me veo libre de tan grande aprieto! 940

PEDRO Que has hecho un gallardo empleo, Benita, yo te prometo,
porque aquel refrán que pasa por gente de buena masa, que es discreto determino: 945 «Al hijo de tu vecino, límpiale y métele en casa».

BENITA Ponte ese listón, Pascual,

y en parte do yo le vea.

PASCUAL Pienso hacer dél el caudal 950 que hace de su librea Iris, arco celestial.
Espérate, que ya suena
la música que se ordena para el traer de los ramos. 955

PEDRO Con gusto aquí la esperamos.

BENITA Ella venga en hora buena.

(Suena dentro todo género de música y su gaita zamorana. Salen todos los que pudieren con ramos, principalmente CLEMENTE, y los MÚSICOS entran cantando esto:)

MÚSICOS      Niña, la que esperas
                  en reja o balcón,
                  advierde que viene 960
                  tu polido amor.
Noche de San Juan,
el gran Precursor,
que tuvo la mano
más que de reloj, 965
pues su dedo santo
tan bien señaló,
que nos mostró el día
que no anocheció;
muéstratenos clara, 970 sea en ti el albor
tal, que perlas llueva
sobre cada flor;
y en tanto que esperas

a que salga el sol, 975 dirás a mi niña
en suave son:
Niña, la que esperas, &c.
Dirás a Benita que Pascual, pastor, 980
guarda los cuidados
de tu corazón;
y que de Clemencia
el que es ya señor,
es su humilde esclavo, 985
con justa razón;
y a la que desmaya
en su pretensión,
tenla de tu mano,
no la olvides, non, 990
y dile callando,
o en erguida voz,
de modo que oiga
la imaginación:
Niña, la que esperas 995
en reja o balcón,
advierde que viene
tu polido amor.

CLEMENTE Ello está muy bien cantado.
¡Ea!, enrámese este umbral 1000 por el uno y otro lado.
¿Qué haces aquí, Pascual, de los dos acompañado?
Ayúdanos, y a Benita con servicios solicita, 1005
enramándole la puerta:
que a la voluntad ya muerta
el servirla resucita.
Ese laurel pon aquí,
ese sauce a esotra parte, 1010
ese álamo blanco allí,

y entre todos tenga parte
el jazmín y el alhelí.

Haga el suelo de esmeraldas la juncia, y la flor de gualdas 1015 le vuelva en ricos topacios, y llénense estos espacios
de flores para guirnaldas.

BENITA Vaya otra vez la música, señores, que la escucha Clemencia; y tú, mi Roque, 1020 (Quítase de la ventana.)

haz que suene otra vez.

PASCUALA mí me place,
confirmadora dulce hermosa mía.
Vuélvanse a repicar esas sonajas, háganse rajas las guitarras, vaya otra vez el floreo, y solenícese 1025 esta mañana en todo el mundo célebre, pues que lo quiere así la gloria mía.

CLEMENTE Cántese, y vamos, que se viene el día.

*A la puerta puestos de mis amores, 1030
espinas y zarzas
se vuelven flores.*

El fresno escabroso
y robusta encina,
puestos a la puerta 1035
do vive mi vida,
verán que se vuelven,
si acaso los mira,
en matas sabeas
de sacros olores, 1040

*y espinas y zarzas
se vuelven flores;
do pone la vista
o la tierna planta,
la yerba marchita 1045
verde se levanta;
los campos alegra,
regocija al alma,
enamora a siervos,
rinde a señores, 1050
y espinas y zarzas
se vuelven flores.*

(Éntranse cantando.)

(Salen INÉS y BELICA, gitanas, que las podrán hacer las que han hecho BENITA y CLEMENCIA.)

INÉS Mucha fantasía es ésa; Belilla, no sé qué diga:
o tú te sueñas condesa, 1055
o que eres del rey amiga.

BELICA De que sea sueño me pesa.
Inés, no me des pasión
con tanta reprehensión;
déjame seguir mi estrella. 1060

INÉS Confiada en que eres bella, tienes tanta presunción.
Pues mira que la hermosura que no tiene calidad, raras veces aventura. 1065

BELICA Confírmase esa verdad muy bien con mi desventura.

¡Oh cruda suerte inhumana!
¿Por qué a una pobre gitana diste ricos pensamientos? 1070

INÉS Aquel fabrica en los vientos que a ver quién es no se allana.

Huye desas fantasías;
ven, y el baile aprenderás que comenzaste estos días. 1075

BELICA Inés, tú me acabarás con tus estrañas porfías; pero engañaste en pensar que tengo yo de guardar tu gusto cual justa ley, 1080 y sólo ha de ser el rey el que me ha de hacer bailar.

INÉS Desa manera, Belilla, que vengáis al hospital no será gran maravilla: 1085 que hacer de la principal no es para vuestra costilla.
¡Acomodaos, noramala,
a la cocina y la sala,
a bailar aquí y allí! 1090

BELICA A queso no es para mí.

INÉS ¿Pues qué? ¿El donaire y la gala, el rumbo, el cer del tuzón, derribando por el zuelo el gitanezco blazón, 1095 levantado hasta el cielo

por nuestra honezta intención?

Antes te vea yo comida
de rabia, y antes rendida a un gitano que te dome, 1100 o a un verdugo que te tome de las espaldas medida.

¿Esto por ti se ha de ver?
¿Que no sea con gitano
gitana, mala mujer? 1105 Chico hoyo hagas temprano, si es que tan mala has de ser.

BELICA Mucho te alargas, Inés, y, como simple, no ves
dónde mi intención camina. 1110

INÉSPues esta simple adivina lo que tú verás después.

(Salen PEDRO y MALDONADO.)

MALDONADO Esta que ves, Pedro hermano, es la gitana que digo,
de parecer sobrehumano, 1115 cuya posesión me obligo de entregártela en la mano.

Acaba, muda de traje,
y aprende nuestro lenguaje;
y, aun sin aprenderle, entiendo 1120 que has de ser gitano, siendo cabeza de tu linaje.

INÉS ¡Danoz una limoznica, caballero atán garrido!

MALDONADO ¡Deso el labrador se pica! 1125 ¡Qué mal que le has conocido, Inés!

INÉS Pide tú, Belica.

PEDRO Si ella pide, no habrá cosa, por grande y dificultosa que sea, que yo no haga, 1130 sin esperar otra paga que el servir a una hermosa.

MALDONADO ¿No le rezpondes, ceñora?

INÉS Ceñor conde, vez do viene la viuda tan guardadora, 1135 que, puesto que mucho tiene, máz guarda y máz atezora.

(Entra una VIUDA labradora, que la lleva un escudero labrador de la mano.)

INÉS Limozna, ceñora mía, por la bendita María
y por zu Hijo bendito. 1140

VIUDA De mí nunca lleva el grito limosna, ni la porfía.
Mejor estará el servir
a vosotras, que os está

tan sin vergüenza el pedir. 1145

ESCUDERO Va el mundo de suerte ya, que no se puede sufrir.

Es vagamunda esta era;
no hay moza que servir quiera, ni mozo que por su yerro 1150 no se ande a la flor del berro:
él sandio, y ella altanera.

Y esta gente infrutuosa, siempre atenta a mil malicias, doblada, astuta y mañosa, 1155 ni a la Iglesia da primicias, ni al rey no le sube en cosa.

A la sombra de herreros usan muchos desafueros, y, con perdón sea mentado, 1160 no hay seguro asno en el prado de los gitanos cuatreros.

VIUDA Dejadlos, y caminad, Llorente, que es algo tarde.

(Éntranse LLORENTE y la VIUDA.)

BELICA Tomame esa caridad. 1165
No hagáis sino hacer alarde de vuestra necesidad
delante de aquesta gente, que no faltará un Llorente como otro Gil que os persiga, 1170 y, sin que os dé nada, diga palabras con que os afrente.

MALDONADO ¿Veisla, Pedro? Pues es fama que tiene diez mil ducados junto a los pies de su cama, 1175 en dos cofres barreados a quien sus ángeles llama.

Requiébrase así con ellos, que pone su gloria en ellos, y así, en vellos se desalma: 1180 que han de ser para su alma lo que a Absalón sus cabellos.

Sólo a un ciego da un real cada mes, porque le reza las mañanas a su umbral 1185 oraciones que endereza
al eterno tribunal,

por si acaso sus parientes, su marido y ascendientes están en el purgatorio, 1190 haga el santo consistorio
de su gloria merecientes;
y con sola esta obra piensa irse al cielo de rondón, sin desmán y sin ofensa. 1195

PEDROQue yo la saque de harón mi agudo ingenio dispensa.

Informarte has, Maldonado, de todos los que han pasado deste mundo sus parientes, 1200 amigos y bien querientes, hasta el siervo o paniaguado,
y tráemelo por escrito,
y verás cuán fácilmente de su miseria la quito; 1205
y, a lo que soy suficiente, a este embuste lo remito.

MALDONADO Desde su tercer abuelo hasta el postrer netezuelo que de su linaje ha muerto, 1210 te trairé el número cierto,

sin que te discrepe un pelo.

PEDRO Vamos, y verás después lo que haré en aqueste caso por el común interés. 1215

MALDONADO¿Dó encaminarás el paso, Belica?

BELICA Do querrá Inés.

PEDRO Doquiera que le encamines, tendrá por honrosos fines tu estremado pensamiento. 1220

BELICA Aunque fabrique en el viento, Pedro, no te determines a burlar de mi deseo, que de lejos se me muestra una esperanza en quien veo 1225 cierta luz tal, que me adiestra y lleva al bien que deseo.

PEDRO De tu rara hermosura se puede esperar ventura que la iguale. Ven, gitana, 1230 por quien nuestra edad se ufana y en sus glorias se asegura.

Jornada segunda

Salen un ALGUACIL, y MARTÍN CRESPO, el alcalde, y SANCHO MACHO, el regidor.

ALCALDE Digo, señor alguacil, que un mozo que se me fue,
de ingenio agudo y sutil, de tronchos de coles sé que hiciera invenciones mil; 5
y él me aconsejó que hiciese, si por dicha el rey pidiese danzas, una de tal modo, que se aventajase en todo
a la que más linda fuese. 10

Dijo que el llevar doncellas era una cosa cansada,
y que el rey no gusta dellas, por ser danza muy usada
y estar ya tan hecho a vellas; 15 mas que por nuevos niveles llevase una de donceles como serranas vestidos;
en pies y brazos ceñidos multitud de cascabeles; 20
y ya tengo, a lo que creo, veinte y cuatro así aprestados, que pueden, según yo veo, ser sin vergüenza llevados al romano coliseo. 25

Ya yo le enseñé los dos de los mejores.

ALGUACIL Por Dios,
que la invención es muy buena.

SANCHO Lo que nuestro alcalde ordena, es cosa rala entre nos, 30
y todo lo que él más sabe de un su mozo lo aprendió que fue de su ingenio llave;
mas ya se fue y nos dejó, que mala landre le acabe: 35
que así quedamos vacíos, sin él, de ingenio y de bríos.

ALGUACIL ¿Tanto sabe?

SANCHO Es tan astuto, que puede darle tributo Salmón, rey de los judíos. 40

ALCALDE Haga cuenta, en viendo aquéstos, que los veinte y cuatro mira:
que todos son tan dispuestos, derechos como una vira, sanos, gallardos y prestos. 45 Aquél que no es nada rencoso se llama Diego Mostrenco;
el otro, Gil el Peraile;
cada cual diestro en el baile como gozquejo flamenco. 50 Tocándoles Pingarrón, mostrarán bien su destreza
a compás de cualquier son, y alabarán la agudeza de nuestra nueva invención. 55 Las danzas de las espadas

hoy quedarán arrimadas, a despecho de hortelanos,
envidiosos los gitanos, las doncellas afrentadas. 60

¿No le pareció, señor, muy bien el talle y el brío de uno y otro danzador?

ALGUACIL Si juzgo al parecer mío, nunca vi cosa peor; 65
y temo que, si allá vais,
de tal manera volváis,
que no acertéis el camino.

ALCALDE Tocado, a lo que imagino, señor, de la envidia estáis. 70

Pues en verdad que hemos de ir con veinte y cuatro donceles como aquéllos, sin mentir, porque invenciones noveles,
o admiran o hacen reír. 75

ALGUACIL Yo os lo aviso; queda en paz.

(Vase el ALGUACIL.)

SANCHO Alcalde, tu gusto haz, porque verás por la prueba que esta danza, por ser nueva, dará al rey mucho solaz. 80

ALCALDE No lo dudo. Venid, Sancho, que ya el corazón ensancho,
do quepan los parabienes de la danza.

SANCHORazón tienes:
que has de volver hueco y ancho. 85

(Éntranse.)

(Salen dos ciegos, y el uno PEDRO DE URDEMALAS; arrímase el primero a una puerta, y PEDRO junto a él, y pónese la VIUDA a la ventana.)

CIEGO Ánimas bien fortunadas que en el purgatorio estáis, de Dios seáis consoladas,
y en breve tiempo salgáis desas penas derramadas, 90
y, como un trueno,
baje a vos el ángel bueno
y os lleve a ser coronadas.

PEDRO Ánimas que desta casa partistes al purgatorio, 95 ya en sillón, ya en silla rasa, del divino consistorio
os venga al vuestro sin tasa, y en un vuelo
el ángel os lleve al cielo, 100 para ver lo que allá pasa.

CIEGO Hermano, vaya a otra puerta, porque aquesta casa es mía,
y en rezar aquí no acierta.

PEDRO Yo rezo por cortesía, 105 no por premio, cosa es cierta, y así, puedo
rezar doquiera, sin miedo de pendencia ni reyerta.

CIEGO ¿Es vistoso, ciego honrado? 110

PEDRO Estoy desde que nací en una tumba encerrado.

CIEGO Pues yo en algún tiempo vi;
pero ya, por mi pecado, nada veo, 115
sino lo que no deseo,
que es lo que vee un desdichado.
¿Sabrá oraciones abondo?

PEDRO Porque sé que sé infinitas, aquesto, amigo, os respondo, 120 que a todos las doy escritas, o a muy pocos las escondo.
Sé la del Ánima sola, y sé la de San Pancracio, que nadie cual ésta viola; 125 la de San Quirce y Acacio, y la de Olalla española,
y otras mil,
adonde el verso sutil
y el bien decir se acrisola; 130 las de los Auxiliadores sé también, aunque son treinta, y otras de tales primores, que causo envidia y afrenta a todos los rezadores, 135

porque soy,
adondequiera que estoy,
el mejor de los mejores.

Sé la de los sabañones, la de curar la tericia 140
y resolver lamparones,
la de templar la codicia
en avaros corazones;
sé, en efeto,
una que sana el aprieto 145
de las internas pasiones, y otras de curiosidad.
Tantas sé, que yo me admiro de su virtud y bondad.

CIEGOYa por saberlas suspiro. 150

VIUDAHermano mío, esperad.

PEDRO¿Quién me llama?

CIEGOSegún la voz, es el ama
de la casa, en mi verdad.

Ella es estrecha, aunque rica, 155
y sólo a mandar rezar
es a lo que más se aplica.

PEDROPícome yo de callar con quien al dar no se pica:
que esté mudo 160
a sus demandas no dudo
si no lo paga y suplica.

(Sale la VIUDA.)

VIUDA Puesta en aquella ventana, he escuchado sus razones
y su profesión cristiana, 165 y las muchas oraciones
con que tantos males sana;
y querría me hiciese placer que algunas me diese de las que le pediría, 170 dejando a mi cortesía
el valor del interese.

PEDRO Si despide a esotro ciego, yo le diré maravillas.

VIUDA Pues yo le despido luego. 175

PEDRO Señora, no he de decillas ni por dádivas ni ruego.

VIUDA Váyase, y venga después,
amigo.

CIEGO Vendré a las tres, a rezar lo cotidiano. 180

VIUDA En buen hora.

CIEGO Adiós, hermano, ciego, o vistoso, o lo que es;
y si es que se comunica, sepa mi casa, y verá que, aunque pobre, ruin y chica, 185 sin duda en ella hallará una voluntad muy rica;

y la alegre posesión
de un segoviano doblón
gozará liberalmente, 190
si nos da, de su torrente, ya milagro, o ya oración.

PEDRO Está bien; yo acudiré a saber la casa honrada tan llena de amor y fe, 195 y pagaré la posada
con lo que le enseñaré.
Cuarenta milagros tengo con que voy y con que vengo por dondequiera a mi paso, 200 y alegre la vida paso
y como un rey me mantengo.

(Éntrase el CIEGO.)

Mas tú, señora Marina,
Sánchez en el sobrenombre, a mi voz la oreja inclina, 205 y atenta escucha de un hombre una embajada divina.

Las almas de purgatorio entraron en consistorio, y ordenaron las prudentes 210 que les fuese a sus parientes su insufrible mal notorio.

Hicieron que una tomase, de gran prudencia y consejo, para que lo efetuase, 215
cuerpo de un honrado viejo,

y así al mundo se mostrase,
y diéranle una instrucción y una larga relación de lo que tiene de hacer 220 para que puedan tener,
o ya alivio, o ya perdón;
y está ya cerca de aquí esta alma, en un cuerpo honesto, y anciano, cual yo le vi, 225
y sobre un asno trae puesto el cerro de Potosí.

Viene lleno de doblones que le ofrecen a montones los parientes de las almas 230 que en las tormentas sin calmas padecen graves pasiones.

En oyendo que en su lista hay alma que en purgatorio con duras penas se atrista, 235 no hay talego, ni escritorio, ni cofre que se resista.

Hasta los gatos guardados,
de rubio metal preñados, por librarla de tormentos, 240 descubren allí contentos sus partos acelerados.

Esta alma vendrá esta tarde, señora Marina mía,
a hacer de su lista alarde 245 ante ti; pero querría que en secreto esto se guarde, y que a solas la recibas
y que a darle te apercibas lo que piden tus parientes 250 que moran en las ardientes hornazas, de alivio esquivas.

Esto hecho, te asegura que te enseñará oración con que aumentes tu ventura: 255 que esto ofrece en galardón de aquella voluntad pura que con él se muestra franca, y de su escondrijo arranca hasta el menudo cuatrín 260

y queda, cual San Paulín, como se dice, sin blanca.

VIUDA ¿Que esa embajada me envía esa alma, ciego bendito?

PEDROY toda de vos se fía, 265
y se remite a lo escrito de vuestra genealogía.

VIUDA ¿Cómo la conoceré cuando venga?

PEDROYo haré
que tome casi mi aspeto. 270

VIUDA;Oh, qué albricias te prometo!
¡Qué de cosas te daré!

PEDRO En las cosas semejantes es bien gastar los dineros guardados de tiempos antes; 275 los ayunos verdaderos,
y espaldas diciplinantes, todo se ha de aventurar sólo por poder sacar
a un alma de su pasión, 280 y llevarla a la región

donde no mora el pesar.

VIUDA Ve en paz, y dile a ese anciano que tan alegre le espero, que en verle pondré en su mano 285
mi alma, que es el dinero, con pecho humilde y cristiano:
que, aunque soy un poco escasa, me afligiré en ver que pasa alma de pariente mío, 290
según dicen, fuego y frío, éste o aquél muy sin tasa.

PEDRO Tu fama a la de Leandro exceda, y jamás se tizne tu pecho de otro Alejandro; 295 antes, cante dél un cisne en las aguas de Meandro;
a los hiperbóreos montes pase, al cielo te remontes, y allá te subas con ella, 300 y otra no encierren cual ella nuestros corvos horizontes.

(Éntranse los dos.)

(Salen MALDONADO y BELICA.)

MALDONADO Mira, Belica: éste es hombre que te sacará del lodo, de grande ingenio y gran nombre, 305 tan discreto y presto en todo, que es forzoso que te asombre.
Quiérese volver gitano

por tu amor, y dar de mano a otra cualquier pretensión: 310 considera si es razón que le muestres pecho llano.
Él será el mejor cuatrero, según que me lo imagino, que habrá visto el mundo entero, 315 solo, raro y peregrino
en las trazas de embustero; porque en una que ahora intenta ha sacado en limpia cuenta que ha de ser único en todas. 320

BELICA Fácilmente te acomodas a tu gusto y a mi afrenta.
¿No se te ha ya traslucido que el que a grande no me lleve no es para mí buen partido? 325

MALDONADO No hay cosa en que más se pruebe que careces de sentido, que en esa tu fantasía, fundada en la lozanía
de tu juventud gallarda, 330 que en marchitarse no tarda lo que el sol corre en un día.
Quiero decir que es locura manifiesta, clara y llana, pensar que la hermosura 335
dura más que la mañana, que con la noche se oscura;
y a veces es necedad
el pensar que la beldad ha de ofrecer gran marido, 340 siendo por mejor tenido el que ofrece la igualdad.
Así que, gitana loca,

pon freno al grande deseo que te ensalza y que te apoca, 345 y no busques por rodeo
lo que en nada no te toca.

Cásate, y toma tu igual, porque es el marido tal que te ofrezco, que has de ver 350 que en él te vengo a ofrecer valor, ser, honra y caudal.

(Entra PEDRO, ya como gitano.)

PEDRO ¿Qué hay, amigo Maldonado?

MALDONADO Una presunción, de suerte que a mí me tiene admirado: 355 veo en lo flaco lo fuerte, en un bajo un alto estado;
veo que esta gitanilla,
cuanto su estado la humilla, tanto más levanta el vuelo, 360
y aspira a tocar el cielo
con locura y maravilla.

PEDRO Déjala, que muy bien hace, y no la estimes en menos por eso; que a mí me aplace 365 que con soberbios barrenos sus máquinas suba y trace.

Yo también, que soy un leño, príncipe y papa me sueño,
emperador y monarca, 370
y aún mi fantasía abarca de todo el mundo a ser dueño.

MALDONADO Con la viuda, ¿cómo fue?

PEDRO Está en un punto la cosa, mejor de lo que pensé. 375
Ella será generosa,
o yo Pedro no seré.

Pero, ¿qué gente es aquesta tan de caza y tan de fiesta?

MALDONADO El rey es, a lo que creo. 380

BELICA Hoy subirá mi deseo de amor la fragosa cuesta:

(Entra el REY con un criado, SILERIO, y todos de caza.)

hoy a todo mi contento
he de apacentar mis ojos, y al alma dar su sustento, 385 gozando de los despojos que me ofrece el pensamiento y la vista.

MALDONADO Yo imagino que tu grande desatino
en gran mal ha de parar. 390

BELICA Mal se puede contrastar a las fuerzas del destino.

REY ¿Vistes pasar por aquí un ciervo, decid, gitanos, que va herido?

BELICA Señor, sí; 395
atravesar estos llanos, habrá poco que le vi;
lleva en la espalda derecha hincada una gruesa flecha.

REY Era un pedazo de lanza. 400

BELICA El huir y hacer mudanza de lugares no aprovecha al que en las entrañas lleva el hierro de amor agudo, que hasta en el alma se ceba. 405

MALDONADO Ésta dará, no lo dudo, de su locura aquí prueba.

REY ¿Qué decís, gitana hermosa?

BELICA Señor, yo digo una cosa: que el Amor y el cazador 410 siguen un mismo tenor
y condición rigurosa.
Hierre el cazador la fiera,
y aunque va despavorida, huyendo en larga carrera, 415
consigo lleva la herida, puesto que huya dondequiera;
hiere Amor el corazón
con el dorado harpón,
y el que siente el parasismo, 420
aunque salga de sí mismo, lleva tras sí su pasión.

REY Gitana tan entendida muy pocas veces se ve.

BELICA Soy gitana bien nacida. 425

REY ¿Quién es tu padre?

BELICA No sé.

MALDONADO Señor, es una perdida:
dice dos mil desvaríos,
tiene los cascos vacíos,
y llena la necedad 430
de una cierta gravedad que la hace tomar bríos sobre su ser.

BELICA Sea en buen hora;
loca soy por la locura que en vuestra ignorancia mora. 435

SILERIO ¿Sabéis la buena ventura?

BELICA La mala nunca se ignora de la humilde que levanta
su deseo a alteza tanta, que sobrepuja a las nubes. 440

SILERIO Pues ¿por qué tanto la subes?

BELICANo es mucho: a más se adelanta.

REY ¡Donaire tienes!

BELICAY tanto,
que, fiada en mi donaire, mis esperanzas levanto 445
sobre la región del aire.

SILERIO¡Risa causas!

REYY aun espanto.
¡Vamos! ¡Mal haya quien tiene quien sus gustos le detiene!

SILERIOPor la reina dice aquesto. 450

BELICANo es bien el que viene presto, si para partirse viene.

(Éntrase el REY y SILERIO.)

PEDRO Mira, Belica: yo atino que en poner en ti mi amor haré un grande desatino, 455 y así, me será mejor
llevar por otro camino mis gustos. Voy, Maldonado, a efetuar lo trazado,
para que la viuda estrecha 460 se vea una copia hecha
del cuerno que está nombrado;

voime a vestir de ermitaño, con cuyo vestido honesto daré fuerzas a mi engaño. 465

MALDONADO Ve donde sabes, que puesto te dejé el vestido extraño.

(Éntrase PEDRO. Sale el ALGUACIL, comisario de las danzas.)

ALGUACIL ¿Quién es aquí Maldonado?

MALDONADO Yo, mi señor.

ALGUACIL Guárdeos Dios.

BELICA Alguacil y bien criado, 470 ¡milagro! Nunca sois vos de la aldea.

MALDONADO Has acertado, porque es de Corte, sin duda.

ALGUACIL Es menester que se acuda con una danza al palacio 475 del bosque.

MALDONADO Denmos espacio.

ALGUACIL Sí harán: que el rey se muda del monesterio do está, de aquí a dos días, a él.

MALDONADO Como lo mandas se hará. 480

BELICA ¿Viene la reina con él?

ALGUACIL ¿Quién lo duda? Sí vendrá.

BELICA ¿Y es todavía celosa, como suele, y rigurosa?

ALGUACIL Dicen que sí: no sé nada. 485

BELICA ¿No la hacen confiada el ser reina y ser hermosa?

ALGUACIL Turba el demasiado amor
a los sentidos más altos, de más prendas y valor. 490

BELICA Amor son los sobresaltos muy anejos, y el temor.

ALGUACIL Tan moza, ¿y eso sabéis?
Apostaré que tenéis
el alma en su red envuelta. 495 Voime, que he de dar la vuelta por aquí. No os descuidéis, Maldonado, en que sea buena la danza, porque no hay pueblo que hacer la suya no ordena. 500

MALDONADO Todo mi aprisco despueblo; ella irá de galas llena.

(Éntrase el ALGUACIL.)

(Salen SILERIO, el criado del REY, y INÉS, la gitana.)

SILERIO ¿Que tan arisca es la moza?

INÉS Eslo, señor, de manera que de nonada se altera, 505
y se enoja y alboroz;
cierta fantasía reina
en ella, que nos enseña,
o que lo es, o que se sueña que ha de ser princesa o reina; 510 no puede ver a gitanos
y usa con ellos de extremos.

SILERIO Pues agora le daremos do pueda llenar las manos, pues la quiere ver el rey 515
con amorosa intención.

INÉS En las leyes de afición no guarda ninguna ley.
Aunque quizá, como es alta
y subida en pensamientos, 520 hallará que a sus intentos un rey no podrá hacer falta.
Yo, a lo menos, de mi parte haré lo que me has mandado, y le daré tu recado, 525

no más de por contentarte.

SILERIO Pudiérase usar la fuerza antes aquí que no el ruego.

INÉS Gusto con desasosiego, antes mengua que se esfuerza. 530 Mas llevaremos la danza,
y hablaremos después;
que la escala de interés
hasta las nubes alcanza.

SILERIO Encomiéndote otra cosa, 535 que importa más a este efeto.

INÉS ¿Qué encomiendas?

SILERIO El secreto;
porque es la reina celosa;
y con la menor señal que vea de su disgusto, 540 turbará del rey el gusto,
y a nosotros vendrá mal.

INÉS Váyase, que viene allí nuestro conde.

SILERIO Sea en buen hora, y humíllese esa señora; 545 yo haré lo que fuere en mí.

(Vase SILERIO. Entran MALDONADO y PEDRO, de ermitaño.)

PEDRO Aunque yo pintara el caso, no me saliera mejor.

MALDONADO Brunelo, el grande embaidor, ante ti retire el paso. 550

Con tan grande industria mides lo que tu ingenio trabaja, que te ha de dar la ventaja, fraudador de los ardidés.

Libre de deshonor y mengua 555 saldrás en toda ocasión, siendo en el pecho Sinón, Demóstenes en la lengua.

INÉS Señor conde, el rey aguarda nuestra danza aquesta tarde. 560

PEDRO Haga, pues, Belica alarde de mi rica y buena andanza; púlase y échese el resto
de la gala y hermosura.

INÉS Quizá forjas su ventura, 565 famoso Pedro, en aquesto.

A ensayar la danza vamos,
y a vestirnos de tal modo, que se admire el pueblo todo.

PEDRO Bien dices, y ya tardamos. 570

(Éntranse todos.)

(Salen el REY y SILERIO.)

SILERIO Digo, señor, que vendrá en la danza ahora, ahora.

REY Mi deseo se empeora, pasa de lo honesto ya;
    más me pide que pensé, 575
y ya acuso la tardanza, pues la propincua esperanza fatiga, y crece la fe.
    A los ojos la hurtarás
de la reina.

SILERIO Haré tu gusto. 580

REY Dirás cómo desto gusto,
y aun otras cosas dirás, con que acuses mi deseo
allá en tu imaginación.

SILERIO Si Amor guardara razón, 585
fuera aquéste devaneo;
    pero, como no la guarda,
ni te culpo, ni desculpo.

REY Conozco el mal, y me culpo, aunque con disculpa tarda 590
y floja.

SILERIO La reina viene.

REY Mira que estés prevenido, y tan sagaz y advertido como a mi gusto conviene; porque esta mujer celosa 595
tiene de lince los ojos.

SILERIO Hoy gozarás los despojos de la gitana hermosa.

(Entra la REINA.)

REINA Señor, ¿sin mí? ¿Cómo es esto?
No sé qué diga, en verdad. 600

REY Alegra la soledad
de este fresco hermoso puesto.

REINA ¿Y enfada mi compañía?

REY Eso no es bien que digáis, pues con ella levantáis 605
al cielo la suerte mía.

REINA Cualquiera cosa me asombra y enciende, y crece el deseo si no os veo, o si no veo de vuestro cuerpo la sombra; 610 y, aunque esto es impertinencia, si conocéis que el amor me manda como señor,

con gusto tendréis paciencia.

SILERIO Las danzas vienen, señores, 615 que dellas el son se ofrece.

(Suena el tamboril.)

REY Verémoslas, si os parece, entre estas rosas y flores:
que el sitio es acomodado, espacioso y agradable. 620

REINA Sea así.

(Entran CRESPO, el alcalde, y TARUGO, el regidor.)

ALCALDE ¿Que no le hable?
Tenéislo muy mal pensado.
Voto a tal, que he de quejarme al rey de aquesta solencia.

TARUGO Aquí está su reverencia, 625
Crespo.

ALCALDE ¿Queréis engañarme?
¿Cuál es?

REY Yo soy. ¿Qué os han hecho,
buen hombre?

ALCALDE No sé qué diga.
Han burlado mi fatiga,
y nuestra danza deshecho, 630 vuestros pajes, que los vea erguidos en Peralvillo.
Sé sentillo, y no decillo; ¿qué más mal queréis que sea?
Veinte y cuatro doncellotes, 635
todos de tomo y de lomo, venían. Yo no sé cómo
no os da el rey dos mil azotes, pajes, que sois la canalla más mala que tiene el suelo. 640 Digo, pues, que, con mi celo, que es bueno el que en mí se halla, aquestos tantos donceles
junté, como soy alcalde, para serviros de balde, 645
con barbas y cascabeles.
No quise traer doncellas, por ser danza tan usada, sino una cascabelada de mozos parientes dellas; 650
y, apenas vieron sus trajes, al galán uso moderno,
cuando todo el mismo infierno se revistió en vuestros pajes, y con trapajo y con lodo 655
tanta carga les han dado, que queda desbaratado
el danzante escuadrón todo.
Han sobajado al mejor
penuscón de danzadores 660 que en estos alrededores vio príncipe ni señor.

REINA Pues volvedlos a juntar, que yo haré que el rey espere.

TARUGO Aunque vuelva el que quisiere, 665 no se podrá rodear,
    porque van todos molidos
como cibera y alheña, de mojicón, ripio y leña largamente proveídos. 670

REINA   ¿No traeréis uno siquiera, porque gustaré de velle?

TARUGO Veré si puedo traelle.

ALCALDE Advertid que el rey espera, Tarugo, y si no está Renco 675 tan malo como le vi, traed, si es posible, aquí
a mi sobrino Mostrenco, que en él echará de verse cuáles los otros serían. 680 ¡Oh, cuántos pajes se crían en Corte para perderse!
    Pensé que por ser del rey,
y tan bien nacidos todos, usarían de otros modos 685
de mejor crianza y ley;
    pero cuatro pupilajes
de cuatro universidades, no encierran tantas ruindades como saben vuestros pajes. 690 Las burlas que nos han hecho descubren con sus ensayos que traen cruces en los sayos y diablos dentro del pecho.

(Vuelve TARUGO, y trae consigo a MOSTRENCO, tocado a papos, con un tranzado que llegue hasta las orejas, saya de bayeta verde guarnecida de amarillo, corta a la rodilla, y sus polainas con cascabeles, corpezuelo o camisa de pechos; y, aunque toque el tamboril, no se ha de mover de un lugar.)

TARUGO A Mostrenco traigo; helo, 695
Crespo.

ALCALDE Pingarrón, tocad; que la buena majestad en él verá nuestro celo (Toca.)

y nuestro ingenio lozano.
Menéate, majadero, 700
o hazte de rogar primero, como músico o villano.
¡Hola! ¿A quién digo? Sobrino, danza un poco, ¡pese a mí!

TARUGO El diablo nos trujo aquí, 705 según que ya lo adivino.
¡Yérgete, cuerpo del mundo!
(Gínchale.)

ALCALDE ¡Oh pajes de Satanás!

REINANi le roguéis ni deis más.

ALCALDE Hoy nos echas al profundo 710 con tu terquedad.

MOSTRENCONo puedo
menearme, ¡por San Dios!

SILERIO¿Qué tierno doncel sois vos!

TARUGO¿Qué tienes?

MOSTRENCOQuebrado un dedo del pie derecho.

REYDejadle, 715
y a vuestro pueblo os volved.

ALCALDESi es que me ha de hacer merced, de Junquillos soy alcalde;
y si castiga a sus pajes, otra danza le traeremos 720 que pase a todos extremos en la invención y los trajes.

(Éntranse TARUGO, alcalde, y MOSTRENCO.)

REINA El alcalde es estremado.

REYY la danza bien vestida.

REINABien platicada y reñida, 725
y el premio bien esperado.

SILERIO Ésta es la de las gitanas que viene.

REINA Pues suelen ser
muchas de buen parecer
y de su traje galanas. 730

REY Que tiemble de una gitana un rey, ¡qué gran poquedad!

SILERIO Verá vuestra majestad, entre éstas, una galana
y hermosa sobremanera, 735 y sobremanera honesta.

REY ¡Caro el mirarla me cuesta!

REINA ¿No llegan? ¿A qué se espera?

(Entran los MÚSICOS, vestidos a lo gitano; INÉS y BELICA y otros dos muchachos, de gitanos, y en vestir a todas, principalmente a BELICA, se ha de echar el resto; entra asimismo PEDRO, de gitano, y MALDONADO; han de traer ensayadas dos mudanzas y su tamboril.)

PEDRO Vuestros humildes gitanos, majestades que Dios guarde, 740 hacemos vistoso alarde
de nuestros bríos lozanos.

Quisiéramos que esta danza fuera toda de brocado;
mas el poder limitado 745 es muy poco lo que alcanza.

Mas, con todo, mi Belilla, con su donaire y sus ojos, os quitará mil enojos,

dándoos gusto y maravilla. 750 ¡Ea, gitanas de Dios, comenzad, y sea en buen pie!

REINABueno es el gitano, a fe.

MALDONADOId delantera las dos.

PEDRO ¡Ea, Belica, flor de abril; 755 Inés, bailadora ilustre, que podéis dar fama y lustre
a esta danza y a otras mil!

(Bailan.)

¡Vaya el voladillo apriesa!
¡No os erréis; guardad compás! 760
¡Qué desvaída que vas, Francisquilla! ¡Ea, Ginesa!

MALDONADO Largo y tendido el cruzado, y tomen los brazos vuelo.
Si ésta no es danza del cielo, 765 yo soy asno enalbardado.

PEDRO ¡Ea, pizpitas ligeras y andarríos bulliciosos, llevad los brazos airosos
y las personas enteras! 770

MALDONADO El oído en las guitarras, y haced de azogue los pies.

PEDRO ¡Por San; buenas van las tres!

MALDONADO Y aun las cuatro no van malas.
Pero Belica es extremo 775
de donaire, brío y gala.

PEDRO Como no bailan en sala, que tropiecen cuido y temo.

(Cae BELICA junto al REY.)

¿No lo digo yo? Belilla ha caído junto al rey. 780

REY Que os alce yo es justa ley, nueva octava maravilla;
y entended que con la mano os doy el alma también.

REINA Ello se ha hecho muy bien; 785 andado ha el rey cortesano.
¡Bien su majestad lo allana,
y la postra por el suelo, pues levanta hasta su cielo
una caída gitana! 790

BELICA Mostró en esto su grandeza, pues casi fuera impiedad que junto a su majestad nadie estuviera en bajeza;

y no se pudo ofender 795
su grandeza en esto en nada, pues majestad confirmada no puede desfallecer;
y, en cierta manera, creo que cabe en la suerte mía 800 que me hagan cortesía los reyes.

REINA Ya yo lo veo.
¿Que ese privilegio tiene la hermosura?

REY ¡Ea, señora,
no turbéis la justa ahora, 805
porque alegra y entretiene!

REINA Apriétanme el corazón esas palabras livianas.
Llevad aquestas gitanas
y ponedlas en prisión: 810 que es la belleza tirana, y a cualquier alma conquista,
y está su fuerza en ser vista.

REY ¿Celos te da una gitana?
Cierto que es terrible cosa 815
e insufrible de decir.

REINA Pudiérase eso decir,
a no ser ésta hermosa,
y a ser vuestra condición

de rey; pero no es así. 820 Llevádmelas ya de ahí.

SILERIO ¡Estraña resolución!

INÉS Señora, así el pensamiento celoso no te fatigue, ni hacer hazañas te obligue 825 que no lleven fundamento.
Que a solas quieras oírme un poco que te diré, y en ello no intentaré
de tu prisión eximirme. 830

REINA A mi estancia las llevad;
pero traedlas tras mí.

(Éntranse la REINA y las gitanas.)

REY Pocas veces celos vi sin tocar en crüeldad.

SILERIO Una sospecha me afana, 835 señor, por lo que aquí veo, y es que di de tu deseo noticia a aquella gitana que a la reina quiere hablar en secreto, y es razón 840 temer que de tu intención larga cuenta querrá dar.

REY En mi dolor tan acerbo,
no me queda qué temer,

pues no puede negro ser 845
más que sus alas el cuervo.

Venid, y daremos orden
cómo se tiemple en la reina la furia que en ella reina, la confusión y desorden. 850

(Éntranse el REY y SILERIO.)

PEDRO ¡Bien habemos negociado, gustando vos del oficio!

MALDONADO Digo que pierdo el juicio, y estoy como embelesado.

Belica presa, e Inés 855
con la reina quiere hablar.
¡Mucho me da que pensar!

PEDRO Y aun que temer.

MALDONADO Así es.

PEDRO Yo, a lo menos, el suceso no pienso esperar del caso: 860 que a compás retiro el paso del gitanesco progreso.

Un bonete reverendo
y el eclesiástico brazo sacarán deste embarazo 865 mi persona, a lo que entiendo.
¡Adiós, Maldonado!

MALDONADOEspera.
¿Qué quieres hacer?

PEDRONo, nada;
la suerte tengo ya echada,
y tengo sangre ligera. 870 No me detendrán aquí
con maromas y con sogas.

MALDONADOEn muy poca agua te ahogas.
Nunca pensé tal de ti;
antes, pensé que tenías 875
ánimo para esperar
un ejército.

PEDROEs hablar:
otras son las fuerzas mías.
Aún no me has bien conocido;
pues entiende, Maldonado, 880 que ha de ser el hombre honrado recatado, y no atrevido;
y es prudencia prevenir el peligro. Queda en paz.

MALDONADOSin porqué temes; mas haz 885 tu gusto.

PEDROYo sé decir
que es razón que aquí se tema:
que las iras de los reyes pasan términos y leyes, como es su fuerza suprema. 890

MALDONADO Si así es, vámonos luego, que nos estará mejor.

MÚSICO Todos tenemos temor, Maldonado.

MALDONADO No lo niego.

(Éntranse todos.)

Jornada tercera

Sale PEDRO, como ermitaño, con tres o cuatro taleguillos de anjeo llenos de arena en las mangas.

PEDRO Ya está la casa vecina de aquella viuda dichosa, digo de aquella Marina Sánchez, que, por generosa, al cielo el alma encamina; 5

(MARINA, a la ventana.)

ya su marido, Vicente del Berrocal, fácilmente saldrá de la llama horrenda, en cuanto Marina entienda que yace en ella doliente; 10 su hijo, Pedro Benito, amainará desde luego
el alto espantoso grito con que se queja en el fuego que abrasa el negro distrito; 15 dejará de estar mohíno Martinico, su sobrino,
el del lunar en la cara, viendo que se le prepara de la gloria el real camino. 20

VIUDA Padre, espere, que ya abajo, y perdone si le doy
en el esperar trabajo.

(Quítase de la ventana y baja.)

PEDRO Gracias a los cielos doy, que me luce si trabajo; 25 gracias doy a quien me ha hecho entrar en aqueste estrecho, donde, sin temor de mengua, me ha de sacar esta lengua con honra, gusto y provecho. 30 Memoria, no desfallezcas, ni por algún accidente silencio a la lengua ofrezcas;
antes, con modo prudente, ya me alegres, ya entristezcas, 35 en los semblantes me muda que con aquesta viuda me acrediten, hasta tanto que la dejen, con espanto, contenta, pero desnuda. 40

(Entra la VIUDA.)

VIUDA Padre, déme aquesos pies.

PEDRO Tente, honrada labradora;
no me toques. ¿Tú no ves que adonde la humildad mora pierde el honor su interés? 45 Las almas que están en penas, de todo contento ajenas,
aunque más las soliciten, las ceremonias no admiten de que están las cortes llenas. 50 Más les importa una misa que cuatro mil besamanos, y esto tu padre te avisa,

y esos tratos cortesanos tenlos por cosa de risa. 55

Pero, en tanto que te doy cuenta, amiga, de quién soy,
guárdame aqueste talego,
y estotro del nudo ciego, con quien tan cargado voy. 60

VIUDA Ya, señor, tengo noticia de quién eres, y sé bien que tu voluntad codicia que en misericordia estén las almas y no en justicia. 65

Sé la honrada comisión que tienes, y, en conclusión, te suplico que me cuentes cómo las de mis parientes tendrán descanso y perdón. 70

PEDRO Vicente del Berrocal, tu marido, con setenta escudos de principal ha de rematar la cuenta en mil bienes de su mal. 75

Pedro Benito, tu hijo, saldrá de aquel escondrijo con cuarenta y seis no más, y con esto le darás
un sin igual regocijo. 80

Tu hija, Sancha Redonda, pide que a su voluntad
tu larga mano responda:
que es sogá la caridad para aquella cueva honda. 85

Cincuenta y dos amarillos pide, redondos, sencillos, o ya veinte y seis doblados,

con que serán quebrantados de sus prisiones los grillos. 90

Martín y Quiteria están,
tus sobrinos, en un pozo,
padeciendo estrecho afán,
y desde allí con sollozo amargas voces te dan. 95

Diez doblones de a dos caras piden que ofrezca en las aras de la devoción divina, pues que los tiene Marina entre sus cosas más caras. 100

Sancho Manjón, tu buen tío, padece en una laguna
mucho sed y mucho frío, y con llantos te importuna que des a su mal desvío. 105

Solos catorce ducados pide, pero bien contados
y en plata de cuño nuevo, y yo a llevarlos me atrevo sobre mis hombros cansados. 110

VIUDA ¿Vistes allá, por ventura, señor, a mi hermana Sancha?

PEDRO Vila en una sepultura cubierta con una plancha de bronce, que es cosa dura, 115

y al pasarle por encima, dijo: «Si es que te lastima el dolor que aquí te llora, tú, que vas al mundo agora, a mi hermana y a mi prima 120

dirás que en su voluntad está el salir destas nieblas
a la inmensa claridad:

que es luz de aquestas tinieblas la encendida caridad. 125

Que apenas sabrá mi hermana mi pena, cuando esté llana a darme treinta florines, por poner ella sus fines en ser cuerda, y no de lana». 130

Infinitos otros vi,
tus parientes y criados,
que se encomiendan a ti, cuáles hay de a dos ducados, cuáles de a maravedí; 135
y séte decir, en suma, que, reducidos con pluma
y con tinta a buena cuenta, a docientos y cincuenta escudos llega la suma. 140

No te azores, que ese saco que te di a guardar primero, si es que bien la cuenta saco,
me le dio un bodegonero, grande imitador de Caco, 145 no más de porque a su hija, que entre rescoldo de hornija yace en las hondas cavernas, en sus delicadas piernas el fuego menos la aflija. 150

Un mozo de mulas fue
quien me dio el saco segundo que en tus manos entregué, gran caminador del mundo, malo, mas de buena fe. 155

De arenas de oro de Tíbar van llenos, con que el acíbar y amarguísimo trabajo
de las almas de allá abajo se ha de volver en almíbar. 160

¡Ea, pues, mujer gigante, mujer fuerte, mujer buena;

nada se os ponga delante para no aliviar la pena de toda ánima penante! 165

Desechad de la garganta ese nudo que os quebranta, y decid con voz serena: «Haré, señor, cuanto ordena tu voz sonora y santa». 170

Que, en entregando los numos en estas groseras manos, con gozos altos y sumos, sus fuegos más inhumanos verás convertir en humos. 175

¿Qué será ver a deshora que por la región del aire va un alma zapateadora
bailando con gran donaire, de esclava hecha señora? 180

¡Qué de alabanzas oirás por delante y por detrás, ora vayas, ora estés,
de toda ánima cortés
a quien hoy libertad das! 185 (Vuélvele los sacos.)

VIUDA Tenga, y un poco me espere, que yo voy, y vuelvo luego
con todo aquello que quiere.

(Éntrese la VIUDA.)

PEDRO En gusto, en paz y en sosiego tu vida el cielo prospere. 190

Si bien en ello se advierte, aquésta es la mujer fuerte que se busca en la Escritura.

Tengas, Marina, ventura en la vida y en la muerte. 195

Belilla, gitana bella, todo el fruto deste embuste gozarás sin falta o mella, aunque tu gusto no guste de mi amorosa querella. 200

Cuanto este dinero alcanza se ha de gastar en la danza y en tu adorno, porque quiero que por galas ni dinero no malogres tu esperanza. 205

(Vuelve la VIUDA con un gato lleno, como que trae el dinero.)

VIUDA Toma, venerable anciano, que ahí va lo que pediste,
y aun a darte más me allano.

PEDRO Marina, el tuyo me diste con el proceder cristiano. 210

En trasponiendo esta loma, en un salto daré en Roma
y en otro en el centro hondo;
y, porque a quien soy respondo, mi buena bendición toma, 215 que da salud a las muelas, preserva que no se engañe nadie con fraude y cautelas, ni que de mirar se estrañe las noturnas centinelas. 220

Puede en las oscuras salas tender sin temor las alas el más flaco corazón,

(Bendícela.)

llevando la bendición del gran Pedro de Urdemalas. 225

(Éntrase PEDRO.)

VIUDA Comisario fidedino de las almas que en trabajo están penando contino, pues dicen que es cuesta abajo del purgatorio el camino, 230 échate a rodar, y llega ligero a la oscura vega
o valle de llanto amargo, y aplícalas al descargo que mi largueza te entrega. 235

En cada escudo que di
llevas mi alma encerrada, y en cada maravedí,
y como cosa encantada
parece que quedo aquí. 240

Ya yo soy otra alma en pena, después que me veo ajena del talego que entregué;
pero en hombros de mi fe saldré a la región serena. 245

(Éntrase.)

(Sale la REINA, y trae en un pañizuelo unas joyas, y sale con ella MARCELO, caballero anciano.)

REINA Marcelo, sin que os impida la guarda de algún secreto, porque no os pondrá en aprieto de perder fama ni vida, os ruego me respondáis 250

a ciertas preguntas luego.

MARCELA Bien escusado es el ruego, señora, donde mandáis.

Preguntad a vuestro gusto, porque mi honra y mi vida 255 está a vuestros pies rendida, y es de lo que yo más gusto.

REINA Estas joyas de valor, ¿cúyas son o cúyas fueron?

MARCELA Un tiempo dueño tuvieron 260 que siempre fue mi señor.

REINA Pues, ¿cómo se enajenaron?
Porque me importa saber cómo aquesto vino a ser:
si se dieron, o se hurtaron. 265

MARCELA Pues que ya la tierra cubre el delito y la deshonra, si es deshonra y si es delito el que amor honesto forja, quiero romper un silencio 270 que no importa que le rompa ni a los muertos ni a los vivos;
antes, a todos importa.
«La duquesa Félix Alba, que Dios acoja en su gloria, 275 una noche, en luz escasa
y en tinieblas abundosa, estando yo en el terrero,

con esperanza dudosa de ver a la que me diste, 280
gran señora, por esposa, con un turbado ceceo me llamó, y con voz ansiosa me dijo: "Así la ventura a tus deseos responda, 285 señor, quienquiera que seas;
que, en esta ocasión forzosa, mostrando pecho cristiano,
a quien te llama socorras.
Pon a recado esa prenda, 290 más noble que venturosa;
dale el agua del bautismo
y el nombre que tú le escojas".
Y en esto ya descolgaba de unas trenzas, que de sogas 295 sirvieron, una cestilla
de blanca mimbre olorosa.
No dijo más, y encerróse.
Yo quedé en aquella hora cargado, suspenso y lleno 300
de admiración y congoja, porque oí que una criatura dentro de la cesta llora, así cual recién nacida.
¡Ved qué carga, y a qué hora! 305 En fin, porque presto veas el de aquesta estraña historia, digo que al punto salí,
con diligencia no poca,
de la ciudad al aldea 310 que está sobre aquella loma, por ser cerca. Pero el cielo,
que infortunios acomoda,
me deparó en el camino, al despuntar del aurora, 315
un rancho de unos gitanos, de pocas y humildes chozas.

Por dádivas y por ruegos, una gitana no moza
me tomó la criatura 320
y al punto desenvolvióla,
y entre las fajas, envueltas en un lienzo, halló esas joyas, que yo conocí al momento, pues son de tu hermano todas. 325 Dejéselas con la niña, que era una niña hermosa
la que en la cesta venía, nacida de pocas horas;
encarguéle su crianza 330
y el bautismo, y que, con ropas humildes, empero limpias, la criase. ¡Estraña cosa!:
que, cuando deste suceso mi lengua a tu hermano informa, 335 dijo: "Marcelo, la niña es mía, como las joyas.
La duquesa Félix Alba
es su madre, y ella es sola el blanco de mis deseos 340 y de mis penas la gloria.
Inmaturo ha sido el parto,
mal prevenida la toma;
pero no hay falta que llegue de su ingenio a la gran sobra". 345 Estando en estas razones, en son tristísimo doblan las campanas, sin que quede monesterio ni parroquia.
El son general y triste 350
daba indicios ser persona principal la que a la tierra el común tributo torna.
Hizo manifiesto el caso un paje que entró a deshora 355 diciendo: "Muerta es, señor,

Félix Alba, mi señora.
De improviso murió anoche, y por ella, señor, forman este son tantas campanas, 360 y tantas gentes que lloran" Con estas nuevas tu hermano quedó con el alma absorta, sin movimiento los ojos, inamovible la persona. 365 Volvió en sí desde allí a un rato, y, sin decirme otra cosa sino: "Haz criar la niña, y no le quites las joyas;
como gitana se críe, 370 sin hacerla sabidora, aunque crezca, de quién es, porque esto a mi gusto importa".
Dos horas tardó en partirse a las fronteras, do apoca 375 con su lanza la morisma, sus gustos con sus memorias.
Siempre me escribe que vea a Belica, que llamóla
así la gitana sabia 380 que con mucho amor crióla.
Yo no alcanzo su desinio, ni a qué aspira, ni en qué topa el no querer que se sepa tan rara y tan triste historia. 385 Hanle dicho a la muchacha que un ladrón gitano hurtóla, y ella se imagina hija
de alguna real persona.
Yo la he visto muchas veces, 390
y hacer y decir mil cosas, que parece que ya tiene en las sienes la corona.
Murió la que la dio leche,
y, con las joyas, dejóla 395

en poder de otra su hija, si no tan bella, tan moza.
Ésta, que es la que tenía esas joyas, no otra cosa sabe más de lo que supo 400 su madre, y el hecho ignora de los padres de Isabel, tu sobrina, la hermosa,
la señora, la garrida,
la discreta y la briosa.» 405 Respondo esto a la pregunta si se dieron esas joyas, o se hurtaron: que me admira verlas donde están agora.

REINALa mitad he yo sabido 410
desta peregrina historia,
y una y otra relación,
sin que discrepen, conforman.
Mas dime: ¿conocerías, si acaso vieses, la hermosa 415
gitana que dices?

MARCELA Sí;
como a mí mismo, señora.

REINAPues espérate aquí un poco.

(Éntrase la REINA.)

MARCELA ¿Quién trujo aquí aquestas joyas?
¡Cómo a los cielos y al tiempo 420 por jamás se encubre cosa!
¿Si he hecho mal en descubrirme?

Sí: que lengua presurosa no da lugar al discurso
y más condena que abona. 425

(Vuelven la REINA, BELICA y INÉS.)

REINA ¿Es aquél el que venía a ver a tu hermana?

INÉS Sí;
que con mi madre le vi
comunicar más de un día.

REINA Con eso, y con el semblante, 430 que al de mi hermano parece, ya veo que se me ofrece una sobrina delante.

MARCELA Así lo puedes creer: que ésa que traes de la mano 435 es la prenda que tu hermano quiere y debe más querer.

Si ilustre por el padre la ha hecho Dios en el suelo, no menos la hace el cielo 440
estremada por la madre,
y ella, por su hermosura, merece ser estimada.

(Entran el REY y el CABALLERO.)

REY Ello es cosa averiguada que no hay celos sin locura. 445

REINA Y sin amor, señor mío, dijérades muy mejor.

REY Celos son rabia, y amor siempre della está vacío;
y de la causa que es buena 450
mal efecto no procede.

REINA En mí al contrario sucede:
siempre celos me dan pena,
y siempre los ha engendrado el grande amor que yo os tengo. 455

REY Si hay venganza, yo me vengo con que os hayáis engañado, pues no podrán redundar de vuestras preguntas hechas tan vehementes sospechas 460 que me puedan condenar, ni yo, si miráis en ello, soy de sangre tan liviana que a tan humilde gitana incline el altivo cuello. 465

REINA Mirad, señor, que es hermosa, y que la rara belleza se lleva tras sí la alteza
y fuerza más poderosa.
Por mis ojos, que lleguéis 470
a mirar sus bellos ojos.

REY Si gustáis de darme enojos, no es buen medio el que ponéis.

REINA ¿Cómo? ¿Y que así os amohína el mirar a una doncella 475 que, después de ser tan bella, aspira a ser mi sobrina?

BELICA ¿Qué ha de ser aquesto, Inés?
Que me voy imaginando que se están de mí burlando. 480

INÉS Calla y sabráslo después.

REINA Miradla así, descuidado, y decidme a quién parece.

REYA los ojos se me ofrece de Rosamiro un traslado. 485

REINA No es mucho, porque es su hija
y como a tal la estimad.

CABALLERO ¿Burla vuestra majestad?

REINA No es bien que eso se colija de verdad tan manifiesta. 490

REY Si no burláis, es razón que me cause admiración tal novedad como es ésta.

REINA Llegad al rey, Isabel, y decid que os dé la mano 495

como a hija de mi hermano.

BELICA Como sierva llego a él.

REY Levantad, bella criatura, que de vuestro parecer muy bien se puede creer 500
y esperar mayor ventura.
Pero decidme, señora:
¿cómo sabéis esta historia?

REINA Aunque es breve y es notoria, no es para decilla agora. 505 Vámonos a la ciudad, que en el camino sabréis lo que luego creeréis
como infalible verdad.

REY Vamos.

MARCELA No hay dudar, señor, 510 en historia que es tan clara, pues su rostro la declara,
y yo, que soy el actor.

(Vanse entrando todos, y a la postre quedan INÉS y BELICA.)

INÉS Belica, pues vas sobrina de la reina, por lo menos, 515 esos tus ojos serenos
a nuestra humildad inclina.

Acuérdate de que hurtamos más de una vegada juntas, y que sin soberbia y puntas 520 más de otras cinco bailamos;
y que, aunque habemos andado muchas veces a las greñas, siempre en efeto y por señas te he temido y respetado. 525 Haz algún bien, pues podrás, a nuestros gitanos pobres;
así en venturosa sobres
a cuantas lo fueron más.
Responde a lo que se ve 530
de tu ser tan principal.

BELICADame, Inés, un memorial, que yo le despacharé.

(Éntranse.)

(Sale PEDRO DE URDEMALAS, con manteo y bonete, como estudiante.)

PEDRO Dicen que la variación hace a la naturaleza 535
colma de gusto y belleza,
y está muy puesto en razón.

Un manjar a la contina
enfada, y un solo objeto a los ojos del discreto 540 da disgusto y amohína.

Un solo vestido cansa.
En fin, con la variedad se muda la voluntad
y el espíritu descansa. 545

Bien logrado iré del mundo cuando Dios me lleve dél, pues podré decir que en él un Proteo fui segundo.

¡Válgame Dios, qué de trajes 550
he mudado, y qué de oficios, qué de varios ejercicios,
qué de exquisitos lenguajes!

Y agora, como estudiante, de la reina voy huyendo, 555 cien mil azares temiendo desta mi suerte inconstante.

Pero yo, ¿por qué me cuento que llevo en mudable palma?
Si ha de estar siempre nuestra alma 560 en contino movimiento,

Dios me arroje ya a las partes donde más fuere servido.

(Entra un LABRADOR con dos gallinas.)

LABRADOR Pues yo no las he vendido; bien parece que es hoy martes. 565

PEDRO Mostrad, hermano; llegad, llegad, mostrad. ¿Qué os turbáis?
Ellas son de calidad,
que en cada una mostráis vuestra grande caridad. 570

Andad con Dios y dejaldas, y desde lejos miraldas, como a reliquias honraldas,
para el culto dedicaldas bucólico y adoraldas. 575

LABRADOR Como me las pague, haga altar o reliquias dellas, o lo que más satisfaga

a su gusto.

PEDRO Sólo es dellas
santa y justísima paga 580 hacer dellas un empleo que satisfaga al deseo
del más mirado cristiano.

LABRADOR Saldrá su disignio vano, señor zote, a lo que creo. 585

(Entran dos representantes, que se señalan con números 1 y 2.)

PEDRO Sois hipócrita y malino, pues no tenéis miramiento que os habla un hombre cetrino, hombre que vale por ciento para hacer un desatino; 590 hombre que se determina,
con una y otra gallina, sacar de Argel dos cautivos que están sanos y están vivos por la voluntad divina. 595

REPRESENTANTE 1 Este cuento es de primor, y el sacristán, o lo que es, juega de hermano mayor.

PEDRO ¡Oh fuerzas del interés, llenas de envidia y rigor! 600 ¿Que es posible que te esquives, por tan pocos arrequives, de sacar sendos cristianos de mano de los tiranos?

¡Cómante malos caribes! 605

LABRADOR Diga, señor papasal:

¿son, por ventura, mostrencas mis gallinas, ¡pesiatál!, para no hacerme de pencas de dar mi pobre caudal? 610

Rescaten a esos cristianos los ricos, los cortesanos, los frailes, los limosneros:
que yo no tengo dineros si no lo ganan mis manos. 615

REPRESENTANTE 1 Aparte.

Esforcemos este embuste.
Sois un hombre mal mirado,
de mala yacija y fuste, hombre que es tan desalmado, que no hay cosa de que guste. 620

PEDRO La maldición de mi zorra, de mi bonete y mi gorra,
caiga en ti y en tu ralea, y cautivo yo te vea en Fez en una mazmorra, 625

para ver si te holgarás de que sea quien entonces, por dos gallinas no más...
¡Oh corazones de bronces, archivos de Satanás! 630

¡Oh miseria desta vida,
a términos reducida,
que vienen los cortesanos
a rogar a los villanos, gente non santa y perdida! 635

LABRADOR ¡Pesia a mí! Denme mis aves, que yo no estoy para dar limosna.

REPRESENTANTE 1 ¡Qué poco sabes de achaque de rescatar dos hombres gordos y graves! 640

Yo los tengo señalados, corpulentos y barbados,
de raro talle y presencia, que valen en mi conciencia más de trecientos ducados, 645

y por estas dos gallinas, solamente, los rescato.
¡Ved qué entrañas tan molestas tiene este pobre pazguato, criado entre las encinas! 650

¡Ya la ruindad y malicia, la miseria y la codicia reina sólo entre esta gente!

LABRADORA Un bien que hay aquí teniente, corregidor y justicia. 655

Éntrase.

PEDRO Y yo tengo lengua y pies.
Esperen, y lo verán.

REPRESENTANTE 1 Sois un traidor magancés, hombre de aquellos que dan mohatras de tres en tres. 660

REPRESENTANTE 2 Déjele vuesa merced, que, pues ya dejó en la red las cobas, vaya en buen hora.

REPRESENTANTE 1Pues bien: ¿qué haremos agora?

PEDROLo que es vuestro gusto haced. 665

Despójese de su pluma
el rescate, y véase luego,
en resolución y en suma, si hay algún rancho o bodega donde todo se consuma: 670 que yo, a fe de compañero, desde agora me prefiero
a dar todo el adherente.

REPRESENTANTE 2Hay un grande inconveniente:
que hemos de ensayar primero. 675

PEDRO Pues díganme: ¿son farsantes?

REPRESENTANTE 1Por nuestros pecados, sí.

PEDROHaz de mis dichas Adlantes, cerros de mi Potosí,
de mi pequeñez gigantes; 680 en vosotros se me ofrece todo aquello que apetece mi deseo en sumo grado.

REPRESENTANTE 2¿Qué vendaval os ha dado, que así el seso os desvanece? 685

PEDRO Sin duda, he de ser farsante, y haré que estupendamente
la fama mis hechos cante, y que los lleve y los cuente en Poniente y en Levante. 690

Volarán los hechos míos hasta los reinos vacíos de Policea, y aún más,
en nombre de Nicolás,
y el sobrenombre de Ríos: 695 que éste fue el nombre de aquel mago que a entender me dio quién era el mundo crüel, ciego que sin vista vio
cuantos fraudes hay en él. 700

En las chozas y en las salas, entre las jergas y galas será mi nombre estendido, aunque se ponga en olvido el de Pedro de Urdemalas. 705

REPRESENTANTE 2 Enigma y algarabía es cuanto habláis, señor, para nosotros.

PEDRO Sería
falta de ingenio y valor contaros la historia mía, 710
a lo menos por agora.
Vamos: que, si se mejora mi suerte con ser farsista, seréis testigos de vista del ingenio que en mí mora, 715 principalmente en jugar las tretas de un entremés hasta do pueden llegar.

(Entra otro farsante.)

REPRESENTANTE 3 ¿No advertirán que ya es hora y tiempo de ensayar? 720

Porque pide el rey comedia, y el autor ha ya hora y media que espera. ¡Grande descuido!

REPRESENTANTE 1 Pues con ir presto, yo cuido que ese daño se remedia. 725

Venga, galán, que yo haré que hoy quede por recitante.

PEDRO Si lo quedo, mostraré que soy para autor bastante con lo menos que yo sé. 730

Llegado ha ya la ocasión donde la adivinación que un hablante Malgesí echó un tiempo sobre mí, tenga efecto y conclusión. 735

Ya podré ser patriarca, pontífice y estudiante,
emperador y monarca:
que el oficio de farsante todos estados abarca; 740

y, aunque es vida trabajosa, es, en efecto, curiosa,
pues cosas curiosas trata,
y nunca quien la maltrata le dará nombre de ociosa. 745

(Éntranse todos.)

(Sale un AUTOR con unos papeles como comedia, y dos farsantes, que todos se señalan por número.)

AUTOR Son muy anchos de conciencia vuelas mercedes, y creo, por las señales que veo,
que me ha de faltar paciencia.

¡Cuerpo de mí! ¿En veinte días 750 no se pudiera haber puesto esta comedia? ¿Qué es esto?
Ellas son venturas mías.

Póneme esto en confusión, y en un rancor importuno, 755 que nunca falte ninguno al pedir de la ración,
y al ensayo es menester que con perros y hurones los busquen, y aun a pregones, 760 y no querrán parecer.

PEDRO ¿Quién un agudo embustero, ni un agudo hablador,
sabrás hacerle mejor
que yo, si es que hacerle quiero? 765

AUTOR Si no pica de arrogante el dómine, mucho sabe.

PEDRO Sé todo aquello que cabe en un general farsante;
sé todos los requisitos 770 que un farsante ha de tener para serlo, que han de ser tan raros como infinitos.

De gran memoria, primero;
segundo, de suelta lengua; 775
y que no padezca mengua de galas es lo tercero.

Buen talle no le perdono, si es que ha de hacer los galanes;
no afectado en ademanes, 780
ni ha de recitar con tono.

Con descuido cuidadoso, grave anciano, joven presto,
enamorado compuesto,
con rabia si está celoso. 785

Ha de recitar de modo,
con tanta industria y cordura, que se vuelva en la figura que hace de todo en todo.

A los versos ha de dar 790 valor con su lengua experta, y a la fábula que es muerta ha de hacer resucitar.

Ha de sacar con espanto las lágrimas de la risa, 795 y hacer que vuelvan con prisa otra vez al triste llanto.

Ha de hacer que aquel semblante que él mostrare, todo oyente le muestre, y será excelente 800 si hace aquesto el recitante.

(Entra el ALGUACIL de las comedias.)

ALGUACIL ¿Ahora están tan despacio?
Esperarles he a que acaben.
Bien parece que no saben las nuevas que hay en palacio. 805 Vengan, que ya me amohína la posma que en ellos reina, aguardando el rey o reina

y la nueva su sobrina.

AUTOR ¿Qué sobrina?

ALGUACIL Una gitana, 810
dicen, que es bella en extremo.

PEDRO Que sea Belica temo.
¿Y eso es verdad?

ALGUACIL Y tan llana, que yo no sé cuál se sea mayor verdad por agora. 815 Y la reina, mi señora, hacerle fiestas desea.
Venid, que allá lo sabréis todo como pasa al punto.

PEDRO Mucho bien me vendrá junto 820 si por vuestro me queréis.

AUTOR Admitido estáis ya al gremio de nuestro alegre ejercicio, pues vuestro raro juicio, mayor lauro pide en premio. 825 Largo hablaremos después.
Vamos, y haremos la prueba de vuestra gracia tan nueva, ensayando un entremés.

PEDRO No me hará ventaja alguno 830 en eso, cual se verá.

ALGUACIL Señores, que es tarde ya.

AUTOR ¿Falta aquí alguno?

REPRESENTANTE 1 Ninguno.

(Vanse todos.)

(Salen el REY y SILERIO.)

REY En cualquier traje se muestra su belleza al descubierto: 835 gitana, me tuvo muerto;
dama, a matarme se adiestra.

El parentesco no afloja mi deseo; antes, por él con ahínco más crüel 840 toda el alma se congoja.

(Suenan guitarras.)

Pero, ¿qué música es ésta?

SILERIO Los comediantes serán, que adonde se visten van.

REY Ya me entristece la fiesta; 845

ya sólo con mi deseo
quisiera avenirme a solas, y dar costado a las olas del mar de amor do me veo.

Pero escucha, que mi historia 850
parece que oigo cantar,
y es señal que ha de durar luengos siglos su memoria.

(Entran los MÚSICOS cantando este romance:)

MÚSICOS     Bailan las gitanas; míralas el rey; 855
                  la reina, con celos,
                  mándalas prender.
Por Pascua de Reyes
hicieron al rey
un baile gitano 860
Belica e Inés;
turbada Belica,
cayó junto al rey,
y el rey la levanta
de puro cortés; 865
mas como es Belilla
de tan linda tez,
la reina, celosa,
                  mándalas prender.

SILERIO    Vienen tan embebecidos, 870 que no nos echan de ver.

REY    Cantan lo que debe ser suspensión de los sentidos.

MÚSICO 1 El rey está aquí. ¡Chitón!
Quizá no le agradará 875
nuestra canción.

MÚSICO 2 Sí hará,
por ser nueva la canción,
y no contiene otra cosa,
fuera de que es dulce y grave, que decir lo que se sabe: 880 que es la reina recelosa, y hechura de la mujer
tener celos del marido.

REY; Qué bien que lo has entendido!
Dételo el diablo a entender. 885 Silerio, mi muerte y vida vienen juntas. ¿Qué haré?

SILERIO Mostrar a un tiempo la fe, aquí cierta, allí fingida.

(Entran la REINA y BELICA, ya vestida de dama; INÉS, de gitana; MALDONADO, el autor, MARTÍN CRESPO, el alcalde, y PEDRO DE URDEMALAS.)

PEDRO Famosa Isabel, que ya 890
fuiste Belica primero;
Pedro, el famoso embustero, postrado a tus pies está,
tan hecho a hacer desvaríos, que, para cobrar renombre, 895 el Pedro de Urde, su nombre, ya es Nicolás de los Ríos.
Digo que tienes delante

a tu Pedro conocido, de gitano convertido 900
en un famoso farsante, para servirte en más obras que puedes imaginar, si no le quieres faltar con lo mucho en que a otros sobras. 905

Tu presunción y la mía
han llegado a conclusión:
la mía sólo en ficción;
la tuya, como debía.

Hay suertes de mil maneras, 910 que, entre donaires y burlas, hacen señores de burlas,
como señores de veras.

Yo, farsante, seré rey cuando le haya en la comedia, 915 y tú, oyente, ya eres media reina por valor y ley.

En burlas podré servirte, tú hacerme merced de veras, si tras las mañas ligeras 920 del vulgo no quieres irte;
en el cual, si alguno hubo o hay humilde en rica alteza, siempre queda la bajeza de aquel principio que tuvo. 925

Pero tu ser y virtud
me tienen bien satisfecho, que no llegará a tu pecho la sombra de ingratitud.

Por aquesta buena fe, 930 de la reina, ¡oh gran sobrina!, y por ver que a ti se inclina quien gitano por ti fue, que al rey pidas te suplico, andando el tiempo, una cosa 935 más buena que provechosa, porque a mi gusto la aplico.

REY Desde luego la concedo; pide lo que es de tu gusto.

PEDRO Por ser lo que quiero justo, 940
lo declararé sin miedo.

Y es que, pues claro se entiende que el recitar es oficio que a enseñar, en su ejercicio, y a deleitar sólo atiende, 945

y para esto es menester grandísima habilidad,
trabajo y curiosidad,
saber gastar y tener,
que ninguno no le haga 950 que las partes no tuviere que este ejercicio requiere, con que enseñe y satisfaga.

Preceda examen primero,
o muestra de compañía, 955
y no por su fantasía
se haga autor un pandero.

Con esto pondrán la mira a esmerarse en su ejercicio:
que tanto es bueno el oficio, 960 cuanto es el fin a que aspira.

BELICA Yo haré que el rey, mi señor, vuestra petición conceda.

REY Y aun otras, si hay en qué pueda valerle vuestro favor. 965

REINA Con mejores ojos miro ahora que la miréis;

y en cuanto por ella hacéis,
más me alegre que me admiro.

Ya mi voluntad se inclina 970
a acreditar a los dos:
que entre mis celos y vos
se ha puesto el ser mi sobrina.

Vamos a oír la comedia con gusto, pues que los cielos 975 no ordenaron que mis celos la volviesen en tragedia.

Y avisaráse a mi hermano luego deste hallazgo bueno.

(Éntrese.)

REY Ya yo le tengo en el seno 980
y le toco con la mano.

¡Oh imaginación, que alcanzas las cosas menos posibles, si alcanzan las imposibles de reyes las esperanzas! 985

SILERIO No te aflijas, que no es tanto el parentesco que impida hallar a tu mal salida.

REY Sí; mas moriré entretanto.

(Éntrese el REY y SILERIO.)

MALDONADO Señora Belica, espere; 990 mire que soy Maldonado, su conde.

BELICA Tengo otro estado que estar aquí no requiere.
Maldonado, perdonadme, que yo os hablaré otro día. 995

INÉS ¡Hermana Belica mía!

BELICA La reina espera; dejadme.

(Éntrase BELICA.)

INÉS ¡Entróse! ¡Quién me dijera aquesto casi antiyer!
No lo pudiera creer, 1000
si con los ojos lo viera.
¡Válame Dios, y qué ingrata mochacha, y qué sacudida!

PEDRO La mudanza de la vida mil firmezas desbarata, 1005
mil agravios comprende, mil vivezas atesora, y olvida sólo en un hora lo que en mil siglos aprende.

ALCALDE Pedro, ¿cómo estás aquí 1010 tan galán? ¿Qué te has hecho?

PEDRO Pudiérame haber deshecho, si no mirara por mí.
Mudado he de oficio y nombre,

y no es así comoquiera: 1015
hecho estoy una quimera.

ALCALDE Siempre tú fuiste gran hombre.

Yo por el premio venía
de la danza que enseñaste, que en ella claro mostraste 1020 tu ingenio y tu bizarría;
y si en el mundo no hubiera pajes, yo sé que durara su fama hasta que llegara la edad que ha de ser postrera. 1025

Clemente y Clemencia están muy buenos, sin ningún mal, y Benita con Pascual
garrida vida se dan.

(Entra UNO.)

UNO Sus majestades aguardan; 1030 bien pueden ya comenzar.

PEDRO Después podremos hablar.

UNO Miren que dicen que tardan.

PEDRO Ya ven vuesas mercedes que los reyes aguardan allá dentro, y no es posible 1035 entrar todos a ver la gran comedia que mi autor representa, que alabardas y lancineques y frinfrón impiden la entrada a toda gente mosquetera.
Mañana, en el teatro, se hará una, 1040

donde por poco precio verán todos desde principio al fin toda la traza, y verán que no acaba en casamiento, cosa común y vista cien mil veces, ni que parió la dama esta jornada, 1045
y en otra tiene el niño ya sus barbas, y es valiente y feroz, y mata y hiende,
y venga de sus padres cierta injuria, y al fin viene a ser rey de un cierto reino que no hay cosmografía que le muestre. 1050 Destas impertinencias y otras tales ofreció la comedia libre y suelta, pues llena de artificio, industria y galas, se cела del gran Pedro de Urdemalas.

EL JUEZ DE LOS DIVORCIOS

Entremés del Juez de los divorcios

Sale el JUEZ, y otros dos con él, que son ESCRIBANO y PROCURADOR, y siéntase en una silla; salen el VEJETE y MARIANA, su mujer.

MARIANA.- Aun bien que está ya el señor juez de los divorcios sentado en la silla de su audiencia. Desta vez tengo de quedar dentro o fuera; desta vegada tengo de quedar libre de pedido y alcabala, como el gavilán.

VEJETE.- Por amor de Dios, Mariana, que no almonedeas tanto tu negocio: habla paso, por la pasión que Dios pasó; mira que tienes atronada a toda la vecindad con tus gritos; y, pues tienes delante al señor juez, con menos voces le puedes informar de tu justicia.

JUEZ.- ¿Qué pendencia traéis, buena gente?

MARIANA.- Señor, ¡divorcio, divorcio, y más divorcio, y otras mil veces divorcio!

JUEZ.- ¿De quién, o por qué, señora?

MARIANA.- ¿De quién? Deste viejo que está presente.

JUEZ.- ¿Por qué?

MARIANA.- Porque no puedo sufrir sus impertinencias, ni estar contino atenta a curar todas sus enfermedades, que son sin número; y no me criaron a mí mis padres para ser hospitalera ni enfermera. Muy buen dote llevé al poder desta espuerta de huesos, que me tiene consumidos los días de la vida; cuando entré en su poder, me relumbraba la cara como un espejo, y agora la tengo con una vara de frisa encima. Vuesa merced, señor juez, me descase, si no quiere que me ahorque; mire, mire los surcos que tengo por este rostro, de las lágrimas que derramo cada día por verme casada con esta anotomía.

JUEZ.- No lloréis, señora; bajad la voz y enjugad las lágrimas, que yo os haré justicia.

MARIANA.- Déjeme vuesa merced llorar, que con esto descanso. En los reinos y en las repúblicas bien ordenadas, había de ser limitado el tiempo de los matrimonios, y de tres en tres años se habían de deshacer, o confirmarse de nuevo, como cosas de arrendamiento; y no que hayan de durar toda la vida, con perpetuo dolor de entrambas partes.

JUEZ.- Si ese arbitrio se pudiera o debiera poner en práctica, y por dineros, ya se hubiera hecho; pero especificad más, señora, las ocasiones que os mueven a pedir divorcio.

MARIANA.- El invierno de mi marido y la primavera de mi edad; el quitarme el sueño, por levantarme a media noche a calentar paños y saquillos de salvado para ponerle en la ijada; el ponerle, ora aquesto, ora aquella ligadura, que ligado le vea yo a un palo por justicia; el cuidado que tengo de ponerle de noche alta cabecera de la cama, jarabes lenitivos, porque no se ahogue del pecho; y el estar obligada a sufrirle el mal olor de la boca, que le güele mal a tres tiros de arcabuz.

ESCRIBANO.- Debe de ser de alguna muela podrida.

VEJETE.- No puede ser, porque lleve el diablo la muela ni diente que tengo en toda ella.

PROCURADOR.- Pues ley hay que dice, según he oído decir, que por sólo el mal olor de la boca se puede descasar la mujer del marido, y el marido de la mujer.

VEJETE.- En verdad, señores, que el mal aliento que ella dice que tengo, no se engendra de mis podridas muelas, pues no las tengo, ni menos procede de mi estómago, que está sanísimo, sino desamala intención de su pecho. Mal conocen vuestras mercedes a esta señora, pues a fe que, si la conociesen, que la ayunarian o la santiguarían. Veinte y dos años ha que vivo con ella mártir, sin haber sido jamás confesor de sus insolencias, de sus voces y de sus fantasías, y ya va para dos años que cada día me va dando vaivenes y empujones hacia la sepultura; a cuyas voces me tiene medio sordo, y, a puro reñir, sin juicio. Si me cura, como ella dice, cúrame a regañadientes; habiendo de ser suave la mano y la condición del médico. En resolución, señores: yo soy el que muero en su poder, y ella es la que vive en el mío, porque es señora, con mero mixto imperio, de la hacienda que tengo.

MARIANA.- ¿Hacienda vuestra? Y ¿qué hacienda tenéis vos, que no la hayáis ganado con la que llevastes en mi dote? Y son míos la mitad de los bienes gananciales, mal que os pese; y dellos y de la dote, si me muriese agora, no os dejaría valor de un maravedí, porque veáis el amor que os tengo.

JUEZ.- Decid, señor: cuando entrastes en poder de vuestra mujer, ¿no entrastes gallardo, sano y bien acondicionado?

VEJETE.- Ya he dicho que ha veinte y dos años que entré en su poder, como quien entra en el de un cómitre calabrés a remar en galeras de por fuerza; y entré tan sano, que podía decir y hacer como quien juega a las pintas.

MARIANA.- Cedacico nuevo, tres días en estaca.

JUEZ.- Callad, callad, nora en tal, mujer de bien, y andad con Dios, que yo no hallo causa para descasaros; y, pues comistes las maduras, gustad de las duras; que no está obligado ningún marido a tener la velocidad y corrida del tiempo, que no pase por su puerta y por sus días; y descontad los malos que ahora os da, con los buenos que os dio cuando pudo; y no repliquéis más palabra.

VEJETE.- Si fuese posible, recibiría gran merced que vuesa merced me la hiciese de despenarme, alzándome esta carcelería; porque, dejándome así, habiendo ya llegado a este rompimiento, será de nuevo entregarme al verdugo que me martirice; y si no, hagamos una cosa: enciérrese ella en un monesterio y yo en otro; partamos la hacienda, y desta suerte podremos vivir en paz y en servicio de Dios lo que nos queda de la vida.

MARIANA.- ¡Malos años! ¡Bonica soy yo para estar encerrada! No sino llegaos a la niña, que es amiga de redes, de tornos, rejas y escuchas, encerraos vos, que lo podréis llevar y sufrir, que ni tenéis ojos con que ver, ni oídos con que oír, ni pies con que andar, ni mano con que tocar: que yo, que estoy sana, y con todos mis cinco sentidos cabales y vivos, quiero usar dellos a la descubierta, y no por brújula, como quínola dudosa.

ESCRIBANO.- Libre es la mujer.

PROCURADOR.- Y prudente el marido; pero no puede más.

JUEZ.- Pues yo no puedo hacer este divorcio, quia nullam invenio causam.

(Entra un SOLDADO bien aderezado y su mujer, DOÑA GUIOMAR.)

DOÑA GUIOMAR.- ¡Bendito sea Dios!, que se me ha cumplido el deseo que tenía de verme ante la presencia de vuesa merced, a quien suplico, cuan encarecidamente puedo, sea servido de descasarme déste.

JUEZ.- ¿Qué cosa es déste? ¿No tiene otro nombre? Bien fuera que dijérades siquiera: «deste hombre».

DOÑA GUIOMAR.- Si él fuera hombre, no procurara yo descasarme.

JUEZ.- Pues ¿qué es?

DOÑA GUIOMAR.- Un leño.

SOLDADO.- Aparte. Por Dios, que he de ser leño en callar y en sufrir. Quizá con no defenderme ni contradecir a esta mujer el juez se inclinará a condenarme; y, pensando que me castiga, me sacará de cautiverio, como si por milagro se librase un cautivo de las mazmorras de Tetuán.

PROCURADOR.- Hablad más comedido, señora, y relatad vuestro negocio, sin improprios de vuestro marido; que el señor juez de los divorcios, que está delante, mirará rectamente por vuestra justicia.

DOÑA GUIOMAR.- Pues, ¿no quieren vuesas mercedes que llame leño a una estatua, que no tiene más acciones que un madero?

MARIANA.- Ésta y yo nos quejamos, sin duda, de un mismo agravio.

DOÑA GUIOMAR.- Digo, en fin, señor mío, que a mí me casaron con este hombre, ya que quiere vuesa merced que así lo llame; pero no es este hombre con quien yo me casé.

JUEZ.- ¿Cómo es eso?, que no os entiendo.

DOÑA GUIOMAR.- Quiero decir que pensé que me casaba con un hombre moliente y corriente, y a pocos días hallé que me había casado con un leño, como tengo dicho; porque él no sabe cuál es su mano derecha, ni busca medios ni trazas para granjear un real con que ayude a sustentar su casa y familia. Las mañanas se le pasan en oír misa y en estarse en la puerta de Guadalajara murmurando, sabiendo nuevas, diciendo y escuchando mentiras; y las tardes, y aun las mañanas también, se va de en casa en casa de juego, y allí sirve de número a los mirones, que, según he oído decir, es un género de gente a quien aborrecen en todo extremo los gariteros. A las dos de la tarde viene a comer, sin que le hayan dado un real de barato, porque ya no se usa el darlo. Vuélvese a ir, vuelve a media noche, cena si lo halla, y si no, santíguase, bosteza y acuéstase; y en toda la noche no sosiega, dando vueltas. Pregúntole qué tiene. Respóndeme que está haciendo un soneto en la memoria para un amigo que se le ha pedido; y da en ser poeta, como si fuese oficio con quien no estuviese vinculada la necesidad del mundo.

SOLDADO.- Mi señora doña Guiomar, en todo cuanto ha dicho, no ha salido de los límites de la razón; y, si yo no la tuviera en lo que hago, como ella la tiene en lo que dice, ya había yo de haber procurado algún favor de palillos, de aquí o de allí, y procurar verme, como se ven otros hombrécitos aguditos y bulliciosos, con una vara en las manos, y sobre una mula de alquiler pequeña, seca y maliciosa, sin mozo de mulas que le acompañe, porque las tales mulas nunca se alquilan sino a faltas y cuando están de nones; sus alforjitas a las ancas: en la una un cuello y una camisa, y en la otra su medio queso y su pan y su bota; sin añadir a los vestidos que trae de rúa, para hacellos de camino, sino unas polainas y una sola espuela; y, con una comisión, y aun comezón en el seno, sale por esa Puente Toledana raspahilando, a pesar de las malas mañanas de la harona, y, a cabo de pocos días, envía a su casa algún pernil de tocino y algunas varas de lienzo crudo; en fin, de aquellas cosas que valen baratas en los lugares del distrito de su comisión, y con esto sustenta su casa como el pecador mejor puede; pero yo, que ni tengo oficio ni beneficio, no sé qué hacerme, porque no hay señor que quiera servirse de mí, porque soy casado; así que, me será forzoso suplicar a vuesa merced, señor juez, pues ya por pobres son tan enfadosos los hidalgos, y mi mujer lo pide, que nos divida y aparte.

DOÑA GUIOMAR.- Y hay más en esto, señor juez: que, como yo veo que mi marido es tan para poco, y que padece necesidad, muérome por remedialle; pero no puedo, porque, en resolución, soy mujer de bien, y no tengo de hacer vileza.

SOLDADO.- Por esto solo merecía ser querida esta mujer, pero, debajo deste pundonor, tiene encubierta la más mala condición de la tierra: pide celos sin causa, grita sin porqué, presume sin hacienda, y, como me ve pobre, no me estima en el baile del rey Perico; y es lo peor, señor juez, que quiere que, a trueco de la fidelidad que me guarda, le sufra y disimule millares de millares de impertinencias y desabrimientos que tiene.

DOÑA GUIOMAR.- ¿Pues no? ¿Y por qué no me habéis vos de guardar a mí decoro y respeto, siendo tan buena como soy?

SOLDADO.- Oíd, señora doña Guiomar; aquí, delante destos señores, os quiero decir esto: ¿por qué me hacéis cargo de que sois buena, estando vos obligada a serlo, por ser de tan buenos padres nacida, por ser cristiana y por lo que debéis a vos misma? ¡Bueno es que quieran las mujeres que las respeten sus maridos porque son castas y honestas; como si en sólo esto consistiese, de todo en todo, su perfección; y no echan de ver los desaguaderos por donde desaguan la fineza de otras mil virtudes que les faltan! ¿Qué se me da a mí que seáis casta con vos misma, puesto que se me da mucho, si os descuidáis de que lo sea vuestra criada, y si andáis siempre rostrituerta, enojada, celosa, pensativa, manirrota, dormilona, perezosa, pendenciera, gruñidora, con otras insolencias deste jaez, que bastan a consumir las vidas de docientos maridos? Pero, con todo esto, digo, señor juez, que ninguna cosa destas tiene mi señora doña Guiomar; y confieso que yo soy el leño, el inhábil, el dejado y el perezoso; y que, por ley de buen gobierno, aunque no sea por otra cosa, está vuesa merced obligado a descasarnos; que desde aquí digo que no tengo ninguna cosa que alegar contra lo que mi mujer ha dicho, y que doy el pleito por concluso, y holgaré de ser condenado.

DOÑA GUIOMAR.- ¿Qué hay que alegar contra lo que tengo dicho? Que no me dais de comer a mí, ni a vuestra criada; y monta que son muchas, sino una, y aun esa sietemesina, que no come por un grillo.

ESCRIBANO.- Sosiéguese; que vienen nuevos demandantes.

(Entra uno vestido a lo médico, y es CIRUJANO, y ALDONZA DE MINJACA, su mujer.)

CIRUJANO.- Por cuatro causas bien bastantes, vengo a pedir a vuesa merced, señor juez, haga divorcio entre mí y la señora doña Aldonza de Minjaca, mi mujer, que está presente.

JUEZ.- Resoluto venís; decid las cuatro causas.

CIRUJANO.- La primera, porque no la puedo ver más que a todos los diablos; la segunda, por lo que ella se sabe; la tercera, por lo que yo me callo; la cuarta, porque no me lleven los demonios, cuando desta vida vaya, si he de durar en su compañía hasta mi muerte.

PROCURADOR.- Bastantísimamente ha probado su intención.

MINJACA.- Señor juez, vuesa merced me oiga, y advierta que, si mi marido pide por cuatro causas divorcio, yo le pido por cuatrocientas. La primera, porque, cada vez que le veo, hago cuenta que veo al mismo Lucifer; la segunda, porque fui engañada cuando con él me casé, porque él dijo que era médico de pulso, y remaneció cirujano, y hombre que hace ligaduras y cura otras enfermedades, que va decir desto a médico la mitad del justo precio; la tercera, porque tiene celos del sol que me toca; la cuarta, que, como no le puedo ver, querría estar apartada dél dos millones de leguas.

ESCRIBANO.- ¿Quién diablos acertará a concertar estos relojes, estando las ruedas tan desconcertadas?

MINJACA.- La quinta...

JUEZ.- Señora, señora, si pensáis decir aquí todas las cuatrocientas causas, yo no estoy para escuchallas, ni hay lugar para ello. Vuestro negocio se recibe a prueba; y andad con Dios, que hay otros negocios que despachar.

CIRUJANO.- ¿Qué más pruebas, sino que yo no quiero morir con ella, ni ella gusta de vivir conmigo?

JUEZ.- Si eso bastase para descasarse los casados, infinitísimos sacudirían de sus hombros el yugo del matrimonio.

(Entra uno vestido de GANAPÁN, con su caperuza cuarteada.)

GANAPÁN.- Señor juez: ganapán soy, no lo niego, pero cristiano viejo, y hombre de bien a las derechas; y, si no fuese que alguna vez me tomo del vino, o él me toma a mí, que es lo más cierto, ya hubiera sido prioste en la cofradía de los hermanos de la carga, pero, dejando esto aparte, porque hay mucho que decir en ello, quiero que sepa el señor juez que, estando una vez muy enfermo de los vaguidos de Baco, prometí de casarme con una mujer errada. Volví en mí, sané y cumplí la promesa, y caséme con una mujer que saqué de pecado; púsela a ser placera; ha salido tan soberbia y de tan mala condición, que nadie llega a su tabla con quien no riña, ora sobre el peso falto, ora sobre que le llegan a la fruta, y a dos por tres les da con una pesa en la cabeza, o adonde topa, y los deshonra hasta la cuarta generación, sin tener hora de paz con todas sus vecinas ya parleras; y yo tengo de tener todo el día la espada más lista que un sacabuche, para defendella; y no ganamos para pagar penas de pesos no maduros, ni de condenaciones de pependencias. Querría, si vuesa merced fuese servido, o que me apartase della, o, por lo menos, le mudase la condición acelerada que tiene en otra más reportada y más blanda; y prométole a vuesa merced de descargalle de balde todo el carbón que comprare este verano; que puedo mucho con los hermanos mercaderes de la costilla.

CIRUJANO.- Ya conozco yo a la mujer deste buen hombre, y es tan mala como mi Aldonza: que no lo puedo más encarecer.

JUEZ.- Mirad, señores, aunque algunos de los que aquí estáis habéis dado algunas causas que traen aparejada sentencia de divorcio, con todo eso, es menester que conste por escrito, y que lo digan testigos; y así, a todos os recibo a prueba. Pero, ¿qué es esto? ¿Música y guitarras en mi audiencia? ¡Novedad grande es ésta!

MÚSICO.- Señor juez, aquellos dos casados tan desavenidos que vuesa merced concertó, redujo y apaciguó el otro día, están esperando a vuesa merced con una gran fiesta en su casa; y por nosotros le envían a suplicar sea servido de hallarse en ella y honrallos.

JUEZ.- Eso haré yo de muy buena gana; y pluguiese a Dios que todos los presentes se apaciguasen como ellos.

PROCURADOR.- Desa manera, moriríamos de hambre los escribanos y procuradores desta audiencia; que no, no, sino todo el mundo ponga demandas de divorcios; que, al cabo, al cabo, los más se quedan como se estaban y nosotros habemos gozado del fruto de sus pendencies y necesidades.

MÚSICO.- Pues en verdad que desde aquí hemos de ir regocijando la fiesta.

(Cantan los músicos.)

Entre casados de honor, cuando hay pleito descubierto, más vale el peor concierto que no el divorcio mejor.

Donde no ciega el engaño simple, en que algunos están, las riñas de por San Juan son paz para todo el año.

Resucita allí el honor,
y el gusto, que estaba muerto, donde vale el peor concierto
más que el divorcio mejor.

Aunque la rabia de celos es tan fuerte y rigurosa, si los pide una hermosa,
no son celos, sino cielos.

Tiene esta opinión Amor, que es el sabio más experto:
que vale el peor concierto
más que el divorcio mejor.

FIN DESTE ENTREMÉS

EL RUFIÓN VIUDO

Entremés del Rufián viudo llamado Trampagos

Sale TRAMPAGOS con un capuz de luto, y con él VADEMÉCUM, su criado, con dos espadas de esgrima.

TRAMPAGOS; Vademécum!

VADEMÉCUM; Señor?

TRAMPAGOS; Traes las morenas?

VADEMÉCUM; Traígoras.

TRAMPAGOS; Está bien: muestra y camina, y saca aquí la silla de respaldo,
con los otros asientos de por casa.

VADEMÉCUM; ¿Qué asientos? ¿Hay alguno, por ventura? 5

TRAMPAGOS; Saca el mortero, puerco, el broquel saca, y el banco de la cama.

VADEMÉCUM; Está impedido;

fáltale un pie.

TRAMPAGOS¿Y es tacha?

VADEMÉCUM¡Y no pequeña!

(Éntrase VADEMÉCUM.)

TRAMPAGOS¡Ah, Periconas, Periconas mías, y aun de todo el concejo! En fin, llegóse 10 el tuyo: yo quedé, tú te has partido, y es lo peor que no imagino adónde, aunque, según fue el curso de tu vida, bien se puede creer piadosamente que estás en parte... Aun no me determino 15 de señalarte asiento en la otra vida.
Tendréla yo, sin ti, como de muerte.
¡Que no me hallara yo a tu cabecera cuando diste el espíritu a los aires, para que le acogiera entre mis labios, 20
y en mi estómago limpio le envasara!
¡Miseria humana! ¿Quién de ti confía?
Ayer fui Periconas, hoy tierra fría, como dijo un poeta celeberrimo.

(Entra CHIQUIZNAQUE, RUFIÁN.)

RUFIÁNMi so Trampagos, ¿es posible sea 25 voacé tan enemigo suyo que se entumbe, se encubra y se trasponga debajo desa sombra bayetuna el sol hampesco? So Trampagos, basta tanto gemir, tantos suspiros bastan; 30 trueque voacé las lágrimas corrientes en limosnas y en misas y oraciones por la gran Periconá, que Dios haya; que importan más que llantos y sollozos.

TRAMPAGOS Voacé ha garlado como un tólogo, 35 mi señor Chiquiznaque; pero, en tanto que encarrilo mis cosas de otro modo, tome vuesa merced, y platiquemos una levada nueva.

RUFÍAN So Trampagos,
no es éste tiempo de levadas: llueven 40
o han de llover hoy pésames adunia, y ¿hémonos de ocupar en levadicas?

(Entra VADEMÉCUM con la silla, muy vieja y rota.)

VADEMÉCUM ¡Bueno, por vida mía! Quien le quita a mi señor de líneas y posturas, le quita de los días de la vida. 45

TRAMPAGOS Vuelve por el mortero y por el banco, y el broquel no se olvide, Vademécum.

VADEMÉCUM Y aun trairé el asador, sartén y platos.

(Vuélvese a entrar.)

TRAMPAGOS Después platicaremos una treta, única, a lo que creo, y peregrina; 50 que el dolor de la muerte de mi ángel las manos ata y el sentido todo.

RUFIÁN¿De qué edad acabó la mal lograda?

TRAMPAGOSPara con sus amigas y vecinas, treinta y dos años tuvo.

RUFIÁN¿Edad lozana! 55

TRAMPAGOSSi va a decir verdad, ella tenía cincuenta y seis; pero, de tal manera supo encubrir los años, que me admiro.
¡Oh, qué teñir de canas! ¡Oh, qué rizos, vuelos de plata en oro los cabellos! 60
A seis del mes que viene hará quince años que fue mi tributaria, sin que en ellos me pusiese en pendencia, ni en peligro de verme palmeadas las espaldas.
Quince cuaresmas, si en la cuenta acierto, 65 pasaron por la pobre desde el día que fue mi cara, agradecida prenda, en las cuales, sin duda, susurraron a sus oídos treinta y más sermones, y en todos ellos, por respeto mío, 70 estuvo firme, cual está a las olas del mar movable la inmovible roca.
¡Cuántas veces me dijo la pobreta, saliendo de los trances rigurosos de gritos y plegarias y de ruegos, 75 sudando y trasudando: «¡Plega al cielo, Trampagos mío, que en descuento vaya de mis pecados lo que aquí yo paso por ti, dulce bien mío!»

RUFIÁN¿Bravo triunfo!
¡Ejemplo raro de inmortal firmeza! 80

¡Allá lo habrá hallado!

TRAMPAGOS ¿Quién lo duda?
Ni aun una sola lágrima vertieron jamás sus ojos en las sacras pláticas, cual si de esparto o pedernal su alma formada fuera.

RUFIÁN ¡Oh, hembra benemérita 85 de griegas y romanas alabanzas!
¿De qué murió?

TRAMPAGOS ¿De qué? Casi de nada:
los médicos dijeron que tenía malos los hipocondrios y los hígados, y que con agua de taray pudiera 90
vivir, si la bebiera, setenta años.

RUFIÁN ¿No la bebió?

TRAMPAGOS Murióse.

RUFIÁN Fue una necia.
¡Bebiérala hasta el día del jüicio, que hasta entonces viviera! El yerro estuvo en no hacerla sudar.

TRAMPAGOS Sudó once veces. 95

(Entra VADEMÉCUM con los asientos referidos.)

RUFÍAN¿Y aprovechó alguna?

TRAMPAGOSCasi todas:
siempre quedaba como un ginjo verde,
sana como un peruétano o manzana.

RUFÍANDícenme que tenía ciertas fuentes en las piernas y brazos.

TRAMPAGOSLa sin dicha 100 era un Aranjuéz; pero, con todo, hoy come en ella, la que llaman tierra, de las más blancas y hermosas carnes que jamás encerraron sus entrañas;
y, si no fuera porque habrá dos años 105 que comenzó a dañársele el aliento, era abrazarla como quien abraza un tiesto de albahaca o clavellinas.

RUFÍANNeguijón debió ser, o corrimiento, el que dañó las perlas de su boca, 110
quiero decir, sus dientes y sus muelas.

TRAMPAGOSUna mañana amaneció sin ellos.

VADEMÉCUMAsí es verdad, mas fue deso la causa que anocheció sin ellos; de los finos, cinco acerté a contarle; de los falsos, 115 doce disimulaba en la covacha.

TRAMPAGOS¿Quién te mete a ti en esto, mentecato?

VADEMÉCUMAcredito verdades.

TRAMPAGOSChiquiznaque,
ya se me ha reducido a la memoria la treta de denantes; toma, y vuelve 120 al ademán primero.

VADEMÉCUMPongan pausa,
y quédese la treta en ese punto;
que acuden moscovitas al reclamo.
La Repulida viene y la Pizpita,
y la Mostrenca, y el jayán Juan Claros. 125

TRAMPAGOSVengan en hora buena; vengan ellos en cien mil norabuenas.

(Entran la REPULIDA, la PIZPITA, la MOSTRENCA y el rufián JUAN CLAROS.)

JUAN CLAROSEn las mismas esté mi sor Trampagos.

REPULIDAQuiera el cielo mudar su escuridad en luz clarísima.

PIZPITADesollado le vieses ya mis lumbres 130 de aquel pellejo lóbrego y oscuro.

MOSTRENCO¡Jesús, y qué fantasma noturnina!
Quítenmele delante.

VADEMÉCUM¿Melindricos?

TRAMPAGOSFuera yo un Polifemo, un antropófago, un troglodita, un bárbaro Zoílo, 135 un caimán, un caribe, un comevivos, si de otra suerte me adornara, en tiempo de tamaña desgracia.

JUAN CLAROSRazón tiene.

TRAMPAGOS¿He perdido una mina potosisca, un muro de la yedra de mis faltas, 140 un árbol de la sombra de mis ansias!

JUAN CLAROSEra la Pericon a un pozo de oro.

TRAMPAGOSSentarse a prima noche, y, a las horas que se echa el golpe, hallarse con sesenta numos en cuartos, ¿por ventura es barro? 145
Pues todo esto perdí en la que ya pudre.

REPULIDAConfieso mi pecado: siempre tuve envidia a su no vista diligencia.
No puedo más; yo hago lo que puedo, pero no lo que quiero.

PIZPITANo te penes, 150
pues vale más aquel que Dios ayuda, que el que mucho madruga; ya me entiendes.

VADEMÉCUMEl refrán vino aquí como de molde; ¡Tal os dé Dios el sueño, mentecatas!

MOSTRENCONacidas somos; no hizo Dios a nadie 155
a quien desamparase. Poco valgo; pero, en fin, como y ceno, y a mi cuyo le traigo más vestido que un palmito.
Ninguna es fea, como tenga bríos; ¡feo es el diablo!

VADEMÉCUMAlegra la Mostrenca 160 muy bien de su derecho, y alegara mejor si se añadiera el ser muchacha y limpia, pues lo es por todo extremo.

RUFÍANEn el que está Trampagos me da lástima.

TRAMPAGOSVestíme este capuz; mis dos lanternas 165 convertí en alquitaras.

VADEMÉCUM¿De aguardiente?

TRAMPAGOSPues, ¿tanto cielo yo, hi de malicias?

VADEMÉCUMA cuatro lavanderas de la puente puede dar quince y falta en la colambre; miren qué ha de llorar, sino agua-ardiente. 170

JUAN CLAROSYo soy de parecer que el gran Trampagos ponga silencio a su contino llanto y vuelva al sicut erat in principio, digo a sus olvidadas alegrías, y tome prenda que las tuyas quite; 175 que es bien que el vivo vaya a la hogaza, como el muerto se va a la sepultura.

REPULIDAZonzorino Catón es Chiquiznaque.

PIZPITAPequeña soy, Trampagos, pero grande tengo la voluntad para servirte; 180 no tengo cuyo, y tengo ochenta cobas.

REPULIDAYo ciento, y soy dispuesta y nada lerda.

MOSTRENCOVeinte y dos tengo yo, y aun venticuatro, y no soy mema.

REPULIDA;Oh mi Jezúz! ¿Qué es esto?
¿Contra mí la Pizpita y la Mostrenca? 185 ¿En tela quieres competir conmigo, culebrilla de alambre, y tú, pazguata?

PIZPITAPor vida de los huesos de mi abuela, doña Mari-Bobales, monda-níspolas, que no la estimo en un feluz morisco. 190 ¿Han visto el ángel tonto almidonado, cómo quiere empinarse sobre todas?

MOSTRENCOSobre mí no, a lo menos; que no sufro carga que no me ajuste y me convenga.

JUAN CLAROS Adviertan que defiendo a la Pizpita. 195

RUFÍAN Consideren que está la Repulida debajo de las alas de mi amparo.

VADEMÉCUM Aquí fue Troya, aquí se hacen rajas;
los de las cachas amarillas salen;
aquí, otra vez, fue Troya.

REPULIDA Chiquiznaque, 200
no he menester que nadie me defienda;
aparta, tomaré yo la venganza, rasgando con mis manos pecadoras la cara de membrillo cuartanario.

JUAN CLAROS ¡Repulida, respeto al gran Juan Claros! 205

PIZPITA Déjala, venga; déjala que llegue esa cara de masa mal sobada.

(Entra UNO muy alborotado.)

UNO Juan Claros, ¡la justicia, la justicia!
El alguacil de la justicia viene la calle abajo.

(Éntrase luego.)

JUAN CLAROS ¡Cuerpo de mi padre! 210 ¡No paro más aquí!

TRAMPAGOSTénganse todos;
ninguno se alborote; que es mi amigo el alguacil; no hay que tenerle miedo.

(Torna a entrar.)

UNONo viene acá, la calle abajo cuela.

(Vase.)

RUFÍANEl alma me temblaba ya en las carnes, 215
porque estoy desterrado.

TRAMPAGOSAunque viniera,
no nos hiciera mal, yo lo sé cierto;
que no puede chillar, porque está untado.

VADEMÉCUMCese, pues, la pendencia, y mi sor sea el que escoja la prenda que le cuadre 220 o le esquine mejor.

REPULIDAYo soy contenta.

PIZPITAY yo también.

MOSTRENCOY yo.

VADEMÉCUMGracias al cielo, que he hallado a tan gran mal, tan gran remedio.

TRAMPAGOSA búrrome y escojo.

MOSTRENCODios te guíe.

REPULIDA Si te aburres, Trampagos, la escogida 225 también será aburrida.

TRAMPAGOSErrado anduve;
sin aburrirme escojo.

MOSTRENCODios te guíe.

TRAMPAGOSDigo que escojo aquí a la Repulida.

JUAN CLAROSCon su pan se la coma, Chiquiznaque.

RUFÍANY aun sin pan, que es sabrosa en cualquier modo. 230

REPULIDATuya soy; ponme un clavo y una S en estas dos mejillas.

PIZPITA¡Oh hechicera!

MOSTRENCONo es sino venturosa; no la envidies, porque no es muy católico Trampagos, pues ayer enterró a la Periconas, 235
y hoy la tiene olvidada.

REPULIDA Muy bien dices.

TRAMPAGO Este capuz arruga, Vademécum;
y dile al padre que sobre él te preste una docena de reäles.

VADEMÉCUM Creo
que tengo yo catorce.

TRAMPAGO Luego luego, 240 parte y trae seis azumbres de lo caro; alas pon en los pies.

VADEMÉCUM Y en las espaldas.

(Éntrase VADEMÉCUM con el capuz, y queda en cuerpo TRAMPAGOS.)

TRAMPAGOS ¡Por Dios, que si durara la bayeta, que me pudieran enterrar mañana!

REPULIDA ¡Ay, lumbré destas lumbres, que son tuyas, 245
y cuán mejor estás en este traje, que en el otro, sombrío y malencónico!

(Entran dos MÚSICOS, sin guitarras.)

MÚSICO 1 Tras el olor del jarro nos venimos yo y mi compadre.

TRAMPAGO En hora buena sea.

¿Y las guitarras?

MÚSICO 1 En la tienda quedan; 250
vaya por ellas Vademécum.

MÚSICO 2 Vaya;
mas yo quiero ir por ellas.

MÚSICO 1 De camino, (Éntrase el un MÚSICO.)

diga a mi oíslo que, si viene alguno al rapio rapis, que me aguarde un poco:
que no haré sino colar seis tragos, 255
y cantar dos tonadas y partirme;
que ya el señor Trampagos, según muestra, está para tomar armas de gusto.

(Vuelve VADEMÉCUM.)

VADEMÉCUM Ya está en el antesala el jarro.

TRAMPAGOS Traile.

VADEMÉCUM No tengo taza.

TRAMPAGOS Ni Dios te la depare. 260
El cuerno de orinar no está estrenado;
tráele, que te maldiga el cielo santo;
que eres bastante a deshorrar un duque.

VADEMÉCUMSosiéguese; que no ha de faltar copa, y aun copas, aunque sean de sombreros. 265
Aparte.

A buen seguro que éste es churrullero.

(Entra UNO, como cautivo, con una cadena al hombro, y pónese a mirar a todos muy atento, y todos a él.)

REPULIDA¿Jesús! ¿Es visión ésta? ¿Qué es aquesto?
¿No es éste Escarramán? Él es, sin duda.
¡Escarramán del alma, dame, amores, esos brazos, columna de la hampa! 270

TRAMPAGOS¡Oh Escarramán, Escarramán amigo!
¿Cómo es esto? ¿A dicha eres estatua?
Rompe el silencio y habla a tus amigos.

PIZPITA¿Qué traje es éste y qué cadena es ésta?
¿Eres fantasma, a dicha? Yo te toco, 275
y eres de carne y hueso.

MOSTRENCOÉl es, amiga;
no lo puede negar, aunque más calle.

ESCARRAMÁNYo soy Escarramán, y estén atentos al cuento breve de mi larga historia.

(Vuelve el barbero con dos guitarras, y da la una al compañero.)

«Dio la galera al traste en Berbería, 280 donde la furia de un jüez me puso por espalder de la siniestra banda;
mudé de cautiverio y de ventura;
quedé en poder de turcos por esclavo;
de allí a dos meses, como el cielo plugo, 285 me levanté con una galeota;
cobré mi libertad y ya soy mío.
Hice voto y promesa inviolable de no mudar de ropa ni de carga hasta colgarla de los muros santos 290 de una devota ermita, que en mi tierra llaman de San Millán de la Cogolla.» Y éste es el cuento de mi estraña historia, digna de atesorarla en mi memoria.
La Méndez no estará ya de provecho; 295 ¿vive?

JUAN CLAROSY está en Granada a sus anchuras.

RUFÍÁN;Allí le duele al pobre todavía!

ESCARRAMÁN;Qué se ha dicho de mí en aqueste mundo, en tanto que en el otro me han tenido mis desgracias y gracia?

MOSTRENCOCien mil cosas; 300
ya te han puesto en la horca los farsantes.

PIZPITALos muchachos han hecho pepitoria de todas tus médulas y tus huesos.

REPULIDAHante vuelto divino: ¿qué más quieres?

RUFÍAN
Cántante por las plazas, por las calles; 305 báilante en los teatros y en las casas;
has dado que hacer a los poetas, más que dio Troya al mantuano Títiro.

JUAN CLAROS
Óyente resonar en los establos.

REPULIDA
Las fregonas te alaban en el río; 310 los mozos de caballos te almohazan.

RUFÍAN
Túndete el tundidor con sus tijeras; muy más que el potro rucio eres famoso.

MOSTRENCO
Han pasado a las Indias tus palmeos, en Roma se han sentido tus desgracias, 315
y hante dado botines sine numero.

VADEMÉCUM
Por Dios que te han molido como alheña, y te han desmenuzado como flores,
y que eres más sonado y más mocososo que un reloj y que un niño de dotrina. 320 De ti han dado querella todos cuantos bailes pasaron en la edad del gusto, con apretada y dura residencia;
pero llevóse el tuyo la excelencia.

ESCARRAMÁN
Tenga yo fama, y háganme pedazos; 325 de Éfeso el templo abrasaré por ella.

(Tocan de improviso los músicos, y comienzan a cantar este romance:)

*Ya salió de las gurapas
el valiente Escarramán,
para asombro de la gura
y para bien de su mal. 330*

ESCARRAMÁN¿Es aquesto brindarme, por ventura?
¿Piensan se me ha olvidado el regodeo?
Pues más ligero vengo que solía;
si no, toquen, y vaya, y fuera ropa.

PIZPITA¿Oh flor y fruto de los bailarines, 335
y qué bueno has quedado!

VADEMÉCUMSuelto y limpio.

JUAN CLAROSÉl honrará las bodas de Trampagos.

ESCARRAMÁNToquen; verán que soy hecho de azogue.

MÚSICOSVáyanse todos por lo que cantare,
y no será posible que se yerren. 340

ESCARRAMÁNToquen; que me deshago y que me bullo.

REPULIDAYa me muero por verle en la estacada.

MÚSICOEstén alerta todos.

RUFÍAN Ya lo estamos.

(Cantan.)

*Ya salió de las gurapas
el valiente Escarramán, 345
para asombro de la gura,
y para bien de su mal.*
Ya vuelve a mostrar al mundo su felice habilidad, su ligereza y su brío, 350
y su presencia real.
Pues falta la Coscolina, supla agora en su lugar la Repulida, olorosa más que la flor de azahar. 355 Y, en tanto que se remonda la Pizpita sin igual, de la Gallarda el paseo nos muestre aquí Escarramán.

(Tocan la Gallarda; dánzala ESCARRAMÁN, que le ha de hacer el bailarín; y, en habiendo hecho una mudanza, prosíguese el romance.)

La Repulida comience, 360 con su brío, a rastrear, pues ella fue la primera que nos le vino a mostrar.
Escarramán la acompañe;
la Pizpita, otro que tal, 365 Chiquiznaque y la Mostrenca, con Juan Claros el galán.
¡Vive Dios que va de perlas!
No se puede desear

más ligereza o más garbo, 370 más certeza o más compás.
¡A ello, hijos, a ello!
No se pueden alabar
otras ninfas ni otros rufos que nos pueden igualar. 375 ¡Oh, qué desmayar de manos!
¡Oh, qué huir y qué juntar!
¡Oh, qué nuevos laberintos, donde hay salir y hay entrar!
Muden el baile a su gusto, 380 que yo le sabré tocar:
el Canario, o las Gambetas, o Al villano se lo dan, Zarabanda, o Zambapalo, el Pésame dello y más; 385 el Rey don Alonso el Bueno, gloria de la antigüedad.

ESCARRAMÁN El Canario, si le tocan, a solas quiero bailar.

MÚSICO Tocaré yo de plata; 390
tú de oro le bailarás.

(Toca el Canario, y baila solo ESCARRAMÁN; y, en habiéndole bailado, diga:)

ESCARRAMÁN Vaya El villano a lo burdo, con la cebolla y el pan,
y acompañenme los tres.

MÚSICO Que te bendiga San Juan. 395

(Bailan el Villano, como bien saben, y, acabado el Villano, pida ESCARRAMÁN el baile que quisiere, y acabado, diga TRAMPAGOS:)

TRAMPAGOS Mis bodas se han celebrado mejor que las de Roldán.
Todos digan, como digo: ¡Viva, viva Escarramán!

TODOS ¡Viva, viva! 400

LA ELECCIÓN DE LOS ALCALDES DE DAGANZO

Entremés de La elección de los alcaldes de Daganzo

Salen el BACHILLER PESUÑA; PEDRO ESTORNUDO, escribano; PANDURO, regidor, y ALONSO ALGARROBA, regidor.

PANDURO Rellánense; que todo saldrá a cuajo, si es que lo quiere el cielo benditísimo.

ALGUACIL Mas echémoslo a doce, y no se venda.

PANDURO Paz, que no será mucho que salgamos bien del negocio, si lo quiere el cielo. 5

ALGUACIL Que quiera, o que no quiera, es lo que importa...

PANDURO ¡Algarroba, la lengua se os deslucia!
Habrád acomedido y de buen rejo, que no me suenan bien esas palabras: «quiera o no quiera el cielo», por San Junco, 10 que, como presomís de resabido, os arrojáis a trochemoche en todo.

ALGUACIL Cristiano viejo soy a todo ruedo, y creo en Dios a pies jontillas.

BACHILLER Bueno;
no hay más que desear.

ALGUACIL Y si, por suerte, 15
hablé mal, yo confieso que soy ganso, y doy lo dicho por no dicho.

ESTORNUDO Basta;
no quiere Dios, del pecador más malo, sino que viva y se arrepienta.

ALGUACIL Digo
que vivo y me arrepiento, y que conozco 20 que el cielo puede hacer lo que él quisiere, sin que nadie le pueda ir a la mano, especial cuando llueve.

PANDURO De las nubes,
Algarroba, cae el agua, no del cielo.

ALGUACIL ¡Cuerpo del mundo! Si es que aquí venimos 25 a reprochar los unos a los otros, díganmoslo; que a fe que no le falten reproches a Algarroba a cada paso.

BACHILLER Redeamus ad rem, señor Panduro y señor Algarroba; no se pase 30 el tiempo en niñerías escusadas.
¿Juntámonos aquí para disputas impertinentes? ¡Bravo caso es éste, que siempre que Panduro y Algarroba están juntos, al punto se levantan 35 entre ellos mil borrascas y tormentas de mil contradictorias intenciones!

ESTORNUDOEl señor bachiller Pesuña tiene demasiada razón: véngase al punto, y mírese qué alcaldes nombraremos 40 para el año que viene, que sean tales, que no los pueda calumniar Toledo, sino que los confirme y dé por buenos,
pues para esto ha sido nuestra junta.

PANDURODe las varas hay cuatro pretendientes: 45
Juan Berrocal, Francisco de Humillos, Miguel Jarrete y Pedro de la Rana; hombres todos de chapa y de caletre, que pueden gobernar, no que a Daganzo, sino a la misma Roma.

ALGUACILRomanillos. 50

ESTORNUDO¿Hay otro apuntamiento? ¡Por San Pito, que me salga del corro!

ALGUACILBien parece que se llama Estornudo el escribano, que así se le encarama y sube el humo.
Sosiéguese, que yo no diré nada. 55

PANDURO¿Hallarse han, por ventura, en todo el sorbe...?

ALGUACIL¿Qué es sorbe, sorbe-huevos? Orbe diga el discreto Panduro, y serle ha sano.

PANDURO Digo que en todo el mundo no es posible que se hallen cuatro ingenios como aquestos 60 de nuestros pretensores.

ALGUACIL Por lo menos, yo sé que Berrocal tiene el más lindo
distinto.

ESTORNUDO ¿Para qué?

ALGUACIL Para ser sacre en esto de mojón y catavinos.
En mi casa probó los días pasados 65 una tinaja, y dijo que sabía el claro vino a palo, a cuero y hierro;
acabó la tinaja su camino,
y hallóse en el asiento della un palo pequeño, y dél prendía una correa 70 de cordobán y una pequeña llave.

ESTORNUDO ¡Oh rara habilidad! ¡Oh raro ingenio!
Bien puede gobernar, el que tal sabe,
a Alanís y a Cazalla, y aun a Esquivias.

ALGUACIL Miguel Jarrete es águila.

BACHILLER ¿En qué modo? 75

ALGUACIL En tirar con un arco de bodoques.

BACHILLER¿Que tan certero es?

ALGUACIL
Es de manera
que, si no fuese porque los más tiros se da en la mano izquierda, no habría pájaro en todo este contorno.

BACHILLER¿Para alcalde 80
es rara habilidad, y necesaria!

ALGUACIL¿Qué diré de Francisco de Humillos?
Un zapato remienda como un sastre.
Pues, ¿Pedro de la Rana? No hay memoria que a la suya se iguale; en ella tiene 85 del antiguo y famoso Perro de Alba todas las coplas, sin que letra falte.

PANDUROÉste lleva mi voto.

ESTORNUDOY aun el mío.

ALGUACILA Berrocal me atengo.

BACHILLERYo a ninguno, si es que no dan más pruebas de su ingenio 90
a la jurisprudencia encaminadas.

ALGUACILYo daré un buen remedio, y es aquéste:
hagan entrar los cuatro pretendientes, y el señor bachiller Pesuña puede examinarlos, pues del arte sabe, 95 y, conforme a su ciencia, así veremos quién podrá ser nombrado para el cargo.

ESCRIBANO; Vive Dios, que es rarísima advertencia!

PANDURO Aviso es que podrá servir de arbitrio para Su Jamestad; que, como en Corte 100 hay potra-médicos, haya potra-alcaldes.

ALGUACIL Prota, señor Panduro; que no potra.

PANDURO Como vos no hay friscal en todo el mundo.

ALGUACIL; Fiscal, pese a mis males!

ESCRIBANO; Por Dios santo, que es Algarroba impertinente!

ALGUACIL Digo 105
que, pues se hace examen de barberos, de herradores, de sastres, y se hace de cirujanos y otras zarandajas, también se examinasen para alcaldes;
y, al que se hallase suficiente y hábil 110 para tal menester, que se le diese carta de examen, con la cual podría el tal examinado remediarse; porque, de lata en una blanca caja la carta acomodando merecida, 115 a tal pueblo podrá llegar el pobre, que le pesen a oro; que hay hogaño carestía de alcaldes de caletre en lugares pequeños casi siempre.

BACHILLER Ello está muy bien dicho y bien pensado: 120 llamen a Berrocal; entre, y veamos dónde llega la raya de su ingenio.

ALGUACIL Humillos, Rana, Berrocal, Jarrete, los cuatro pretensores, se han entrado;

(Entran estos cuatro labradores.)

ya los tienes presentes.

BACHILLER Bien venidos 125
sean vuesas mercedes.

BERROCAL Bien hallados vuesas mercedes sean.

PANDURO Acomódense,
que asientos sobran.

HUMILLOS; Siéntome, y me siento!

JARRETE Todos nos sentaremos, Dios loado.

RANA ¿De qué os sentís, Humillos?

HUMILLOS De que vaya 130 tan a la larga nuestro nombramiento.
¿Hémoslo de comprar a gallipavos, a cántaros de arrope y a abiervadas,
y botas de lo añejo tan crecidas, que se arremetan a ser cueros? Díganlo, 135
y pondráse remedio y diligencia.

BACHILLER No hay sobornos aquí; todos estamos de un común parecer, y es que el que fuere más hábil para alcalde, ése se tenga por escogido y por llamado.

RANA Bueno; 140
yo me contento.

BERROCAL Y yo.

BACHILLER Mucho en buen hora.

HUMILLOS También yo me contento.

JARRETE Dello gusto.

BACHILLER Vaya de examen, pues.

HUMILLOS De examen venga.

BACHILLER ¿Sabéis leer, Humillos?

HUMILLOS No, por cierto, ni tal se probará que en mi linaje 145 haya persona tan de poco asiento, que se ponga a aprender esas quimeras, que llevan a los hombres al brasero,
y a las mujeres, a la casa llana.
Leer no sé, mas sé otras cosas tales 150 que llevan al leer ventajas muchas.

BACHILLERY ¿cuáles cosas son?

HUMILLOS Sé de memoria todas cuatro oraciones, y las rezo cada semana cuatro y cinco veces.

RANAY ¿con eso pensáis de ser alcalde? 155

HUMILLOS Con esto, y con ser yo cristiano viejo, me atrevo a ser un senador romano.

BACHILLER Está muy bien. Jarrete diga agora qué es lo que sabe.

JARRETE Yo, señor Pesuña, sé leer, aunque poco; deletreo, 160 y ando en el be-a-ba bien ha tres meses, y en cinco más daré con ello a un cabo;
y, además desta ciencia que ya aprendo, sé calzar un arado bravamente, y herrar, casi en tres horas, cuatro pares 165 de novillos briosos y cerreros;

soy sano de mis miembros, y no tengo sordez ni cataratas, tos ni reumas;
y soy cristiano viejo como todos,
y tiro con un arco como un Tulio. 170

ALGUACIL;Raras habilidades para alcalde; necesarias y muchas!

BACHILLERAdelante.
¿Qué sabe Berrocal?

BERROCALTengo en la lengua toda mi habilidad, y en la garganta; no hay mojón en el mundo que me llegue; 175 sesenta y seis sabores estampados tengo en el paladar, todos vináticos.

ALGUACILY ¿quiere ser alcalde?

BERROCALY lo requiero;
pues, cuando estoy armado a lo de Baco, así se me aderezan los sentidos, 180 que me parece a mí que en aquel punto podría prestar leyes a Licurgo y limpiarme con Bártulo.

PANDURO;Pasito,
que estamos en concejo!

BERROCALNo soy nada
melindroso ni puerco; sólo digo 185 que no se me malogre mi justicia, que echaré el bodegón por la ventana.

BACHILLER Amenazas aquí, por vida mía, mi señor Berrocal, que valen poco.
¿Qué sabe Pedro Rana?

RANA Como Rana, 190
habré de cantar mal; pero, con todo, diré mi condición, y no mi ingenio.
Yo, señores, si acaso fuese alcalde, mi vara no sería tan delgada como las que se usan de ordinario: 195 de una encina o de un roble la haría, y gruesa de dos dedos, temeroso que no me la encorvase el dulce peso de un bolsón de ducados, ni otras dádivas, o ruegos, o promesas, o favores, 200 que pesan como plomo, y no se sienten hasta que os han brumado las costillas del cuerpo y alma; y, junto con aquesto, sería bien criado y comedido, parte severo y nada riguroso; 205 nunca deshonoraría al miserable que ante mí le trujesen sus delitos; que suele lastimar una palabra de un jüez arrojado, de afrentosa, mucho más que lastima su sentencia, 210
aunque en ella se intime cruel castigo.
No es bien que el poder quite la crianza, ni que la sumisión de un delincuente haga al juez soberbio y arrogante.

ALGUACIL; Vive Dios, que ha cantado nuestra Rana 215 mucho mejor que un cisne cuando muere!

PANDURO Mil sentencias ha dicho censorinas.

ALGUACIL De Catón Censorino; bien ha dicho el regidor Panduro.

PANDURO ¡Reprochadme!

ALGUACIL Su tiempo se vendrá.

ESTORNUDO Nunca acá venga. 220 ¡Terrible inclinación es, Algarroba, la vuestra en reprochar!

ALGUACIL ¡No más, so escriba!

ESTORNUDO ¿Qué escriba, fariseo?

BACHILLER ¡Por San Pedro, que son muy demasiadas demasiás éstas!

ALGUACIL Yo me burlaba.

ESTORNUDO Y yo me burlo. 225

BACHILLER Pues no se burlen más, por vida mía.

ALGUACIL Quien miente, miente.

ESTORNUDOY quien verdad pronuncia, dice verdad.

ALGUACILVerdad.

ESTORNUDOPues punto en boca.

HUMILLOSEsos ofrecimientos que ha hecho Rana, son desde lejos. A fe que si él empuña 230 vara, que él se trueque y sea otro hombre del que ahora parece.

BACHILLEREstá de molde
lo que Humillos ha dicho.

HUMILLOSY más añadido:
que, si me dan la vara, verán como no me mudo ni trueco, ni me cambio. 235

BACHILLERPues veis aquí la vara, y haced cuenta que sois alcalde ya.

ALGUACIL¡Cuerpo del mundo!
¿La vara le dan zurda?

HUMILLOS¿Cómo zurda?

ALGUACILPues, ¿no es zurda esta vara? Un sordo o mudo lo podrá echar de ver desde una legua. 240

HUMILLOS¿Cómo, pues, si me dan zurda la vara, quieren que juzgue yo derecho?

ESTORNUDOEl diablo
tiene en el cuerpo este Algarroba; ¡miren dónde jamás se han visto varas zurdas!

(Entra UNO.)

UNOSeñores, aquí están unos gitanos 245 con unas gitanillas milagrosas;
y, aunque la ocupación se les ha dicho en que están sus mercedes, todavía porfían que han de entrar a dar solacio a sus mercedes.

BACHILLEREntren, y veremos 250 si nos podrán servir para la fiesta del Corpus, de quien yo soy mayordomo.

PANDUROEntren mucho en buen hora.

BERROCALEntren luego.

HUMILLOSPor mí, ya los deseo.

JARRETEPues yo, ¿pajas?

RANA¿Ellos no son gitanos? Pues adviertan 255 que no nos hurten las narices.

UNOEllos,
sin que los llamen, vienen; ya están dentro.

(Entran los MÚSICOS, de gitanos, y dos gitanas bien aderezadas, y, al son de este romance, que han de cantar los MÚSICOS, ellas dancen.)

MÚSICOS      Reverencia os hace el cuerpo, regidores de Daganzo, hombres buenos de repente, 260
hombres buenos de pensado;
de caletre prevenidos para proveer los cargos que la ambición solicita entre moros y cristianos. 265 Parece que os hizo el cielo,
el cielo, digo, estrellado, Sansones para las letras, y para las fuerzas Bártulos.

JARRETETodo lo que se canta toca historia. 270

HUMILLOSEllas y ellos son únicos y ralos.

ALGUACILAlgo tienen de espesos.

BACHILLEREa, sufficit.

MÚSICOS      Como se mudan los vientos, como se mudan los ramos, que, desnudos en invierno, 275

se visten en el verano, mudaremos nuestros bailes por puntos, y a cada paso;
pues mudarse las mujeres
no es nuevo ni extraño caso. 280 ¡Vivan de Daganzo los regidores, que parecen palmas, puesto que son robles!

(Bailan.)

JARRETE ¡Brava trova, por Dios!

HUMILLOS Y muy sentida.

BERROCAL Estas se han de imprimir, para que quede memoria de nosotros en los siglos 285 de los siglos. Amén.

BACHILLER Callen, si pueden.

MÚSICOS ¡Vivan y revivan, y en siglos veloces
del tiempo los días
pasen con las noches, 290 sin trocar la edad,
que treinta años forme, ni tocar las hojas
de sus alcornoques.
Los vientos, que anegan, 295
si contrarios corren,
cual céfiros blandos
en sus mares soplen.

¡Vivan de Daganzo los regidores, que palmas parecen, puesto que son robles! 300

BACHILLER El estribillo en parte me desplace; pero, con todo, es bueno.

BERROCALEa, callemos.

MÚSICOS      Pisaré yo el polvico, atán menudico;
pisaré yo el polvó, 305
atán menudó.

PANDURO Estos músicos hacen pepitoria de su cantar.

HUMILLO Son diablos los gitanos.

MÚSICOS      Pisaré yo la tierra, por más que esté dura, 310 puesto que me abra en ella amor sepultura,
pues ya mi buena ventura
amor la pisó.
Atán menudó. 315
Pisaré yo lozana
el más duro suelo,
si en él acaso pisas
el mal que recelo.
Mi bien se ha pasado en vuelo, 320
y el polvo dejó
Atán menudó.

(Entra un SOTASACRISTÁN, muy mal endeliñado.)

SACRISTÁN Señores regidores, ¡voto a dico, que es de bellacos tanto pasatiempo!
¿Así se rige el pueblo, noramala, 325 entre guitarras, bailes y bureos?

BACHILLER ¡Agarradle, Jarrete!

JARRETE Ya le agarro.

BACHILLER Traigan aquí una manta; que, por Cristo, que se ha de mantear este bellaco, necio, desvergonzado e insolente, 330
y atrevido además.

SACRISTÁN ¡Oigan, señores!

ALGUACIL Volveré con la manta a las volanzas.

(Éntrase ALGARROBA.)

SACRISTÁN Miren que les intimo que soy presbíter.

BACHILLER ¿Tú presbítero, infame?

SACRISTÁN Yo presbítero;
o de prima tonsura, que es lo mismo. 335

PANDUROAgora lo veredes, dijo Agrajes.

SACRISTÁNNo hay Agrajes aquí.

BACHILLERPues habrá grajos que te piquen la lengua y aun los ojos.

RANADime, desventurado: ¿qué demonio se revistió en tu lengua? ¿Quién te mete 340 a ti en reprehender a la justicia?
¿Has tú de gobernar a la república?
Métete en tus campanas y en tu oficio.
Deja a los que gobiernan; que ellos saben lo que han de hacer mejor que no nosotros. 345 Si fueren malos, ruega por su enmienda; si buenos, porque Dios no nos los quite.

BACHILLERNuestro Rana es un santo y un bendito.

(Vuelve ALGARROBA; trae la manta.)

ALGUACILNo ha de quedar por manta.

BACHILLERAsgan, pues, todos, sin que queden gitanos ni gitanas. 350 ¡Arriba, amigos!

SACRISTÁN¡Por Dios, que va de veras!
¡Vive Dios, si me enoja, que bonito soy yo para estas burlas! ¡Por San Pedro, que están descomulgados todos cuantos han tocado los pelos de la manta! 355

RANABasta, no más; aquí cese el castigo; que el pobre debe estar arrepentido.

SACRISTÁNY molido, que es más. De aquí adelante me coseré la boca con dos cabos de zapatero.

RANAAqueso es lo que importa. 360

BACHILLERVénganse los gitanos a mi casa, que tengo qué decilles.

GITANOTras ti vamos.

BACHILLERQuedarse ha la elección para mañana, y desde luego doy mi voto a Rana.

GITANO¿Cantaremos, señor?

BACHILLERLo que quisiéredes. 365

PANDURONo hay quien cante cual nuestra Rana canta.

JARRETENo solamente canta, sino encanta.

Pisaré yo el polvico.

LA GUARDA CUIDADOSA

Entremés de La guarda cuidadosa

Sale un SOLDADO a lo pícaro, con una muy mala banda y un antojo, y detrás dél un mal SACRISTÁN.

SOLDADO.- ¿Qué me quieres, sombra vana?

SACRISTÁN.- No soy sombra vana, sino cuerpo macizo.

SOLDADO.- Pues, con todo eso, por la fuerza de mi desgracia, te conjuro que me digas quién eres, y qué es lo que buscas por esta calle.

SACRISTÁN.- A eso te respondo, por la fuerza de mi dicha, que soy Lorenzo Pasillas, sotasacristán desta parroquia, y busco en esta calle lo que hallo, y tú buscas y no hallas.

SOLDADO.- ¿Buscas por ventura a Cristinica, la fregona desta casa?

SACRISTÁN.- Tu dixisti.

SOLDADO.- Pues ven acá, sotasacristán de Satanás.

SACRISTÁN.- Pues voy allá, caballo de Ginebra.

SOLDADO.- Bueno: sota y caballo; no falta sino el rey para tomar las manos. Ven acá, digo otra vez, ¿y tú no sabes, Pasillas, que pasado te vea yo con un chuzo, que Cristinica es prenda mía?

SACRISTÁN.- ¿Y tú no sabes, pulpo vestido, que esa prenda la tengo yo rematada, que está por sus cabales y por mía?

SOLDADO.- ¡Vive Dios, que te dé mil cuchilladas, y que te haga la cabeza pedazos!

SACRISTÁN.- Con las que le cuelgan desas calzas, y con los dese vestido, se podrá entretener, sin que se meta con los de mi cabeza.

SOLDADO.- ¿Has hablado alguna vez a Cristina?

SACRISTÁN.- Cuando quiero.

SOLDADO.- ¿Qué dádivas le has hecho?

SACRISTÁN.- Muchas.

SOLDADO.- ¿Cuántas y cuáles?

SACRISTÁN.- Dile una destas cajas de carne de membrillo, muy grande, llena de cercenaduras de hostias blancas como la misma nieve, y de añadidura cuatro cabos de velas de cera, asimismo blancas como un armiño.

SOLDADO.- ¿Qué más le has dado?

SACRISTÁN.- En un billete envueltos, cien mil deseos de servirla.

SOLDADO.- Y ella, ¿cómo te ha correspondido?

SACRISTÁN.- Con darme esperanzas propincuas de que ha de ser mi esposa.

SOLDADO.- Luego, ¿no eres de epístola?

SACRISTÁN.- Ni aun de completas. Motilón soy, y puedo casarme cada y cuando me viniere en voluntad; y presto lo veredes.

SOLDADO.- Ven acá, motilón arrastrado; respóndeme a esto que preguntarte quiero. Si esta mochacha ha correspondido tan altamente, lo cual yo no creo, a la miseria de tus dádivas, ¿cómo corresponderá a la grandeza de las mías? Que el otro día le envié un billete amoroso, escrito por lo menos en un revés de un memorial que di a Su Majestad, significándole mis servicios y mis necesidades presentes (que no cae en mengua el soldado que dice que es pobre), el cual memorial salió decretado y remitido al limosnero mayor; y, sin atender a que sin duda alguna me podía valer cuatro o seis reales, con liberalidad increíble y con desenfado notable, escribí en el revés dél, como he dicho, mi billete; y sé que de mis manos pecadoras llegó a las tuyas casi santas.

SACRISTÁN.- ¿Hasle enviado otra cosa?

SOLDADO.- Suspiros, lágrimas, sollozos, parasismos, desmayos, con toda la caterva de las demostraciones necesarias que para descubrir su pasión los buenos enamorados usan, y deben de usar en todo tiempo y sazón.

SACRISTÁN.- ¿Hasle dado alguna música concertada?

SOLDADO.- La de mis lamentos y congojas, las de mis ansias y pesadumbres.

SACRISTÁN.- Pues a mí me ha acontecido dársela con mis campanas a cada paso; y tanto, que tengo enfadada a toda la vecindad con el continuo ruido que con ellas hago, sólo por darle contento y porque sepa que estoy en la torre, ofreciéndome a su servicio; y, aunque haya de tocar a muerto, repico a vísperas solenes.

SOLDADO.- En eso me llevas ventaja, porque no tengo qué tocar, ni cosa que lo valga.

SACRISTÁN.- ¿Y de qué manera ha correspondido Cristina a la infinidad de tantos servicios como le has hecho?

SOLDADO.- Con no verme, con no hablarme, con maldecirme cuando me encuentra por la calle, con derramar sobre mí las lavazas cuando jabona y el agua de fregar cuando friega; y esto es cada día, porque todos los días estoy en esta calle y a su puerta; porque soy su guarda cuidadosa; soy, en fin, el perro del hortelano, &c. Yo no la gozo, ni ha de gozarla ninguno mientras yo viviere; por eso, váyase de aquí el señor sotasacristán; que, por haber tenido y tener respeto a las órdenes que tiene, no le tengo ya rompidos los cascos.

SACRISTÁN.- A rompérmelos como están rotos esos vestidos, bien rotos estuvieran.

SOLDADO.- El hábito no hace al monje; y tanta honra tiene un soldado roto por causa de la guerra, como la tiene un colegial con el manto hecho añicos, porque en él se muestra la antigüedad de sus estudios; y váyase, que haré lo que dicho tengo.

SACRISTÁN.- ¿Es porque me ve sin armas? Pues espérese aquí, señor guarda cuidadosa, y verá quién es Callejas.

SOLDADO.- ¿Qué puede ser un Pasillas?

SACRISTÁN.- «¡Ahora lo veredes!», dijo Agrajes.

(Éntrase el SACRISTÁN.)

SOLDADO.- ¡Oh, mujeres, mujeres, todas, o las más, mudables y antojadizas! ¿Dejas, Cristina, a esta flor, a este jardín de la soldadesca, y acomodaste con el muladar de un sotasacristán, pudiendo acomodarte con un sacristán entero, y aun con un canónigo? Pero yo procuraré que te entre en mal provecho, si puedo, aguando tu gusto, con ojear desta calle y de tu puerta los que imaginare que por alguna vía pueden ser tus amantes; y así vendré a alcanzar nombre de la guarda cuidadosa.

(Entra un MOZO con su caja y ropa verde, como estos que piden limosna para alguna imagen.)

MOZO.- Den, por Dios, para la lámpara del aceite de Señora Santa Lucía, que les guarde la vista de los ojos. ¡Ah de casa! ¿Dan la limosna?

SOLDADO.- Hola, amigo Santa Lucía, venid acá. ¿Qué es lo que queréis en esa casa?

MOZO.- ¿Ya vuesa merced no lo ve? Limosna para la lámpara del aceite de Señora Santa Lucía.

SOLDADO.- ¿Pedís para la lámpara o para el aceite de la lámpara? Que, como decís limosna para la lámpara del aceite, parece que la lámpara es del aceite, y no el aceite de la lámpara.

MOZO.- Ya todos entienden que pido para aceite de la lámpara, y no para la lámpara del aceite.

SOLDADO.- ¿Y suélenos dar limosna en esta casa?

MOZO.- Cada día dos maravedís.

SOLDADO.- ¿Y quién sale a dároslos?

MOZO.- Quien se halla más a mano; aunque las más veces sale una fregoncita que se llama Cristina, bonita como un oro.

SOLDADO.- Así que ¿es la fregoncita bonita como un oro?

MOZO.- ¡Y como unas pelras!

SOLDADO.- ¿De modo que no os parece mal a vos la muchacha?

MOZO.- Pues, aunque yo fuera hecho de leño, no pudiera parecerme mal.

SOLDADO.- ¿Cómo os llamáis? Que no querría volveros a llamar Santa Lucía.

MOZO.- Yo, señor, Andrés me llamo.

SOLDADO.- Pues, señor Andrés, esté en lo que quiero decirle: tome este cuarto de a ocho, y haga cuenta que va pagado por cuatro días de la limosna que le dan en esta casa y suele recibir por mano de Cristina; y váyase con Dios, y séale aviso que por cuatro días no vuelva a llegar a esta puerta ni por lumbre, que le romperé las costillas a coces.

MOZO.- Ni aun volveré en este mes, si es que me acuerdo. No tome vuesa merced pesadumbre, que ya me voy.

(Vase.)

SOLDADO.- ¡No, sino dormíos, guarda cuidadosa!

(Entra otro MOZO, vendiendo y pregonando tranzaderas, holanda de Cambray, randas de Flandes y hilo portugués.)

UNO.- ¿Compran tranzaderas, randas de Flandes, holanda, cambray, hilo portugués?

(CRISTINA, a la ventana.)

CRISTINA.- Hola, Manuel, ¿traéis vivos para unas camisas?

UNO.- Sí traigo, y muy buenos.

CRISTINA.- Pues entra, que mi señora los ha menester.

SOLDADO.- ¡Oh estrella de mi perdición, antes que norte de mi esperanza! Tranzaderas, o como os llamáis, ¿conocéis aquella doncella que os llamó desde la ventana?

UNO.- Sí conozco; pero, ¿por qué me lo pregunta vuesa merced?

SOLDADO.- ¿No tiene muy buen rostro y muy buena gracia?

UNO.- A mí así me lo parece.

SOLDADO.- Pues también me parece a mí que no entre dentro des a casa; si no, ¡por Dios, que he de molelle los huesos, sin dejarle ninguno sano!

UNO.- Pues, ¿no puedo yo entrar adonde me llaman para comprar mi mercadería?

SOLDADO.- ¡Vaya, no me replique, que haré lo que digo, y luego!

UNO.- ¡Terrible caso! Pasito, señor soldado, que ya me voy.

(Vase MANUEL.)

(CRISTINA, a la ventana.)

CRISTINA.- ¿No entras, Manuel?

SOLDADO.- Ya se fue Manuel, señora la de los vivos, y aun señora la de los muertos, porque a muertos y a vivos tienes debajo de tu mando y señorío.

CRISTINA.- ¡Jesús, y qué enfadoso animal! ¿Qué quieres en esta calle y en esta puerta?

(Éntrase CRISTINA.)

SOLDADO.- Encubrióse y púsose mi sol detrás de las nubes.

(Entra un ZAPATERO con unas chinelas pequeñas nuevas en la mano, y, yendo a entrar en casa de CRISTINA, detiéndole el SOLDADO.)

SOLDADO.- Señor bueno, ¿busca vuesa merced algo en esta casa?

ZAPATERO.- Sí busco.

SOLDADO.- ¿Y a quién, si fuere posible saberlo?

ZAPATERO.- ¿Por qué no? Busco a una fregona que está en esta casa, para darle estas chinelas que me mandó hacer.

SOLDADO.- ¿De manera que vuesa merced es su zapatero?

ZAPATERO.- Muchas veces la he calzado.

SOLDADO.- ¿Y hale de calzar ahora estas chinelas?

ZAPATERO.- No será menester; si fueran zapatillos de hombre, como ella los suele traer, sí calzara.

SOLDADO.- ¿Y éstas, están pagadas, o no?

ZAPATERO.- No están pagadas; que ella me las ha de pagar agora.

SOLDADO.- ¿No me haría vuesa merced una merced, que sería para mí muy grande, y es que me fiase estas chinelas, dándole yo prendas que lo valiesen, hasta desde aquí a dos días, que espero tener dineros en abundancia?

ZAPATERO.- Sí haré, por cierto: venga la prenda, que, como soy pobre oficial, no puedo fiar a nadie.

SOLDADO.- Yo le daré a vuesa merced un mondadientes, que le estimo en mucho, y no le dejaré por un escudo. ¿Dónde tiene vuesa merced la tienda, para que vaya a quitarle?

ZAPATERO.- En la calle Mayor, en un poste de aquellos, y llámome Juan Juncos.

SOLDADO.- Pues, señor Juan Juncos, el mondadientes es éste, y estímele vuesa merced en mucho, porque es mío.

ZAPATERO.- Pues, ¿una biznaga, que apenas vale dos maravedís, quiere vuesa merced que estime en mucho?

SOLDADO.- ¡Oh, pecador de mí! No la doy yo sino para recuerdo de mí mismo; porque, cuando vaya a echar mano a la faldriquera y no halle la biznaga, me venga a la memoria que la tiene vuesa merced y vaya luego a quitalla; sí, a fe de soldado, que no la doy por otra cosa; pero, si no está contento con ella, añadiré esta banda y este antojo; que al buen pagador no le duelen prendas.

ZAPATERO.- Aunque zapatero, no soy tan descortés que tengo de despojar a vuesa merced de sus joyas y preseas; vuesa merced se quede con ellas, que yo me quedaré con mis chinelas, que es lo que me está más a cuento.

SOLDADO.- ¿Cuántos puntos tienen?

ZAPATERO.- Cinco escasos.

SOLDADO.-

Más escaso soy yo, chinelas de mis entrañas, pues no tengo seis reales para pagaros; ¡chinelas de mis entrañas! Escuche vuesa merced, señor zapatero, que quiero glosar aquí de repente este verso, que me ha salido medido:

Chinelas de mis entrañas.

ZAPATERO.- ¿Es poeta vuesa merced?

SOLDADO.-

Famoso, y agora lo verá; estéme atento.

Chinelas de mis entrañas.

GLOSA

Es Amor tan gran tirano, que, olvidado de la fe que le guardo siempre en vano, hoy, con la funda de un pie, da a mi esperanza de mano.

Éstas son vuestras hazañas, fundas pequeñas y hurañas;

que ya mi alma imagina que sois, por ser de Cristina,
chinelas de mis entrañas.

ZAPATERO.- A mí poco se me entiende de trovas; pero éstas me han sonado tan bien, que me parecen de Lope, como lo son todas las cosas que son o parecen buenas.

SOLDADO.- Pues, señor, ya que no lleva remedio de fiarme estas chinelas, que no fuera mucho, y más sobre tan dulces prendas, por mi mal halladas, llévelo, a lo menos, de que vuesa merced me las guarde hasta desde aquí a dos días, que yo vaya por ellas; y por ahora, digo, por esta vez, el señor zapatero no ha de ver ni hablar a Cristina.

ZAPATERO.- Yo haré lo que me manda el señor soldado, porque se me trasluce de qué pies cojea, que son dos: el de la necesidad y el de los celos.

SOLDADO.- Ése no es ingenio de zapatero, sino de colegial trilingüe.

ZAPATERO.- ¡Oh, celos, celos, cuán mejor os llamaran duelos, duelos!

(Éntrase el ZAPATERO.)

SOLDADO.- No, sino no seáis guarda, y guarda cuidadosa, y veréis cómo se os entran mosquitos en la cueva donde está el licor de vuestro contento. Pero, ¿qué voz es ésta? Sin duda es la de mi Cristina, que se desenfada cantando, cuando barre o friega.

(Suenan dentro platos, como que friegan, y cantan:)

Sacristán de mi vida,
tenme por tuya,
y, fiado en mi fe,
canta alleluya.

SOLDADO.- ¡Oídos que tal oyen! Sin duda el sacristán debe de ser el brinco de su alma. ¡Oh platera, la más limpia que tiene, tuvo o tendrá el calendario de las fregonas! ¿Por qué, así como limpias esa loza talaveril que traes entre las manos, y la vuelves en bruñida y tersa plata, no limpias esa alma de pensamientos bajos y sotasacristaniles?

(Entra el AMO de CRISTINA.)

AMO.- Galán, ¿qué quiere o qué busca a esta puerta?

SOLDADO.- Quiero más de lo que sería bueno, y busco lo que no hallo; pero, ¿quién es vuesa merced que me lo pregunta?

AMO.- Soy el dueño desta casa.

SOLDADO.- ¿El amo de Cristinica?

AMO.- El mismo.

SOLDADO.- Pues lléguese vuesa merced a esta parte, y tome este envoltorio de papeles; y advierta que ahí dentro van las informaciones de mis servicios, con veinte y dos fees de veinte y dos generales, debajo de cuyos estandartes he servido, amén de otras treinta y cuatro de otros tantos maestros de campo, que se han dignado de honrarme con ellas.

AMO.- Pues no ha habido, a lo que yo alcanzo, tantos generales ni maestros de campo de infantería española de cien años a esta parte.

SOLDADO.- Vuesa merced es hombre pacífico, y no está obligado a entenderse mucho de las cosas de la guerra; pase los ojos por esos papeles, y verá en ellos, unos sobre otros, todos los generales y maestros de campo que he dicho.

AMO.- Yo los doy por pasados y vistos; pero, ¿de qué sirve darme cuenta desto?

SOLDADO.- De que hallará vuesa merced por ellos ser posible ser verdad una que agora diré, y es que estoy consultado en uno de tres castillos y plazas, que están vacas en el reino de Nápoles; conviene a saber: Gaeta, Barleta y Rijobes.

AMO.- Hasta agora, ninguna cosa me importa a mí estas relaciones que vuesa merced me da.

SOLDADO.- Pues, yo sé que le han de importar, siendo Dios servido.

AMO.- ¿En qué manera?

SOLDADO.- En que, por fuerza, si no se cae el cielo, tengo de salir proveído en una destas plazas, y quiero casarme agora con Cristinica; y, siendo yo su marido, puede vuesa merced hacer de mi persona y de mi mucha hacienda como de cosa propia; que no tengo de mostrarme desagradecido a la crianza que vuesa merced ha hecho a mi querida y amada consorte.

AMO.- Vuesa merced lo ha de los cascos más que de otra parte.

SOLDADO.- Pues, ¿sabe cuánto le va, señor dulce? Que me la ha de entregar luego luego, o no ha de atravesar los umbrales de su casa.

AMO.- ¿Hay tal disparate? ¿Y quién ha de ser bastante para quitarme que no entre en mi casa?

(Vuelve el SOTASACRISTÁN PASILLAS, armado con un tapador de tinaja y una espada muy mohosa; viene con él otro SACRISTÁN, con un morrión y una vara o palo, atado a él un rabo de zorra.)

SACRISTÁN.- ¡Ea, amigo Grajales, que éste es el turbador de mi sosiego!

GRAJALES.- No me pesa sino que traigo las armas endebles y algo tiernas; que ya le hubiera despachado al otro mundo a toda diligencia.

AMO.- ¡Ténganse, gentiles hombres! ¿Qué desmán y qué acecinamiento es éste?

SOLDADO.- ¡Ladrones! ¿A traición y en cuadrilla? Sacristanes falsos, voto a tal que os tengo de horadar, aunque tengáis más órdenes que un ceremonial. Cobarde, ¿a mí con rabo de zorra? ¿Es notarme de borracho, o piensas que estás quitando el polvo a alguna imagen de bulto?

GRAJALES.- No pienso sino que estoy ojeando los mosquitos de una tinaja de vino.

(A la ventana CRISTINA y su AMA.)

CRISTINA.- ¡Señora, señora, que matan a mi señor! Más de dos mil espadas están sobre él, que relumbran que me quitan la vista.

ELLA.- Dices verdad, hija mía; ¡Dios sea con él! ¡Santa Úrsola, con las once mil vírgines, sea en su guarda! Ven, Cristina, y bajemos a socorrerle como mejor pudiéremos.

AMO.- Por vida de vuestas mercedes, caballeros, que se tengan, y miren que no es bien usar de superchería con nadie.

SOLDADO.- ¡Tente, rabo, y tente, tapadorcillo; no acabéis de despertar mi cólera, que, si la acabo de despertar, os mataré, y os comeré, y os arrojaré por la puerta falsa dos leguas más allá del infierno!

AMO.- ¡Ténganse, digo; si no, por Dios que me descomponga de modo que pese a alguno!

SOLDADO.- Por mí, tenido soy; que te tengo respeto, por la imagen que tienes en tu casa.

SACRISTÁN.- Pues, aunque esa imagen haga milagros, no os ha de valer esta vez.

SOLDADO.- ¿Han visto la desvergüenza deste bellaco, que me viene a hacer cocos con un rabo de zorra, no habiéndome espantado ni atemorizado tiros mayores que el de Dio, que está en Lisboa?

(Entran CRISTINA y su SEÑORA.)

ELLA.- ¡Ay, marido mío! ¿Estáis, por desgracia, herido, bien de mi alma?

CRISTINA.- ¡Ay desdichada de mí! Por el siglo de mi padre, que son los de la pendencia mi sacristán y mi soldado.

SOLDADO.- Aun bien que voy a la parte con el sacristán; que también dijo: «mi soldado».

AMO.- No estoy herido, señora, pero sabed que toda esta pendencia es por Cristinica.

ELLA.- ¿Cómo por Cristinica?

AMO.- A lo que yo entiendo, estos galanes andan celosos por ella.

ELLA.- Y ¿es esto verdad, muchacha?

CRISTINA.- Sí, señora.

ELLA.- ¡Mirad con qué poca vergüenza lo dices! Y ¿hate deshonrado alguno dellos?

CRISTINA.- Sí, señora.

ELLA.- ¿Cuál?

CRISTINA.- El sacristán me deshonró el otro día, cuando fui al Rastro.

ELLA.- ¿Cuántas veces os he dicho yo, señor, que no saliese esta muchacha fuera de casa; que ya era grande, y no convenía apartarla de nuestra vista? ¿Qué dirá ahora su padre, que nos la entregó limpia de polvo y de paja? Y ¿dónde te llevó, traidora, para deshonorarte?

CRISTINA.- A ninguna parte, sino allí, en mitad de la calle.

ELLA.- ¿Cómo en mitad de la calle?

CRISTINA.- Allí, en mitad de la calle de Toledo, a vista de Dios y de todo el mundo, me llamó de sucia y de deshonesto, de poca vergüenza y menos miramiento, y otros muchos baldones deste jaez; y todo por estar celoso de aquel soldado.

AMO.- Luego, ¿no ha pasado otra cosa entre ti ni él, sino esa deshonra que en la calle te hizo?

CRISTINA.- No, por cierto, porque luego se le pasa la cólera.

ELLA.- El alma se me ha vuelto al cuerpo, que le tenía ya casi desamparado.

CRISTINA.- Y más, que todo cuanto me dijo fue confiado en esta cédula que me ha dado de ser mi esposo, que la tengo guardada como oro en paño.

AMO.- Muestra, veamos.

ELLA.- Leedla alto, marido.

AMO.- Así dice:

Digo yo, Lorenzo Pasillas, sotasacristán desta parroquia, que quiero bien, y muy bien, a la señora Cristina de Parraces; y en fee desta verdad, le di ésta, firmada de mi nombre, fecha en Madrid, en el cimiterio de San Andrés, a seis de mayo deste presente año de mil y seiscientos y once. Testigos: mi corazón, mi entendimiento, mi voluntad y mi memoria.

Lorenzo Pasillas.

¡Gentil manera de cédula de matrimonio!

SACRISTÁN.- Debajo de decir que la quiero bien, se incluye todo aquello que ella quisiere que yo haga por ella; porque, quien da la voluntad, lo da todo.

AMO.- Luego, si ella quisiese, ¿bien os casaríades con ella?

SACRISTÁN.- De bonísima gana, aunque perdiese la expectativa de tres mil maravedís de renta que ha de fundar agora sobre mi cabeza una agüela mía, según me han escrito de mi tierra.

SOLDADO.- Si voluntades se toman en cuenta, treinta y nueve días hace hoy que, al entrar de la Puente Segoviana, di yo a Cristina la mía, con todos los anejos a mis tres potencias; y, si ella quisiere ser mi esposa, algo irá a decir de ser castellano de un famoso castillo, a un sacristán no entero, sino medio, y aun de la mitad le debe de faltar algo.

AMO.- ¿Tienes deseo de casarte, Cristinica?

CRISTINA.- Sí tengo.

AMO.- Pues escoge, destos dos que se te ofrecen, el que más te agradare.

CRISTINA.- Tengo vergüenza.

ELLA.- No la tengas; porque el comer y el casar ha de ser a gusto propio, y no a voluntad ajena.

CRISTINA.- Vuelas mercedes, que me han criado, me darán marido como me convenga; aunque todavía quisiera escoger.

SOLDADO.- Niña, échame el ojo; mira mi garbo; soldado soy, castellano pienso ser; brío tengo de corazón; soy el más galán hombre del mundo; y, por el hilo deste vestidillo, podrás sacar el ovillo de mi gentileza.

SACRISTÁN.- Cristina, yo soy músico, aunque de campanas; para adornar una tumba y colgar una iglesia para fiestas solenes, ningún sacristán me puede llevar ventaja; y estos oficios bien los puedo ejercitar casado, y ganar de comer como un príncipe.

AMO.- Ahora bien, muchacha, escoge de los dos el que te agrada; que yo gusto dello, y con esto pondrás paz entre dos tan fuertes competidores.

SOLDADO.- Yo me allano.

SACRISTÁN.- Y yo me rindo.

CRISTINA.- Pues escojo al sacristán.

(Han entrado los MÚSICOS.)

AMO.- Pues llamen esos oficiales de mi vecino el barbero, para que con sus guitarras y voces nos entremos a celebrar el desposorio, cantando y bailando; y el señor soldado será mi convidado.

SOLDADO.-

Acepto:

Que, donde hay fuerza de hecho, se pierde cualquier derecho.

MÚSICOS.- Pues hemos llegado a tiempo, éste será el estribillo de nuestra letra.

(Cantan el estribillo.)

SOLDADO

Siempre escogen las mujeres aquellos que vale menos, porque excede su mal gusto
a cualquier merecimiento.

Ya no se estima el valor, porque se estima el dinero, pues un sacristán prefieren a un roto soldado lego.
Mas no es mucho, que ¿quién vio que fue su voto tan necio, que a sagrado se acogiese, que es de delincuentes puerto?
Que a donde hay fuerza, &c.

SACRISTÁN

Como es propio de un soldado, que es sólo en los años viejo, y se halla sin un cuarto porque ha dejado su tercio, imaginar que ser puede
pretendiente de Gaiferos, conquistando por lo bravo lo que yo por manso adquiero, no me afrentan tus razones, pues has perdido en el juego;

que siempre un picado tiene licencia para hacer fieros.
Que a donde, &c.

(Éntranse cantando y bailando.)

EL VIZCAÍNO FINGIDO

Entremés del Vizcaíno fingido

Entran SOLÓRZANO y QUIÑONES.

SOLÓRZANO.- Éstas son las bolsas, y, a lo que parecen, son bien parecidas; y las cadenas que van dentro, ni más ni menos. No hay sino que vos acudáis con mi intento; que, a pesar de la taimería desta sevillana, ha de quedar esta vez burlada.

QUIÑONES.- ¿Tanta honra se adquiere, o tanta habilidad se muestra en engañar a una mujer, que lo tomáis con tanto ahínco y ponéis tanta solicitud en ello?

SOLÓRZANO.- Cuando las mujeres son como éstas, es gusto el burlallas; cuanto más, que esta burla no ha de pasar de los tejados arriba; quiero decir, que ni ha de ser con ofensa de Dios ni con daño de la burlada; que no son burlas las que redundan en desprecio ajeno.

QUIÑONES.- Alto; pues vos lo queréis, sea así; digo que yo os ayudaré en todo cuanto me habéis dicho, y sabré fingir tan bien como vos, que no lo puedo más encarecer. ¿Adónde vais agora?

SOLÓRZANO.- Derecho en casa de la ninfa; y vos no salgáis de casa, que yo os llamaré a su tiempo.

QUIÑONES.- Allí estaré clavado, esperando.

(Éntranse los dos.)

(Salen DOÑA CRISTINA y DOÑA BRÍGIDA; CRISTINA sin manto, y BRÍGIDA con él, toda asustada y turbada.)

CRISTINA.- ¡Jesús! ¿Qué es lo que traes, amiga doña Brígida, que parece que quieres dar el alma a su Hacedor?

BRÍGIDA.- Doña Cristina, amiga, hazme aire, rocíame con un poco de agua este rostro, que me muero, que me fino, que se me arranca el alma. ¡Dios sea conmigo! ¡Confesión a toda priesa!

CRISTINA.- ¿Qué es esto? ¡Desdichada de mí! ¿No me dirás, amiga, lo que te ha sucedido? ¿Has visto alguna mala visión? ¿Hante dado alguna mala nueva de que es muerta tu madre, o de que viene tu marido, o hante robado tus joyas?

BRÍGIDA.- Ni he visto visión alguna, ni se ha muerto mi madre, ni viene mi marido, que aún le faltan tres meses para acabar el negocio donde fue, ni me han robado mis joyas; pero hame sucedido otra cosa peor.

CRISTINA.- Acaba; dímelas, doña Brígida mía; que me tienes turbada y suspensa hasta saberla.

BRÍGIDA.- ¡Ay, querida! Que también te toca a ti parte deste mal suceso. Límpiame este rostro, que él y todo el cuerpo tengo bañado en sudor más frío que la nieve. ¡Desdichadas de aquéllas que andan en la vida libre, que, si quieren tener algún poquito de autoridad, granjeada de aquí o de allí, se la dejarretan y se la quitan al mejor tiempo!

CRISTINA.- Acaba, por tu vida, amiga, y dime lo que te ha sucedido, y qué es la desgracia de quien yo también tengo de tener parte.

BRÍGIDA.- ¡Y cómo si tendrás parte! Y mucha, si eres discreta, como lo eres. Has de saber, hermana, que, viniendo agora a verte, al pasar por la puerta de Guadalajara, oí que, en medio de infinita justicia y gente, estaba un pregonero pregonando que quitaban los coches, y que las mujeres descubriesen los rostros por las calles.

CRISTINA.- Y ¿ésa es la mala nueva?

BRÍGIDA.- Pues para nosotras, ¿puede ser peor en el mundo?

CRISTINA.- Yo creo, hermana, que debe de ser alguna reformation de los coches: que no es posible que los quiten de todo punto; y será cosa muy acertada, porque, según he oído decir, andaba muy de caída la caballería en España, porque se empanaban diez o doce caballeros mozos en un coche, y azotaban las calles de noche y de día, sin acordárseles que había caballos y jineta en el mundo; y, como les falte la comodidad de las galeras de la tierra, que son los coches, volverán al ejercicio de la caballería, con quien sus antepasados se honraron.

BRÍGIDA.- ¡Ay, Cristina de mi alma! Que también oí decir que, aunque dejan algunos, es con condición que no se presten, ni que en ellos ande ninguna...; ya me entiendes.

CRISTINA.- Ese mal nos hagan; porque has de saber, hermana, que está en opinión, entre los que siguen la guerra, cuál es mejor, la caballería o la infantería; y hase averiguado que la infantería española lleva la gala a todas las naciones; y agora podremos las alegres mostrar a pie nuestra gallardía, nuestro garbo y nuestra bizarría, y más, yendo descubiertos los rostros, quitando la ocasión de que ninguno se llame a engaño si nos sirviese, pues nos ha visto.

BRÍGIDA.- ¡Ay Cristina! No me digas eso, que linda cosa era ir sentada en la popa de un coche, llenándola de parte a parte, dando rostro a quien y como y cuando quería. Y, en Dios y en mi ánima, te digo que, cuando alguna vez me le prestaban, y me vía sentada en él con aquella autoridad, que me desvanecía tanto, que creía bien y verdaderamente que era mujer principal, y que más de cuatro señoras de título pudieran ser mis criadas.

CRISTINA.- ¿Veis, doña Brígida, cómo tengo yo razón en decir que ha sido bien quitar los coches, siquiera por quitarnos a nosotras el pecado de la vanagloria? Y más, que no era bien que un coche igualase a las no tales con las tales; pues, viendo los ojos extranjeros a una persona en un coche, pomposa por galas, reluciente por joyas, echaría a perder la cortesía, haciéndosela a ella como si fuera a una principal señora. Así que, amiga, no debes congojarte, sino acomoda tu brío y tu limpieza, y tu manto de soplillo sevillano, y tus nuevos chapines, en todo caso, con las virillas de plata, y déjate ir por esas calles; que yo te aseguro que no falten moscas a tan buena miel, si quisieres dejar que a ti se lleguen; que engaño en más va que en besarla durmiendo.

BRÍGIDA.- Dios te lo pague, amiga, que me has consolado con tus advertimientos y consejos; y en verdad que los pienso poner en práctica, y pulirme y repulirme, y dar rostro a pie, y pisar el polvico atán menudico, pues no tengo quien me corte la cabeza; que este que piensan que es mi marido, no lo es, aunque me ha dado la palabra de serlo.

CRISTINA.- ¡Jesús! ¿Tan a la sorda y sin llamar se entra en mi casa, señor? ¿Qué es lo que vuesa merced manda?

(Entra SOLÓRZANO.)

SOLÓRZANO.- Vuesa merced perdone el atrevimiento, que la ocasión hace al ladrón: hallé la puerta abierta y entréme, dándome ánimo al entrarme venir a servir a vuesa merced, y no con palabras, sino con obras; y, si es que puedo hablar delante desta señora, diré a lo que vengo, y la intención que traigo.

CRISTINA.- De la buena presencia de vuesa merced no se puede esperar sino que han de ser buenas sus palabras y sus obras. Diga vuesa merced lo que quisiere, que la señora doña Brígida es tan mi amiga, que es otra yo misma.

SOLÓRZANO.- Con ese seguro y con esa licencia, hablaré con verdad; y con verdad, señora, soy un cortesano a quien vuesa merced no conoce.

CRISTINA.- Así es la verdad.

SOLÓRZANO.- Y ha muchos días que deseo servir a vuesa merced, obligado a ello de su hermosura, buenas partes y mejor término; pero estrechezas, que no faltan, han sido freno a las obras hasta agora, que la suerte ha querido que de Vizcaya me enviase un grande amigo mío a un hijo suyo, vizcaíno, muy galán, para que yo le lleve a Salamanca y le ponga de mi mano en compañía que le honre y le enseñe. Porque, para decir la verdad a vuesa merced, él es un poco burro, y tiene algo de mentecapto; y añádesele a esto una tacha, que es lástima decirla, cuanto más tenerla, y es que se toma algún tanto, un si es no es, del vino, pero no de manera que de todo en todo pierda el juicio, puesto que se le turba; y, cuando está asomado, y aun casi todo el cuerpo fuera de la ventana, es cosa maravillosa su alegría y su liberalidad: da todo cuanto tiene a quien se lo pide y a quien no se lo pide; y yo querría que, ya que el diablo se ha de llevar cuanto tiene, aprovecharme de alguna cosa, y no he hallado mejor medio que traerle a casa de vuesa merced, porque es muy amigo de damas, y aquí le desollaremos cerrado como a gato. Y, para principio, traigo aquí a vuesa merced esta cadena en este bolsillo, que pesa ciento y veinte escudos de oro, la cual tomará vuesa merced, y me dará diez escudos agora, que yo he menester para ciertas cosillas, y gastará otros veinte en una cena esta noche, que vendrá acá nuestro burro o nuestro búfalo, que le llevo yo por el naso, como dicen; y, a dos idas y venidas, se quedará vuesa merced con toda la cadena, que yo no quiero más de los diez escudos de ahora. La cadena es bonísima, y de muy buen oro, y vale algo de hechura. Hela aquí; vuesa merced la tome.

CRISTINA.- Beso a vuesa merced las manos por la que me ha hecho en acordarse de mí en tan provechosa ocasión; pero, si he de decir lo que siento, tanta liberalidad me tiene algo confusa y algún tanto sospechosa.

SOLÓRZANO.- Pues, ¿de qué es la sospecha, señora mía?

CRISTINA.- De que podrá ser esta cadena de alquimia; que se suele decir que no es oro todo lo que reluce.

SOLÓRZANO.- Vuesa merced habla discretísimamente; y no en balde tiene vuesa merced fama de la más discreta dama de la corte; y hame dado mucho gusto el ver cuán sin melindres ni rodeos me ha descubierto su corazón; pero para todo hay remedio, si no es para la muerte. Vuesa merced se cubra su manto, o envíe si tiene de quién fiarse, y vaya a la platería, y en el contraste se pese y toque esa cadena; y cuando fuera fina y de la bondad que yo he dicho, entonces vuesa merced me dará los diez escudos, harále una regalaria al borrico, y se quedará con ella.

CRISTINA.- Aquí, pared y medio, tengo yo un platero, mi conocido, que con facilidad me sacará de duda.

SOLÓRZANO.- Eso es lo que yo quiero, y lo que amo y lo que estimo; que las cosas claras Dios las bendijo.

CRISTINA.- Si es que vuesa merced se atreve a fiarme esta cadena, en tanto que me satisfago, de aquí a un poco podrá venir, que yo tendré los diez escudos en oro.

SOLÓRZANO.- ¡Bueno es eso! Fío mi honra de vuesa merced, ¿y no le había de fiar la cadena? Vuesa merced la haga tocar y retocar, que yo me voy, y volveré de aquí a media hora.

CRISTINA.- Y aun antes, si es que mi vecino está en casa.

(Éntrase SOLÓRZANO.)

BRÍGIDA.- Ésta, Cristina amiga, no sólo es ventura, sino venturón llovido. ¡Desdichada de mí, y qué desgraciada que soy, que nunca topo quien me dé un jarro de agua sin que me cueste mi trabajo primero! Sólo me encontré el otro día en la calle a un poeta, que de bonísima voluntad y con mucha cortesía me dio un soneto de la historia de Píramo y Tisbe, y me ofreció trecientos en mi alabanza.

CRISTINA.- Mejor fuera que te hubieras encontrado con un ginovés que te diera trecientos reales.

BRÍGIDA.- ¡Sí, por cierto! ¡Ahí están los ginoveses de manifiesto y para venirse a la mano, como halcones al señuelo! Andan todos malencónicos y tristes con el decreto.

CRISTINA.- Mira, Brígida, desto quiero que estés cierta: que más vale un ginovés quebrado que cuatro poetas enteros. Mas, ¡ay!, el viento corre en popa; mi platero es éste. Y ¿qué quiere mi buen vecino? Que a fe que me ha quitado el manto de los hombros, que ya me le quería cubrir para buscarle.

(Entra el PLATERO.)

PLATERO.- Señora doña Cristina, vuesa merced me ha de hacer una merced: de hacer todas sus fuerzas por llevar mañana a mi mujer a la comedia, que me conviene y me importa quedar mañana en la tarde libre de tener quien me siga y me persiga.

CRISTINA.- Eso haré yo de muy buena gana; y aun, si el señor vecino quiere mi casa y cuanto hay en ella, aquí la hallará sola y desembarazada; que bien sé en qué caen estos negocios.

PLATERO.- No, señora; entretener a mi mujer me basta. Pero, ¿qué quería vuesa merced de mí, que quería ir a buscarme?

CRISTINA.- No más, sino que me diga el señor vecino qué pesará esta cadena, y si es fina, y de qué quilates.

PLATERO.- Esta cadena he tenido yo en mis manos muchas veces, y sé que pesa ciento y cincuenta escudos de oro de a veinte y dos quilates; y que si vuesa merced la compra y se la dan sin hechura, no perderá nada en ella.

CRISTINA.- Alguna hechura me ha de costar, pero no mucha.

PLATERO.- Mire cómo la conierta la señora vecina, que yo le haré dar, cuando se quisiere deshacer della, diez ducados de hechura.

CRISTINA.- Menos me ha de costar, si yo puedo; pero mire el vecino no se engañe en lo que dice de la fineza del oro y cantidad del peso.

PLATERO.- ¡Bueno sería que yo me engañase en mi oficio! Digo, señora, que dos veces la he tocado eslabón por eslabón, y la he pesado, y la conozco como a mis manos.

BRÍGIDA.- Con eso nos contentamos.

PLATERO.- Y por más señas, sé que la ha llegado a pesar y a tocar un gentilhomme cortesano que se llama Tal de Solórzano.

CRISTINA.- Basta, señor vecino; vaya con Dios, que yo haré lo que me deja mandado: yo la llevaré y entretendré dos horas más, si fuere menester; que bien sé que no podrá dañar una hora más de entretenimiento.

PLATERO.- Con vuesa merced me entierren, que sabe de todo; y a Dios, señora mía.

(Éntrase el PLATERO.)

BRÍGIDA.- ¿No haríamos con este cortesano Solórzano, que así se debe llamar sin duda, que trujese con el vizcaíno para mí alguna ayuda de costa, aunque fuese de algún borgoñón más borracho que un zaque?

CRISTINA.- Por decírselo no quedará; pero vesle, aquí vuelve; priesa trae, diligente anda; sus diez escudos le aguijan y espolean.

(Entra SOLÓRZANO.)

SOLÓRZANO.- Pues, señora doña Cristina, ¿ha hecho vuesa merced sus diligencias? ¿Está acreditada la cadena?

CRISTINA.- ¿Cómo es el nombre de vuesa merced, por su vida?

SOLÓRZANO.- Don Esteban de Solórzano me suelen llamar en mi casa; pero, ¿por qué me lo pregunta vuesa merced?

CRISTINA.- Por acabar de echar el sello a su mucha verdad y cortesía. Entretenga vuesa merced un poco a la señora doña Brígida, en tanto que entro por los diez escudos.

(Éntrase CRISTINA.)

BRÍGIDA.- Señor don Solórzano, ¿no tendrá vuesa merced por ahí algún mondadientes para mí? Que en verdad no soy para desechar, y que tengo yo tan buenas entradas y salidas en mi casa como la señora doña Cristina; que, a no temer que nos oyera alguna, le dijera yo al señor Solórzano más de cuatro tachas tuyas: que sepa que tiene las tetas como dos alforjas vacías, y que no le huele muy bien el aliento, porque se afeita mucho; y, con todo eso, la buscan, solicitan y quieren; que estoy por arañarme esta cara, más de rabia que de envidia, porque no hay quien me dé la mano, entre tantos que me dan del pie; en fin, la ventura de las feas...

SOLÓRZANO.- No se desespere vuesa merced, que, si yo vivo, otro gallo cantará en su gallinero.

(Vuelve a entrar CRISTINA.)

CRISTINA.- He aquí, señor don Esteban, los diez escudos, y la cena se aderezará esta noche como para un príncipe.

SOLÓRZANO.- Pues nuestro burro está a la puerta de la calle, quiero ir por él; vuesa merced me le acaricie, aunque sea como quien toma una píldora.

(Vase SOLÓRZANO.)

BRÍGIDA.- Ya le dije, amiga, que trujese quien me regalase a mí, y dijo que sí haría, andando el tiempo.

CRISTINA.- Andando el tiempo en nosotras, no hay quien nos regale; amiga, los pocos años traen la mucha ganancia, y los muchos la mucha pérdida.

BRÍGIDA.- También le dije cómo vas muy limpia, muy linda y muy agraciada; y que toda eras ámbar, almizcle y algalia entre algodones.

CRISTINA.- Ya yo sé, amiga, que tienes muy buenas ausencias.

BRÍGIDA.- Aparte. Mirad quién tiene amartelados; que vale más la suela de mi botín que las arandelas de su cuello; otra vez vuelvo a decir: la ventura de las feas...

(Entran QUIÑONES y SOLÓRZANO.)

QUIÑONES.- Vizcaíno, manos bésame vuesa merced, que mándeme.

SOLÓRZANO.- Dice el señor vizcaíno que besa las manos de vuesa merced y que le mande.

BRÍGIDA.- ¡Ay, qué linda lengua! Yo no la entiendo a lo menos, pero paréceme muy linda.

CRISTINA.- Yo beso las del mi señor vizcaíno, y más adelante.

VIZCAÍNO.- Pareces buena, hermosa; también noche esta cenamos; cadena que das, duermas nunca, basta que doyla.

SOLÓRZANO.- Dice mi compañero que vuesa merced le parece buena y hermosa; que se apareje la cena; que él da la cadena, aunque no duerma acá, que basta que una vez la haya dado.

BRÍGIDA.- ¿Hay tal Alejandro en el mundo? ¡Venturón, venturón, y cien mil veces venturón!

SOLÓRZANO.- Si hay algún poco de conserva, y algún traguito del devoto para el señor vizcaíno, yo sé que nos valdrá por uno ciento.

CRISTINA.- ¡Y cómo si lo hay! Y yo entraré por ello, y se lo daré mejor que al Preste Juan de las Indias.

(Éntrase CRISTINA.)

VIZCAÍNO.- Dama que quedaste, tan buena como entraste.

BRÍGIDA.- ¿Qué ha dicho, señor Solórzano?

SOLÓRZANO.- Que la dama que se queda, que es vuesa merced, es tan buena como la que se ha entrado.

BRÍGIDA.- ¡Y cómo que está en lo cierto el señor vizcaíno! A fe que en este parecer que no es nada burro.

VIZCAÍNO.- Burro el diablo; vizcaíno ingenio queréis cuando tenerlo.

BRÍGIDA.- Ya le entiendo: que dice que el diablo es el burro, y que los vizcaínos, cuando quieren tener ingenio, le tienen.

SOLÓRZANO.- Así es, sin faltar un punto.

(Vuelve a salir CRISTINA con un criado o criada, que traen una caja de conserva, una garrafa con vino, su cuchillo y servilleta.)

CRISTINA.- Bien puede comer el señor vizcaíno, y sin asco; que todo cuanto hay en esta casa es la quintaesencia de la limpieza.

QUIÑONES.- Dulce conmigo, vino y agua llamas bueno; santo le muestras, ésta le bebo y otra también.

BRÍGIDA.- ¡Ay, Dios, y con qué donaire lo dice el buen señor, aunque no le entiendo!

SOLÓRZANO.- Dice que, con lo dulce, también bebe vino como agua; y que este vino es de San Martín, y que beberá otra vez.

CRISTINA.- Y aun otras ciento: su boca puede ser medida.

SOLÓRZANO.- No le den más, que le hace mal, y ya se le va echando de ver; que le he yo dicho al señor Azcaray que no beba vino en ningún modo, y no aprovecha.

QUIÑONES.- Vamos, que vino que subes y bajas, lengua es grillos y corma es pies; tarde vuelvo, señora, Dios que te guárdate.

SOLÓRZANO.- ¡Miren lo que dice, y verán si tengo yo razón!

CRISTINA.- ¿Qué es lo que ha dicho, señor Solórzano?

SOLÓRZANO.- Que el vino es grillo de su lengua y corma de sus pies; que vendrá esta tarde, y que vuestras mercedes se queden con Dios.

BRÍGIDA.- ¡Ay, pecadora de mí, y cómo que se le turban los ojos y se trastraba la lengua! ¡Jesús, que ya va dando traspiés! ¡Pues monta que ha bebido mucho! La mayor lástima es ésta que he visto en mi vida; ¡miren qué mocedad y qué borrachera!

SOLÓRZANO.- Ya venía él refrendado de casa. Vuesa merced, señora Cristina, haga aderezar la cena, que yo le quiero llevar a dormir el vino, y seremos temprano esta tarde.

(Éntranse el VIZCAÍNO y SOLÓRZANO.)

CRISTINA.- Todo estará como de molde; vayan vuestas mercedes en hora buena.

BRÍGIDA.- Amiga Cristina, muéstrame esa cadena, y déjame dar con ella dos filos al deseo. ¡Ay, qué linda, qué nueva, qué reluciente y qué barata! Digo, Cristina, que, sin saber cómo ni cómo no, llueven los bienes sobre ti, y se te entra la ventura por las puertas, sin solicitalla. En efeto, eres venturosa sobre las venturosas; pero todo lo merece tu desenfado, tu limpieza y tu magnífico término: hechizos bastantes a rendir las más descuidadas y esentas voluntades; y no como yo, que no soy para dar migas a un gato. Toma tu cadena, hermana, que estoy para reventar en lágrimas, y no de envidia que a ti te tengo, sino de lástima que me tengo a mí.

(Vuelve a entrar SOLÓRZANO.)

SOLÓRZANO.- ¡La mayor desgracia nos ha sucedido del mundo!

BRÍGIDA.- ¡Jesús! ¿Desgracia? ¿Y qué es, señor Solórzano?

SOLÓRZANO.- A la vuelta desta calle, yendo a la casa, encontramos con un criado del padre de nuestro vizcaíno, el cual trae cartas y nuevas de que su padre queda a punto de espirar, y le manda que al momento se parta, si quiere hallarle vivo. Trae dinero para la partida, que sin duda ha de ser luego; yo le he tomado diez escudos para vuesa merced, y velos aquí, con los diez que vuesa merced me dio denantes, y vuélvase la cadena; que, si el padre vive, el hijo volverá a darla, o yo no seré don Esteban de Solórzano.

CRISTINA.- En verdad, que a mí me pesa; y no por mi interés, sino por la desgracia del mancebo, que ya le había tomado afición.

BRÍGIDA.- Buenos son diez escudos ganados tan holgando; tómalos, amiga, y vuelve la cadena al señor Solórzano.

CRISTINA.- Vela aquí, y venga el dinero; que en verdad que pensaba gastar más de treinta en la cena.

SOLÓRZANO.- Señora Cristina, al perro viejo nunca tus tus; estas tretas, con los de las galleruzas, y con este perro a otro hueso.

CRISTINA.- ¿Para qué son tantos refranes, señor Solórzano?

SOLÓRZANO.- Para que entienda vuesa merced que la codicia rompe el saco. ¿Tan presto se desconfió de mi palabra, que quiso vuesa merced curarse en salud, y salir al lobo al camino, como la gansa de Cantipalos? Señora Cristina, señora Cristina, lo bien ganado se pierde, y lo malo, ello y su dueño. Venga mi cadena verdadera, y tómese vuesa merced su falsa, que no ha de haber conmigo transformaciones de Ovidio en tan pequeño espacio. ¡Oh hideputa, y qué bien que la amoldaron, y qué presto!

CRISTINA.- ¿Qué dice vuesa merced, señor mío, que no le entiendo?

SOLÓRZANO.- Digo que no es ésta la cadena que yo dejé a vuesa merced, aunque le parece: que ésta es de alquimia, y la otra es de oro de a veinte y dos quilates.

BRÍGIDA.- En mi ánima, que así lo dijo el vecino, que es platero.

CRISTINA.- ¿Aun el diablo sería eso?

SOLÓRZANO.- El diablo o la diablo, mi cadena venga, y dejémonos de voces, y escúsenme juramentos y maldiciones.

CRISTINA.- El diablo me lleve, lo cual querría que no me llevase, si no es ésa la cadena que vuesa merced me dejó, y que no he tenido otra en mis manos: ¡justicia de Dios, si tal testimonio se me levantara!

SOLÓRZANO.- Que no hay para qué dar gritos; y más, estando ahí el señor Corregidor, que guarda su derecho a cada uno.

CRISTINA.- Si a las manos del Corregidor llega este negocio, yo me doy por condenada; que tiene de mí tan mal concepto, que ha de tener mi verdad por mentira y mi virtud por vicio. Señor mío, si yo he tenido otra cadena en mis manos, sino aquesta, de cáncer las vea yo comidas.

(Entra un ALGUACIL.)

ALGUACIL.- ¿Qué voces son éstas, qué gritos, qué lágrimas y qué maldiciones?

SOLÓRZANO.- Vuesa merced, señor alguacil, ha venido aquí como de molde. A esta señora del rumbo sevillano le empeñé una cadena, habrá una hora, en diez ducados, para cierto efecto; vuelvo ahora a desempeñarla, y, en lugar de una que le di, que pesaba ciento y cincuenta ducados de oro de veinte y dos quilates, me vuelve ésta de alquimia, que no vale dos ducados; y quiere poner mi justicia a la venta de la Zarza, a voces y a gritos, sabiendo que será testigo desta verdad esta misma señora, ante quien ha pasado todo.

BRÍGIDA.- Y ¡cómo si ha pasado!, y aun repasado; y, en Dios y en mi ánima, que estoy por decir que este señor tiene razón; aunque no puedo imaginar dónde se pueda haber hecho el truco, porque la cadena no ha salido de aquesta sala.

SOLÓRZANO.- La merced que el señor alguacil me ha de hacer es llevar a la señora al Corregidor; que allá nos averiguaremos.

CRISTINA.- Otra vez torno a decir que, si ante el Corregidor me lleva, me doy por condenada.

BRÍGIDA.- Sí, porque no estoy bien con sus huesos.

CRISTINA.- Desta vez me ahorco. Desta vez me desespero. Desta vez me chupan brujas.

SOLÓRZANO.- Ahora bien; yo quiero hacer una cosa por vuesa merced, señora Cristina, siquiera porque no la chupen brujas, o, por lo menos, se ahorque: esta cadena se parece mucho a la fina del vizcaíno; él es mentecapto y algo borrachuelo; yo se la quiero llevar, y darle a entender que es la suya, y vuesa merced contente aquí al señor alguacil; y gaste la cena desta noche, y sosiegue su espíritu, pues la pérdida no es mucha.

CRISTINA.- Págueselo a vuesa merced todo el cielo; al señor alguacil daré media docena de escudos, y en la cena gastaré uno, y quedaré por esclava perpetua del señor Solórzano.

BRÍGIDA.- Y yo me haré rajas bailando en la fiesta.

ALGUACIL.- Vuesa merced ha hecho como liberal y buen caballero, cuyo oficio ha de ser servir a las mujeres.

SOLÓRZANO.- Vengan los diez escudos que di demasiados.

CRISTINA.- Helos aquí, y más los seis para el señor alguacil.

(Entran dos MÚSICOS, y QUIÑONES, el VIZCAÍNO.)

MÚSICOS.- Todo lo hemos oído, y acá estamos.

VIZCAÍNO.- Ahora sí que puede decir a mi señora Cristina: mamóla una y cien mil veces.

BRÍGIDA.- ¿Han visto qué claro que habla el vizcaíno?

VIZCAÍNO.- Nunca hablo yo turbio, si no es cuando quiero.

CRISTINA.- ¡Que me maten si no me la han dado a tragar estos bellacos!

QUIÑONES.- Señores músicos, el romance que les di y que saben, ¿para qué se hizo?

MÚSICOS

*La mujer más avisada,
o sabe poco, o no nada.*

La mujer que más presume de cortar como navaja
los vocablos repulgados, entre las godeñas pláticas;
la que sabe de memoria,
a Lofraso y a Diana,
y al Caballero del Febo con Olivante de Laura;
la que seis veces al mes
al gran Don Quijote pasa, aunque más sepa de aquesto,
o sabe poco, o no nada.

La que se fía en su ingenio, lleno de fingidas trazas,
fundadas en interés,
y en voluntades tiranas;
la que no sabe guardarse,
cual dicen, del agua mansa,
y se arroja a las corrientes que ligeramente pasan; la que piensa que ella sola es el colmo de la nata
en esto del trato alegre,
o sabe poco, o no nada.

CRISTINA.- Ahora bien, yo quedo burlada, y, con todo esto, convido a vuestras mercedes para esta noche.

QUIÑONES.- Aceptamos el convite, y todo saldrá en la colada.

EL RETABLO DE LAS MARAVILLAS

Entremés del Retablo de las maravillas

Salen CHANFALLA y la CHERINOS.

CHANFALLA.- No se te pasen de la memoria, Chirinos, mis advertimientos, principalmente los que te he dado para este nuevo embuste, que ha de salir tan a luz como el pasado del Llovista.

CHIRINOS.- Chanfalla ilustre, lo que en mí fuere tenlo como de molde; que tanta memoria tengo como entendimiento, a quien se junta una voluntad de acertar a satisfacerte, que excede a las demás potencias. Pero dime: ¿de qué sirve este Rabelín que hemos tomado? Nosotros dos solos, ¿no pudiéramos salir con esta empresa?

CHANFALLA.- Habíamosle menester como el pan de la boca, para tocar en los espacios que tardaren en salir las figuras del Retablo de las Maravillas.

CHIRINOS.- Maravilla será si no nos apedrean por solo el Rabelín; porque tan desventurada criaturilla no la he visto en todos los días de mi vida.

(Entra el RABELÍN.)

RABELÍN.- ¿Hase de hacer algo en este pueblo, señor autor? Que ya me muero porque vuesa merced vea que no me tomó a carga cerrada.

CHIRINOS.- Cuatro cuerpos de los vuestros no harán un tercio, cuanto más una carga; si no sois más gran músico que grande, medrados estamos.

RABELÍN.- Ello dirá; que en verdad que me han escrito para entrar en una compañía de partes, por chico que soy.

CHANFALLA.- Si os han de dar la parte a medida del cuerpo, casi será invisible.

Chirinos, poco a poco, estamos ya en el pueblo, y éstos que aquí vienen deben de ser, como lo son sin duda, el Gobernador y los Alcaldes. Salgámosles al encuentro, y date un filo a la lengua en la piedra de la adulación; pero no despuntes de aguda.

(Salen el GOBERNADOR y BENITO REPOLLO, alcalde, JUAN CASTRADO, regidor, y PEDRO CAPACHO, escribano.)

Beso a vuestras mercedes las manos: ¿quién de vuestras mercedes es el Gobernador deste pueblo?

GOBERNADOR.- Yo soy el Gobernador; ¿qué es lo que queréis, buen hombre?

CHANFALLA.- A tener yo dos onzas de entendimiento, hubiera echado de ver que esa peripatética y anchurosa presencia no podía ser de otro que del dignísimo Gobernador deste honrado pueblo; que, con venirlo a ser de las Algarrobillas, lo deseche vuestra merced.

CHIRINOS.- En vida de la señora y de los señoritos, si es que el señor Gobernador los tiene.

CAPACHO.- No es casado el señor Gobernador.

CHIRINOS.- Para cuando lo sea; que no se perderá nada.

GOBERNADOR.- Y bien, ¿qué es lo que queréis, hombre honrado?

CHIRINOS.- Honrados días viva vuesa merced, que así nos honra; en fin, la encina da bellotas; el pero, peras; la parra, uvas, y el honrado, honra, sin poder hacer otra cosa.

BENITO.- Sentencia ciceronianca, sin quitar ni poner un punto.

CAPACHO.- Ciceroniana quiso decir el señor alcalde Benito Repollo.

BENITO.- Siempre quiero decir lo que es mejor, sino que las más veces no acierto; en fin, buen hombre, ¿qué queréis?

CHANFALLA.- Yo, señores míos, soy Montiel, el que trae el Retablo de las maravillas. Hanme enviado a llamar de la Corte los señores cofrades de los hospitales, porque no hay autor de comedias en ella, y perecen los hospitales, y con mi ida se remediará todo.

GOBERNADOR.- Y ¿qué quiere decir Retablo de las maravillas?

CHANFALLA.- Por las maravillosas cosas que en él se enseñan y muestran, viene a ser llamado Retablo de las maravillas; el cual fabricó y compuso el sabio Tontonelo debajo de tales paralelos, rumbos, astros y estrellas, con tales puntos, caracteres y observaciones, que ninguno puede ver las cosas que en él se muestran, que tenga alguna raza de confeso, o no sea habido y procreado de sus padres de legítimo matrimonio; y el que fuere contagiado destas dos tan usadas enfermedades, despídase de ver las cosas, jamás vistas ni oídas, de mi retablo.

BENITO.- Ahora echo de ver que cada día se ven en el mundo cosas nuevas. Y ¿que se llamaba Tontonelo el sabio que el retablo compuso?

CHIRINOS.- Tontonelo se llamaba, nacido en la ciudad de Tontonela; hombre de quien hay fama que le llegaba la barba a la cintura.

BENITO.- Por la mayor parte, los hombres de grandes barbas son sabiondos.

GOBERNADOR.- Señor regidor Juan Castrado, yo determino, debajo de su buen parecer, que esta noche se despose la señora Teresa Castrada, su hija, de quien yo soy padrino, y, en regocijo de la fiesta, quiero que el señor Montiel muestre en vuestra casa su Retablo.

JUAN.- Eso tengo yo por servir al señor Gobernador, con cuyo parecer me convengo, entablo y arrimo, aunque haya otra cosa en contrario.

CHIRINOS.- La cosa que hay en contrario es que, si no se nos paga primero nuestro trabajo, así verán las figuras como por el cerro de Úbeda. ¿Y vuestas mercedes, señores justicias, tienen conciencia y alma en esos cuerpos? ¡Bueno sería que entrase esta noche todo el pueblo en casa del señor Juan Castrado, o como es su gracia, y viese lo contenido en el tal Retablo, y mañana, cuando quisiésemos mostralle al pueblo, no hubiese ánima que le viese! No, señores; no, señores: ante omnia nos han de pagar lo que fuere justo.

BENITO.- Señora autora, aquí no os ha de pagar ninguna Antona, ni ningún Antoño; el señor regidor Juan Castrado os pagará más que honradamente, y si no, el Concejo. ¡Bien conocéis el lugar, por cierto! Aquí, hermana, no aguardamos a que ninguna Antona pague por nosotros.

CAPACHO.- ¡Pecador de mí, señor Benito Repollo, y qué lejos da del blanco! No dice la señora autora que pague ninguna Antona, sino que le paguen adelantado y ante todas cosas, que eso quiere decir ante omnia.

BENITO.- Mirad, escribano Pedro Capacho, haced vos que me hablen a derechas, que yo entenderé a pie llano; vos, que sois leído y escrito, podéis entender esas algarabías de allende, que yo no.

JUAN.- Ahora bien, ¿contentarse ha el señor autor con que yo le dé adelantados media docena de ducados? Y más, que se tendrá cuidado que no entre gente del pueblo esta noche en mi casa.

CHANFALLA.- Soy contento; porque yo me fío de la diligencia de vuesa merced y de su buen término.

JUAN.- Pues véngase conmigo. Recibirá el dinero, y verá mi casa, y la comodidad que hay en ella para mostrar ese retablo.

CHANFALLA.- Vamos; y no se les pase de las mientes las calidades que han de tener los que se atrevieren a mirar el maravilloso retablo.

BENITO.- A mi cargo queda eso, y séle decir que, por mi parte, puedo ir seguro a juicio, pues tengo el padre alcalde; cuatro dedos de enjundia de cristiano viejo rancioso tengo sobre los cuatro costados de mi linaje: ¡miren si verá el tal retablo!

CAPACHO.- Todos le pensamos ver, señor Benito Repollo.

JUAN.- No nacimos acá en las malvas, señor Pedro Capacho.

GOBERNADOR.- Todo será menester, según voy viendo, señores Alcalde, Regidor y Escribano.

JUAN.- Vamos, autor, y manos a la obra; que Juan Castrado me llamo, hijo de Antón Castrado y de Juana Macha; y no digo más en abono y seguro que podré ponerme cara a cara y a pie quedo delante del referido retablo.

CHIRINOS.- ¡Dios lo haga!

(Éntranse JUAN CASTRADO y CHANFALLA.)

GOBERNADOR.- Señora autora, ¿qué poetas se usan ahora en la Corte de fama y rumbo, especialmente de los llamados cómicos? Porque yo tengo mis puntas y collar de poeta, y pícome de la farándula y carátula. Veinte y dos comedias tengo, todas nuevas, que se veen las unas a las otras, y estoy aguardando coyuntura para ir a la Corte y enriquecer con ellas media docena de autores.

CHIRINOS.- A lo que vuesa merced, señor Gobernador, me pregunta de los poetas, no le sabré responder; porque hay tantos, que quitan el sol, y todos piensan que son famosos. Los poetas cómicos son los ordinarios y que siempre se usan, y así no hay para qué nombrallos. Pero dígame vuesa merced, por su vida: ¿cómo es su buena gracia? ¿cómo se llama?

GOBERNADOR.- A mí, señora autora, me llaman el licenciado Gomecillos.

CHIRINOS.- ¡Válame Dios! ¿Y que vuesa merced es el señor licenciado Gomecillos, el que compuso aquellas coplas tan famosas de Lucifer estaba malo y tómale mal de fuera?

GOBERNADOR.- Malas lenguas hubo que me quisieron ahijar esas coplas, y así fueron mías como del Gran Turco. Las que yo compuse, y no lo quiero negar, fueron aquellas que trataron del Diluvio de Sevilla; que, puesto que los poetas son ladrones unos de otros, nunca me precié de hurtar nada a nadie: con mis versos me ayude Dios, y hurte el que quisiere.

(Vuelve CHANFALLA.)

CHANFALLA.- Señores, vuestras mercedes vengan, que todo está a punto, y no falta más que comenzar.

CHIRINOS.- ¿Está ya el dinero in corbona?

CHANFALLA.- Y aun entre las telas del corazón.

CHIRINOS.- Pues doyte por aviso, Chanfalla, que el Gobernador es poeta.

CHANFALLA.- ¿Poeta? ¡Cuerpo del mundo! Pues dale por engañado, porque todos los de humor semejante son hechos a la mazacona; gente descuidada, crédula y no nada maliciosa.

BENITO.- Vamos, autor; que me saltan los pies por ver esas maravillas.

(Éntranse todos.)

(Salen JUANA CASTRADA y TERESA REPOLLA, labradoras: la una como desposada, que es la CASTRADA.)

CASTRADA.- Aquí te puedes sentar, Teresa Repolla amiga, que tendremos el retablo enfrente; y, pues sabes las condiciones que han de tener los miradores del retablo, no te descuides, que sería una gran desgracia.

TERESA.- Ya sabes, Juan Castrada, que soy tu prima, y no digo más. ¡Tan cierto tuviera yo el cielo como tengo cierto ver todo aquello que el retablo mostrare! ¡Por el siglo de mi madre, que me sacase los mismos ojos de mi cara, si alguna desgracia me aconteciese! ¡Bonita soy yo para eso!

CASTRADA.- Sosiégate, prima; que toda la gente viene.

(Entran el GOBERNADOR, BENITO REPOLLO, JUAN CASTRADO, PEDRO CAPACHO, EL AUTOR y LA AUTORA, y EL MÚSICO, y otra gente del pueblo, y un SOBRINO de Benito, que ha de ser aquel gentilhombre que baila.)

CHANFALLA.- Siéntense todos. El retablo ha de estar detrás deste repostero, y la autora también, y aquí el músico.

BENITO.- ¿Músico es éste? Métanle también detrás del repostero; que, a truco de no velle, daré por bien empleado el no oírle.

CHANFALLA.- No tiene vuesa merced razón, señor alcalde Repollo, de descontentarse del músico, que en verdad que es muy buen cristiano y hidalgo de solar conocido.

GOBERNADOR.- ¡Calidades son bien necesarias para ser buen músico!

BENITO.- De solar, bien podrá ser; mas de sonar, abrenuncio.

RABELÍN.- ¡Eso se merece el bellaco que se viene a sonar delante de...!

BENITO.- ¡Pues, por Dios, que hemos visto aquí sonar a otros músicos tan...!

GOBERNADOR.- Quédese esta razón en el de del señor Rabel y en el tan del Alcalde, que será proceder en infinito; y el señor Montiel comience su obra.

BENITO.- Poca balumba trae este autor para tan gran retablo.

JUAN.- Todo debe de ser de maravillas.

CHANFALLA.- ¡Atención, señores, que comienzo!

¡Oh tú, quienquiera que fuiste, que fabricaste este retablo con tan maravilloso artificio, que alcanzó renombre de las Maravillas por la virtud que en él se encierra, te conjuro, apremio y mando que luego incontinentemente muestres a estos señores algunas de las tus maravillosas maravillas, para que se regocijen y tomen placer sin escándalo alguno! Ea, que ya veo que has otorgado mi petición, pues por aquella parte asoma la figura del valentísimo Sansón, abrazado con las columnas del templo, para derriballe por el suelo y tomar venganza de sus enemigos. ¡Tente, valeroso caballero; tente, por la gracia de Dios Padre! ¡No hagas tal desaguisado, porque no cojas debajo y hagas tortilla tanta y tan noble gente como aquí se ha juntado!

BENITO.- ¡Téngase, cuerpo de tal, conmigo! ¡Bueno sería que, en lugar de habernos venido a holgar, quedásemos aquí hechos plasta! ¡Téngase, señor Sansón, pesía a mis males, que se lo ruegan buenos!

CAPACHO.- ¿Veisle vos, Castrado?

JUAN.- Pues, ¿no le había de ver? ¿Tengo yo los ojos en el colodrillo?

GOBERNADOR.- Aparte. Milagroso caso es éste: así veo yo a Sansón ahora, como el Gran Turco; pues en verdad que me tengo por legítimo y cristiano viejo.

CHIRINOS.- ¡Guárdate, hombre, que sale el mismo toro que mató al ganapán en Salamanca! ¡Échate, hombre; échate, hombre; Dios te libre, Dios te libre!

CHANFALLA.- ¡Échense todos, échense todos! ¡Hucho ho!, ¡hucho ho!, ¡hucho ho!

(Échanse todos y alborótanse.)

BENITO.- El diablo lleva en el cuerpo el torillo; sus partes tiene de hosco y de bragado; si no me tiendo, me lleva de vuelo.

JUAN.- Señor autor, haga, si puede, que no salgan figuras que nos alboroten; y no lo digo por mí, sino por estas mochachas, que no les ha quedado gota de sangre en el cuerpo, de la ferocidad del toro.

CASTRADA.- Y ¡cómo, padre! No pienso volver en mí en tres días; ya me vi en sus cuernos, que los tiene agudos como una lesna.

JUAN.- No fueras tú mi hija, y no lo vieras.

GOBERNADOR.- Aparte. Basta: que todos ven lo que yo no veo; pero al fin habré de decir que lo veo, por la negra honrilla.

CHIRINOS.- Esa manada de ratones que allá va decidiendo por línea recta de aquellos que se criaron en el Arca de Noé; dellos son blancos, dellos albarazados, dellos jaspeados y dellos azules; y, finalmente, todos son ratones.

CASTRADA.- ¡Jesús!, ¡Ay de mí! ¡Ténganme, que me arrojaré por aquella ventana! ¿Ratones? ¡Desdichada! Amiga, apriétate las faldas, y mira no te muerdan; ¡y monta que son pocos! ¡Por el siglo de mi abuela, que pasan de milenta!

REPOLLA.- Yo sí soy la desdichada, porque se me entran sin reparo ninguno; un ratón morenico me tiene asida de una rodilla. ¡Socorro venga del cielo, pues en la tierra me falta!

BENITO.- Aun bien que tengo gregüescos: que no hay ratón que se me entre, por pequeño que sea.

CHANFALLA.- Esta agua, que con tanta priesa se deja descolgar de las nubes, es de la fuente que da origen y principio al río Jordán. Toda mujer a quien tocare en el rostro, se le volverá como de plata bruñida, y a los hombres se les volverán las barbas como de oro.

CASTRADA.- ¿Oyes, amiga? Descubre el rostro, pues ves lo que te importa. ¡Oh, qué licor tan sabroso! Cúbrase, padre, no se moje.

JUAN.- Todos nos cubrimos, hija.

BENITO.- Por las espaldas me ha calado el agua hasta la canal maestra.

CAPACHO.- Yo estoy más seco que un esparto.

GOBERNADOR.- Aparte. ¿Qué diablos puede ser esto, que aún no me ha tocado una gota, donde todos se ahogan? Mas ¿si viniera yo a ser bastardo entre tantos legítimos?

BENITO.- Quítenme de allí aquel músico; si no, voto a Dios que me vaya sin ver más figura. ¡Válgate el diablo por músico aduendado, y qué hace de menudear sin cítola y sin son!

RABELÍN.- Señor alcalde, no tome conmigo la hinchá; que yo toco como Dios ha sido servido de enseñarme.

BENITO.- ¿Dios te había de enseñar, sabandija? ¡Métete tras la manta; si no, por Dios que te arroje este banco!

RABELÍN.- El diablo creo que me ha traído a este pueblo.

CAPACHO.- Fresca es el agua del santo río Jordán; y, aunque me cubrí lo que pude, todavía me alcanzó un poco en los bigotes, y apostaré que los tengo rubios como un oro.

BENITO.- Y aun peor cincuenta veces.

CHIRINOS.- Allá van hasta dos docenas de leones rampantes y de osos colmeneros; todo viviente se guarde; que, aunque fantásticos, no dejarán de dar alguna pesadumbre, y aun de hacer las fuerzas de Hércules con espadas desenvainadas.

JUAN.- Ea, señor autor, ¡cuerpo de nosla! ¿Y agora nos quiere llenar la casa de osos y de leones?

BENITO.- ¡Mirad qué ruiseñores y calandrias nos envía Tontonelo, sino leones y dragones! Señor autor, y salgan figuras más apacibles, o aquí nos contentamos con las vistas; y Dios le guíe, y no pare más en el pueblo un momento.

CASTRADA.- Señor Benito Repollo, deje salir ese oso y leones, siquiera por nosotras, y recibiremos mucho contento.

JUAN.- Pues, hija, ¿de antes te espantabas de los ratones, y ahora pides osos y leones?

CASTRADA.- Todo lo nuevo aplace, señor padre.

CHIRINOS.- Esa doncella, que agora se muestra tan galana y tan compuesta, es la llamada Herodías, cuyo baile alcanzó en premio la cabeza del Precursor de la vida. Si hay quien la ayude a bailar, verán maravillas.

BENITO.- ¡Ésta sí, cuerpo del mundo, que es figura hermosa, apacible y reluciente! ¡Hideputa, y cómo que se vuelve la mochacha! Sobrino Repollo, tú que sabes de achaque de castañetas, ayúdala, y será la fiesta de cuatro capas.

SOBRINO.- Que me place, tío Benito Repollo.

(Tocan la zarabanda.)

CAPACHO.- ¡Toma mi abuelo, si es antiguo el baile de la Zarabanda y de la Chacona!

BENITO.- Ea, sobrino, ténselas tiesas a esa bellaca jodía; pero, si ésta es jodía, ¿cómo vee estas maravillas?

CHANFALLA.- Todas las reglas tienen excepción, señor Alcalde.

(Suena una trompeta, o corneta dentro del teatro, y entra UN FURRIER de compañías.)

FURRIER.- ¿Quién es aquí el señor Gobernador?

GOBERNADOR.- Yo soy. ¿Qué manda vuesa merced?

FURRIER.- Que luego al punto mande hacer alojamiento para treinta hombres de armas que llegarán aquí dentro de media hora, y aun antes, que ya suena la trompeta; y adiós.

Vase.

BENITO.- Yo apostaré que los envía el sabio Tontonelo.

CHANFALLA.- No hay tal; que ésta es una compañía de caballos que estaba alojada dos leguas de aquí.

BENITO.- Ahora yo conozco bien a Tontonelo, y sé que vos y él sois unos grandísimos bellacos, no perdonando al músico; y mirad que os mando que mandéis a Tontonelo no tenga atrevimiento de enviar estos hombres de armas, que le haré dar docientos azotes en las espaldas, que se vean unos a otros.

CHANFALLA.- ¡Digo, señor Alcalde, que no los envía Tontonelo!

BENITO.- Digo que los envía Tontonelo, como ha enviado las otras sabandijas que yo he visto.

CAPACHO.- Todos las habemos visto, señor Benito Repollo.

BENITO.- No digo yo que no, señor Pedro Capacho.
No toques más, músico de entre sueños, que te romperé la cabeza.

(Vuelve el FURRIER.)

FURRIER.- Ea, ¿está ya hecho el alojamiento? Que ya están los caballos en el pueblo.

BENITO.- ¿Que todavía ha salido con la suya Tontonelo? ¡Pues yo os voto a tal, autor de humos y de embelecocos, que me lo habéis de pagar!

CHANFALLA.- Séanme testigos que me amenaza el Alcalde.

CHIRINOS.- Séanme testigos que dice el Alcalde que lo que manda Su Majestad lo manda el sabio Tontonelo.

BENITO.- Atontoneleada te vean mis ojos, plega a Dios todopoderoso.

GOBERNADOR.- Yo para mí tengo que verdaderamente estos hombres de armas no deben de ser de burlas.

FURRIER.- ¿De burlas habían de ser, señor Gobernador? ¿Está en su seso?

JUAN.- Bien pudieran ser atontonelados: como esas cosas habemos visto aquí. Por vida del autor, que haga salir otra vez a la doncella Herodías, porque vea este señor lo que nunca ha visto; quizá con esto le cohecharemos para que se vaya presto del lugar.

CHANFALLA.- Eso en buen hora, y veisla aquí a do vuelve, y hace de señas a su bailador a que de nuevo la ayude.

SOBRINO.- Por mí no quedará, por cierto.

BENITO.- Eso sí, sobrino; cánsala, cánsala; vueltas y más vueltas; ¡vive Dios, que es un azogue la muchacha! ¡Al hoyo, al hoyo! ¡A ello, a ello!

FURRIER.- ¿Está loca esta gente? ¿Qué diablos de doncella es ésta, y qué baile, y qué Tontonelo?

CAPACHO.- Luego, ¿no vee la doncella herodiana el señor furrier?

FURRIER.- ¿Qué diablos de doncella tengo de ver?

CAPACHO.- Basta: ¡de ex illis es!

GOBERNADOR.- ¡De ex illis es; de ex illis es!

JUAN.- ¡Dellos es, dellos el señor furrier; dellos es!

FURRIER.- ¡Soy de la mala puta que los parió; y, por Dios vivo, que si echo mano a la espada, que los haga salir por las ventanas, que no por la puerta!

CAPACHO.- Basta: ¡de ex illis es!

BENITO.- Basta: ¡dellos es, pues no vee nada!

FURRIER.- Canalla barretina: si otra vez me dicen que soy dellos, no les dejaré hueso sano.

BENITO.- Nunca los confesos ni bastardos fueron valientes; y por eso no podemos dejar de decir: ¡dellos es, dellos es!

FURRIER.- ¡Cuerpo de Dios con los villanos! ¡Esperad!

(Mete mano a la espada y acuchíllase con todos; y el ALCALDE aporrea al RABELLEJO; y la CHERRINOS descuelga la manta y dice:)

CHIRINOS.- El diablo ha sido la trompeta y la venida de los hombres de armas; parece que los llamaron con campanilla.

CHANFALLA.- El suceso ha sido extraordinario; la virtud del retablo se queda en su punto, y mañana lo podemos mostrar al pueblo; y nosotros mismos podemos cantar el triunfo desta batalla, diciendo: ¡vivan Chirinos y Chanfalla!

LA CUEVA DE SALAMANCA

Entremés de La cueva de Salamanca

Salen PANCRACIO, LEONARDA y CRISTINA.

PANCRACIO.- Enjugad, señora, esas lágrimas, y poned pausa a vuestros suspiros, considerando que cuatro días de ausencia no son siglos. Yo volveré, a lo más largo, a los cinco, si Dios no me quita la vida; aunque será mejor, por no turbar la vuestra, romper mi palabra, y dejar esta jornada; que sin mi presencia se podrá casar mi hermana.

LEONARDA.- No quiero yo, mi Pancracio y mi señor, que por respeto mío vos parezcáis descortés; id en hora buena, y cumplid con vuestras obligaciones, pues las que os llevan son precisas; que yo me apretaré con mi llaga y pasaré mi soledad lo menos mal que pudiere. Sólo os encargo la vuelta, y que no paséis del término que habéis puesto.

Tenme, Cristina, que se me aprieta el corazón.

(Desmáyase LEONARDA.)

CRISTINA.- ¡Oh, que bien hayan las bodas y las fiestas! En verdad, señor, que, si yo fuera que vuesa merced, que nunca allá fuera.

PANCRACIO.- Entra, hija, por un vidrio de agua para echársela en el rostro. Mas espera; diréle unas palabras que sé al oído, que tienen virtud para hacer volver de los desmayos.

(Dícele las palabras; vuelve LEONARDA diciendo:)

LEONARDA.- ¡Basta!, ello ha de ser forzoso; no hay sino tener paciencia, bien mío; cuanto más os detuviéredes, más dilatáis mi contento. Vuestro compadre Loniso os debe de aguardar ya en el coche. Andad don Dios; que Él os vuelva tan presto y tan bueno como yo deseo.

PANCRACIO.- Mi ángel, si gustas que me quede, no me moveré de aquí más que una estatua.

LEONARDA.- No, no, descanso mío; que mi gusto está en el vuestro; y, por agora, más que os vais que no os quedéis, pues es vuestra honra la mía.

CRISTINA.- ¡Oh, espejo del matrimonio! A fe que si todas las casadas quisiesen tanto a sus maridos como mi señora Leonarda quiere al suyo, que otro gallo les cantase.

LEONARDA.- Entra, Cristinica, y saca mi manto, que quiero acompañar a tu señor hasta dejarle en el coche.

PANCRACIO.- No, por mi amor; abrazadme y quedaos, por vida mía. Cristinica, ten cuenta de regalar a tu señora, que yo te mando un calzado cuando vuelva, como tú le quisieres.

CRISTINA.- Vaya, señor, y no lleve pena de mi señora, porque la pienso persuadir de manera a que nos holguemos, que no imagine en la falta que vuesa merced le ha de hacer.

LEONARDA.- ¿Holgar yo? ¡Qué bien estás en la cuenta, niña! Porque, ausente de mi gusto, no se hicieron los placeres ni las glorias para mí; penas y dolores, sí.

PANCRACIO.- Ya no lo puedo sufrir. Quedad en paz, lumbré destos ojos, los cuales no verán cosa que les dé placer hasta volveros a ver.

(Éntrese PANCRACIO.)

LEONARDA.- ¡Allá darás, rayo, en casa de Ana Díaz. Vayas, y no vuelvas; la ida del humo. Por Dios, que esta vez no os han de valer vuestras valentías ni vuestro recatos!

CRISTINA.- Mil veces temí que con tus extremos habías de estorbar su partida y nuestros contentos.

LEONARDA.- ¿Si vendrán esta noche los que esperamos?

CRISTINA.- ¿Pues no? Ya los tengo avisados, y ellos están tan en ello, que esta tarde enviaron con la lavandera, nuestra secretaria, como que eran paños, una canasta de colar, llena de mil regalos y de cosas de comer, que no parece sino uno de los serones que da el rey el Jueves Santo a sus pobres; sino que la canasta es de Pascua, porque hay en ella empanadas, fiambreras, manjar blanco, y dos capones que aún no están acabados de pelar, y todo género de fruta de la que hay ahora; y, sobre todo, una bota de hasta una arroba de vino, de lo de una oreja, que huele que traciende.

LEONARDA.- Es muy cumplido, y lo fue siempre, mi Riponce, sacristán de las telas de mis entrañas.

CRISTINA.- Pues, ¿qué le falta a mi maese Nicolás, barbero de mis hígados y navaja de mis pesadumbres, que así me las rapa y quita cuando le veo, como si nunca las hubiera tenido?

LEONARDA.- ¿Pusiste la canasta en cobro?

CRISTINA.- En la cocina la tengo, cubierta con un cernadero, por el disimulo.

(Llama a la puerta el ESTUDIANTE Carraolano, y, en llamando, sin esperar que le respondan, entra.)

LEONARDA.- Cristina, mira quién llama.

ESTUDIANTE.- Señoras, yo soy, un pobre estudiante.

CRISTINA.- Bien se os parece que sois pobre y estudiante, pues lo uno muestra vuestro vestido, y el ser pobre vuestro atrevimiento. Cosa estraña es ésta, que no hay pobre que espere a que le saquen la limosna a la puerta, sino que se entran en las casas hasta el último rincón, sin mirar si despiertan a quien duerme, o si no.

ESTUDIANTE.- Otra más blanda respuesta esperaba yo de la buena gracia de vuesa merced; cuanto más, que yo no quería ni buscaba otra limosna, sino alguna caballeriza o pajar donde defenderme esta noche de las inclemencias del cielo, que, según se me trasluce, parece que con grandísimo rigor a la tierra amenazan.

LEONARDA.- ¿Y de dónde bueno sois, amigo?

ESTUDIANTE.- Salmantino soy, señora mía; quiero decir que soy de Salamanca. Iba a Roma con un tío mío, el cual murió en el camino, en el corazón de Francia. Vime solo; determiné volverme a mi tierra; robáronme los lacayos o compañeros de Roque Guinarde, en Cataluña, porque él estaba ausente; que, a estar allí, no consintiera que se me hiciera agravio, porque es muy cortés y comedido, y además limosnero. Hame tomado a estas santas puertas la noche, que por tales las juzgo, y busco mi remedio.

LEONARDA.- En verdad, Cristina, que me ha movido a lástima el estudiante.

CRISTINA.- Ya me tiene a mí rasgadas las entrañas. Tengámosle en casa esta noche, pues de las sobras del castillo se podrá mantener el real; quiero decir que en las reliquias de la canasta habrá en quien adore su hambre; y más, que me ayudará a pelar la volatería que viene en la cesta.

LEONARDA.- Pues, ¿cómo, Cristina, quieres que metamos en nuestra casa testigos de nuestras liviandades?

CRISTINA.- Así tiene él talle de hablar por el colodrillo, como por la boca. Venga acá, amigo: ¿sabe pelar?

ESTUDIANTE.- ¿Cómo si sé pelar? No entiendo eso de saber pelar, si no es que quiere vuesa merced motejarme de pelón; que no hay para qué, pues yo me confieso por el mayor pelón del mundo.

CRISTINA.- No lo digo yo por eso, en mi ánima, sino por saber si sabía pelar dos o tres pares de capones.

ESTUDIANTE.- Lo que sabré responder es que yo, señoras, por la gracia de Dios, soy graduado de bachiller por Salamanca, y no digo...

LEONARDA.- Desamano, ¿quién duda sino que sabrá pelar no sólo capones, sino gansos y avutardas? Y, en esto del guardar secreto, ¿cómo le va? Y, a dicha, ¿es tentado de decir todo lo que ve, imagina o siente?

ESTUDIANTE.- Así pueden matar delante de mí más hombres que carneros en el Rastro, que yo desplegue mis labios para decir palabra alguna.

CRISTINA.- Pues atúrese esa boca, y córsese esa lengua con una agujeta de dos cabos, y amuélese esos dientes, y éntrese con nosotras, y verá misterios y cenará maravillas, y podrá medir en un pajar los pies que quisiere para su cama.

ESTUDIANTE.- Con siete tendré demasiado: que no soy nada codicioso ni regalado.

(Entran el SACRISTÁN Reponce y el BARBERO.)

SACRISTÁN.- ¡Oh, que en hora buena estén los automedones y guías de los carros de nuestros gustos, las luces de nuestras tinieblas, y las dos recíprocas voluntades que sirven de basas y columnas a la amorosa fábrica de nuestros deseos!

LEONARDA.- ¡Esto sólo me enfada dél! Reponce mío: habla, por tu vida, a lo moderno, y de modo que te entienda, y no te encarames donde no te alcance.

BARBERO.- Eso tengo yo bueno, que hablo más llano que una suela de zapato; pan por vino y vino por pan, o como suele decirse.

SACRISTÁN.- Sí, que diferencia ha de haber de un sacristán gramático a un barbero romancista.

CRISTINA.- Para lo que yo he menester a mi barbero, tanto latín sabe, y aún más, que supo Antonio de Nebrija; y no se dispute agora de ciencia ni de modos de hablar: que cada uno habla, si no como debe, a lo menos, como sabe; y entrémonos, y manos a labor, que hay mucho que hacer.

ESTUDIANTE.- Y mucho que pelar.

SACRISTÁN.- ¿Quién es este buen hombre?

LEONARDA.- Un pobre estudiante salamanqueso, que pide albergó para esta noche.

SACRISTÁN.- Yo le daré un par de reales para cena y para lecho, y váyase con Dios.

ESTUDIANTE.- Señor sacristán Reponce, recibo y agradezco la merced y la limosna; pero yo soy mudo, y pelón además, como lo ha menester esta señora doncella, que me tiene convidado; y voto a... de no irme esta noche desta casa, si todo el mundo me lo manda. Confíese vuesa merced mucho de enhoramala de un hombre de mis prendas, que se contenta de dormir en un pajar; y si lo han por sus capones, péleselos el Turco y cómanselos ellos, y nunca del cuero les salgan.

BARBERO.- Éste más parece rufián que pobre. Talle tiene de alzarse con toda la casa.

CRISTINA.- No medre yo, si no me contenta el brío. Entrémonos todos, y demos orden en lo que se ha de hacer; que el pobre pelará y callará como en misa.

ESTUDIANTE.- Y aun como en vísperas.

SACRISTÁN.- Puesto me ha miedo el pobre estudiante; yo apostaré que sabe más latín que yo.

LEONARDA.- De ahí le deben de nacer los bríos que tiene; pero no te pese, amigo, de hacer caridad, que vale para todas las cosas.

(Éntranse todos, y sale Leoniso, COMPADRE DE PANCRACIO, y PANCRACIO.)

COMPADRE.- Luego lo vi yo que nos había de faltar la rueda; no hay cochero que no sea temático; si él rodeara un poco y salvara aquel barranco, ya estuviéramos dos leguas de aquí.

PANCRACIO.- A mí no se me da nada; que antes gusto de volverme y pasar esta noche con mi esposa Leonarda, que en la venta; porque la dejé esta tarde casi para espirar, del sentimiento de mi partida.

COMPADRE.- ¡Gran mujer! ¡De buena os ha dado el cielo, señor compadre! Dadle gracias por ello.

PANCRACIO.- Yo se las doy como puedo, y no como debo; no hay Lucrecia que se le llegue, ni Porcia que se le iguale; la honestidad y el recogimiento han hecho en ella su morada.

COMPADRE.- Si la mía no fuera celosa, no tenía yo más que desear. Por esta calle está más cerca mi casa; tomad, compadre, por éstas, y estaréis presto en la vuestra; y veámonos mañana, que no me faltará coche para la jornada. Adiós.

PANCRACIO.- Adiós.

(Éntranse los dos.)

(Vuelven a salir el SACRISTÁN y el BARBERO, con sus guitarras; LEONARDA, CRISTINA y el ESTUDIANTE. Sale el SACRISTÁN con la sotana alzada y ceñida al cuerpo, danzando al son de su misma guitarra; y, a cada cabriola, vaya diciendo estas palabras:)

SACRISTÁN.- ¡Linda noche, lindo rato, linda cena y lindo amor!

CRISTINA.- Señor sacristán Reponce, no es éste tiempo de danzar; dése orden en cenar y en las demás cosas, y quédense las danzas para mejor coyuntura.

SACRISTÁN.- ¡Linda noche, lindo rato, linda cena y lindo amor!

LEONARDA.- Déjale, Cristina; que en extremo gusto de ver su agilidad.

(Llama PANCRACIO a la puerta, y dice:)

PANCRACIO.- Gente dormida, ¿no oís? ¿Cómo, y tan temprano tenéis atrancada la puerta? Los recatos de mi Leonarda deben de andar por aquí.

LEONARDA.- ¡Ay, desdichada! A la voz y a los golpes, mi marido Pancracio es éste; algo le debe de haber sucedido, pues él se vuelve. Señores, a recogerse a la carbonera: digo al desván, donde está el carbón.
Corre, Cristina, y llévalos; que yo entretendré a Pancracio de modo que tengas lugar para todo.

ESTUDIANTE.- ¡Fea noche, amargo rato, mala cena y peor amor!

CRISTINA.- ¡Gentil relente, por cierto! ¡Ea, vengan todos!

PANCRACIO.- ¿Qué diablos es esto? ¿Cómo no me abrís, lirones?

ESTUDIANTE.- Es el toque, que yo no quiero correr la suerte destos señores. Escóndanse ellos donde quisieren, y llévenme a mí al pajar, que, si allí me hallan, antes pareceré pobre que adúltero.

CRISTINA.- Caminen, que se hunde la casa a golpes.

SACRISTÁN.- El alma llevo en los dientes.

BARBERO.- Y yo en los carcañares.

(Éntranse todos y asómase LEONARDA a la ventana.)

LEONARDA.- ¿Quién está ahí? ¿Quién llama?

PANCRACIO.- Tu marido soy, Leonarda mía; ábreme, que ha media hora que estoy rompiendo a golpes estas puertas.

LEONARDA.- En la voz, bien me parece a mí que oigo a mi cepo Pancracio; pero la voz de un gallo se parece a la de otro gallo, y no me aseguro.

PANCRACIO.- ¡Oh recato inaudito de mujer prudente! Que yo soy, vida mía, tu marido Pancracio: ábreme con toda seguridad.

LEONARDA.- Venga acá, yo lo veré agora. ¿Qué hice yo cuando él se partió esta tarde?

PANCRACIO.- Suspiraste, lloraste y al cabo te desmayaste.

LEONARDA.- Verdad; pero, con todo esto, dígame: ¿qué señales tengo yo en uno de mis hombros?

PANCRACIO.- En el izquierdo tienes un lunar del grandor de medio real, con tres cabellos como tres mil hebras de oro.

LEONARDA.- Verdad; pero, ¿cómo se llama la doncella de casa?

PANCRACIO.- ¡Ea, boba, no seas enfadosa, Cristinica se llama! ¿Qué más quieres?

LEONARDA.- ¡Cristinica, Cristinica, tu señor es; ábrele, niña!

CRISTINA.- Ya voy, señora; que él sea muy bien venido.
¿Qué es esto, señor de mi alma? ¿Qué acelerada vuelta es ésta?

LEONARDA.- ¡Ay, bien mío! Decídnoslo presto, que el temor de algún mal suceso me tiene ya sin pulsos.

PANCRACIO.- No ha sido otra cosa sino que en un barranco se quebró la rueda del coche, y mi compadre y yo determinamos volvernó, y no pasar la noche en el campo; y mañana buscaremos en qué ir, pues hay tiempo. Pero ¿qué voces hay?

(Dentro, y como de muy lejos, diga el ESTUDIANTE:)

ESTUDIANTE.- ¡Ábranme aquí, señores; que me ahogo!

PANCRACIO.- ¿Es en casa o en la calle?

CRISTINA.- Que me maten si no es el pobre estudiante que encerré en el pajar, para que durmiese esta noche.

PANCRACIO.- ¿Estudiante encerrado en mi casa, y en mi ausencia? ¡Malo! En verdad, señora, que si no me tuviera asegurado vuestra mucha bondad, que me causara algún recelo este encerramiento; pero ve, Cristina, y ábrele, que se le debe de haber caído toda la paja a cuestras.

CRISTINA.- Ya voy.

LEONARDA.- Señor, que es un pobre salamanqueso, que pidió que le acogiésemos esta noche, por amor de Dios, aunque fuese en el pajar; y ya sabes mi condición, que no puedo negar nada de lo que se me pide, y encerrámosle; pero veisle aquí, y mirad cuál sale.

(Sale el ESTUDIANTE y CRISTINA; él lleno de paja las barbas, cabeza y vestido.)

ESTUDIANTE.- Si yo no tuviera tanto miedo, y fuera menos escrupuloso, yo hubiera escusado el peligro de ahogarme en el pajar, y hubiera cenado mejor, y tenido más blanda y menos peligrosa cama.

PANCRACIO.- ¿Y quién os había de dar, amigo, mejor cena y mejor cama?

ESTUDIANTE.- ¿Quién? Mi habilidad, sino que el temor de la justicia me tiene atadas las manos.

PANCRACIO.- ¡Peligrosa habilidad debe de ser la vuestra, pues os teméis de la justicia!

ESTUDIANTE.- La ciencia que aprendí en la Cueva de Salamanca, de donde yo soy natural, si se dejara usar sin miedo de la Santa Inquisición, yo sé que cenara y recenara a costa de mis herederos; y aun quizá no estoy muy fuera de usalla, siquiera por esta vez, donde la necesidad me fuerza y me disculpa; pero no sé yo si estas señoras serán tan secretas como yo lo he sido.

PANCRACIO.- No se cure dellas, amigo, sino haga lo que quisiere, que yo les haré que callen; y ya deseo en todo extremo ver alguna destas cosas que dicen que se aprenden en la Cueva de Salamanca.

ESTUDIANTE.- ¿No se contentará vuesa merced con que le saque aquí dos demonios en figuras humanas, que traigan a cuestras una canasta llena de cosas fiambres y comederas?

LEONARDA.- ¿Demonios en mi casa y en mi presencia? ¡Jesús! Librada sea yo de lo que librarme no sé.

CRISTINA.- Aparte. El mismo diablo tiene el estudiante en el cuerpo: ¡plega a Dios que vaya a buen viento esta parva! Temblándome está el corazón en el pecho.

PANCRACIO.- Ahora bien; si ha de ser sin peligro y sin espantos, yo me holgaré de ver esos señores demonios y a la canasta de las fiambreras; y torno a advertir que las figuras no sean espantosas.

ESTUDIANTE.- Digo que saldrán en figura del sacristán de la parroquia, y en la de un barbero su amigo.

CRISTINA.- ¿Mas que lo dice por el sacristán Riponce y por maese Roque, el barbero de casa? ¡Desdichados dellos, que se han de ver convertidos en diablos! Y dígame, hermano, ¿y éstos han de ser diablos bautizados?

ESTUDIANTE.- ¡Gentil novedad! ¿Adónde diablos hay diablos bautizados, o para qué se han de bautizar los diablos? Aunque podrá ser que éstos lo fuesen, porque no hay regla sin excepción; y apártense, y verán maravillas.

LEONARDA.- Aparte. ¡Ay, sin ventura! Aquí se descose; aquí salen nuestras maldades a plaza; aquí soy muerta.

CRISTINA.- Aparte. ¡Ánimo, señora, que buen corazón quebranta mala ventura!

ESTUDIANTE

Vosotros, mezquinos, que en la carbonera hallastes amparo a vuestra desgracia, salid, y en los hombros, con priesa y con gracia, sacad la canasta de la fiambreira;
no me incitéis a que de otra manera más dura os conjure. Salid: ¿qué esperáis?
Mirad que si a dicha el salir rehusáis, tendrá mal suceso mi nueva quimera.

Hora bien, yo sé cómo me tengo de haber con estos demonicos humanos; quiero entrar allá dentro, y a solas hacer un conjuro tan fuerte, que los haga salir más que de paso; aunque la calidad destos demonios más está en sabellos aconsejar, que en conjurallos.

(Éntrese el ESTUDIANTE.)

PANCRACIO.- Yo digo que si éste sale con lo que ha dicho, que será la cosa más nueva y más rara que se haya visto en el mundo.

LEONARDA.- Sí saldrá, ¿quién lo duda? Pues, ¿habíanos de engañar?

CRISTINA.- Ruido anda allá dentro; yo apostaré que los saca; pero vee aquí do vuelve con los demonios y el apatusco de la canasta.

LEONARDA.- ¡Jesús! ¡Qué parecidos son los de la carga al sacristán Reponce y al barbero de la plazuela!

CRISTINA.- Mira, señora, que donde hay demonios no se ha de decir Jesús.

SACRISTÁN.- Digan lo que quisieren; que nosotros somos como los perros del herrero, que dormimos al son de las martilladas; ninguna cosa nos espanta ni turba.

LEONARDA.- Lléguese a que yo coma de lo que viene de la canasta; no tomen menos.

ESTUDIANTE.- Yo haré la salva y comenzaré por el vino. (Bebe.)

Bueno es: ¿es de Esquivias, señor sacridiablo?

SACRISTÁN.- De Esquivias es, ¡juro a...!

ESTUDIANTE.- Téngase, por vida suya, y no pase adelante. ¡Amiguito soy yo de diablos juradores! Demonico, demonico, aquí no venimos a hacer pecados mortales, sino a pasar una hora de pasatiempo, y cenar, y irnos con Cristo.

CRISTINA.- ¿Y éstos han de cenar con nosotros?

PANCRACIO.- Sí, que los diablos no comen.

BARBERO.- Sí comen algunos, pero no todos; y nosotros somos de los que comen.

CRISTINA.- ¡Ay, señores! Quédense acá los pobres diablos, pues han traído la cena; que sería poca cortesía dejarlos ir muertos de hambre, y parecen diablos muy honrados y muy hombres de bien.

LEONARDA.- Como no nos espanten, y si mi marido gusta, quédense en buen hora.

PANCRACIO.- Queden; que quiero ver lo que nunca he visto.

BARBERO.- Nuestro Señor pague a vuestras mercedes la buena obra, señores míos.

CRISTINA.- ¡Ay, qué bien criados, qué corteses! Nunca medre yo, si todos los diablos son como éstos, si no han de ser mis amigos de aquí adelante.

SACRISTÁN.- Oigan, pues, para que se enamoren de veras.

(Toca el SACRISTÁN, y canta; y ayúdale el BARBERO con el último verso no más.)

SACRISTÁN

Oigan los que poco saben lo que con mi lengua franca digo del bien que en sí tiene

BARBERO

La Cueva de Salamanca.

SACRISTÁN

Oigan lo que dejó escrito della el bachiller Tudanca en el cuero de una yegua que dicen que fue potranca, en la parte de la piel
que confina con el anca, poniendo sobre las nubes

La Cueva de Salamanca.

SACRISTÁN

En ella estudian los ricos y los que no tienen blanca, y sale entera y rolliza
la memoria que está manca.
Siéntanse los que allí enseñan de alquitrán en una banca, porque estas bombas encierra

La Cueva de Salamanca.

SACRISTÁN

En ella se hacen discretos los moros de la Palanca;
y el estudiante más burdo ciencias de su pecho arranca.
A los que estudian en ella, ninguna cosa les manca;
viva, pues, siglos eternos

La Cueva de Salamanca.

SACRISTÁN

Y nuestro conjurador, si es, a dicha, de Loranca, tenga en ella cien mil vides de uva tinta y de uva blanca;
y al diablo que le acusare, que le den con una tranca,
y para el tal jamás sirva

La Cueva de Salamanca.

CRISTINA.- Basta: ¿que también los diablos son poetas?

BARBERO.- Y aun todos los poetas son diablos.

PANCRACIO.- Dígame, señor mío, pues los diablos lo saben todo, ¿dónde se inventaron todos estos bailes de las zarabandas, zambapalo y Dello me pesa, con el famoso del nuevo Escarramán?

BARBERO.- ¿Adónde? En el infierno; allí tuvieron su origen y principio.

PANCRACIO.- Yo así lo creo.

LEONARDA.- Pues, en verdad, que tengo yo mis puntas y collar escarramanesco; sino que por mi honestidad, y por guardar el decoro a quien soy, no me atrevo a bailarle.

SACRISTÁN.- Con cuatro mudanzas que yo le enseñase a vuesa merced cada día, en una semana saldría única en el baile; que sé que le falta bien poco.

ESTUDIANTE.- Todo se andará; por agora, entrémonos a cenar, que es lo que importa.

PANCRACIO.- Entremos; que quiero averiguar si los diablos comen o no, con otras cien mil cosas que dellos cuentan; y, por Dios, que no han de salir de mi casa hasta que me dejen enseñado en la ciencia y ciencias que se enseñan en La Cueva de Salamanca.

EL VIEJO CELOSO

Entremés del Viejo celoso

Salen DOÑA LORENZA y CRISTINA, su criada, y HORTIGOSA, su vecina.

DOÑA LORENZA.- Milagro ha sido éste, señora Hortigosa, el no haber dado la vuelta a la llave mi duelo, mi yugo y mi desesperación. Éste es el primero día, después que me casé con él, que hablo con persona de fuera de casa; que fuera le vea yo desta vida a él y a quien con él me casó.

HORTIGOSA.- Ande, mi señora doña Lorenza, no se queje tanto; que con una caldera vieja se compra otra nueva.

DOÑA LORENZA.- Y aun con esos y otros semejantes villancicos o refranes me engañaron a mí; que malditos sean sus dineros, fuera de las cruces; malditas sus joyas, malditas sus galas, y maldito todo cuanto me da y promete. ¿De qué me sirve a mí todo aquesto, si en mitad de la riqueza estoy pobre, y en medio de la abundancia con hambre?

CRISTINA.- En verdad, señora tía, que tienes razón; que más quisiera yo andar con un trapo atrás y otro adelante, y tener un marido mozo, que verme casada y enlodada con ese viejo podrido que tomaste por esposo.

DOÑA LORENZA.- ¿Yo le tomé, sobrina? A la fe, diómele quien pudo; y yo, como muchacha, fui más presta al obedecer que al contradecir; pero, si yo tuviera tanta experiencia destas cosas, antes me tarazara la lengua con los dientes que pronunciar aquel sí, que se pronuncia con dos letras y da que llorar dos mil años; pero yo imagino que no fue otra cosa sino que había de ser ésta, y que, las que han de suceder forzosamente, no hay prevención ni diligencia humana que las prevenga.

CRISTINA.- ¡Jesús y del mal viejo! Toda la noche: «Daca el orinal, toma el orinal; levántate, Cristinica, y caliéntame unos paños, que me muero de la ijada; dame aquellos juncos, que me fatiga la piedra». Con más ungüentos y medicinas en el aposento que si fuera una botica; y yo, que apenas sé vestirme, tengo de servirle de enfermera. ¡Pux, pux, pux, viejo clueco, tan potroso como celoso, y el más celoso del mundo!

DOÑA LORENZA.- Dice la verdad mi sobrina.

CRISTINA.- ¡Pluguiera a Dios que nunca yo la dijera en esto!

HORTIGOSA.- Ahora bien, señora doña Lorenza, vuesa merced haga lo que le tengo aconsejado, y verá cómo se halla muy bien con mi consejo. El mozo es como un ginjo verde; quiere bien, sabe callar y agradecer lo que por él se hace; y, pues los celos y el recato del viejo no nos dan lugar a demandas ni a respuestas, resolución y buen ánimo: que, por la orden que hemos dado, yo le pondré al galán en su aposento de vuesa merced y le sacaré, si bien tuviese el viejo más ojos que Argos y viese más que un zahorí, que dicen que vee siete estados debajo de la tierra.

DOÑA LORENZA.- Como soy primeriza, estoy temerosa, y no querría, a trueco del gusto, poner a riesgo la honra.

CRISTINA.-

Eso me parece, señora tía, a lo del cantar de Gómez Arias:

Señor Gómez Arias,
doleos de mí;
soy niña y muchacha,

nunca en tal me vi.

DOÑA LORENZA.- Algún espíritu malo debe de hablar en ti, sobrina, según las cosas que dices.

CRISTINA.- Yo no sé quién habla; pero yo sé que haría todo aquello que la señora Hortigosa ha dicho, sin faltar punto.

DOÑA LORENZA.- ¿Y la honra, sobrina?

CRISTINA.- ¿Y el holgarnos, tía?

DOÑA LORENZA.- ¿Y si se sabe?

CRISTINA.- ¿Y si no se sabe?

DOÑA LORENZA.- ¿Y quién me asegurará a mí que no se sepa?

HORTIGOSA.- ¿Quién? La buena diligencia, la sagacidad, la industria; y, sobre todo, el buen ánimo y mis trazas.

CRISTINA.- Mire, señora Hortigosa, tráyanosle galán, limpio, desenvuelto, un poco atrevido, y, sobre todo, mozo.

HORTIGOSA.- Todas esas partes tiene el que he propuesto, y otras dos más: que es rico y liberal.

DOÑA LORENZA.- Que no quiero riquezas, señora Hortigosa; que me sobran las joyas, y me ponen en confusión las diferencias de colores de mis muchos vestidos; hasta eso no tengo que desear, que Dios le dé salud a Cañizares: más vestida me tiene que un palmito, y con más joyas que la vedriera de un platero rico. No me clavara él las ventanas, cerrara las puertas, visitara a todas horas la casa, desterrara della los gatos y los perros, solamente porque tienen nombre de varón; que, a trueco de que no hiciera esto, y otras cosas no vistas en materia de recato, yo le perdonara sus dádivas y mercedes.

HORTIGOSA.- ¿Que tan celoso es?

DOÑA LORENZA.- Digo que le vendían el otro día una tapicería a bonísimo precio, y por ser de figuras no la quiso, y compró otra de verduras por mayor precio, aunque no era tan buena. Siete puertas hay antes que se llegue a mi aposento, fuera de la puerta de la calle, y todas se cierran con llave; y las llaves no me ha sido posible averiguar dónde las esconde de noche.

CRISTINA.- Tía, la llave de loba creo que se la pone entre las faldas de la camisa.

DOÑA LORENZA.- No lo creas, sobrina; que yo duermo con él, y jamás le he visto ni sentido que tenga llave alguna.

CRISTINA.- Y más, que toda la noche anda como trasgo por toda la casa; y si acaso dan alguna música en la calle, les tira de pedradas porque se vayan: es un malo, es un brujo; es un viejo, que no tengo más que decir.

DOÑA LORENZA.- Señora Hortigosa, váyase, no venga el gruñidor y la halle conmigo, que sería echarlo a perder todo; y lo que ha de hacer, hágalo luego; que estoy tan aburrida, que no me falta sino echarme una soga al cuello, por salir de tan mala vida.

HORTIGOSA.- Quizá con esta que ahora se comenzará, se le quitará toda esa mala gana y le vendrá otra más saludable y que más la contente.

CRISTINA.- Así suceda, aunque me costase a mí un dedo de la mano: que quiero mucho a mi señora tía, y me muero de verla tan pensativa y angustiada en poder deste viejo y reviejo, y más que viejo; y no me puedo hartar de decille viejo.

DOÑA LORENZA.- Pues en verdad que te quiere bien, Cristina.

CRISTINA.- ¿Deja por eso de ser viejo? Cuanto más, que yo he oído decir que siempre los viejos son amigos de niñas.

HORTIGOSA.- Así es la verdad, Cristina, y adiós, que, en acabando de comer, doy la vuelta. Vuesa merced esté muy en lo que dejamos concertado, y verá cómo salimos y entramos bien en ello.

CRISTINA.- Señora Hortigosa, hágame merced de traerme a mí un frailecico pequeñito, con quien yo me huelgue.

HORTIGOSA.- Yo se le traeré a la niña pintado.

CRISTINA.- ¡Que no le quiero pintado, sino vivo, vivo, chiquito como unas perlas!

DOÑA LORENZA.- ¿Y si lo vee tío?

CRISTINA.- Diréle yo que es un duende, y tendrá dél miedo, y holgaréme yo.

HORTIGOSA.- Digo que yo le trairé, y adiós.

(Vase HORTIGOSA.)

CRISTINA.- Mire, tía: si Hortigosa trae al galán y a mi frailecico, y si señor los viere, no tenemos más que hacer sino cogerle entre todos y ahogarle, y echarle en el pozo o enterrarle en la caballeriza.

DOÑA LORENZA.- Tal eres tú, que creo lo harías mejor que lo dices.

CRISTINA.- Pues no sea el viejo celoso, y déjenos vivir en paz, pues no le hacemos mal alguno, y vivimos como unas santas.

(Éntranse.)

(Entran CAÑIZARES, viejo, y un COMPADRE suyo.)

CAÑIZARES.- Señor compadre, señor compadre: el setentón que se casa con quince, o carece de entendimiento, o tiene gana de visitar el otro mundo lo más presto que le sea posible. Apenas me casé con doña Lorencica, pensando tener en ella compañía y regalo, y persona que se hallase en mi cabecera, y me cerrase los ojos al tiempo de mi muerte, cuando me embistieron una turbamulta de trabajos y desasosiegos; tenía casa, y busqué casar; estaba posado, y desposéme.

COMPADRE.- Compadre, error fue, pero no muy grande; porque, según el dicho del Apóstol, mejor es casarse que abrasarse.

CAÑIZARES.- ¡Que no había que abrasar en mí, señor compadre, que con la menor llamarada quedara hecho ceniza! Compañía quise, compañía busqué, compañía hallé, pero Dios lo remedie, por quién Él es.

COMPADRE.- ¿Tiene celos, señor compadre?

CAÑIZARES.- Del sol que mira a Lorencita, del aire que le toca, de las faldas que la vapulan.

COMPADRE.- ¿Dale ocasión?

CAÑIZARES.- Ni por pienso, ni tiene por qué, ni cómo, ni cuándo, ni adónde: las ventanas, amén de estar con llave, las guarnecen rejas y celosías; las puertas jamás se abren; vecina no atraviesa mis umbrales, ni los atravesará mientras Dios me diere vida. Mirad, compadre: no les vienen los malos aires a las mujeres de ir a los jubileos ni a las procesiones, ni a todos los actos de regocijos públicos; donde ellas se mancan, donde ellas se estropean y adonde ellas se dañan, es en casa de las vecinas y de las amigas; más maldades encubre una mala amiga, que la capa de la noche; más conciertos se hacen en su casa y más se concluyen, que en una semblea.

COMPADRE.- Yo así lo creo; pero si la señora doña Lorenza no sale de casa, ni nadie entra en la suya, ¿de qué vive descontento mi compadre?

CAÑIZARES.- De que no pasará mucho tiempo en que no caya Lorencica en lo que le falta; que será un mal caso, y tan malo, que en sólo pensallo le temo, y de temerle me desespero, y de desesperarme vivo con disgusto.

COMPADRE.- Y con razón se puede tener ese temer, porque las mujeres querrían gozar enteros los frutos del matrimonio.

CAÑIZARES.- La mía los goza doblados.

COMPADRE.- Ahí está el daño, señor compadre.CAÑIZARES.- No, no, ni por pienso; porque es más simple Lorencica que una paloma, y hasta agora no entiende nada desas filaterías; y adiós, señor compadre, que me quiero entrar en casa.

COMPADRE.- Yo quiero entrar allá, y ver a mi señora doña Lorenza.

CAÑIZARES.- Habéis de saber, compadre, que los antiguos latinos usaban de un refrán, que decía: Amicus usque ad aras, que quiere decir: «El amigo, hasta el altar»; infiriendo que el amigo ha de hacer por su amigo todo aquello que no fuere contra Dios; y yo digo que mi amigo, usque ad portam, hasta la puerta; que ninguno ha de pasar mis quicios; y adiós, señor compadre, y perdóneme.

(Éntrese CAÑIZARES.)

COMPADRE.- En mi vida he visto hombre más recatado, ni más celoso, ni más impertinente; pero éste es de aquellos que traen la sogá arrastrando, y de los que siempre vienen a morir del mal que temen.

(Éntrese el COMPADRE.)

(Salen DOÑA LORENZA y CRISTINICA.)

CRISTINA.- Tía, mucho tarda tío, y más tarda Hortigosa.

DOÑA LORENZA.- Mas, que nunca él acá viniese, ni ella tampoco; porque él me enfada y ella me tiene confusa.

CRISTINA.- Todo es probar, señora tía; y, cuando no saliere bien, darle del codo.

DOÑA LORENZA.- ¡Ay, sobrina! Que estas cosas, o yo sé poco o sé que todo el daño está en probarlas.

CRISTINA.- A fe, señora tía, que tiene poco ánimo, y que, si yo fuera de su edad, que no me espantaran hombres armados.

DOÑA LORENZA.- Otra vez torno a decir, y diré cien mil veces, que Satanás habla en tu boca; mas ¡ay! ¿Cómo se ha entrado señor?

CRISTINA.- Debe de haber abierto con la llave maestra.

DOÑA LORENZA.- Encomiendo yo al diablo sus maestrías y sus llaves.

(Entra CAÑIZARES.)

CAÑIZARES.- ¿Con quién hablábades, doña Lorenza?

DOÑA LORENZA.- Con Cristinica hablaba.

CAÑIZARES.- Miradlo bien, doña Lorenza.

DOÑA LORENZA.- Digo que hablaba con Cristinica: ¿con quién había de hablar? ¿Tengo yo, por ventura, con quién?

CAÑIZARES.- No querría que tuviésedes algún soliloquio con vos misma, que redundase en mi perjuicio.

DOÑA LORENZA.- Ni entiendo esos circunloquios que decís, ni aun los quiero entender; y tengamos la fiesta en paz.

CAÑIZARES.- Ni aun las vísperas no querría yo tener en guerra con vos; pero, ¿quién llama a aquella puerta con tanta priesa? Mira, Cristinica, quien es, y, si es pobre, dale limosna y despídele.

CRISTINA.- ¿Quién está ahí?

HORTIGOSA.- La vecina Hortigosa es, señora Cristina.

CAÑIZARES.- ¿Hortigosa y vecina? Dios sea conmigo. Pregúntale, Cristina, lo que quiere, y dáselo, con condición que no atraviese esos umbrales.

CRISTINA.- ¿Y qué quiere, señora vecina?

CAÑIZARES.- El nombre de vecina me turba y sobresalta; llámala por su propio nombre, Cristina.

CRISTINA.- Responda: y ¿qué quiere, señora Hortigosa?

HORTIGOSA.- Al señor Cañizares quiero suplicar un poco, en que me va la honra, la vida y el alma.

CAÑIZARES.- Decidle, sobrina, a esa señora, que a mí me va todo eso y más en que no entre acá dentro.

DOÑA LORENZA.- ¡Jesús, y qué condición tan extravagante! ¿Aquí no estoy delante de vos? ¿Hanme de comer de ojo? ¿Hanme de llevar por los aires?

CAÑIZARES.- ¡Entre con cien mil Bercebúyes, pues vos lo queréis!

CRISTINA.- Entre, señora vecina.

CAÑIZARES.- ¡Nombre fatal para mí es el de vecina!

(Entra HORTIGOSA, y trae un guadamecú y en las pieles de las cuatro esquinas han de venir pintados)

Rodamonte, Mandricardo, Rugero y Gradaso; y Rodamonte venga pintado como arrebozado.)

HORTIGOSA.- Señor mío de mi alma, movida y incitada de la buena fama de vuestra merced, de su gran caridad y de sus muchas limosnas, me he atrevido de venir a suplicar a vuestra merced me haga tanta merced, caridad y limosna y buena obra de comprarme este guadamecú, porque tengo un hijo preso por unas heridas que dio a un tundidor, y ha mandado la justicia que declare el cirujano, y no tengo con qué pagalle, y corre peligro no le echen otros embargos, que podrían ser muchos, a causa que es muy travieso mi hijo; y querría echarle hoy o mañana, si fuese posible, de la cárcel. La obra es buena, el guadamecú nuevo, y, con todo eso, le daré por lo que vuestra merced quisiere darme por él, que en más está la monta, y como esas cosas he perdido yo en esta vida. Tenga vuestra merced desconfianza, señora mía, y desconfiámosle, porque no vea el señor Cañizares que hay engaño en mis palabras; alce más, señora mía, y mire cómo es bueno de caída, y las pinturas de los cuadros parece que están vivas.

(Al alzar y mostrar el guadamecú, entra por detrás dél un GALÁN; y, como CAÑIZARES ve los retratos, dice:)

CAÑIZARES.- ¡Oh, qué lindo Rodamonte! ¿Y qué quiere el señor rebozadito en mi casa? Aun si supiese que tan amigo soy yo destas cosas y destos rebocitos, espantarse ía.

CRISTINA.- Señor tío, yo no sé nada de rebozados; y si él ha entrado en casa, la señora Hortigosa tiene la culpa; que a mí, el diablo me lleve si dije ni hice nada para que él entrase; no, en mi conciencia, aun el diablo sería si mi señor tío me echase a mí la culpa de su entrada.

CAÑIZARES.- Ya yo lo veo, sobrina, que la señora Hortigosa tiene la culpa; pero no hay de qué maravillarme, porque ella no sabe mi condición, ni cuán enemigo soy de aquestas pinturas.

DOÑA LORENZA.- Por las pinturas lo dice, Cristinica, y no por otra cosa.

CRISTINA.- Pues por esas digo yo. ¡Ay, Dios sea conmigo! Vuelto se me ha el ánimo al cuerpo, que ya andaba por los aires.

DOÑA LORENZA.- ¡Quemado vea yo ese pico de once varas! En fin, quien con muchachos se acuesta, etc.

CRISTINA.- ¡Ay, desgraciada, y en qué peligro pudiera haber puesto toda esta baraja!

CAÑIZARES.- Señora Hortigosa, yo no soy amigo de figuras rebozadas ni por rebozar; tome este doblón, con el cual podrá remediar su necesidad, y váyase de mi casa lo más presto que pudiere, y ha de ser luego, y llévese su guadamecí.

HORTIGOSA.- Viva vuesa merced más años que Matute el de Jerusalén, en vida de mi señora doña... no sé cómo se llama, a quien suplico me mande, que la serviré de noche y de día, con la vida y con el alma, que la debe de tener ella como la de una tortolica simple.

CAÑIZARES.- Señora Hortigosa, abrevie y váyase, y no se esté agora juzgando almas ajenas.

HORTIGOSA.- Si vuesa merced hubiere menester algún pegadillo para la madre, téngolos milagrosos; y, si para mal de muelas, sé unas palabras que quitan el dolor como con la mano.

CAÑIZARES.- Abrevie, señora Hortigosa, que doña Lorenza, ni tiene madre, ni dolor de muelas; que todas las tiene sanas y enteras, que en su vida se ha sacado muela alguna.

HORTIGOSA.- Ella se las sacará, placiendo al cielo, porque le dará muchos años de vida; y la vejez es la total destrucción de la dentadura.

CAÑIZARES.- ¡Aquí de Dios! ¿Que no será posible que me deje esta vecina? ¡Hortigosa, o diablo, o vecina, o lo que eres, vete con Dios y déjame en mi casa!

HORTIGOSA.- Justa es la demanda, y vuesa merced no se enoje, que ya me voy.

(Vase HORTIGOSA.)

CAÑIZARES.- ¡Oh vecinas, vecinas! Escaldado quedo aun de las buenas palabras desta vecina, por haber salido por boca de vecina.

DOÑA LORENZA.- Digo que tenéis condición de bárbaro y de salvaje; y ¿qué ha dicho esta vecina para que quedéis con la ojeriza contra ella? Todas vuestras buenas obras las hacéis en pecado mortal: dístesle dos docenas de reales, acompañados con otras dos docenas de injurias, ¡boca de lobo, lengua de escorpión y silo de malicias!

CAÑIZARES.- No, no, a mal viento va esta parva; no me parece bien que volváis tanto por vuestra vecina.

CRISTINA.- Señora tía, éntrese allí dentro y desenójese, y deje a tío, que parece que está enojado.

DOÑA LORENZA.- Así lo haré, sobrina; y aun quizá no me verá la cara en estas dos horas; y a fe que yo se la dé a beber, por más que la rehúse.

(Éntrese DOÑA LORENZA.)

CRISTINA.- Tío, ¿no ve cómo ha cerrado de golpe? Y creo que va a buscar una tranca para asegurar la puerta.

(DOÑA LORENZA, por dentro.)

DOÑA LORENZA.- ¿Cristinica? ¿Cristinica?

CRISTINA.- ¿Qué quiere, tía?

DOÑA LORENZA.- ¡Si supieses qué galán me ha deparado la buena suerte! Mozo, bien dispuesto, pelinegro, y que le huele la boca a mil azahares.

CRISTINA.- ¡Jesús, y qué locuras y qué niñerías! ¿Está loca, tía?

DOÑA LORENZA.- No estoy sino en todo mi juicio; y en verdad que, si le vieses, que se te alegrase el alma.

CRISTINA.- ¡Jesús, y qué locuras y qué niñerías! Ríñala, tío, porque no se atreva, ni aun burlando, a decir deshonestidades.

CAÑIZARES.- ¿Bobear, Lorenza? Pues a fe que no estoy yo de gracia para sufrir esas burlas.

DOÑA LORENZA.- Que no son sino veras, y tan veras, que en este género no pueden ser mayores.

CRISTINA.- ¡Jesús, y qué locuras y qué niñerías! Y dígame, tía, ¿está ahí también mi frailecito?

DOÑA LORENZA.- No, sobrina; pero otra vez vendrá si quiere Hortigosa, la vecina.

CAÑIZARES.- Lorenza, di lo que quisieres, pero no tomes en tu boca el nombre de vecina, que me tiemblan las carnes en oírle.

DOÑA LORENZA.- También me tiemblan a mí por amor de la vecina.

CRISTINA.- ¡Jesús, y qué locuras y qué niñerías!

DOÑA LORENZA.- Ahora echo de ver quién eres, viejo maldito; que hasta aquí he vivido engañada contigo.

CRISTINA.- Ríñala, tío, ríñala, tío; que se desvergüenza mucho.

DOÑA LORENZA.- Lavar quiero a un galán las pocas barbas que tiene con una bacía llena de agua de ángeles, porque su cara es como la de un ángel pintado.

CRISTINA.- ¡Jesús, y qué locuras y qué niñerías! Despedácela, tío.

CAÑIZARES.- No la despedazaré yo a ella, sino a la puerta que la encubre.

DOÑA LORENZA.- No hay para qué: vela aquí abierta; entre, y verá como es verdad cuanto le he dicho.CAÑIZARES.- Aunque sé que te burlas, sí entraré para desenojarte.

(Al entrar CAÑIZARES, danle con una bacía de agua en los ojos; él vase a limpiar; acuden sobre él CRISTINA y DOÑA LORENZA, y en este ínterin sale el galán y vase.)

CAÑIZARES.- ¡Por Dios, que por poco me cegaras, Lorenza! Al diablo se dan las burlas que se arremeten a los ojos.

DOÑA LORENZA.- ¡Mirad con quién me casó mi suerte, sino con el hombre más malicioso del mundo! ¡Mirad cómo dio crédito a mis mentiras, por su ..., fundadas en materia de celos, que menoscabada y asendereada sea mi ventura! Pagad vosotros, cabellos, las deudas deste viejo; llorad vosotros, ojos, las culpas deste maldito; mirad en lo que tiene mi honra y mi crédito, pues de las sospechas hace certezas, de las mentiras verdades, de las burlas veras y de los entretenimientos maldiciones. ¡Ay, que se me arranca el alma!

CRISTINA.- Tía, no dé tantas voces, que se juntará la vecindad.

(De dentro.)

JUSTICIA.- ¡Abran esas puertas! Abran luego; si no, echarélas en el suelo.

DOÑA LORENZA.- Abre, Cristinica, y sepa todo el mundo mi inocencia y la maldad deste viejo.

CAÑIZARES.- ¡Vive Dios, que creí que te burlabas! ¡Lorenza, calla!

(Entran el ALGUACIL y los músicos, y el BAILARÍN y HORTIGOSA.)

ALGUACIL.- ¿Qué es esto? ¿Qué pendencia es ésta? ¿Quién daba aquí voces?

CAÑIZARES.- Señor, no es nada; pendencias son entre marido y mujer, que luego se pasan.

MÚSICO.- ¡Por Dios, que estábamos mis compañeros y yo, que somos músicos, aquí pared y medio, en un desposorio, y a las voces hemos acudido, con no pequeño sobresalto, pensando que era otra cosa.

HORTIGOSA.- Y yo también, en mi ánima pecadora.

CAÑIZARES.- Pues en verdad, señora Hortigosa, que si no fuera por ella, que no hubiera sucedido nada de lo sucedido.

HORTIGOSA.- Mis pecados lo habrán hecho; que soy tan desdichada, que, sin saber por dónde ni por dónde no, se me echan a mí las culpas que otros cometen.

CAÑIZARES.- Señores, vuestras mercedes todos se vuelvan norabuena, que yo les agradezco su buen deseo; que ya yo y mi esposa quedamos en paz.

DOÑA LORENZA.- Sí quedaré, como le pida primero perdón a la vecina, si alguna cosa mala pensó contra ella.

CAÑIZARES.- Si a todas las vecinas de quien yo pienso mal hubiese de pedir perdón, sería nunca acabar; pero, con todo eso, yo se le pido a la señora Hortigosa.

HORTIGOSA.- Y yo le otorgo para aquí y para delante de Pero García.

MÚSICO.- Pues, en verdad, que no habemos de haber venido en balde: toquen mis compañeros, y baile el bailarín, y regocíjense las paces con esta canción.

CAÑIZARES.- Señores, no quiero música: yo la doy por recibida.

MÚSICO.-

Pues aunque no la quiera.

El agua de por San Juan quita vino y no da pan.

Las riñas de por San Juan
todo el año paz nos dan.

Llover el trigo en las eras, las viñas estando en cierne, no hay labrador que gobierne bien sus cubas y paneras;

mas las riñas más de veras, si suceden por San Juan
todo el año paz nos dan.

(Baila.)

Por la canícula ardiente está la cólera a punto;
pero, pasando aquel punto,
menos activa se siente.

Y así, el que dice no miente, que las riñas por San Juan
todo el año paz nos dan.
(Baila.)

Las riñas de los casados como aquesta siempre sean, para que después se vean, sin pensar regocijados.

Sol que sale tras nublados, es contento tras afán:
las riñas de por San Juan
todo el año paz nos dan.

CAÑIZARES.- Porque vean vuestas mercedes las revueltas y vueltas en que me ha puesto una vecina, y si tengo razón de estar mal con las vecinas.

DOÑA LORENZA.- Aunque mi esposo está mal con las vecinas, yo beso a vuestas mercedes las manos, señoras vecinas.

CRISTINA.- Y yo también; mas si mi vecina me hubiera traído mi frailecico, yo la tuviera por mejor vecina; y adiós, señoras vecinas.

Soneto de Miguel de Cervantes a la reina Doña Isabel 2ª

Serenísima reina, en quien se halla lo que Dios pudo dar a un ser humano; amparo universal del ser cristiano, de quien la santa fama nunca calla;
    arma feliz, de cuya fina malla   5 se viste el gran Felipe soberano, ínclito rey del ancho suelo hispano
a quien Fortuna y Mundo se avasalla: ¿cuál ingenio podría aventurarse a pregonar el bien que estás mostrando,   10 si ya en divino viese convertirse?
    Que, en ser mortal, habrá de acobardarse, y así, le va mejor sentir callando aquello que es difícil de decirse.

Epitafio

Aquí el valor de la española tierra, aquí la flor de la francesa gente, aquí quien concordó lo diferente, de oliva coronando aquella guerra;
    aquí en pequeño espacio veis se encierra   5 nuestro claro lucero de occidente;
aquí yace enterrada la excelente causa que nuestro bien todo destierra.

    Mirad quién es el mundo y su pujanza, y cómo, de la más alegre vida,   10 la muerte lleva siempre la victoria; también mirad la bienaventuranza que goza nuestra reina esclarecida en el eterno reino de la gloria.

Redondilla castellana

Cuando dejaba la Guerra libre nuestro hispano suelo, con un repentino vuelo
la mejor flor de la tierra fue trasplantada en el cielo; 5
y, al cortarla de su rama, el mortífero accidente
fue tan oculto a la gente como el que no ve la llama hasta que quemar se siente. 10

Cuatro redondillas castellanas a la muerte de Su Majestad

Cuando un estado dichoso esperaba nuestra suerte, bien como ladrón famoso vino la invencible muerte a robar nuestro reposo; 5 y metió tanto la mano
aqueste fiero tirano,
por orden del alto cielo,
que nos llevó deste suelo el valor del ser humano. 10

¡Cuán amarga es tu memoria, oh dura y terrible faz!
Pero en aquesta victoria, si llevaste nuestra paz, fue para dalle más gloria; 15
y, aunqu'el dolor nos desvela, una cosa nos consuela:
ver que al reino soberano ha dado un vuelo temprano nuestra muy cara Isabela. 20

Una alma tan limpia y bella, tan enemiga de engaños, ¿qué pudo merecer ella, para que en tan tiernos años dejase el mundo de vella? 25 Dirás, Muerte, en quien se encierra la causa de nuestra guerra, para nuestro desconsuelo, que cosas que son del cielo
no las merece la tierra. 30

Tanto de punto subiste
en el amor que mostraste, que, ya que al cielo te fuiste, en la tierra nos dejaste las prendas que más quesiste. 35

¡Oh Isabela Eugenia Clara, Catalina, a todos cara, claros luceros las dos,
no quiera y permita Dios se os muestre Fortuna avara! 40

La elegía que, en nombre de todo el estudio, el sobredicho Cervantes compuso, dirigida al Ilustrísimo y Reverendísimo Cardenal don Diego de Espinosa, etc., en la cual con bien elegante estilo se ponen cosas dignas de memoria

¿A quién irá mi doloroso canto, o en cuya oreja sonará su acento, que no deshaga el corazón en llanto?

A ti, gran cardenal, yo le presento, pues vemos te ha cabido tanta parte 5 del hado secutivo violento.

Aquí verás qu'el bien no tiene parte:
todo es dolor, tristeza y desconsuelo lo que en mi triste canto se reparte.

¿Quién dijera, señor, que un solo vuelo 10 de una ánima beata al alta cumbre pusiera en confusión al bajo suelo?

Mas, ¡ay!, que yace muerta nuestra lumbre:
el alma goza de perpetua gloria,
y el cuerpo de terrena pesadumbre. 15

No se pase, señor, de tu memoria cómo en un punto la invincible muerte lleva de nuestras vidas la victoria.

Al tiempo que esperaba nuestra suerte poderse mejorar, la sancta mano 20 mostró por nuestro mal su furia fuerte.

Entristeció a la tierra su verano, secó su paraíso fresco y tierno, el ornato añubló del ser cristiano.

Volvió la primavera en frío invierno, 25
trocó en pesar su gusto y alegría, tornó de arriba abajo su gobierno.

Pasóse ya aquel ser que ser solía a nuestra obscuridad claro lucero, sosiego del antigua tiranía. 30

A más andar el término postrero llegó, que dividió con furia insana del alma sancta el corazón sincero.

Cuanto ya nos venía la temprana dulce fruta del árbol deseado, 35 vino sobre él la frígida mañana.

Quien detuvo el poder de Marte airado que no pasase más el alto monte, con prisiones de nieve aherrojado, no pisará ya más nuestro horizonte, 40 que a los campos Elíseos es llevada sin ver la obscura barca de Caronte.

A ti, fiel pastor de la manada seguntina, es justo y te conviene aligerarnos carga tan pesada. 45

Mira el dolor que el gran Filipo tiene:
allí tu discreción muestre el alteza que en tu divino ingenio se contiene.

Bien sé que le dirás que a la bajeza de nuestra humanidad es cosa cierta 50 no tener solo un punto de firmeza, y que, si yace su esperanza muerta y el dolor vida y alma le lastima, que a do la cierra, Dios abre otra puerta.

Mas, ¿qué consuelo habrá, señor, que oprima 55 algún tanto sus lágrimas cansadas si una prenda perdió de tanta estima?

Y más si considera las amadas prendas que le dejó en la dulce vida y con su amarga muerte lastimadas. 60

Alma bella, del cielo merescida, mira cuál queda el miserable suelo sin la luz de tu vista esclarecida:

verás que en árbol verde no hace vuelo el ave más alegre, antes ofresce 65 en su amoroso canto triste duelo.

Contino en grave llanto se anochece el triste día que te imaginamos con aquella virtud que no perece; mas deste imaginar nos consolamos 70 en ver que merescieron tus deseos que goces ya del bien que deseamos.

Acá nos quedarán por tus trofeos tu cristiandad, valor y gracia estraña, de alma sancta sanctísimos arreos. 75

De hoy más, la sola y afligida España, cuando más sus clamores levantare al summo Hacedor y alta compañía, cuando más por salud le importunare al término postrero que perezca 80 y en el último trance se hallare, sólo podrá pedirle que le ofrezca otra paz, otro amparo, otra ventura qu'en obras y virtudes le parezca.

El vano confiar y la hermosura, 85 ¿de qué nos sirve si en pequeño instante damos en manos de la sepultura?

Aquel firme esperar sancto y constante, que concede a la fe su cierto asiento y a la querida hermana ir adelante, 90 adonde mora Dios en su aposento nos puede dar lugar dulce y sabroso, libre de tempestad y humano viento.

Aquí, señor, el último reposo no puede perturbarse, ni la vida 95 temer más otro trance doloroso;

aquí con nuevo ser es conducida entre las almas del inmenso coro nuestra Isabela, reina esclarecida;

con tal sinceridad guardó el decoro, 100 do al precepto divino más se aspira, que meresce gozar de tal tesoro.

¡Ay muerte!, ¿contra quién tu amarga ira quesiste ejecutar para templarme con profundo dolor mi triste lira? 105

Si nos cansáis, señor, ya descucharme, anudaré de nuevo el roto hilo, que la ocasión es tal que ha d'esforzarme;

lágrimas pediré al corriente Nilo, un nuevo corazón al alto cielo, 110
y a las más tristes musas triste estilo.

Diré que al duro mal, al grave duelo que a España en brazos de la muerte tiene, no quiso Dios dejarle sin consuelo:

dejóle al gran Filipo, que sostiene, 115
cual firme basa al alto firmamento, el bien o desventura que le viene.

De aquesto, vos lleváis el vencimiento, pues deja en vuestros hombros él la carga del cielo y de la tierra, y pensamiento. 120

La vida que en la vuestra así se encarga muy bien puede vivir leda y segura, pues de tanto cuidado se descarga; gozando, como goza, tal ventura el gran señor del ancho suelo hispano, 125 su mal es menos y nuestra desventura.

Si el ánimo real, si el soberano tesoro le robó en un solo día la muerte airada con esquivia mano, regalos son qu'el summo Dios envía 130 a aquél que ya le tiene aparejado sublime asiento en l'alta jerarquía.

Quien goza quietud siempre en su estado,
y el efecto le acude a la esperanza y a lo que quiere nada le es trocado, 135

argúyese que poca confianza se puede tener d'él que goce y vea con claros ojos bienaventuranza.

Cuando más favorable el mundo sea, cuando nos ría el bien todo delante 140
y venga al corazón lo que desea, tiénese de esperar que en un instante dará con ello la Fortuna en tierra, que no fue ni será jamás constante.

Y aquel que no ha gustado de la guerra, 145
a do se aflige el cuerpo y la memoria, paresce Dios del cielo le destierra, porque no se coronan en la gloria si no es los capitanes valerosos que llevan de sí mesmos la victoria. 150

Los amargos sospiros dolorosos, las lágrimas sin cuento que ha vertido quien nos puede su vista hacer dichosos, el perder a su hijo tan querido, aquel mirarse y verse cuál se halla 155
de todo su placer desposeído,

¿qué se puede decir sino batalla adonde l'hemos visto siempre armado con la paciencia, qu'es muy fina malla?

Del alto cielo ha sido consolado 160 con concederle acá vuestra persona, que mira por su honra y por su estado.

De aquí saldrá a gozar de una corona más rica, más preciosa y muy más clara que la que ciñe al hijo de Latona. 165

Con él vuestra virtud, al mundo rara, se tiene de estender de gente en gente, sin poderlo estorbar Fortuna avara;
resonará el valor tan excelente que os ciñe, cubre, ampara y os rodea, 170 de donde sale el sol hasta occidente,

y allá en el alto alcázar do pasea en mil contentos nuestra reina amada, si puede desear, sólo desea que sea por mil siglos levantada 175 vuestra grandeza, pues que se engrandece el valor de su prenda deseada, que en vuestro poderío se paresce del católico rey la summa alteza, que desde un polo al otro resplandesce. 180

De hoy más, deje del llanto la fiereza el afligida España, levantando con verde lauro ornada la cabeza, que, mientras fuere el cielo mejorando del soberano rey la larga vida, 185

no es bien que se consuma lamentando;
y, en tanto que arribare a la subida de la inmortalidad vuestra alma pura, no se entregue al dolor tan de corrida;
y más, qu'el grave rostro de hermosura, 190 por cuya ausencia vive sin consuelo, goza de Dios en la celeste altura.
¡Oh trueco glorioso, oh sancto celo, pues con gozar la tierra has merecido tender tus pasos por el alto cielo! 195 Con esto cese el canto dolorido, magnánimo señor, que, por mal diestro, queda tan temeroso y tan corrido cuanto yo quedo, gran señor, por vuestro.

Soneto de Miguel de Cervantes, gentilhombre español, en loor del autor

¡Oh cuán claras señales habéis dado, alto Bartholomeo de Ruffino, que de Parnaso y Ménalo el camino habéis dichosamente paseado!

Del siempre verde lauro coronado 5 seréis, si yo no soy mal adivino, si ya vuestra fortuna y cruel destino os saca de tan triste y bajo estado, pues, libre de cadenas vuestra mano, reposando el ingenio, al alta cumbre 10 os podéis levantar seguramente, oscureciendo al gran Livio romano, dando de vuestras obras tanta lumbrere que bien merezca el lauro vuestra frente.

Del mismo, en alabanza de la presente obra

Si, así como de nuestro mal se canta en esta verdadera, clara historia, se oyera de cristianos la victoria, ¡cuál fuera el fruto d'esta rica planta!

Ansí cual es, al cielo se levanta 5
y es digna de inmortal, larga memoria, pues, libre de algún vicio y baja escoria,
al alto ingenio admira, al bajo espanta.

Verdad, orden, estilo claro y llano cual a perfecto historiador conviene, 10 en esta breve summa está cifrado.

¡Felice ingenio, venturosa mano, que, entre pesados yerros apretado, tal arte y tal virtud en sí contiene!

De Miguel de Cervantes, captivo, a M. Vázquez, mi señor

Si el bajo son de la zampoña mía, señor, a vuestro oído no ha llegado en tiempo que sonar mejor debía, no ha sido por la falta de cuidado sino por sobra del que me ha traído 5 por estraños caminos desviado.

También, por no adquirirme de atrevido el nombre odioso, la cansada mano ha encubierto las faltas del sentido.

Mas ya que el valor vuestro sobrehumano, 10 de quien tiene noticia todo el suelo, la graciosa altivez, el trato llano aniquilan el miedo y el recelo que ha tenido hasta aquí mi humilde pluma de no quereros descubrir su vuelo, 15 de vuestra alta bondad y virtud summa diré lo menos, que lo más no siento quién de cerrarlo en verso se presuma.

Aquél que os mira en el subido asiento do el humano favor puede encumbrarse, 20
y que no cesa el favorable viento, y él se ve entre las ondas anegarse del mar de la privanza, do procura, o por fas o por nefas, levantarse, ¿quién duda que no dice: «La ventura 25 ha dado en levantar este mancebo hasta ponerle en la más alta altura:

ayer le vimos inesperto y nuevo en las cosas que agora mide y trata tan bien que tengo envidia y las apruebo»? 30

D'esta manera se congoja y mata el envidioso, que la gloria ajena le destruye, marchita y desbarata.

Pero aquél que con mente más serena contempla vuestro trato y vida honrosa 35
y del alma dentro, de virtudes llena, no la inconstante rueda presurosa de la falsa fortuna, suerte o hado, signo, ventura, estrella ni otra cosa dice qu'es causa que en el buen estado 40 que agora poseéis os haya puesto, con esperanza de más alto grado, mas solo el modo del vivir honesto, la virtud escogida que se muestra en vuestras obras y apacible gesto, 45 ésta dice, señor, que os da su diestra y os tiene asido con sus fuertes lazos y a más y a más subir siempre os adiestra.
¡Oh sanctos, oh agradables dulces brazos de la sancta virtud, alma y divina, 50
y sancto quien recibe sus abrazos!
Quien con tal guía, como vos, camina, ¿de qué se admira el ciego vulgo bajo si a la silla más alta se avecina?
Y, puesto que no hay cosa sin trabajo, 55 quien va sin la virtud va por rodeo, y el que la lleva va por el atajo.
Si no me engaña la experiencia, creo que se ve mucha gente fatigada de un solo pensamiento y un deseo: 60 pretenden más de dos llave dorada, muchos un mesmo cargo, y quien aspira
a la fidelidad de una embajada.
Cada cual por sí mesmo al blanco tira donde asestan otros mil, y sólo es uno 65 cuya saeta dio do fue la mira;
y éste quizá, qu'a nadie fue importuno ni a la soberbia puerta del privado se halló, después de vísperas, ayuno, ni dio ni tuvo a quien pedir prestado: 70 sólo con la virtud se entretenía y en Dios y en ella estaba confiado.

Vos sois, señor, por quien decir podría (y lo digo y diré sin estar mudo) que sola la virtud fue vuestra guía, 75 y que ella sola fue bastante y pudo levantaros al bien do estáis agora, privado humilde, de ambición desnudo.

¡Dichosa y felicísima la hora, donde tuvo el real conocimiento 80 noticia del valor que anida y mora en vuestro reposado entendimiento, cuya fidelidad, cuyo secreto es de vuestras virtudes el cimiento!

Por la senda y camino más perfecto 85 van vuestros pies, que es la que el medio tiene y la que alaba el seso más discreto; quien por ella camina, vemos viene a aquel dulce, süave paradero que la felicidad en sí contiene. 90

Yo, que el camino más bajo y grosero he caminado en fría noche oscura, he dado en manos del atolladero,
y en la esquivia prisión, amarga y dura, adonde agora quedo, estoy llorando 95 mi corta, infelicísima ventura, con quejas tierra y cielo importunando, con suspiros el aire escureciendo,
con lágrimas el mar acrescentando.

Vida es ésta, señor, do estoy muriendo, 100 entre bárbara gente descreída la mal lograda juventud perdiendo.

No fue la causa aquí de mi venida andar vagando por el mundo acaso con la vergüenza y la razón perdida: 105 diez años ha que tiendo y mudo el paso en servicio del gran Filipo nuestro, ya con descanso, ya cansado y laso;
y, en el dichoso día que siniestro tanto fue el hado a la enemiga armada 110 cuanto a la nuestra favorable y diestro, de temor y de esfuerzo acompañada, presente estuvo mi persona al hecho, más d'esperanza que de hierro armada.

Vi el formado escuadrón roto y deshecho, 115
y de bárbara gente y de cristiana rojo en mil partes de Neptuno el lecho; la muerte airada con su furia insana aquí y allí con priesa discurriendo, mostrándose a quién tarda, a quién temprana; 120 el son confuso, el espantable estruendo, los gestos de los tristes miserables que entre el fuego y agua iban muriendo; los profundos sospiros lamentables que los heridos pechos despedían, 125 maldiciendo sus hados detestables.

Helóseles la sangre que tenían cuando, en el son de la trompeta nuestra, su daño y nuestra gloria conocían;
con alta voz, de vencedora muestra, 130 rompiendo el aire claro, el son mostraba ser vencedora la cristiana diestra.

A esta dulce sazón yo, triste, estaba con la una mano de la espada asida, y sangre de la otra derramaba; 135 el pecho mío de profunda herida sentía llagado, y la siniestra mano estaba por mil partes ya rompida.

Pero el contento fue tan soberano qu'a mi alma llegó, viendo vencido 140 el crudo pueblo infiel por el cristiano, que no echaba de ver si estaba herido, aunque era tan mortal mi sentimiento, que a veces me quitó todo el sentido.

Y en mi propia cabeza el escarmiento 145 no me pudo estorbar que el segundo año no me pusiese a discreción del viento, y al bárbaro, medroso pueblo extraño vi recogido, triste, amedrentado y con causa temiendo de su daño, 150

y al reino tan antiguo y celebrado, a do la hermosa Dido fue rendida al querer del troyano desterrado, también, vertiendo sangre aún la herida mayor, con otras dos, quise hallarme 155 por ver ir la morisma de vencida.

¡Dios sabe si quisiera allí quedarme con los que allí quedaron esforzados y perderme con ellos, o ganarme!

Pero mis cortos, implacables hados, 160 en tan honrosa empresa no quisieron que acabase la vida y los cuidados, y al fin por los cabellos me trujeron a ser vencido por la valentía de aquellos que después no la tuvieron. 165

En la galera Sol, que escurecía mi ventura su luz, a pesar mío, fue la pérdida de otros y la mía.

Valor mostramos al principio y brío, pero después, con la experiencia amarga, 170 conoscimos ser todo desvarío.

Sentí de ajeno yugo la gran carga, y en las manos sacrílegas malditas dos años ha que mi dolor se alarga.

Bien sé que mis maldades infinitas 175
y la poca atrición qu'en mí se encierra me tiene entre estos falsos ismaelitas.

Cuando llegué vencido y vi la tierra tan nombrada en el mundo, qu'en su seno tantos piratas cubre, acoge y cierra, 180

no pude al llanto detener el freno,
que a mi despecho, sin saber lo que era,
me vi el marchito rostro de agua lleno.

Ofrecióse a mis ojos la ribera
y el monte donde el grande Carlo tuvo 185
levantada en el aire su bandera,

y el mar que tanto esfuerzo no sostuvo,
pues, movido de envidia de su gloria,
airado entonces más que nunca estuvo.

Estas cosas, volviendo en mi memoria, 190
las lágrimas trujeron a los ojos, movidas de desgracia tan notoria.
Pero si el alto cielo en darme enojos
no está con mi ventura conjurado,
y aquí no lleva muerte mis despojos, 195
cuando me vea en más alegre estado, si vuestra intercesión, señor, me ayuda
a verme ante Filipo arrodillado, mi lengua balbuciente y cuasi muda pienso mover en la real presencia, 200
de adulación y de mentir desnuda,
diciendo: «Alto señor, cuya potencia sujetas trae mil bárbaras naciones
al desabrido yugo de obediencia,
a quien los negros indios con sus dones 205
reconocen honesto vasallaje,
trayendo el oro acá de sus rincones:
despierte en tu real pecho el gran coraje, la gran soberbia con que una bicoca
aspira de contino a hacerte ultraje. 210
La gente es mucha, mas su fuerza es poca,
desnuda, mal armada, que no tiene
en su defensa fuerte, muro o roca;
cada uno mira si tu armada viene para dar a sus pies el cargo y cura 215
de conservar la vida que sostiene.
Del amarga prisión triste y oscura, adonde mueren veinte mil cristianos,
tienes la llave de su cerradura.
Todos, cual yo, de allá, puestas las manos, 220
las rodillas por tierra, sollozando, cercados de tormentos inhumanos, valeroso señor, te están rogando
vuelvas los ojos de misericordia
a los suyos, que están siempre llorando; 225
y, pues te deja agora la discordia, que hasta aquí te ha oprimido y fatigado,
y gozas de pacífica concordia,

haz, ¡oh buen rey!, que sea por ti acabado
lo que con tanta audacia y valor tanto 230
fue por tu amado padre comenzado.

Sólo el pensar que vas pondrá un espanto en la enemiga gente, que adevino
ya desde aquí su pérdida y quebranto».

¿Quién dubda que el real pecho benigno 235 no se muestre, escuchando la tristeza en que están estos míseros contino?

Bien paresce que muestro la flaqueza de mi tan torpe ingenio, que pretende hablar tan bajo ante tan alta alteza, 240 pero el justo deseo la defiende.

Mas a todo silencio poner quiero, que temo que mi pluma ya os ofende,
y al trabajo me llaman donde muero.

Al señor Antonio Veneziani

Si el lazo, el fuego, el dardo, el puro yelo que os tiene, abrasa, hiere y pone fría vuestra alma, trae su origen desde el cielo, ya que os aprieta, enciende, mata, enfría, ¿qué nudo, llama, llaga, nieve o celo 5 ciñe, arde, traspasa o yela hoy día, con tan alta ocasión como aquí nuestro, un tierno pecho, Antonio, como el vuestro?

El cielo, que el ingenio vuestro mira, en cosas que son d'él quiso emplearos 10
y, según lo que hacéis, vemos que aspira por Celia al cielo empíreo levantaros; ponéis en tal objeto vuestra mira, que dais materia al mundo de envidiaros: ¡dichoso el desdichado a quien se tiene 15 envidia de las ansias que sostiene!

En los conceptos que la pluma de la alma en el papel ha trasladado nos dais no sólo indicio pero muestra de que estáis en el cielo sepultado, 20 y allí os tiene de amor la fuerte diestra vivo en la muerte, a vida reservado, que no puede morir quien no es del suelo, teniendo el alma en Celia, que es un cielo.

Sólo me admira el ver que aquel divino 25 cielo de Celia encierre un vivo infierno y que la fuerza de su fuerza y sino os tenga en pena y llanto sempiterno;
al cielo encamináis vuestro camino, mas, según vuestra suerte, yo dicierno 30 que al cielo sube el alma y se apresura, y en el suelo se queda la ventura.

Si con benino y favorable aspecto

a alguno mira el cielo acá en la tierra, obra ascondidamente un bien perfeto 35 en el que cualquier mal de sí destierra; mas si los ojos pone en el objeto airados, le consume en llanto y guerra ansí como a vos hace vuestro cielo:
ya os da guerra, ya paz, ya fuego y yelo. 40

No se ve el cielo en claridad serena de tantas luces claro y alumbrado cuantas con rica habéis y fértil vena el vuestro de virtudes adornado; ni hay tantos granos de menuda arena 45 en el desierto líbico apartado cuantos loores creo que merece el cielo que os abaja y engrandece.

En Scitia ardéis, sentís en Libia frío, contraria operación y nunca vista; 50 flaqueza al bien mostráis, al daño brío;
más que un lince miráis, sin tener vista;
mostráis con discreción un desvarío, que el alma prende, a la razón conquista, y esta contrariedad nace de aquella 55 que es vuestro cielo, vuestro sol y estrella.

Si fuera un caos, una materia unida sin forma vuestro cielo, no espantara de que del alma vuestra entristecida las continuas querellas no escuchara; 60 pero, estando ya en partes esparcida que un fondo forman de virtud tan rara, es maravilla tenga los oídos sordos a vuestros tristes alaridos.

Si es lícito rogar por el amigo 65 que en estado se halla peligroso, yo, como vuestro, desde aquí me obligo de no mostrarme en esto perezoso; mas si me he de oponer a lo que digo y conducirlo a término dichoso, 70 no me deis la ventura, que es muy poca, mas las palabras sí de vuestra boca.

Diré: «Celia gentil, en cuya mano está la muerte y vida y pena y gloria de un mísero captivo que, temprano 75 ni aun tarde, no saldrás de su memoria:
vuelve el hermoso rostro blando, humano,
a mirar de quien llevas la victoria;
verás el cuerpo en dura cárcel triste del alma que primero tú rendiste. 80

Y, pues un pecho en la virtud constante se mueve en casos de honra y muestra airado, muévale al tuyo el ver que de delante te han un firme amador arrebatado;
y si quiere pasar más adelante 85
y hacer un hecho heroico y estremado, rescata allá su alma con querella, que el cuerpo, que está acá, se irá tras ella.

El cuerpo acá y el alma allá captiva tiene el mísero amante que padece 90 por ti, Celia hermosa, en quien se aviva la luz que al cielo alumbra y esclarece; mira que el ser ingrata, cruda, esquiva mal con tanta beldad se compadece:
muéstrate agradecida y amorosa 95
al que te tiene por su cielo y diosa».

Soneto de Miguel de Cervantes al autor

Ya que del ciego dios habéis cantado el bien y el mal, la dulce fuerza y arte, en la primera y la segunda parte, donde está de amor el todo señalado, ahora, con aliento descansado 5
y con nueva virtud que en vos reparte el cielo, nos cantáis del duro Marte las fieras armas y el valor sobrado.

Nuevos ricos mineros se descubren de vuestro ingenio en la famosa mina 10 que al más alto deseo satisfacen;
y, con dar menos de lo más que encubren, a este menos lo que es más se inclina del bien que Apolo y que Minerva hacen.

Soneto de Miguel de Cervantes

¡Oh venturosa, levantada pluma que en la empresa más alta te ocupaste que el mundo pudo, y al fin mostraste al recibo y al gasto igual la suma!, calle de hoy más el escriptor de Numa, 5 que nadie llegará donde llegaste, pues en tan raros versos celebraste tan raro capitán, virtud tan summa.
¡Dichoso el celebrado, y quien celebra, y no menos dichoso todo el suelo, 10 que tanto bien goza en esta historia, en quien envidia o tiempo no harán quiebra;
antes hará con justo celo el cielo eterna más que el tiempo su memoria!

Redondillas de Miguel de Cervantes al hábito de Fray Pedro de Padilla

Hoy el famoso Padilla con las muestras de su celo causa contento en el cielo
y en la tierra maravilla, porque, llevado del cebo   5
de amor, temor y consejo, se despoja el hombre viejo para vestirse de nuevo.

Cual prudente sierpe ha sido, pues, con nuevo corazón,   10 en la piedra de Simón se deja el viejo vestido, y esta mudanza que hace lleva tan cierto compás que en ella asiste lo más   15 de cuanto a Dios satisface.

Con las obras y la fe hoy para el cielo se embarca en mejor jarciada barca que la que libró a Noé;   20
    y, para hacer tal pasaje, ha muchos años que ha hecho,
con sano y cristiano pecho, cristiano matalotaje,
    y no teme el mal tempero   25 ni anegarse en el profundo porque en el mar d'este mundo es plástico marinero,
    y así, mirando el aguja divina, cual se requiere,   30 si el demonio a orza diere, él dará al instante a puja.

Y llevando este concierto con las ondas d'este mar, a la fin vendrá a parar 35
a seguro y dulce puerto, donde, sin áncoras ya,
estará la nave en calma con la eternidad del alma, que nunca se acabará. 40

En una verdad me fundo, y mi ingenio aquí no yerra, qu'en siendo sal de la tierra, habéis de ser luz del mundo:
luz de gracia rodeada 45 que alumbre nuestro horizonte, y sobre el Carmelo monte fuerte ciudad levantada.

Para alcanzar el trofeo d'estas santas profecías, 50 tendréis el carro de Elías con el manto de Eliseo, y, ardiendo en amor divino, donde nuestro bien se fragua, apartando el manto al agua, 55 por el fuego haréis camino;
porqu'el voto de humildad promete segura alteza
y castidad y pobreza, bienes de divinidad, 60
y así los cielos serenos verán, cuando acabarás, un cortesano allá más
y en la tierra un sabio menos.

Miguel de Cervantes a Fray Pedro de Padilla

Cual vemos que renueva el águila real la vieja y parda pluma y con otra nueva la detenida y tarda pereza arroja y con subido vuelo 5 rompe las nubes y se llega al cielo:
tal, famoso Padilla,
has sacudido tus humanas plumas, porque con maravilla
intentos y presumas 10
llegar con nuevo vuelo al alto asiento donde aspiran las alas de tu intento.
Del sol el rayo ardiente alza del duro rostro de la tierra, con virtud excelente, 15
la humedad que en sí encierra, la cual después, en lluvia convertida, alegra al suelo y da a los hombres vida:
y d'esta misma suerte el sol divino te regala y toca 20 y en tal humor convierte que, con tu pluma, apoca la sequedad de la ignorancia nuestra y a sciencia santa y santa vida adiestra.
¡Qué sancto trueco y cambio: 25 por las humanas, las divinas musas!
¡Qué interés y recambio!
¡Qué nuevos modos usas de adquirir en el suelo una memoria que dé fama a tu nombre, al alma gloria!; 30 que, pues es tu Parnaso el monte del Calvario y son tus fuentes de Aganipe y Pegaso

las sagradas corrientes de las benditas llagas del Cordero, 35 eterno nombre de tu nombre espero.

Soneto al mismo santo, de Miguel de Cervantes

Muestra su ingenio el que es pintor curioso cuando pinta al desnudo una figura, donde la traza, el arte y compostura ningún velo la cubra artificioso:

vos, seráfico padre, y vos, hermoso 5 retrato de Jesús, sois la pintura al desnudo pintada, en tal hechura que Dios nos muestra ser pintor famoso.

Las sombras de ser mártir descubristes, los lejos, en que estáis allá en el cielo 10
en soberana silla colocado;

las colores, las llagas que tuvistes tanto las suben que se admira el suelo, y el pintor en la obra se ha pagado.

De Miguel de Cervantes en loor del autor y de su obra

El casto ardor de una amorosa llama, un sabio pecho a su rigor sujeto, un desdén sacudido y un afecto blando, que al alma en dulce fuego inflama, el bien y el mal a que convida y llama 5
de amor la fuerza y poderoso efecto, eternamente, en son claro y perfecto, con estas rimas cantará la fama, llevando el nombre único y famoso vuestro, felice López Maldonado, 10 del moreno etíope al cita blanco, y hará que en balde de laurel honroso espere alguno verse coronado si no os imita y tiene por su blanco.

Del mismo al mismo

Bien donado sale al mundo este libro, do se encierra la paz de amor y la guerra, y aquel fruto sin segundo de la castellana tierra; 5 que, aunque le da Maldonado, va tan rico y bien donado de sciencia y de discreción, que me afirmo en la razón de decir que es bien donado. 10

El sentimiento amoroso
del pecho más encendido en fuego de amor, y herido de su dardo ponzoñoso
y en la red suya cogido, 15 el temor y la esperanza con que el bien y el mal se alcanza en las empresas de amor:
aquí muestra su valor,
su buena o su mala andanza. 20

Sin flores, sin praderías y sin los faunos silvanos, sin ninfas, sin dioses vanos, sin yerbas, sin aguas frías y sin apacibles llanos, 25 en agradables conceptos profundos, altos, discretos, con verdad llana y distinta, aquí el sabio autor nos pinta del ciego dios los efetos. 30

Con declararnos la mengua y el bien de su ardiente llama, ha dado a su nombre fama

y enriquecido su lengua, que ya la mejor se llama, 35
y hanos mostrado que es solo favorecido de Apolo
con dones tan infinitos, que su fama en sus escritos irá d' éste al otro polo. 40

De Miguel de Cervantes, soneto

Cual vemos del rosado y rico oriente la blanca y dura piedra señalarse y en todo, aunque pequeña, aventajarse a la mayor del Cáucaso eminente, tal este (humilde al parecer) presente 5 puede y debe mirarse y admirarse, no por la cantidad, mas por mostrarse ser en su calidad tan excelente.

El que navega por el golfo insano del mar de pretensiones verá al punto 10 del cortesano laberinto el hilo.

¡Felice ingenio y venturosa mano qu'el deleite y provecho puso junto en juego alegre, en dulce y claro estilo!

De Miguel de Cervantes, soneto

De la Virgen sin par, santa y bendita (digo, de sus loores), justamente haces el rico, sin igual presente a la sin par cristiana Margarita.

Dándole, quedas rico, y queda escrita 5 tu fama en hojas de metal luciente, que, a despecho y pesar del diligente tiempo, será en sus fines infinita:

¡felice en el sujeto que escogiste, dichoso en la ocasión que te dio el cielo 10
de dar a Virgen el virgíneo canto;

venturoso también porque heciste que den las musas del hispano suelo admiración al griego, al tusco espanto.

Al doctor Francisco Díaz, de Miguel de Cervantes, soneto

Tú, que con nuevo y sin igual decoro tantos remedios para un mal ordenas, bien puedes esperar d'estas arenas, del sacro Tajo, las que son de oro, y el lauro que se debe al que un tesoro 5 halla de ciencia, con tan ricas venas de raro advertimiento y salud llenas, contento y risa del enfermo lloro;
que por tu industria una deshecha piedra mil mármoles, mil bronces a tu fama 10 dará sin invidiosas competencias;
daráte el cielo palma, el suelo yedra, pues que el uno y el otro ya te llama espíritu de Apolo en ambas ciencias.

Canción nacida de las varias nuevas que han venido de la católica armada que fue sobre Inglaterra, de Miguel de Cervantes Saavedra

Bate, Fama veloz, las prestas alas, rompe del norte las cerradas nieblas, aligera los pies, llega y destruye el confuso rumor de nuevas malas y con tu luz desparce las tinieblas 5 del crédito español, que de ti huye;
esta preñez concluye
en un parto dichoso que nos muestre un fin alegre de la ilustre empresa, cuyo fin nos suspende, alivia y pesa, 10 ya en contienda naval, ya en la terrestre, hasta que, con tus ojos y tus lenguas,
diciendo ajenas menguas,
de los hijos de España el valor cantes, con que admires al cielo, al suelo espantes. 15

Di con firme verdad, firme y sigura:
¿hizo el que pudo la victoria vuestra?
¿Sentenciado ha su causa el Padre eterno?
¿Bañada queda en roja sangre y pura la católica espada y fuerte diestra? 20
En fin, de aquel que asiste a su gobierno, ¿poblado ha el hondo infierno de nuevas almas, y de cuerpos lleno el mar, que a los despojos y banderas de las naciones pertinaces, fieras, 25 apenas dio lugar su inmenso seno, del pirata mayor del occidente ya inclinada la frente, y puesto al cuello altivo y indomable del vencimiento el yugo miserable? 30

Di (que al fin lo dirás): «allí volaron por el aire los cuerpos, impelidos de las fogosas máquinas de guerra;
aquí las aguas su color cambiaron, y la sangre de pechos atrevidos 35 humedecieron la contraria tierra»;
cómo huye, o si afierra, este y aquel navío; en cuántos modos se aparecen las sombras de la muerte; cómo juega Fortuna con la suerte, 40
no mostrándose igual ni firme a todos, hasta que, por mil varios embarazos,
los españoles brazos,
rompiendo por el aire, tierra y fuego, declararon por suyo el mortal juego. 45

Píntanos ya un diluvio con razones, causado de un conflicto temeroso y que le pinta la contraria parte:
mil cuerpos sobreaguados y en montones confusos, otros naden cobdiciosos 50 d'entretener la vida en cualquier parte;
al descuido, y con arte,
pinta rotas entenas, jarcias rotas, quillas sentidas, tablas desclavadas, y, de impaciencia y de rigor armadas, 55 las dos (y no en valor) iguales flotas.
Exprime los gemidos excesivos de aquellos semivivos que, ardiendo, al agua fría se arrojaban y, en la muerte del fuego, muerte hallaban. 60

Después d'esto dirás: «en espaciosas, concertadas hileras va marchando nuestro cristiano ejército invencible, las cruzadas banderas victoriosas al aire con donaire tremolando, 65 haciendo vista fiera y apacible.

Forma aquel son horrible que el cóncavo metal despide y forma, y aquel del atambor que engendra y cría en el cobarde pecho valentía 70 y el temor natural trueca y reforma»;
haz los reflejos y vislumbres bellas que, cual claras estrellas, en las lucidas armas el sol hace cuando mirar este escuadrón le place. 75

Esto dicho, revuelve presurosa y en los oídos de los dos prudentes famosos generales luego envía una voz que les diga la gloriosa estirpe de sus claros ascendientes, 80 cifra de más que humana valentía:
al que las naves guía
muéstrale sobre un muro un caballero, más que de yerro, de valor armado, y entre la turba mora un niño atado, 85 cual entre hambrientos lobos un cordero, y al segundo Abrahán que dé la daga con que el bárbaro haga el sacrificio horrendo que en el suelo le dio fama y inmortal gloria en el cielo; 90

dirás al otro, que en sus venas tiene la sangre de Austria, que con esto sólo le dirás cien mil hechos señalados que, en cuanto el ancho mar cerca y contiene, y en lo que mira el uno y otro polo, 95 fueron por sus mayores acabados.
Éstos así informados,

entra en el escuadrón de nuestra gente
y allá verás, mirando a todas partes, mil Cides, mil Roldanes y mil Martes, 100 valiente aquél, aquéste más valiente;
a estos solos les dirás que miren para que luego aspiren
a concluir la más dudosa hazaña: «Hijos, mirad que es vuestra madre España!, 105 la cual, desde que al viento y mar os distes, cual viuda llora vuestra ausencia larga, contrita, humilde, tierna, mansa y justa, los ojos bajos, húmidos y tristes, cubierto el cuerpo de una tosca sarga, 110 que de sus galas poco o nada gusta hasta ver en la injusta cerviz inglesa puesto el suave yugo y sus puertas abrir, de horror cargadas, con las romanas llaves dedicadas 115

a abrir el cielo como al cielo plugo.
Justa es la empresa, y vuestro brazo fuerte;
aun de la misma muerte
quitara la vitoria de la mano, cuanto más del vicioso luterano». 120

Muéstrales, si es posible, un verdadero retrato del católico monarca, y verán de David la voz y el pecho, las rodillas por el suelo y un cordero mirando, a quien encierra y guarda un arca, 125 mejor que aquélla quisiera haber hecho, puestos de trecho a trecho doce descalzos ángeles mortales en quien tanta virtud el cielo encierra que con humilde voz desde la tierra 130 pasan del mismo cielo los umbrales.
Con tal cordero, tal monarca y luego

de tales doce el ruego, diles que está seguro el triunfo y gloria, y que ya España canta la victoria. 135

Canción, si vas despacio do te envío, en todo el cielo fío que has de cambiar por nuevas de alegría el nombre de canción y profecía.

FIN

Del mismo, canción segunda, de la pérdida de la armada que fue a Inglaterra

Madre de los valientes de la guerra, archivo de católicos soldados, crisol donde el amor de Dios se apura, tierra donde se ve que el cielo entierra los que han de ser al cielo trasladados 5 por defensores de la fee más pura:
no te parezca acaso desventura, ¡Oh España, madre nuestra!, ver que tus hijos vuelven a tu seno dejando el mar de sus desgracias lleno, 10 pues no los vuelve la contraria diestra:
vuélvelos la borrasca incontrastable del viento, mar, y el cielo que consiente que se alce un poco la enemiga frente, odiosa al cielo, al suelo detestable, 15 porque entonces es cierta la caída cuando es soberbia y vana la subida.

Abre tus brazos y recoge en ellos los que vuelven confusos, no rendidos, pues no se escusa lo que el cielo ordena, 20 ni puede en ningún tiempo los cabellos tener alguno con la mano asidos de la calva ocasión en suerte buena, ni es de acero o diamante la cadena con que se enlaza y tiene 25 el buen suceso en los marciales casos, y los más fuertes bríos quedan lasos del que a los brazos con el viento viene, y esta vuelta que vees desordenada sin duda entiendo que ha de ser la vuelta 30

del toro para dar mortal revuelta a la gente con cuerpos desalmada, que el cielo, aunque se tarda, no es amigo de dejar las maldades sin castigo.

A tu león pisado le han la cola; 35 las vedijas sacude, y arrevuelve a la justa venganza de su ofensa, no sólo suya, que si fuera sola, quizá la perdonara: sólo vuelve por la de Dios, y en restaurarla piensa. 40 Único es su valor, su fuerza imensa, claro su entendimiento, indignado con causa, y tal que a un pecho cristiano, aunque de mármol fuese hecho, moviera a justo y vengativo intento. 45
Y más, que el galo, el tusco, el moro mira, con vista aguda y ánimos perplejos, cuáles son los comienzos y los dejos,
y dónde pone este león la mira, porque entonces su suerte está lozana 50 en cuanto tiene este león cuartana.

Ea pues, ¡oh Felipe, señor nuestro, Segundo en nombre y hombre sin segundo, coluna de la fee segura y fuerte!, vuelve en suceso más felice y diestro 55 este designio que fabrica el mundo, que piensa manso y sin coraje verte, como si no bastasen a moverte
tus puertos salteados en las remotas Indias apartadas, 60
y en tus casas tus naves abrasadas, y en la ajena los templos profanados;
tus mares llenos de piratas fieros, por ellos tus armadas encogidas, y en ellos mil haciendas y mil vidas 65

sujetos a mil bárbaros aceros, cosas que cada cual por sí es posible
a hacer que se intente aun lo imposible.

Pide, toma, señor, que todo aquello que tus vasallos tienen se te ofrece 70 con liberal y valerosa mano a trueque que al inglés pérfido cuello pongas el justo yugo que merece su injusto pecho y proceder insano;
no sólo el oro que se adora en vano, 75 sino sus hijos caros
te darán, cual el suyo dio don Diego, que, en propia sangre y en ajeno fuego, acrisoló los hechos siempre raros de la casa de Córdoba, que ha dado 80 catorce mayorazgos a las lanzas moriscas, y, con firmes confianzas, sus obras y su nombre han dilatado por la espaciosa redondez del suelo, que el que así muere vive y gana el cielo. 85

En tanto que los brazos levantares, gran capitán de Dios, espera, espera ver vencedor tu pueblo, y no vencido;
pero si de cansado los bajas, los suyos alzará la gente fiera, 90 que para el mal el malo es atrevido;
y en tu perseverancia está incluído un felice suceso
de la empresa justísima que tomas, y no con ella un solo reino domas, 95 que a muchos pones de temor el peso; aseguras los tuyos, fortaleces lo que la buena fama de ti canta, que eres un justo horror que al malo espanta y mano que a los justos favoreces; 100

alza los brazos, pues, Moisés cristiano, y pondrálos por tierra el luterano.

Vosotros que, llevados de un deseo justo y honroso, al mar os entregastes y el ocio blando y el regalo huistes, 105 puesto que os imagino ahora y veo entre el viento y el mar que contrastastes y los mortales daños que sufristes, d'entre Scila y Caribdis no tan tristes salís que no se vea 110 en vuestro bravo, varonil semblante que romperéis por montes de diamante hasta igualar la desigual pelea; que los bríos y brazos españoles quilatan su valor, su fuerza y brío 115 con la hambre, sed, calor y frío cual se quilata el oro en los crisoles, y, apurados así, son cual la planta que al cielo con la carga se levanta.

El diestro esgrimidor, cuando le toca 120 quien sabe menos que él, se enciende en ira y con facilidad se desagravia;
y en la orilla del mar la fuerte roca, mientras su furia a deshacerla aspira, muy poco o nada su rigor la agravia; 125 y es común opinión de gente sabia que cuanto más ofende el malo al bueno, tanto más aumenta el temor del alcance de la cuenta, que siempre es malo del que mal espendede. 130 Triunfe el pirata, pues, agora y haga júbilo y fiestas, porque el mar y el viento han respondido al justo de su intento sin acordarse si el que debe paga, que, al sumar de la cuenta, en el remate 135 se hará un alcance que le alcance y mate.

¡Oh España, oh rey, oh milites famosos!, ofrece, manda, obedeced, que el cielo en fin ha de ayudar al justo celo, puesto que los principios sean dudosos, 140
y en la justa ocasión y en la porfía encierra la vitoria su alegría.

Romance

Yace donde el sol se pone, entre dos tajadas peñas,

una entrada de un abismo,
quiero decir, una cueva profunda, lóbrega, oscura, 5
aquí mojada, allí seca,
propio albergue de la noche,
del horror y las tinieblas.
Por la boca sale un aire que al alma encendida yela, 10
y un fuego, de cuando en cuando, que el pecho de yelo quema.
Óyese dentro un rüido
como crujir de cadenas
y unos ayes luengos, tristes, 15
envueltos en tristes quejas.
Por las funestas paredes, por los resquicios y quiebras mil víboras se descubren
y ponzoñosas culebras. 20
A la entrada tiene puestos,
en una amarilla piedra,
huesos de muerto encajados
de modo que forman letras, las cuales, vistas del fuego 25 que arroja de sí la cueva, dicen: «Ésta es la morada

de los celos y sospechas».
Y un pastor contaba a Lauso esta maravilla cierta 30
de la cueva, fuego y yelo, aullidos, serpientes y piedra,
el cual, oyendo, le dijo: «Pastor, para que te crea, no has menester juramentos 35 ni hacer la vista experiencia.
Un vivo traslado es éste
de lo que mi pecho encierra,
el cual, como en cueva oscura,
no tiene luz, ni la espera. 40 Seco le tienen desdeñes bañado en lágrimas tiernas; aire, fuego y los suspiros le abrasan continuo y yelan.
Los lamentables aullidos, 45
son mis continuas querellas, víboras mis pensamientos
que en mis entrañas se ceban.
La piedra escrita, amarilla, es mi sin igual firmeza, 50 que mis huesos en la muerte mostrarán que son de piedra.
Los celos son los que habitan
en esta morada estrecha, que engendraron los descuidos 55
de mi querida Silena».
En pronunciando este nombre,
cayó como muerto en tierra,
que de memorias de celos aquestos fines se esperan. 60

Otra versión

Hacia donde el sol se pone, entre dos partidas peñas,
una entrada de un abismo,
quiero decir, una cueva oscura, lóbrega y triste, 5
aquí mojada, allí seca,
propio albergue de la noche,
del terror y de tinieblas.
Por su boca sale un aire que al alma encendida yela, 10
y un fuego, de cuando en cuando, que al pecho de nieve quema.
Óyese dentro un rüido
con crujir de cadenas
y unos ayes luengos, tristes, 15
envueltos en tristes quejas;
y en las funestas paredes,
por los resquicios y quiebras
mil víboras se descubren
y ponzoñosas culebras. 20
A la boca tiene puestos,
en una amarilla piedra,
güesos de muerto encajados
de modo que forman letras, las cuales, vistas al fuego 25 que sale de la caverna,
dicen: «Ésta es la morada
de los celos y sospechas».
Un pastor contaba a Lauso
esta maravilla cierta 30
de la cueva, fuego y yelo,
aullidos, sierpes y piedras,
el cual, viéndole, le dijo: «Pastor, para que te crean, no has menester jurallo 35 ni hacer della experiencia.
El mismo traslado es ése
de lo que mi pecho encierra,

el cual, como en cueva oscura,
ni siente luz, ni la espera. 40 Seco, le tienen desdenes bañando lágrimas tiernas; aire y fuego en los suspiros arrójase, abrasa y yela.
Los lamentables aullidos, 45
son mis continuas endechas,
víboras mis pensamientos
que en mis entrañas se ceban.
La piedra escrita, amarilla,
es mis sin igual firmezas, 50 que los fuegos en mi muerte dirán cómo fui de piedra.
Los celos son los que avisan
en esta morada estrecha, que causaron los descuidos 55
cuidados de Silena».
En pronunciando este mal,
cayó como muerto en tierra,
que de memorias de celos tales sucesos se esperan. 60

*El cielo a la iglesia ofrece
hoy una piedra tan fina
que en la corona divina
del mismo Dios resplandece.*

De Miguel Cervantes, glosa

Tras los dones primitivos que, en el fervor de su celo, ofreció la iglesia al cielo,
a sus edificios vivos dio nuevas piedras el suelo; 5 estos dones agradece
a su esposa y la ennoblece, pues, de parte del esposo,
un Hiacinto, el más precioso,
el cielo a la iglesia ofrece. 10

Porque el hombre de su gracia tantas veces se retira, y el Jacinto, al que le mira, es tan grande su eficacia que le sosiega la ira, 15 su misma piedad lo inclina a darlo por medicina, que, en su jüicio profundo, ve que ha menester el mundo,
hoy una piedra tan fina. 20

Obró tanto esta virtud, viviendo Jacinto en él, que, a los vivos rayos d'él, en una y otra salud
se restituyó por él. 25

Crezca gloriosa la mina que de su luz jacintina tiene el cielo y tierra llenos, pues no mereció estar menos
que en la corona divina. 30

Allá luce ante los ojos del mismo autor de su gloria, y acá en gloriosa memoria de los triunfos y despojos que sacó de la vitoria, 35 pues si otra luz desfallece cuando el sol la suya ofrece, ¿qué tan viva y rutilante será aquésta si delante

del mismo Dios resplandece? 40

De Miguel de Cervantes Saavedra, soneto

No ha menester el que tus hechos canta, ¡oh gran marqués!, el artificio humano, que a la más sutil pluma y docta mano ellos le ofrecen al que al orbe espanta;
y éste que sobre el cielo se levanta, 5 llevado de tu nombre soberano, a par del griego y escritor toscano, sus sienes ciñe con la verde planta;
y fue muy justa prevención del cielo que a un tiempo ejercitases tú la espada 10
y él su prudente y verdadera pluma, porque, rompiendo de la invidia el velo, tu fama, en sus escritos dilatada, ni olvido o tiempo o muerte la consuma.

El capitán Becerra vino a Sevilla a enseñar lo que habían de hacer los soldados, y a esto y a la entrada del duque de Medina en Cádiz hizo Cervantes este soneto

Vimos en julio otra semana santa, atestada de ciertas cofradías que los soldados llaman compañías, de quien el vulgo, y no el inglés, se espanta;
hubo de plumas muchedumbre tanta 5 que en menos de catorce o quince días volaron sus pigmeos y Golías, y cayó su edificio por la planta.

Bramó el Becerro y púsolos en sarta; tronó la tierra, escurecióse el cielo, 10 amenazando una total rüina;
y al cabo, en Cádiz, con medida harta, ido ya el conde, sin ningún recelo, triunfando entró el gran duque de Medina.

Al t mulo del rey que se hizo en Sevilla

« Voto a Dios que me espanta esta grandeza
y que diera un dobl n por describilla!; porque,  a qui n no suspende y maravilla esta m quina insigne, esta braveza?

 Por Jesucristo vivo, cada pieza 5 vale m s que un mill n, y que es mancilla que esto no dure un siglo,  oh gran Sevilla, Roma triunfante en  nimo y riqueza!

 Apostar  que la  nima del muerto, por gozar este sitio, hoy ha dejado 10
el cielo, de que goza eternamente!»

Esto oy  un valent n y dijo: « Es cierto lo que dice voac , se r soldado, y quien dijere lo contrario miente!»

Y luego encontinente 15
cal  el chapeo, requiri  la espada, mir  al soslayo, fuese, y no hubo nada.

Unas décimas que compuso Miguel de Cervantes

Ya que se ha llegado el día, gran rey, de tus alabanzas, de la humilde musa mía escucha, entre las que alcanzas, las llorosas que te envía; 5 que, puesto que ya caminas pisando las perlas finas de las aulas soberanas, tal vez palabras humanas oyen orejas divinas. 10

¿Por dónde comenzaré
a exagerar tus blasones, después que te llamaré padre de las religiones
y defensor de la fe? 15

Sin duda habré de llamarte nuevo y pacífico Marte, pues en sosiego venciste lo más en cuanto quisiste, y es mucha la menor parte. 20

Tembló el cita en el oriente, el bárbaro al mediodía,
el luterano al poniente,
y en la tierra siempre fría temió la indómita gente; 25

Arauco vio tus banderas vencedoras, y las fieras ondas del sangriento Egeo te dieron como en trofeo las otomanas banderas. 30

Las virtudes en su punto en tu pecho se hallaron, y el poder y el saber junto,
y jamás no te dejaron,
aun casi el cuerpo difunto; 35
y lo que más tu valor
sube al extremo mayor
es que fuiste, cual se advierte, bueno en vida, bueno en muerte
y bueno en tu sucesor. 40

Esta memoria nos dejás, que es la que el bueno cudicia, que, amigables y sin quejas, misericordia y justicia corrieron en ti parejas, 45 como la llana humildad
al par de la majestad, tan sin discrepar un tilde que fuiste el rey más humilde y de mayor gravedad. 50

Quedar las arcas vacías, donde se encerraba el oro que dicen que recogías, nos muestra que tu tesoro en el cielo lo escondías; 55 desde ahora en los serenos Elíseos campos amenos para siempre gozarás, sin poder desear más ni contentarte con menos. 60

De Miguel de Cervantes

Yace en la parte que es mejor de España una apacible y siempre verde Vega a quien Apolo su favor no niega, pues con las aguas de Helicón la baña;

Júpiter, labrador por grande hazaña, 5 su ciencia toda en cultivarla entrega; Cilenio, alegre, en ella se sosiega, Minerva eternamente la acompaña;

las Musas su Parnaso en ella han hecho; Venus, honesta, en ella aumenta y cría 10
la santa multitud de los amores.

Y así, con gusto y general provecho, nuevos frutos ofrece cada día de ángeles, de armas, santos y pastores.

Miguel de Cervantes, autor de Don Quixote: «Este soneto hice a la muerte de Fernando de Herrera; y, para entender el primer cuarteto, advierto que él celebraba en sus versos a una señora debajo deste nombre de Luz. Creo que es de los buenos que he hecho en mi vida»

El que subió por sendas nunca usadas del sacro monte a la más alta cumbre; el que a una Luz se hizo todo lumbre
y lágrimas, en dulce voz cantadas; el que con culta vena las sagradas 5 de Helicón y Pirene en muchedumbre (libre de toda humana pesadumbre) bebió y dejó en divinas transformadas; aquél a quien invidia tuvo Apolo porque, a par de su Luz, tiene su fama 10 de donde nace a donde muere el día:
el agradable al cielo, al suelo solo, vuelto en ceniza de su ardiente llama, yace debajo desta losa fría.

Miguel de Cervantes a don Diego de Mendoza y a su fama

En la memoria vive de las gentes, varón famoso, siglos infinitos, premio que le merecen tus escritos por graves, puros, castos y excelentes.

Las ansias en honesta llama ardientes, 5 los Etnas, los Estigios, los Cocitos que en ellos suavemente van descritos, mira si es bien, ¡oh Fama!, que los cuentes, y aun que los lleves en ligero vuelo por cuanto ciñe el mar y el sol rodea, 10
y en láminas de bronce los esculpas; que así el suelo sabrá que sabe el cielo que el renombre inmortal que se desea tal vez le alcanzan amorosas culpas.

Miguel de Cervantes, al secretario Gabriel Pérez del Barrio Angulo

Tal secretario formáis, Gabriel, en vuestros escritos, que por siglos infinitos en él os eternizáis;

de la ignorancia sacáis 5 la pluma, y en presto vuelo de lo más bajo del suelo al cielo la levantáis.

Desde hoy más, la discreción quedará puesta en su punto, 10 y el hablar y escribir junto en su mayor perfección, que en esta nueva ocasión nos muestra, en breve distancia, Demóstenes su elegancia 15

y su estilo Cicerón.

España os está obligada,
y con ella el mundo todo, por la subtileza y modo de pluma tan bien cortada; 20

la adulación defraudada queda, y la lisonja en ella;
la mentira se atropella,
y es la verdad levantada.

Vuestro libro nos informa 25 que sólo vos habéis dado

a la materia de estado hermosa y cristiana forma;
con la razón se conforma
de tal suerte que en él veo 30 que, contentando al deseo, al que es más libre reforma.

Soneto a don Diego Rosel y Fuenllana, inventor de nuevos artes, hecho por Miguel de Cervantes

Jamás en el jardín de Falerina ni en la Parnasa, excesible cuesta, se vio Rosel ni rosa cual es ésta, por quien gimió la maga Dragontina;
atrás deja la flor que se rechina 5 en la del Tronto archiducal floresta, dejando olor por vía manifesta que a la región del cielo la avecina.

Crece, ¡oh muy felice planta!, crece,
y ocupen tus pimpollos todo el orbe, 10 retumbando, crujiendo y espantando;
el Betis calle, pues el Po enmudece,
y la muerte, que a todo humano sorbe, sola esta rosa vaya eternizando.

De Miguel de Cervantes, a los éxtasis de nuestra beata madre Teresa de Jesús

Virgen fecunda, madre venturosa, cuyos hijos, criados a tus pechos, sobre sus fuerzas la virtud alzando, pisan ahora los dorados techos de la dulce región maravillosa 5 que está la gloria de su Dios mostrando:
tú, que ganaste obrando un nombre en todo el mundo y un grado sin segundo, ahora estés ante tu Dios prostrada, 10 en rogar por tus hijos ocupada, o en cosas dignas de tu intento santo, oye mi voz cansada
y esfuerza, ¡oh madre!, el desmayado canto.

Luego que de la cuna y las mantillas 15 sacó Dios tu niñez, diste señales que Dios para ser suya te guardaba, mostrando los impulsos celestiales en ti, con ordinarias maravillas, que a tu edad tu deseo aventajaba; 20 y si se descuidaba
de lo que hacer debía, tal vez luego volvía
mejorado, mostrando codicioso que el haber parecido perezoso 25 era un volver atrás para dar salto, con curso más brío,
desde la tierra al cielo, que es más alto.

Creciste, y fue creciendo en ti la gana de obrar en proporción de los favores 30 con que te regaló la mano eterna, tales que, al parecer, se alzó a mayores contigo alegre Dios en la mañana de tu florida edad humilde y tierna;
y así tu ser gobierna 35 que poco a poco subes sobre las densas nubes
de la suerte mortal, y así levantas tu cuerpo al cielo, sin fijar las plantas, que ligero tras sí el alma le lleva 40 a las regiones santas
con nueva suspensión, con virtud nueva.

Allí su humildad te muestra santa;
acullá se desposa Dios contigo, aquí misterios altos te revela. 45 Tierno amante se muestra, dulce amigo, y, siendo tu maestro, te levanta al cielo, que señala por tu escuela; parece se desvela
en hacerte mercedes; 50
rompe rejas y redes
para buscarte el Mágico divino, tan tu llegado siempre y tan contino que, si algún afligido a Dios buscara, acortando camino 55
en tu pecho o en tu celda le hallara.

Aunque naciste en Ávila, se puede decir que en Alba fue donde naciste, pues allí nace donde muere el justo;
desde Alba, ¡oh madre!, al cielo te partiste: 60 alba pura, hermosa, a quien sucede el claro día del inmenso gusto.
Que le goces es justo

en éxtasis divinos
por todos los caminos 65
por donde Dios llevar a un alma sabe, para darle de sí cuanto ella cabe, y aun la ensancha, dilata y engrandece
y, con amor süave,
a sí y de sí la junta y enriquece. 70

Como las circunstancias convenientes que acreditan los éxtasis, que suelen indicios ser de santidad notoria, en los tuyos se hallaron, nos impelen a creer la verdad de los visibles 75 que nos describe tu discreta historia;
y el quedar con vitoria, honroso triunfo y palma del infierno, y tu alma más humilde, más sabia y obediente 80 al fin de tus arrobos, fue evidente señal que todos fueron admirables y sobrehumanamente
nuevos, continuos, sacros, inefables.

Ahora, pues, que al cielo te retiras, 85 menospreciando la mortal riqueza en la inmortalidad que siempre dura, y el visorrey de Dios nos da certeza que sin enigma y sin espejo miras de Dios la incomparable hermosura, 90 colma nuestra ventura:
oye, devota y pía,
los balidos que envía
el rebaño infinito que criaste cuando del suelo al cielo el vuelo alzaste, 95 que no porque dejaste nuestra vida la caridad dejaste,
que en los cielos está más estendida.

Canción, de ser humilde has de preciarte cuando quieras al cielo levantarte, 100 que tiene la humildad naturaleza de ser el todo y parte de alzar al cielo la mortal bajeza.

De Miguel de Cervantes Saavedra

De Turia el cisne más famoso hoy canta, y no para acabar la dulce vida, que en sus divinas obras escondida
a los tiempos y edades se adelanta:
    queda por él canonizada y santa   5 Teruel, vivos Marcilla y su homicida;
su pluma, por heroica conocida,
en quien se admira el cielo, el suelo espanta.
    Su dotrina, su voz, su estilo raro, que por tuyos, ¡oh Apolo!, reconoces,   10
según el vuelo de sus bellas alas, grabadas por la Fama en mármol paro y en láminas de bronce, harán que goces siglo de eternidad, Yagüe de Salas.

De Miguel de Cervantes Saavedra, a la señora doña Alfonsa González, monja profesa en el monasterio de Nuestra Señora de Constantinopla, en la dirección deste libro de la Sacra Minerva

En vuestra sin igual, dulce armonía, hermosísima Alfonsa, nos reserva la nueva, la sin par sacra Minerva cuanto de bueno y santo el cielo cría.

Llega el felice punto, llega el día 5 en que, si os oye la infernal caterva, huye gimiendo al centro y, de la acerva región, suspiros a la tierra envía.

En fin, vos convertís el suelo en cielo con la voz celestial, con la hermosura 10 que os hacen parecer ángel divino;
y así, conviene que tal vez el velo alcéis, y descubráis esa luz pura que nos pone del cielo en el camino.

A un valentón

Un valentón de espátula y gregüesco que a la muerte mil vidas sacrifica, cansado del oficio de la pica, mas no del ejercicio picaresco, retorciendo el mostacho soldadesco por ver que ya su bolsa le repica, a un corrillo llegó de gente rica
y en el nombre de Dios, pidió refresco.
“Den voacedes, por Dios, a mi pobreza — les dice — , donde no, por ocho santos que haré lo que suelo sin tardanza.”
Mas uno que a sacar la espada empieza “¿Con quién habla — le dijo — el tragacantos?
Si limosna no alcanza, ¿qué es lo que suele hacer en tal querella?”
Respondió el bravonel: “Irme sin ella”

Al túmulo del rey Felipe II en Sevilla

Voto a Dios que me espanta esta grandeza
y que diera un doblón por describilla, porque ¿a quién no sorprende y maravilla esta máquina insigne, esta riqueza?

Por Jesucristo vivo, cada pieza vale más de un millón, y que es mancilla que esto no dure un siglo, ¡oh gran Sevilla!, Roma triunfante en ánimo y nobleza.

Apostaré que el ánima del muerto
por gozar este sitio hoy ha dejado la gloria donde vive eternamente.

Esto oyó un valentón y dijo: «Es cierto cuanto dice voacé, seor soldado.
Y el que dijere lo contrario, miente.»

Y luego, incontinente,
caló el chapeo, requirió la espada miró al soslayo, fuése y no hubo nada.

Busco en la muerte la vida

Busco en la muerte la vida, salud en la enfermedad,
en la prisión libertad,
en lo cerrado salida
y en el traidor lealtad.
Pero mi suerte, de quien jamás espero algún bien, con el cielo ha estatuido, que, pues lo imposible pido, lo posible aún no me den.

Ovillejos

¿Quién menoscaba mis bienes?
¡Desdenes!
Y ¿quién aumenta mis duelos?
¡Los celos!
Y ¿quién prueba mi paciencia?
¡Ausencia!

De este modo en mi dolencia ningún remedio se alcanza, pues me matan la esperanza, desdenes, celos y ausencia.

¿Quién me causa este dolor?
¡Amor!
Y ¿quién mi gloria repuna?
¡Fortuna!
Y ¿quién consiente mi duelo?
¡El cielo!

De este modo yo recelo
morir deste mal extraño, pues se aúnan en mi daño amor, fortuna y el cielo.

¿Quién mejorará mi suerte?
¡La muerte!
Y el bien de amor, ¿quién le alcanza?
¡Mudanza!
Y sus males, ¿quién los cura?

¡Locura!

Dese modo no es cordura querer curar la pasión, cuando los remedios son muerte, mudanza y locura.

El autor a su pluma

Soneto

Pues veis que no me han dado algún soneto que ilustre deste libro la portada, venid vos, pluma mía mal cortada,
y hacedle, aunque carezca de discreto.

Haréis que escusó el temerario aprieto 5 de andar de una en otra encrucijada, mendigando alabanzas, escusada fatiga e impertinente, yo os prometo.

Todo soneto y rima allá se avenga, y adorne los umbrales de los buenos, 10 aunque la adulación es de ruin casta.

Y dadme vos que este Viaje tenga de sal un panecillo por lo menos, que yo os le marco por vendible, y basta.

Capítulo primero del Viaje del Parnaso

Un quídam Caporal italiano, de patria perusino, a lo que entiendo, de ingenio griego y de valor romano, llevado de un capricho reverendo, le vino en voluntad de ir a Parnaso, 5 por huir de la Corte el vario estruendo.

Solo y a pie partióse, y paso a paso llegó donde compró una mula antigua, de color parda y tartamudo paso.

Nunca a medroso pareció estantigua 10 mayor, ni menos buena para carga, grande en los huesos y en la fuerza exigua, corta de vista, aunque de cola larga, estrecha en los ijares, y en el cuero más dura que lo son los de una adarga. 15

Era de ingenio cabalmente entero:
caía en cualquier cosa fácilmente, así en abril como en el mes de enero.

En fin, sobre ella el poetón valiente llegó al Parnaso, y fue del rubio Apolo 20 agasajado con serena frente.

Contó, cuando volvió el poeta solo y sin blanca a su patria, lo que en vuelo llevó la fama deste al otro polo.

Yo, que siempre trabajo y me desvelo 25 por parecer que tengo de poeta la gracia que no quiso darme el cielo, quisiera despachar a la estafeta mi alma, o por los aires, y ponella sobre las cumbres del nombrado Oeta, 30 pues, descubriendo desde allí la bella corriente de Aganipe, en un saltico pudiera el labio remojarse en ella,

y quedar del licor süave y rico el pancho lleno, y ser de allí adelante 35 poeta ilustre, o al menos magnifico.

Mas mil inconvenientes al instante se me ofrecieron, y quedó el deseo en cierne, desvalido e ignorante.

Porque en la piedra que en mis hombros veo, 40 que la Fortuna me cargó pesada, mis mal logradas esperanzas leo.

Las muchas leguas de la gran jornada se me representaron, que pudieran torcer la voluntad aficionada, 45 si en aquel mesmo istante no acudieran los humos de la fama a socorrerme, y corto y fácil el camino hicieran.

Dije entre mí: «si yo viniese a verme en la difícil cumbre deste monte, 50 y una guirnalda de laurel ponerme, no envidiaría el bien decir de Aponte, ni del muerto Galarza la agudeza, en manos blando, en lengua Rodomonte».

Mas, como de un error otro se empieza, 55 creyendo a mi deseo, di al camino los pies, porque di al viento la cabeza.

En fin, sobre las ancas del Destino, llevando a la Elección puesta en la silla, hacer el gran viäje determino. 60

Si esta cabalgadura maravilla, sepa el que no lo sabe que se usa por todo el mundo, no sólo en Castilla.

Ninguno tiene o puede dar escusa de no oprimir desta gran bestia el lomo, 65 ni mortal caminante lo rehúsa.

Suele tal vez ser tan ligera como va por el aire el águila o saeta, y tal vez anda con los pies de plomo.

Pero, para la carga de un poeta, 70 siempre ligera, cualquier bestia puede llevarla, pues carece de maleta;

que es caso ya infalible que, aunque herede riquezas un poeta, en poder suyo no aumentarlas, perderlas le sucede. 75

Desta verdad ser la ocasión arguyo que tú, ¡oh gran padre Apolo!, les infundes en sus intentos el intento tuyo.

Y, como no le mezclas ni confundes en cosas de agibilibus rateras, 80 ni en el mar de ganancia vil le hundes, ellos, o traten burlas o sean veras, sin aspirar a la ganancia en cosa, sobre el convexo van de las esferas, pintando en la palestra rigurosa 85 las acciones de Marte, o entre las flores las de Venus, más blanda y amorosa.

Llorando guerras o cantando amores, la vida como en sueño se les pasa,
o como suele el tiempo a jugadores. 90

Son hechos los poetas de una masa dulce, süave, correosa y tierna, y amiga del hogar de ajena casa.

El poeta más cuerdo se gobierna por su antojo baldío y regalado, 95 de trazas lleno y de ignorancia eterna.

Absorto en sus quimeras, y admirado de sus mismas acciones, no procura llegar a rico como a honroso estado.

Vayan, pues, los leyentes con letura, 100 cual dice el vulgo mal limado y bronco, que yo soy un poeta desta hechura:

cisne en las canas, y en la voz un ronco y negro cuervo, sin que el tiempo pueda desbistar de mi ingenio el duro tronco; 105

y que en la cumbre de la varia rueda jamás me pude ver sólo un momento, pues cuando subir quiero, se está queda.

Pero, por ver si un alto pensamiento se puede prometer feliz suceso, 110 seguí el viaje a paso tardo y lento.

Un candel con ocho mis de queso fue en mis alforjas mi repostería, útil al que camina y leve peso.

«Adiós», dije a la humilde choza mía; 115 «adiós, Madrid; adiós tu Prado y fuentes, que manan néctar, llueven ambrosía;
adiós, conversaciones suficientes a entretener un pecho cuidadoso y a dos mil desvalidos pretendientes; 120 adiós, sitio agradable y mentiroso, do fueron dos gigantes abrasados con el rayo de Júpiter fogoso; adiós, teatros públicos, honrados por la ignorancia que ensalzada veo 125 en cien mil disparates recitados;
adiós, de San Felipe el gran paseo, donde si baja o sube el turco galgo, como en gaceta de Venecia leo;
adiós, hambre sutil de algún hidalgo, 130 que por no verme ante tus puertas muerto, hoy de mi patria y de mí mismo salgo».

Con esto, poco a poco llegué al puerto a quien los de Cartago dieron nombre, cerrado a todos vientos y encubierto; 135 a cuyo claro y sin igual renombre se postran cuantos puertos el mar baña, descubre el sol y ha navegado el hombre.

Arrojóse mi vista a la campaña rasa del mar, que trujo a mi memoria 140 del heroico don Juan la heroica hazaña; donde con alta de soldados gloria, y con propio valor y airado pecho tuve, aunque humilde, parte en la vitoria.

Allí, con rabia y con mortal despecho, 145 el otomano orgullo vio su brío hollado y reducido a pobre estrecho.

Lleno, pues, de esperanzas y vacío de temor, busqué luego una fragata que efetuase el alto intento mío, 150 cuando por la, aunque azul, líquida plata vi venir un bajel a vela y remo, que tomar tierra en el gran puerto trata.

Del más gallardo y más vistoso extremo de cuantos las espaldas de Neptuno 155 oprimieron jamás, ni más supremo, cual éste, nunca vio bajel alguno el mar, ni pudo verse en el armada que destruyó la vengativa Juno;

no fue del vellocino a la jornada 160 Argos tan bien compuesta y tan pomposa, ni de tantas riquezas adornada.

Cuando entraba en el puerto, la hermosa Aurora por las puertas del Oriente salía en trenza blanda y amorosa. 165

Oyóse un estampido de repente, haciendo salva la real galera, que despertó y alborotó la gente.

El son de los clarines la ribera llenaba de dulcísima armonía, 170
y el de la chusma alegre y placentera.

Entrábanse las horas por el día,
a cuya luz, con distinción más clara, se vio del gran bajel la bizarría.

Áncoras echa, y en el puerto para, 175
y arroja un ancho esquife al mar tranquilo con música, con grito y algazara.

Usan los marineros de su estilo:
cubren la popa con tapetes tales, que es oro y sirgo de su trama el hilo. 180

Tocan de la ribera los umbrales;
sale del rico esquife un caballero en hombros de otros cuatro principales, en cuyo traje y ademán severo vi de Mercurio al vivo la figura, 185 de los fingidos dioses mensajero;

en el gallardo talle y compostura, en los alados pies, y el caduceo, símbolo de prudencia y de cordura, digo que al mismo paraninfo veo, 190 que trujo mentirosas embajadas a la tierra del alto Coliseo.

Vile, y apenas puso las aladas plantas en las arenas, venturosas por verse de divinos pies tocadas, 195 cuando yo, revolviendo cien mil cosas en la imaginación, llegué a postrarme ante las plantas por adorno hermosas.

Mandóme el dios parlero luego alzarme, y, con medidos versos y sonantes, 200
desta manera comenzó a hablarme:

«¡Oh Adán de los poetas, oh Cervantes!
¿Qué alforjas y qué traje es éste, amigo, que así muestra discursos ignorantes?»

Yo, respondiendo a su demanda, digo: 205 «Señor: voy al Parnaso, y, como pobre, con este aliño mi jornada sigo».

Y él a mí dijo: «¡Oh sobrehumano y sobre espíritu cilenio levantado, toda abundancia y todo honor te sobre! 210

Que, en fin, has respondido a ser soldado antiguo y valeroso, cual lo muestra la mano de que estás estropeado.

Bien sé que en la naval dura palestra perdiste el movimiento de la mano 215 izquierda, para gloria de la diestra;

y sé que aquel instinto sobrehumano que de raro inventor tu pecho encierra no te le ha dado el padre Apolo en vano.

Tus obras los rincones de la tierra, 220 llevándolas en grupa Rocinante, descubren y a la envidia mueven guerra.

Pasa, raro inventor, pasa adelante con tu sutil disinio, y presta ayuda a Apolo, que la tuya es importante, 225

antes que el escuadrón vulgar acuda de más de veinte mil sietemesinos poetas que de serlo están en duda.

Llenas van ya las sendas y caminos desta canalla inútil contra el monte, 230 que aun de estar a su sombra no son dignos.

Ármate de tus versos luego, y ponte a punto de seguir este viaje conmigo, y a la gran obra dispónte; conmigo, segurísimo pasaje 235 tendrás, sin que te empaches, ni procures lo que suelen llamar matalotaje;
y, porque esta verdad que digo apures, entra conmigo en mi galera y mira cosas con que te asombres y asegures». 240

Yo, aunque pensé que todo era mentira, entré con él en la galera hermosa y vi lo que pensar en ello admira:
de la quilla a la gavia, ¡oh estraña cosa!, toda de versos era fabricada, 245 sin que se entremetiese alguna prosa;

las ballesteras eran de ensalada de glosas, todas hechas a la boda de la que se llamó malmaridada; era la chusma de romances toda, 250 gente atrevida, empero necesaria, pues a todas acciones se acomoda;

la popa, de materia estraordinaria, bastarda, y de legítimos sonetos, de labor peregrina en todo y varia; 255 eran dos valentísimos tercetos los espalderes de la izquierda y diestra, para dar boga larga muy perfectos;

hecha ser la crujía se me muestra de una lengua y tristísima elegía, 260 que no en cantar sino en llorar es diestra (por ésta entiendo yo que se diría lo que suele decirse a un desdichado cuando lo pasa mal: «pasó crujía»);

el árbol, hasta el cielo levantado, 265 de una dura canción prolija estaba de canto de seis dedos embreado;

él y la entena que por él cruzaba, de duros estrambotes la madera de que eran hechos claro se mostraba; 270 la racamenta, que es siempre parlera, toda la componían redondillas, con que ella se mostraba más ligera;

las jarcias parecían seguidillas de disparates mil y más compuestas, 275 que suelen en el alma hacer cosquillas;

las rumbadas, fortísimas y honestas estancias eran, tablas poderosas que llevan un poema y otro a cuestas.

Era cosa de ver las bulliciosas 280 banderillas que al aire tremolaban, de varias rimas algo licenciosas;
los grumetes, que aquí y allí cruzaban, de encadenados versos parecían, puesto que como libres trabajaban. 285

Todas las obras muertas componían o versos sueltos, o sestinas graves, que a la galera más gallarda hacían.

En fin, con modos blandos y süaves, viendo Mercurio que yo visto había 290 el bajel, que es razón, lector, que alabes, junto a sí me sentó, y su voz envía a mis oídos en razones claras y llenas de suavísima armonía, diciendo: «Entre las cosas que son raras 295

y nuevas en el mundo y peregrinas, verás, si en ello adviertes y reparas, que es una este bajel de las más dignas de admiración, que llegue a ser espanto a naciones remotas y vecinas. 300

No le formaron máquinas de encanto, sino el ingenio del divino Apolo, que puede, quiere y llega y sube a tanto.

Formóle, ¡oh nuevo caso!, para sólo que yo llevase en él cuantos poetas 305 hay desde el claro Tajo hasta Pactolo.

De Malta el gran maestro, a quien secretas espías dan aviso que en Oriente se aperciben las bárbaras saetas, teme, y envía a convocar la gente 310 que sella con la blanca cruz el pecho, porque en su fuerza su valor se aumente;
a cuya imitación, Apolo ha hecho que los famosos vates al Parnaso acudan, que está puesto en duro estrecho. 315

Yo, condolido del doliente caso, en el ligero casco, ya instruido de lo que he de hacer, aguijo el paso:
de Italia las riberas he barrido;
he visto las de Francia y no tocado, 320 por venir sólo a España dirigido.

Aquí, con dulce y con felice agrado, hará fin mi camino, a lo que creo,
y seré fácilmente despachado.

Tú, aunque en tus canas tu pereza veo, 325 serás el paraninfo de mi asunto
y el solicitador de mi deseo.

Parte, y no te detengas sólo un punto, y a los que en esta lista van escritos dirás de Apolo cuanto aquí yo apunto». 330

Sacó un papel, y en él casi infinitos nombres vi de poetas, en que había yangüeses, vizcaínos y coritos.

Allí famosos vi de Andalucía, y entre los castellanos vi unos hombres 335 en quien vive de asiento la poesía.

Dijo Mercurio: «Quiero que me nombres desta turba gentil, pues tú lo sabes, la alteza de su ingenio, con los nombres».

Yo respondí: «De los que son más graves 340 diré lo que supiere, por moverte a que ante Apolo su valor alabes».
Él escuchó. Yo dije desta suerte.

Del Viaje del Parnaso, capítulo segundo

Colgado estaba de mi antigua boca el dios hablante, pero entonces mudo (que al que escucha, el guardar silencio toca), cuando di de improviso un estornudo, y, haciendo cruces por el mal agüero, 5 del gran Mercurio al mandamiento acudo.

Miré la lista, y vi que era el primero el licenciado JUAN DE OCHOA, amigo por poeta y cristiano verdadero; deste varón en su alabanza digo 10 que puede acelerar y dar la muerte con su claro discurso al enemigo, y que si no se aparta y se divierte su ingenio en la gramática española, será de Apolo sin igual la suerte; 15

pues de su poesía, al mundo sola, puede esperar poner el pie en la cumbre de la incostante rueda o varia bola.

Éste que de los cómicos es lumbre, que el licenciado POYO es su apellido, 20
no hay nube que a su sol claro deslumbre;

pero, como está siempre entretenido en trazas, en quimeras e invenciones, no ha de acudir a este marcial rüido.

Éste que en lista por tercero pones, 25 que HIPÓLITO se llama DE VERGARA, si llevarle al Parnaso te dispones, haz cuenta que en él llevas una jara, una saeta, un arcabuz, un rayo que contra la ignorancia se dispara. 30

Éste que tiene como mes de mayo florido ingenio, y que comienza ahora a hacer de sus comedias nuevo ensayo,

GODÍNEZ es. Y estotro que enamora las almas con sus versos regalados, 35 cuando de amor ternezas canta o llora, es uno que valdrá por mil soldados cuando a la estraña y nunca vista empresa fueren los escogidos y llamados;
digo que es don FRANCISCO, el que profesa 40 las armas y las letras con tal nombre, que por su igual Apolo le confiesa;
es DE CALATAYUD su sobrenombre;
con esto queda dicho todo cuanto puedo decir con que a la invidia asombre. 45 Éste que sigue es un poeta santo, digo famoso: MIGUEL CID se llama, que al coro de las Musas pone espanto.
Estotro que sus versos encarama sobre los mismos hombros de Calisto, 50 tan celebrado siempre de la fama, es aquel agradable, aquel bienquisto, aquel agudo, aquel sonoro y grave sobre cuantos poetas Febo ha visto; aquel que tiene de escribir la llave 55 con gracia y agudeza en tanto extremo, que su igual en el orbe no se sabe:
es don LUIS DE GÓNGORA, a quien temo agraviar en mis cortas alabanzas, aunque las suba al grado más supremo. 60 ¡Oh tú, divino espíritu, que alcanzas ya el premio merecido a tus deseos y a tus bien colocadas esperanzas;
ya en nuevos y justísimos empleos, divino HERRERA, tu caudal se aplica, 65
aspirando del cielo a los trofeos!
Ya de tu hermosa Luz, y clara, y rica, el bello resplandor miras seguro, en la que el alma tuya beatifica;
y, arrimada tu yedra al fuerte muro 70 de la inmortalidad, no estimas cuanto mora en las sombras deste mundo oscuro.

Y tú, don JUAN DE JÁURIGUI, que a tanto el sabio curso de tu pluma aspira, que sobre las esferas le levanto, 75

aunque Lucano por tu voz respira, déjale un rato y, con piadosos ojos,
a la necesidad de Apolo mira;

que te están esperando mil despojos de otros mil atrevidos, que procuran 80 fértils campos ser, siendo rastrojos.

Y tú, por quien las Musas aseguran su partido, don FÉLIX ARIAS, siente que por su gentileza te conjuran

y ruegan que defiendas desta gente 85 non sancta su hermosura, y de Aganipe y de Hipocrene la inmortal corriente.

¿Consentirás tú, a dicha, participe del licor suavísimo un poeta que al hacer de sus versos sude y hipe? 90

No lo consentirás, pues tu discreta vena, abundante y rica, no permite cosa que sombra tenga de imperfecta.

«Señor, éste que aquí viene se quite»,
dije a Mercurio, «que es un chacho necio 95 que juega, y es de sátiras su envite.

Éste sí que podrás tener en precio, que es ALONSO DE SALAS BARBADILLO,
a quien me inclino y sin medida aprecio.

Éste que viene aquí, si he de decillo, 100 no hay para qué le embarques; y así, puedes borrarle». Dijo el dios: «Gusto de oíllo».

«Es un cierto rapaz, que a Ganimedes quiere imitar, vistiéndose a lo godo;
y así, aconsejo que sin él te quedes. 105

No lo harás con éste dese modo, que es el gran LUIS CABRERA, que, pequeño, todo lo alcanza, pues lo sabe todo;

es de la historia conocido dueño, y en discursos discretos tan discreto, 110 que a Tácito verás si te le enseño.

Éste que viene es un galán sujeto de la varia fortuna a los vaivenes y del mudable tiempo al duro aprieto:
un tiempo rico de caducos bienes, 115
y ahora de los firmes e inmutables más rico, a tu mandar firme le tienes; pueden los altos riscos siempre estables ser tocados del mar, mas no movidos de sus ondas en cursos variables; 120 ni menos a la tierra trae rendidos los altos cedros Bóreas, cuando, airado, quiere humillar los más fortalecidos.

Y éste que vivo ejemplo nos ha dado desta verdad con tal filosofía, 125
don LORENZO RAMÍREZ es DE PRADO.

Déste que se le sigue aquí diría que es don ANTONIO DE MONROY, que veo en él lo que es ingenio y cortesía; satisfacción al más alto deseo 130 puede dar de valor heroico y ciencia, pues mil descubro en él y otras mil creo.

Éste es un caballero de presencia agradable y que tiene de Torcato el alma sin alguna diferencia; 135 de don ANTONIO DE PAREDES trato, a quien dieron las Musas, sus amigas, en tierna edad anciano ingenio y trato.

Éste que por llevarle te fatigas, es don ANTONIO DE MENDOZA, y veo 140
cuánto en llevarle al sacro Apolo obligas.

Éste que de las Musas es recreo, la gracia y el donaire y la cordura, que de la discreción lleva el trofeo, es PEDRO DE MORALES, propia hechura 145 del gusto cortesano, y es asilo adonde se repara mi ventura.

Éste, aunque tiene parte de Zoílo, es el grande ESPINEL, que en la guitarra tiene la prima y en el raro estilo. 150

Éste que tanto allá tira la barra que las cumbres se deja atrás de Pindo, que jura, que vocea y que desgarra, tiene más de poeta que de lindo,
y es JUSEPE DE VARGAS, cuyo astuto 155 ingenio y rara condición deslindo.

Éste, a quien pueden dar justo tributo la gala y el ingenio que más pueda ofrecer a las Musas flor y fruto, es el famoso ANDRÉS DE BALMASEDA, 160 de cuyo grave y dulce entendimiento el magno Apolo satisfecho queda.

Éste es ENCISO, gloria y ornamento del Tajo, y claro honor de Manzanares, que con tal hijo aumenta su contento. 165

Éste, que es escogido entre millares, de GUEVARA LUIS VÉLEZ es el bravo, que se puede llamar quitapesares;
es poeta gigante, en quien alabo el verso numeroso, el peregrino 170 ingenio, si un Gnatón nos pinta, o un Davo.

Éste es don JUAN DE ESPAÑA, que es más digno de alabanzas divinas que de humanas, pues en todos sus versos es divino.

Éste, por quien de Luso están ufanas 175 las Musas, es SILVEIRA, aquel famoso que por llevarle con razón te afanas.

Éste que se le sigue es el curioso gran don PEDRO DE HERRERA, conocido por de ingenio elevado en punto honroso. 180

Éste que de la cárcel del olvido sacó otra vez a Proserpina hermosa, con que a España y al Dauro ha enriquecido, verásle, en la contienda rigurosa que se teme y se espera en nuestros días 185 (culpa de nuestra edad poco dichosa), mostrar de su valor las lozanías;
pero ¿qué mucho, si es aquéste el docto y grave don FRANCISCO DE FARÍAS?

Éste, de quien yo fui siempre devoto, 190
oráculo y Apolo de Granada, y aun deste clima nuestro y del remoto,

PEDRO RODRÍGUEZ es. Éste es TEJADA, de altitonantes versos y sonoros, con majestad en todo levantada. 195

Éste que brota versos por los poros
y halla patria y amigos dondequiera, y tiene en los ajenos sus tesoros, es MEDINILLA, el que la vez primera cantó el Romance de la tumba oscura, 200 entre cipreses puestos en hilera.

Éste que en verdes años se apresura
y corre al sacro lauro, es don FERNANDO BERMÚDEZ, donde vive la cordura.

Éste es aquel poeta memorando 205 que mostró de su ingenio la agudeza, en las selvas de Erífile cantando.

Éste que la coluna nueva empieza, con estos dos que con su ser convienen, nombrarlos aun lo tengo por bajeza. 210

MIGUEL CEJUDO y MIGUEL SÁNCHEZ vienen juntos aquí, ¡oh par sin par!; en éstos las sacras Musas fuerte amparo tienen;

que en los pies de sus versos bien compuestos, llenos de erudición rara y dotrina, 215 al ir al grave caso serán prestos.

Este gran caballero, que se inclina a la lección de los poetas buenos,
y al sacro monte con su luz camina,

don FRANCISCO DE SILVA es por lo menos; 220 ¿qué será por lo más? ¡Oh edad madura en verdes años de cordura llenos!

Don GABRIEL GÓMEZ viene aquí; segura tiene con él Apolo la vitoria de la canalla siempre necia y dura. 225

Para honor de su ingenio, para gloria de su florida edad, para que admire siempre de siglo en siglo su memoria, en este gran sujeto se retire y abrevie la esperanza deste hecho, 230 y Febo al gran VALDÉS atento mire.

Verá en él un gallardo y sabio pecho, un ingenio sutil y levantado,
con que le deje en todo satisfecho.

FIGUEROA es estotro, el doctorado, 235 que cantó de Amarili la costancia en dulce prosa y verso regalado.

Cuatro vienen aquí en poca distancia, con mayúsculas letras de oro escritos, que son del alto asunto la importancia; 240

de tales cuatro, siglos infinitos durará la memoria, sustentada en la alta gravedad de sus escritos;

del claro Apolo la real morada, si viniere a caer de su grandeza, 245 será por estos cuatro levantada;

en ellos nos cifró Naturaleza el todo de las partes, que son dignas de gozar celsitud, que es más que alteza.

Esta verdad, gran CONDE DE SALINAS, 250 bien la acreditas con tus raras obras, que en los términos tocan de divinas.

Tú, el de ESQUILACHE PRÍNCIPE, que cobras de día en día crédito tamaño, que te adelantas a ti mismo y sobras, 255

serás escudo fuerte al grave daño que teme Apolo, con ventajas tantas, que no te espere el escuadrón tacaño.

Tú, CONDE DE SALDAÑA, que con plantas tiernas pisas de Pindo la alta cumbre, 260
y en alas de tu ingenio te levantas, hacha has de ser de inestinguible lumbre, que guíe al sacro monte al deseoso de verse en él, sin que la luz deslumbre.

Tú, el de VILLAMEDIANA, el más famoso 265 de cuantos entre griegos y latinos alcanzaron el lauro venturoso, cruzarás por las sendas y caminos que al monte guían, porque más seguros lleguen a él los simples peregrinos; 270 a cuya vista destos cuatro muros de Parnaso, caerán las arrogancias de los mancebos, sobre necios, duros.

¡Oh cuántas y cuán graves circunstancias dijera destos cuatro, que felices 275 aseguran de Apolo las ganancias!

Y más, si se les llega el DE ALCANICES MARQUÉS insigne, harán (puesto que hay una en el mundo no más) cinco fenices;

cada cual de por sí será coluna 280 que sustente y levante el edificio de Febo sobre el cerco de la luna.

Éste, puesto que acude al grave oficio en que se ocupa, el lauro y palma lleva, que Apolo da por honra y beneficio; 285 en esta ciencia es maravilla nueva, y en la jurispericia único y raro:
su nombre es don FRANCISCO DE LA CUEVA.

Éste, que con Homero le comparo, es el gran don RODRIGO DE HERRERA, 290 insigne en letras y en virtudes raro.

Éste que se le sigue es el DE VERA DON JUAN, que por su espada y por su pluma le honran en la quinta y cuarta esfera.

Éste que el cuerpo y aun el alma bruma 295 de mil, aunque no muestra ser cristiano, sus escritos el tiempo no consuma».

Cayóseme la lista de la mano en este punto, y dijo el dios: «Con éstos que has referido está el negocio llano. 300

Haz que con pies y pensamientos prestos vengan aquí, donde aguardando quedo la fuerza de tan válidos supuestos».

«Mal podrá don FRANCISCO DE QUEVEDO venir», dije yo entonces; y él me dijo: 305 «Pues partirme sin él de aquí no puedo.

Ése es hijo de Apolo, ése es hijo de Calíope Musa; no podemos irnos sin él, y en esto estaré fijo; es el flagelo de poetas memos, 310 y echará a puntillazos del Parnaso los malos que esperamos y tenemos».

«¡Oh señor», repliqué, «que tiene el paso corto y no llegará en un siglo entero!» «Deso», dijo Mercurio, «no hago caso, 315 que el poeta que fuere caballero, sobre una nube entre pardilla y clara vendrá muy a su gusto caballero».

«Y el que no», pregunté, «¿qué le prepara Apolo? ¿Qué carrozas, o qué nubes? 320
¿Qué dromerio, o alfana en paso rara?»

«Mucho», me respondió, «mucho te subes en tus preguntas; calla y obedece».
«Sí haré, pues no es infando lo que jubes».

Esto le respondí, y él me parece 325 que se turbó algún tanto; y en un punto el mar se turba, el viento sopla y crece.

Mi rostro entonces, como el de un difunto se debió de poner; y sí haría, que soy medroso, a lo que yo barrunto. 330

Vi la noche mezclarse con el día; las arenas del hondo mar alzarse
a la región del aire, entonces fría.

Todos los elementos vi turbarse:
la tierra, el agua, el aire, y aun el fuego 335
vi entre rompidas nubes azorarse.

Y, en medio deste gran desasosiego, llovían nubes de poetas llenas sobre el bajel, que se anegara luego, si no acudieran más de mil sirenas 340
a dar de azotes a la gran borrasca, que hacía el saltarel por las entenas.

Una, que ser pensé Juana la Chasca, de dilatado vientre y luengo cuello, pintiparado a aquel de la tarasca, 345

se llegó a mí, y me dijo: «De un cabello deste bajel estaba la esperanza colgada, a no venir a socorrello.

Traemos, y no es burla, a la Bonanza, que estaba descuidada oyendo atenta 350 los discursos de un cierto Sancho Panza».

En esto, sosegóse la tormenta, volvió tranquilo el mar, serenó el cielo,
que al regañón el céfiro le ahuyenta.

Volví la vista, y vi en ligero vuelo 355 una nube romper el aire claro, de la color del condensado yelo.

¡Oh maravilla nueva! ¡Oh caso raro!
Vilo, y he de decillo, aunque se dude del hecho que por brújula declaro. 360

Lo que yo pude ver, lo que yo pude notar fue que la nube, dividida en dos mitades, a llover acude.

Quien ha visto la tierra prevenida con tal disposición que, cuando llueve 365 (cosa ya averiguada y conocida), de cada gota en un instante breve del polvo se levanta o sapo o rana, que a saltos o despacio el paso mueve, tal se imagine ver, ¡oh soberana 370 virtud!, de cada gota de la nube saltar un bulto, aunque con forma humana.

Por no creer esta verdad estuve mil veces; pero vila con la vista, que entonces clara y sin legañas tuve. 375

Eran aquestos bultos de la lista pasada los poetas referidos, a cuya fuerza no hay quien la resista.

Unos por hombres buenos conocidos, otros de rumbo y hampo, y Dios es Cristo, 380
poquitos bien y muchos mal vestidos.

Entre ellos parecióme de haber visto a don ANTONIO DE GALARZA el bravo, gentilhombre de Apolo y muy bienquisto.

El bajel se llenó de cabo a cabo, 385
y su capacidad a nadie niega copioso asiento, que es lo más que alabo.

Llovió otra nube al gran LOPE DE VEGA, poeta insigne, a cuyo verso o prosa ninguno le aventaja, ni aun le llega. 390

Era cosa de ver maravillosa de los poetas la apretada enjambre, en recitar sus versos muy melosa:
éste muerto de sed, aquél de hambre.
Yo dije, viendo tantos, con voz alta: 395 «¡Cuerpo de mí con tanta poetambre!»

Por tantas sobras conoció una falta Mercurio, y, acudiendo a remedialla, ligero en la mitad del bajel salta;
y con una zaranda que allí halla, 400
no sé si antigua o si de nuevo hecha, zarandó mil poetas de gramalla.

Los de capa y espada no desecha, y éstos zarandó dos mil y tantos;
que fue de guilla entonces la cosecha: 405 colábanse los buenos y los santos, y quedábanse arriba los granzones, más duros en sus versos que los cantos;
y, sin que les valiesen las razones que en su disculpa daban, daba luego 410 Mercurio al mar con ellos a montones.

Entre los arrojados, se oyó un ciego, que murmurando entre las ondas iba de Apolo con un pésete y reniego.

Un sastre, aunque en sus pies flojos estriba, 415 abriendo con los brazos el camino, dijo: «¡Sucio es Apolo, así yo viva!»

Otro, que al parecer iba mohíno, con ser un zapatero de obra prima, dijo dos mil, no un solo desatino. 420

Trabaja un tundidor, suda y se anima por verse a la ribera conducido, que más la vida que la honra estima.

El escuadrón nadante, reducido a la marina, vuelve a la galera 425 el rostro, con señales de ofendido;
y uno por todos dijo: «Bien pudiera ese chocante embajador de Febo tratarnos bien, y no desta manera.

Mas oigan lo que digo: yo me atrevo 430 a profanar del monte la grandeza con libros nuevos y en estilo nuevo».

Calló Mercurio, y a poner empieza con gran curiosidad seis camarines, dando a la gracia ilustre rancho y pieza. 435

De nuevo resonaron los clarines;
y así, Mercurio, lleno de contento, sin darle mal agüero los delfines, remos al agua dio, velas al viento.

Del Viaje del Parnaso, capítulo tercero

Eran los remos de la real galera de esdrújulos, y dellos compelida se deslizaba por el mar ligera.

Hasta el tope la vela iba tendida, hecha de muy delgados pensamientos, 5 de varios lizos por amor tejida.

Soplaban dulces y amorosos vientos, todos en popa, y todos se mostraban al gran viaje solamente atentos.

Las sirenas en torno navegaban, 10 dando empellones al bajel lozano, con cuya ayuda en vuelo le llevaban.

Semejaban las aguas del mar cano colchas encarrujadas, y hacían azules visos por el verde llano. 15

Todos los del bajel se entretenían:
unos glosando pies dificultosos, otros cantaban, otros componían;

otros, de los tenidos por curiosos, referían sonetos, muchos hechos 20
a diferentes casos amorosos;

otros, alfeñicados y deshechos en puro azúcar, con la voz süave, de su melifluidad muy satisfechos, en tono blando, sosegado y grave, 25
églogas pastorales recitaban, en quien la gala y la agudeza cabe;

otros de sus señoras celebraban, en dulces versos, de la amada boca los escrementos que por ella echaban. 30

Tal hubo a quien amor así le toca, que alabó los riñones de su dama con gusto grande y no elegancia poca.

Uno cantó que la amorosa llama en mitad de las aguas le encendía, 35
y como toro agarrochado brama.

Desta manera andaba la Poesía de en uno en otro, haciendo que hablase éste latín, aquél algarabía.

En esto, sesga la galera, vase 40 rompiendo el mar con tanta ligereza, que el viento aun no consiente que la pase;
y, en esto, descubrióse la grandeza de la escombrada playa de Valencia, por arte hermosa y por naturaleza. 45

Hizo luego de sí grata presencia el gran don LUIS FERRER, marcado el pecho de honor y el alma de divina ciencia; desembarcóse el dios, y fue derecho a darle cuatro mil y más abrazos, 50 de su vista y su ayuda satisfecho.

Volvió la vista, y reiteró los lazos en don GUILLÉN DE CASTRO, que venía deseoso de verse en tales brazos.

CRISTÓBAL DE VIRUÉS se le seguía, 55 con PEDRO DE AGUILAR, junta famosa de las que Turia en sus riberas cría.

No le pudo llegar más valerosa escuadra al gran Mercurio, ni él pudiera desearla mejor ni más honrosa. 60

Luego se descubrió por la ribera un tropel de gallardos valencianos, que a ver venían la sin par galera;
todos con instrumentos en las manos de estilos y librillos de memoria, 65 por bizarría y por ingenio ufanos, codiciosos de hallarse en la vitoria, que ya tenían por segura y cierta, de las heces del mundo y de la escoria.

Pero Mercurio les cerró la puerta, 70 digo, no consintió que se embarcasen, y el porqué no lo dijo, aunque se acierta.

Y fue, porque temió que no se alzasen, siendo tantos y tales, con Parnaso,
y nuevo imperio y mando en él fundasen. 75

En esto, viose con brïoso paso venir al magno ANDRÉS REY DE ARTIEDA, no por la edad descaecido o laso;
hicieron todos espaciosa rueda,
y, cogiéndole en medio, le embarcaron, 80 más rico de valor que de moneda.

Al momento las áncoras alzaron, y las velas, ligadas a la antena, los grumetes apriesa desataron.

De nuevo por el aire claro suena 85 el son de los clarines, y de nuevo vuelve a su oficio cada cual sirena.

Miró el bajel por entre nubes Febo, y dijo en voz que pudo ser oída:
«Aquí mi gusto y mi esperanza llevo». 90

De remos y sirenas impelida, la galera se deja atrás el viento, con milagrosa y próspera corrida.

Leíase en los rostros el contento que llevaban los sabios pasajeros, 95 durable por no ser nada violento.

Unos por el calor iban en cueros;
otros, por no tener godescas galas,
en traje se vistieron de romeros.

Hendía en tanto las neptúneas salas 100 la galera, del modo como hiende la grulla el aire con tendidas alas.

En fin, llegamos donde el mar se estiende y ensancha y forma el golfo de Narbona, que de ningunos vientos se defiende. 105

Del gran Mercurio la cabal persona, sobre seis resmas de papel sentada, iba con cetro y con real corona;

cuando una nube, al parecer preñada,
parió cuatro poetas en crujía, 110
o los llovió (razón más concertada).

Fue el uno aquél de quien Apolo fía su honra: JUAN LUIS DE CASANATE, poeta insigne de mayor cuantía;

el mismo Apolo de su ingenio trate, 115
él le alabe, él le premie y recompense, que el alabarle yo sería dislate.

Al segundo llovido, el uticense Catón no le igualó, ni tiene Febo que tanto por él mire ni en él piense; 120 del contador GASPAR DE BARRIONUEVO, mal podrá el corto flaco ingenio mío loar el suyo así como yo debo.

Llenó del gran bajel el gran vacío el gran FRANCISCO DE RIOJA, al punto 125 que saltó de la nube en el navío.

A CRISTÓBAL DE MESA vi allí junto a los pies de Mercurio, dando fama
a Apolo, siendo dél propio trasumpto.

A la gavia un grumete se encarama, 130
y dijo a voces: «La ciudad se muestra que Génova, del dios Jano, se llama».

«Déjese la ciudad a la siniestra mano», dijo Mercurio; «el bajel vaya, y siga su derrota por la diestra». 135

Hacer al Tíber vimos blanca raya dentro del mar, habiendo ya pasado la ancha, romana y peligrosa playa.

De lejos viose el aire condensado del humo que el Estrómbalo vomita, 140 de azufre y llamas y de horror formado.

Huyen la isla infame, y solicita el süave poniente así el viaje, que lo acorta, lo allana y facilita.

Vímonos en un punto en el paraje 145 do la nutriz de Eneas piadoso hizo el forzoso y último pasaje.

Vimos desde allí a poco el más famoso monte que encierra en sí nuestro emisfero, más gallardo a la vista y más hermoso; 150 las cenizas de Títiro y Sincero están en él, y puede ser por esto nombrado entre los montes por primero.

Luego se descubrió donde echó el resto de su poder Naturaleza, amiga 155 de formar de otros muchos un compuesto.

Viose la pesadumbre sin fatiga de la bella Parténope, sentada a la orilla del mar, que sus pies liga, -21rde castillos y torres coronada, 160 por fuerte y por hermosa en igual grado tenida, conocida y estimada.

Mandóme el del alígero calzado que me aprestase y fuese luego a tierra a dar a los LUPERCIOS un recado, 165 en que les diese cuenta de la guerra temida, y que a venir les persuadiese al duro y fiero asalto, al ¡cierra, cierra!

«Señor», le respondí, «si acaso hubiese otro que la embajada les llevase, 170 que más grato a los dos hermanos fuese que yo no soy, sé bien que negociase mejor». Dijo Mercurio: «No te entiendo, y has de ir antes que el tiempo más se pase».

«Que no me han de escuchar estoy temiendo», 175 le repliqué; «y así, el ir yo no importa, puesto que en todo obedecer pretendo.

Que no sé quién me dice y quién me exhorta que tienen para mí, a lo que imagino, la voluntad, como la vista, corta. 180

Que si esto así no fuera, este camino con tan pobre recámara no hiciera, ni diera en un tan hondo desatino.

Pues si alguna promesa se cumpliera de aquellas muchas que al partir me hicieron, 185 lléveme Dios si entrara en tu galera.

Mucho esperé, si mucho prometieron, mas podía ser que ocupaciones nuevas les obligue a olvidar lo que dijeron.

Muchos, señor, en la galera llevas 190 que te podrán sacar el pie del lodo:
parte, y excusa de hacer más pruebas».
«Ninguno», dijo, «me hable dese modo, que si me desembarco y los embisto, voto a Dios, que me traiga al Conde y todo. 195 Con estos dos famosos me enemisto, que, habiendo levantado a la Poesía al buen punto en que está, como se ha visto, quieren con perezosa tiranía alzarse, como dicen, a su mano 200 con la ciencia que a ser divinos guía.
¡Por el solio de Apolo soberano juro...! Y no digo más». Y, ardiendo en ira, se echó a las barbas una y otra mano, y prosiguió diciendo: «El dotor MIRA, 205 apostaré, si no lo manda el Conde, que también en sus puntos se retira.
Señor galán, parezca: ¿a qué se asconde?
Pues a fee, por llevarle, si él no gusta, que ni le busque, aseche ni le ronde. 210 ¿Es esta empresa acaso tan injusta que se esquiven de hallar en ella cuantos tienen conciencia limitada y justa?
¿Carece el cielo de poetas santos, puesto que brote a cada paso el suelo 215 poetas, que lo son tantos y tantos?
¿No se oyen sacros himnos en el cielo?
¿La arpa de David allá no suena, causando nuevo accidental consuelo?
¡Fuera melindres! ¡Ícese la antena, 220 que llegue al tope!» Y luego obedecido fue de la chusma, sobre buenas buena.
Poco tiempo pasó, cuando un ruido se oyó, que los oídos atronaba, y era de perros áspero ladrado. 225 Mercurio se turbó, la gente estaba suspensa al triste son, y en cada pecho el corazón más válido temblaba.

En esto descubrióse el corto estrecho que Scila y que Caribdis espantosas 230 tan temeroso con su furia han hecho.

«Estas olas que veis presuntuosas en visitar las nubes de contino, y aun de tocar el cielo codiciosas, venciólas el prudente peregrino 235 amante de Calipso, al tiempo cuando hizo», dijo Mercurio, «este camino.

Su prudencia nosotros imitando, echaremos al mar en qué se ocupen, en tanto que el bajel pasa volando, 240 que en tanto que ellas tasquen, roan, chupen el mísero que al mar ha de entregarse, seguro estoy que el paso desocupen.

Miren si puede en la galera hallarse algún poeta desdichado, acaso, 245 que a las fieras gargantas pueda darse».

Buscáronle y hallaron a LOFRASO, poeta militar, sardo, que estaba desmayado a un rincón, marchito y laso; que a sus Diez libros de Fortuna andaba 250 añadiendo otros diez, y el tiempo escoge que más desocupado se mostraba.

Gritó la chusma toda: «¡Al mar se arroje;
vaya Lofraso al mar sin resistencia!»
«Por Dios», dijo Mercurio, «que me enoje. 255

¿Cómo, y no será cargo de conciencia, y grande, echar al mar tanta poesía, puesto que aquí nos hunda su inclemencia?

Viva Lofraso, en tanto que dé al día Apolo luz, y en tanto que los hombres 260 tengan discreta, alegre fantasía.

Tócante a ti, ¡oh Lofraso!, los renombres y epítetos de agudo y de sincero, y gusto que mi cómitre te nombres».

Esto dijo Mercurio al caballero, 265 el cual en la crujía en pie se puso con un rebenque despiadado y fiero.

Creo que de sus versos le compuso,
y no sé cómo fue, que, en un momento (o ya el cielo, o Lofraso lo dispuso), 270 salimos del estrecho a salvamento, sin arrojar al mar poeta alguno:
¡tanto del sardo fue el merecimiento!

Mas luego otro peligro, otro importuno temor amenazó, si no gritara 275 Mercurio cual jamás gritó ninguno, diciendo al timonero: «¡A orza, para, amáinese de golpe!» Y todo a un punto se hizo, y el peligro se repara.

«Estos montes que veis, que están tan junto 280 son los que Acroceraunos son llamados, de infame nombre, como yo barrunto».

Asieron de los remos los honrados, los tiernos, los melifluos, los godescos, y los de a cantimplora acostumbrados; 285

los fríos los asieron y los frescos;
asiéronlos también los calurosos,
y los de calzas largas y greguescos;
del sopraestante daño temerosos, todos a una la galera empujan 290 con flacos y con brazos poderosos.

Debajo del bajel se somurmulan las sirenas, que dél no se apartaron, y a sí mismas en fuerzas sobrepujan;
y en un pequeño espacio la llevaron 295 a vista de Corfú, y a mano diestra la isla inexpugnable se dejaron;
y, dando la galera a la siniestra, discurría de Grecia las riberas, adonde el cielo su hermosura muestra. 300

Mostrábanse las olas lisonjeras, impeliendo el bajel süavemente, como burlando con alegres veras.

Y luego, al parecer por el Oriente rayando el rubio sol nuestro horizonte 305 con rayas rojas, hebras de su frente, gritó un grumete y dijo: «El monte, el monte;

el monte se descubre donde tiene su buen rocín el gran Belorofonte».

Por el monte se arroja, y a pie viene 310
Apolo a recebirnos. «Yo lo creo», dijo Lofraso, «y llega a la Hipocrene.

Yo desde aquí columbro, miro y veo que se andan solazando entre unas matas las Musas con dulcísimo recreo: 315

unas antiguas son, otras novatas, y todas con ligero paso y tardo andan las cinco en pie, las cuatro a gatas».

«Si tú tal ves», dijo Mercurio, «¡oh sardo poeta!, que me corten las orejas, 320 o me tengan los hombres por bastardo.

Dime: ¿por qué algún tanto no te alejas de la ignorancia, pobretón, y adviertes lo que cantan tus rimas en tus quejas?

¿Por qué con tus mentiras nos diviertes 325 de recibir a Apolo cual se debe, por haber mejorado vuestras suertes?»

En esto, mucho más que el viento leve, bajó el lucido Apolo a la marina,
a pie, porque en su carro no se atreve. 330

Quitó los rayos de la faz divina, mostróse en calzas y en jubón vistoso, porque dar gusto a todos determina.

Seguíale detrás un numeroso escuadrón de doncellas bailadoras, 335 aunque pequeñas, de ademán bríoso.

Supe poco después que estas señoras, sanas las más, las menos malparadas, las del tiempo y del sol eran las Horas:

las medio rotas eran las menguadas; 340 las sanas, las felices, y con esto eran todas en todo apresuradas.

Apolo luego con alegre gesto abrazó a los soldados que esperaba para la alta ocasión que se ha propuesto; 345

y no de un mismo modo acariciaba a todos, porque alguna diferencia hacía con los que él más se alegraba; que a los de señoría y excelencia nuevos abrazos dio, razones dijo, 350 en que guardó decoro y preeminencia.

Entre ellos abrazó a don JUAN DE ARGUIJO, que no sé en qué, o cómo, o cuándo hizo tan áspero viaje y tan prolijo;

con él a su deseo satisfizo 355 Apolo, y confirmó su pensamiento:
mandó, vedó, quitó, hizo y deshizo.

Hecho, pues, el sin par recebimiento, do se halló don LUIS DE BARAHONA, llevado allí por su merecimiento, 360 del siempre verde lauro una corona le ofrece Apolo en su intención, y un vaso del agua de Castalia y de Helicon;

y luego vuelve el majestoso paso,
y el escuadrón pensado y de repente 365
le sigue por las faldas del Parnaso.

Llegóse, en fin, a la Castalia fuente,
y, en viéndola, infinitos se arrojaron, sedientos, al cristal de su corriente:

unos no solamente se hartaron, 370 sino que pies y manos y otras cosas algo más indecentes se lavaron; otros, más advertidos, las sabrosas aguas gustaron poco a poco, dando espacio al gusto, a pausas melindrosas. 375

El brindez y el caraos se puso en bando, porque los más de bruces, y no a sorbos, el süave licor fueron gustando;

de ambas manos hacían vasos corvos otros, y algunos de la boca al agua 380 temían de hallar cien mil estorbos.

Poco a poco la fuente se desagua, y pasa en los estómagos bebientes,
y aún no se apaga de su sed la fragua.

Mas díjoles Apolo: «Otras dos fuentes 385 aún quedan, Aganipe e Hipocrene, ambas sabrosas, ambas excelentes;
cada cual de licor dulce y perene, todas de calidad aumentativa del alto ingenio que a gustarlas viene». 390

Beben, y suben por el monte arriba, por entre palmas y entre cedros altos
y entre árboles pacíficos de oliva;
de gusto llenos y de angustia faltos, siguiendo a Apolo el escuadrón camina, 395 unos a pedicoj, otros a saltos.

Al pie sentado de una antigua encina, vi a ALONSO DE LEDESMA, componiendo una canción angélica y divina;

conocíle, y a él me fui corriendo 400 con los brazos abiertos como amigo, pero no se movió con el estruendo.

«¿No ves», me dijo Apolo, «que consigo no está Ledesma agora? ¿No ves claro que está fuera de sí y está conmigo?» 405

A la sombra de un mirto, al verde amparo, JERÓNIMO DE CASTRO seesteaba, varón de ingenio peregrino y raro;
un motete imagino que cantaba con voz süave; yo quedé admirado 410 de verle allí, porque en Madrid quedaba.

Apolo me entendió y dijo: «Un soldado como éste no era bien que se quedara entre el ocio y el sueño sepultado.

Yo le truje, y sé cómo, que a mi rara 415 potencia no la impide otra ninguna, ni inconveniente alguno la repara».

En esto, se llegaba la oportuna hora, a mi parecer, de dar sustento al estómago pobre, y más si ayuna. 420

Pero no le pasó por pensamiento a Delio, que el ejército conduce, satisfacer al mísero hambriento.

Primero a un jardín rico nos reduce,
donde el poder de la Naturaleza 425
y el de la industria más campea y luce.

Tuvieron los Hespérides belleza menor; no le igualaron los Pensiles en sitio, en hermosura y en grandeza; en su comparación, se muestran viles 430 los de Alcinoos, en cuyas alabanzas se han ocupado ingenios bien sotiles.

No sujeto del tiempo a las mudanzas, que todo el año primavera ofrece frutos en posesión, no en esperanzas, 435

Naturaleza y arte allí parece andar en competencia, y está en duda cuál vence de las dos, cuál más merece.

Muéstrase balbuciente y casi muda, si le alaba, la lengua más experta, 440
de adulación y de mentir desnuda.

Junto con ser jardín, era una huerta, un soto, un bosque, un prado, un valle ameno, que en todos estos títulos concierta, de tanta gracia y hermosura lleno, 445 que una parte del cielo parecía el todo del bellísimo terreno.

Alto en el sitio alegre Apolo hacía, y allí mandó que todos se sentasen a tres horas después de mediodía; 450 y porque los asientos señalasen el ingenio y valor de cada uno, y unos con otros no se embarazasen, a despecho y pesar del importuno ambicioso deseo, les dio asiento 455 en el sitio y lugar más oportuno.

Llegaban los laureles casi a ciento, a cuya sombra y troncos se sentaron algunos de aquel número contento; otros los de las palmas ocuparon; 460 de los mirtos y yedras y los robles también varios poetas albergaron.

Puesto que humildes, eran de los nobles los asientos cual tronos levantados, porque tú, ¡oh Envidia!, aquí tu rabia dobles. 465

En fin, primero fueron ocupados los troncos de aquel ancho circüito, para honrar a poetas dedicados, antes que yo en el número infinito hallase asiento; y así, en pie quedéme, 470 despechado, colérico y marchito.

Dije entre mí: «¿Es posible que se estreme en perseguirme la Fortuna airada, que ofende a muchos y a ninguno teme?»

Y, volviéndome a Apolo, con turbada 475 lengua le dije lo que oirá el que gusta saber, pues la tercera es acabada, la cuarta parte desta empresa justa.

Del Viaje del Parnaso, capítulo cuarto

Suele la indignación componer versos;
pero si el indignado es algún tonto, ellos tendrán su todo de perversos.

De mí yo no sé más sino que prompto me hallé para decir en tercia rima 5 lo que no dijo el desterrado a Ponto;
y así le dije a Delio: «No se estima, señor, del vulgo vano el que te sigue y al árbol sacro del laurel se arrima;
la envidia y la ignorancia le persigue, 10
y así, envidiado siempre y perseguido, el bien que espera por jamás consigue.

Yo corté con mi ingenio aquel vestido con que al mundo la hermosa Galatea salió para librarse del olvido. 15

Soy por quien La Confusa, nada fea, pareció en los teatros admirable, si esto a su fama es justo se le crea.

Yo, con estilo en parte razonable, he compuesto comedias que en su tiempo 20
tuvieron de lo grave y de lo afable.

Yo he dado en Don Quijote pasatiempo al pecho melancólico y mohíno, en cualquiera sazón, en todo tiempo.

Yo he abierto en mis Novelas un camino 25 por do la lengua castellana puede mostrar con propiedad un desatino.

Yo soy aquel que en la invención excede a muchos; y al que falta en esta parte, es fuerza que su fama falta quede. 30

Desde mis tiernos años amé el arte dulce de la agradable poesía, y en ella procuré siempre agradarte.

Nunca voló la pluma humilde mía por la región satírica: bajeza 35 que a infames premios y desgracias guía.

Yo el soneto compuse que así empieza, por honra principal de mis escritos:
¡Voto a Dios, que me espanta esta grandeza!

Yo he compuesto romances infinitos, 40
y el de Los celos es aquel que estimo, entre otros que los tengo por malditos.

Por esto me congojo y me lastimo de verme solo en pie, sin que se aplique árbol que me conceda algún arrimo. 45

Yo estoy, cual decir suelen, puesto a pique para dar a la estampa al gran Pirsiles, con que mi nombre y obras multiplique.

Yo, en pensamientos castos y sotiles, dispuestos en sonetos de a docena, 50
he honrado tres sujetos fregoniles.

También, al par de Filis, mi Silena resonó por las selvas, que escucharon más de una y otra alegre cantilena, y en dulces varias rimas se llevaron 55 mis esperanzas los ligeros vientos, que en ellos y en la arena se sembraron.

Tuve, tengo y tendré los pensamientos, merced al cielo que a tal bien me inclina, de toda adulación libres y esentos. 60

Nunca pongo los pies por do camina la mentira, la fraude y el engaño, de la santa virtud total rüina.

Con mi corta fortuna no me ensaño, aunque por verme en pie como me veo, 65
y en tal lugar, pondero así mi daño.

Con poco me contento, aunque deseo mucho». A cuyas razones enojadas, con estas blandas respondió Timbreo:

«Vienen las malas suertes atrasadas, 70
y toman tan de lejos la corriente, que son temidas, pero no escusadas.

El bien les viene a algunos de repente,
a otros poco a poco y sin pensallo,
y el mal no guarda estilo diferente. 75

El bien que está adquirido, conservallo con maña, diligencia y con cordura, es no menor virtud que el granjeallo.

Tú mismo te has forjado tu ventura, y yo te he visto alguna vez con ella, 80 pero en el imprudente poco dura.

Mas, si quieres salir de tu querella, alegre y no confuso, y consolado, dobla tu capa y siéntate sobre ella;
que tal vez suele un venturoso estado, 85 cuando le niega sin razón la suerte, honrar más merecido que alcanzado».

«Bien parece, señor, que no se advierte», le respondí, «que yo no tengo capa».
Él dijo: «Aunque sea así, gusto de verte. 90

La virtud es un manto con que tapa
y cubre su indecencia la estrechez, que esenta y libre de la envidia escapa».

Incliné al gran consejo la cabeza;
quedéme en pie, que no hay asiento bueno 95
si el favor no le labra o la riqueza.

Alguno murmuró, viéndome ajeno del honor que pensó se me debía, del planeta de luz y virtud lleno.

En esto pareció que cobró el día 100 un nuevo resplandor, y el aire oyóse herir de una dulcísima armonía.

Y, en esto, por un lado descubrióse del sitio un escuadrón de ninfas bellas, con que infinito el rubio dios holgóse. 105

Venía en fin y por remate dellas una resplandeciendo, como hace el sol ante la luz de las estrellas;
la mayor hermosura se deshace ante ella, y ella sola resplandece 110 sobre todas, y alegre y satisface.

Bien así semejaba cual se ofrece entre líquidas perlas y entre rosas la Aurora que despunta y amanece; la rica vestidura, las preciosas 115 joyas que la adornaban, competían con las que suelen ser maravillosas.

Las ninfas que al querer suyo asistían, en el gallardo brío y bello aspecto, las artes liberales parecían; 120 todas con amoroso y tierno afecto, con las ciencias más claras y escondidas, le guardaban santísimo respecto;
mostraban que en servirla eran servidas, y que por su ocasión de todas gentes 125 en más veneración eran tenidas.

Su influjo y su reflujo las corrientes del mar y su profundo le mostraban, y el ser padre de ríos y de fuentes.

Las yerbas su virtud la presentaban; 130 los árboles, sus frutos y sus flores;
las piedras, el valor que en sí encerraban.

El santo amor, castísimos amores;
la dulce paz, su quiétude sabrosa;
la guerra amarga, todos sus rigores. 135

Mostrábasele clara la espaciosa vía por donde el sol hace continuo su natural carrera y la forzosa.

La inclinación o fuerza del destino, y de qué estrellas consta y se compone, 140
y cómo influye este planeta o signo, todo lo sabe, todo lo dispone la santa y hermosísima doncella, que admiración como alegría pone.

Preguntéle al parlero si en la bella 145 ninfa alguna deidad se disfrazaba que fuese justo el adorar en ella; porque en el rico adorno que mostraba,
y en el gallardo ser que descubría, del cielo y no del suelo semejaba. 150

«Descubres», respondió, «tu bobería; que ha que la tratas infinitos años,
y no conoces que es la Poesía».

«Siempre la he visto envuelta en pobres paños», le repliqué; «jamás la vi compuesta 155 con adornos tan ricos y tamaños; parece que la he visto descompuesta, vestida de color de primavera en los días de cutio y los de fiesta».

«Esta, que es la Poesía verdadera, 160 la grave, la discreta, la elegante», dijo Mercurio, «la alta y la sincera, siempre con vestidura rozagante se muestra en cualquier acto que se halla, cuando a su profesión es importante. 165

Nunca se inclina o sirve a la canalla trovadora, maligna y trafalmeja, que en lo que más ignora menos calla.

Hay otra falsa, ansiosa, torpe y vieja, amiga de sonaja y morteruelo, 170 que ni tabanco ni taberna deja;

no se alza dos ni aun un coto del suelo, grande amiga de bodas y bautismos, larga de manos, corta de cerbelo.

Tómanla por momentos parasismos; 175
no acierta a pronunciar, y si pronuncia, absurdos hace y forma solecismos.

Baco, donde ella está, su gusto anuncia,
y ella derrama en coplas el poleo, con pa y vereda, y el mastranzo y juncia. 180

Pero aquesta que ves es el aseo, la gala de los cielos y la tierra,
con quien tienen las Musas su bureo;
ella abre los secretos y los cierra, toca y apunta de cualquiera ciencia 185 la superficie y lo mejor que encierra.

Mira con más ahínco su presencia:
verás cifrada en ella la abundancia de lo que en bueno tiene la excelencia;

moran con ella en una misma estancia 190 la divina y moral filosofía, el estilo más puro y la elegancia;
puede pintar en la mitad del día la noche, y en la noche más oscura el alba bella que las perlas cría; 195 el curso de los ríos apresura, y le detiene; el pecho a furia incita,
y le reduce luego a más blandura;
por mitad del rigor se precipita de las lucientes armas contrapuestas, 200 y da vitorias y vitorias quita.

Verás cómo le prestan las florestas sus sombras, y sus cantos los pastores, el mal sus lutos y el placer sus fiestas, perlas el Sur, Sabea sus olores, 205 el oro Tíbar, Hibla su dulzura, galas Milán y Lusitania amores.

En fin, ella es la cifra do se apura lo provechoso, honesto y deleitable, partes con quien se aumenta la ventura. 210

Es de ingenio tan vivo y admirable, que a veces toca en puntos que suspenden, por tener no sé qué de inescrutable.

Alábanse los buenos, y se ofenden los malos con su voz, y destos tales 215 unos la adoran, otros no la entienden.

Son sus obras heroicas inmortales;
las líricas, süaves de manera que vuelven en divinas las mortales.

Si alguna vez se muestra lisonjera, 220 es con tanta elegancia y artificio, que no castigo sino premio espera.

Gloria de la virtud, pena del vicio son sus acciones, dando al mundo en ellas de su alto ingenio y su bondad indicio». 225

En esto estaba, cuando por las bellas ventanas de jazmines y de rosas (que Amor estaba, a lo que entiendo, en ellas), divisé seis personas religiosas, al parecer de honroso y grave aspecto, 230 de luengas togas, limpias y pomposas.

Preguntéle a Mercurio: «¿Por qué efecto aquéllos no parecen y se encubren, y muestran ser personas de respecto?»

A lo que él respondió: «No se descubren, 235 por guardar el decoro al alto estado que tienen, y así el rostro todos cubren».

«¿Quién son», le repliqué, «si es que te es dado decirlo?» Respondióme: «No, por cierto, porque Apolo lo tiene así mandado». 240

«¿No son poetas?» «Sí». «Pues yo no acierto a pensar por qué causa se desprecian de salir con su ingenio a campo abierto.

¿Para qué se embobecen y se anecian, escondiendo el talento que da el cielo 245
a los que más de ser suyos se precian?

¡Aquí del rey! ¿Qué es esto? ¿Qué recelo o celo les impele a no mostrarse sin miedo ante la turba vil del suelo?

¿Puede ninguna ciencia compararse 250 con esta universal de la Poesía, que límites no tiene do encerrarse?

Pues, siendo esto verdad, saber querría, entre los de la carda, cómo se usa este miedo, o melindre, o hipocresía. 255

Hace monseñor versos y rehúsa que no se sepan, y él los comunica con muchos, y a la lengua ajena acusa;
y más que, siendo buenos, multiplica la fama su valor, y al dueño canta 260 con voz de gloria y de alabanza rica.

¿Qué mucho, pues, si no se le levanta testimonio a un pontífice poeta, que digan que lo es? Por Dios, que espanta.

Por vida de Lanfusa la discreta, 265 que si no se me dice quién son estos togados de bonete y de muceta, que con trazas y modos descompuestos tengo de reducir a behetría estos tan sosegados y compuestos». 270

«Por Dios», dijo Mercurio, «y a fee mía, que no puedo decirlo, y si lo digo, tengo de dar la culpa a tu porfía».

«Dilo, señor, que desde aquí me obligo de no decir que tú me lo dijiste», 275 le dije, «por la fe de buen amigo».

Él dijo: «No nos cayan en el chiste, llégate a mí, dirételo al oído, pero creo que hay más de los que viste:

aquél que has visto allí del cuello erguido, 280 lozano, rozagante y de buen talle, de honestidad y de valor vestido, es el doctor FRANCISCO SÁNCHEZ; dalle puede, cual debe, Apolo la alabanza, que pueda sobre el cielo levantalte; 285

y aun a más su famoso ingenio alcanza, pues en las verdes hojas de sus días nos da de santos frutos esperanza.

Aquél que en elevadas fantasías y en éstasis sabrosos se regala, 290 y tanto imita las acciones mías, es el maestro HORTENSIO, que la gala se lleva de la más rara elocuencia que en las aulas de Atenas se señala;

su natural ingenio con la ciencia 295
y ciencias aprendidas le levanta
al grado que le nombra la excelencia.

Aquél de amarillez marchita y santa, que le encubre de lauro aquella rama y aquella hojosa y acopada planta, 300 fray JUAN BAPTISTA CAPATAZ se llama:

descalzo y pobre, pero bien vestido con el adorno que le da la fama.

Aquél que del rigor fiero de olvido libra su nombre con eterno gozo, 305 y es de Apolo y las Musas bien querido, anciano en el ingenio y nunca mozo, humanista divino, es, según pienso, el insigne doctor ANDRÉS DEL POZO.

Un licenciado de un ingenio inmenso 310 es aquél, y, aunque en traje mercenario, como a señor le dan las Musas censo;

RAMÓN se llama, auxilio necesario con que Delio se esfuerza y ve rendidas las obstinadas fuerzas del contrario. 315

El otro, cuyas sienes ves ceñidas con los brazos de Dafne en triunfo honroso, sus glorias tiene en Alcalá esculpidas;

en su ilustre teatro vitorioso le nombra el cisne, en canto no funesto, 320 siempre el primero, como a más famoso;

a los donaires suyos echó el resto con propiedades al gorrón debidas, por haberlos compuesto o descompuesto.

Aquestas seis personas referidas, 325 como están en divinos puestos puestas, y en sacra religión constituidas, tienen las alabanzas por molestas que les dan por poetas, y holgarían llevar la loa sin el nombre a cuestras». 330

«¿Por qué», le pregunté, «señor, porfían los tales a escribir y dar noticia de los versos que paren y que crían?

También tiene el ingenio su codicia, y nunca la alabanza se desprecia 335 que al bueno se le debe de justicia.

Aquél que de poeta no se precia, ¿para qué escribe versos y los dice?
¿Por qué desdeña lo que más aprecia?

Jamás me contenté ni satisface 340 de hipócritas melindres: llanamente quise alabanzas de lo que bien hice».

«Con todo, quiere Apolo que esta gente religiosa se tenga aquí secreta», dijo el dios que presume de elocuente. 345

Oyóse, en esto, el son de una corneta, y un «¡trapa, trapa, aparta, afuera, afuera, que viene un gallardísimo poeta!»

Volví la vista y vi por la ladera del monte un postillón y un caballero 350 correr, como se dice, a la ligera;

servía el postillón de pregonero, mucho más que de guía, a cuyas voces en pie se puso el escuadrón entero.

Preguntóme Mercurio: «¿No conoces 355
quién es este gallardo, este brío?
Imagino que ya le reconoces».

«Bien sé», le respondí, «que es el famoso gran don SANCHO DE LEIVA, cuya espada y pluma harán a Delio venturoso; 360

venceráse sin duda esta jornada con tal socorro». Y, en el mismo instante, cosa que parecía imaginada, otro favor no menos importante para el caso temido se nos muestra, 365 de ingenio y fuerzas y valor bastante:

una tropa gentil por la siniestra parte del monte se descubre, ¡oh cielos, que dais de vuestra providencia muestra!

Aquel discreto JUAN DE VASCONCELOS 370
venía delante en un caballo bayo, dando a las musas lusitanas celos.

Tras él, el capitán PEDRO TAMAYO venía, y, aunque enfermo de la gota, fue al enemigo asombro, fue desmayo; 375 que por él se vio en fuga y puesto en rota, que en los dudosos trances de la guerra su ingenio admira y su valor se nota.

También llegaron a la rica tierra, puestos debajo de una blanca seña, 380 por la parte derecha de la sierra, otros, de quien tomó luego reseña Apolo; y era dellos el primero el joven don FERNANDO DE LODEÑA, poeta primerizo, insigne empero, 385 en cuyo ingenio Apolo deposita sus glorias para el tiempo venidero.

Con majestad real, con inaudita pompa llegó, y al pie del monte para quien los bienes del monte solicita: 390 el licenciado fue JUAN DE VERGARA el que llegó, con quien la turba ilustre en sus vecinos miedos se repara, de Esculapio y de Apolo gloria y lustre, si no, dígallo el santo bien partido, 395

y su fama la misma envidia ilustre.

Con él, fue con aplauso recibido el docto JUAN ANTONIO DE HERRERA, que puso en fil el desigual partido.

¡Oh, quién con lengua en nada lisonjera, 400 sino con puro afecto en grande exceso, dos que llegaron alabar pudiera!

Pero no es de mis hombros este peso:
fueron los que llegaron los famosos, los dos maestros CALVO y VALDIVIESO. 405

Luego se descubrió por los undosos llanos del mar una pequeña barca impelida de remos presurosos;

llegó, y al punto della desembarca el gran don JUAN DE ARGOTE Y DE GAMBOA, 410 en compañía de don DIEGO ABARCA, sujetos dignos de incesable loa;

y don DIEGO JIMÉNEZ Y DE ANCISO
dio un salto a tierra desde la alta proa.

En estos tres la gala y el aviso 415
cifró cuanto de gusto en sí contienen, como su ingenio y obras dan aviso.

Con JUAN LÓPEZ DEL VALLE otros dos vienen juntos allí, y es PAMONÉS el uno, con quien las Musas ojeriza tienen, 420

porque pone sus pies por do ninguno los puso, y con sus nuevas fantasías mucho más que agradable es importuno.

De lejas tierras por incultas vías llegó el bravo irlandés don JUAN BATEO, 425 Jerjes nuevo en memoria en nuestros días.

Vuelvo la vista, a MANTÜANO veo, que tiene al gran VELASCO por mecenas, y ha sido acertadísimo su empleo;

dejarán estos dos en las ajenas 430 tierras, como en las propias, dilatados sus nombres, que tú, Apolo, así lo ordenas.

Por entre dos fructíferos collados (¿habrá quien esto crea, aunque lo entienda?) de palmas y laureles coronados, 435

el grave aspecto del abad MALUENDA pareció, dando al monte luz y gloria y esperanzas de triunfo en la contienda;

pero, ¿de qué enemigos la vitoria no alcanzará un ingenio tan florido 440 y una bondad tan digna de memoria?

Don ANTONIO GENTIL DE VARGAS, pido espacio para verte, que llegaste de gala y arte y de valor vestido;

y, aunque de patria ginovés, mostraste 445 ser en las musas castellanas docto, tanto, que al escuadrón todo admiraste.

Desde el indio apartado del remoto mundo, llegó mi amigo MONTESDOCA, y el que anudó de Arauco el nudo roto; 450

dijo Apolo a los dos: «A entrambos toca defender esta vuestra rica estancia de la canalla de vergüenza poca,

la cual, de error armada y de arrogancia, quiere canonizar y dar renombre 455 inmortal y divino a la ignorancia;

que tanto puede la afición que un hombre tiene a sí mismo, que, ignorante siendo, de buen poeta quiere alcanzar nombre».

En esto, otro milagro, otro estupendo 460 prodigio se descubre en la marina, que en pocos versos declarar pretendo.

Una nave a la tierra tan vecina llegó, que desde el sitio donde estaba se ve cuanto hay en ella y determina; 465 de más de cuatro mil salmas pasaba (que otros suelen llamarlas toneladas), ancho de vientre y de estatura brava:

así como las naves que cargadas llegan de la oriental India a Lisboa, 470 que son por las mayores estimadas, ésta llegó desde la popa a proa cubierta de poetas, mercancía de quien hay saca en Calicut y en Goa.

Tomóle al rojo dios alferecía 475 por ver la muchedumbre impertinente que en socorro del monte le venía, y en silencio rogó devotamente que el vaso naufragase en un momento al que gobierna el húmido tridente. 480

Uno de los del número hambriento se puso en esto al borde de la nave, al parecer mohíno y malcontento;
y, en voz que ni de tierna ni süave tenía un solo adárame, gritando 485 dijo, tal vez colérico y tal grave, lo que impaciente estuve yo escuchando, porque vi sus razones ser saetas que iban mi alma y corazón clavando.

«¡Oh tú», dijo, «traidor, que los poetas 490 canonizaste de la larga lista, por causas y por vías indirectas!

¿Dónde tenías, magancés, la vista aguda de tu ingenio, que, así ciego, fuiste tan mentiroso coronista? 495

Yo te confieso, ¡oh bárbaro!, y no niego que algunos de los muchos que escogiste sin que el respeto te forzase o el ruego, en el debido punto los pusiste;
pero con los demás, sin duda alguna, 500 pródigo de alabanzas anduviste.

Has alzado a los cielos la fortuna de muchos que en el centro del olvido, sin ver la luz del sol ni de la luna, yacían; ni llamado ni escogido 505 fue el gran Pastor de Iberia, el gran BERNARDO que DE LA VEGA tiene el apellido.

Fuiste envidioso, descuidado y tardo, y a las Ninfas de Henares y pastores como a enemigos les tiraste un dardo; 510 y tienes tú poetas tan peores que éstos en tu rebaño, que imagino que han de sudar si quieren ser mejores; que si este agravio no me turba el tino, siete trovistas desde aquí diviso, 515
a quien suelen llamar de torbellino, con quien la gala, discreción y aviso tienen poco que ver, y tú los pones dos leguas más allá del Paraíso.

Estas quimeras, estas invenciones 520 tuyas te han de salir al rostro un día si más no te medidas y compones».

Esta amenaza y gran descortesía mi blando corazón llenó de miedo y dio al través con la paciencia mía. 525

Y, volviéndome a Apolo con denuedo mayor del que esperaba de mis años, con voz turbada y con semblante acedo le dije: «Con bien claros desengaños descubro que el servirte me granjea 530 presentes miedos de futuros daños.

Haz, ¡oh señor!, que en público se lea la lista que Cilenio llevó a España, porque mi culpa poca aquí se vea.

Si tu deidad en escoger se engaña, 535
y yo sólo aprobé lo que él me dijo, ¿por qué este simple contra mí se ensaña?

Con justa causa y con razón me aflijo de ver cómo estos bárbaros se inclinan a tenerme en temor duro y prolijo: 540

unos, porque los puse me abominan;
otros, porque he dejado de ponellos de darme pesadumbre determinan.

Yo no sé cómo me avendré con ellos:
los puestos se lamentan, los no puestos 545 gritan, yo tiemblo déstos y de aquéllos.

Tú, señor, que eres dios, dales los puestos que piden sus ingenios; llama y nombra los que fueren más hábiles y prestos.

Y porque el turbio miedo que me asombra 550
no me acabe, acabada esta contienda, cúbreme con tu mano y con tu sombra, o ponme una señal por do se entienda que soy hechura tuya y de tu casa, y así no habrá ninguno que me ofenda». 555

«Vuelve la vista y mira lo que pasa», fue de Apolo enojado la respuesta, que ardiendo en ira el corazón se abrasa.

Volvíla, y vi la más alegre fiesta, y la más desdichada y compasiva 560 que el mundo vio, ni aun la verá cual ésta.

Mas no se espere que yo aquí la escriba, sino en la parte quinta, en quien espero cantar con voz tan entonada y viva, que piensen que soy cisne y que me muero. 565

Del Viaje del Parnaso, capítulo quinto

Oyó el señor del húmido tridente las plegarias de Apolo, y escuchólas con alma tierna y corazón clemente;
hizo de ojo y dio del pie a las olas, y, sin que lo entendiesen los poetas, 5 en un punto hasta el cielo levantólas;
y él, por ocultas vías y secretas, se agazapó debajo del navío,
y usó con él de sus traidoras tretas.

Hirió con el tridente en lo vacío 10 del buco, y el estómago le llena de un copioso corriente amargo río.

Advertido el peligro, al aire suena una confusa voz, la cual resulta de otras mil que el temor forma y la pena; 15 poco a poco el bajel pobre se oculta en las entrañas del cerúleo y cano vientre, que tantas ánimas sepulta.

Suben los llantos por el aire vano de aquellos miserables, que suspiran 20 por ver su irreparable fin cercano; trepan y suben por las jarcias, miran cuál del navío es el lugar más alto, y en él muchos se apiñan y retiran.

La confusión, el miedo, el sobresalto 25 les turba los sentidos, que imaginan que desta a la otra vida es grande el salto;
con ningún medio ni remedio atinan;
pero, creyendo dilatar su muerte, algún tanto a nadar se determinan; 30 saltan muchos al mar de aquella suerte, que al charco de la orilla saltan ranas cuando el miedo o el ruido las advierte.

Hienden las olas, del romperse canas, menudean las piernas y los brazos, 35 aunque enfermos están y ellas no sanas;
y, en medio de tan grandes embarazos, la vista ponen en la amada orilla, deseosos de darla mil abrazos.

Y sé yo bien que la fatal cuadrilla, 40 antes que allí, holgara de hallarse en el Compás famoso de Sevilla; que no tienen por gusto el ahogarse (discreta gente al parecer en esto), pero valióles poco el esforzarse; 45 que el padre de las aguas echó el resto de su rigor, mostrándose en su carro con rostro airado y ademán funesto.

Cuatro delfines, cada cual bizarro, con cuerdas hechas de tejidas ovas 50 le tiraban con furia y con desgarro.

Las ninfas en sus húmidas alcobas sienten tu rabia, ¡oh vengativo nume!, y de sus rostros la color les robas.

El nadante poeta que presume 55
llegar a la ribera defendida, sus ayes pierde y su tesón consume;

que su corta carrera es impedida de las agudas puntas del tridente, entonces fiero y áspero homicida. 60

¿Quién ha visto muchacho diligente que en goloso a sí mismo sobrepuja (que no hay comparación más conveniente), picar en el sombrero la granuja, que el hallazgo le puso allí, o la sisa, 65 con punta alfileresca, o ya de aguja?

Pues no con menor gana o menor prisa, poetas ensartaba el nume airado con gusto infame y con dudosa risa.

En carro de cristal venía sentado, 70 la barba luenga y llena de marisco, con dos gruesas lampreas coronado;

hacían de sus barbas firme aprisco la almeja, el morsillón, pulpo y cangrejo, cual le suelen hacer en peña o risco. 75

Era de aspecto venerable y viejo;
de verde, azul y plata era el vestido, robusto al parecer y de buen rejo, aunque, como enojado, denegrado se mostraba en el rostro, que la saña 80 así turba el color como el sentido.

Airado, contra aquéllos más se ensaña que nadan más, y sádeles al paso, juzgando a gloria tan cobarde hazaña.

En esto (¡oh nuevo y milagroso caso, 85 digno de que se cuente poco a poco y con los versos de Torcato Taso!

Hasta aquí no he invocado, ahora invoco vuestro favor, ¡oh Musas!, necesario para los altos puntos en que toco; 90 descerrajad vuestro más rico almario, y el aliento me dad que el caso pide, no humilde, no ratero ni ordinario), las nubes hiende, el aire pisa y mide la hermosa Venus Acidalia, y baja 95 del cielo, que ninguno se lo impide.

Traía vestida de pardilla raja una gran saya entera, hecha al uso, que le dice muy bien, cuadra y encaja;

luto que por su Adonis se le puso 100 luego que el gran colmillo del berraco a atravesar sus ingles se dispuso.

A fe que si el mocito fuera maco, que él guardara la cara al colmilludo, que dio a su vida y su belleza saco. 105

¡Oh valiente garzón, más que sesudo!, ¿cómo, estando avisado, tu mal tomas, entrando en trance tan horrendo y crudo?

En esto, las mansísimas palomas que el carro de la diosa conducían 110 por el llano del mar y por las lomas, por unas y otras partes discurrían, hasta que con Neptuno se encontraron, que era lo que buscaban y querían.

Los dioses, que se ven, se respetaron, 115
y, haciendo sus zalemas a lo moro, de verse juntos en extremo holgaron.

Guardáronse real grave decoro, y procuró Ciprinia en aquel punto mostrar de su belleza el gran tesoro: 120 ensanchó el verdugado, y diole el punto con ciertos puntapiés, que fueron coces para el dios, que las vio y quedó difunto.

Un poeta, llamado don Quincoces, andaba semivivo en las saladas 125
ondas, dando gemidos y no voces;
con todo, dijo en mal articuladas palabras: «¡Oh señora, la de Pafo,
y de las otras dos islas nombradas, muévate a compasión el verme gafo 130 de pies y manos, y que ya me ahogo en otras linfas que las del garrafo.

Aquí será mi pira, aquí mi rogo, aquí será Quincoces sepultado, que tuvo en su crianza pedagogo!» 135

Esto dijo el mezquino; esto escuchado fue de la diosa con ternura tanta, que volvió a componer el verdugado;
y luego en pie y piadosa se levanta,
y, poniendo los ojos en el viejo, 140 desembudó la voz de la garganta, y, con cierto desdén y sobrecejo, entre enojada y grave y dulce, dijo lo que al húmido dios tuvo perplejo;
y, aunque no fue su razonar prolijo, 145 todavía le trujo a la memoria hermano de quién era y de quién hijo; representóle cuán pequeña gloria era llevar de aquellos miserables el triunfo infausto y la crüel vitoria. 150

Él dijo: «Si los hados inmutables no hubieran dado la fatal sentencia destos en su ignorancia siempre estables, una brizna no más de tu presencia que viera yo, bellísima señora, 155 fuera de mi rigor la resistencia.

Mas ya no puede ser, que ya la hora llegó donde mi blanda y mansa mano ha de mostrar que es dura y vencedora; que éstos, de proceder siempre inhumano, 160 en sus versos han dicho cien mil veces:
«azotando las aguas del mar cano...»

«Ni azotado ni viejo me pareces», replicó Venus. Y él le dijo a ella: «Puesto que me enamoras, no enterneces; 165 que de tal modo la fatal estrella influye destos tristes, que no puedo dar felice despacho a tu querella; del querer de los hados sólo un dedo no me puede apartar, ya tú lo sabes: 170 ellos han de acabar, y ha de ser cedo».

«Primero acabarás que los acabes», le respondió madama, la que tiene de tantas voluntades puerta y llaves; «que, aunque el hado feroz su muerte ordene, 175 el modo no ha de ser a tu contento, que muchas muertes el morir contiene».

Turbóse en esto el líquido elemento, de nuevo renovóse la tormenta, sopló más vivo y más apriesa el viento; 180

la hambrienta mesnada, y no sedienta, se rinde al huracán recién venido y, por más no penar, muere contenta.

¡Oh raro caso y por jamás oído ni visto! ¡Oh nuevas y admirables trazas 185 de la gran reina obedecida en Nido!:

en un instante, el mar de calabazas se vio cuajado, algunas tan potentes, que pasaban de dos y aun de tres brazas;

también hinchados odres y valientes, 190 sin deshacer del mar la blanca espuma, nadaban de mil talles diferentes.

Esta trasmutación fue hecha, en suma, por Venus, de los lánguidos poetas, porque Neptuno hundirlos no presuma; 195 el cual le pidió a Febo sus saetas, cuya arma, arrojadiza desde aparte,
a Venus defraudara de sus tretas.

Negóselas Apolo; y veis dó parte enojado el vejón, con su tridente 200 pensándolos pasar de parte a parte.

Mas éste se resbala, aquél no siente la herida, y dando esguince se desliza, y él queda de la cólera impaciente.

En esto Bóreas su furor atiza, 205 y lleva antecogida la manada, que con la de los Cerdas simboliza.

Pidióselo la diosa, aficionada a que vivan poetas zarabandos de aquellos de la seta almidonada; 210 de aquellos blancos, tiernos, dulces, blandos, de los que por momentos se dividen en varias setas y en contrarios bandos;

los contrapuestos vientos se comiden a complacer la bella rogadora, 215 y con un solo aliento la mar miden, llevando a la pñara gruñidora en calabazas y odres convertida, a los reinos contrarios del Aurora.

Desta dulce semilla referida, 220
España, verdad cierta, tanto abunda, que es por ella estimada y conocida;
que, aunque en armas y en letras es fecunda más que cuantas provincias tiene el suelo, su gusto en parte en tal semilla funda. 225

Después desta mudanza que hizo el cielo,
o Venus, o quien fuese, que no importa guardar puntualidad como yo suelo, no veo calabaza, o luenga o corta, que no imagine que es algún poeta 230 que allí se estrecha, encubre, encoge, acorta.

Pues ¿qué cuando veo un cuero? ¡Oh mal discreta y vana fantasía, así engañada, que a tanta liviandad estás sujeta!:

pienso que el piezgo de la boca atada 235 es la faz del poeta, transformado en aquella figura mal hinchada;

y cuando encuentro algún poeta honrado (digo poeta firme y valedero, hombre vestido bien y bien calzado), 240

luego se me figura ver un cuero, o alguna calabaza, y desta suerte entre contrarios pensamientos muero.

Y no sé si lo yerre o si lo acierte en que a las calabazas y a los cueros 245 y a los poetas trate de una suerte.

Cernícalos que son lagartijeros, no esperen de gozar las preeminencias que gozan gavilanes no pecheros.

Puestas en paz, pues, ya las diferencias 250 de Delio, y los poetas transformados en tan vanas y huecas apariencias, los mares y los vientos sosegados, sumergiósse Neptuno malcontento en sus palacios de cristal labrados. 255

Las mansísimas aves por el viento volaron, y a la bella Cipriana pusieron en su reino a salvamento.

Y, en señal que del triunfo quedó ufana (lo que hasta allí nadie acabó con ella), 260 del luto se quitó la saboyana, quedando en cuezo, tan briosa y bella, que se supo después que Marte anduvo todo aquel día y otros dos tras ella.

Todo el cual tiempo, el escuadrón estuvo 265 mirando atento la fatal rüina que la canalla transformada tuvo;

y, viendo despejada la marina, Apolo, del socorro mal venido, de dar fin al gran caso determina. 270

Pero en aquel instante un gran rüido se oyó, con que la turba se alborozaba y pone vista alerta y presto oído;
y era quien le formaba una carroza rica, sobre la cual venía sentado 275 el grave don LORENZO DE MENDOZA, de su felice ingenio acompañado, de su mucho valor y cortesía, joyas inestimables, adornado.

PEDRO JUAN DE REJAULE le seguía 280 en otro coche, insigne valenciano y grande defensor de la poesía.

Sentado viene a su derecha mano JUAN DE SOLÍS, mancebo generoso, de raro ingenio, en verdes años cano. 285

Y JUAN DE CARVAJAL, doctor famoso, les hace tercio, y no por ser pesado dejan de hacer su curso presuroso, porque al divino ingenio, al levantado valor de aquestos tres que el coche encierra, 290 no hay impedirle monte ni collado.

Pasan volando la empinada sierra,
las nubes tocan, llegan casi al cielo,
y alegres pisan la famosa tierra.

Con este mismo honroso y grave celo, 295
BARTOLOMÉ DE MOLA y GABRIEL LASO llegaron a tocar del monte el suelo.

Honra las altas cimas de Parnaso don DIEGO, que DE SILVA tiene el nombre, y por ellas alegre tiende el paso. 300

A cuyo ingenio y sin igual renombre toda ciencia se inclina y le obedece, y le levanta a ser más que de hombre.

Dilátanse las sombras y descrece el día, y de la noche el negro manto 305 guarnecido de estrellas aparece;

y el escuadrón, que había esperado tanto en pie, se rinde al sueño perezoso de hambre y sed, y de mortal quebranto.

Apolo, entonces poco luminoso, 310 dando hasta los antípodas un brinco, siguió su occidental curso forzoso;
pero primero licenció a los cinco poetas titulados, a su ruego, que lo pidieron con estraño ahínco, 315 por parecerles risa, burla y juego empresas semejantes; y así, Apolo concedió con sus deseos luego;
que es el galán de Dafne único y solo en usar cortesía sobre cuantos 320 descubre el nuestro y el contrario polo.

Del lóbrego lugar de los espantos sacó su hisopo el lánguido Morfeo, con que ha rendido y embocado a tantos;
y del licor que dicen que es leteo, 325 que mana de la fuente del olvido, los párpados bañó a todos arreo.

El más hambriento se quedó dormido;
dos cosas repugnantes, hambre y sueño, privilegio a poetas concedido. 330

Yo quedé, en fin, dormido como un leño, llena la fantasía de mil cosas, que de contallas mi palabra empeño, por más que sean en sí dificultosas.

Del Viaje del Parnaso, capítulo sexto

De una de tres causas los ensueños se causan, o los sueños, que este nombre les dan los que del bien hablar son dueños; primera, de las cosas de que el hombre trata más de ordinario; la segunda 5 quiere la medicina que se nombre del humor que en nosotros más abunda;
toca en revelaciones la tercera, que en nuestro bien más que las dos redundan.

Dormí, y soñé, y el sueño la primera 10 causa le dio principio suficiente a mezclar el ahíto y la dentera.

Sueña el enfermo, a quien la fiebre ardiente abrasa las entrañas, que en la boca tiene de las que ha visto alguna fuente, 15
y el labio al fugitivo cristal toca, y el dormido consuelo imaginado crece el deseo, y no la sed apoca.

Pelea el valentísimo soldado dormido casi al modo que despierto 20 se mostró en el combate fiero armado.

Acude el tierno amante a su concierto,
y en la imaginación, dormido, llega, sin padecer borrasca, a dulce puerto.

El corazón el avariento entrega 25 en la mitad del sueño a su tesoro, que el alma en todo tiempo no le niega.

Yo, que siempre guardé el común decoro en las cosas dormidas y despiertas, pues no soy troglodita ni soy moro, 30
de par en par del alma abrí las puertas, y dejé entrar al sueño por los ojos con premisas de gloria y gusto ciertas.

Gocé durmiendo cuatro mil despojos (que los conté sin que faltase alguno) 35 de gustos que acudieron a manojos;
el tiempo, la ocasión, el oportuno lugar correspondían al efecto, juntos y por sí solo cada uno.

Dos horas dormí y más a lo discreto, 40 sin que imaginaciones ni vapores el cerebro tuviesen inquieto;

la suelta fantasía entre mil flores me puso de un pradillo, que exhalaba de Pancaya y Sabea los olores; 45

el agradable sitio se llevaba tras sí la vista, que, durmiendo, viva mucho más que despierta se mostraba.

Palpable vi..., mas no sé si lo escriba, que a las cosas que tienen de imposibles 50 siempre mi pluma se ha mostrado esquivia;

las que tienen vislumbre de posibles, de dulces, de süaves y de ciertas, esplican mis borrones apacibles.

Nunca a disparidad abre las puertas 55 mi corto ingenio, y hállalas contino de par en par la consonancia abiertas.

¿Cómo pueda agradar un desatino, si no es que de propósito se hace, mostrándole el donaire su camino? 60

Que entonces la mentira satisface cuando verdad parece y está escrita con gracia, que al discreto y simple aplace.

Digo, volviendo al cuento, que infinita gente vi discurrir por aquel llano, 65 con algazara placentera y grita;

con hábito decente y cortesano algunos, a quien dio la hipocresía vestido pobre, pero limpio y sano;

otros, de la color que tiene el día 70 cuando la luz primera se aparece entre las trenzas de la Aurora fría.

La variada primavera ofrece de sus varias colores la abundancia, con que a la vista el gusto alegre crece; 75 la prodigalidad, la exorbitancia campean juntas por el verde prado con galas que descubren su ignorancia.

En un trono, del suelo levantado, do el arte a la materia se adelanta, 80 puesto que de oro y de marfil labrado, una doncella vi, desde la planta del pie hasta la cabeza así adornada, que el verla admira y el oírla encanta.

Estaba en él con majestad sentada, 85 giganta al parecer en la estatura, pero, aunque grande, bien proporcionada;
parecía mayor su hermosura mirada desde lejos, y no tanto si de cerca se ve su compostura. 90

Lleno de admiración, colmo de espanto, puse en ella los ojos, y vi en ella lo que en mis versos desmayados canto.

Yo no sabré afirmar si era doncella, aunque he dicho que sí, que en estos casos 95
la vista más aguda se atropella:

son, por la mayor parte, siempre escasos de razón los juicios maliciosos en juzgar rotos los enteros vasos.

Altaneros sus ojos y amorosos 100 se mostraban con cierta mansedumbre, que los hacía en todo extremo hermosos;
ora fuese artificio, ora costumbre, los rayos de su luz tal vez crecían,
y tal vez daban encogida lumbre. 105

Dos ninfas a sus lados asistían, de tan gentil donaire y apariencia, que, miradas, las almas suspendían;
de la del alto trono en la presencia desplegaban sus labios en razones 110 ricas en suavidad, pobres en ciencia;

levantaban al cielo sus blasones, que estaban, por ser pocos o ningunos, escritos del olvido en los borrones;
al dulce murmurar, al oportuno 115 razonar de las dos, la del asiento que en belleza jamás le igualó alguno, luego se puso en pie, y en un momento, me pareció que dio con la cabeza más allá de las nubes, y no miento; 120 y no perdió por esto su belleza;
antes, mientras más grande, se mostraba igual su perfección a su grandeza;
los brazos de tal modo dilatava, que de do nace a donde muere el día 125
los opuestos extremos alcanzaba;
la enfermedad llamada hidropesía así le hincha el vientre, que parece que todo el mar caber en él podía; al modo destas partes, así crece 130 toda su compostura; y no por esto, cual dije, su hermosura desfallece.
Yo, atónito, esperaba ver el resto de tan grande prodigio, y diera un dedo por saber la verdad segura y presto. 135 Uno, y no sabré quién, bien claro y quedo al oído me habló, y me dijo: «Espera, que yo decirte lo que quieres puedo.
Ésta que vees, que crece de manera que apenas tiene ya lugar do quepa, 140 y aspira en la grandeza a ser primera;
ésta que por las nubes sube y trepa hasta llegar al cerco de la luna (puesto que el modo de subir no sepa), es la que, confiada en su fortuna, 145 piensa tener de la inconstante rueda el eje quedo y sin mudanza alguna.
Ésta que no halla mal que le suceda, ni le teme, atrevida y arrogante, pródiga siempre, venturosa y leda, 150 es la que con disignio extravagante dio en crecer poco a poco hasta ponerse, cual ves, en estatura de gigante.

No deja de crecer por no atreverse a emprender las hazañas más notables, 155 adonde puedan sus extremos verse.

¿No has oído decir los memorables arcos, anfiteatros, templos, baños, termas, pórticos, muros admirables, que, a pesar y despecho de los años, 160 aún duran sus reliquias y entereza, haciendo al tiempo y a la muerte engaños?»

«Yo», respondí por mí, «ninguna pieza de esas que has dicho, dejo de tenella clavada y remachada en la cabeza: 165 tengo el sepulcro de la viuda bella y el Coloso de Rodas allí junto, y la lanterna que sirvió de estrella.

Pero vengamos de quién es al punto ésta, que lo deseo». «Haráse luego», 170 me respondió la voz en bajo punto.

Y prosiguió diciendo: «A no estar ciego, hubieras visto ya quién es la dama;
pero, en fin, tienes el ingenio lego.

Ésta que hasta los cielos se encarama, 175 preñada, sin saber cómo, del viento, es hija del Deseo y de la Fama.

Ésta fue la ocasión y el instrumento, el todo y parte de que el mundo viese no siete maravillas, sino ciento. 180

(Corto número es ciento; aunque dijese cien mil y más millones, no imagines que en la cuenta del número excediese).

Ésta condujo a memorables fines edificios que asientan en la tierra 185 y tocan de las nubes los confines.

Ésta tal vez ha levantado guerra donde la paz süave reposaba, que en límites estrechos no se encierra.

Cuando Mucio en las llamas abrasaba 190 el atrevido fuerte brazo y fiero, ésta el incendio horrible resfriaba; ésta arrojó al romano caballero en el abismo de la ardiente cueva, de limpio armado y de luciente acero; 195 ésta tal vez con maravilla nueva, de su ambiciosa condición llevada, mil imposibles atrevida prueba.

Desde la ardiente Libia hasta la helada Citia, lleva la fama su memoria, 200 en grandiosas obras dilatada.

En fin, ella es la altiva Vanagloria, que en aquellas hazañas se entremete que llevan de los siglos la vitoria.

Ella misma a sí misma se promete 205 triunfos y gustos, sin tener asida a la calva Ocasión por el copete.

Su natural sustento, su bebida, es aire, y así crece en un instante tanto, que no hay medida a su medida. 210

Aquellas dos del plácido semblante que tiene a sus dos lados, son aquellas que sirven a su máquina de Atlante.

Su delicada voz, sus luces bellas, su humildad aparente, y las lozanas 215 razones, que el amor se cifra en ellas, las hacen más divinas que no humanas, y son (con paz escucha y con paciencia) la Adulación y la Mentira, hermanas.

Éstas están contino en su presencia, 220 palabras ministrándola al oído que tienen de prudentes apariencia.

Y ella, cual ciega del mejor sentido, no ve que entre las flores de aquel gusto
el áspid ponzoñoso está escondido. 225

Y así, arrojada con deseo injusto, en cristalino vaso prueba y bebe el veneno mortal, sin ningún susto.

Quien más presume de advertido, pruebe a dejarse adular, verá cuán presto 230 pasa su gloria como el viento leve».

Esto escuché, y en escuchando aquesto, dio un estampido tal la Gloria vana, que dio a mi sueño fin dulce y molesto.

Y en esto descubrióse la mañana, 235 vertiendo perlas y esparciendo flores, lozana en vista y en virtud lozana:

los dulces pequeñuelos ruiseñores, con cantos no aprendidos, le decían, enamorados della, mil amores; 240

los silgueros el canto repetían, y las diestras calandrias entonaban la música que todos componían.

Unos del escuadrón priesa se daban porque no los hallase el dios del día 245 en los forzosos actos en que estaban.

Y luego se asomó su señoría, con una cara de tudesco roja, por los balcones de la Aurora fría, en parte gorda, en parte flaca y floja, 250 como quien teme el esperado trance donde verse vencido se le antoja.

En propio toledano y buen romance les dio los buenos días cortésmente, y luego se aprestó al forzoso lance; 255
y encima de un peñasco puesto enfrente del escuadrón, con voz sonora y grave esta oración les hizo de repente:

«¡Oh espíritus felices, donde cabe la gala del decir, la sutileza 260 de la ciencia más docta que se sabe; donde en su propia natural belleza asiste la hermosa Poesía entera de los pies a la cabeza!

No consintáis, por vida vuestra y mía 265 (mirad con qué llaneza Apolo os habla), que triunfe esta canalla que porfía.

Esta canalla, digo, que se endiablo, que, por darles calor su muchedumbre, ya su ruina, o ya la nuestra entabla. 270

Vosotros, de mis ojos gloria y lumbre, faroles do mi luz de asiento mora, ya por naturaleza o por costumbre, ¿habéis de consentir que esta embaidora, hipócrita gentalla se me atreva, 275 de tantas necedades inventora?

Haced famosa y memorable prueba de vuestro gran valor en este hecho, que a su castigo y vuestra gloria os lleva.

De justa indignación armad el pecho, 280 acometed intrépidos la turba, ociosa, vagamunda y sin provecho.

No se os dé nada, no se os dé una burba (moneda berberisca, vil y baja) de aquesta gente que la paz nos turba. 285

El son de más de una templada caja, y el del pífaro triste, y la trompeta, que la cólera sube y flema abaja, así os incite con virtud secreta, que despierte los ánimos dormidos 290 en la fación que tanto nos aprieta.

Ya retumba, ya llega a mis oídos del escuadrón contrario el rumor grande, formado de confusos alaridos;

ya es menester, sin que os lo ruegue o mande, 295 que cada cual, como guerrero experto, sin que por su capricho se desmande, la orden guarde y militar concierto,

y acuda a su deber como valiente hasta quedar o vencedor o muerto. 300

En esto, por la parte de poniente pareció el escuadrón casi infinito de la bárbara, ciega y pobre gente.

Alzan los nuestros al momento un grito alegre, y no medroso; y gritan: «¡Arma!» 305 «¡Arma!» resuena todo aquel distrito;

y, aunque mueran, correr quieren al arma.

Del Viaje del Parnaso, capítulo sétimo

Tú, belígera musa, tú, que tienes la voz de bronce y de metal la lengua, cuando a cantar del fiero Marte vienes;

tú, por quien se aniquila siempre y mengua el gran género humano; tú, que puedes 5 sacar mi pluma de ignorancia y mengua;

tú, mano rota y larga de mercedes,
digo en hacellas, una aquí te pido, que no hará que menos rica quedes.

La soberbia y maldad, el atrevido 10 intento de una gente malmirada, ya se descubre con mortal ruído.

Dame una voz al caso acomodada, una sutil y bien cortada pluma, no de afición ni de pasión llevada, 15 para que pueda referir en suma, con purísimo y nuevo sentimiento, con verdad clara y entereza suma, el contrapuesto y desigual intento de uno y otro escuadrón, que, ardiendo en ira, 20 sus banderas descoge al vago viento.

El del bando católico, que mira al falso y grande al pie del monte puesto, que de subir al alta cumbre aspira;

con paso largo y ademán compuesto, 25 todo el monte coronan, y se ponen a la furia, que en loca ha echado el resto;

las ventajas tantean, y disponen los ánimos valientes al asalto, en quien su gloria y su venganza ponen; 30

de rabia lleno y de paciencia falto, Apolo su bellísimo estandarte mandó al momento levantar en alto;

arbolóle un marqués, que el propio Marte su brïosa presencia representa 35 naturalmente, sin industria y arte;
poeta celebérriimo y de cuenta, por quien y en quien Apolo soberano su gloria y gusto y su valor aumenta.

Era la insinia un cisne hermoso y cano, 40 tan al vivo pintado, que dijeras la voz despide alegre al aire vano; siguen al estandarte sus banderas, de gallardos alféreces llevadas, honrosas por no estar todas enteras. 45

Las cajas a lo bélico templadas al mílite más tardo vuelven presto, de voces de metal acompañadas.

JERÓNIMO DE MORA llegó en esto, pintor excelentísimo y poeta: 50 Apeles y Virgilio en un supuesto;
y con la autoridad de una jineta (que de ser capitán le daba nombre) al caso acude y a la turba aprieta.

Y, porque más se turbe y más se asombre, 55
el enemigo desigual y fiero, llegó el gran BIEDMA, de inmortal renombre;
y con él GASPARD DE ÁVILA, primero secuaz de Apolo, a cuyo verso y pluma ICIAR puede envidiar, temer Sincero. 60

Llegó JUAN DE MESTANZA, cifra y suma de tanta erudición, donaire y gala, que no hay muerte ni edad que la consuma.

Apolo le arrancó de Guatemala, y le trujo en su ayuda para ofensa 65 de la canalla en todo extremo mala.

Hacer milagros en el trance piensa CEPEDA, y acompañaale MEJÍA, poetas dignos de alabanza inmensa.

Clarísimo esplendor de Andalucía 70 y de la Mancha, el sin igual GALINDO llegó con majestad y bizarría.

De la alta cumbre del famoso Pindo bajaron tres bizarros lusitanos, a quien mis alabanzas todas rindo, 75 con prestos pies y con valientes manos, con FERNANDO CORREA DE LA CERDA, pisó RODRÍGUEZ LOBO monte y llanos;
y porque Febo su razón no pierda, el grande don ANTONIO DE ATAÍDE 80
llegó con furia alborotada y cuerda.

Las fuerzas del contrario ajusta y mide con las tuyas Apolo, y determina dar la batalla, y la batalla pide.

El ronco son de más de una bocina, 85 instrumento de caza y de la guerra, de Febo a los oídos se avecina;
tiembla debajo de los pies la tierra de infinitos poetas oprimida, que dan asalto a la sagrada sierra. 90

El fiero general de la atrevida gente, que trae un cuervo en su estandarte, es ARBOLÁNCHEZ, muso por la vida.

Puestos estaban en la baja parte
y en la cima del monte, frente a frente, 95 los campos, de quien tiembla el mismo Marte, cuando una al parecer discreta gente del católico bando al enemigo se pasó, como en número de veinte.

Yo con los ojos su carrera sigo, 100
y, viendo el paradero de su intento, con voz turbada al sacro Apolo digo:

«¿Qué prodigio es aquéste? ¿Qué portento?
O, por mejor decir: ¿qué mal agüero, que así me corta el brío y el aliento? 105

Aquel transfuga que partió primero, no sólo por poeta le tenía, pero también por bravo churrullero;
aquel ligero que tras él corría, en mil corrillos en Madrid le he visto 110 tiernamente hablar en la poesía;

aquel tercero que partió tan listo, por satírico, necio y por pesado sé que de todos fue siempre malquisto.

No puedo imaginar cómo ha llevado 115
Mercurio estos poetas en su lista».

«Yo fui», respondió Apolo, «el engañado; que de su ingenio la primera vista indicios descubrió que serían buenos para facilitar esta conquista». 120

«Señor», repliqué yo, «creí que ajenos eran de las deidades los engaños;
digo, engañarse en poco más ni menos;
la prudencia, que nace de los años
y tiene por maestra la experiencia, 125 es la deidad que advierte destos daños».

Apolo respondió: «Por mi conciencia, que no te entiendo», algo turbado y triste
por ver de aquellos veinte la insolencia.

Tú, sardo militar, Lofraso, fuiste 130 uno de aquellos bárbaros corrientes que del contrario el número creciste.

Mas no por esta mengua los valientes del escuadrón católico temieron, poetas madrigados y excelentes; 135 antes, tanto coraje concibieron contra los fugitivos corredores, que riza en ellos y matanza hicieron.

¡Oh falsos y malditos trovadores, que pasáis plaza de poetas sabios, 140 siendo la hez de los que son peores:

entre la lengua, paladar y labios anda contino vuestra poesía, haciendo a la virtud cien mil agravios!

Poetas de atrevida hipocresía, 145 esperad, que de vuestro acabamiento ya se ha llegado el temeroso día.

De las confusas voces el concontento confuso por el aire resonaba, de espesas nubes condensando el viento. 150

Por la falda del monte gateaba una tropa poética, aspirando a la cumbre, que bien guardada estaba;
hacían hincapié de cuando en cuando,
y con hondas de estallo y con ballestas 155 iban libros enteros disparando;
no del plomo encendido las funestas balas pudieran ser dañosas tanto, ni al disparar pudieran ser más prestas.

Un libro mucho más duro que un canto 160
a JUSEPE DE VARGAS dio en las sienes, causándole terror, grima y espanto.

Gritó, y dijo a un soneto: «Tú, que vienes de satírica pluma disparado, ¿por qué el infame curso no detienes?» 165

Y, cual perro con piedras irritado, que deja al que las tira y va tras ellas, cual si fueran la causa del pecado, entre los dedos de sus manos bellas hizo pedazos al soneto altivo, 170 que amenazaba al sol y a las estrellas.

Y díjole Cilenio: «¡Oh rayo vivo donde la justa indignación se muestra en un grado y valor superlativo, la espada toma en la temida diestra, 175
y arrójate valiente y temerario por esta parte, que el peligro adiestra!»

En esto, del tamaño de un breviario volando un libro por el aire vino, de prosa y verso, que arrojó el contrario; 180 de verso y prosa el puro desatino nos dio a entender que de ARBOLANCHES eran las Habidas, pesadas de continuo.

Unas Rimas llegaron que pudieran desbaratar el escuadrón cristiano 185 si acaso vez segunda se imprimieran.

Dióle a Mercurio en la derecha mano una sátira antigua licenciosa, de estilo agudo, pero no muy sano.

De una intrincada y mal compuesta prosa, 190 de un supuesto sin jugo y sin donaire, cuatro novelas disparó PEDROSA.

Silbando recio y desgarrando el aire, otro libro llegó de Rimas solas, hechas al parecer como al desgaire. 195

Violas Apolo, y dijo, cuando violas: «Dios perdone a su autor, y a mí me guarde de algunas Rimas sueltas españolas».

Llegó el Pastor de Iberia, aunque algo tarde, y derribó catorce de los nuestros 200 haciendo de su ingenio y fuerza alarde;
pero dos valerosos, dos maestros, dos lumbreras de Apolo, dos soldados, únicos en hablar y en obrar diestros, del monte puestos en opuestos lados, 205 tanto apretaron a la turbamulta, que volvieron atrás los encumbrados.

Es GREGORIO DE ANGULO el que sepulta la canalla, y con él PEDRO DE SOTO, de prodigioso ingenio y vena culta. 210

Doctor aquél, estotro único y docto licenciado, de Apolo ambos secuaces, con raras obras y ánimo devoto.

Las dos contrarias indignadas haces ya miden las espadas, ya se cierran, 215 duras en su tesón y pertinaces;

con los dientes se muerden, y se aferran con las garras, las fieras imitando, que toda piedad de sí destierran.

Haldeando venía y trasudando 220 el autor de La Pícaro Justina, capellán lego del contrario bando;
y cual si fuera de una culebrina, disparó de sus manos su librazo, que fue de nuestro campo la ruina. 225

Al buen TOMÁS GRACIÁN mancó de un brazo, a MEDINILLA derribó una muela
y le llevó de un muslo un gran pedazo.

Una despierta nuestra centinela gritó: «¡Todos abajen la cabeza, 230 que dispara el contrario otra novela!»

Dos pelearon una larga pieza, y el uno al otro con instancia loca, de un envión, con arte y con destreza, seis seguidillas le encajó en la boca, 235 con que le hizo vomitar el alma, que salió libre de su estrecha roca.

De la furia el ardor, del sol la calma tenía en duda de una y otra parte la vencedora y pretendida palma. 240

Del cuervo, en esto, el lóbrego estandarte cede al del cisne, porque vino al suelo, pasado el corazón de parte a parte;

su alférez, que era un andaluz mozuelo, trovador repentista, que subía 245 con la soberbia más allá del cielo;

helósele la sangre que tenía;
murióse, cuando vio que muerto estaba, la turba, pertinaz en su porfía.

Puesto que ausente el gran LUPERCIO estaba, 250 con un solo soneto suyo hizo lo que de su grandeza se esperaba:

descuadernó, desencajó, deshizo del opuesto escuadrón catorce hileras, dos criollos mató, hirió un mestizo. 255

De sus sabrosas burlas y sus veras el magno cordobés un cartapacio disparó, y aterró cuatro banderas.

Daba ya indicios de cansado y lacio el brío de la bárbara canalla, 260 peleando más flojo y más despacio;
mas renovóse la fatal batalla, mezclándose los unos con los otros;
ni vale arnés, ni presta dura malla.

Cinco melifluos sobre cinco potros 265 llegaron, y embistieron por un lado, y lleváronse cinco de nosotros;

cada cual como moro ataviado, con más letras y cifras que una carta de príncipe enemigo y recatado. 270

De romances moriscos una sarta, cual si fuera de balas enramadas, llega con furia y con malicia harta;
y, a no estar dos escuadras avisadas de las nuestras, del recio tiro y presto 275 era fuerza quedar desbaratadas.

Quiso Apolo, indignado, echar el resto de su poder y de su fuerza sola, y dar al enemigo fin molesto,
y una sacra canción, donde acrisola 280

su ingenio, gala, estilo y bizarría BARTOLOMÉ LEONARDO DE ARGENSOLA, cual si fuera un petarte, Apolo envía adonde está el tesón más apretado, más dura y más furiosa la porfía. 285

Cuando me paro a contemplar mi estado, comienza la canción que Apolo pone en el lugar más noble y levantado.

Todo lo mira, todo lo dispone con ojos de Argos; manda, quita y veda, 290
y del contrario a todo ardid se opone.

Tan mezclados están, que no hay quien pueda discernir cuál es malo o cuál es bueno, cuál es garcilasista o timoneda.

Pero un mancebo, de ignorancia ajeno, 295 grande escudriñador de toda historia, rayo en la pluma y en la voz un trueno, llegó, tan rica el alma de memoria, de sana voluntad y entendimiento, que fue de Febo y de las Musas gloria; 300

con éste aceleróse el vencimiento, porque supo decir: «Éste merece gloria, pero aquél no, sino tormento».

Y, como ya con distinción parece el justo y el injusto combatiente, 305 el gusto al peso de la pena crece.

Tú, PEDRO MANTÜANO el excelente, fuiste quien distinguió de la confusa máquina el que es cobarde del valiente.

JULIÁN DE ALMENDÁREZ no rehúsa, 310 puesto que llegó tarde, en dar socorro al rubio Delio con su ilustre musa.

Por las rucias que peino, que me corro de ver que las comedias endiabladas por divinas se pongan en el corro; 315

y, a pesar de las limpias y atildadas del cómico mejor de nuestra Hesperia, quieren ser conocidas y pagadas.

Mas no ganaron mucho en esta feria, porque es discreto el vulgo de la Corte, 320 aunque le toca la común miseria.

De llano no le deis, dadle de corte, estancias polifemas, al poeta que no os tuviere por su guía y norte.

Inimitables sois, y a la discreta 325 gala que descubríis en lo escondido, toda elegancia puede estar sujeta.

Con estas municiones el partido nuestro se mejoró de tal manera, que el contrario se tuvo por vencido. 330

Cayó su presunción soberbia y fiera, derrúmbanse del monte abajo cuantos presumieron subir por la ladera.

La voz prolija de sus rancos cantos el mal suceso con rigor la vuelve 335 en interrotos y funestos llantos.

Tal hubo, que cayendo se resuelve de asirse de una zarza o cabrahígo, y en llanto, a lo de Ovidio, se disuelve.

Cuatro se arracimaron a un quejigo 340 como enjambre de abejas desmandada, y le estimaron por el lauro amigo.

Otra cuadrilla, virgen por la espada, y adúltera de lengua, dio la cura a sus pies, de su vida almidonada. 345

BARTOLOMÉ llamado DE SEGURA el toque casi fue del vencimiento:
tal es su ingenio y tal es su cordura.

Resonó en esto por el vago viento la voz de la vitoria, repetida 350 del número escogido en claro acento.

La miserable, la fatal caída, de las Musas del limpio TAGARETE fue largos siglos con dolor plañida;
a la parte del llanto, ¡ay me!, se mete 355 Zapardiel, famoso por su pesca, sin que un pequeño instante se quiète.

La voz de la vitoria se refresca; «¡vitoria!» suena aquí y allí, vitoria adquirida por nuestra soldadesca, 360 que canta alegre la alcanzada gloria.

Del Viaje del Parnaso, capítulo octavo

Al caer de la máquina excesiva del escuadrón poético arrogante que en su no vista muchedumbre estriba, un poeta, mancebo y estudiante, dijo: «Caí, paciencia; que algún día 5 será la nuestra, mi valor mediante.

De nuevo afilaré la espada mía, digo mi pluma, y cortaré de suerte que dé nueva excelencia a la porfía; que ofrece la comedia, si se advierte, 10 largo campo al ingenio, donde pueda librar su nombre del olvido y muerte.

Fue desto ejemplo JUAN DE TIMONEDA, que, con sólo imprimir, se hizo eterno, las comedias del gran LOPE DE RUEDA. 15

Cinco vuelcos daré en el propio infierno por hacer recitar una que tengo nombrada El gran bastardo de Salerno».

¡Guarda, Apolo, que baja (guarte, Rengo) el golpe de la mano más gallarda 20 que ha visto el tiempo en su discurso luengo!

En esto, el claro son de una bastarda alas pone en los pies de la vencida gente del mundo perezosa y tarda; con la esperanza del vencer perdida, 25
no hay quien no atienda con ligero paso, si no a la honra, a conservar la vida.

Desde las altas cumbres de Parnaso, de un salto uno se puso en Guadarrama, nuevo, no visto y verdadero caso; 30
y al mismo paso la parlera Fama cundió del vencimiento la alta nueva, desde el claro Caístro hasta Jarama.

Lloró la gran vitoria el turbio Esgueva, Pisuerga la rió, rióla Tajo, 35 que en vez de arena granos de oro lleva.

Del cansancio, del polvo y del trabajo las rubicundas hebras de Timbreo, del color se pararon de oro bajo;

pero, viendo cumplido su deseo, 40 al son de la guitarra mercuriesca hizo de la Gallarda un gran paseo, y de Castalia en la corriente fresca el rostro se lavó, y quedó luciente como de acero la segur turquesca. 45

Pulióse luego, y adornó su frente de majestad mezclada con dulzura, indicios claros del placer que siente.

Las reinas de la humana hermosura salieron de do estaban retiradas 50 mientras duraba la contienda dura;

del árbol siempre verde coronadas,
y en medio la divina Poesía, todas de nuevas galas adornadas.

Melpómene, Tersícore y Talía, 55
Polimnia, Urania, Erato, Euterpe y Clío, y Calíope, hermosa en demasía, muestran ufanas su destreza y brío, tejiendo una entricada y nueva danza al dulce son de un instrumento mío. 60

Mío, no dije bien; mentí a la usanza de aquel que dice propios los ajenos versos que son más dignos de alabanza.

Los anchos prados y los campos llenos están de las escuadras vencedoras 65 (que siempre van a más y nunca a menos), esperando de ver de sus mejoras el colmo con los premios merecidos por el sudor y aprieto de seis horas, piensan ser los llamados escogidos, 70 todos a premios de grandeza aspiran, tiénense en más de lo que son tenidos;

ni a calidades ni a riquezas miran:
a su ingenio se atiene cada uno,
y si hay cuatro que acierten, mil deliran. 75

Mas Febo, que no quiere que ninguno quede quejoso dél, mandó a la Aurora que vaya y coja in tempore oportuno, de las faldas floríferas de Flora cuatro tabaques de purpúreas rosas 80 y seis de perlas de las que ella llora;
y de las nueve por extremo hermosas las coronas pidió, y al darlas ellas en nada se mostraron perezosas.

Tres, a mi parecer, de las más bellas 85
a Parténope sé que se enviaron, y fue Mercurio el que partió con ellas;
tres sujetos las otras coronaron, allí en el mismo monte peregrinos, con que su patria y nombre eternizaron; 90 tres cupieron a España, y tres divinos poetas se adornaron la cabeza, de tanta gloria justamente dignos.

La Envidia, monstruo de naturaleza, maldita y carcomida, ardiendo en saña, 95
a murmurar del sacro don empieza.

Dijo: «¿Será posible que en España haya nueve poetas laureados?
Alta es de Apolo, pero simple hazaña».

Los demás de la turba, defraudados 100 del esperado premio, repetían los himnos de la Envidia mal cantados; todos por laureados se tenían en su imaginación, antes del trance, y al cielo quejas de su agravio envían. 105

Pero ciertos poetas de romance, del generoso premio hacer esperan,
a despecho de Febo, presto alcance;
otros, aunque latinos, desesperan de tocar del laurel sólo una hoja, 110 aunque del caso en la demanda mueran.

Véngase menos el que más se enoja,
y alguno se tocó sienes y frente, que de estar coronado se le antoja.

Pero todo deseo impertinente 115
Apolo resfrió, premiando a cuantos poetas tuvo el escuadrón valiente;
de rosas, de jazmines y amarantos Flora le presentó cinco cestones, y la Aurora, de perlas, otros tantos; 120 éstos fueron, lector dulce, los dones que Delio repartió con larga mano entre los poetísimos varones, quedando alegre cada cual y ufano con un puño de perlas y una rosa, 125 estimando el premio sobrehumano.

Y porque fuese más maravillosa la fiesta y regocijo que se hacía por la vitoria insigne y prodigiosa, la buena, la importante Poesía 130 mandó traer la bestia cuya pata abrió la fuente de Castalia fría; cubierta de finísima escarlata, un lacayo la trujo en un instante, tascando un freno de bruñida plata. 135

Envidiarle pudiera Rocinante al gran Pegaso de presencia brava, y aun Brilladoro, el del señor de Anglante.

Con no sé cuántas alas adornaba manos y pies, indicio manifiesto 140 que en ligereza al viento aventajaba;
y, por mostrar cuán ágil y cuán presto era, se alzó del suelo cuatro picas, con un denuedo y ademán compuesto.

Tú, que me escuchas, si el oído aplicas 145 al dulce cuento deste gran Viaje, cosas nuevas oirás de gusto ricas.

Era del bel trotón todo el herraje de durísima plata diamantina, que no recibe del pisar ultraje; 150 de la color que llaman columbina de raso en una funda trae la cola, que, suelta, con el suelo se avecina;

del color del carmín o de amapola eran sus clines, y su cola gruesa, 155 ellas solas al mundo, y ella sola.

Tal vez anda despacio, y tal apriesa, vuela tal vez, y tal hace corvetas, tal quiere relinchar, y luego cesa.

Nueva felicidad de los poetas: 160 unos sus escrementos recogían en dos de cuero grandes barjuletas.

Pregunté para qué lo tal hacían.
Respondióme Cilenio a lo bellaco, con no sé qué vislumbres de ironía: 165

«Esto que se recoge es el tabaco, que a los váguídos sirve de cabeza de algún poeta de cerebro flaco;

Urania de tal modo lo adereza, que, puesto a las narices del doliente, 170 cobra salud y vuelve a su entereza».

Un poco entonces arrugué la frente, ascos haciendo del remedio extraño, tan de los ordinarios diferente.

«Recibes», dijo Apolo, «amigo, engaño» 175 (leyóme el pensamiento). «Este remedio de los váguídos cura y sana el daño.

No come este rocín lo que en asedio duro y penoso comen los soldados, que están entre la muerte y hambre en medio; 180 son deste tal los piensos regalados ámbar y almizcle entre algodones puesto, y bebe del rocío de los prados;

tal vez le damos de almidón un cesto, tal de algarrobas, con que el vientre llena, 185
y no se estriñe ni se va por esto».

«Sea», le respondí, «muy norabuena;
tieso estoy de cerebro por ahora, váguido alguno no me causa pena».

La nuestra, en esto, universal señora, 190
digo la Poesía verdadera, que con Timbreo y con las Musas mora, en vestido subcinto, a la ligera, el monte discurrió y abrazó a todos, hermosa sobremodo y placentera. 195

«¡Oh sangre vencedora de los godos!», dijo, «de aquí adelante ser tratada con más süaves y discretos modos espero ser, y siempre respectada del ignorante vulgo, que no alcanza 200 que, puesto que soy pobre, soy honrada.

Las riquezas os dejo en esperanza, pero no en posesión, premio seguro que al reino aspira de la inmensa holganza.

Por la belleza deste monte os juro 205 que quisiera al más mínimo entregalle un privilegio de cien mil de juro.

Mas no produce minas este valle;
aguas sí, salutíferas y buenas,
y monas que de cisnes tienen talle. 210

Volved a ver, ¡oh amigos!, las arenas del aurífero Tajo en paz segura y en dulces horas de pesar ajenas.

Que esta inaudita hazaña os asegura eterno nombre en tanto que dé Febo 215 al mundo aliento y luz serena y pura».

¡Oh maravilla nueva, oh caso nuevo, digno de admiración que cause espanto, cuya estrañeza me admiró de nuevo!

Morfeo, el dios del sueño, por encanto 220 allí se apareció, cuya corona era de ramos de beleño santo.

Flojísimo de brío y de persona, de la Pereza torpe acompañado, que no le deja a vísperas ni a nona; 225

traía al Silencio a su derecho lado, el Descuido al siniestro, y el vestido era de blanda lana fabricado.

De las aguas que llaman del olvido traía un gran caldero, y de un hisopo 230 venía como apostá prevenido.

Así a los poetas por el hopo, y, aunque el caso los rostros les volvía en color encendida de piropo, él nos bañaba con el agua fría, 235 causándonos un sueño de tal suerte, que dormimos un día y otro día.

Tal es la fuerza del licor, tan fuerte es de las aguas la virtud, que pueden competir con los fueros de la muerte. 240

Hace el ingenio alguna vez que queden las verdades sin crédito ninguno, por ver que a toda contingencia exceden.

Al despertar del sueño así importuno, ni vi monte ni monta, dios ni diosa, 245 ni de tanto poeta vide alguno.

Por cierto, estraña y nunca vista cosa:
despabilé la vista, y parecióme verme en medio de una ciudad famosa.

Admiración y grima el caso diome; 250 torné a mirar, porque el temor o engaño no de mi buen discurso el paso tome.

Y díjeme a mí mismo: «No me engaño;
esta ciudad es Nápoles la ilustre, que yo pisé sus rúas más de un año; 255

de Italia gloria, y aun del mundo lustre, pues de cuantas ciudades él encierra, ninguna puede haber que así le ilustre:

apacible en la paz, dura en la guerra, madre de la abundancia y la nobleza, 260 de elíseos campos y agradable sierra.

Si váguídos no tengo de cabeza, paréceme que está mudada, en parte, de sitio, aunque en aumento de belleza.

¿Qué teatro es aquél, donde reparte 265 con él cuanto contiene de hermosura la gala, la grandeza, industria y arte?

Sin duda, el sueño en mis pálpabras dura, porque éste es edificio imaginado, que excede a toda humana compostura». 270

Llegóse en esto a mí disimulado un mi amigo, llamado Promontorio, mancebo en días, pero gran soldado.

Creció la admiración viendo notorio y palpable que en Nápoles estaba, 275 espanto a los pasados acesorio.

Mi amigo tiernamente me abrazaba, y, con tenerme entre sus brazos, dijo que del estar yo allí mucho dudaba; llamóme padre, y yo llaméle hijo; 280 quedó con esto la verdad en punto, que aquí puede llamarse punto fijo.

Díjome Promontorio: «Yo barrunto, padre, que algún gran caso a vuestras canas las trae tan lejos, ya semidifunto». 285

«En mis horas más frescas y tempranas esta tierra habité, hijo», le dije, «con fuerzas más bríosas y lozanas.

Pero la Voluntad, que a todos rige, digo el querer del cielo, me ha traído 290
a parte que me alegra más que aflige».

Dijera más, sino que un gran ruido de pífaros, clarines y tambores me azoró el alma y alegró el oído; volví la vista al son, vi los mayores 295 aparatos de fiesta que vio Roma en sus felices tiempos y mejores.

Dijo mi amigo: «Aquél que ves que asoma por aquella montaña contrahecha, cuyo brío al de Marte oprime y doma, 300 es un alto sujeto que deshecha tiene a la Envidia en rabia, porque pisa de la virtud la senda más derecha;
de gravedad y condición tan lisa, que suspende y alegra a un mismo instante, 305
y con su aviso al mismo aviso avisa.

Mas quiero, antes que pases adelante en ver lo que verás, si estás atento, darte del caso relación bastante.

Será Don JUAN DE TASIS de mi cuento 310 principio, por que sea memorable, y lleguen mis palabras a mi intento.

Este varón, en liberal notable,
que una mediana villa le hace conde, siendo rey en sus obras admirable; 315 éste, que sus haberes nunca esconde, pues siempre las reparte o las derrama, ya sepa adónde, o ya no sepa adónde;

éste, a quien tiene tan en fil la fama puesta la alteza de su nombre claro, 320 que liberal y pródigo le llama, quiso, pródigo aquí y allí no avaro, primer mantenedor ser de un torneo que a fiestas sobrehumanas le comparo.

Responden sus grandezas al deseo 325 que tiene de mostrarse alegre, viendo de España y Francia el regio himineo;

y éste que escuchas, duro, alegre estruendo, es señal que el torneo se comienza, que admira por lo rico y estupendo. 330

Arquímedes el grande se avergüenza de ver que este teatro milagroso su ingenio apoque y a sus trazas venza.

Digo, pues, que el mancebo generoso que allí deciente, de encarnado y plata, 335 sobre todo mortal curso brüoso, es el conde de Lemos, que dilata su fama con sus obras por el mundo,

y que lleguen al cielo en tierra trata;

y, aunque sale el primero, es el segundo 340 mantenedor, y en buena cortesía esta ventaja califico y fundo.

El duque de Nocera, luz y guía del arte militar, es el tercero mantenedor deste festivo día. 345

El cuarto, que pudiera ser primero, es de Santelmo el fuerte castellano, que al mismo Marte en el valor prefiero.

El quinto es otro Eneas el troyano, Arrociolo, que gana en ser valiente 350 al que fue verdadero, por la mano».

El gran concurso y número de gente estorbó que adelante prosiguiese la comenzada relación prudente; por esto le pedí que me pusiese 355 adonde sin ningún impedimento el gran progreso de las fiestas viese; porque luego me vino al pensamiento de ponerlas en verso numeroso, favorecido del febeo aliento. 360

Hízolo así, y yo vi lo que no oso pensar, no que decir, que aquí se acorta la lengua y el ingenio más curioso.

Que se pase en silencio es lo que importa, y que la admiración supla esta falta, 365 el mismo grandioso caso exhorta, puesto que después supe que con alta magnífica elegancia y milagrosa, donde ni sobra punto ni le falta, el curioso Don Juan de Oquina en prosa 370 la puso y dio a la estampa para gloria de nuestra edad, por esto venturosa.

Ni en fabulosa o verdadera historia se halla que otras fiestas hayan sido ni puedan ser más dignas de memoria. 375

Desde allí, y no sé cómo, fui traído adonde vi al gran duque de Pastrana mil parabienes dar de bienvenido, y que la fama, en la verdad ufana, contaba que agradó con su presencia 380
y con su cortesía sobrehumana;

que fue nuevo Alejandro en la excelencia del dar, que satisfizo a todo cuanto puede mostrar real magnificencia.

Colmo de admiración, lleno de espanto, 385
entré en Madrid en traje de romero, que es granjería el parecer ser santo;
y desde lejos me quitó el sombrero el famoso ACEVEDO, y dijo: «A Dio, voi siate il ben venuto, cavaliero. 390

So parlar zenoese, & tusco anch'io».
Y respondí: «La vostra signoria sia la ben trovata, patron mio».

Topé a LUIS VÉLEZ, lustre y alegría y discreción del trato cortesano, 395 y abracéle en la calle a mediodía.

El pecho, el alma, el corazón, la mano di a PEDRO DE MORALES, y un abrazo, y alegre recibí a JUSTINIANO.

Al volver de una esquina sentí un brazo 400 que el cuello me ceñía, miré cuyo, y más que gusto me causó embarazo, por ser uno de aquellos (no rehúyo decirlo) que al contrario se pasaron, llevados del cobarde intento suyo; 405 otros dos al soslayo se llegaron, y con la risa falsa del conejo
y con muchas zalemas me hablaron.

Yo, socarrón; yo, poetón ya viejo, volvíles a lo tierno las saludes, 410 sin mostrar mal talante o sobrecejo.

No dudes, ¡oh lector caro!, no dudes, sino que suele el disimulo a veces servir de aumento a las demás virtudes; dínoslo tú, David, que, aunque pareces 415 loco en poder de Aquís, de tu cordura, fingiendo el loco, la grandeza ofreces.

Dejélos, esperando coyuntura
y ocasión más secreta para dalles vejamen de su miedo o su locura. 420

Si encontraba poetas por las calles, me ponía a pensar si eran de aquellos huidos, y pasaba sin hablalles.

Poníanseme yertos los cabellos de temor no encontrase algún poeta, 425 de tantos que no pude conocellos, que, con puñal buido o con secreta almarada me hiciese un abujero que fuese al corazón por vía recta, aunque no es éste el premio que yo espero 430 de la fama que a tantos he adquirido con alma grata y corazón sincero.

Un cierto mancebito cuellierguido, en profesión poeta, y en el traje a mil leguas por godo conocido, 435 lleno de presunción y de coraje me dijo: «Bien sé yo, señor Cervantes, que puedo ser poeta, aunque soy paje.

Cargastes de poetas ignorantes,
y dejástesme a mí, que ver deseo 440 del Parnaso las fuentes elegantes.

Que caducáis sin duda alguna creo.
¿Creo? No digo bien; mejor diría que toco esta verdad y que la veo».

Otro, que, al parecer, de argentería, 445 de nácar, de cristal, de perlas y oro sus infinitos versos componía, me dijo, bravo cual corrido toro:
«No sé yo para qué nadie me puso en lista con tan bárbaro decoro». 450

«Así el discreto Apolo lo dispuso», a los dos respondí, «y en este hecho, de ignorancia o malicia no me acuso».

Fuime con esto, y, lleno de despecho, busqué mi antigua y lóbrega posada, 455
y arrojéme molido sobre el lecho; que cansa, cuando es larga, una jornada.

Adjunta al Parnaso

Algunos días estuve reparándome de tan largo viaje, al cabo de los cuales salí a ver y a ser visto, y a recibir parabienes de mis amigos y malas vistas de mis enemigos; que, puesto que pienso que no tengo ninguno, todavía no me aseguro de la común suerte.

Sucedió, pues, que saliendo una mañana del monesterio de Atocha, se llegó a mí un mancebo, al parecer de veinte y cuatro años, poco más o menos, todo limpio, todo aseado y todo crujendo gorgaranes; pero con un cuello tan grande y tan almidonado, que creí que para llevarle fueran menester los hombros de otro Adlante. Hijos deste cuello eran dos puños chatos, que, comenzando de las muñecas, subían y trepaban por las canillas del brazo arriba, que parecía que iban a dar asalto a las barbas. No he visto yo yedra tan codiciosa de subir desde el pie de la muralla donde se arrima hasta las almenas, como el ahínco que llevaban estos puños a ir a darse de puñadas con los codos. Finalmente, la exorbitancia del cuello y puños era tal, que en el cuello se escondía y sepultaba el rostro y en los puños los brazos.

Digo, pues, que el tal mancebo se llegó a mí, y con voz grave y reposada me dijo:

-¿Es, por ventura, vuesa merced el señor Miguel de Cervantes Saavedra, el que ha pocos días que vino del Parnaso?

A esta pregunta creo, sin duda, que perdí la color del rostro, porque en un instante imaginé y dije entre mí: «¿Si es éste alguno de los poetas que puse o dejé de poner en mi Viaje, y viene ahora a darme el pago que él se imagina se me debe?» Pero, sacando fuerzas de flaqueza, le respondí:

-Yo, señor, soy el mismo que vuesa merced dice; ¿qué es lo que se me manda?

Él, luego en oyendo esto, abrió los brazos y me los echó al cuello, y sin duda me besara en la frente si la grandeza del cuello no lo impidiera, y díjome:

-Vuesa merced, señor Cervantes, me tenga por su servidor y por su amigo, porque ha muchos días que le soy muy aficionado, así por sus obras como por la fama de su apacible condición.

Oyendo lo cual, respiré, y los espíritus, que andaban alborotados, se sosegaron; y, abrazándole yo también, con recato de no ahajarle el cuello, le dije:

-Yo no conozco a vuesa merced si no es para servirle; pero por las muestras bien se me trasluce que vuesa merced es muy discreto y muy principal: calidades que obligan a tener en veneración a la persona que las tiene.

Con estas pasamos otras corteses razones, y anduvieron por alto los ofrecimientos, y, de lance en lance, me dijo:

-Vuesa merced sabrá, señor Cervantes, que yo, por la gracia de Apolo, soy poeta, o lo menos deseo serlo, y mi nombre es Pancraccio de Roncesvalles.

MIGUEL.- Nunca tal creyera, si vuesa merced no me lo hubiera dicho por su misma boca.

PANCRACIO.- Pues, ¿por qué no lo creyera vuesa merced?

MIGUEL.- Porque los poetas por maravilla andan tan atildados como vuesa merced, y es la causa que, como son de ingenio tan altaneros y remontados, antes atienden a las cosas del espíritu que a las del cuerpo.

-Yo, señor -dijo él-, soy mozo, soy rico y soy enamorado; partes que deshacen en mí la flojedad que infunde la poesía. Por la mocedad, tengo brío; con la riqueza, con qué mostrarle; y con el amor, con qué no parecer descuidado.

-Las tres partes del camino -le dije yo-se tiene vuesa merced andadas para llegar a ser buen poeta.

PANCRACIO.- ¿Cuáles son?

MIGUEL.- La de la riqueza y la del amor. Porque los partos de los partos de la persona rica y enamorada son asombros de la avaricia y estímulos de la liberalidad, y en el poeta pobre la mitad de sus divinos partos y pensamientos se los llevan los cuidados de buscar el ordinario sustento. Pero dígame vuesa merced, por su vida: ¿de qué suerte de menestra poética gasta o gusta más?

A lo que respondió:

-No entiendo eso de menestra poética.

MIGUEL.- Quiero decir que a qué género de poesía es vuesa merced más inclinado: ¿al lírico, al heroico o al cómico?

-A todos estilos me amaño -respondió él-; pero en el que más me ocupo es en el cómico.

MIGUEL.- De esa manera, habrá vuesa merced compuesto algunas comedias.

PANCRACIO.- Muchas; pero sola una se ha representado.

MIGUEL.- ¿Pareció bien?

PANCRACIO.- Al vulgo, no.

MIGUEL.- ¿Y a los discretos?

PANCRACIO.- Tampoco.

MIGUEL.- ¿La causa?

PANCRACIO.- La causa fue que la achacaron que era larga en los razonamientos, no muy pura en los versos y desmayada en la invención.

-Tachas son esas -respondí yo-que pudieran hacer parecer mal a las del mismo Plauto.

-Y más -dijo él-, que no pudieron juzgalla, porque no la dejaron acabar, según la gritaron. Con todo esto, la echó el autor para otro día; pero, porfiar que porfiar, cinco personas vinieron apenas.-Créame vuesa merced -dije yo-que las comedias tienen días, como algunas mujeres hermosas; y que esto de acertarlas bien va tanto en la ventura como en el ingenio: comedia he visto yo apedreada en Madrid que la han laureado en Toledo, y no por esta primer desgracia deje vuesa merced de proseguir en componerlas, que podrá ser que, cuando menos lo piense, acierte con alguna que le dé crédito y dineros.

-De los dineros no hago caso -respondió él-: más preciaría la fama que cuanto hay. Porque es cosa de grandísimo gusto y de no menos importancia ver salir mucha gente de la comedia, todos contentos, y estar el poeta que la compuso a la puerta del teatro recibiendo parabienes de todos.

-Sus descuentos tienen esas alegrías -le dije yo-; que tal vez suele ser la comedia tan pésima, que no hay quien alce los ojos a mirar al poeta, ni aun él para cuatro calles del coliseo, ni aun los alzan los que la recitaron, avergonzados y corridos de haberse engañado y escogídola por buena.

-¿Y vuesa merced, señor Cervantes -dijo él-, ha sido aficionado a la carátula? ¿Ha compuesto alguna comedia?

-Sí -dije yo-, muchas; y, a no ser más, me parecieran dignas de alabanza, como lo fueron Los tratos de Argel, La Numancia, La gran turquesca, La batalla naval, La Jerusalem, La Amaranta o la del mayo, El bosque amoroso, La única y La bizarra Arsinda, y otras muchas de que no me acuerdo. Mas la que yo más estimo y de la que más me precio fue y es de una llamada La confusa, la cual, con paz sea dicho de cuantas comedias de capa y espada hasta hoy se han representado, bien puede tener lugar señalado por buena entre las mejores.

PANCRACIO.- ¿Y agora tiene vuesa merced algunas?

MIGUEL.- Seis tengo, con otros seis entremeses.

PANCRACIO.- Pues, ¿por qué no se representan?

MIGUEL.- Porque ni los autores me buscan, ni yo los voy a buscar a ellos.

PANCRACIO.- No deben de saber que vuesa merced las tiene.

MIGUEL.- Sí saben; pero, como tienen sus poetas paniaguados y les va bien con ellos, no buscan pan de trastrigo. Pero yo pienso darlas a la estampa, para que se vea de espacio lo que pasa apriesa y se disimula, o no se entiende, cuando las representan. Y las comedias tienen sus sazones y tiempos, como los cantares.

Aquí llegábamos con nuestra plática, cuando Pancracio puso la mano en el seno y sacó dél una carta con su cubierta, y, besándola, me la puso en la mano. Leí el sobrescrito y vi que decía desta manera:

A MIGUEL DE CERVANTES SAAVEDRA,

EN LA CALLE DE LAS HUERTAS,

FRONTERO DE LAS CASAS DONDE SOLÍA VIVIR

EL PRÍNCIPE DE MARRUECOS, EN MADRID.

AL PORTE, MEDIO REAL,

DIGO, DIECISIETE MARAVEDÍS.

Escandalizóme el porte, y de la declaración del medio real, digo diecisiete; y, volviéndosela, le dije:

-Estando yo en Valladolid, llevaron una carta a mi casa para mí, con un real de porte; recibíola y pagó el porte una sobrina mía, que nunca ella le pagara; pero diome por disculpa que muchas veces me había oído decir que en tres cosas era bien gastado el dinero: en dar limosna, en pagar al buen médico y en el porte de las cartas, ora sean de amigos o de enemigos; que las de los amigos avisan, y de las de los enemigos se puede tomar algún indicio de sus pensamientos. Diéronmela, y venía en ella un soneto malo, desmayado, sin garbo ni agudeza alguna, diciendo mal de Don Quijote; y de lo que me pesó fue del real, y propuse desde entonces de no tomar carta con porte. Así que, si vuesa merced le quiere llevar desta, bien se la puede volver; que yo sé que no me puede importar tanto como el medio real que se me pide.

Rióse muy de gana el señor Roncesvalles, y díjome:

-Aunque soy poeta, no soy tan mísero que me aficionen diez y siete maravedís. Advierta vuesa merced, señor Cervantes, que esta carta por lo menos es del mismo Apolo: él la escribió no ha veinte días en el Parnaso, y me la dio para que a vuesa merced la diese. Vuesa merced la lea, que yo sé que le ha de dar gusto.

-Haré lo que vuesa merced me manda -respondí yo-, pero quiero que, antes de leerla, vuesa merced me la haga de decirme cómo, cuándo y a qué fue al Parnaso.

Y él respondió:

-Cómo fui, fue por mar, y en una fragata que yo y otros diez poetas fletamos en Barcelona; cuándo fui, fue seis días después de la batalla que se dio entre los buenos y los malos poetas; a qué fui, fue a hallarme en ella, por obligarme a ello la profesión mía.

-A buen seguro -dije yo- que fueron vuestras mercedes bien recibidos del señor Apolo.

PANCRACIO.- Sí fuimos, aunque le hallamos muy ocupado a él y a las señoras Piérides, arando y sembrando de sal todo aquel término del campo donde se dio la batalla. Preguntéle para qué se hacía aquello, y respondiome que, así como de los dientes de la serpiente de Cadmo habían nacido hombres armados, y de cada cabeza cortada de la Hidra que mató Hércules habían renacido otras siete, y de las gotas de la sangre de la cabeza de Medusa se había llenado de serpientes toda la Libia, de la misma manera, de la sangre podrida de los malos poetas que en aquel sitio habían sido muertos comenzaban a nacer, del tamaño de ratones, otros poetillas rateros, que llevaban camino de henchir toda la tierra de aquella mala simiente; y que por esto se araba aquel lugar y se sembraba de sal, como si fuera casa de traidores.

En oyendo esto, abrí luego la carta y vi que decía: APOLO DÉLFICO

A MIGUEL DE CERVANTES SAAVEDRA

SALUD

El señor Pancracio Roncesvalles, llevador desta, dirá a vuesa merced, señor Miguel de Cervantes, en qué me halló ocupado el día que llegó a verme con sus amigos. Y yo digo que estoy muy quejoso de la descortesía que conmigo se usó en partirse vuesa merced deste monte sin despedirse de mí ni de mis hijas, sabiendo cuánto le soy aficionado, y las Musas por el consiguiente; pero si se me da por disculpa que le llevó el deseo de ver a su mecenas el gran conde de Lemos, en las fiestas famosas de Nápoles, yo la acepto y le perdono.

Después que vuesa merced partió deste lugar, me han sucedido muchas desgracias y me he visto en grandes aprietos, especialmente por consumir y acabar los poetas que iban naciendo de la sangre de los malos que aquí murieron; aunque ya, gracias al cielo y a mi industria, este daño está remediado.

No sé si del ruido de la batalla o del vapor que arrojó de sí la tierra empapada en la sangre de los contrarios, me han dado unos váguidos de cabeza, que verdaderamente me tienen como tonto, y no acierto a escribir cosa que sea de gusto ni de provecho; así, si vuesa merced viere por allá que algunos poetas, aunque sean de los más famosos, escriben y componen impertinencias y cosas de poco fruto, no los culpe ni los tenga en menos, sino que disimule con ellos; que, pues yo, que soy el padre y el inventor de la poesía, deliro y parezco mentecato, no es mucho que lo parezcan ellos.

Envío a vuesa merced unos privilegios, ordenanzas y advertimientos tocantes a los poetas; vuesa merced los haga guardar y cumplir al pie de la letra, que para todo ello doy a vuesa merced mi poder cumplido, cuanto de derecho se requiere. Entre los poetas que aquí vinieron con el señor Pancracio Roncesvalles, se quejaron algunos de que no iban en la lista de los que Mercurio llevó a España, y que así, vuesa merced no los había puesto en su Viaje. Yo les dije que la culpa era mía y no de vuesa merced; pero que el remedio deste daño estaba en que procurasen ellos ser famosos por sus obras, que ellas por sí mismas les darían fama y claro renombre, sin andar mendigando ajenas alabanzas.

De mano en mano, si se ofreciere ocasión de mensajero, iré enviando más privilegios y avisando de lo que en este monte pasare. Vuesa merced haga lo mismo, avisándome de su salud y de la de todos los amigos.

Al famoso VINCENTE ESPINEL dará vuesa merced mis encomiendas, como a uno de los más antiguos y verdaderos amigos que yo tengo.

Si don FRANCISCO DE QUEVEDO no hubiere partido para venir a Sicilia, donde le esperan, tóquele vuesa merced la mano, y dígale que no deje de llegar a verme, pues estaremos tan cerca; que cuando aquí vino, por la súbita partida, no tuve lugar de hablarle. Si vuesa merced encontrare por allá algún tráfuga de los veinte que se pasaron al bando contrario, no les diga nada, ni los aflija; que harta mala ventura tienen, pues son como demonios, que se llevan la pena y la confusión con ellos mismos doquiera que vayan.

Vuesa merced tenga cuenta con su salud, y mire por sí, y guárdese de mí, especialmente en los caniculares; que, aunque le soy amigo, en tales días no va en mi mano, ni miro en obligaciones ni en amistades.

Al señor Pancracio Roncesvalles téngale vuesa merced por amigo, y comuníquelo; y pues es rico, no se le dé nada que sea mal poeta.

Y con esto, nuestro Señor guarde a vuesa merced como puede y yo deseo.

Del Parnaso, a 22 de julio, el día que me calzo las espuelas para subirme sobre la Canícula, 1614.

Servidor de vuesa merced,

Apolo Lúcido. En acabando la carta, vi que en un papel aparte venía escrito:

PRIVILEGIOS, ORDENANZAS Y ADVERTENCIAS

QUE APOLO ENVÍA A LOS POETAS

ESPAÑOLES

Es el primero, que algunos poetas sean conocidos tanto por el desaliño de sus personas como por la fama de sus versos.

Ítem, que si algún poeta dijere que es pobre, sea luego creído por su simple palabra, sin otro juramento o averiguación alguna.

Ordénase que todo poeta sea de blanda y de suave condición, y que no mire en puntos, aunque los traiga sueltos en sus medias.

Ítem, que si algún poeta llegare a casa de algún su amigo o conocido, y estuvieren comiendo, y le convidare, que, aunque él jure que ya ha comido, no se le crea en ninguna manera, sino que le hagan comer por fuerza, que en tal caso no se le hará muy grande.

Ítem, que el más pobre poeta del mundo, como no sea de los Adanes y Matusalenes, pueda decir que es enamorado, aunque no lo esté, y poner el nombre a su dama como más le viniere a cuento: ora llamándola Amarili, ora Anarda, ora Clori, ora Filis, ora Fílida, o ya Juana Téllez, o como más gustare, sin que desto se le pueda pedir ni pida razón alguna.

Ítem, se ordena que todo poeta, de cualquiera calidad y condición que sea, sea tenido y le tengan por hijodalgo, en razón del generoso ejercicio en que se ocupa, como son tenidos por cristianos viejos los niños que llaman de la piedra.

Ítem, se advierte que ningún poeta sea osado de escribir versos en alabanzas de príncipes y señores, por ser mi intención y advertida voluntad que la lisonja ni la adulación no atraviesen los umbrales de mi casa.

Ítem, que todo poeta cómico que felizmente hubiere sacado a luz tres comedias, pueda entrar sin pagar en los teatros, si ya no fuere la limosna de la segunda puerta, y aun esta, si pudiere ser, la escuse.

Ítem, se advierte que si algún poeta quisiere dar a la estampa algún libro que él hubiere compuesto, no se dé a entender que por dirigirle a algún monarca el tal libro ha de ser estimado, porque si él no es bueno, no le adobará la dirección, aunque sea hecha al prior de Guadalupe.

Ítem, se advierte que todo poeta no se desprecie de decir que lo es; que si fuere bueno, será digno de alabanza; y si malo, no faltará quien lo alabe; que cuando nace la escoba, etc.

Ítem, que todo buen poeta pueda disponer de mí y de lo que hay en el cielo a su beneplácito; conviene a saber: que los rayos de mi cabellera los pueda trasladar y aplicar a los cabellos de su dama, y hacer dos soles sus ojos, que conmigo serán tres, y así andará el mundo más alumbrado; y de las estrellas, signos y planetas puede servirse de modo que, cuando menos lo piense, la tenga hecha una esfera celeste. Ítem, que todo poeta a quien sus versos le hubieren dado a entender que lo es, se estime y tenga en mucho, ateniéndose a aquel refrán: «Ruín sea el que por ruín se tiene».

Ítem, se ordena que ningún poeta grave haga corrillo en lugares públicos recitando sus versos; que los que son buenos, en las aulas de Atenas se habían de recitar, que no en las plazas.

Ítem, se da por aviso particular que si alguna madre tuviere hijos pequeñuelos traviesos y llorones, los pueda amenazar y espantar con el coco, diciéndoles: «Guardaos, niños, que viene el poeta fulano, que os echará con sus malos versos en la sima de Cabra o en el pozo Airón».

Ítem, que los días de ayuno no se entienda que los ha quebrantado el poeta que aquella mañana se ha comido las uñas al hacer de sus versos.

Ítem, se ordena que todo poeta que diere en ser espadachín, valentón y arrojado, por aquella parte de la valentía se le desagüe y vaya la fama que podía alcanzar por sus buenos versos.

Ítem, se advierte que no ha de ser tenido por ladrón el poeta que hurtare algún verso ajeno y le encajare entre los suyos, como no sea todo el concepto y toda la copla entera, que en tal caso tan ladrón es como Caco.

Ítem, que todo buen poeta, aunque no haya compuesto poema heroico, ni sacado al teatro del mundo obras grandes, con cualesquiera, aunque sean pocas, pueda alcanzar renombre de divino, como le alcanzaron Garcilaso de la Vega, Francisco de Figueroa, el capitán Francisco de Aldana y Hernando de Herrera.

Ítem, se da aviso que si algún poeta fuere favorecido de algún príncipe, ni le visite a menudo ni le pida nada, sino déjese llevar de la corriente de su ventura; que el que tiene providencia de sustentar las sabandijas de la tierra y los gusarapos del agua, la tendrá de alimentar a un poeta, por sabandija que sea. En suma, estos fueron los privilegios, advertencias y ordenanzas que Apolo me envió y el señor Pancracio de Roncesvalles me trujo, con quien quedé en mucha amistad; y los dos quedamos de concierto de despachar un propio con la respuesta al señor Apolo, con las nuevas desta Corte. Daráse noticia del día, para que todos sus aficionados le escriban.

The Criticism

A LECTURE ON 'DON QUIXOTE' by Samuel Taylor Coleridge

CERVANTES.

Born at Madrid, 1547;-Shakspeare, 1564; both put off mortality on the same day, the 23rd of April, 1616, — the one in the sixty-ninth, the other in the fifty-second, year of his life. The resemblance in their physiognomies is striking, but with a predominance of acuteness in Cervantes, and of reflection in Shakspeare, which is the specific difference between the Spanish and English characters of mind.

I. The nature and eminence of Symbolical writing; —

II. Madness, and its different sorts, (considered without pretension to medical science); —

To each of these, or at least to my own notions respecting them, I must devote a few words of explanation, in order to render the after critique on Don Quixote, the master work of Cervantes' and his country's genius easily and throughout intelligible. This is not the least valuable, though it may most often be felt by us both as the heaviest and least entertaining portion of these critical disquisitions: for without it, I must have foregone one at least of the two appropriate objects of a Lecture, that of interesting you during its delivery, and of leaving behind in your minds the germs of after-thought, and the materials for future enjoyment. To have been assured by several of my intelligent auditors that they have reperused Hamlet or Othello with increased satisfaction in consequence of the new points of view in which I had placed those characters — is the highest compliment I could receive or desire; and should the address of this evening open out a new source of pleasure, or enlarge the former in your perusal of Don Quixote, it will compensate for the failure of any personal or temporary object.

I. The Symbolical cannot, perhaps, be better defined in distinction from the Allegorical, than that it is always itself a part of that, of the whole of which it is the representative.— “Here comes a sail,” — (that is, a ship) is a symbolical expression. “Behold our lion!” when we speak of some gallant soldier, is allegorical. Of most importance to our present subject is this point, that the latter (the allegory) cannot be other than spoken consciously; — whereas in the former (the symbol) it is very possible that the general truth represented may be working unconsciously in the writer's mind during the construction of the symbol; — and it proves itself by being produced out of his own mind, — as the Don Quixote out of the perfectly sane mind of Cervantes, and not by outward observation, or historically. The advantage of symbolical writing over allegory is, that it presumes no disjunction of faculties, but simple predominance.

II. Madness may be divided as —

1. hypochondriasis; or, the man is out of his senses.
2. derangement of the understanding; or, the man is out of his wits.
3. loss of reason.
4. frenzy, or derangement of the sensations.

Cervantes's own preface to Don Quixote is a perfect model of the gentle, every where intelligible, irony in the best essays of the Tatler and the Spectator. Equally natural and easy, Cervantes is more spirited than Addison; whilst he blends with the terseness of Swift, an exquisite flow and music of style, and above all, contrasts with the latter by the sweet temper of a superior mind, which saw the follies of mankind, and was even at the moment suffering severely under hard mistreatment; and yet seems every where to have but one thought as the undersong— “Brethren! with all your faults I love you still!” — or as a mother that chides the child she loves, with one hand holds up the rod, and with the other wipes off each tear as it drops!

Don Quixote was neither fettered to the earth by want, nor holden in its embraces by wealth; — of which, with the temperance natural to his country, as a Spaniard, he had both far too little, and somewhat too much, to be under any necessity of thinking about it. His age too, fifty, may be well supposed to prevent his mind from being tempted out of itself by any of the lower passions; — while his habits, as a very early riser and a keen sportsman, were such as kept his spare body in serviceable subjection to his will, and yet by the play of hope that accompanies pursuit, not only permitted, but assisted, his fancy in shaping what it would. Nor must we omit his meagerness and entire featureliness, face and frame, which Cervantes gives us at once: “It is said that his surname was ‘Quixada’ or ‘Quesada,’” &c. — even in this trifle showing an exquisite judgment; — just once insinuating the association of ‘lantern-jaws’ into the reader's mind, yet not retaining it obtrusively like the names in old farces and in the Pilgrim's Progress, — but taking for the regular appellative one which had the no meaning of a proper name in real life, and which yet was capable of recalling a number of very different, but all pertinent, recollections, as old armour, the precious metals hidden in the ore, &c. Don Quixote's leanness and featureliness are happy exponents of the excess of the formative or imaginative in him, contrasted with Sancho's plump rotundity, and reciprocity of external impression.

He has no knowledge of the sciences or scientific arts which give to the meanest portions of matter an intellectual interest, and which enable the mind to decypher in the world of the senses the invisible agency — that alone, of which the world's phenomena are the effects and manifestations, — and thus, as in a mirror, to contemplate its own reflex, its life in the powers, its imagination in the symbolic forms, its moral instincts in the final causes, and its reason in the laws of material nature: but — estranged from all the motives to observation from self-interest — the persons that surround him too few and too familiar to enter into any connection with his thoughts, or to require any adaptation of his conduct to their particular characters or relations to himself — his judgment lies fallow, with nothing to excite, nothing to employ it. Yet, — and here is the point, where genius even of the most perfect kind, allotted but to few in the course of many ages, does not preclude the necessity in part, and in part counterbalance the craving by sanity of judgment, without which genius either cannot be, or cannot at least manifest itself, — the dependency of our nature asks for some confirmation from without, though it be only from the shadows of other men's fictions.

Too uninformed, and with too narrow a sphere of power and opportunity to rise into the scientific artist, or to be himself a patron of art, and with too deep a principle and too much innocence to become a mere projector, Don Quixote has recourse to romances: —

His curiosity and extravagant fondness herein arrived at that pitch, that he sold many acres of arable land to purchase books of knight-errantry, and carried home all he could lay hands on of that kind! (C.I.)

The more remote these romances were from the language of common life, the more akin on that very account were they to the shapeless dreams and strivings of his own mind; — a mind, which possessed not the highest order of genius which lives in an atmosphere of power over mankind, but that minor kind which, in its restlessness, seeks for a vivid representative of its own wishes, and substitutes the movements of that objective puppet for an exercise of actual power in and by itself. The more wild and improbable these romances were, the more were they akin to his will, which had been in the habit of acting as an unlimited monarch over the creations of his fancy! Hence observe how the startling of the remaining common sense, like a glimmering before its death, in the notice of the impossible-improbable of Don Belianis, is dismissed by Don Quixote as impertinent: —

'He had some doubt' as to the dreadful wounds which Don Belianis gave and received: for he imagined, that notwithstanding the most expert surgeons had cured him, his face and whole body must still be full of seams and scars. 'Nevertheless' he commended in his author the concluding his book with a promise of that unfinishable adventure! C. 1.

Hence also his first intention to turn author; but who, with such a restless struggle within him, could content himself with writing in a remote village among apathists and ignorants? During his colloquies with the village priest and the barber surgeon, in which the fervour of critical controversy feeds the passion and gives reality to its object — what more natural than that the mental striving should become an eddy? — madness may perhaps be denned as the circling in a stream which should be progressive and adaptive: Don Quixote grows at length to be a man out of his wits; his understanding is deranged; and hence without the least deviation from the truth of nature, without losing the least trait of personal individuality, he becomes a substantial living allegory, or personification of the reason and the moral sense, divested of the judgment and the understanding. Sancho is the converse. He is the common sense without reason or imagination; and Cervantes not only shows the excellence and power of reason in, Don Quixote, but in both him and Sancho the mischiefs resulting from a severance of the two main constituents of sound intellectual and moral action. Put him and his master together, and they form a perfect intellect; but they are separated and without cement; and hence each having a need of the other for its own completeness, each has at times a mastery over the other. For the common sense, although it may see the practical inapplicability of the dictates of the imagination or abstract reason, yet cannot help submitting to them. These two characters possess the world, alternately and interchangeably the cheater and the cheated. To impersonate them, and to combine the permanent with the individual, is one of the highest creations of genius, and has been achieved by Cervantes and Shakspeare, almost alone.

Observations on particular passages,

(B. I. c. 1.)

But not altogether approving of his having broken it to pieces with so much ease, to secure himself from the like danger for the future, he made it over again, fencing it with small bars of iron within, in such a manner, 'that he rested satisfied of its strength; and without caring to make a fresh experiment on it, he approved and looked upon it as a most excellent helmet.'

His not trying his improved scull-cap is an exquisite trait of human character, founded on the oppugnancy of the soul in such a state to any disturbance by doubt of its own broodings. Even the long deliberation about his horse's name is full of meaning; — for in these day-dreams the greater part of the history passes and is carried on in words, which look forward to other words as what will be said of them.

(Ib.)

Near the place where he lived, there dwelt a very comely country lass, with whom he had formerly been in love; though, as it is supposed, she never knew it, nor troubled herself about it.

The nascent love for the country lass, but without any attempt at utterance, or an opportunity of knowing her, except as the hint — the [Greek (transliterated): oti esti] — of the inward imagination, is happily conceived in both parts; — first, as confirmative of the shrinking back of the mind on itself, and its dread of having a cherished image destroyed by its own judgment; and secondly, as showing how necessarily love is the passion of novels. Novels are to love as fairy tales to dreams. I never knew but two men of taste and feeling who could not understand why I was delighted with the Arabian Nights' Tales, and they were likewise the only persons in my knowledge who scarcely remembered having ever dreamed. Magic and war — itself a magic — are the day-dreams of childhood; love is the day-dream of youth and early manhood.

(C. 2.)

"Scarcely had ruddy Phoebus spread the golden tresses of his beauteous hair over the face of the wide and spacious earth; and scarcely had the little painted birds, with the sweet and mellifluous harmony of their forked tongues, saluted the approach of rosy Aurora, who, quitting the soft couch of her jealous husband, disclosed herself to mortals through the gates of the Mauchegan horizon; when the renowned Don Quixote," &c.

How happily already is the abstraction from the senses, from observation, and the consequent confusion of the judgment, marked in this description! The knight is describing objects immediate to his senses and sensations without borrowing a single trait from either. Would it be difficult to find parallel descriptions in Dryden's plays and in those of his successors?

(C. 3.) The host is here happily conceived as one who from his past life as a sharper, was capable of entering into and humouring the knight, and so perfectly in character, that he precludes a considerable source of improbability in the future narrative, by enforcing upon Don Quixote the necessity of taking money with him.

(C. 3.)

"Ho, there, whoever thou art, rash knight, that approachest to touch the arms of the most valorous adventurer that ever girded sword," &c.

Don Quixote's high eulogiums on himself— "the most valorous adventurer!" — but it is not himself that he has before him, but the idol of his imagination, the imaginary being whom he is acting. And this, that it is entirely a third person, excuses his heart from the otherwise inevitable charge of selfish vanity; and so by madness itself he preserves our esteem, and renders those actions natural by which he, the first person, deserves it.

(C. 4.) Andres and his master. The manner in which Don Quixote redressed this wrong, is a picture of the true revolutionary passion in its first honest state, while it is yet only a bewilderment of the understanding. You have a benevolence limitless in its prayers, which are in fact aspirations towards omnipotence; but between it and beneficence the bridge of judgment — that is, of measurement of personal power — intervenes, and must be passed. Otherwise you will be bruised by the leap into the chasm, or be drowned in the revolutionary river, and drag others with you to the same fate.

(C. 4.)

Merchants of Toledo.

When they were come so near as to be seen and heard, Don Quixote raised his voice, and with arrogant air cried out: "Let the whole world stand; if the whole world does not confess that there is not in the whole world a damsel more beautiful than," &c.

Now mark the presumption which follows the self-complacency of the last act! That was an honest attempt to redress a real wrong; this is an arbitrary determination to enforce a Brissotine or Rousseau's ideal on all his fellow creatures.

Let the whole world stand!

‘If there had been any experience in proof of the excellence of our code, where would be our superiority in this enlightened age?’

“No! the business is that without seeing her, you believe, confess, affirm, swear, and maintain it; and if not, I challenge you all to battle.”

Next see the persecution and fury excited by opposition however moderate! The only words listened to are those, that without their context and their conditionals, and transformed into positive assertions, might give some shadow of excuse for the violence shown! This rich story ends, to the compassion of the men in their senses, in a sound rib-roasting of the idealist by the muleteer, the mob. And happy for thee, poor knight! that the mob were against thee! For had they been with thee, by the change of the moon and of them, thy head would have been off.

(C. 5.) first part — The idealist recollects the causes that had been accessory to the reverse and attempts to remove them — too late. He is beaten and disgraced.

(C. 6.) This chapter on Don Quixote’s library proves that the author did not wish to destroy the romances, but to cause them to be read as romances — that is, for their merits as poetry.

(C. 7.)

Among other things, Don Quixote told him, he should dispose himself to go with him willingly; — for some time or other such an adventure might present, that an island might be won, in the turn of a hand, and he be left governor thereof.

At length the promises of the imaginative reason begin to act on the plump, sensual, honest common sense accomplice, — but unhappily not in the same person, and without the ‘copula’ of the judgment, — in hopes of the substantial good things, of which the former contemplated only the glory and the colours.

(C. 7.)

Sancho Panza went riding upon his ass, like any patriarch, with his wallet and leathern bottle, and with a vehement desire to find himself governor of the island which his master had promised him.

The first relief from regular labour is so pleasant to poor Sancho!

(C. 8.)

"I no gentleman! I swear by the great God, thou liest, as I am a Christian. Biscainer by land, gentleman by sea, gentleman for the devil, and thou liest: look then if thou hast any thing else to say."

This Biscainer is an excellent image of the prejudices and bigotry provoked by the idealism of a speculator. This story happily detects the trick which our imagination plays in the description of single combats: only change the preconception of the magnificence of the combatants, and all is gone.

(B. II. c. 2.)

"Be pleased, my lord Don Quixote, to bestow upon me the government of that island," &c.

Sancho's eagerness for his government, the nascent lust of actual democracy, or isocracy!

(C. 2.)

"But tell me, on your life, have you ever seen a more valorous knight than I, upon the whole face of the known earth? Have you read in story of any other, who has, or ever had, more bravery in assailing, more breath in holding out, more dexterity in wounding, or more address in giving a fall?"—"The truth is," answered Sancho, "that I never read any history at all; for I can neither read nor write; but what I dare affirm is, that I never served a bolder master," &c.

This appeal to Sancho, and Sancho's answer are exquisitely humorous. It is impossible not to think of the French bulletins and proclamations. Remark the necessity under which we are of being sympathized with, fly as high into abstraction as we may, and how constantly the imagination is recalled to the ground of our common humanity! And note a little further on, the knight's easy vaunting of his balsam, and his quietly deferring the making and application of it.

(C. 3.) The speech before the goatherds:

"Happy times and happy ages," &c.

Note the rhythm of this, and the admirable beauty and wisdom of the thoughts in themselves, but the total want of judgment in Don Quixote's addressing them to such an audience.

(B. III. c. 3.) Don Quixote's balsam, and the vomiting and consequent relief; an excellent hit at 'panacea nostrums', which cure the patient by his being himself cured of the medicine by revolting nature.

(C. 4.)

"Peace! and have patience; the day will come," &c.

The perpetual promises of the imagination!

(Ib.)

"Your Worship," said Sancho, "would make a better preacher than knight errant!"

Exactly so. This is the true moral.

(C. 6.) The uncommon beauty of the description in the commencement of this chapter. In truth, the whole of it seems to put all nature in its heights and its humiliations, before us.

(Ib.) Sancho's story of the goats:

"Make account, he carried them all over," said Don Quixote, "and do not be going and coming in this manner; for at this rate, you will not have done carrying them over in a twelvemonth." "How many are passed already?" said Sancho, &c.

Observe the happy contrast between the all-generalizing mind of the mad knight, and Sancho's all-particularizing memory. How admirable a symbol of the dependence of all 'copula' on the higher powers of the mind, with the single exception of the succession in time and the accidental relations of space. Men of mere common sense have no theory or means of making one fact more important or prominent than the rest; if they lose one link, all is lost. Compare Mrs. Quickly and the Tapster. And note also Sancho's good heart, when his master is about to leave him. Don Quixote's conduct upon discovering the fulling-hammers, proves he was meant to be in his senses. Nothing can be better conceived than his fit of passion at Sancho's laughing, and his sophism of self-justification by the courage he had shown.

Sancho is by this time cured, through experience, as far as his own errors are concerned; yet still is he lured on by the unconquerable awe of his master's superiority, even when he is cheating him.

(C. 8.) The adventure of the Galley-slaves. I think this is the only passage of moment in which Cervantes slips the mask of his hero, and speaks for himself.

(C. 9.)

Don Quixote desired to have it, and bade him take the money, and keep it for himself. Sancho kissed his hands for the favour, &c.

Observe Sancho's eagerness to avail himself of the permission of his master, who, in the war sports of knight-errantry, had, without any selfish dishonesty, overlooked the 'meum' and 'tuum.' Sancho's selfishness is modified by his involuntary goodness of heart, and Don Quixote's flighty goodness is debased by the involuntary or unconscious selfishness of his vanity and self-applause.

(C. 10.) Cardenio is the madman of passion, who meets and easily overthrows for the moment the madman of imagination. And note the contagion of madness of any kind, upon Don Quixote's interruption of Cardenio's story.

(C. 11.)

Perhaps the best specimen of Sancho's proverbializing is this:

"And I (Don Q.) say again, they lie, and will lie two hundred times more, all who say, or think her so." "I neither say, nor think so," answered Sancho: "let those who say it, eat the lie, and swallow it with their bread: whether they were guilty or no, they have given an account to God before now: I come from my vineyard, I know nothing; I am no friend to inquiring into other men's lives; 'for' he that buys and lies shall find the lie left in his purse behind; 'besides,' naked was I born, and naked I remain; I neither win nor lose; if they were guilty, what is that to me? Many think to find bacon, where there is not so much as a pin to hang it on: 'but' who can hedge in the cuckoo? 'Especially,' do they spare God himself?"

(Ib.)

"And it is no great matter, if it be in another hand; for by what I remember, Dulcinea can neither write nor read," &c.

The wonderful twilight of the mind! and mark Cervantes's courage in daring to present it, and trust to a distant posterity for an appreciation of its truth to nature.

(P. II. B. III. c. 9.) Sancho's account of what he had seen on Clavileno is a counterpart in his style to Don Quixote's adventures in the cave of Montesinos. This last is the only impeachment of the knight's moral character; Cervantes just gives one instance of the veracity failing before the strong cravings of the imagination for something real and external; the picture would not have been complete without this; and yet it is so well managed, that the reader has no unpleasant sense of Don Quixote having told a lie. It is evident that he hardly knows whether it was a dream or not; and goes to the enchanter to inquire the real nature of the adventure.

SUMMARY ON CERVANTES.

A Castilian of refined manners; a gentleman, true to religion, and true to honour.

A scholar and a soldier, and fought under the banners of Don John of Austria, at Lepanto, lost his arm and was captured.

Endured slavery not only with fortitude, but with mirth; and by the superiority of nature, mastered and overawed his barbarian owner.

Finally ransomed, he resumed his native destiny, the awful task of achieving fame; and for that reason died poor and a prisoner, while nobles and kings over their goblets of gold gave relish to their pleasures by the charms of his divine genius. He was the inventor of novels for the Spaniards, and in his Persilis and Sigismunda, the English may find the germ of their Robinson Crusoe.

The world was a drama to him. His own thoughts, in spite of poverty and sickness, perpetuated for him the feelings of youth. He painted only what he knew and had looked into, but he knew and had looked into much indeed; and his imagination was ever at hand to adapt and modify the world of his experience. Of delicious love he fabled, yet with stainless virtue.

CERVANTES by William Dean Howells

I recall very fully the moment and the place when I first heard of 'Don Quixote,' while as yet I could not connect it very distinctly with anybody's authorship. I was still too young to conceive of authorship, even in my own case, and wrote my miserable verses without any notion of literature, or of anything but the pleasure of seeing them actually come out rightly rhymed and measured. The moment was at the close of a summer's day just before supper, which, in our house, we had lawlessly late, and the place was the kitchen where my mother was going about her work, and listening as she could to what my father was telling my brother and me and an apprentice of ours, who was like a brother to us both, of a book that he had once read. We boys were all shelling peas, but the story, as it went on, rapt us from the poor employ, and whatever our fingers were doing, our spirits were away in that strange land of adventures and mishaps, where the fevered life of the knight truly without fear and without reproach burned itself out. I dare say that my father tried to make us understand the satirical purpose of the book. I vaguely remember his speaking of the books of chivalry it was meant to ridicule; but a boy could not care for this, and what I longed to do at once was to get that book and plunge into its story. He told us at random of the attack on the windmills and the flocks of sheep, of the night in the valley of the fulling-mills with their trip-hammers, of the inn and the muleteers, of the tossing of Sancho in the blanket, of the island that was given him to govern, and of all the merry pranks at the duke's and duchess's, of the liberation of the galley-slaves, of the capture of Mambrino's helmet, and of Sancho's invention of the enchanted Dulcinea, and whatever else there was wonderful and delightful in the most wonderful and delightful book in the world. I do not know when or where my father got it for me, and I am aware of an appreciable time that passed between my hearing of it and my having it. The event must have been most important to me, and it is strange I cannot fix the moment when the precious story came into my hands; though for the matter of that there is nothing more capricious than a child's memory, what it will hold and what it will lose.

It is certain my Don Quixote was in two small, stout volumes not much bigger each than my Goldsmith's 'Greece', bound in a sort of law-calf, well fitted to withstand the wear they were destined to undergo. The translation was, of course, the old-fashioned version of Jervas, which, whether it was a closely faithful version or not, was honest eighteenth-century English, and reported faithfully enough the spirit of the original. If it had any literary influence with me the influence must have been good. But I cannot make out that I was sensible of the literature; it was the forever enchanting story that I enjoyed. I exulted in the boundless freedom of the design; the open air of that immense scene, where adventure followed adventure with the natural sequence of life, and the days and the nights were not long enough for the events that thronged them, amidst the fields and woods, the streams and hills, the highways and byways, hostelries and hovels, prisons and palaces, which were the setting of that matchless history. I took it as simply as I took everything else in the world about me. It was full of meaning that I could not grasp, and there were significances of the kind that literature unhappily abounds in, but they were lost upon my innocence. I did not know whether it was well written or not; I never thought about that; it was simply there in its vast entirety, its inexhaustible opulence, and I was rich in it beyond the dreams of avarice.

My father must have told us that night about Cervantes as well as about his 'Don Quixote', for I seem to have known from the beginning that he was once a slave in Algiers, and that he had lost a hand in battle, and I loved him with a sort of personal affection, as if he were still living and he could somehow return my love. His name and nature endeared the Spanish name and nature to me, so that they were always my romance, and to this day I cannot meet a Spanish man without clothing him in something of the honor and worship I lavished upon Cervantes when I was a child. While I was in the full flush of this ardor there came to see our school, one day, a Mexican gentleman who was studying the American system of education; a mild, fat, saffron man, whom I could almost have died to please for Cervantes' and Don Quixote's sake, because I knew he spoke their tongue. But he smiled upon us all, and I had no chance to distinguish myself from the rest by any act of devotion before the blessed vision faded, though for long afterwards, in impassioned reveries, I accosted him and claimed him kindred because of my fealty, and because I would have been Spanish if I could.

I would not have had the boy-world about me know anything of these fond dreams; but it was my tastes alone, my passions, which were alien there; in everything else I was as much a citizen as any boy who had never heard of Don Quixote. But I believe that I carried the book about with me most of the time, so as not to lose any chance moment of reading it. Even in the blank of certain years, when I added little other reading to my store, I must still have been reading it. This was after we had removed from the town where the earlier years of my boyhood were passed, and I had barely adjusted myself to the strange environment when one of my uncles asked me to come with him and learn the drug business, in the place, forty miles away, where he practised medicine. We made the long journey, longer than any I have made since, in the stage-coach of those days, and we arrived at his house about twilight, he glad to get home, and I sick to death with yearning for the home I had left. I do not know how it was that in this state, when all the world was one hopeless blackness around me, I should have got my 'Don Quixote' out of my bag; I seem to have had it with me as an essential part of my equipment for my new career. Perhaps I had been asked to show it, with the notion of beguiling me from my misery; perhaps I was myself trying to drown my sorrows in it. But anyhow I have before me now the vision of my sweet young aunt and her young sister looking over her shoulder, as they stood together on the lawn in the summer evening light. My aunt held my Don Quixote open in one hand, while she clasped with the other the child she carried on her arm. She looked at the book, and then from time to time she looked at me, very kindly but very curiously, with a faint smile, so that as I stood there, inwardly writhing in my bashfulness, I had the sense that in her eyes I was a queer boy. She returned the book without comment, after some questions, and I took it off to my room, where the confidential friend of Cervantes cried himself to sleep.

In the morning I rose up and told them I could not stand it, and I was going home. Nothing they could say availed, and my uncle went down to the stage-office with me and took my passage back.

The horror of cholera was then in the land; and we heard in the stage-office that a man lay dead of it in the hotel overhead. But my uncle led me to his drugstore, where the stage was to call for me, and made me taste a little camphor; with this prophylactic, Cervantes and I somehow got home together alive.

The reading of 'Don Quixote' went on throughout my boyhood, so that I cannot recall any distinctive period of it when I was not, more or less, reading that book. In a boy's way I knew it well when I was ten, and a few years ago, when I was fifty, I took it up in the admirable new version of Ormsby, and found it so full of myself and of my own irrevocable past that I did not find it very gay. But I made a great many discoveries in it; things I had not dreamt of were there, and must always have been there, and other things wore a new face, and made a new effect upon me. I had my doubts, my reserves, where once I had given it my whole heart without question, and yet in what formed the greatness of the book it seemed to me greater than ever. I believe that its free and simple design, where event follows event without the fettering control of intrigue, but where all grows naturally out of character and conditions, is the supreme form of fiction; and I cannot help thinking that if we ever have a great American novel it must be built upon some such large and noble lines. As for the central figure, Don Quixote himself, in his dignity and generosity, his unselfish ideals, and his fearless devotion to them, he is always heroic and beautiful; and I was glad to find in my latest look at his history that I had truly conceived of him at first, and had felt the sublimity of his nature. I did not want to laugh at him so much, and I could not laugh at all any more at some of the things done to him. Once they seemed funny, but now only cruel, and even stupid, so that it was strange to realize his qualities and indignities as both flowing from the same mind. But in my mature experience, which threw a broader light on the fable, I was happy to keep my old love of an author who had been almost personally, dear to me.

An Extract from 'THE BODY OF THE NATION' by Mark Twain

A curious exemplification of the power of a single book for good or harm is shown in the effects wrought by 'Don Quixote' and those wrought by 'Ivanhoe.' The first swept the world's admiration for the medieval chivalry-silliness out of existence; and the other restored it. As far as our South is concerned, the good work done by Cervantes is pretty nearly a dead letter, so effectually has Scott's pernicious work undermined it.

An Extract from 'HUMOUR' by G. K. Chesterton

Thirdly, there appeared with the great Cervantes an element new in its explicit expression; that grand and very Christian quality of the man who laughs at himself. Cervantes was himself more chivalrous than most men when he began to mock at chivalry. Since his time, humour in this purely humorous sense, the confession of complexity and weakness already remarked upon, has been a sort of secret of the high culture of the West. The influence of Cervantes and Rabelais, and the rest runs through all modern letters, especially our own; taking on a shrewd and acid tang in Swift, a more delicate and perhaps more dubious taste in Sterne, passing on through every sort of experiment of essay or comedy, pausing upon the pastoral gaiety of Goldsmith or going on finally to bring forth, like a great birth of giants, the walking caricatures of Dickens. Nor is it altogether a national accident that the tradition has here been followed in our own nation. For it is true that humour, in the special and even limited sense here given to it, humour as distinct from wit, from satire, from irony or from many things that may legitimately produce amusement, has been a thing strongly and specially present in English life and letters. That we may not in turn depreciate the wit and logic of the rest of the world, it will be well to remember that humour does originate in the half-conscious eccentric, that it is in part a confession of inconsistency, but, when all is said, it has added a new beauty to human life. It may even be noted that there has appeared especially in England a new variety of humour, more properly to be called Nonsense. Nonsense may be described as humour which has for the moment renounced all connection with wit. It is humour that abandons all attempt at intellectual justification; and does not merely jest at the incongruity of some accident or practical joke, as a by-product of real life, but extracts and enjoys it for its own sake. Jabberwocky is not a parody on anything; the Jumblies are not a satire on anybody; they are folly for folly's sake on the same lines as art for art's sake, or more properly beauty for beauty's sake; and they do not serve any social purpose except perhaps the purpose of a holiday. Here again it will be well to remember that even the work of humour should not consist entirely of holidays. But this art of nonsense is a valuable contribution to culture; and it is very largely, or almost entirely, an English contribution. So cultivated and competent a foreign observer as M. Emile Cammaerts has remarked that it is so native as to be at first quite unmeaning to foreigners. This is perhaps the latest phase in the history of humour; but it will be well even in this case to preserve what is so essential a virtue of humour; the virtue of proportion. Humour, like wit, is related however indirectly, to truth and the eternal virtues; as it is the greatest incongruity of all to be serious about humour, so it is the worst sort of pomposity to be monotonously proud of humour; for it is itself the chief antidote to pride; and has been, ever since the time of the Book of Proverbs, the hammer of fools.

An Extract from 'READING' by Virginia Woolf

Don Quixote is very dull too. But his dullness, instead of having that lethargy as of a somnolent beast which is characteristic of great people's dullness— "After my enormous labours, I'm asleep and intend to snore if I like," they seem to say — instead of this dullness Don Quixote has another variety. He is telling stories to children. There they sit round the fire on a winter's night, grown up children, women at their spinning, men relaxed and sleepy after the day's sport, "Tell us a story — something to make us laugh — something gallant, too — about people like ourselves only more unhappy and a great deal happier." Obedient to this demand, Cervantes, a kind accommodating man, spun them stories, about princesses lost and amorous knights, much to their taste, very tedious to ours. Let him but get back to Don Quixote and Sancho Panza and all is well, for him, we cannot help thinking, as for us. Yet what with our natural reverence and inevitable servility, we seldom make our position, as modern readers of old writers, plain. Undoubtedly all writers are immensely influenced by the people who read them. Thus, take Cervantes and his audience — we, coming four centuries later, have a sense of breaking into a happy family party. Compare that group with the group (only there are no groups now since we have become educated and isolated and read our books by our own firesides in our own copies) but compare the readers of Cera Cervantes with the readers of Thomas Hardy. Hardy whiles away no firelit hour with tales of lost princesses and amorous knights — refuses more and more sternly to make things up for our entertainment. As we read him separately so he speaks to us separately, as if we were individual men and women, rather than groups sharing the same tastes. That, too, must be taken into account. The reader of to-day accustomed to find himself in direct communication with the writer, is constantly out of touch with Cervantes. How far did he himself know what he was about — how far again do we over-interpret, mis-interpret, read into Don Quixote a meaning compounded of our own experience, as an elder person might read a meaning into a child's story and doubt whether the child himself was aware of it? If Cervantes had felt the tragedy and the satire as we feel them, could he have foreborne as he does to stress them — could he have been as callous as he seems? Yet Shakespeare dismissed Falstaff callously enough. The great writers have this large way with them, nature's way; which we who are further from nature call cruel, since we suffer more from the effects of cruelty, or at any rate judge our suffering of greater importance, than they did. None of this, however, impairs the main pleasure of the jolly, delightful, plain spoken book built up, foaming up, round the magnificent conception of the Knight and the world which, however people may change, must remain for ever an unassailable statement of man and the world. That will always be in existence. And as for knowing himself what he was about — perhaps great writers never do. Perhaps that is why later ages find what they seek.

But to return to the dullest book in the world. To this volume Sir Thomas has added certainly one or two pages. Yet should one desire a loophole to escape it is always possible to find one in the chance that the book is difficult, not dull. Accustomed as we are to strip a whole page of its sentences and crush their meaning out in one grasp, the obstinate resistance which a page of Urne Burial offers at first trips us and blinds us. “Though if Adam were made out of an extract of the Earth, all parts might challenge a restitution, yet few have returned their bones farre lower than they might receive them” — We must stop, go back, try out this way and that, and proceed at a foot’s pace. Reading has been made so easy in our days that to go back to these crabbed sentences is like mounting only a solemn and obstinate donkey instead of going up to town by an electric train. Dilatory, capricious, governed by no consideration save his own wish, Sir Thomas seems scarcely to be writing in the sense that Froude wrote or Matthew Arnold. A page of print now fulfils a different office. Is it not almost servile in the assiduity with which it helps us on our way, making only the standard charge on our attention and in return for that giving us the full measure, but not an ounce over or under our due? In Sir Thomas Browne’s days weights and measures were in a primitive condition, if they had any existence at all. One is conscious all the time that Sir Thomas was never paid a penny for his prose. He is free since it is the offering of his own bounty to give us as little or as much as he chooses. He is an amateur; it is the work of his leisure and pleasure; he makes no bargain with us. Therefore, as Sir Thomas has no call to conciliate his reader, these short books of his are dull if he chooses, difficult if he likes, beautiful beyond measure if he has a mind that way. Here we approach the doubtful region — the region of beauty. Are we not already lost or sunk or enticed with the very first words? “When the Funeral pyre was out, and the last valediction over, men took a lasting adieu to their interred Friends.” But why beauty should have the effect upon us that it does, the strange serene confidence that it inspires in us, none can say. Most people have tried and perhaps one of the invariable properties of beauty is that it leaves in the mind a desire to impart. Some offering we must make; some act we must dedicate, if only to move across the room and turn the rose in the jar, which, by the way, has dropped its petals.

The Biography

CERVANTES AND DON QUIXOTE by John Ormsby

Four generations had laughed over “Don Quixote” before it occurred to anyone to ask, who and what manner of man was this Miguel de Cervantes Saavedra whose name is on the title-page; and it was too late for a satisfactory answer to the question when it was proposed to add a life of the author to the London edition published at Lord Carteret’s instance in 1738. All traces of the personality of Cervantes had by that time disappeared. Any floating traditions that may once have existed, transmitted from men who had known him, had long since died out, and of other record there was none; for the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries were incurious as to “the men of the time,” a reproach against which the nineteenth has, at any rate, secured itself, if it has produced no Shakespeare or Cervantes. All that Mayans y Siscar, to whom the task was entrusted, or any of those who followed him, Rios, Pellicer, or Navarrete, could do was to eke out the few allusions Cervantes makes to himself in his various prefaces with such pieces of documentary evidence bearing upon his life as they could find.

This, however, has been done by the last-named biographer to such good purpose that he has superseded all predecessors. Thoroughness is the chief characteristic of Navarrete’s work. Besides sifting, testing, and methodising with rare patience and judgment what had been previously brought to light, he left, as the saying is, no stone unturned under which anything to illustrate his subject might possibly be found. Navarrete has done all that industry and acumen could do, and it is no fault of his if he has not given us what we want. What Hallam says of Shakespeare may be applied to the almost parallel case of Cervantes: “It is not the register of his baptism, or the draft of his will, or the orthography of his name that we seek; no letter of his writing, no record of his conversation, no character of him drawn ... by a contemporary has been produced.”

It is only natural, therefore, that the biographers of Cervantes, forced to make brick without straw, should have recourse largely to conjecture, and that conjecture should in some instances come by degrees to take the place of established fact. All that I propose to do here is to separate what is matter of fact from what is matter of conjecture, and leave it to the reader’s judgment to decide whether the data justify the inference or not.

The men whose names by common consent stand in the front rank of Spanish literature, Cervantes, Lope de Vega, Quevedo, Calderon, Garcilaso de la Vega, the Mendozas, Gongora, were all men of ancient families, and, curiously, all, except the last, of families that traced their origin to the same mountain district in the North of Spain. The family of Cervantes is commonly said to have been of Galician origin, and unquestionably it was in possession of lands in Galicia at a very early date; but I think the balance of the evidence tends to show that the “solar,” the original site of the family, was at Cervatos in the north-west corner of Old Castile, close to the junction of Castile, Leon, and the Asturias. As it happens, there is a complete history of the Cervantes family from the tenth century down to the seventeenth extant under the title of “Illustrious Ancestry, Glorious Deeds, and Noble Posterity of the Famous Nuno Alfonso, Alcaide of Toledo,” written in 1648 by the industrious genealogist Rodrigo Mendez Silva, who availed himself of a manuscript genealogy by Juan de Mena, the poet laureate and historiographer of John II.

The origin of the name Cervantes is curious. Nuno Alfonso was almost as distinguished in the struggle against the Moors in the reign of Alfonso VII as the Cid had been half a century before in that of Alfonso VI, and was rewarded by divers grants of land in the neighbourhood of Toledo. On one of his acquisitions, about two leagues from the city, he built himself a castle which he called Cervatos, because “he was lord of the solar of Cervatos in the Montana,” as the mountain region extending from the Basque Provinces to Leon was always called. At his death in battle in 1143, the castle passed by his will to his son Alfonso Munio, who, as territorial or local surnames were then coming into vogue in place of the simple patronymic, took the additional name of Cervatos. His eldest son Pedro succeeded him in the possession of the castle, and followed his example in adopting the name, an assumption at which the younger son, Gonzalo, seems to have taken umbrage.

Everyone who has paid even a flying visit to Toledo will remember the ruined castle that crowns the hill above the spot where the bridge of Alcantara spans the gorge of the Tagus, and with its broken outline and crumbling walls makes such an admirable pendant to the square solid Alcazar towering over the city roofs on the opposite side. It was built, or as some say restored, by Alfonso VI shortly after his occupation of Toledo in 1085, and called by him San Servando after a Spanish martyr, a name subsequently modified into San Servan (in which form it appears in the “Poem of the Cid”), San Servantes, and San Cervantes: with regard to which last the “Handbook for Spain” warns its readers against the supposition that it has anything to do with the author of “Don Quixote.” Ford, as all know who have taken him for a companion and counsellor on the roads of Spain, is seldom wrong in matters of literature or history. In this instance, however, he is in error. It has everything to do with the author of "Don Quixote," for it is in fact these old walls that have given to Spain the name she is proudest of to-day. Gonzalo, above mentioned, it may be readily conceived, did not relish the appropriation by his brother of a name to which he himself had an equal right, for though nominally taken from the castle, it was in reality derived from the ancient territorial possession of the family, and as a set-off, and to distinguish himself (diferenciarse) from his brother, he took as a surname the name of the castle on the bank of the Tagus, in the building of which, according to a family tradition, his great-grandfather had a share.

Both brothers founded families. The Cervantes branch had more tenacity; it sent offshoots in various directions, Andalusia, Estremadura, Galicia, and Portugal, and produced a goodly line of men distinguished in the service of Church and State. Gonzalo himself, and apparently a son of his, followed Ferdinand III in the great campaign of 1236-48 that gave Cordova and Seville to Christian Spain and penned up the Moors in the kingdom of Granada, and his descendants intermarried with some of the noblest families of the Peninsula and numbered among them soldiers, magistrates, and Church dignitaries, including at least two cardinal-archbishops.

Of the line that settled in Andalusia, Deigo de Cervantes, Commander of the Order of Santiago, married Juana Avellaneda, daughter of Juan Arias de Saavedra, and had several sons, of whom one was Gonzalo Gomez, Corregidor of Jerez and ancestor of the Mexican and Columbian branches of the family; and another, Juan, whose son Rodrigo married Dona Leonor de Cortinas, and by her had four children, Rodrigo, Andrea, Luisa, and Miguel, our author.

The pedigree of Cervantes is not without its bearing on "Don Quixote." A man who could look back upon an ancestry of genuine knights-errant extending from well-nigh the time of Pelayo to the siege of Granada was likely to have a strong feeling on the subject of the sham chivalry of the romances. It gives a point, too, to what he says in more than one place about families that have once been great and have tapered away until they have come to nothing, like a pyramid. It was the case of his own.

He was born at Alcala de Henares and baptised in the church of Santa Maria Mayor on the 9th of October, 1547. Of his boyhood and youth we know nothing, unless it be from the glimpse he gives us in the preface to his "Comedies" of himself as a boy looking on with delight while Lope de Rueda and his company set up their rude plank stage in the plaza and acted the rustic farces which he himself afterwards took as the model of his interludes. This first glimpse, however, is a significant one, for it shows the early development of that love of the drama which exercised such an influence on his life and seems to have grown stronger as he grew older, and of which this very preface, written only a few months before his death, is such a striking proof. He gives us to understand, too, that he was a great reader in his youth; but of this no assurance was needed, for the First Part of "Don Quixote" alone proves a vast amount of miscellaneous reading, romances of chivalry, ballads, popular poetry, chronicles, for which he had no time or opportunity except in the first twenty years of his life; and his misquotations and mistakes in matters of detail are always, it may be noticed, those of a man recalling the reading of his boyhood.

Other things besides the drama were in their infancy when Cervantes was a boy. The period of his boyhood was in every way a transition period for Spain. The old chivalrous Spain had passed away. The new Spain was the mightiest power the world had seen since the Roman Empire and it had not yet been called upon to pay the price of its greatness. By the policy of Ferdinand and Ximenez the sovereign had been made absolute, and the Church and Inquisition adroitly adjusted to keep him so. The nobles, who had always resisted absolutism as strenuously as they had fought the Moors, had been divested of all political power, a like fate had befallen the cities, the free constitutions of Castile and Aragon had been swept away, and the only function that remained to the Cortes was that of granting money at the King's dictation.

The transition extended to literature. Men who, like Garcilaso de la Vega and Diego Hurtado de Mendoza, followed the Italian wars, had brought back from Italy the products of the post-Renaissance literature, which took root and flourished and even threatened to extinguish the native growths. Damon and Thyrsis, Phyllis and Chloe had been fairly naturalised in Spain, together with all the devices of pastoral poetry for investing with an air of novelty the idea of a dispairing shepherd and inflexible shepherdess. As a set-off against this, the old historical and traditional ballads, and the true pastorals, the songs and ballads of peasant life, were being collected assiduously and printed in the cancioneros that succeeded one another with increasing rapidity. But the most notable consequence, perhaps, of the spread of printing was the flood of romances of chivalry that had continued to pour from the press ever since Garci Ordenez de Montalvo had resuscitated "Amadis of Gaul" at the beginning of the century.

For a youth fond of reading, solid or light, there could have been no better spot in Spain than Alcala de Henares in the middle of the sixteenth century. It was then a busy, populous university town, something more than the enterprising rival of Salamanca, and altogether a very different place from the melancholy, silent, deserted Alcala the traveller sees now as he goes from Madrid to Saragossa. Theology and medicine may have been the strong points of the university, but the town itself seems to have inclined rather to the humanities and light literature, and as a producer of books Alcala was already beginning to compete with the older presses of Toledo, Burgos, Salamanca and Seville.

A pendant to the picture Cervantes has given us of his first playgoings might, no doubt, have been often seen in the streets of Alcala at that time; a bright, eager, tawny-haired boy peering into a book-shop where the latest volumes lay open to tempt the public, wondering, it may be, what that little book with the woodcut of the blind beggar and his boy, that called itself "Vida de Lazarillo de Tormes, segunda impresion," could be about; or with eyes brimming over with merriment gazing at one of those preposterous portraits of a knight-errant in outrageous panoply and plumes with which the publishers of chivalry romances loved to embellish the title-pages of their folios. If the boy was the father of the man, the sense of the incongruous that was strong at fifty was lively at ten, and some such reflections as these may have been the true genesis of "Don Quixote."

For his more solid education, we are told, he went to Salamanca. But why Rodrigo de Cervantes, who was very poor, should have sent his son to a university a hundred and fifty miles away when he had one at his own door, would be a puzzle, if we had any reason for supposing that he did so. The only evidence is a vague statement by Professor Tomas Gonzalez, that he once saw an old entry of the matriculation of a Miguel de Cervantes. This does not appear to have been ever seen again; but even if it had, and if the date corresponded, it would prove nothing, as there were at least two other MIGUELS born about the middle of the century; one of them, moreover, a Cervantes Saavedra, a cousin, no doubt, who was a source of great embarrassment to the biographers.

That he was a student neither at Salamanca nor at Alcala is best proved by his own works. No man drew more largely upon experience than he did, and he has nowhere left a single reminiscence of student life—for the "Tia Fingida," if it be his, is not one — nothing, not even "a college joke," to show that he remembered days that most men remember best. All that we know positively about his education is that Juan Lopez de Hoyos, a professor of humanities and belles-lettres of some eminence, calls him his "dear and beloved pupil." This was in a little collection of verses by different hands on the death of Isabel de Valois, second queen of Philip II, published by the professor in 1569, to which Cervantes contributed four pieces, including an elegy, and an epitaph in the form of a sonnet. It is only by a rare chance that a "Lycidas" finds its way into a volume of this sort, and Cervantes was no Milton. His verses are no worse than such things usually are; so much, at least, may be said for them.

By the time the book appeared he had left Spain, and, as fate ordered it, for twelve years, the most eventful ones of his life. Giulio, afterwards Cardinal, Acquaviva had been sent at the end of 1568 to Philip II by the Pope on a mission, partly of condolence, partly political, and on his return to Rome, which was somewhat brusquely expedited by the King, he took Cervantes with him as his camarero (chamberlain), the office he himself held in the Pope's household. The post would no doubt have led to advancement at the Papal Court had Cervantes retained it, but in the summer of 1570 he resigned it and enlisted as a private soldier in Captain Diego Urbina's company, belonging to Don Miguel de Moncada's regiment, but at that time forming a part of the command of Marc Antony Colonna. What impelled him to this step we know not, whether it was distaste for the career before him, or purely military enthusiasm. It may well have been the latter, for it was a stirring time; the events, however, which led to the alliance between Spain, Venice, and the Pope, against the common enemy, the Porte, and to the victory of the combined fleets at Lepanto, belong rather to the history of Europe than to the life of Cervantes. He was one of those that sailed from Messina, in September 1571, under the command of Don John of Austria; but on the morning of the 7th of October, when the Turkish fleet was sighted, he was lying below ill with fever. At the news that the enemy was in sight he rose, and, in spite of the remonstrances of his comrades and superiors, insisted on taking his post, saying he preferred death in the service of God and the King to health. His galley, the Marquesa, was in the thick of the fight, and before it was over he had received three gunshot wounds, two in the breast and one in the left hand or arm. On the morning after the battle, according to Navarrete, he had an interview with the commander-in-chief, Don John, who was making a personal inspection of the wounded, one result of which was an addition of three crowns to his pay, and another, apparently, the friendship of his general.

How severely Cervantes was wounded may be inferred from the fact, that with youth, a vigorous frame, and as cheerful and buoyant a temperament as ever invalid had, he was seven months in hospital at Messina before he was discharged. He came out with his left hand permanently disabled; he had lost the use of it, as Mercury told him in the "Viaje del Parnaso" for the greater glory of the right. This, however, did not absolutely unfit him for service, and in April 1572 he joined Manuel Ponce de Leon's company of Lope de Figueroa's regiment, in which, it seems probable, his brother Rodrigo was serving, and shared in the operations of the next three years, including the capture of the Goletta and Tunis. Taking advantage of the lull which followed the recapture of these places by the Turks, he obtained leave to return to Spain, and sailed from Naples in September 1575 on board the Sun galley, in company with his brother Rodrigo, Pedro Carrillo de Quesada, late Governor of the Goletta, and some others, and furnished with letters from Don John of Austria and the Duke of Sesa, the Viceroy of Sicily, recommending him to the King for the command of a company, on account of his services; a dono infelice as events proved. On the 26th they fell in with a squadron of Algerine galleys, and after a stout resistance were overpowered and carried into Algiers.

By means of a ransomed fellow-captive the brothers contrived to inform their family of their condition, and the poor people at Alcala at once strove to raise the ransom money, the father disposing of all he possessed, and the two sisters giving up their marriage portions. But Dali Mami had found on Cervantes the letters addressed to the King by Don John and the Duke of Sesa, and, concluding that his prize must be a person of great consequence, when the money came he refused it scornfully as being altogether insufficient. The owner of Rodrigo, however, was more easily satisfied; ransom was accepted in his case, and it was arranged between the brothers that he should return to Spain and procure a vessel in which he was to come back to Algiers and take off Miguel and as many of their comrades as possible. This was not the first attempt to escape that Cervantes had made. Soon after the commencement of his captivity he induced several of his companions to join him in trying to reach Oran, then a Spanish post, on foot; but after the first day's journey, the Moor who had agreed to act as their guide deserted them, and they had no choice but to return. The second attempt was more disastrous. In a garden outside the city on the sea-shore, he constructed, with the help of the gardener, a Spaniard, a hiding-place, to which he brought, one by one, fourteen of his fellow-captives, keeping them there in secrecy for several months, and supplying them with food through a renegade known as El Dorador, "the Gilder." How he, a captive himself, contrived to do all this, is one of the mysteries of the story. Wild as the project may appear, it was very nearly successful. The vessel procured by Rodrigo made its appearance off the coast, and under cover of night was proceeding to take off the refugees, when the crew were alarmed by a passing fishing boat, and beat a hasty retreat. On renewing the attempt shortly afterwards, they, or a portion of them at least, were taken prisoners, and just as the poor fellows in the garden were exulting in the thought that in a few moments more freedom would be within their grasp, they found themselves surrounded by Turkish troops, horse and foot. The Dorador had revealed the whole scheme to the Dey Hassan.

When Cervantes saw what had befallen them, he charged his companions to lay all the blame upon him, and as they were being bound he declared aloud that the whole plot was of his contriving, and that nobody else had any share in it. Brought before the Dey, he said the same. He was threatened with impalement and with torture; and as cutting off ears and noses were playful freaks with the Algerines, it may be conceived what their tortures were like; but nothing could make him swerve from his original statement that he and he alone was responsible. The upshot was that the unhappy gardener was hanged by his master, and the prisoners taken possession of by the Dey, who, however, afterwards restored most of them to their masters, but kept Cervantes, paying Dali Mami 500 crowns for him. He felt, no doubt, that a man of such resource, energy, and daring, was too dangerous a piece of property to be left in private hands; and he had him heavily ironed and lodged in his own prison. If he thought that by these means he could break the spirit or shake the resolution of his prisoner, he was soon undeceived, for Cervantes contrived before long to despatch a letter to the Governor of Oran, entreating him to send him some one that could be trusted, to enable him and three other gentlemen, fellow-captives of his, to make their escape; intending evidently to renew his first attempt with a more trustworthy guide. Unfortunately the Moor who carried the letter was stopped just outside Oran, and the letter being found upon him, he was sent back to Algiers, where by the order of the Dey he was promptly impaled as a warning to others, while Cervantes was condemned to receive two thousand blows of the stick, a number which most likely would have deprived the world of "Don Quixote," had not some persons, who they were we know not, interceded on his behalf.

After this he seems to have been kept in still closer confinement than before, for nearly two years passed before he made another attempt. This time his plan was to purchase, by the aid of a Spanish renegade and two Valencian merchants resident in Algiers, an armed vessel in which he and about sixty of the leading captives were to make their escape; but just as they were about to put it into execution one Doctor Juan Blanco de Paz, an ecclesiastic and a compatriot, informed the Dey of the plot. Cervantes by force of character, by his self-devotion, by his untiring energy and his exertions to lighten the lot of his companions in misery, had endeared himself to all, and become the leading spirit in the captive colony, and, incredible as it may seem, jealousy of his influence and the esteem in which he was held, moved this man to compass his destruction by a cruel death. The merchants finding that the Dey knew all, and fearing that Cervantes under torture might make disclosures that would imperil their own lives, tried to persuade him to slip away on board a vessel that was on the point of sailing for Spain; but he told them they had nothing to fear, for no tortures would make him compromise anybody, and he went at once and gave himself up to the Dey.

As before, the Dey tried to force him to name his accomplices. Everything was made ready for his immediate execution; the halter was put round his neck and his hands tied behind him, but all that could be got from him was that he himself, with the help of four gentlemen who had since left Algiers, had arranged the whole, and that the sixty who were to accompany him were not to know anything of it until the last moment. Finding he could make nothing of him, the Dey sent him back to prison more heavily ironed than before.

The poverty-stricken Cervantes family had been all this time trying once more to raise the ransom money, and at last a sum of three hundred ducats was got together and entrusted to the Redemptorist Father Juan Gil, who was about to sail for Algiers. The Dey, however, demanded more than double the sum offered, and as his term of office had expired and he was about to sail for Constantinople, taking all his slaves with him, the case of Cervantes was critical. He was already on board heavily ironed, when the Dey at length agreed to reduce his demand by one-half, and Father Gil by borrowing was able to make up the amount, and on September 19, 1580, after a captivity of five years all but a week, Cervantes was at last set free. Before long he discovered that Blanco de Paz, who claimed to be an officer of the Inquisition, was now concocting on false evidence a charge of misconduct to be brought against him on his return to Spain. To checkmate him Cervantes drew up a series of twenty-five questions, covering the whole period of his captivity, upon which he requested Father Gil to take the depositions of credible witnesses before a notary. Eleven witnesses taken from among the principal captives in Algiers deposed to all the facts above stated and to a great deal more besides. There is something touching in the admiration, love, and gratitude we see struggling to find expression in the formal language of the notary, as they testify one after another to the good deeds of Cervantes, how he comforted and helped the weak-hearted, how he kept up their drooping courage, how he shared his poor purse with this deponent, and how "in him this deponent found father and mother."

On his return to Spain he found his old regiment about to march for Portugal to support Philip's claim to the crown, and utterly penniless now, had no choice but to rejoin it. He was in the expeditions to the Azores in 1582 and the following year, and on the conclusion of the war returned to Spain in the autumn of 1583, bringing with him the manuscript of his pastoral romance, the "Galatea," and probably also, to judge by internal evidence, that of the first portion of "Persiles and Sigismunda." He also brought back with him, his biographers assert, an infant daughter, the offspring of an amour, as some of them with great circumstantiality inform us, with a Lisbon lady of noble birth, whose name, however, as well as that of the street she lived in, they omit to mention. The sole foundation for all this is that in 1605 there certainly was living in the family of Cervantes a Dona Isabel de Saavedra, who is described in an official document as his natural daughter, and then twenty years of age.

With his crippled left hand promotion in the army was hopeless, now that Don John was dead and he had no one to press his claims and services, and for a man drawing on to forty life in the ranks was a dismal prospect; he had already a certain reputation as a poet; he made up his mind, therefore, to cast his lot with literature, and for a first venture committed his "Galatea" to the press. It was published, as Salva y Mallen shows conclusively, at Alcala, his own birth-place, in 1585 and no doubt helped to make his name more widely known, but certainly did not do him much good in any other way.

While it was going through the press, he married Dona Catalina de Palacios Salazar y Vozmediano, a lady of Esquivias near Madrid, and apparently a friend of the family, who brought him a fortune which may possibly have served to keep the wolf from the door, but if so, that was all. The drama had by this time outgrown market-place stages and strolling companies, and with his old love for it he naturally turned to it for a congenial employment. In about three years he wrote twenty or thirty plays, which he tells us were performed without any throwing of cucumbers or other missiles, and ran their course without any hisses, outcries, or disturbance. In other words, his plays were not bad enough to be hissed off the stage, but not good enough to hold their own upon it. Only two of them have been preserved, but as they happen to be two of the seven or eight he mentions with complacency, we may assume they are favourable specimens, and no one who reads the "Numancia" and the "Trato de Argel" will feel any surprise that they failed as acting dramas. Whatever merits they may have, whatever occasional they may show, they are, as regards construction, incurably clumsy. How completely they failed is manifest from the fact that with all his sanguine temperament and indomitable perseverance he was unable to maintain the struggle to gain a livelihood as a dramatist for more than three years; nor was the rising popularity of Lope the cause, as is often said, notwithstanding his own words to the contrary. When Lope began to write for the stage is uncertain, but it was certainly after Cervantes went to Seville.

Among the "Nuevos Documentos" printed by Senor Asensio y Toledo is one dated 1592, and curiously characteristic of Cervantes. It is an agreement with one Rodrigo Osorio, a manager, who was to accept six comedies at fifty ducats (about 6l.) apiece, not to be paid in any case unless it appeared on representation that the said comedy was one of the best that had ever been represented in Spain. The test does not seem to have been ever applied; perhaps it was sufficiently apparent to Rodrigo Osorio that the comedies were not among the best that had ever been represented. Among the correspondence of Cervantes there might have been found, no doubt, more than one letter like that we see in the "Rake's Progress," "Sir, I have read your play, and it will not do."

He was more successful in a literary contest at Saragossa in 1595 in honour of the canonisation of St. Jacinto, when his composition won the first prize, three silver spoons. The year before this he had been appointed a collector of revenues for the kingdom of Granada. In order to remit the money he had collected more conveniently to the treasury, he entrusted it to a merchant, who failed and absconded; and as the bankrupt's assets were insufficient to cover the whole, he was sent to prison at Seville in September 1597. The balance against him, however, was a small one, about 26l., and on giving security for it he was released at the end of the year.

It was as he journeyed from town to town collecting the king's taxes, that he noted down those bits of inn and wayside life and character that abound in the pages of "Don Quixote:" the Benedictine monks with spectacles and sunshades, mounted on their tall mules; the strollers in costume bound for the next village; the barber with his basin on his head, on his way to bleed a patient; the recruit with his breeches in his bundle, tramping along the road singing; the reapers gathered in the venta gateway listening to "Felixmarte of Hircania" read out to them; and those little Hogarthian touches that he so well knew how to bring in, the ox-tail hanging up with the landlord's comb stuck in it, the wine-skins at the bed-head, and those notable examples of hostelry art, Helen going off in high spirits on Paris's arm, and Dido on the tower dropping tears as big as walnuts. Nay, it may well be that on those journeys into remote regions he came across now and then a specimen of the pauper gentleman, with his lean hack and his greyhound and his books of chivalry, dreaming away his life in happy ignorance that the world had changed since his great-grandfather's old helmet was new. But it was in Seville that he found out his true vocation, though he himself would not by any means have admitted it to be so. It was there, in Triana, that he was first tempted to try his hand at drawing from life, and first brought his humour into play in the exquisite little sketch of "Rinconete y Cortadillo," the germ, in more ways than one, of "Don Quixote."

Where and when that was written, we cannot tell. After his imprisonment all trace of Cervantes in his official capacity disappears, from which it may be inferred that he was not reinstated. That he was still in Seville in November 1598 appears from a satirical sonnet of his on the elaborate catafalque erected to testify the grief of the city at the death of Philip II, but from this up to 1603 we have no clue to his movements. The words in the preface to the First Part of "Don Quixote" are generally held to be conclusive that he conceived the idea of the book, and wrote the beginning of it at least, in a prison, and that he may have done so is extremely likely.

There is a tradition that Cervantes read some portions of his work to a select audience at the Duke of Bejar's, which may have helped to make the book known; but the obvious conclusion is that the First Part of "Don Quixote" lay on his hands some time before he could find a publisher bold enough to undertake a venture of so novel a character; and so little faith in it had Francisco Robles of Madrid, to whom at last he sold it, that he did not care to incur the expense of securing the copyright for Aragon or Portugal, contenting himself with that for Castile. The printing was finished in December, and the book came out with the new year, 1605. It is often said that "Don Quixote" was at first received coldly. The facts show just the contrary. No sooner was it in the hands of the public than preparations were made to issue pirated editions at Lisbon and Valencia, and to bring out a second edition with the additional copyrights for Aragon and Portugal, which he secured in February.

No doubt it was received with something more than coldness by certain sections of the community. Men of wit, taste, and discrimination among the aristocracy gave it a hearty welcome, but the aristocracy in general were not likely to relish a book that turned their favourite reading into ridicule and laughed at so many of their favourite ideas. The dramatists who gathered round Lope as their leader regarded Cervantes as their common enemy, and it is plain that he was equally obnoxious to the other clique, the cult poets who had Gongora for their chief. Navarrete, who knew nothing of the letter above mentioned, tries hard to show that the relations between Cervantes and Lope were of a very friendly sort, as indeed they were until "Don Quixote" was written. Cervantes, indeed, to the last generously and manfully declared his admiration of Lope's powers, his unfailing invention, and his marvellous fertility; but in the preface of the First Part of "Don Quixote" and in the verses of "Urganda the Unknown," and one or two other places, there are, if we read between the lines, sly hits at Lope's vanities and affectations that argue no personal good-will; and Lope openly sneers at "Don Quixote" and Cervantes, and fourteen years after his death gives him only a few lines of cold commonplace in the "Laurel de Apolo," that seem all the colder for the eulogies of a host of nonentities whose names are found nowhere else.

In 1601 Valladolid was made the seat of the Court, and at the beginning of 1603 Cervantes had been summoned thither in connection with the balance due by him to the Treasury, which was still outstanding. He remained at Valladolid, apparently supporting himself by agencies and scrivener's work of some sort; probably drafting petitions and drawing up statements of claims to be presented to the Council, and the like. So, at least, we gather from the depositions taken on the occasion of the death of a gentleman, the victim of a street brawl, who had been carried into the house in which he lived. In these he himself is described as a man who wrote and transacted business, and it appears that his household then consisted of his wife, the natural daughter Isabel de Saavedra already mentioned, his sister Andrea, now a widow, her daughter Constanza, a mysterious Magdalena de Sotomayor calling herself his sister, for whom his biographers cannot account, and a servant-maid.

Meanwhile “Don Quixote” had been growing in favour, and its author’s name was now known beyond the Pyrenees. In 1607 an edition was printed at Brussels. Robles, the Madrid publisher, found it necessary to meet the demand by a third edition, the seventh in all, in 1608. The popularity of the book in Italy was such that a Milan bookseller was led to bring out an edition in 1610; and another was called for in Brussels in 1611. It might naturally have been expected that, with such proofs before him that he had hit the taste of the public, Cervantes would have at once set about redeeming his rather vague promise of a second volume.

But, to all appearance, nothing was farther from his thoughts. He had still by him one or two short tales of the same vintage as those he had inserted in “Don Quixote” and instead of continuing the adventures of Don Quixote, he set to work to write more of these “Novelas Exemplares” as he afterwards called them, with a view to making a book of them.

The novels were published in the summer of 1613, with a dedication to the Conde de Lemos, the Maecenas of the day, and with one of those chatty confidential prefaces Cervantes was so fond of. In this, eight years and a half after the First Part of “Don Quixote” had appeared, we get the first hint of a forthcoming Second Part. “You shall see shortly,” he says, “the further exploits of Don Quixote and humours of Sancho Panza.” His idea of “shortly” was a somewhat elastic one, for, as we know by the date to Sancho’s letter, he had barely one-half of the book completed that time twelvemonth.

But more than poems, or pastorals, or novels, it was his dramatic ambition that engrossed his thoughts. The same indomitable spirit that kept him from despair in the bagnios of Algiers, and prompted him to attempt the escape of himself and his comrades again and again, made him persevere in spite of failure and discouragement in his efforts to win the ear of the public as a dramatist. The temperament of Cervantes was essentially sanguine. The portrait he draws in the preface to the novels, with the aquiline features, chestnut hair, smooth untroubled forehead, and bright cheerful eyes, is the very portrait of a sanguine man. Nothing that the managers might say could persuade him that the merits of his plays would not be recognised at last if they were only given a fair chance. The old soldier of the Spanish Salamis was bent on being the Aeschylus of Spain. He was to found a great national drama, based on the true principles of art, that was to be the envy of all nations; he was to drive from the stage the silly, childish plays, the “mirrors of nonsense and models of folly” that were in vogue through the cupidity of the managers and shortsightedness of the authors; he was to correct and educate the public taste until it was ripe for tragedies on the model of the Greek drama — like the “Numancia” for instance — and comedies that would not only amuse but improve and instruct. All this he was to do, could he once get a hearing: there was the initial difficulty.

He shows plainly enough, too, that “Don Quixote” and the demolition of the chivalry romances was not the work that lay next his heart. He was, indeed, as he says himself in his preface, more a stepfather than a father to “Don Quixote.” Never was great work so neglected by its author. That it was written carelessly, hastily, and by fits and starts, was not always his fault, but it seems clear he never read what he sent to the press. He knew how the printers had blundered, but he never took the trouble to correct them when the third edition was in progress, as a man who really cared for the child of his brain would have done. He appears to have regarded the book as little more than a mere libro de entretenimiento, an amusing book, a thing, as he says in the “Viaje,” “to divert the melancholy moody heart at any time or season.” No doubt he had an affection for his hero, and was very proud of Sancho Panza. It would have been strange indeed if he had not been proud of the most humorous creation in all fiction. He was proud, too, of the popularity and success of the book, and beyond measure delightful is the naivete with which he shows his pride in a dozen passages in the Second Part. But it was not the success he coveted. In all probability he would have given all the success of “Don Quixote,” nay, would have seen every copy of “Don Quixote” burned in the Plaza Mayor, for one such success as Lope de Vega was enjoying on an average once a week.

And so he went on, dawdling over “Don Quixote,” adding a chapter now and again, and putting it aside to turn to “Persiles and Sigismunda” — which, as we know, was to be the most entertaining book in the language, and the rival of “Theagenes and Chariclea” — or finishing off one of his darling comedies; and if Robles asked when “Don Quixote” would be ready, the answer no doubt was: En breve—shortly, there was time enough for that. At sixty-eight he was as full of life and hope and plans for the future as a boy of eighteen.

Nemesis was coming, however. He had got as far as Chapter LIX, which at his leisurely pace he could hardly have reached before October or November 1614, when there was put into his hand a small octave lately printed at Tarragona, and calling itself “Second Volume of the Ingenious Gentleman Don Quixote of La Mancha: by the Licentiate Alonso Fernandez de Avellaneda of Tordesillas.” The last half of Chapter LIX and most of the following chapters of the Second Part give us some idea of the effect produced upon him, and his irritation was not likely to be lessened by the reflection that he had no one to blame but himself. Had Avellaneda, in fact, been content with merely bringing out a continuation to "Don Quixote," Cervantes would have had no reasonable grievance. His own intentions were expressed in the very vaguest language at the end of the book; nay, in his last words, "forse altro cantera con miglior plettro," he seems actually to invite some one else to continue the work, and he made no sign until eight years and a half had gone by; by which time Avellaneda's volume was no doubt written.

In fact Cervantes had no case, or a very bad one, as far as the mere continuation was concerned. But Avellaneda chose to write a preface to it, full of such coarse personal abuse as only an ill-conditioned man could pour out. He taunts Cervantes with being old, with having lost his hand, with having been in prison, with being poor, with being friendless, accuses him of envy of Lope's success, of petulance and querulousness, and so on; and it was in this that the sting lay. Avellaneda's reason for this personal attack is obvious enough. Whoever he may have been, it is clear that he was one of the dramatists of Lope's school, for he has the impudence to charge Cervantes with attacking him as well as Lope in his criticism on the drama. His identification has exercised the best critics and baffled all the ingenuity and research that has been brought to bear on it. Navarrete and Ticknor both incline to the belief that Cervantes knew who he was; but I must say I think the anger he shows suggests an invisible assailant; it is like the irritation of a man stung by a mosquito in the dark. Cervantes from certain solecisms of language pronounces him to be an Aragonese, and Pellicer, an Aragonese himself, supports this view and believes him, moreover, to have been an ecclesiastic, a Dominican probably.

Any merit Avellaneda has is reflected from Cervantes, and he is too dull to reflect much. "Dull and dirty" will always be, I imagine, the verdict of the vast majority of unprejudiced readers. He is, at best, a poor plagiarist; all he can do is to follow slavishly the lead given him by Cervantes; his only humour lies in making Don Quixote take inns for castles and fancy himself some legendary or historical personage, and Sancho mistake words, invert proverbs, and display his gluttony; all through he shows a proclivity to coarseness and dirt, and he has contrived to introduce two tales filthier than anything by the sixteenth century novellieri and without their sprightliness.

But whatever Avellaneda and his book may be, we must not forget the debt we owe them. But for them, there can be no doubt, "Don Quixote" would have come to us a mere torso instead of a complete work. Even if Cervantes had finished the volume he had in hand, most assuredly he would have left off with a promise of a Third Part, giving the further adventures of Don Quixote and humours of Sancho Panza as shepherds. It is plain that he had at one time an intention of dealing with the pastoral romances as he had dealt with the books of chivalry, and but for Avellaneda he would have tried to carry it out. But it is more likely that, with his plans, and projects, and hopefulness, the volume would have remained unfinished till his death, and that we should have never made the acquaintance of the Duke and Duchess, or gone with Sancho to Barataria.

From the moment the book came into his hands he seems to have been haunted by the fear that there might be more Avellanedas in the field, and putting everything else aside, he set himself to finish off his task and protect Don Quixote in the only way he could, by killing him. The conclusion is no doubt a hasty and in some places clumsy piece of work and the frequent repetition of the scolding administered to Avellaneda becomes in the end rather wearisome; but it is, at any rate, a conclusion and for that we must thank Avellaneda.

The new volume was ready for the press in February, but was not printed till the very end of 1615, and during the interval Cervantes put together the comedies and interludes he had written within the last few years, and, as he adds plaintively, found no demand for among the managers, and published them with a preface, worth the book it introduces tenfold, in which he gives an account of the early Spanish stage, and of his own attempts as a dramatist. It is needless to say they were put forward by Cervantes in all good faith and full confidence in their merits. The reader, however, was not to suppose they were his last word or final effort in the drama, for he had in hand a comedy called "Engano a los ojos," about which, if he mistook not, there would be no question.

Of this dramatic masterpiece the world has no opportunity of judging; his health had been failing for some time, and he died, apparently of dropsy, on the 23rd of April, 1616, the day on which England lost Shakespeare, nominally at least, for the English calendar had not yet been reformed. He died as he had lived, accepting his lot bravely and cheerfully.

Was it an unhappy life, that of Cervantes? His biographers all tell us that it was; but I must say I doubt it. It was a hard life, a life of poverty, of incessant struggle, of toil ill paid, of disappointment, but Cervantes carried within himself the antidote to all these evils. His was not one of those light natures that rise above adversity merely by virtue of their own buoyancy; it was in the fortitude of a high spirit that he was proof against it. It is impossible to conceive Cervantes giving way to despondency or prostrated by dejection. As for poverty, it was with him a thing to be laughed over, and the only sigh he ever allows to escape him is when he says, "Happy he to whom Heaven has given a piece of bread for which he is not bound to give thanks to any but Heaven itself." Add to all this his vital energy and mental activity, his restless invention and his sanguine temperament, and there will be reason enough to doubt whether his could have been a very unhappy life. He who could take Cervantes' distresses together with his apparatus for enduring them would not make so bad a bargain, perhaps, as far as happiness in life is concerned.

Of his burial-place nothing is known except that he was buried, in accordance with his will, in the neighbouring convent of Trinitarian nuns, of which it is supposed his daughter, Isabel de Saavedra, was an inmate, and that a few years afterwards the nuns removed to another convent, carrying their dead with them. But whether the remains of Cervantes were included in the removal or not no one knows, and the clue to their resting-place is now lost beyond all hope. This furnishes perhaps the least defensible of the items in the charge of neglect brought against his contemporaries. In some of the others there is a good deal of exaggeration. To listen to most of his biographers one would suppose that all Spain was in league not only against the man but against his memory, or at least that it was insensible to his merits, and left him to live in misery and die of want. To talk of his hard life and unworthy employments in Andalusia is absurd. What had he done to distinguish him from thousands of other struggling men earning a precarious livelihood? True, he was a gallant soldier, who had been wounded and had undergone captivity and suffering in his country's cause, but there were hundreds of others in the same case. He had written a mediocre specimen of an insipid class of romance, and some plays which manifestly did not comply with the primary condition of pleasing: were the playgoers to patronise plays that did not amuse them, because the author was to produce "Don Quixote" twenty years afterwards?

The scramble for copies which, as we have seen, followed immediately on the appearance of the book, does not look like general insensibility to its merits. No doubt it was received coldly by some, but if a man writes a book in ridicule of periwigs he must make his account with being coldly received by the periwig wearers and hated by the whole tribe of wigmakers. If Cervantes had the chivalry-romance readers, the sentimentalists, the dramatists, and the poets of the period all against him, it was because "Don Quixote" was what it was; and if the general public did not come forward to make him comfortable for the rest of his days, it is no more to be charged with neglect and ingratitude than the English-speaking public that did not pay off Scott's liabilities. It did the best it could; it read his book and liked it and bought it, and encouraged the bookseller to pay him well for others.

It has been also made a reproach to Spain that she has erected no monument to the man she is proudest of; no monument, that is to say, of him; for the bronze statue in the little garden of the Plaza de las Cortes, a fair work of art no doubt, and unexceptionable had it been set up to the local poet in the market-place of some provincial town, is not worthy of Cervantes or of Madrid. But what need has Cervantes of "such weak witness of his name;" or what could a monument do in his case except testify to the self-glorification of those who had put it up? Si monumentum quoeris, circumspice. The nearest bookseller's shop will show what bathos there would be in a monument to the author of "Don Quixote."

Nine editions of the First Part of "Don Quixote" had already appeared before Cervantes died, thirty thousand copies in all, according to his own estimate, and a tenth was printed at Barcelona the year after his death. So large a number naturally supplied the demand for some time, but by 1634 it appears to have been exhausted; and from that time down to the present day the stream of editions has continued to flow rapidly and regularly. The translations show still more clearly in what request the book has been from the very outset. In seven years from the completion of the work it had been translated into the four leading languages of Europe. Except the Bible, in fact, no book has been so widely diffused as "Don Quixote." The "Imitatio Christi" may have been translated into as many different languages, and perhaps "Robinson Crusoe" and the "Vicar of Wakefield" into nearly as many, but in multiplicity of translations and editions "Don Quixote" leaves them all far behind.

Still more remarkable is the character of this wide diffusion. "Don Quixote" has been thoroughly naturalised among people whose ideas about knight-errantry, if they had any at all, were of the vaguest, who had never seen or heard of a book of chivalry, who could not possibly feel the humour of the burlesque or sympathise with the author's purpose. Another curious fact is that this, the most cosmopolitan book in the world, is one of the most intensely national. "Manon Lescaut" is not more thoroughly French, "Tom Jones" not more English, "Rob Roy" not more Scotch, than "Don Quixote" is Spanish, in character, in ideas, in sentiment, in local colour, in everything. What, then, is the secret of this unparalleled popularity, increasing year by year for well-nigh three centuries? One explanation, no doubt, is that of all the books in the world, "Don Quixote" is the most catholic. There is something in it for every sort of reader, young or old, sage or simple, high or low. As Cervantes himself says with a touch of pride, "It is thumbed and read and got by heart by people of all sorts; the children turn its leaves, the young people read it, the grown men understand it, the old folk praise it."

But it would be idle to deny that the ingredient which, more than its humour, or its wisdom, or the fertility of invention or knowledge of human nature it displays, has insured its success with the multitude, is the vein of farce that runs through it. It was the attack upon the sheep, the battle with the wine-skins, Mambrino's helmet, the balsam of Fierabras, Don Quixote knocked over by the sails of the windmill, Sancho tossed in the blanket, the mishaps and misadventures of master and man, that were originally the great attraction, and perhaps are so still to some extent with the majority of readers. It is plain that "Don Quixote" was generally regarded at first, and indeed in Spain for a long time, as little more than a queer droll book, full of laughable incidents and absurd situations, very amusing, but not entitled to much consideration or care. All the editions printed in Spain from 1637 to 1771, when the famous printer Ibarra took it up, were mere trade editions, badly and carelessly printed on vile paper and got up in the style of chap-books intended only for popular use, with, in most instances, uncouth illustrations and clap-trap additions by the publisher.

To England belongs the credit of having been the first country to recognise the right of "Don Quixote" to better treatment than this. The London edition of 1738, commonly called Lord Carteret's from having been suggested by him, was not a mere edition de luxe. It produced "Don Quixote" in becoming form as regards paper and type, and embellished with plates which, if not particularly happy as illustrations, were at least well intentioned and well executed, but it also aimed at correctness of text, a matter to which nobody except the editors of the Valencia and Brussels editions had given even a passing thought; and for a first attempt it was fairly successful, for though some of its emendations are inadmissible, a good many of them have been adopted by all subsequent editors.

The zeal of publishers, editors, and annotators brought about a remarkable change of sentiment with regard to "Don Quixote." A vast number of its admirers began to grow ashamed of laughing over it. It became almost a crime to treat it as a humorous book. The humour was not entirely denied, but, according to the new view, it was rated as an altogether secondary quality, a mere accessory, nothing more than the stalking-horse under the presentation of which Cervantes shot his philosophy or his satire, or whatever it was he meant to shoot; for on this point opinions varied. All were agreed, however, that the object he aimed at was not the books of chivalry. He said emphatically in the preface to the First Part and in the last sentence of the Second, that he had no other object in view than to discredit these books, and this, to advanced criticism, made it clear that his object must have been something else.

One theory was that the book was a kind of allegory, setting forth the eternal struggle between the ideal and the real, between the spirit of poetry and the spirit of prose; and perhaps German philosophy never evolved a more ungainly or unlikely camel out of the depths of its inner consciousness. Something of the antagonism, no doubt, is to be found in "Don Quixote," because it is to be found everywhere in life, and Cervantes drew from life. It is difficult to imagine a community in which the never-ceasing game of cross-purposes between Sancho Panza and Don Quixote would not be recognized as true to nature. In the stone age, among the lake dwellers, among the cave men, there were Don Quixotes and Sancho Panzas; there must have been the troglodyte who never could see the facts before his eyes, and the troglodyte who could see nothing else. But to suppose Cervantes deliberately setting himself to expound any such idea in two stout quarto volumes is to suppose something not only very unlike the age in which he lived, but altogether unlike Cervantes himself, who would have been the first to laugh at an attempt of the sort made by anyone else.

The extraordinary influence of the romances of chivalry in his day is quite enough to account for the genesis of the book. Some idea of the prodigious development of this branch of literature in the sixteenth century may be obtained from the scrutiny of Chapter VII, if the reader bears in mind that only a portion of the romances belonging to by far the largest group are enumerated. As to its effect upon the nation, there is abundant evidence. From the time when the Amadis and Palmerins began to grow popular down to the very end of the century, there is a steady stream of invective, from men whose character and position lend weight to their words, against the romances of chivalry and the infatuation of their readers. Ridicule was the only besom to sweep away that dust.

That this was the task Cervantes set himself, and that he had ample provocation to urge him to it, will be sufficiently clear to those who look into the evidence; as it will be also that it was not chivalry itself that he attacked and swept away. Of all the absurdities that, thanks to poetry, will be repeated to the end of time, there is no greater one than saying that "Cervantes smiled Spain's chivalry away." In the first place there was no chivalry for him to smile away. Spain's chivalry had been dead for more than a century. Its work was done when Granada fell, and as chivalry was essentially republican in its nature, it could not live under the rule that Ferdinand substituted for the free institutions of mediaeval Spain. What he did smile away was not chivalry but a degrading mockery of it.

The true nature of the "right arm" and the "bright array," before which, according to the poet, "the world gave ground," and which Cervantes' single laugh demolished, may be gathered from the words of one of his own countrymen, Don Felix Pacheco, as reported by Captain George Carleton, in his "Military Memoirs from 1672 to 1713." "Before the appearance in the world of that labour of Cervantes," he said, "it was next to an impossibility for a man to walk the streets with any delight or without danger. There were seen so many cavaliers prancing and curvetting before the windows of their mistresses, that a stranger would have imagined the whole nation to have been nothing less than a race of knight-errants. But after the world became a little acquainted with that notable history, the man that was seen in that once celebrated drapery was pointed at as a Don Quixote, and found himself the jest of high and low. And I verily believe that to this, and this only, we owe that dampness and poverty of spirit which has run through all our councils for a century past, so little agreeable to those nobler actions of our famous ancestors.”

To call “Don Quixote” a sad book, preaching a pessimist view of life, argues a total misconception of its drift. It would be so if its moral were that, in this world, true enthusiasm naturally leads to ridicule and discomfiture. But it preaches nothing of the sort; its moral, so far as it can be said to have one, is that the spurious enthusiasm that is born of vanity and self-conceit, that is made an end in itself, not a means to an end, that acts on mere impulse, regardless of circumstances and consequences, is mischievous to its owner, and a very considerable nuisance to the community at large. To those who cannot distinguish between the one kind and the other, no doubt “Don Quixote” is a sad book; no doubt to some minds it is very sad that a man who had just uttered so beautiful a sentiment as that “it is a hard case to make slaves of those whom God and Nature made free,” should be ungratefully pelted by the scoundrels his crazy philanthropy had let loose on society; but to others of a more judicial cast it will be a matter of regret that reckless self-sufficient enthusiasm is not oftener requited in some such way for all the mischief it does in the world.

A very slight examination of the structure of “Don Quixote” will suffice to show that Cervantes had no deep design or elaborate plan in his mind when he began the book. When he wrote those lines in which “with a few strokes of a great master he sets before us the pauper gentleman,” he had no idea of the goal to which his imagination was leading him. There can be little doubt that all he contemplated was a short tale to range with those he had already written, a tale setting forth the ludicrous results that might be expected to follow the attempt of a crazy gentleman to act the part of a knight-errant in modern life.

It is plain, for one thing, that Sancho Panza did not enter into the original scheme, for had Cervantes thought of him he certainly would not have omitted him in his hero’s outfit, which he obviously meant to be complete. Him we owe to the landlord’s chance remark in Chapter III that knights seldom travelled without squires. To try to think of a Don Quixote without Sancho Panza is like trying to think of a one-bladed pair of scissors.

The story was written at first, like the others, without any division and without the intervention of Cide Hamete Benengeli; and it seems not unlikely that Cervantes had some intention of bringing Dulcinea, or Aldonza Lorenzo, on the scene in person. It was probably the ransacking of the Don's library and the discussion on the books of chivalry that first suggested it to him that his idea was capable of development. What, if instead of a mere string of farcical misadventures, he were to make his tale a burlesque of one of these books, caricaturing their style, incidents, and spirit?

In pursuance of this change of plan, he hastily and somewhat clumsily divided what he had written into chapters on the model of "Amadis," invented the fable of a mysterious Arabic manuscript, and set up Cide Hamete Benengeli in imitation of the almost invariable practice of the chivalry-romance authors, who were fond of tracing their books to some recondite source. In working out the new ideas, he soon found the value of Sancho Panza. Indeed, the keynote, not only to Sancho's part, but to the whole book, is struck in the first words Sancho utters when he announces his intention of taking his ass with him. "About the ass," we are told, "Don Quixote hesitated a little, trying whether he could call to mind any knight-errant taking with him an esquire mounted on ass-back; but no instance occurred to his memory." We can see the whole scene at a glance, the stolid unconsciousness of Sancho and the perplexity of his master, upon whose perception the incongruity has just forced itself. This is Sancho's mission throughout the book; he is an unconscious Mephistopheles, always unwittingly making mockery of his master's aspirations, always exposing the fallacy of his ideas by some unintentional ad absurdum, always bringing him back to the world of fact and commonplace by force of sheer stolidity.

By the time Cervantes had got his volume of novels off his hands, and summoned up resolution enough to set about the Second Part in earnest, the case was very much altered. Don Quixote and Sancho Panza had not merely found favour, but had already become, what they have never since ceased to be, veritable entities to the popular imagination. There was no occasion for him now to interpolate extraneous matter; nay, his readers told him plainly that what they wanted of him was more Don Quixote and more Sancho Panza, and not novels, tales, or digressions. To himself, too, his creations had become realities, and he had become proud of them, especially of Sancho. He began the Second Part, therefore, under very different conditions, and the difference makes itself manifest at once. Even in translation the style will be seen to be far easier, more flowing, more natural, and more like that of a man sure of himself and of his audience. Don Quixote and Sancho undergo a change also. In the First Part, Don Quixote has no character or individuality whatever. He is nothing more than a crazy representative of the sentiments of the chivalry romances. In all that he says and does he is simply repeating the lesson he has learned from his books; and therefore, it is absurd to speak of him in the gushing strain of the sentimental critics when they dilate upon his nobleness, disinterestedness, dauntless courage, and so forth. It was the business of a knight-errant to right wrongs, redress injuries, and succour the distressed, and this, as a matter of course, he makes his business when he takes up the part; a knight-errant was bound to be intrepid, and so he feels bound to cast fear aside. Of all Byron's melodious nonsense about Don Quixote, the most nonsensical statement is that "it is his virtue makes him mad!" The exact opposite is the truth; it is his madness makes him virtuous.

In the Second Part, Cervantes repeatedly reminds the reader, as if it was a point upon which he was anxious there should be no mistake, that his hero's madness is strictly confined to delusions on the subject of chivalry, and that on every other subject he is discrete, one, in fact, whose faculty of discernment is in perfect order. The advantage of this is that he is enabled to make use of Don Quixote as a mouthpiece for his own reflections, and so, without seeming to digress, allow himself the relief of digression when he requires it, as freely as in a commonplace book.

It is true the amount of individuality bestowed upon Don Quixote is not very great. There are some natural touches of character about him, such as his mixture of irascibility and placability, and his curious affection for Sancho together with his impatience of the squire's loquacity and impertinence; but in the main, apart from his craze, he is little more than a thoughtful, cultured gentleman, with instinctive good taste and a great deal of shrewdness and originality of mind.

As to Sancho, it is plain, from the concluding words of the preface to the First Part, that he was a favourite with his creator even before he had been taken into favour by the public. An inferior genius, taking him in hand a second time, would very likely have tried to improve him by making him more comical, clever, amiable, or virtuous. But Cervantes was too true an artist to spoil his work in this way. Sancho, when he reappears, is the old Sancho with the old familiar features; but with a difference; they have been brought out more distinctly, but at the same time with a careful avoidance of anything like caricature; the outline has been filled in where filling in was necessary, and, vivified by a few touches of a master's hand, Sancho stands before us as he might in a character portrait by Velazquez. He is a much more important and prominent figure in the Second Part than in the First; indeed, it is his matchless mendacity about Dulcinea that to a great extent supplies the action of the story.

His development in this respect is as remarkable as in any other. In the First Part he displays a great natural gift of lying. His lies are not of the highly imaginative sort that liars in fiction commonly indulge in; like Falstaff's, they resemble the father that begets them; they are simple, homely, plump lies; plain working lies, in short. But in the service of such a master as Don Quixote he develops rapidly, as we see when he comes to palm off the three country wenches as Dulcinea and her ladies in waiting. It is worth noticing how, flushed by his success in this instance, he is tempted afterwards to try a flight beyond his powers in his account of the journey on Clavileno.

In the Second Part it is the spirit rather than the incidents of the chivalry romances that is the subject of the burlesque. Enchantments of the sort travestied in those of Dulcinea and the Trifaldi and the cave of Montesinos play a leading part in the later and inferior romances, and another distinguishing feature is caricatured in Don Quixote's blind adoration of Dulcinea. In the romances of chivalry love is either a mere animalism or a fantastic idolatry. Only a coarse-minded man would care to make merry with the former, but to one of Cervantes' humour the latter was naturally an attractive subject for ridicule. Like everything else in these romances, it is a gross exaggeration of the real sentiment of chivalry, but its peculiar extravagance is probably due to the influence of those masters of hyperbole, the Provencal poets. When a troubadour professed his readiness to obey his lady in all things, he made it incumbent upon the next comer, if he wished to avoid the imputation of tameness and commonplace, to declare himself the slave of her will, which the next was compelled to cap by some still stronger declaration; and so expressions of devotion went on rising one above the other like biddings at an auction, and a conventional language of gallantry and theory of love came into being that in time permeated the literature of Southern Europe, and bore fruit, in one direction in the transcendental worship of Beatrice and Laura, and in another in the grotesque idolatry which found exponents in writers like Feliciano de Silva. This is what Cervantes deals with in Don Quixote's passion for Dulcinea, and in no instance has he carried out the burlesque more happily. By keeping Dulcinea in the background, and making her a vague shadowy being of whose very existence we are left in doubt, he invests Don Quixote's worship of her virtues and charms with an additional extravagance, and gives still more point to the caricature of the sentiment and language of the romances.

One of the great merits of "Don Quixote," and one of the qualities that have secured its acceptance by all classes of readers and made it the most cosmopolitan of books, is its simplicity. There are, of course, points obvious enough to a Spanish seventeenth century audience which do not immediately strike a reader now-a-days, and Cervantes often takes it for granted that an allusion will be generally understood which is only intelligible to a few. For example, on many of his readers in Spain, and most of his readers out of it, the significance of his choice of a country for his hero is completely lost. It would be going too far to say that no one can thoroughly comprehend “Don Quixote” without having seen La Mancha, but undoubtedly even a glimpse of La Mancha will give an insight into the meaning of Cervantes such as no commentator can give. Of all the regions of Spain it is the last that would suggest the idea of romance. Of all the dull central plateau of the Peninsula it is the dullest tract. There is something impressive about the grim solitudes of Estremadura; and if the plains of Leon and Old Castile are bald and dreary, they are studded with old cities renowned in history and rich in relics of the past. But there is no redeeming feature in the Manchegan landscape; it has all the sameness of the desert without its dignity; the few towns and villages that break its monotony are mean and commonplace, there is nothing venerable about them, they have not even the picturesqueness of poverty; indeed, Don Quixote’s own village, Argamasilla, has a sort of oppressive respectability in the prim regularity of its streets and houses; everything is ignoble; the very windmills are the ugliest and shabbiest of the windmill kind.

To anyone who knew the country well, the mere style and title of “Don Quixote of La Mancha” gave the key to the author’s meaning at once. La Mancha as the knight’s country and scene of his chivalries is of a piece with the pasteboard helmet, the farm-labourer on ass-back for a squire, knighthood conferred by a rascally ventero, convicts taken for victims of oppression, and the rest of the incongruities between Don Quixote’s world and the world he lived in, between things as he saw them and things as they were.

It is strange that this element of incongruity, underlying the whole humour and purpose of the book, should have been so little heeded by the majority of those who have undertaken to interpret “Don Quixote.” It has been completely overlooked, for example, by the illustrators. To be sure, the great majority of the artists who illustrated “Don Quixote” knew nothing whatever of Spain. To them a venta conveyed no idea but the abstract one of a roadside inn, and they could not therefore do full justice to the humour of Don Quixote’s misconception in taking it for a castle, or perceive the remoteness of all its realities from his ideal. But even when better informed they seem to have no apprehension of the full force of the discrepancy. Take, for instance, Gustave Dore’s drawing of Don Quixote watching his armour in the inn-yard. Whether or not the Venta de Quesada on the Seville road is, as tradition maintains, the inn described in “Don Quixote,” beyond all question it was just such an inn-yard as the one behind it that Cervantes had in his mind’s eye, and it was on just such a rude stone trough as that beside the primitive draw-well in the corner that he meant Don Quixote to deposit his armour. Gustave Dore makes it an elaborate fountain such as no arriero ever watered his mules at in the corral of any venta in Spain, and thereby entirely misses the point aimed at by Cervantes. It is the mean, prosaic, commonplace character of all the surroundings and circumstances that gives a significance to Don Quixote's vigil and the ceremony that follows.

Cervantes' humour is for the most part of that broader and simpler sort, the strength of which lies in the perception of the incongruous. It is the incongruity of Sancho in all his ways, words, and works, with the ideas and aims of his master, quite as much as the wonderful vitality and truth to nature of the character, that makes him the most humorous creation in the whole range of fiction. That unsmiling gravity of which Cervantes was the first great master, "Cervantes' serious air," which sits naturally on Swift alone, perhaps, of later humourists, is essential to this kind of humour, and here again Cervantes has suffered at the hands of his interpreters. Nothing, unless indeed the coarse buffoonery of Phillips, could be more out of place in an attempt to represent Cervantes, than a flippant, would-be facetious style, like that of Motteux's version for example, or the sprightly, jaunty air, French translators sometimes adopt. It is the grave matter-of-factness of the narrative, and the apparent unconsciousness of the author that he is saying anything ludicrous, anything but the merest commonplace, that give its peculiar flavour to the humour of Cervantes. His, in fact, is the exact opposite of the humour of Sterne and the self-conscious humourists. Even when Uncle Toby is at his best, you are always aware of "the man Sterne" behind him, watching you over his shoulder to see what effect he is producing. Cervantes always leaves you alone with Don Quixote and Sancho. He and Swift and the great humourists always keep themselves out of sight, or, more properly speaking, never think about themselves at all, unlike our latter-day school of humourists, who seem to have revived the old horse-collar method, and try to raise a laugh by some grotesque assumption of ignorance, imbecility, or bad taste.

It is true that to do full justice to Spanish humour in any other language is well-nigh an impossibility. There is a natural gravity and a sonorous stateliness about Spanish, be it ever so colloquial, that make an absurdity doubly absurd, and give plausibility to the most preposterous statement. This is what makes Sancho Panza's drollery the despair of the conscientious translator. Sancho's curt comments can never fall flat, but they lose half their flavour when transferred from their native Castilian into any other medium. But if foreigners have failed to do justice to the humour of Cervantes, they are no worse than his own countrymen. Indeed, were it not for the Spanish peasant's relish of "Don Quixote," one might be tempted to think that the great humourist was not looked upon as a humourist at all in his own country.

The craze of Don Quixote seems, in some instances, to have communicated itself to his critics, making them see things that are not in the book and run full tilt at phantoms that have no existence save in their own imaginations. Like a good many critics now-a-days, they forget that screams are not criticism, and that it is only vulgar tastes that are influenced by strings of superlatives, three-piled hyperboles, and pompous epithets. But what strikes one as particularly strange is that while they deal in extravagant eulogies, and ascribe all manner of imaginary ideas and qualities to Cervantes, they show no perception of the quality that ninety-nine out of a hundred of his readers would rate highest in him, and hold to be the one that raises him above all rivalry.

To speak of "Don Quixote" as if it were merely a humorous book would be a manifest misdescription. Cervantes at times makes it a kind of commonplace book for occasional essays and criticisms, or for the observations and reflections and gathered wisdom of a long and stirring life. It is a mine of shrewd observation on mankind and human nature. Among modern novels there may be, here and there, more elaborate studies of character, but there is no book richer in individualised character. What Coleridge said of Shakespeare in minimis is true of Cervantes; he never, even for the most temporary purpose, puts forward a lay figure. There is life and individuality in all his characters, however little they may have to do, or however short a time they may be before the reader. Samson Carrasco, the curate, Teresa Panza, Altisidora, even the two students met on the road to the cave of Montesinos, all live and move and have their being; and it is characteristic of the broad humanity of Cervantes that there is not a hateful one among them all. Even poor Maritornes, with her deplorable morals, has a kind heart of her own and "some faint and distant resemblance to a Christian about her;" and as for Sancho, though on dissection we fail to find a lovable trait in him, unless it be a sort of dog-like affection for his master, who is there that in his heart does not love him?

But it is, after all, the humour of "Don Quixote" that distinguishes it from all other books of the romance kind. It is this that makes it, as one of the most judicial-minded of modern critics calls it, "the best novel in the world beyond all comparison." It is its varied humour, ranging from broad farce to comedy as subtle as Shakespeare's or Moliere's that has naturalised it in every country where there are readers, and made it a classic in every language that has a literature.
